JCNA Research Services

Since our last update in March 2024 we have responded to 41 research queries, totalling 250 from July 2023.
To support our work we are preparing for upcoming catalogue work by ordering material and equipment to assist us in repackaging and providing secure environment to our collections.

We have also been collaborating with the National Conservation Service in the UK to develop our practices for collections care and treatment, and receive further support from this dedicated group of archive conservators. We are also very pleased to be working directly with Chris Woods, an Accredited heritage Conservator with nearly 40 years of experience working in the heritage sector and who is the Managing Director of NCS. Chris is the nephew of the late Robin Woods, the expert on the birds of the Falkland Islands who wrote a series of publications (including Birds of the Falkland Islands in 1977, the Atlas of Breeding Birds of the Falkland Islands in 1997, and the Checklist of the Birds of the Falkland Islands in 2017). It is great to work with a professional who has a personal link to the Islands, though one who is working in a different field of conservation.

Staffing Update

In April 2024 we said goodbye to Eirinn Murphy, who had been gaining work experience with the JCNA for the past 5 months. During her time, she developed her skills and was a great asset to the team: highlights of her work are digitising 359 files to the website since November 2023, assisting with auditing collections, and supporting outreach activities.

The service has taken on a student from FICS as a volunteer, to encourage the next generation to get involved and find out what it is like working in the Archives. The student has already been involved in digitising files, supporting with outreach activities and will be getting further practical experience in the internal running's of the profession.

Advocacy & Outreach:

The Archives have been taking part in a few events to help promote the service, advocate for the Archives and encourage wider interest in the history of the Falklands. This has included:

- Marking for the J&ACMT History Prizes for 2024
  In May we received this year's batch of completed history projects from the Infant & Junior School (Year 6's) and Community School (Year 9's) as part of the Jane & Alastair Cameron Memorial Trust's annual history prize. The project aims to encourage school children to take an active interest in local history and culture. The judges are currently working their way through the pile of submissions and marking the documents. The winning or highly commended prizes will be prepared and awarded to the students as part of their end of academic year prize-giving.
  The projects from the last year - the 2023 cohort - will be published in this year's Falkland Islands Journal.

- #Archive30 Campaign in April
  For the month of April 2024 we took part in #Archive30 – a social media campaign run by the Archives & Records Association's section for Scotland. The campaign had a hashtag and theme for each of the 30 days of April. Over the three weeks, the JCNA shared images of the Archives building and the behind the scenes work, records from their collections and promoted some of the newer items catalogued and uploaded to their website.

  The most popular of our posts and those that received the most engagement included post on the dangers that metal paperclips and staples can bring to the Archives and why we repackage and replace with brass clips; the May Ball line up for 1971 with photos of the dresses; the team photo with Louis Ballion who won a gold Olympic medal as part of the British Hockey team in 1908; and brief history of the JCNA.

Launch of X/Twitter end of April

To coincide with the end of the #Archive30 campaign, the JCNA have launched a Twitter/X profile to further promote the service and connect to multiple archive professionals, users and institutions who have an X profile. This is not intended to replace the Facebook page but provides the JCNA with another way to engage with those interested in the Islands and its history. We are still developing our presence and will be adding more content in the months ahead.

You can follow us at : @JCNArchives

- Facebook account growing

  The Facebook account continues to gain interest and though we have been not as active in May, we have 430 followers. The JCNA account follows multiple accounts, from archives institutions and groups to local organisations, to receive information from other sources.

- FI Museum Past Finders Visit

  The JCNA has collaborated with the Museum's Past Finders group. A few members of the Past Finders group visited the Archives on the morning of Saturday 25 May to get a tour of the facility and develop their research skills. The FICS volunteer joined the Archives staff on the day and assisted us in hosting and supervising the visit.

  We will have more information (and photos) to share in collaboration with the Museum on our social media and in the next newsletter very soon!

JCNA Features & Projects

- Website Redevelopment

  The JCNA website is being upgraded and redeveloped, in line with a rolling programme for all FIG Department sites. The updated site is expected to go live in June and users can expect:

  - Cleaner and more visual home page and refreshed pages through the website
  - Condensed menu and sub-menu items for the Online Collections – this will not change the structure of the collections or current presentation of material but will mean make navigating the online collections more efficient and user friendly
  - More prominent links to our social media accounts
  - A basic search function tool to help users

   With the condensed menu items it is possible that existing URLs and links to certain sub-menus of the Online Collections may change but we will be redirecting any pages to the correct sites accordingly so researchers should not be impacted. If users experience any difficulty accessing information following the launch, please contact the JCNA directly**

- FIC Ltd Photographic Collection

  Within the extensive FIC Ltd Collection there are 16 photographic albums. These albums provide wonderful snapshots and images of the Falklands from as early as 1870s to the 2000's.

The photos cover every aspect of Falkland life from images of Stanley, East and West Falklands and the outer Islands, Camp life and farm workers, local shipping and vessels such as the Fitzroy and Lafonia, the construction of Bodie Creek Bridge and the West Store, and Watercolours painted by William Dale, the FIC Ltd Camp Manager (1853-1854).

All the photographs and images (approx. 3,000) have been digitised and made accessible on the JCNA website. Due to the size and quantity, the albums have been placed on the site as a series of links. Users will notice that if they select an album they will be taken from the main website to a list of photographs to then select and browse through.

You can access the photographs here: https://www.nationalarchives.gov.fk/online-collections/falkland-islands-company-ltd-collection/photographs
These photographs can also be viewed at the JCNA if you book an appointment.

Website Uploads - since March 2024:

The JCNA have worked hard to make as much information available as possible through our website, including and most recently a photographic album containing images of Darwin, Darwin Horse Racing and Stanley from 1903. With thanks to our FICS volunteer for scanning this and to the individuals who gifted us the album.

You can access the files (PC-073) here:
https://www.nationalarchives.gov.fk/.../cultu.../photographs

In terms of government files, the JCNA has digitised and made available since March 2024 all of the below records. We are currently digitising a series of records relating to Mail and Stamps.
Fun fact: The JCNA team have digitised and made available 450 files since January 2024.
