A1.1. This Code governs the exercise by police officers of statutory powers to search a person or a vehicle without first making an arrest. The main stop and search powers to which this Code applies are contained in Part 2 of the Ordinance, but that Part should not be regarded as definitive as individual statutes may contain other police powers of entry, search and seizure. In addition, this Code covers requirements on police officers to record encounters not governed by statutory powers.

A1.1A. Powers to stop and search must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for people being searched and without unlawful discrimination. It is contrary to the human rights provisions of the Constitution for police officers to discriminate on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and should seek to foster good relations in the community.

A1.2. The intrusion on the liberty of the person stopped or searched must be brief and detention for the purposes of a search must take place at or near the location of the stop.

A1.3. If these fundamental principles are not observed the use of powers to stop and search may be drawn into question. Failure to use the powers in the proper manner reduces their effectiveness. Stop and search can play an important role in the detection and prevention of crime, and using the powers fairly makes them more effective.

A1.4. The primary purpose of stop and search powers is to enable officers to allay or confirm suspicions about individuals without exercising their power of arrest. Officers may be required to justify the use or authorisation of such powers, in relation both to individual searches and the overall pattern of their activity in this regard, to their supervisory officers or in court. Any misuse of the powers is likely to be harmful to policing and lead to mistrust of the police. Officers must also be able to explain their actions to the member of the public searched. The misuse of these powers can lead to disciplinary action.

A1.5. An officer must not search a person, even with his or her consent, if there is no relevant power to search. Even if a person is prepared to submit to a search voluntarily, the person must not be searched unless the necessary legal power exists, and the search must be in accordance with the relevant power and the provisions of this Code. The only case in which an officer does not require a specific power is when searches of persons entering sports grounds or other premises are carried out with their consent given as a condition of entry.

A2. Explanation of powers to stop and search

A2.1. This Code applies to the following powers of stop and search —

- (a) powers that require, before they can be exercised, reasonable grounds for suspicion that articles unlawfully obtained or possessed are being carried;
- (b) powers authorised under section 8, based upon a reasonable belief that incidents involving serious violence may take place or that people are carrying dangerous instruments or offensive weapons within any locality in the Falkland Islands;
- (c) powers to search persons, even though they are not arrested, in the course of a search of school premises for offensive weapons, or of a search for drugs (see Code B Note 2C).

Searches requiring reasonable grounds for suspicion

A2.2. Reasonable grounds for suspicion depend on the circumstances in each case. There must be an objective basis for that suspicion based on facts, information, and/or intelligence which are relevant to the likelihood of finding an article of a certain kind. Reasonable suspicion can never be supported on the basis of personal factors alone without reliable supporting intelligence or information or some specific behaviour by the person concerned. For example, a person's race, age, appearance, or the fact that the person is known to have a previous conviction, cannot be used alone or in combination with each other as the reason for searching that person.

Reasonable suspicion cannot be based on generalisations or stereotypical images of certain groups or categories of people as more likely to be involved in criminal activity. A person's religion cannot be considered as reasonable grounds for suspicion and should never be considered as a reason to stop or stop and search an individual.

A2.3. Reasonable suspicion can sometimes exist without specific information or intelligence and on the basis of some level of generalisation stemming from the behaviour of a person. For example, if an officer encounters someone on the street at night who is obviously trying to hide something, the officer may (depending on the other surrounding circumstances) base such suspicion on the fact that this kind of behaviour is often linked to stolen or prohibited articles being carried.

Intelligence or information

A2.4. However, reasonable suspicion should normally be linked to accurate and current intelligence or information, such as information describing an article being carried, a suspected offender, or a person who has been seen carrying a type of article known to have been stolen recently from premises in the area. Searches based on accurate and current intelligence or information are more likely to be effective.

Targeting searches in a particular area at specified crime problems increases their effectiveness and minimises inconvenience to law-abiding members of the public. It also helps in justifying the use of searches both to those who are searched and to the public. This does not however prevent stop and search powers being exercised in other locations where such powers may be exercised and reasonable suspicion exists.

A2.5. Searches are more likely to be effective and legitimate and to secure public confidence when reasonable suspicion is based on a range of factors. The overall use of these powers is more likely to be effective when up to date and accurate intelligence or information is communicated to officers and they are well-informed about local crime patterns.

A2.6. Where there is reliable information or intelligence that members of a group or gang habitually carry knives unlawfully, or weapons or controlled drugs, and wear a distinctive item of clothing or other means of identification to indicate their membership of the group or gang, that distinctive item of clothing or other means of identification may provide reasonable grounds to stop and search a person (see Note 9).

Possession

A2.7. A police officer may have reasonable grounds to suspect that a person is in innocent possession of a stolen or prohibited article or other item for which he or she is empowered to search. In that case the officer may stop and search the person even though there would be no power of arrest.

[A2.8. Omitted]

Detention

A2.9. An officer who has reasonable grounds for suspicion may detain the person concerned in order to carry out a search. Before carrying out a search the officer may ask questions about the person's behaviour or presence in circumstances which gave rise to the suspicion. As a result of questioning the detained person, the reasonable grounds for suspicion necessary to detain that person may be confirmed or, because of a satisfactory explanation, be eliminated (see Notes 2 and 3). Questioning may also reveal reasonable grounds to suspect the possession of a different kind of unlawful article from that originally suspected. Reasonable grounds for suspicion, however, cannot be provided retrospectively by such questioning during a person's detention or by refusal to answer any questions put.

A2.10. If, as a result of questioning before a search, or other circumstances which come to the attention of the officer, there cease to be reasonable grounds for suspecting that an article is being carried of a kind for which there is a power to stop and search, no search may take place (see Note 3). In the absence of any other lawful power to detain, the person is free to leave at will and must be so informed.

A2.11. There is no power to stop or detain a person in order to find grounds for a search. Police officers have many encounters with members of the public which do not involve detaining people against their will. If reasonable grounds for suspicion emerge during such an encounter, the officer may search the person, even though no grounds existed when the encounter began. If an officer is detaining someone for the purpose of a search, he or she should inform the person as soon as detention begins.

Searches authorised under section 8

A2.12. Authority for a police officer in uniform to stop and search under section 8 of the Ordinance may be given if the authorising officer reasonably believes that —

- (a) incidents involving serious violence may take place anywhere in the Falkland Islands, and it is expedient to use these powers to prevent their occurrence;
- (b) an incident involving serious violence has taken place anywhere in the Falkland islands, a dangerous instrument or offensive weapon used in the incident is being carried by a person anywhere in the Falkland Islands, and it is expedient to use these powers to find the instrument or weapon; or
- (c) persons are carrying dangerous instruments or offensive weapons without good reason anywhere in the Falkland Islands.

A2.13. An authorisation under section 8 may only be given by an officer of the rank of sergeant or above. It must be given in writing, or orally if it is not practicable to give the authorisation in writing, and must specify the grounds on which it was given and the period of time for which the powers remain in force. The authorisation must specify the grounds, the locality and the period for which it is in force. The period authorised must be no longer than appears reasonably necessary to prevent, or seek to prevent incidents of serious violence, or to deal with the problem of carrying dangerous instruments or offensive weapons. It must not exceed 24 hours (see Notes 10 to 13).

A2.14. A sergeant who gives an authorisation must as soon as practicable inform an officer of the rank of inspector or above. This officer or another officer of the rank of inspector or above may direct that the authorisation is to be extended for a further 24 hours, if violence or the carrying of dangerous instruments or offensive weapons has occurred, or is suspected to have occurred, and the continued use of the powers is considered necessary to prevent or deal with further such activity. That direction must also be given in writing at the time or as soon as practicable afterwards (see Note 12).

A2.14A. The selection of persons or vehicles to be stopped under section 8 and, if appropriate, searched should reflect an objective assessment of the nature of the incident or weapon in question and the individuals and vehicles thought likely to be associated with that incident or those weapons (see Notes 10 and 11) The powers must not be used to stop and search persons for reasons unconnected with the purpose of the authorisation. When selecting persons or vehicles to be stopped in response to a specific threat or incident, an officer must not discriminate unlawfully against anyone.

A2.14B. The driver of a vehicle which is stopped under section 8 and any person searched under that section is entitled to a written statement to that effect if they apply within 12 months from the date the vehicle was stopped or the person searched. This statement is a statement that the vehicle was stopped or the person searched under section 8 and may form part of the search record or be supplied as a separate record.

Power to require removal of face coverings

A2.15. Section 8(6) also provides a power to demand the removal of disguises. The officer exercising the power must reasonably believe that someone is wearing an item wholly or mainly for the purpose of concealing identity. There is also a power to seize such items if the officer believes that a person intends to wear them for this purpose. There is no power to stop and search for disguises. An officer may seize any such item which is discovered when exercising a power of search for something else, or which is being carried, and which the officer reasonably believes is intended to be used for concealing anyone's identity. This power can only be used if an authorisation under section 8(1) is in force (see Note 4).

A2.16. Authority for a police officer in uniform to require the removal of disguises and to seize them under section 8(6) may be given if the authorising officer reasonably believes that activities may take place in any locality in the Falkland Islands that are likely to involve the commission of offences and it is expedient to use these powers to prevent or control these activities.

[A2.17 to A2.26 omitted]

Powers to search in the exercise of a power to search premises

A2.27. The following powers to search premises also authorise the search of a person, not under arrest, who is found on the premises during the course of the search —

- (a) section 172 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 under which a police officer may enter school premises and search the premises and any person on those premises for any bladed or pointed article or offensive weapon; and

(b) under a warrant issued under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance to search premises for drugs or documents but only if the warrant specifically authorises the search of persons found on the premises.

A2.28. Before the power under section 172 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 may be exercised, the officer must reasonably suspect that an offence under section 170 or 171 of that Ordinance (having a bladed or pointed article or offensive weapon on school premises) has been or is being committed. A warrant to search premises and persons found in them may be issued under Misuse of Drugs Ordinance if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that controlled drugs or certain documents are in the possession of a person on the premises.

A2.29. The powers in paragraph A2.27(a) or (b) do not require prior specific grounds to suspect that the person to be searched is in possession of an item for which there is an existing power to search. However, it is still necessary to ensure that the selection and treatment of those searched under these powers is based upon objective factors connected with the search of the premises, and not upon personal prejudice.

A3. Conduct of searches

A3.1. All stops and searches must be carried out with courtesy, consideration and respect for the person concerned. This has a significant impact on public confidence in the police. Every reasonable effort must be made to minimise the embarrassment that a person being searched may experience (see Note 4).

A3.2. The co-operation of the person to be searched must be sought in every case, even if the person initially objects to the search. A forcible search may be made only if it has been established that the person is unwilling to co-operate or resists. Reasonable force may be used as a last resort if necessary to conduct a search or to detain a person or vehicle for the purposes of a search.

A3.3. The length of time for which a person or vehicle may be detained must be reasonable and kept to a minimum. In cases where the exercise of the power requires reasonable suspicion, the thoroughness and extent of a search must depend on what is suspected of being carried, and by whom. If the suspicion relates to a particular article which is seen to be slipped into a person's pocket, then, in the absence of other grounds for suspicion or an opportunity for the article to be moved elsewhere, the search must be confined to that pocket. In the case of a small article which can readily be concealed, such as a drug, and which might be concealed anywhere on the person, a more extensive search may be necessary. In the case of searches mentioned in paragraph A2.1(b) and (c), which do not require reasonable grounds for suspicion, officers may make any reasonable search to look for items for which they are empowered to search (see Note 5).

A3.4. The search must be carried out at or near the place where the person or vehicle was first detained (see Note 6).

A3.5. There is no power to require a person to remove any clothing in public other than an outer coat, jacket or gloves, except under section 8(6) of the Ordinance (which empowers a police officer to require a person to remove any item worn to conceal identity). (See Notes 4 and 6). A search in public of a person's clothing which has not been removed must be restricted to superficial examination of outer garments. This does not, however, prevent an officer from placing his or her hand inside the pockets of the outer clothing, or feeling round the inside of collars, socks and shoes if this is reasonably necessary in the circumstances to look for the object of the search or to remove and examine any item reasonably suspected to be the object of the search.

For the same reasons, subject to the restrictions on the removal of headgear, a person's hair may also be searched in public (see paragraphs A3.1 and A3.3).

A3.6. If on reasonable grounds it is considered necessary to conduct a more thorough search (e.g. by requiring a person to take off a T-shirt), this must be done out of public view, for example in a police van (unless paragraph A3.7 applies) or place of lawful custody if there is one nearby (see Note 4). Any search involving the removal of more than an outer coat, jacket, gloves, headgear or footwear, or any other item concealing identity, must so far as practicable be made by an officer of the same gender as the person searched (see Notes 6 and 7).

A3.6A. If a search takes place in private it must so far as practicable not be made in the presence of anyone of the opposite gender unless the person being searched specifically so requests.

A3.7. Searches involving exposure of intimate parts of the body must not be conducted as a routine extension of a less thorough search, simply because nothing is found in the course of the initial search. Searches involving exposure of intimate parts of the body may be carried out only at a nearby place of lawful custody or other nearby location which is out of public view (but not a police vehicle). These searches must be conducted in accordance with paragraph 11 of Annex A to Code C, except that an intimate search mentioned in paragraph 11(f) of Annex A to Code C may not be authorised or carried out under any stop and search powers. The other provisions of Code C do not apply to the conduct and recording of searches of persons detained at the place of lawful custody in the exercise of stop and search powers (see Note 7).

Steps to be taken prior to a search

A3.8. Before any search of a detained person or attended vehicle takes place, the police officer must take reasonable steps to give the person to be searched or in charge of the vehicle the following information —

- (a) that the person is being detained for the purposes of a search;
- (b) the officer's name (unless the officer reasonably believes that giving his or her name might put him or her in danger, in which case a warrant or other identification number must be given);
- (c) the legal search power which is being exercised; and
- (d) a clear explanation of —

(i) the purpose of the search in terms of the article or articles for which there is a power to search; and

(ii) in the case of the power under section 8 (see paragraph A2.1(b)) the nature of the power, the authorisation and the fact that it has been given;

(iii) in the case of powers requiring reasonable suspicion (see paragraph A2.1(a)) the grounds for the suspicion;

(e) that the person is entitled to a copy of the record of the search if one is made (see section 4 below) if the person asks within 12 months from the date of the search; and

(i) if the person is not arrested and taken to a place of lawful custody as a result of the search and it is practicable to make the record on the spot, that immediately after the search is completed the person will be given, on request, either a copy of the record, or a receipt which explains how the person can obtain a copy of the full record; or

(ii) if the person is arrested and taken to a place of lawful custody as a result of the search, that a record will be made at the station as part of the person's custody record and the person will be given, on request, a copy of the custody record, including a copy of the record of the search, as soon as practicable while the person is at the place of lawful custody.

A3.9. Stops and searches under the powers mentioned in paragraph 2.1(b) may be undertaken only by a police officer in uniform.

A3.10. The person should also be given information about police powers to stop and search and the individual's rights in these circumstances.

A3.11. If the person to be searched, or in charge of a vehicle to be searched, does not appear to understand what is being said, or there is any doubt about the person's ability to understand English, the officer must take reasonable steps to bring information regarding the person's rights and any relevant provisions of this Code to his or her attention. If the person is deaf or cannot understand English and is accompanied by someone, then the officer must try to establish whether that person can interpret or otherwise help the officer to give the required information.

A4. Recording requirements

(a) Searches which do not result in an arrest

A4.1. When an officer has carried out a search in the exercise of any power to which this Code applies, and the search does not result in the person searched or person in charge of the vehicle searched being arrested and taken to the place of lawful custody, a record must be made of it, electronically or on paper, unless there are exceptional circumstances which make this wholly impracticable (e.g. in situations involving public disorder or when the officer's presence is urgently required elsewhere). If a record is to be made, the officer carrying out the search must make the record on the spot unless this is not practicable, in which case the officer must make the record as soon as practicable after the search is completed.

A4.2. If the record has been made at the time, the person who has been searched or who is in charge of the vehicle that has been searched must be asked if he or she wishes a copy and if the person so requests, must be given immediately, either a copy of the record or a receipt which explains how the person can obtain a copy of the full record.

A4.2A. An officer is not required to provide a copy of the full record or of a receipt at the time if the officer is called to an incident of higher priority (see Note 21).

(b) Searches which result in an arrest

A4.2B. If a search in the exercise of a power to which this Code applies results in a person being arrested and taken to the place of lawful custody, the officer carrying out the search must ensure that a record of the search is made as part of the person's custody record. The custody officer must then ensure that the person is asked if he or she wishes a copy of the record, and provide one if requested as soon as practicable.

A4.3. The record of a search must always include the following information —

(a) a note of the self-defined ethnicity, and if different, the ethnicity as perceived by the officer making the search, of the person searched or in charge of the vehicle searched, as the case may be (see Note 18)

(b) the date, time, and place the person or vehicle was searched;

(c) the object of the search;

(d) in the case of the power under section 8, the nature of the power, the authorisation and the fact that it has been given;

(e) in the case of other powers requiring reasonable suspicion, the grounds for that suspicion;

(f) subject to paragraph A3.8(b), the identity of the officer carrying out the search.

A4.3A. For the purpose of completing the search record, there is no requirement to record the name, address and date of birth of the person searched or the person in charge of a vehicle that is searched and the person is under no obligation to provide this information.

A4.4. Nothing in paragraph A4.3 requires the names of police officers to be shown on the search record or any other record required to be made under this Code where an officer reasonably believes that recording names might endanger the officers. In such cases the record must show the officers' warrant or other identification number.

A4.5. A record is required for each person and each vehicle searched. However, if a person is in a vehicle and both are searched, and the object and grounds of the search are the same, only one record need be completed. If more than one person in a vehicle is searched, separate records for each search of a person must be made. If only a vehicle is searched, the self-defined ethnic background of the person in charge of the vehicle must be recorded, unless the vehicle is unattended.

A4.6. The record of the grounds for making a search must, briefly but informatively, explain the reason for suspecting the person concerned, by reference to the person's behaviour and/or other circumstances.

A4.7. If officers detain an individual with a view to performing a search, but the need to search is eliminated as a result of questioning the person detained, a search should not be carried out and a record is no required (see paragraph A2.10 and note 3).

A4.8. After searching an unattended vehicle, or anything in or on it, an officer must leave a notice in it (or on it, if things on it have been searched without opening it) recording the fact that it has been searched.

A4.9. The notice must state where a copy of the record of the search may be obtained, and where any application for compensation should be directed.

A4.10. The vehicle must if practicable be left secure.

[A4.11. Omitted]

A4.12. There is no requirement for an officer who requests a person in a public place to account for his or her actions, behaviour, presence in an area, or his or her possession of anything, to make any record of the encounter or to give the person a receipt (see Note 22B).

A5. Monitoring and supervising the use of stop and search powers

A5.1. Supervising officers must monitor the use of stop and search powers and should consider in particular whether there is any evidence that they are being exercised on the basis of stereotyped images or inappropriate generalisations. Supervising officers should satisfy themselves that the practice of officers under their supervision in stopping, searching and recording is fully in accordance with this Code. Supervisors must also examine whether the records reveal any trends or patterns which give cause for concern, and if so take appropriate action to address this.

A5.2. [Omitted]

A5.3. Supervision and monitoring must be supported by the compilation of comprehensive statistical records of stops and searches. Any apparently disproportionate use of the powers by particular officers or groups of officers or in relation to specific sections of the community should be identified and investigated.

A5.4. In order to promote public confidence in the use of the powers, the Chief Police Officer must publish the statistics in the annual report required by section 12 of the Ordinance (see Note 19). The Chief Police Officer must be prepared to answer any questions raised upon publication of the report by community organisations or official representatives.

Notes for Guidance

Officers exercising stop and search powers

1. This Code does not affect the ability of an officer to speak to or question a person in the ordinary course of the officer's duties without detaining the person or exercising any element of compulsion. It is not the purpose of the Code to prohibit such encounters between the police and the community with the co-operation of the person concerned and neither does it affect the principle that all citizens have a duty to help police officers to prevent crime and discover offenders. This is a civic rather than a legal duty; but when a police officer is trying to discover whether, or by whom, an offence has been committed he or she may question any person from whom useful information might be obtained, subject to the restrictions imposed by Code C. A person's unwillingness to reply does not alter this entitlement, but in the absence of a power to arrest, or to detain in order to search, the person is free to leave at will and cannot be compelled to remain with the officer.

2. In some circumstances preparatory questioning may be unnecessary, but in general a brief conversation or exchange will be desirable not only as a means of avoiding unsuccessful searches, but to explain the grounds for the stop/search, to gain cooperation and reduce any tension there might be surrounding the stop/search.

3. If a person is lawfully detained for the purpose of a search, but no search in the event takes place, the detention will not thereby have been rendered unlawful.

4. Many people customarily cover their heads or faces for religious reasons – for example, Muslim women, Sikh men, Sikh or Hindu women, or Rastafarian men or women. A police officer cannot order the removal of a head or face covering except where there is reason to believe that the item is being worn by the individual wholly or mainly for the purpose of disguising identity, not simply because it disguises identity. Where there may be religious sensitivities about ordering the removal of such an item, the officer should permit the item to be removed out of public view. Where practicable, the item should be removed in the presence of an officer of the same gender as the person and out of sight of anyone of the opposite gender. (See Annex F.)

5. A search of a person in public should be completed as soon as possible.

6. A person may be detained under a stop and search power at a place other than where the person was first detained, but the place, whether the place of lawful custody or elsewhere, must be nearby. This applies to all searches under stop and search powers, whether or not they involve the removal of clothing or exposure of intimate parts of the body (see paragraphs A3.6 and A3.7) or take place in or out of public view. It means, for example, that a search under the powers in the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance which involves the compulsory removal of more than a person's outer coat, jacket or gloves cannot be carried out unless a place which is both near where the person was first detained and out of public view, is available. If a search involves exposure of intimate parts of the body and the place of lawful custody is not nearby, particular care must be taken to ensure that the location is suitable in that it enables the search to be conducted in accordance with the requirements of paragraph 11 of Annex A to Code C.

7. A search in the street itself should be regarded as being in public for the purposes of paragraphs A3.6 and A3.7, even though it may be empty at the time a search begins. Although there is no power to require a person to do so, there is nothing to prevent an officer from asking a person voluntarily to remove more than an outer coat, jacket or gloves in public.

8. [Omitted].

9. Other means of identification might include jewellery, insignias, tattoos or other features which are known to identify members of the particular gang or group.

Authorising officers

10. The powers under section 8 of the Ordinance are separate from and additional to the normal stop and search powers which require reasonable grounds to suspect an individual of carrying an offensive weapon (or other article). Their overall purpose is to prevent serious violence and the widespread carrying of weapons which might lead to persons being seriously injured by disarming potential offenders or finding weapons that have been used in circumstances where other powers would not be sufficient. They should not therefore be used to replace or circumvent the normal powers for dealing with routine crime problems. The purpose of the powers under section 8(6) is to prevent those involved in intimidatory or violent protests using face coverings to disguise identity.

11. Authorisations under section 8 require a reasonable belief on the part of the authorising officer. This must have an objective basis, for example: intelligence or relevant information such as a history of antagonism and violence between particular groups; previous incidents of violence at, or connected with, particular events or locations; a significant increase in knife-point robberies; reports that individuals are regularly carrying weapons; information following an incident in which weapons were used about where the weapons might be found; or in the case of section 8(6), previous incidents of crimes being committed while wearing face coverings to conceal identity.

12. It is for the authorising officer to determine the period of time during which the powers mentioned in paragraph A2.1(b) may be exercised. The officer should set the minimum period he or she considers necessary to deal with the risk of violence, or the carrying of dangerous instruments or offensive weapons, or to find such instruments or weapons that have been used. A direction to extend the period authorised under the powers mentioned in paragraph A2.1(b) may be given only once. Thereafter further use of the powers requires a new authorisation.

13. It is for the authorising officer to determine the geographical area in which the use of the powers is to be authorised. In doing so the officer may wish to take into account factors such as the nature and venue of the anticipated incident, the number of people who may be in the immediate area of any possible incident, their access to surrounding areas and the anticipated or actual level of violence. The officer should not set a geographical area which is wider than that he or she believes necessary for the purpose of preventing anticipated violence, the carrying of dangerous instruments or offensive weapons, finding such an instrument or weapon that has been used or, in the case of section 8(6), preventing the commission of offences. It is particularly important to ensure that police officers exercising such powers are fully aware of where they may be used. If the area specified is smaller than the whole of the Falkland Islands, the authorising officer should specify the streets or other markers which form the boundary of the area.

14. [Omitted]

Recording

15. If a stop and search is conducted by more than one officer, the identity of all the officers engaged in the search must be recorded on the record. Nothing prevents an officer who is present but not directly involved in searching from completing the record during the course of the encounter.

16. If a search results in the person searched or in charge of a vehicle which is searched being arrested, the requirement to make a record of the search as part of the person's custody record does not apply if the person is granted 'street bail' (i.e. bail at a place than a place of lawful custody) after arrest (see section 51) to attend the place of lawful custody and is not taken into custody to the place of lawful custody. An arrested person's entitlement to a copy of the search record which is made as part of the custody record does not affect the person's entitlement to a copy of the custody record or any other provisions of section 2 of Code C in this Schedule.

17. [Omitted]

18. Officers should record the self-defined ethnicity of every person stopped according to the categories listed in Annex B. Respondents should be asked to select one of the five main categories representing broad ethnic groups and then a more specific cultural background from within this group. The ethnic classification should be coded for recording purposes using the coding system in Annex B. An additional "Not stated" box is available but should not be offered to respondents explicitly. Officers should be aware and explain to members of the public, especially if concerns are raised, that this information is required to obtain a true picture of stop and search activity and to help improve ethnic monitoring, tackle discriminatory practice, and promote effective use of the powers. If the person gives what appears to the officer to be an "incorrect" answer (e.g. a person who appears to be white states that he or she is black), the officer should record the response that has been given and then record the officer's own perception of the person's ethnic background by using the PNC classification system. If the 'Not stated' category is used, the reason for this must be stated on the form.

19. Arrangements for publication of records should take account of the right to confidentiality of those stopped and searched. Anonymised forms and/or statistics generated from records should be the focus of the examinations by community representatives and members of the public.

20. [Omitted].

21. In situations where it is not practicable to provide a copy of the full search record at the time (see paragraph 4.2A), the officer should consider giving the person details of the place at which the person may attend for a copy of the record. A receipt may be a simple business card with sufficient information to locate the record if the person asks for a copy.

22 and 22A. [Omitted]

22B. A person who is asked to account for himself or herself should, if he or she requests, be given information about how to report dissatisfaction with the way the person has been treated.

ANNEX F –
ESTABLISHING GENDER OF PERSONS TO BE SEARCHED

1. Certain provisions of this and other Codes explicitly state that searches and other procedures may only be carried out by, or in the presence of, persons of the same gender as the person subject to the search or other procedure.
2. All searches should be carried out with courtesy, consideration and respect for the person concerned. Police officers should show particular sensitivity when dealing with transsexual or transvestite persons (see Notes F1 and F2). The following approach is designed to minimise embarrassment and secure the co-operation of the person subject to the search.

A. Consideration

3. At law, the gender of an individual is his or her gender as registered at birth, unless the person possesses a gender recognition certificate issued under section 9 of the UK Gender Recognition Act 2004, in which case the person's gender is the acquired gender.
 - (a) If there is no doubt as to the gender of a person, or there is no reason to suspect that the person is not the gender that the person appears appear to be, the person should be dealt with as that gender.
 - (b) A person who possesses a gender recognition certificate must be treated as of the acquired gender.
 - (c) If a person does not possess a gender recognition certificate and there is doubt as to the person's gender, the person should be asked what gender the person considers himself or herself to be. If the person expresses a preference to be dealt with as of a particular gender, the person should be asked to sign the search record, the officer's notebook or, if applicable, the custody record, to indicate and confirm the preference. If appropriate, the person should be treated as being of that gender.

(d) If a person is unwilling to make such an election, efforts should be made to determine the predominant lifestyle of the person. For example, if the person appears appear to live predominantly as a woman, the person should be treated as such.

(e) If there is still doubt, the person should be dealt with according to the gender that the person was born with.

5. Once a decision has been made about which gender an individual is to be treated as, if possible before an officer searches the person, the officer should be advised of the doubt as to the person's gender. This is important so as to maintain the dignity of the officer(s) concerned.

B. Documentation

6. If the gender of the detainee is established under paragraphs 2(b) to (e) above the decision should be recorded either on the search record, in the officer's notebook or, if applicable, in the person's custody record.

7. If the person elects which gender the person considers himself or herself to be under paragraph 2(c) but is not treated as of that gender, the reason must be recorded in the search record, in the officer's notebook or, if applicable, in the person's custody record.

Notes for Guidance

F1. Transsexual means a person who is proposing to undergo, is undergoing or has undergone a process (or part of a process) for the purpose of gender reassignment by changing physiological or other attributes of the person's gender. It would apply to a woman making the transition to being a man and a man making the transition to being a woman as well as to a person who has only just started out on the process of gender reassignment and to a person who has completed the process. Both would share the characteristic of gender reassignment with each having the characteristics of one gender, but with certain characteristics of the other gender.

F2. Transvestite means a person of one gender who dresses in the clothes of a person of the opposite gender.

F3. Similar principles will apply to police officers and police staff whose duties involve carrying out, or being present at, any of the searches and other procedures mentioned in paragraph 1 above. The Chief Police Officer must provide corresponding operational guidance and instructions for the deployment of any transsexual officers and staff under his or her direction and control.

B1. Introduction

B1.0. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

B1.1. This Code of Practice deals with police powers to —

- (a) search premises;
- (b) seize and retain property found on premises and persons.

B1.1A. These powers may be used to find —

- (a) property and material relating to a crime;
- (b) wanted persons;
- (c) youths who have been remanded or detained under the Ordinance.

B1.2. The Senior Magistrate or two justices of the peace may issue a search warrant granting powers of entry, search and seizure, e.g. warrants to search for stolen property, drugs, firearms and evidence of serious offences. Police also have powers without a search warrant. The main ones provided by the Ordinance include powers to search premises —

- (a) to make an arrest;
- (b) after an arrest.

In the case of special procedure material (see Note 3B) an order of a judge, the Senior Magistrate or three justices of the peace is required for a search.

B1.3. The right to privacy and respect for personal property are key principles of the Constitution. Powers of entry, search and seizure should be fully and clearly justified before use because they may significantly interfere with the occupier’s privacy. Officers should consider if the necessary objectives can be met by less intrusive means.

B1.3A. Powers to search and seize must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for people occupying premises being searched or in charge of property being seized, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

B1.4. In all cases, police officers should —

- (a) exercise their powers courteously and with respect for persons and property;
- (b) only use reasonable force when this is considered necessary and proportionate to the circumstances.

B1.5. If the provisions of the Ordinance and this Code are not observed, evidence obtained from a search may be open to question.

B2. General

B2.1. This Code must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs, or, if there is no such direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

B2.2. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation.

B2.3 This Code applies to searches of premises —

- (a) by police for the purposes of an investigation into an alleged offence, with the occupier's consent, other than —
 - (i) routine scene of crime searches;
 - (ii) calls to a fire or burglary made by or on behalf of an occupier or searches following the activation of fire or burglar alarms or discovery of insecure premises;
 - (iii) searches when paragraph B5.4 applies;
 - (iv) bomb threat calls;
- (b) under powers conferred on police officers by the Ordinance;
- (c) undertaken in pursuance of search warrants issued to and executed by police officers in accordance with the Ordinance (see Note 2A);
- (d) subject to paragraph B2.6, under any other power given to police to enter premises with or without a search warrant for any purpose connected with the investigation into an alleged or suspected offence (see Note 2B).

For the purposes of this Code, ‘premises’ as defined in section 2 of the Ordinance includes any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft, any stall, tent, caravan, portacabin or moveable structure (including an offshore installation) and any other place whatever, whether or not occupied as land (see Note 2D).

B2.4. A person who has not been arrested but is searched during a search of premises should be searched in accordance with Code A (see Note 2C).

B2.5. This Code does not apply to the exercise of a statutory power to enter premises or to inspect goods, equipment or procedures if the exercise of that power is not dependent on the existence of grounds for suspecting that an offence may have been committed and the person exercising the power has no reasonable grounds for such suspicion.

B2.6. This Code does not affect any directions of a search warrant or order lawfully executed in the Falkland Islands that any item or evidence seized under that warrant or order be handed over to a police force, court, tribunal, or other authority outside the Falkland Islands.

B2.7. When this Code requires the prior authority or agreement of an officer of the rank of inspector or above, the authority may be given by an officer authorised to perform the functions of the higher rank under section 781 of the Ordinance.

B2.8. Written records required under this Code not made in the search record must, unless otherwise specified, be made —

(a) in the recording officer’s pocket book (‘pocket book’ includes any official report book issued to police officers); or

(b) on forms provided for the purpose.

B2.9. Nothing in this Code requires the identity of officers, or anyone accompanying them during a search of premises, to be recorded or disclosed if officers reasonably believe recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger. In this case officers should use warrant or other identification numbers (see Note 2E).

B2.10. The ‘officer in charge of the search’ means the officer assigned specific duties and responsibilities under this Code. Whenever there is a search of premises to which this Code applies one officer must act as the officer in charge of the search (see Note 2F).

B2.11 to 2.13 [Omitted]

Notes for Guidance

2A. Sections 20 and 21 of the Ordinance apply to all search warrants issued to and executed by police officers under any enactment, e.g. search warrants issued by —

(a) a justice of the peace under —

- (i) section 362 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 - stolen property;
- (ii) Misuse of Drugs Ordinance - controlled drugs;
- (iii) section 13 of this Ordinance - evidence of an imprisonable offence;

(b) a judicial officer (judge, Senior Magistrate or three justices of the peace) under Schedule 1 to the Ordinance.

2B. Examples of the other powers in paragraph B2.3(d) include —

(a) section 23 of the Road Traffic Ordinance giving police power to enter premises to —

- (i) require a person to provide a specimen of breath; or
- (ii) arrest a person following a positive breath test or failure to provide a specimen of breath;

(b) section 172 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 giving police power to enter and search school premises for offensive weapons, bladed or pointed articles.

2C. Section 172 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 provides that a police officer who reasonably suspects that an offence under section 170 or 171 has been or is being committed may enter school premises and search the premises and any persons on the premises for any bladed or pointed article or offensive weapon. Persons may be searched under a warrant issued under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance to search premises for drugs or documents only if the warrant specifically authorises the search of persons on the premises.

2D. Various Ordinances give immigration officers, customs officers, fisheries protection officers and other enforcement officers powers to enter and search vessels and aircraft and other places without a search warrant. These are similar to the powers available to police under search warrants issued by the Senior Magistrate or 2 justices of the peace and without a warrant under the Ordinance, except that they only apply to the officers in question. When exercising these powers, the officers should have regard to this Code's provisions, as required by section 778 of the Ordinance.

2E. The purpose of paragraph B2.9 is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to the officers or anyone accompanying them during a search of premises. In cases of doubt, an officer of the rank of inspector or above should be consulted.

2F. For the purposes of paragraph B2.10, the officer in charge of the search should normally be the most senior officer present. Some exceptions are —

(a) a supervising officer who attends or assists at the scene of a premises search may appoint an officer of lower rank as officer in charge of the search if that officer is —

(i) more conversant with the facts;

(ii) a more appropriate officer to be in charge of the search;

(b) when all officers in a premises search are the same rank, the supervising officer if available must make sure one of them is appointed officer in charge of the search, otherwise the officers themselves must nominate one of their number as the officer in charge;

(c) a senior officer assisting in a specialist role. This officer need not be regarded as having a general supervisory role over the conduct of the search or be appointed or expected to act as the officer in charge of the search.

Except in (c), nothing in this note diminishes the role and responsibilities of a supervisory officer who is present at the search or knows of a search taking place.

2G. An officer of the rank of sergeant or above may direct a designated investigating officer not to wear a uniform for the purposes of a specific operation.

B3. Search warrants and production orders

Before making an application

B3.1. When information appears to justify an application, the officer must take reasonable steps to check the information is accurate, recent and not provided maliciously or irresponsibly. An application may not be made on the basis of information from an anonymous source if corroboration has not been sought (see Note 3A).

B3.2. The officer must ascertain as specifically as possible the nature of the articles concerned and their location.

B3.3. The officer must make reasonable enquiries to —

(a) establish if —

(i) anything is known about the likely occupier of the premises and the nature of the premises themselves;

(ii) the premises have been searched previously and how recently; and

(b) obtain any other relevant information.

B3.4. An application to the Senior Magistrate or 2 justices of the peace for a search warrant or to a judicial officer (judge, Senior Magistrate or 3 justices of the peace) for a search warrant or production order under Schedule 1 to the Ordinance must be supported by a signed written authority from an officer of the rank of inspector or above.

B3.5. [Omitted]

Making an application

B3.6. The application for a search warrant must be supported in writing, specifying —

- (a) the enactment under which the application is made (see Note B2A);
- (b) whether the warrant is to authorise entry and search of —
 - (i) one set of premises; or
 - (ii) if the application is under section 13 or paragraph 12 of Schedule 1 to the Ordinance, more than one set of specified premises or all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person;
- (c) the premises to be searched;
- (d) the object of the search (see Note 3B);
- (e) the grounds for the application, including, if the purpose of the proposed search is to find evidence of an alleged offence, an indication of how the evidence relates to the investigation;
- (f) if the application is under section 13 or paragraph 12 of Schedule 1 to the Ordinance, for a single warrant to enter and search —
 - (i) more than one set of specified premises - each set of premises which it is desired to enter and search;
 - (ii) all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person —
 - (A) as many sets of premises which it is desired to enter and search as it is reasonably practicable to specify;
 - (B) the person who is in occupation or control of those premises and any others which it is desired to search;
 - (C) why it is necessary to search more premises than those which can be specified;
 - (D) why it is not reasonably practicable to specify all the premises which it is desired to enter and search;

(g) if an application under section 13 is for a warrant authorising entry and search on more than one occasion - the grounds for this and whether the desired number of entries authorised is unlimited or a specified maximum.

B3.6A. The warrant must —

(a) state that there are no reasonable grounds to believe the material to be sought, when making application to —

(i) a justice of the peace or judge - consists of or includes items subject to legal privilege;

(ii) a justice of the peace - consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material;

(Note: This does not affect the additional powers of seizure in the Ordinance covered in paragraph B7.7; see Note B3B).

(b) if applicable, include a request for the warrant to authorise a person or persons to accompany the officer who executes the warrant (see Note 3C).

B3.7. A search warrant application under paragraph 12(a) of Schedule 1 to the Ordinance must if appropriate indicate why it is believed service of notice of an application for a production order may seriously prejudice the investigation.

B3.8. If a search warrant application is refused a further application may not be made for those premises unless supported by additional grounds.

Notes for Guidance

3A. The identity of an informant need not be disclosed when making an application, but the officer should be prepared to answer any questions the justice of the peace or judge may have about —

(a) the accuracy of previous information from that source;

(b) any other related matters.

3B. The information supporting a search warrant application should be as specific as possible, particularly in relation to the articles or persons being sought and where in the premises it is suspected they may be found. The meaning of ‘items subject to legal privilege’, ‘excluded material’ and ‘special procedure material’ are respectively defined in sections 15, 16 and 19 of the Ordinance.

3C. Under section 21(1) of the Ordinance, a search warrant may authorise persons other than police officers to accompany the officer who executes the warrant. This includes, e.g. any suitably qualified or skilled person or an expert in a particular field whose presence is needed to help accurately identify the material sought or to advise where certain evidence is most likely to be found and how it should be dealt with. It does not give the person any right to force entry, but it gives him or her the right to be on the premises during the search and to search for or seize property without the occupier's permission.

B4. Entry without warrant - particular powers

B4.1. The conditions under which an officer may enter and search premises without a warrant are set out in section 44 of the Ordinance. It should be noted that this section does not create or confer any powers of arrest. (See other powers in Note 2B).

B4.2. When a person has been arrested for an imprisonable offence, a police officer has power under section 58 of the Ordinance to search the premises where the person was arrested or where the person was immediately before being arrested.

B4.3. The specific powers to search premises occupied or controlled by a person arrested for an imprisonable offence are set out in section 23 of the Ordinance. They may not be exercised, except if section 23(5) applies, unless an officer of the rank of inspector or above has given written authority. That authority should only be given when the authorising officer is satisfied the necessary grounds exist. If possible the authorising officer should record the authority on the Notice of Powers and Rights referred to in paragraph B6.7 and, subject to paragraph B2.9, sign the Notice. The record of the grounds for the search and the nature of the evidence sought as required by section 23(7) of the Ordinance should be made in —

- (a) the custody record if there is one; otherwise
- (b) the officer's pocket book, or
- (c) the search record.

B5. Search with consent

B5.1. Subject to paragraph B5.4, if it is proposed to search premises with the consent of a person entitled to grant entry, the consent must, if practicable, be given in writing on the Notice of Powers and Rights referred to in paragraph B6.7 before the search. The officer must make any necessary enquiries to be satisfied the person is in a position to give such consent (see Notes 5A and 5B).

B5.2. Before seeking consent the officer in charge of the search must state the purpose of the proposed search and its extent. This information must be as specific as possible, particularly regarding the articles or persons being sought and the parts of the premises to be searched. The person concerned must be clearly informed he or she is not obliged to consent, that any consent given can be withdrawn at any time, including before the search starts or while it is underway, and anything seized may be produced in evidence. If at the time the person is not suspected of an offence, the officer must say this when stating the purpose of the search.

B5.3. An officer cannot enter and search or continue to search premises under paragraph B5.1 if consent is given under duress or withdrawn before the search is completed.

B5.4. It is unnecessary to seek consent under paragraphs B5.1 and B5.2 if this would cause disproportionate inconvenience to the person concerned (see Note 5C).

Notes for Guidance

5A. In a lodging house or similar accommodation, every reasonable effort should be made to obtain the consent of the tenant, lodger or occupier. A search should not be made solely on the basis of the landlord's consent unless the tenant, lodger or occupier is unavailable and the matter is urgent.

5B. If the intention is to search premises under the authority of a warrant or a power of entry and search without warrant, and the occupier of the premises co-operates in accordance with paragraph B6.4, there is no need to obtain written consent.

5C. Paragraph B5.4 is intended to apply when it is reasonable to assume innocent occupiers would agree to, and expect, police to take the proposed action, e.g. if —

(a) a suspect has fled the scene of a crime or to evade arrest and it is necessary quickly to check surrounding gardens and readily accessible places to see if the suspect is hiding;

(b) police have arrested someone in the night after a pursuit and it is necessary to make a brief check of gardens along the pursuit route to see if stolen or incriminating articles have been discarded.

B6. Searching premises - general considerations

A. Time of searches

B6.1. Searches made under warrant must be made within one calendar month of the date of issue of the warrant.

B6.2. Searches must be made at a reasonable hour unless this might frustrate the purpose of the search.

B6.3. When the extent or complexity of a search means it is likely to take a long time, the officer in charge of the search may consider using the seize and sift powers referred to in section B7.

B6.3A. A warrant under section 13 of the Ordinance may authorise entry to and search of premises on more than one occasion if, on an application, the Senior Magistrate is, or two justices of the peace are, satisfied that it is necessary to authorise multiple entries in order to achieve the purpose for which the warrant is issued. No premises may be entered or searched on any subsequent occasion without the prior written authority of an officer of the rank of inspector or above who is not involved in the investigation. All other warrants authorise entry on one occasion only.

B6.3B. If a warrant under section 13 or paragraph 12 of Schedule 1 authorises entry to and search of all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person, no premises which are not specified in the warrant may be entered and searched without the prior written authority of an officer of the rank of inspector or above who is not involved in the investigation.

B. Entry without consent

B6.4. The officer in charge of the search must first try to communicate with the occupier, or any other person entitled to grant access to the premises, explain the authority under which entry is sought and ask the occupier to allow entry, unless —

- (a) the search premises are unoccupied;
- (b) the occupier and any other person entitled to grant access are absent;
- (c) there are reasonable grounds for believing that alerting the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access would frustrate the object of the search or endanger officers or other people.

B6.5. Unless sub-paragraph B6.4(c) applies, if the premises are occupied the officer, subject to paragraph B2.9, must, before the search begins —

- (a) identify himself or herself, show his or her warrant card (if not in uniform) and state the purpose of and grounds for the search;
- (b) identify and introduce any person accompanying the officer on the search (such persons should carry identification for production on request) and briefly describe that person's role in the process.

B6.6. Reasonable and proportionate force may be used if necessary to enter premises, if the officer in charge of the search is satisfied the premises are those specified in any warrant, or in exercise of the powers described in paragraphs B4.1 to B 4.3, and if —

- (a) the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access has refused entry;
- (b) it is impossible to communicate with the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access; or
- (c) any of the provisions of paragraph B6.4 apply.

C. Notice of powers and rights

B6.7. If an officer conducts a search to which this Code applies the officer must, unless it is impracticable to do so, provide the occupier with a copy of a Notice of Powers and Rights in a standard format —

- (a) specifying if the search is made under warrant, with consent, or in the exercise of the powers described in paragraphs B4.1 to B4.3.

(Note: The notice format must provide for authority or consent to be indicated, see paragraphs B4.3 and B5.1)

- (b) summarising the extent of the powers of search and seizure conferred by the Ordinance;
- (c) explaining the rights of the occupier, and the owner of the property seized;
- (d) explaining compensation may be payable in appropriate cases for damages caused entering and searching premises, and giving the address to send a compensation application (see Note 6A); and
- (e) stating where this Code is available.

B6.8. If the occupier is —

- (a) present - copies of the Notice and warrant must, if practicable, be given to the occupier before the search begins, unless the officer in charge of the search reasonably believes this would frustrate the object of the search or endanger officers or other people;
- (b) not present - copies of the Notice and warrant must be left in a prominent place on the premises or appropriate part of the premises and endorsed, subject to paragraph B2.9, with the name of the officer in charge of the search, the date and time of the search.

The warrant must be endorsed to show this has been done.

D. Conduct of searches

B6.9. Premises may be searched only to the extent necessary to achieve the object of the search, having regard to the size and nature of whatever is sought.

B6.9A. A search may not continue under —

- (a) a warrant's authority once all the things specified in that warrant have been found;
- (b) any other power once the object of that search has been achieved.

B6.9B. No search may continue once the officer in charge of the search is satisfied whatever is being sought is not on the premises (see Note 6B). This does not prevent a further search of the same premises if additional grounds come to light supporting a further application for a search warrant or exercise or further exercise of another power. For example, when, as a result of new information, it is believed articles previously not found or additional articles are on the premises.

B6.10. Searches must be conducted with due consideration for the property and privacy of the occupier and with no more disturbance than necessary. Reasonable force may be used only when necessary and proportionate because the co-operation of the occupier cannot be obtained or is insufficient for the purpose (see Note 6C).

B6.11. A friend, neighbour or other person must be allowed to witness the search if the occupier wishes unless the officer in charge of the search has reasonable grounds for believing the presence of the person asked for would seriously hinder the investigation or endanger officers or other people. A search need not be unreasonably delayed for this purpose. A record of the action taken should be made on the premises search record including the grounds for refusing the occupier's request.

B6.12. A person is not required to be cautioned prior to being asked questions that are solely necessary for the purpose of furthering the proper and effective conduct of a search, (see Code C, paragraph C10.1(c).) For example, questions to discover the occupier of specified premises, to find a key to open a locked drawer or cupboard or to otherwise seek co-operation during the search or to determine if a particular item is liable to be seized.

B6.12A. If questioning goes beyond what is necessary for the purpose of the exemption in Code C, the exchange is likely to constitute an interview as defined by Code C, paragraph C11.1A and would require the associated safeguards included in Code C, section C10.

E. Leaving premises

B6.13 If premises have been entered by force, before leaving the officer in charge of the search must make sure they are secure by —

- (a) arranging for the occupier or their agent to be present; or
- (b) any other appropriate means.

F. Searches under Schedule 1

B6.14. An officer must be appointed as the officer in charge of the search, see paragraph B2.10, in respect of any search made under a warrant issued under Schedule 1 to the Ordinance. The officer is responsible for making sure the search is conducted with discretion and in a manner that causes the least possible disruption to any business or other activities carried out on the premises.

B6.15. Once the officer in charge of the search is satisfied material cannot be taken from the premises without his or her knowledge, the officer must ask for the documents or other records concerned. The officer in charge of the search may also ask to see the index to files held on the premises, and the officers conducting the search may inspect any files which, according to the index, appear to contain the material sought. A more extensive search of the premises may be made only if —

- (a) the person responsible for them refuses to produce the material sought or allow access to the index;
- (b) it appears the index is inaccurate or incomplete; or
- (c) for any other reason the officer in charge of the search has reasonable grounds for believing such a search is necessary in order to find the material sought.

Notes for Guidance

6A. Whether compensation is appropriate depends on the circumstances in each case. Compensation for damage caused when effecting entry is unlikely to be appropriate if the search was lawful, and the force used can be shown to be reasonable, proportionate and necessary to effect entry. If the wrong premises are searched by mistake, everything possible should be done at the earliest opportunity to allay any sense of grievance and there will normally be a strong presumption in favour of paying compensation.

6B. It is important that, when possible, all those involved in a search are fully briefed about any powers to be exercised and the extent and limits within which it should be conducted.

6C. In all cases the number of officers and other persons involved in executing the warrant should be determined by what is reasonable and necessary according to the particular circumstances.

B7. Seizure and retention of property

A. Seizure

B7.1. Subject to paragraph B7.2, an officer who is searching any person or premises under any statutory power or with the consent of the occupier may seize anything —

(a) covered by a warrant;

(b) the officer has reasonable grounds for believing is evidence of an offence or has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence but only if seizure is necessary to prevent the items being concealed, lost, disposed of, altered, damaged, destroyed or tampered with;

(c) covered by the powers in the Ordinance allowing an officer to seize property from persons or premises and retain it for sifting or examination elsewhere.

(See Note 7B)

B7.2. No item may be seized which an officer has reasonable grounds for believing to be subject to legal privilege, as defined in section 15 of the Ordinance, other than under sections 31 to 43 of the Ordinance.

B7.3. Officers must be aware of the provisions in section 40 of the Ordinance allowing for applications to the judicial officer (judge, Senior Magistrate or three justices of the peace) for the return of property seized, and the subsequent duty to secure in sections 41 and 42 (see paragraph B7.12(c)).

B7.4. An officer may decide it is not appropriate to seize property because of an explanation from the person holding it, but may nevertheless have reasonable grounds for believing it was obtained in consequence of an offence by some person. In these circumstances, the officer should identify the property to the holder, inform him or her of the officer's suspicions and explain that the holder may be liable to civil or criminal proceedings if the holder disposes of, alters or destroys the property.

B7.5. An officer may arrange to photograph, image or copy, any document or other article that the officer has the power to seize in accordance with paragraph B7.1. This is subject to specific restrictions on the examination, imaging or copying of certain property seized under sections 31 to 43 of the Ordinance. An officer must have regard to the statutory obligation to retain an original document or other article only when a photograph, image or copy is not sufficient.

B7.6. If an officer considers information stored in any electronic form and accessible from the premises could be used in evidence, the officer may require the information to be produced in a form —

- (a) which can be taken away and in which it is visible and legible; or
- (b) from which it can readily be produced in a visible and legible form.

B. Sections 31 to 43: Specific procedures for seize and sift powers

B7.7. Sections 31 to 43 of the Ordinance give officers limited powers to seize property from premises or persons so they can sift or examine it elsewhere. Officers must be careful they only exercise these powers when it is essential and they do not remove any more material than necessary. The removal of large volumes of material, much of which may not ultimately be retainable, may have serious implications for the owners, particularly when they are involved in business or activities such as journalism or the provision of medical services. Officers must carefully consider if removing copies or images of relevant material or data would be a satisfactory alternative to removing originals. When originals are taken, officers must be prepared to facilitate the provision of copies or images for the owners when reasonably practicable (see Note 7C).

B7.8. Property seized under sections 31 to 43 must be kept securely and separately from any material seized under other powers. An examination under section 34 to determine which elements may be retained must be carried out at the earliest practicable time, having due regard to the desirability of allowing the person from whom the property was seized, or a person with an interest in the property, an opportunity of being present or represented at the examination.

B7.8A. All reasonable steps should be taken to accommodate an interested person's request to be present, provided the request is reasonable and subject to the need to prevent harm to, interference with, or unreasonable delay to the investigatory process. If an examination proceeds in the absence of an interested person who asked to attend, or the person's representative, the officer who exercised the relevant seizure power must give that person a written notice of why the examination was carried out in those circumstances. If it is necessary for security reasons or to maintain confidentiality, officers may exclude interested persons from decryption or other processes which facilitate the examination but do not form part of it (see Note 7D).

B7.9. It is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to make sure property is returned in accordance with sections 34 to 36. Material which there is no power to retain must be—

- (a) separated from the rest of the seized property;
- (b) returned as soon as reasonably practicable after examination of all the seized property.

B7.9A. Delay is only warranted if very clear and compelling reasons exist, such as —

- (a) the unavailability of the person to whom the material is to be returned;
- (b) the need to agree a convenient time to return a large volume of material.

B7.9B. Legally privileged, excluded or special procedure material which cannot be retained must be returned —

- (a) as soon as reasonably practicable;
- (b) without waiting for the whole examination.

B7.9C. As set out in section 39, material must be returned to the person from whom it was seized, except when it is clear some other person has a better right to it (see Note 7E).

B7.10. If an officer involved in the investigation has reasonable grounds to believe a person with a relevant interest in property seized under section 31 or 32 intends to make an application under section 33 for the return of any legally privileged, special procedure or excluded material, the officer in charge of the investigation should be informed as soon as practicable and the material seized should be kept secure in accordance with section 42 (see Note 7C).

B7.11. The officer in charge of the investigation is responsible for making sure property is properly secured. Securing involves making sure the property is not examined, copied, imaged or put to any other use except at the request, or with the consent, of the applicant or in accordance with the directions of the appropriate judicial authority. Any request, consent or directions must be recorded in writing and signed by both the initiator and the officer in charge of the investigation (see Notes 7F and G).

B7.12. When an officer exercises a power of seizure conferred by section 31 or 32 he or she must provide the occupier of the premises or the person from whom the property is being seized with a written notice —

- (a) specifying what has been seized under the powers conferred by that section;
- (b) specifying the grounds for those powers;

(c) setting out the effect of sections 40 to 42 covering the grounds for a person with a relevant interest in seized property to apply to a judicial authority for its return and the duty of officers to secure property in certain circumstances when an application is made;

(d) specifying the name and address of the person to whom —

(i) notice of an application to the appropriate judicial authority in respect of any of the seized property must be given;

(ii) an application may be made to allow attendance at the initial examination of the property.

B7.13. If the occupier is not present but there is someone in charge of the premises, the notice must be given to the occupier. If no suitable person is available, so that the notice will easily be found, it should either be —

(a) left in a prominent place on the premises; or

(b) attached to the exterior of the premises.

C. Retention

B7.14. Subject to paragraph B7.15, anything seized in accordance with the above provisions may be retained only for as long as is necessary. It may be retained, among other purposes —

(a) for use as evidence at a trial for an offence;

(b) to facilitate the use in any investigation or proceedings of anything to which it is inextricably linked (see Note 7H);

(c) for forensic examination or other investigation in connection with an offence;

(d) in order to establish its lawful owner when there are reasonable grounds for believing it has been stolen or obtained by the commission of an offence.

B7.15. Property must not be retained under paragraph B7.14(a), (b) or (c) if a copy or image would be sufficient.

D. Rights of owners, etc.

B7.16. If property is retained, the person who had custody or control of it immediately before seizure must, on request, be provided with a list or description of the property within a reasonable time.

B7.17. That person or his or her representative must be allowed supervised access to the property to examine it or have it photographed or copied, or must be provided with a photograph or copy, in either case within a reasonable time of any request and at the person's own expense, unless the officer in charge of an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing this would —

- (a) prejudice the investigation of any offence or criminal proceedings; or
- (b) lead to the commission of an offence by providing access to unlawful material such as pornography.

A record of the grounds shall be made when access is denied.

Notes for Guidance

7A. Any person claiming property seized by the police may apply to a judicial officer (judge, Senior Magistrate or three justices of the peace) under sections 41 and 42 of the Ordinance for its possession and should, if appropriate, be advised of this procedure.

7B. The powers of seizure conferred by section 23 of the Ordinance extend to the seizure of the whole premises when it is physically possible to seize and retain the premises in their totality and practical considerations make seizure desirable. For example, police may remove premises such as tents, vehicles or caravans to a place of lawful custody for the purpose of preserving evidence.

7C. Officers should consider reaching agreement with owners and/or other interested parties on the procedures for examining a specific set of property, rather than awaiting the judicial authority's determination. Agreement can sometimes give a quicker and more satisfactory route for all concerned and minimise costs and legal complexities.

7D. What constitutes a relevant interest in specific material may depend on the nature of that material and the circumstances in which it is seized. Anyone with a reasonable claim to ownership of the material and anyone entrusted with its safe keeping by the owner should be considered.

7E. Requirements to secure and return property apply equally to all copies, images or other material created because of seizure of the original property.

7F. The mechanics of securing property vary according to the circumstances; "bagging up", i.e. placing material in sealed bags or containers and strict subsequent control of access is the appropriate procedure in many cases.

7G. When material is seized under the powers of seizure conferred by the Ordinance, the duty to retain it under the Code of Practice on the Recording, Retention and Disclosure of Material is subject to the provisions on retention of seized material in section 30 of the Ordinance.

7H. Paragraph B7.14 (b) applies if inextricably linked material is seized under section 31 or 32 of the Ordinance. Inextricably linked material is material that it is not reasonably practicable to separate from other linked material without prejudicing the use of that other material in any investigation or proceedings. For example, it might not be possible to separate items of data held on computer disc without damaging their evidential integrity. Inextricably linked material must not be examined, imaged, copied or used for any purpose other than for proving the source and/or integrity of the linked material.

B8. Action after searches

B8.1. If premises are searched in circumstances where this Code applies, unless the exceptions in paragraph B2.3(a) apply, on arrival at the place of lawful custody the officer in charge of the search must make or have made a record of the search, to include —

- (a) the address of the searched premises;
- (b) the date, time and duration of the search;
- (c) the authority used for the search, that is to say —
 - (i) if the search was made in exercise of a statutory power to search premises without warrant - the power which was used for the search;
 - (ii) if the search was made under a warrant or with written consent - a copy of the warrant and the written authority to apply for it, or the written consent, or a note of the location of the copy warrant or consent;
- (d) subject to paragraph B2.9, the names of —
 - (i) the officer or officers in charge of the search;
 - (ii) all other officers and any authorised persons who conducted the search;
- (e) the names of any people on the premises if they are known;
- (f) any grounds for refusing the occupier's request to have someone present during the search;
- (g) a list of any articles seized or the location of a list and, if not covered by a warrant, the grounds for their seizure;
- (h) whether force was used, and the reason;
- (i) details of any damage caused during the search, and the circumstances;
- (j) if applicable, the reason it was not practicable —
 - (i) to give the occupier a copy of the Notice of Powers and Rights as required by paragraph B6.7;
 - (ii) to give the occupier before the search a copy of the Notice, as required by paragraph B6.8;
- (k) if the occupier was not present - the place where copies of the Notice of Powers and Rights and search warrant were left on the premises.

B8.2. On each occasion when premises are searched under a warrant, the warrant authorising the search on that occasion must be endorsed to show —

- (a) whether any articles specified in the warrant were found and the address where they were found;
- (b) whether any other articles were seized;
- (c) the date and time the warrant was executed and if the occupier was present, his or her name, or, if the occupier was not present, the name of the person in charge of the premises;
- (d) subject to paragraph B2.9, the names of the officers who executed it and any authorised persons who accompanied them;
- (e) whether a copy of the warrant, together with a copy of the Notice of Powers and Rights required by paragraph B6.7, was —
 - (i) handed to the occupier; or
 - (ii) endorsed as required by paragraph B6.8 and left on the premises (and if so, where).

B8.3. Any warrant must be returned within 3 calendar months of its issue, or sooner on completion of the search or searches authorised by it, if the warrant was issued by —

- (a) the Senior Magistrate or justices of the peace - to the Clerk of the court;
- (b) a judge - to the Registrar.

B9. Search registers

B9.1. A search register must be maintained at each police station. All search records required under paragraph B8.1 must be made, copied, or referred to in the register (see Note 9A).

C1. General

C1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

C1.02. The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the people to whom they apply, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

C1.1. All persons in custody must be dealt with expeditiously, and released as soon as the need for detention no longer applies.

C1.1A. A custody officer must perform the functions in this Code as soon as practicable. A custody officer will not be in breach of this Code if delay is justifiable and if reasonable steps are taken to prevent unnecessary delay. The custody record must show when a delay has occurred and the reason (see Note 1H).

C1.2. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

C1.3. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation. Provisions in the Annexes to the Code are provisions of this Code.

C1.4. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a person of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code (see Note 1G).

C1.5. Any person who appears to be under 18 must be treated as a youth for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence that he or she is older.

C1.6. A person who appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or who has difficulty orally because of a speech impediment, must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary.

C1.7. In this Code, ‘appropriate adult’ has the same meaning as in section 2 of the Ordinance, that is to say —

(a) in relation to a youth —

(i) the youth’s parent or guardian;

(ii) if the youth is in the care of the Department - a person representing the Department;
or

(iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or a person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

(Note: The ‘Department’ means the Social Services Department.)

(b) in relation to a person who is mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable —

(i) a relative, guardian or other person responsible for the person’s care or custody;

(ii) a person experienced in dealing with mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable people but who is not a police officer or person employed by the police; or

(iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

C1.8. If this Code requires a person be given certain information, the person does not have to be given it if at the time he or she is incapable of understanding what is said, is violent or may become violent or in urgent need of medical attention, but must be given it as soon as practicable.

C1.9. [Omitted]

C1.9A. If this Code requires the prior agreement or authority of an officer of a specified rank or above, it may be given by an officer authorised to perform the functions of that rank under section 781 of the Ordinance.

C1.10. Subject to paragraph C1.12, this Code applies to people detained or in custody at a place of lawful custody, whether or not the person has been arrested. Section C15 (Reviews and extensions of detention) applies solely to people in police detention, e.g. those brought to a place of lawful custody under arrest or arrested at such a place for an offence after going there voluntarily.

C1.11 [Omitted]

C1.12. The provisions of this Code do not apply to people detained in custody for searches under stop and search powers, except as required by Code A.

The provisions on conditions of detention and treatment in sections C8 and C9 must be considered as the minimum standards of treatment for such detainees.

C1.13 to C1.16 [Omitted]

C1.17. References to pocket books include any official report book issued to police officers.

Notes for Guidance

1A. Although certain sections of this Code apply specifically to people in custody at a place of lawful custody, those there voluntarily to assist with an investigation should be treated with no less consideration, e.g. offered refreshments at appropriate times, and enjoy an absolute right to obtain legal advice or communicate with anyone outside the place of lawful custody.

1B. A person, including a parent or guardian, should not be an appropriate adult if he or she —

- (a) is suspected of involvement in the offence;
- (b) is the victim;
- (c) is a witness;
- (d) is involved in the investigation; or
- (e) received admissions before attending to act as the appropriate adult.

(Note- If a youth's parent is estranged from the youth, he or she should not be asked to act as the appropriate adult if the youth expressly and specifically objects to his or her presence.)

1C. If a youth admits an offence to, or in the presence of, a probation officer a social worker, other than during the time that that person is acting as the youth's appropriate adult, another appropriate adult should be appointed in the interest of fairness.

1D. In the case of people who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, it may be more satisfactory if the appropriate adult is someone experienced or trained in his or her care rather than a relative lacking such qualifications. But if the detainee prefers a relative to a better qualified stranger or objects to a particular person the detainee's wishes should, if practicable, be respected.

1E. A detainee should always be given an opportunity, when an appropriate adult is called to a place of lawful custody, to consult privately with a legal practitioner in the appropriate adult's absence if the detainee wants. An appropriate adult does not enjoy legal privilege.

1F. A legal practitioner present at a place of lawful custody in that capacity cannot be the appropriate adult.

1G. The term 'mentally vulnerable' applies to any detainee who, because of his or her mental state or capacity, may not understand the significance of what is said, of questions or of his or her replies. 'Mental disorder' is defined in the Mental Health Ordinance as any disorder or disability of the mind. If the custody officer has any doubt about the mental state or capacity of a detainee, the detainee should be treated as mentally vulnerable and an appropriate adult called.

1H. Paragraph C1.1A is intended to cover delays which may occur in processing detainees e.g. if—

(a) a large number of suspects are brought into a place of lawful custody simultaneously to be placed in custody;

(b) interview rooms are all being used;

(c) there are difficulties contacting an appropriate adult, legal practitioner or interpreter.

1I. The custody officer must remind the appropriate adult and detainee about the right to legal advice and record any reasons for waiving the right in accordance with section C6 (Right to obtain legal advice).

1J. [Omitted]

1K. This Code does not affect the principle that all citizens have a duty to help police officers to prevent crime and discover offenders. This is a civic rather than a legal duty; but when a police officer is trying to discover whether, or by whom, an offence has been committed the officer entitled to question any person from whom he or she thinks useful information can be obtained, subject to the restrictions imposed by this Code. A person's declaration that he or she is unwilling to reply does not alter this entitlement.

C2. Custody records

C2.1A. When a person —

(a) is brought to a place of lawful custody;

(b) is arrested at a place of lawful custody having attended there voluntarily; or

(c) attends a place of lawful custody,

the person must be brought before the custody officer as soon as practicable after the person's arrival at the place of lawful custody or, if appropriate, following arrest after attending a place of lawful custody voluntarily. A person is deemed to be at a place of lawful custody for these purposes if he or she is within the boundary of any building or enclosed yard which forms part of that place.

C2.1. A separate custody record must be opened as soon as practicable for each person brought to a place of lawful custody under arrest, arrested at place of lawful custody having gone there voluntarily, or attending a place of lawful custody in answer to 'street bail' (i.e. bail at a place other than a place of lawful custody). All information recorded under this Code must be recorded as soon as practicable in the custody record unless otherwise specified. Any audio or video recording made in the custody area is not part of the custody record.

C2.2. If any action requires the authority of an officer of a specified rank or above, subject to paragraph C2.6A, the officer's name and rank must be noted in the custody record.

C2.3. The custody officer is responsible for the custody record's accuracy and completeness and for making sure the record or copy of the record accompanies a detainee if he or she is transferred to another place of lawful custody. The record must show the —

- (a) time and reason for transfer;
- (b) time a person is released from detention.

C2.3A. If a person is arrested and taken to a place of lawful custody as a result of a search in the exercise of any stop and search power to which Code A (Stop and search) applies, the officer carrying out the search is responsible for ensuring that the record of that stop and search is made as part of the person's custody record. The custody officer must then ensure that the person is asked if he or she wants a copy of the search record and if so that the person is given a copy as soon as practicable. The person's entitlement to a copy of the search record which is made as part of the custody record is in addition to, and does not affect, the entitlement to a copy of the custody record or any other provisions of section C2 (Custody records) of this Code. (See Code A paragraph 4.2B).

C2.4. The detainee, his or her legal practitioner and/or an appropriate adult must be allowed to inspect the custody record on request as promptly as is practicable, at any time while the person is detained. Access to the custody record for the purposes of this paragraph must be arranged and agreed with the custody officer and must not unreasonably interfere with the custody officer's duties. A record must be made when access is allowed. This access is in addition to other requirements in this Code to provide information about the offence and reasons for arrest and detention and is also in addition to the requirement to give the detainee a copy of the information when an application for a warrant of further detention (or for an extension of such a warrant) is made.

C2.4A. When a detainee leaves police detention or is taken before a court, the detainee or his or her legal practitioner or appropriate adult must be given, if requested, a copy of the custody record as soon as practicable. This entitlement lasts for 12 months after release.

C2.5. The detainee, appropriate adult or legal practitioner must be permitted to inspect the original custody record after the detainee has left police detention, if the person gives reasonable notice of the request. Any such inspection must be noted in the custody record.

C2.6. Subject to paragraph C2.6A, all entries in custody records must be timed and signed by the maker. Records entered on computer must be timed and contain the operator's identification.

C2.6A. Nothing in this Code requires the identity of officers to be recorded or disclosed if the officer reasonably believes recording or disclosing his or her name might put him or her in danger. In these cases, the officer must use his or her warrant or other identification numbers (see Note 2A).

C2.7. The fact and time of any detainee's refusal to sign the custody record, when asked in accordance with this Code, must be recorded.

Note for Guidance

2A. The purpose of paragraph C2.6A is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to those involved. In cases of doubt, an officer of the rank of inspector or above should be consulted.

C3. Initial action

A. Detained persons – normal procedure

C3.1. When a person is brought to a place of lawful custody under arrest or arrested at a place of lawful custody having gone there voluntarily, the custody officer must make sure the person is told clearly about the following continuing rights which may be exercised at any stage during the period in custody —

- (a) the right to have someone informed of his or her arrest as in section C5;
- (b) the right to consult privately with a legal practitioner;
- (c) the right to consult these Codes of Practice (see Note 3D);
- (d) the right to be informed about the offence and (as the case may be) any further offences for which the person is arrested while in custody, and why he or she has been arrested and detained, in accordance with paragraphs C2.4 and C11.1A of this Code and paragraph G3.3 of Code G;
- (e) the right to medical help;

- (f) the right to remain silent as set out in the caution;
- (g) if applicable, the right to interpretation and translation; and
- (h) if applicable, the right to communication with the person's High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government as mentioned in paragraph C12A.

C3.2. The detainee must also be given a written notice —

- (a) setting out —
 - (i) his or her rights under paragraphs C3.1, C3.12 and C3.12A of this Code;
 - (ii) the arrangements for obtaining legal advice;
 - (iii) the right to a copy of the custody record as in paragraph C2.4A;
 - (iv) the caution in the terms prescribed in section C10;
 - (v) the rights to:
 - information about the offence and the reasons and grounds for the arrest and detention for that offence and (as the case may be) any further offences for which the person is arrested while in custody; and
 - access to materials and documents which are essential to effectively challenge the lawfulness of the arrest and detention for any such offence;
 - (vi) the maximum period for which the detainee may be kept in police detention without being charged; when detention must be reviewed and when release is required;
 - (vii) the detainee's right to communicate with his or her High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government in accordance with section C7;
 - (viii) the right to medical assistance in accordance with section C9;
 - (ix) the right, if the detainee is prosecuted, to have access to the evidence in the case in accordance with the Ordinance;
- (b) briefly setting out the detainee's other entitlements while in custody, by —
 - (i) mentioning:
 - the provisions relating to the conduct of interviews;

the circumstances in which an appropriate adult should be available to assist the detainee and the statutory rights to make representations whenever the need for detention is reviewed.

(ii) listing the entitlements in this Code, concerning:

- ~ reasonable standards of physical comfort;
- ~ adequate food and drink; access to toilets and washing facilities, clothing, medical attention, and exercise when practicable. (See Note 3A).

The detainee must be given an opportunity to read the notice and asked to sign the custody record to acknowledge receipt of this notice. Any refusal must be recorded on the custody record.

C3.3. [Omitted]

C3.3A. An audio version of the notice and an ‘easy read’ illustrated version should also be provided if they are available. (See Note 3A).

C3.4. The custody officer must —

(a) record on the custody record the offence or offences that the detainee has been arrested for and the reason or reasons for the arrest (see paragraph C10.3 and Code G paragraphs G2.2 and G4.3);.

(b) note on the custody record any comment the detainee makes in relation to the arresting officer’s account, but must not invite comment. If the arresting officer is not physically present when the detainee is brought to the place of lawful custody, the arresting officer’s account must be made available to the custody officer remotely or by a third party on the arresting officer’s behalf. If the custody officer authorises a person’s detention the detainee must be informed of the grounds as soon as practicable and before he or she is questioned about any offence;

(c) note any comment the detainee makes in respect of the decision to detain him or her, but must not invite comment;

(d) not put specific questions to the detainee regarding his or her involvement in any offence, nor in respect of any comments he or she may make in response to the arresting officer’s account or the decision to place him or her in detention. Such an exchange is likely to constitute an interview as in paragraph C11.1A and require the associated safeguards in section C11;

Note: This sub-paragraph also applies to any further offences and grounds for detention which come to light while the person is detained. (See paragraph C11.13 in respect of unsolicited comments.)

(e) any available documents and materials which are essential to effectively challenge the lawfulness of the detainee’s arrest and detention must be made available to the detainee or his or her legal practitioner. Documents and materials will be “essential” for this purpose if they are capable of undermining the reasons and grounds which make the detainee’s arrest and detention necessary. The decision about what needs to be disclosed for the purpose of this requirement rests with the custody officer after consulting the investigating officer who has the knowledge of the documents and materials in a particular case necessary to inform that decision. A note should be made in the detainee’s custody record of the fact that action has been taken under this sub-paragraph and when. The investigating officer should make a separate note of what has been made available in a particular case. This also applies for the purposes of section C15. (See paragraph C15.0.)

C3.5. The custody officer must —

- (a) ask the detainee, whether at this time, he or she —
 - (i) would like legal advice (see paragraph C6.5);
 - (ii) wants to have someone informed of his or her detention (see section C5);
- (b) ask the detainee to sign the custody record to confirm his or her decisions in respect of (a);
- (c) determine whether the detainee is, or might be, in need of medical treatment or attention (see section C9);
- (ca) ascertain whether the detainee requires —
 - (i) an appropriate adult;
 - (ii) help to check documentation;
 - (iii) an interpreter (if necessary by electronic means);
- (d) record the decision in respect of (c) and (ca).

C3.6. When determining these needs the custody officer is responsible for initiating an assessment to consider whether the detainee is likely to present specific risks to the custody officer or other police officers. Although such assessments are primarily the custody officer’s responsibility, it may be necessary for the officer to consult and involve others, e.g. the arresting officer or an appropriate health care professional (see paragraph C9.13 and Note 9A).

Reasons for delaying the initiation or completion of the assessment must be recorded.

C3.7. The Chief Police Officer should ensure that arrangements for proper and effective risk assessments required by paragraph C3.6 are implemented in respect of all detainees in the Falkland Islands.

C3.8. Risk assessments must follow a structured process which clearly defines the categories of risk to be considered, and the results must be incorporated in the detainee's custody record. The custody officer is responsible for making sure those responsible for the detainee's custody are appropriately briefed about the risks. If no specific risks are identified by the assessment, that should be noted in the custody record (see paragraph C9.14).

C3.8A. The content of any risk assessment and any analysis of the level of risk relating to the person's detention is not required to be shown or provided to the detainee or any person acting on behalf of the detainee. But information should not be withheld from any person acting on the detainee's behalf, for example, an appropriate adult, legal practitioner or interpreter, if to do so might put that person at risk.

C3.9. The custody officer is responsible for implementing the response to any specific risk assessment, such as —

- (a) reducing opportunities for self-harm;
- (b) calling a health care professional;
- (c) increasing levels of monitoring or observation;
- (d) reducing the risk for those who come into contact with the detainee.

C3.10. Risk assessment is an ongoing process and assessments must always be subject to review if circumstances change.

C3.11. If video cameras are installed in the custody area, notices must be prominently displayed showing cameras are in use. Any request to have video cameras switched off must be refused.

B. Detained persons – special groups

C3.12. If the detainee appears to be someone who does not speak or understand English or who has a hearing or speech impediment, the custody officer must ensure —

- (a) that as soon as practicable, an interpreter is called for assistance in the action under paragraphs C3.1 to C3.5. if necessary by electronic means. (See section C13);
- (b) that in addition to the rights set out in paragraph C3.1(a)(i) to (v), the detainee is told clearly about the right to interpretation and translation;
- (c) that the written notice given to the detainee in accordance with paragraph C3.2 is in a language the detainee understands and includes the right to interpretation and translation together with information about the provisions in section C13 which explain how the right applies (see Note 3A); and

(d) that if the translation of the notice is not available, the information in the notice is given through an interpreter and a written translation provided without undue delay.

C3.12A If the detainee is a citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the Republic of Ireland, the custody officer must ensure that in addition to the rights set out in paragraph C3.1(i) to (v), the detainee is informed as soon as practicable about the rights of communication with a High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government set out in section C7. This right must be included in the written notice given to the detainee in accordance with paragraph C3.2.

C3.13. If the detainee is a youth, the custody officer must, if it is practicable, ascertain the identity of a person responsible for the youth's welfare. That person may be —

- (a) the parent or guardian;
- (b) if the youth is in the care of the Crown or is otherwise being looked after under the Children Ordinance - a person with responsibility for the child's welfare;
- (c) any other person who has, for the time being, assumed responsibility for the youth's welfare.

C3.13A. The person identified must be informed as soon as practicable that the youth has been arrested, why he or she has been arrested and where he or she is detained. This right is in addition to the youth's right in section C5 not to be held incommunicado (see Note 3C).

C3.14. If a youth is known to be subject to a court order under which a person or organisation is given any degree of statutory responsibility to supervise or otherwise monitor the youth, reasonable steps must also be taken to notify that person or organisation.

C3.15. If the detainee is a youth, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, the custody officer must, as soon as practicable —

- (a) inform the appropriate adult, who in the case of a youth may or may not be a person responsible for his or her welfare, as in paragraph C3.13, of —
 - (i) the grounds for the youth's detention; and
 - (ii) his or her whereabouts;
- (b) ask the adult to come to the place of lawful custody to see the detainee.

C3.15A. If the parent or guardian or other person who has assumed responsibility for a detained youth's welfare cannot be ascertained or does not want to see the detainee, the custody officer must inform the Social Services Department of the circumstances.

C3.16. [Omitted]

C3.17. If the appropriate adult is —

- (a) already at the place of lawful custody - the provisions of paragraphs C3.1 to C3.5 must be complied with in the appropriate adult's presence;
- (b) not at the place of lawful custody when these provisions are complied with - they must be complied with again in the presence of the appropriate adult when he or she arrives.

C3.18. The detainee must be advised that —

- (a) the duties of the appropriate adult include giving advice and assistance;
- (b) he or she can consult privately with the appropriate adult at any time.

C3.19. If the detainee, or appropriate adult on the detainee's behalf, asks for a legal practitioner to be called to give legal advice, the provisions of section C6 apply.

C3.20. If the detainee is blind, seriously visually impaired or unable to read, the custody officer must make sure his or her legal practitioner, relative, appropriate adult or some other person likely to take an interest in him or her and not involved in the investigation is available to help check any documentation. When this Code requires written consent or signing, the person assisting may be asked to sign instead, if the detainee prefers. This paragraph does not require an appropriate adult to be called solely to assist in checking and signing documentation for a person who is not a youth, or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable (see paragraph C3.15).

C. Persons attending a place of lawful custody voluntarily

C3.21. A person attending a place of lawful custody voluntarily to assist police with the investigation of an offence may leave at will unless arrested (see Note 1K). The person may only be prevented from leaving at will if arresting the person on suspicion of committing an offence is necessary in accordance with Code G (See Code G Note 2G).

If during an interview it is decided that it is necessary to arrest a person, the person must —

- (a) be informed at once that he or she is under arrest and of the grounds and reasons as required by Code G; and
- (b) be brought before the custody officer at the place of lawful custody where the person is arrested or, as the case may be, at the place of lawful custody to which the person is taken after being arrested elsewhere. The custody officer is then responsible for making sure that a custody record is opened and that the person is notified of his or her rights in the same way as other detainees as required by this Code.

If a person is not arrested but is cautioned as in section C10, the person who gives the caution must, at the same time, inform the person that he or she is not under arrest and, is not obliged to remain at the place of lawful custody or other location. The person must also be given a copy of the notice explaining the right to obtain legal advice and told that the right to obtain legal advice includes the right to speak with a legal practitioner on the telephone or by other electronic means and be asked if he or she wants advice. If advice is requested, the interviewer is responsible for securing its provision without delay by contacting a legal practitioner specified by the detainee. The interviewer must also ensure that other provisions of this Code and of Codes E and F concerning the conduct and recording of interviews of suspects and the rights and entitlements and safeguards for suspects who have been arrested and detained are followed insofar as they can be applied to suspects who are not under arrest. This includes:

- informing the suspect of the offence and, as the case may be, any further offences, the suspect is suspected of and the grounds and reasons for that suspicion and the right to be so informed (see paragraph C3.1(b));
- the caution as required in section C10;
- determining whether the suspect requires an appropriate adult and help to check documentation (See paragraph C3.5(c)(ii)); and
- determining whether the suspect requires an interpreter and the provision of interpretation and translation services and informing the suspect of that right.

(See paragraph C3.2 and Note 6B)

C3.22. If the other location mentioned in paragraph C3.21 is any place or premises for which the interviewer requires the person's informed consent to remain, for example, the person's home, then the references that the person is 'not obliged to remain' and 'may leave at will' mean that the person may also withdraw his or her consent and require the interviewer to leave.

D. Documentation

C3.23. The grounds for a person's detention must be recorded, in the person's presence if practicable.

C3.24. Action taken under paragraphs C3.12 to C3.20 must be recorded.

E. Persons answering street bail

C3.25. When a person is answering to 'street bail' (i.e. bail at a place other than a place of lawful custody), the custody officer should link any documentation held in relation to arrest with the custody record. Any further action must be recorded on the custody record in accordance with paragraphs C3.23 and C3.24 above.

F. Requirements for suspects to be informed of certain rights

C3.26 The provisions of this section identify the information which must be given to suspects who have been cautioned in accordance with section C10 of this Code according to whether or not the suspect has been arrested and detained. It includes information required by EU Directive

2012/13 on the right to information in criminal proceedings. If a complaint is made by or on behalf of such a suspect that the information and (as the case may be) access to records and documents has not been provided as required, the matter must be reported to an police officer of the rank of inspector or above to deal with as a complaint for the purposes of paragraph C9.2 or C12.9 if the challenge is made during an interview. This would include, for example:

(a) in the case of a detained suspect:

- not informing the suspect of his or her rights (see paragraph C3.1);
- not giving the suspect a copy of the Notice (see paragraph C3.2(a))
- not providing an opportunity to read the notice (see paragraph C3.2A)
- not providing the required information (see paragraphs C3.2(a), C3.12(b) and, C3.12A;
- not allowing access to the custody record (see paragraph C2.4);
- not providing a translation of the Notice (see paragraph C3.12(c) and (d)); and

(b) in the case of a suspect who is not detained:

- not informing the suspect of his or her rights or providing the required information (see paragraph C3.21(b));

Notes for Guidance

3A The notice required by paragraph C3.2(a) should —

(a) list the entitlements in this Code, including —

(i) visits and contact with outside parties, including special provisions for Commonwealth citizens and foreign nationals;

(ii) reasonable standards of physical comfort;

(iii) adequate food and drink;

(iv) access to toilets and washing facilities, clothing, medical attention, and exercise when practicable;

(b) mention the —

(i) provisions relating to the conduct of interviews;

(ii) circumstances in which an appropriate adult should be available to assist the detainee, and the detainee's statutory rights to make representations whenever the period of his or her detention is reviewed.

3B. [Omitted]

3C. If the youth is in care of the Crown but living with his or her parents or other adults responsible for his or her welfare, although there is no legal obligation to inform the youth, the parents or adults should normally be contacted, as well as the Social Services Department, unless suspected of involvement in the offence concerned. Even if the youth is not living with his or her parents, consideration should be given to informing them.

3D. The right to consult the Codes of Practice does not entitle the person concerned to delay unreasonably any necessary investigative or administrative action whilst he or she does so. Examples of action which need not be delayed unreasonably include —

- (a) procedures requiring the provision of breath or other specimens under the Road Traffic Ordinance;
- (b) searching detainees at a place of lawful custody;
- (c) taking fingerprints, footwear impressions or non-intimate samples without consent for evidential purposes.

3E. and 3F. [Omitted]

C4. Detainee's property

A. Action

C4.1. The custody officer is responsible for ascertaining what property a detainee has with him or her when he or she comes to the place of lawful custody on —

- (a) arrest or re-detention on answering to bail;
- (b) commitment to prison custody on the order or sentence of a court;
- (c) lodgement at the place of lawful custody with a view to his or her production in court from prison custody;
- (d) transfer from detention at another place of lawful custody or hospital;
- (e) remand into police custody on the authority of a court.

C4.1A. The custody officer is also responsible for —

- (a) ascertaining what property a detainee might have acquired for an unlawful or harmful purpose while in custody;
- (b) the safekeeping of any property taken from a detainee which remains at the place of lawful custody.

C4.1B. The custody officer may search the detainee or authorise his or her being searched to the extent the officer considers necessary, provided a search of intimate parts of the body or involving the removal of more than outer clothing is only made as in Annex A. In general, a search may only be carried out by an officer of the same gender as the detainee. (See Annex F to Code C for the rules for establishing gender and paragraph 11(aa) of Annex A for an exception to this rule).

C4.2. A detainee may retain clothing and personal effects at the detainee's own risk unless —

(a) the custody officer considers that the detainee may use them or any of them to cause harm to himself or herself or others, interfere with evidence, damage property or effect an escape; or

(b) any of them are needed as evidence, in either of which cases the custody officer may withhold relevant articles and must tell the detainee why.

C4.3. Personal effects are those items a detainee may lawfully need, use or refer to while in detention but do not include cash and other items of value.

B. Documentation

C4.4. It is a matter for the custody officer to determine whether a record should be made of the property a detained person has with him or her or had taken from him or her on arrest. Any record made need not be kept as part of the custody record but the custody record should be noted as to where such a record exists. Whenever a record is made the detainee must be allowed to check and sign the record of property as correct. Any refusal to sign must be recorded.

C4.5. If a detainee is not allowed to keep any article of clothing or personal effects, the reason must be recorded.

Notes for Guidance

4A. Section 84 of the Ordinance and paragraph C4.1 require a detainee to be searched when it is clear that the custody officer will have continuing duties in relation to the detainee or when the detainee's behaviour or offence makes an inventory appropriate. They do not require every detainee to be searched, e.g. if it is clear that a person will only be detained for a short period and is not to be placed in a cell, the custody officer may decide not to search him or her. In such a case the custody record must be endorsed 'not searched', paragraph C4.4 does not apply, and the detainee must be invited to sign the entry. If the detainee refuses, the custody officer must ascertain what property the detainee has in accordance with paragraph C4.1.

4B. Paragraph C4.4 does not require the custody officer to record on the custody record property in the detainee's possession on arrest if, by virtue of its nature, quantity or size, it is not practicable to remove it to the place of lawful custody.

4C. Paragraph C 4.4 does not require items of clothing worn by the person to be recorded unless withheld by the custody officer as in paragraph C4.2.

C5. Right not to be held incommunicado

A. Action

C5.1. Any person arrested and held in custody at a place of lawful custody or other premises may, on request, have one person known to him or her, or likely to take an interest in his or her welfare, informed at public expense of his or her whereabouts as soon as practicable. If the person cannot be contacted the detainee may choose up to two alternatives. If neither of them can be contacted, the person in charge of detention or the investigation may allow further attempts until the information has been conveyed (see Notes 5C and 5D).

C5.2. The exercise of this right in respect of each person nominated may be delayed only in accordance with Annex B.

C5.3. This right may be exercised each time a detainee is taken to another place of lawful custody.

C5.4. If the detainee agrees, he or she may at the custody officer's discretion receive visits from friends, family or others likely to take an interest in the welfare of the detainee, or in whose welfare the detainee has an interest (see Note 5B).

C5.5. If a friend, relative or person with an interest in the detainee's welfare enquires about his or her whereabouts, this information must be given if the detainee agrees and if Annex B does not apply (see Note 5D).

C5.6. The detainee must be given writing materials, on request, and allowed to telephone one person for a reasonable time (see Notes 5A and 5E). Either or both these privileges may be denied or delayed if an officer of the rank of inspector or above considers that sending a letter or making a telephone call might result in any of the consequences in Annex B paragraphs 1 and 2 and the person is detained in connection with an imprisonable offence.

Nothing in this paragraph permits the restriction or denial of the rights in paragraphs C5.1 and C6.1.

C5.7. Before any letter or message is sent, or telephone call made, the detainee must be informed that what he or she says in any letter, call or message (other than in a communication to a legal practitioner) may be read or listened to and may be given in evidence. A telephone call may be terminated if it is being abused. The costs can be at public expense at the custody officer's discretion.

C5.7A. Any delay or denial of the rights in this section should be proportionate and should last no longer than necessary.

C5.7B. [Omitted]

B. Documentation

C5.8. A record must be kept of any —

- (a) request made under this section and the action taken;
- (b) letters, messages or telephone calls made or received or visits received;
- (c) refusal by the detainee to have information about him or her given to an outside enquirer.

The detainee must be asked to countersign the record accordingly and any refusal must be recorded.

Notes for Guidance

5A. A person may request an interpreter to interpret a telephone call or translate a letter, if necessary by electronic means.

5B. At the custody officer's discretion, subject to the detainee's consent, visits should be allowed when possible, if there are sufficient personnel to supervise a visit and if there would be no hindrance to the investigation.

5C. If the detainee does not know anyone to contact for advice or support or cannot contact a friend or relative, the custody officer should mention any local voluntary bodies or other organisations which might be able to help. Paragraph C6.1 applies if legal advice is required.

5D. In some circumstances it may not be appropriate to use the telephone to disclose information under paragraphs C5.1 and C5.5.

5E. The telephone call mentioned in paragraph C5.6 is in addition to any communication under paragraphs C5.1 and C6.1.

5F. If other electronic means are available and appropriate, a reference in this Code to use of the telephone includes use of those other means.

C6. Right to obtain legal advice

A. Action

C6.1. Unless Annex B applies, all detainees must be informed that they may at any time consult and communicate privately with a legal practitioner, either in person, in writing or by telephone, and that independent legal advice may be obtained from a legal practitioner (see paragraph C3.1, Notes 6B and 6J).

C6.2. [Omitted]

C6.3. A poster advertising the right to obtain legal advice must be prominently displayed in the place of lawful custody.

C6.4. No police officer should, at any time, do or say anything with the intention of dissuading a detainee from obtaining legal advice.

C6.5. The exercise of the right to obtain legal advice may be delayed only as in Annex B. Whenever legal advice is requested, and unless Annex B applies, the custody officer must act without delay to secure the provision of such advice. If, on being informed or reminded of this right, the detainee declines to speak to a legal practitioner in person, the officer should point out that the right includes the right to speak with a legal practitioner on the telephone. If the detainee continues to waive this right the officer should ask him or her why and any reasons should be recorded on the custody record or the interview record as appropriate. Reminders of the right to obtain legal advice must be given as in paragraphs C3.5, C11.2, C15.4, C16.4 and C16.5, Annex A paragraph 2B, Annex K paragraph 3 of this Code, and paragraphs D3.17(b) and D6.3 of Code D. Once it is clear a detainee does not want to speak to a legal practitioner in person or by telephone he or she should cease to be asked the reasons (see Note 6K).

C6.5A. In the case of a detained person who is a youth or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, an appropriate adult should consider whether legal advice from a legal practitioner is required. If the youth indicates that he or she does not want legal advice, the appropriate adult has the right to ask for a legal practitioner to attend if this would be in the best interests of the youth. However, the youth cannot be forced to see the legal practitioner if he or she is adamant that he or she does not want to do so.

C6.6. A detainee who wants legal advice may not be interviewed or continue to be interviewed until he or she has received such advice unless —

(a) Annex B applies, in which case the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Annex C will apply because the detainee is not allowed an opportunity to consult a legal practitioner; or

(b) an officer of the rank of inspector or above has reasonable grounds for believing that —

(i) the resulting delay might —

- lead to interference with, or physical injury to, other people;
- lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an imprisonable offence;
- lead to alerting other people suspected of having committed such an offence but not yet arrested for it;
- hinder the recovery of property obtained as a result of such an offence;

(ii) if a legal practitioner has been contacted and has agreed to attend, awaiting his or her arrival would cause unreasonable delay to the process of investigation;

(Note: In these cases the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Annex C will apply because the detainee is not allowed an opportunity to consult a legal practitioner.)

(c) the legal practitioner the detainee wishes to contact —

- (i) cannot be contacted;
- (ii) has previously indicated he or she does not want to be contacted; or
- (iii) having been contacted, has declined to attend.

In these circumstances the interview may be started or continued without further delay provided an officer of the rank of inspector or above has agreed to the interview proceeding.

(Note: The restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Annex C will not apply because the detainee is allowed an opportunity to consult the duty legal practitioner.)

(d) the detainee changes his or her mind about wanting legal advice or (as the case maybe) about wanting a legal practitioner present at the interview and states that he or she no longer wants to speak to a legal practitioner.

C6.6A. In the circumstances described in paragraph 6.6(d) the interview may be started or continued without delay provided that —

(a) an officer of the rank of inspector or above —

- (i) speaks to the detainee to enquire about the reason for the change of mind (see Note 6K); and
- (ii) makes reasonable efforts to ascertain the expected time of arrival of a legal practitioner if the detainee has requested to contact one;

(b) the reason for the detainee's change of mind (if given) and the outcome of the action in paragraph (a)(ii) are recorded in the custody record;

(c) the detainee, after being informed of the outcome of the action in paragraph (a)(ii), confirms in writing that he or she wants the interview to proceed without speaking or further speaking to a legal practitioner or without a legal practitioner being present and does not want to wait for a legal practitioner, by signing an entry to this effect in the custody record;

(d) an officer of the rank of inspector or above is satisfied that it is proper for the interview to proceed and —

- (i) gives authority in writing for the interview to proceed;
- (ii) if the authority is not recorded in the custody record, ensures that the custody record shows the date and time of the authority and where it is recorded; and
- (iii) takes reasonable steps to inform the legal practitioner that the authority has been given and the time when the interview is expected to commence, and records the outcome of this action in the custody record;

(e) when the interview starts and the interviewer reminds the suspect of his or her right to legal advice (see paragraph C11.2 below, paragraph 4.5 of Code E and paragraph 4.5 of Code F) the interviewer must then ensure that the following is recorded in the written interview record or the interview record made in accordance with Code E or Code F —

(i) confirmation that the detainee has changed his or her mind about wanting legal advice or (as the case may be) about wanting a legal practitioner present and the reasons for it if given;

(ii) the fact that authority for the interview to proceed has been given and, subject to paragraph C2.6A, the name of the authorising officer;

(iii) that if the legal practitioner arrives at the place of lawful custody before the interview is completed, the detainee will be so informed without delay and a break will be taken to allow the detainee to speak to the legal practitioner if the detainee wants to, unless paragraph C6.6(a) applies; and

(iv) that at any time during the interview, the detainee may again ask to obtain legal advice and that if he or she does, a break will be taken to allow him or her to speak to a legal practitioner, unless paragraph 6.6(a), (b) or (c) applies.

(Note: In these circumstances the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Annex C will not apply because the detainee is allowed an opportunity to consult a legal practitioner if he or she wants to).

C6.7. If paragraph C6.6(a) applies, if the reason for authorising the delay ceases to apply, there may be no further delay in permitting the exercise of the right in the absence of a further authorisation unless paragraph C6.6(b), (c) or (d) applies. If paragraph C6.6(b)(i) applies, once sufficient information has been obtained to avert the risk, questioning must cease until the detainee has received legal advice unless paragraph C6.6(a), (b)(ii), (c) or (d) applies.

C6.8. A detainee who has been permitted to consult a legal practitioner is entitled on request to have the legal practitioner present when he or she is interviewed unless one of the exceptions in paragraph C6.6 applies.

C6.9. The legal practitioner may only be required to leave the interview if his or her conduct is such that the interviewer is unable properly to put questions to the suspect (see Notes 6D and 6E).

C6.10. If the interviewer considers a legal practitioner is acting in such a way that the interviewer is unable properly to put questions to the suspect, the interviewer must stop the interview and consult an officer of the rank of inspector or above (being, if practicable, an officer who is not connected with the investigation). After speaking to the legal practitioner, the officer consulted must decide whether the interview should continue in the presence of that legal practitioner. If the officer decides it should not, the suspect must be given the opportunity to consult another legal practitioner before the interview continues and that legal practitioner must be given an opportunity to be present at the interview (see Note 6E).

C6.11. The removal of a legal practitioner from an interview is a serious step and, if it occurs, the officer who took the decision must report the matter to the Attorney General.

C6.12. In this Code, “legal practitioner” means a person who is entitled to practise as an advocate or as a solicitor, attorney or proctor in any court having unlimited jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in some part of the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland.

C6.12A. to C6.14. [Omitted]

C6.15. If a legal practitioner arrives at a place of lawful custody to see a particular person, that person must, unless Annex B applies, be so informed, even if he or she is being interviewed, and asked if he or she would like to see the legal practitioner. This applies even if the detainee has declined legal advice or, having requested it, subsequently agreed to be interviewed without receiving advice. The legal practitioner’s attendance and the detainee’s decision must be noted in the custody record.

B. Documentation

C6.16. Any request for legal advice and the action taken must be recorded.

C6.17. A record must be made in the interview record if a detainee asks for legal advice and an interview is begun either in the absence of a legal practitioner, or the legal practitioner has been required to leave an interview.

Notes for Guidance

6. A police officer must not indicate to any person who is a suspect, except to answer a direct question, that the period for which the person is liable to be detained, or if not detained, the time taken to complete the interview, might be reduced —

(a) if the person does not ask for legal advice or does not want a legal practitioner present when he or she is interviewed; or

(b) if the person has asked for legal advice or for a legal practitioner to be present when he or she is interviewed - changes his or her mind and agrees to be interviewed without waiting for a legal practitioner.

6A. In considering whether paragraph C6.6(b) applies, the officer should, if practicable, ask the legal practitioner for an estimate of how long it will take to come to the place of lawful custody and must relate this to the time for which detention is permitted, the time of day (i.e. whether the rest period under paragraph C12.2 is imminent) and the requirements of other investigations. If the legal practitioner is on the way or is to set off immediately, it will not normally be appropriate to begin an interview before he or she arrives. If it appears necessary to begin an interview before the legal practitioner’s arrival, he or she should be given an indication of how long the police would be able to wait before paragraph C6.6(b) applies so that there is an opportunity to make arrangements for someone else to provide legal advice.

6B. A detainee who asks for legal advice to be paid for by himself or herself should be given an opportunity to consult a specific legal practitioner. If this legal practitioner is not available, the detainee may choose up to two alternatives. If these attempts are unsuccessful, the custody officer has discretion to allow further attempts until a legal practitioner has been contacted who agrees to provide legal advice. Otherwise, publicly funded legal advice must be made available.

Apart from carrying out these duties, an officer must not advise the detainee about any particular legal practitioner.

6C. [Omitted]

6D. The legal practitioner's only role at the place of lawful custody is to protect and advance the legal rights of his or her client. On occasions this may require the legal practitioner to give advice which has the effect of the client avoiding giving evidence which strengthens a prosecution case. The legal practitioner may intervene in order to seek clarification, challenge an improper question to his or her client or the manner in which it is put, advise his or her client not to reply to particular questions, or to give his or her client further legal advice. Paragraph C6.9 only applies if the legal practitioner's approach or conduct prevents or unreasonably obstructs proper questions being put to the suspect or the suspect's response being recorded. Examples of unacceptable conduct include answering questions on a suspect's behalf or providing written replies for the suspect to quote.

6E. An officer who takes the decision to exclude a legal practitioner must be in a position to satisfy the court the decision was properly made. In order to do this he or she may need to witness what is happening.

6F. [Omitted]

6G. Subject to the constraints of Annex B, a legal practitioner may advise more than one client in an investigation. Any question of a conflict of interest is for the legal practitioner under his or her professional code of conduct. If, however, waiting for a legal practitioner to give advice to one client may lead to unreasonable delay to the interview with another, the provisions of paragraph C6.6(b) may apply.

6H and I. [Omitted]

6J. Whenever a detainee exercises his or her right to legal advice by consulting or communicating with a legal practitioner, the detainee must be allowed to do so in private. This right to consult or communicate in private is fundamental. If the requirement for privacy is compromised because what is said or written by the detainee or legal practitioner for the purpose of giving and receiving legal advice is overheard, listened to, or read by others without the informed consent of the detainee, the right will effectively have been denied. When a detainee chooses to speak to a legal practitioner on the telephone, he or she should be allowed to do so in private unless this is impractical because of the design and layout of the custody area or the location of telephones. However, the normal expectation should be that facilities will be available, unless they are being used, at the place of lawful custody to enable detainees to speak in private to a legal practitioner either face to face or over the telephone.

6K. A detainee is not obliged to give reasons for declining legal advice and should not be pressed to do so.

C7. Citizens of independent Commonwealth countries or foreign nationals

A. Action

C7.1. A detainee who is a citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the republic of Ireland, has the right, upon request, to communicate at any time with the appropriate High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government. The detainee must be informed as soon as practicable of this right and asked if he or she wants to have his or her High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government told of his or her whereabouts and the grounds for his or her detention. Such a request should be acted upon as soon as practicable. (See Note 7A).

C7.2. A detainee who is a citizen of a country with which a bilateral consular convention or agreement is in force requiring notification of arrest must also be informed that, subject to paragraph C7.4, notification of the detainee's arrest will be sent to the appropriate High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government as soon as practicable, whether or not the detainee requests it.

C7.2A. The following steps should be taken in relation to a foreign national who is in police detention —

- The custody officer must arrange for the Governor to be notified of the arrest and detention of any citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the republic of Ireland.
- Such notification is required even in the case of a foreign national living in the Falkland Islands, unless he or she is also a British citizen or British Overseas Territories citizen.
- Such notification is not required if a British citizen or British Overseas Territories citizen is arrested and detained, unless he or she holds dual nationality and entered the Falkland Islands on the foreign passport.
- The Governor's office is responsible for arranging any notification required by paragraph C7.2.
- If a foreign national requests communication with his or her High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government, the custody officer must arrange for the Governor to be notified of the request. The Governor's office is responsible for contacting the appropriate High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government. The custody officer must take all practical steps needed to facilitate contact or visits in accordance with paragraph C7.3.

C7.3. Consular officers may, if the detainee agrees, visit one of their nationals in police detention to talk to the detainee and, if required, to arrange for legal advice. Such visits must take place out of the hearing of a police officer. They may be conducted by electronic means if necessary.

C7.4. Notwithstanding the provisions of consular conventions, if the detainee claims to be a refugee or has applied or intends to apply for asylum, the custody officer must ensure that the Governor is informed as soon as practicable and the Governor will advise the Chief Police Officer as to the action to be taken by the police.

B. Documentation

C7.5. A record must be made —

- (a) when a detainee is informed of his or her rights under this section and of any requirement in paragraph C7.2;
- (b) of any communication with a High Commission, Embassy, Consulate or a representative of their national government;
- (c) of any communication with the Governor and the resulting action to be taken by the police.

Note for Guidance

7A. The exercise of the rights in this section may not be interfered with even if Annex B applies.

C8. Conditions of detention

A. Action

C8.1. So far as it is practicable, not more than one detainee should be detained in each cell.

C8.2. Cells in use must be adequately heated, cleaned and ventilated. They must be adequately lit. No additional restraints may be used within a locked cell unless absolutely necessary and then only restraint equipment, approved for use by the Chief Police Officer, which is reasonable and necessary in the circumstances, having regard to the detainee's demeanour and with a view to ensuring his or her safety and the safety of others. If a detainee is deaf, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, particular care must be taken when deciding whether to use any form of approved restraints.

C8.3. Blankets, mattresses, pillows and other bedding supplied must be of a reasonable standard and in a clean and sanitary condition.

C8.4. Access to toilet and washing facilities must be provided.

C8.5. If it is necessary to remove a detainee's clothes for the purposes of investigation, for hygiene, health reasons or cleaning, replacement clothing of a reasonable standard of comfort and cleanliness must be provided. A detainee may not be interviewed unless adequate clothing has been offered.

C8.6. At least two light meals and one main meal should be offered in any 24 hour period (see Note 8B). Drinks should be provided at meal times and upon reasonable request between meals. Whenever necessary, advice must be sought from the appropriate health care professional (see Note 9A) on medical and dietary matters. As far as practicable, meals provided must offer a varied diet and meet any specific dietary needs or religious beliefs the detainee has. The detainee may, at the custody officer's discretion, have meals supplied by his or her family or friends at his or her expense (see Note 8A).

C8.7. Brief outdoor exercise must be offered daily if practicable.

C8.8. Where reasonably practicable, youths will not be placed in cells with adults aged 21 or over, or with young offenders aged 18 or over.

B. Documentation

C8.9. A record must be kept of replacement clothing and meals offered.

C8.10. If a youth is placed in a cell, the reason must be recorded.

C8.11. The use of any restraints on a detainee while in a cell, the reasons for it and, if appropriate, the arrangements for enhanced supervision of the detainee while so restrained, must be recorded (see paragraph C3.9).

Notes for Guidance

8A. The provisions in paragraph C8.3 and C8.6 respectively are of particular importance in the case of a person likely to be detained for an extended period. In deciding whether to allow meals to be supplied by family or friends, the custody officer may take account of the risk of items being concealed in any food or package and of the officer's duties and responsibilities under food handling legislation.

8B. Meals should, so far as practicable, be offered at recognised meal times, or at other times that take account of when the detainee last had a meal.

8C. [Omitted]

C9. Care and treatment of detained persons

A. General

C9.1. Nothing in this section prevents the police from calling the police surgeon or, if appropriate, some other health care professional, to examine a detainee for the purposes of obtaining evidence relating to any offence in which the detainee is suspected of being involved (see Note 9A).

C9.2. If a complaint is made by, or on behalf of, a detainee about his or her treatment since arrest, or it comes to notice that a detainee may have been treated improperly, a report must be made as soon as practicable to an officer of the rank of inspector or above who is not connected with the investigation. If the matter concerns a possible assault or the possibility of the unnecessary or unreasonable use of force, an appropriate health care professional must also be called as soon as practicable.

C9.3. Detainees should be visited at least every hour. If no reasonably foreseeable risk was identified in a risk assessment (see paragraphs C3.6 to C3.10), there is no need to wake a sleeping detainee. Those suspected of being intoxicated through drink or drugs or having swallowed drugs (see Note 9CA), or whose level of consciousness causes concern must, subject to any clinical directions given by the appropriate health care professional (see paragraph C9.13)—

- (a) be visited and roused at least every half hour;
- (b) have their condition assessed as in Annex H;
- (c) have clinical treatment arranged if appropriate (see Notes 9B, 9C and 9H).

C9.4. When arrangements are made to secure clinical attention for a detainee, the custody officer must make sure all relevant information which might assist in the treatment of the detainee's condition is made available to the responsible health care professional. This applies whether or not the health care professional asks for such information. Any police officer with relevant information must inform the custody officer as soon as practicable.

B. Clinical treatment and attention

C9.5. The custody officer must make sure a detainee receives appropriate clinical attention as soon as reasonably practicable if the person —

- (a) appears to be suffering from physical illness;
- (b) is injured;
- (c) appears to be suffering from a mental disorder; or
- (d) appears to need clinical attention.

C9.5A. This applies even if the detainee makes no request for clinical attention and whether or not he or she has already received clinical attention elsewhere. If the need for attention appears urgent, e.g. when indicated as in Annex H, the nearest available health care professional or an ambulance must be called immediately.

C9.5B. The custody officer must also consider the need for clinical attention as set out in Note 9C in relation to those suffering the effects of alcohol or drugs.

C9.6. If it appears to the custody officer, or he or she is told, that a person brought to a place of lawful custody under arrest may be suffering from mental disorder or is mentally vulnerable (as to which see Note 1G in section C1), the custody officer must inform the most senior person on duty at the hospital and act on his or her instructions with regard to the arrested person. Nothing in this Code is meant to prevent or delay the transfer to a hospital if necessary of a person who needs to be detained under Part 3 of the Mental Health Ordinance (see Note 9D).

C9.7. If it appears to the custody officer, or he or she is told, that a person brought to a place of lawful custody under arrest may be suffering from an infectious disease or condition, the custody officer must take reasonable steps to safeguard the health of the detainee and others at the place of lawful custody. In deciding what action to take, advice must be sought from an appropriate health care professional (see Note C9E). The custody officer may isolate the person and his or her property until clinical directions have been obtained.

C9.8. If a detainee requests a clinical examination, an appropriate health care professional must be called as soon as practicable to assess the detainee's clinical needs. If a safe and appropriate care plan cannot be provided, the police surgeon's advice must be sought. The detainee may also be examined by a medical practitioner of his or her choice at his or her expense.

C9.9. If a detainee is required to take or apply any medication in compliance with clinical directions prescribed before his or her detention, the custody officer must consult the appropriate health care professional before the use of the medication. Subject to the restrictions in paragraph C9.10, the custody officer is responsible for the safekeeping of any medication and for making sure the detainee is given the opportunity to take or apply prescribed or approved medication. Any such consultation and its outcome must be noted in the custody record.

C9.10. No police officer may administer or supervise the self-administration of medically prescribed controlled drugs of the types and forms listed as Class A drugs or Class B drugs in the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance. A detainee may only self-administer such drugs under the personal supervision of the health care professional authorising their use. Class C drugs listed in that Ordinance may be distributed by the custody officer for self-administration if the officer has consulted the health care professional authorising their use (which may be done by telephone) and both parties are satisfied self-administration will not expose the detainee, police officers or anyone else to the risk of harm or injury.

C9.11. When appropriate health care professionals administer drugs or other medications, or supervise their self-administration, or consult with the custody officer about allowing self-administration of drugs by detainees, it must be within current medicines legislation and the scope of practice as determined by the relevant professional body.

C9.12. If a detainee has in his or her possession, or claims to need, medication relating to a heart condition, diabetes, epilepsy or a condition of comparable potential seriousness then, even though paragraph C9.5 may not apply, the advice of the appropriate health care professional must be obtained.

C9.13. Whenever the appropriate health care professional is called in accordance with this section to examine or treat a detainee, the custody officer must ask for his or her opinion about—

- (a) any risks or problems which police need to take into account when making decisions about the detainee's continued detention;
- (b) when to carry out an interview if applicable; and
- (c) the need for safeguards.

C9.14. When clinical directions are given by the appropriate health care professional, either orally or in writing, and the custody officer has any doubts or is in any way uncertain about any aspect of the directions, the officer must ask for clarification. It is particularly important that directions concerning the frequency of visits are clear, precise and capable of being implemented (see Note 9F).

C. Documentation

C9.15. A record must be made in the custody record of —

- (a) the arrangements made for an examination by an appropriate health care professional under paragraph C9.2 and of any complaint reported under that paragraph, together with any relevant remarks by the custody officer;
- (b) any arrangements made in accordance with paragraph C9.5;
- (c) any request for a clinical examination under paragraph C9.8 and any arrangements made in response;
- (d) the injury, ailment, condition or other reason which made it necessary to make the arrangements in (a) to (c) (see Note 9G);
- (e) any clinical directions and advice, including any further clarifications, given to the police by a health care professional concerning the care and treatment of the detainee in connection with any of the arrangements made in (a) to (c) (see Note 9F);
- (f) if applicable, the responses received when attempting to rouse a person using the procedure in Annex H (see Note 9H).

C9.16. If a health care professional does not record his or her clinical findings in the custody record, the record must show where they are recorded (see Note 9G). However, information which is necessary to custody officers to ensure the effective ongoing care and wellbeing of the detainee must be recorded openly in the custody record (see paragraph C3.8 and Annex G, paragraph 7).

C9.17. Subject to the requirements of section C4, the custody record must include —

(a) a record of all medication a detainee has in his or her possession on arrival at the place of lawful custody;

(b) a note of any such medication he or she claims to need but do not have with him or her.

Notes for Guidance

9A. A 'health care professional' means a person who is registered in the register of medical practitioners kept under the Medical Practitioners, Midwives and Dentists Ordinance, or a person who is registered in the register kept by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting by virtue of qualifications in nursing.

Whether a health care professional is 'appropriate' depends on the circumstances of the duties he or she carries out at the time.

9B. Whenever possible, youths and mentally vulnerable detainees should be visited more frequently.

9C. A detainee who appears drunk or behaves abnormally may be suffering from illness or the effects of drugs or may have sustained injury, particularly a head injury which is not apparent. A detainee needing or dependent on certain drugs, including alcohol, may experience harmful effects within a short time of being deprived of a supply. In these circumstances, when there is any doubt, police officers should always act urgently to call an appropriate health care professional or an ambulance. Paragraph C9.5 does not apply to minor ailments or injuries which do not need attention. However, all such ailments or injuries must be recorded in the custody record and any doubt must be resolved in favour of calling the appropriate health care professional.

9CA. For healthcare needs of a person who has swallowed drugs, the custody officer, subject to any clinical directions, should consider the necessity for rousing the person every half hour. This does not negate the need for regular visiting of the suspect in the cell.

9D. Arrangements should be made for persons who need to be detained for assessment under Part 3 of the Mental Health Ordinance to be taken to a hospital as soon as practicable.

9E. It is important to respect a detainee's right to privacy, and information about a detainee's health must be kept confidential and only disclosed with his or her consent or in accordance with clinical advice when it is necessary to protect the detainee's health or that of others who come into contact with him or her.

9F. The custody officer should always seek to clarify directions that the detainee requires constant observation or supervision and should ask the appropriate health care professional to explain precisely what action needs to be taken to implement such directions.

9G. Paragraphs C9.15 and C9.16 do not require any information about the cause of any injury, ailment or condition to be recorded on the custody record if the information appears capable of providing evidence of an offence.

9H. The purpose of recording a person's responses when attempting to rouse him or her using the procedure in Annex H is to enable any change in the individual's consciousness level to be noted and clinical treatment arranged if appropriate.

C10. Cautions

A. When a caution must be given

C10.1 A person whom there are grounds to suspect of an offence (see Note 10A) must be cautioned before any questions about an offence, or further questions if the answers provide the grounds for suspicion, are put to the person, if either the suspect's answers or silence (i.e. failure or refusal to answer or answer satisfactorily) may be given in evidence to a court in a prosecution. A person need not be cautioned if questions are for other necessary purposes, e.g.—

- (a) solely to establish his or her identity or ownership of any vehicle;
- (b) to obtain information in accordance with any relevant statutory requirement (see paragraph C10.9);
- (c) in furtherance of the proper and effective conduct of a search, e.g. to determine the need to search in the exercise of powers of stop and search or to seek cooperation while carrying out a search;
- (d) to seek verification of a written record as in paragraph C11.13.

C10.2. Whenever a person not under arrest is initially cautioned, or reminded that he or she is under caution, the person must at the same time be told that he or she is not under arrest and is free to leave if he or she wants to (see Note 10C).

C10.3. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be informed at the time, or as soon as practicable, that he or she is under arrest and the grounds for his or her arrest (see paragraph C3.4 and Note 10B of this Code, and paragraphs G2.2 and 4.3 of Code G).

C10.4. As in section G3 of Code G, a person who is arrested, or further arrested, must also be cautioned unless —

- (a) it is impracticable to caution by reason of his or her condition or behaviour at the time;
- (b) he or she has already been cautioned immediately prior to arrest as in paragraph C10.1.

B. Terms of the cautions

C10.5. The caution which must be given on —

(a) arrest;

(b) all other occasions before a person is charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted (see section C16), should, unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies (see Annex C) be in the following terms —

“You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention when questioned something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence.” (See Note 10G)

C10.6. Annex C, paragraph 2 sets out the alternative terms of the caution to be used when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies.

C10.7. Minor deviations from the words of any caution given in accordance with this Code do not constitute a breach of this Code, provided the sense of the relevant caution is preserved (see Note 10D).

C10.8. After any break in questioning under caution, the person being questioned must be made aware that he or she remains under caution. If there is any doubt, the relevant caution should be given again in full when the interview resumes (see Note 10E).

C10.9. When, despite being cautioned, a person fails to co-operate or to answer particular questions which may affect his or her immediate treatment, the person should be informed of any relevant consequences and that those consequences are not affected by the caution. Examples are when a person’s refusal to provide —

(a) his or her name and address when charged may make him or her liable to detention;

(b) particulars and information in accordance with a statutory requirement, e.g. under the Road Traffic Ordinance, may amount to an offence or may make the person liable to a further arrest.

C. Special warnings under sections 367 and 368

C10.10. If a suspect interviewed at a place of lawful custody after arrest fails or refuses to answer certain questions, or to answer satisfactorily, after due warning (see Note 10F), a court may draw such inferences as appear proper under sections 367 and 368 of the Ordinance (failure or refusal to account for objects or presence). Such inferences may only be drawn when —

(a) the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence (see Annex C) does not apply; and

(b) the suspect is arrested by a police officer and fails or refuses to account for any objects, marks or substances, or marks on such objects found —

- (i) on his or her person;
- (ii) in or on his or her clothing or footwear;
- (iii) otherwise in his or her possession; or
- (iv) in the place he or she was arrested;

(c) the arrested suspect was found by a police officer at a place at or about the time the offence for which that officer has arrested him or her is alleged to have been committed, and the suspect fails or refuses to account for his or her presence there.

C10.10A. If the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies, the suspect may still be asked to account for any of the matters in paragraph C10.10(b) or (c) but the special warning described in paragraph C10.11 will not apply and must not be given.

C10.11. For an inference to be drawn when a suspect fails or refuses to answer a question about one of these matters or to answer it satisfactorily, the suspect must first be told in ordinary language —

- (a) what offence is being investigated;
- (b) what fact he or she is being asked to account for;
- (c) that this fact may be due to him or her taking part in the commission of the offence;
- (d) that a court may draw a proper inference if he or she fails or refuses to account for this fact;
- (e) that a record is being made of the interview and it may be given in evidence if he or she is brought to trial.

D. Youths and persons who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable

C10.11A. The information required by paragraph C10.11 must not be given to a suspect who is a youth or who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable unless the appropriate adult is present.

C10.12. If a youth or a person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable is cautioned in the absence of the appropriate adult, the caution must be repeated in the appropriate adult's presence.

E. Documentation

C10.13. A record must be made when a caution is given under this section, either in the interviewer's pocket book or in the interview record.

Notes for Guidance

10A. There must be some reasonable, objective grounds for the suspicion, based on facts or information relevant to the likelihood that the offence has been committed and that the person to be questioned committed it.

10B. An arrested person must be given sufficient information to enable the person to understand that he or she has been deprived of his or her liberty and the reason why he or she has been arrested. For example, when a person is arrested on suspicion of committing an offence, he or she must be informed of the nature of the suspected offence and when and where it was committed. The suspect must also be informed of the reason or reasons why the arrest is considered necessary. Vague or technical language should be avoided.

10C. The restriction on drawing inferences from silence (see Annex C, paragraph 1) does not apply to a person who has not been detained and who therefore cannot be prevented from seeking legal advice if he or she wants to (see paragraph C3.21).

10D. If it appears that a person does not understand the caution, the person giving it should explain it in his or her own words.

10E. It may be necessary to show to the court that nothing occurred during an interview break or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence. After a break in an interview or at the beginning of a subsequent interview, the interviewing officer should summarise the reason for the break and confirm this with the suspect.

10F. Sections 367 and 368 of the Ordinance apply only to suspects who have been arrested by a police officer and are given the relevant warning by the police officer who made the arrest or who is investigating the offence. They do not apply to any interviews with suspects who have not been arrested.

10G. Nothing in this Code requires a caution to be given or repeated when informing a person not under arrest that he or she may be prosecuted for an offence. However, a court will not be able to draw any inferences under section 367 or 368 of the Ordinance if the person was not cautioned.

C11. Interviews - general

A. Action

C11.1A. An interview is the questioning of a person regarding his or her involvement or suspected involvement in a criminal offence or offences which, under paragraph C10.1, must be carried out under caution. Whenever a person is interviewed, the person and his or her legal practitioner must be given sufficient information to enable the person to understand the nature of any such offence, and why the person is suspected of committing it (see paragraphs C3.4(a) and C10.3), in order to allow for the effective exercise of the rights of the defence. However, while the information must always be sufficient for the person to understand the nature of any offence, this does not require the disclosure of details at a time which might prejudice the criminal investigation. The decision about what needs to be disclosed for the purpose of this requirement therefore rests with the investigating officer who has sufficient knowledge of the case to make that decision. The officer who discloses the information must make a record of the information disclosed and when it was disclosed. This record may be made in the interview record, in the officer's pocket book or in some other form provided for the purpose.

Procedures under the Road Traffic Ordinance do not constitute interviewing for the purposes of this Code.

C11.1. Following a decision to arrest a suspect, he or she must not be interviewed about the relevant offence except at a place of lawful custody, unless the consequent delay would be likely to —

- lead to interference with, or physical injury to, other people;
- lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an imprisonable offence;
- lead to alerting other people suspected of having committed such an offence but not yet arrested for it;
- hinder the recovery of property obtained as a result of such an offence.

Interviewing in any of these circumstances must cease once the relevant risk has been averted or the necessary questions have been put in order to attempt to avert that risk.

C11.2. Immediately prior to the commencement or re-commencement of any interview at the place of lawful custody or other authorised place of detention, the interviewer must remind the suspect that he or she is entitled to obtain legal advice and that the interview can be delayed for legal advice to be obtained, unless one of the exceptions in paragraph C6.6 applies.

The interviewer must ensure that all reminders are recorded in the interview record.

C11.3. [Omitted]

C11.4. At the beginning of an interview the interviewer, after cautioning the suspect (see section C10), must put to him or her any significant statement or silence which occurred in the presence and hearing of a police officer before the start of the interview and which have not been put to the suspect in the course of a previous interview (see Note 11A). The interviewer must ask the suspect whether he or she confirms or denies that earlier statement or silence and if he or she wants to add anything.

C11.4A. A significant statement is one which appears capable of being used in evidence against the suspect, in particular a direct admission of guilt. A significant silence is a failure or refusal to answer a question or answer satisfactorily when under caution, which might, allowing for the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence (see Annex C) give rise to an inference under section 367 or 368 of the Ordinance (failure or refusal to account for objects or presence).

C11.5. An interviewer must not try to obtain answers or elicit a statement by the use of oppression. Except as in paragraph C10.9, an interviewer must not indicate, except to answer a direct question, what action will be taken by the police if the person being questioned answers questions, makes a statement or refuses to do either. If the person asks directly what action will be taken if he or she answers questions, makes a statement or refuses to do either, the interviewer may inform the person what action the police propose to take, provided that action is itself proper and warranted.

C11.6. The interview or further interview of a person about an offence with which the person has not been charged, or for which he or she has not been informed that he or she may be prosecuted, must cease when —

(a) the officer in charge of the investigation is satisfied all the questions he or she considers relevant to obtaining accurate and reliable information about the offence have been put to the suspect (which includes allowing the suspect an opportunity to give an innocent explanation and asking questions to test if the explanation is accurate and reliable, e.g. to clear up ambiguities or clarify what the suspect said);

(b) the officer in charge of the investigation has taken account of any other available evidence; and

(c) the officer in charge of the investigation, or in the case of a detained suspect, the custody officer (see paragraph C16.1), is informed by the Attorney General, pursuant to section 62 of the Ordinance, that there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction for that offence (see Notes 11AA and 11B).

B. Interview records

C11.7. —

(a) An accurate record must be made of each interview, whether or not the interview takes place at a place of lawful custody.

(b) The record must state the place of interview, the time it begins and ends, any interview breaks and, subject to paragraph C2.6A, the names of all those present. The record must be made on the forms provided for this purpose or in the interviewer's pocket book or in accordance with the Codes of Practice E or F.

(c) Any written record must be made and completed during the interview, unless this would not be practicable or would interfere with the conduct of the interview, and must constitute either a verbatim record of what has been said or, failing this, an account of the interview which adequately and accurately summarises it.

C11.8. If a written record is not made during the interview it must be made as soon as practicable after its completion.

C11.9. Written interview records must be timed and signed by the maker.

C11.10. If a written record is not completed during the interview, the reason must be recorded in the interview record.

C11.11. Unless it is impracticable, the person interviewed must be given the opportunity to read the interview record and to sign it as correct, or to indicate how he or she considers it inaccurate. If the person interviewed cannot read or refuses to read the record or sign it, the senior interviewer present must read it to the person and ask whether he or she would like to sign it as correct or make his or her mark or to indicate how he or she considers it inaccurate. The interviewer must certify on the interview record itself what has occurred (see Note 11E).

C11.12. If the appropriate adult or the person's legal practitioner is present during the interview, that person should also be given an opportunity to read and sign the interview record or any written statement taken down during the interview.

C11.13. A written record must be made of any comments made by a suspect, including unsolicited comments, which are outside the context of an interview but which might be relevant to the offence. Any such record must be timed and signed by the maker. When practicable, the suspect must be given the opportunity to read the record and to sign it as correct or to indicate how he or she considers it inaccurate (see Note 11E).

C11.14. Any refusal by a person to sign an interview record when asked in accordance with this Code must itself be recorded.

C. Youths and mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable people

C11.15. A youth or person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable must not be interviewed regarding his or her involvement or suspected involvement in a criminal offence or offences, or asked to provide or sign a written statement under caution or record of interview, in the absence of the appropriate adult unless paragraphs C11.1 and C11.18 to C11.20 apply (see Note 11C).

C11.16. A youth may only be interviewed at his or her place of education in exceptional circumstances and only when the principal or his or her nominee agrees. Every effort should be made to notify the parent or other person responsible for the youth's welfare and the appropriate adult, if this is a different person, that the police want to interview the youth. Reasonable time should be allowed to enable the appropriate adult to be present at the interview. If awaiting the appropriate adult would cause unreasonable delay, and unless the youth is suspected of an offence against the educational establishment, the principal or his or her nominee can act as the appropriate adult for the purposes of the interview.

C11.17. If an appropriate adult is present at an interview, he or she must be informed that —

- (a) he or she is not expected to act simply as an observer; and
- (b) the purpose of his or her presence is to —
 - (i) advise the person being interviewed;

- (ii) observe whether the interview is being conducted properly and fairly;
- (iii) facilitate communication with the person being interviewed.

D. Vulnerable suspects – urgent interviews at a place of lawful custody

C11.18. The following persons may not be interviewed unless an officer of the rank of inspector or above considers delay will lead to the consequences in paragraph C11.1(a) to (c), and is satisfied the interview would not significantly harm the person’s physical or mental state (see Annex G) —

- (a) a youth or person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable if at the time of the interview the appropriate adult is not present;
- (b) anyone other than in (a) who at the time of the interview appears unable to —
 - (i) appreciate the significance of questions and his or her answers; or
 - (ii) understand what is happening because of the effects of drink, drugs or any illness, ailment or condition;
- (c) a person who has difficulty understanding English or has a hearing disability, if at the time of the interview an interpreter is not present.

C11.19. These interviews may not continue once sufficient information has been obtained to avert the consequences in paragraph C11.1(a) to (c).

C11.20. A record must be made of the grounds for any decision to interview a person under paragraph C11.18.

Notes for Guidance

11A. Paragraph C11.4 does not prevent the interviewer from putting significant statements and silences to a suspect again at a later stage or a further interview.

11AA. As required by section 62 of the Ordinance, the officer in charge of the investigation must as soon as practicable send to the Attorney General information in writing about the case to enable the Attorney General to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to charge the person with an offence.

11B. The Code of Practice on the Recording, Retention and Disclosure of Material paragraph 3.5 states “In conducting an investigation, the investigator should pursue all reasonable lines of inquiry, whether these point towards or away from the suspect. What is reasonable in each case will depend on the particular circumstances.” Interviewers should keep this in mind when deciding what questions to ask in an interview.

11C. Although youths or people who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable are often capable of providing reliable evidence, they may, without knowing they are doing so, or wanting to do so, be particularly prone in certain circumstances to provide information that may be unreliable, misleading or self-incriminating. Special care should always be taken when questioning such a person, and the appropriate adult should be involved if there is any doubt about a person's age, mental state or capacity. Because of the risk of unreliable evidence it is also important to obtain corroboration of any facts admitted whenever possible.

11D. Youths should not be arrested at their place of education unless this is unavoidable. When a youth is arrested at his or her place of education, the principal or his or her nominee must be informed.

11E. Significant statements described in paragraph C11.4 will always be relevant to the offence and must be recorded. When a suspect agrees to read records of interviews and other comments and sign them as correct, he or she should be asked to endorse the record with, e.g. "I agree that this is a correct record of what was said" and add his or her signature. If the suspect does not agree with the record, the interviewer should record the details of any disagreement and ask the suspect to read these details and sign them to the effect that they accurately reflect his or her disagreement. Any refusal to sign should be recorded.

C12. Interviews in a place of lawful custody

A. Action

C12.1. If a police officer wants to interview or conduct enquiries which require the presence of a detainee, the custody officer is responsible for deciding whether to deliver the detainee into the officer's custody. An investigating officer who is given custody of a detainee takes over responsibility for the detainee's care and safe custody for the purposes of this Code until the officer returns the detainee to the custody officer when the officer must report the manner in which he or she complied with the Code while having custody of the detainee.

C12.2. Except as below, in any period of 24 hours a detainee must be allowed a continuous period of at least 8 hours for rest, free from questioning, travel or any interruption in connection with the investigation concerned. This period should normally be at night or other appropriate time which takes account of when the detainee last slept or rested. If a detainee is arrested at a place of lawful custody after going there voluntarily, the period of 24 hours runs from the time of his or her arrest and not the time of arrival at the place of lawful custody. The period may not be interrupted or delayed, except —

(a) when there are reasonable grounds for believing not delaying or interrupting the period would —

(i) involve a risk of harm to people or serious loss of, or damage to, property;

(ii) delay unnecessarily the person's release from custody;

(iii) otherwise prejudice the outcome of the investigation;

(b) at the request of the detainee or his or her appropriate adult or legal practitioner;

(c) when a delay or interruption is necessary in order to —

(i) comply with the legal obligations and duties arising under section C15;

(ii) to take action required under section C9 of this Code or in accordance with medical advice.

If the period is interrupted in accordance with (a), a fresh period must be allowed. Interruptions under (b) and (c) do not require a fresh period to be allowed.

C12.3. Before a detainee is interviewed the custody officer, in consultation with the officer in charge of the investigation and appropriate health care professionals as necessary, must assess whether the detainee is fit enough to be interviewed. This means determining and considering the risks to the detainee's physical and mental state if the interview took place, and determining what safeguards are needed to allow the interview to take place (see Annex G). The custody officer must not allow a detainee to be interviewed if the custody officer considers it would cause significant harm to the detainee's physical or mental state. Vulnerable suspects listed at paragraph C11.18 must be treated as always being at some risk during an interview and these persons may not be interviewed except in accordance with paragraphs C11.18 to C11.20. (See also Note 12C)

C12.4. As far as practicable interviews must take place in interview rooms which are adequately heated, lit and ventilated.

C12.5. A suspect whose detention without charge has been authorised under the Ordinance, because the detention is necessary for an interview to obtain evidence of the offence for which he or she has been arrested, may choose not to answer questions, but police do not require the suspect's consent or agreement to interview him or her for this purpose. If a suspect takes steps to prevent himself or herself being questioned or further questioned, e.g. by refusing to leave his or her cell to go to a suitable interview room or by trying to leave the interview room, the suspect must be advised that his or her consent or agreement to interview is not required.

The suspect must be cautioned as in section C10, and informed that if he or she fails or refuses to co-operate, the interview may take place in the cell and that his or her failure or refusal to cooperate may be given in evidence. The suspect must then be invited to co-operate and go into the interview room (see Note 12D).

C12.6. People being questioned or making statements must not be required to stand.

C12.7. Before the interview commences, each interviewer must, subject to paragraph C2.6A, identify himself or herself and any other persons present to the interviewee.

C12.8. Breaks from interviewing should be made at recognised meal times or at other times that take account of when an interviewee last had a meal. Short refreshment breaks must be provided at approximately 2-hour intervals, but the interviewer may delay a break if there are reasonable grounds for believing it would —

- (a) involve a —
 - (i) risk of harm to people;
 - (ii) serious loss of, or damage to, property;
- (b) unnecessarily delay the detainee's release;
- (c) otherwise prejudice the outcome of the investigation.

(See Note 12B)

C12.9. If during the interview a complaint is made by or on behalf of the interviewee concerning the provisions of any of the Codes, or it comes to the interviewer's notice that the interviewee may have been treated improperly, the interviewer should —

- (a) record the matter in the interview record;
- (b) inform the custody officer, who must then deal with it as in section C9 of this Code.

B. Documentation

C12.10. A record must be made of —

- (a) the time for which a detainee is not in the custody of the custody officer, and why;
- (b) the reason for any refusal to deliver the detainee out of that custody.

C12.11. A record must be made of —

- (a) the reasons why it was not practicable to use an interview room; and
- (b) any action taken as in paragraph C12.5.

The record must be made on the custody record or in the interview record for action taken while an interview record is being kept, with a brief reference to this effect in the custody record.

C12.12. Any decision to delay a break in an interview must be recorded, with reasons, in the interview record.

C12.13. All written statements made at a place of lawful custody under caution must be written on forms provided for the purpose.

C12.14. All written statements made under caution must be taken in accordance with Annex D. Before a person makes a written statement under caution at the place of lawful custody he or she must be reminded about the right to legal advice (see Note 12A).

Notes for Guidance

12A. It is not normally necessary to ask for a written statement if the interview was recorded in writing and the record signed in accordance with paragraph C11.11, or audibly or visually recorded in accordance with Code E or F. Statements under caution should normally be taken in these circumstances only at the person's express request. A person may however be asked if he or she wants to make such a statement.

12B. Meal breaks should normally last at least 45 minutes and shorter breaks after 2 hours should last at least 15 minutes. If the interviewer delays a break in accordance with paragraph C12.8 and prolongs the interview, a longer break should be provided. If there is a short interview, and another short interview is contemplated, the length of the break may be reduced if there are reasonable grounds to believe this is necessary to avoid any of the consequences in paragraph C12.8(a) to (c).

12C. A detainee should not be supplied with intoxicating liquor except on medical directions, and a note should be kept in the custody record of any such liquor supplied.

12D. The purpose of any interview is to obtain from the detainee his or her explanation of the facts, and not necessarily to obtain an admission.

C13. Interpreters

A. General

C13.1. The Chief Police Officer must ensure that appropriate arrangements are in place for provision of suitably qualified interpreters, if necessary by electronic means, for people who —

- (a) are deaf;
- (b) do not understand English.

B. Foreign languages

C13.2. Unless paragraphs C11.1 and C11.18 to C11.20 apply, a person must not be interviewed in the absence of a person capable of interpreting if —

- (a) the person has difficulty understanding English;
- (b) the interviewer cannot speak the person's own language; and
- (c) the person wants to have an interpreter present.

C13.3. The interviewer must make sure the interpreter makes a note of the interview at the time in the person's language for use in the event of the interpreter being called to give evidence, and certifies its accuracy. The interviewer should allow sufficient time for the interpreter to note each question and answer after each is put, given and interpreted. The person should be allowed to read the record or have it read to him or her and sign it as correct or indicate the respects in which he or she considers it inaccurate. If the interview is audibly recorded or visually recorded, the arrangements in Code E or F apply.

C13.4. In the case of a person making a statement to a police officer other than in English —

- (a) the interpreter must record the statement in the language it is made;
- (b) the person must be invited to sign it;
- (c) an English translation must be made in due course.

C. Deaf people and people with speech difficulties

C13.5. If a person appears to be deaf or there is doubt about his or her hearing or speaking ability, the person must not be interviewed in the absence of an interpreter unless he or she agrees in writing to being interviewed without one or paragraphs C11.1 and C11.18 to C11.20 apply.

C13.6. An interpreter should also be called if a youth is interviewed and the parent or guardian present as the appropriate adult appears to be deaf or there is doubt about his or her hearing or speaking ability, unless the parent or guardian agrees in writing to the interview proceeding without an interpreter or paragraphs C11.1 and C11.18 to C11.20 apply.

C13.7. The interviewer must make sure the interpreter is allowed to read the interview record and to certify its accuracy in the event of the interpreter being called to give evidence. If the interview is audibly recorded or visually recorded, the arrangements in Code E or F apply.

D. Additional rules for detained persons

C13.8. All reasonable attempts should be made to make the detainee understand that an interpreter will be provided at public expense, if necessary by electronic means.

C13.9. If paragraph C6.1 applies and the detainee cannot communicate with the legal practitioner because of language, hearing or speech difficulties, an interpreter must be called. The interpreter cannot be a police officer when interpretation is needed for the purposes of obtaining legal advice. In all other cases a police officer may interpret but only if the detainee and the appropriate adult, if applicable, agree in writing or if the interview is audibly recorded or visually recorded as in Code E or F.

C13.10. When the custody officer cannot establish effective communication with a person charged with an offence who appears deaf or there is doubt about his or her ability to hear, speak or understand English, arrangements must be made as soon as practicable for an interpreter to explain the offence and any other information given by the custody officer.

E. Documentation

C13.11. Action taken to call an interpreter under this section and any agreement to be interviewed in the absence of an interpreter must be recorded.

Note for Guidance

13A. [Omitted]

C14. Questioning – special restrictions

C14.1. [Omitted]

C14.2. A person who is in police detention at a hospital may not be questioned without the agreement of a responsible doctor (see Note 14A)

Note for Guidance

14A. If questioning takes place at a hospital under paragraph C14.2, or on the way to or from a hospital, the period of questioning counts towards the total period of detention permitted.

C15. Reviews and extensions of detention

A. Persons detained under the Ordinance

C15.0 The requirement in paragraph C3.4(b) that documents and materials essential to challenging the lawfulness the detainee's arrest and detention must be made available to the detainee or his or her legal practitioner, applies for the purposes of this section.

C15.1. The reviewing officer is responsible under section 67 of the Ordinance for periodically determining if a person's detention, before or after charge, continues to be necessary. This requirement continues throughout the detention period and except as in paragraph C15.10, the reviewing officer must be present at the place of lawful custody holding the detainee (see Notes 15A and 15B).

C15.2. Under section 70 of the Ordinance, an officer of inspector rank or above may give authority at any time after the second review to extend the maximum period for which the person may be detained without charge by up to 12 hours. Further detention without charge may be authorised only by a court in accordance with sections 71 and 72 of the Ordinance (see Notes 15C, 15D and 15E).

C15.2A. Section 70(1) of the Ordinance extends the maximum period of detention for imprisonable offences from 24 hours to 36 hours. Detaining a youth or mentally vulnerable person for longer than 24 hours will be dependent on the circumstances of the case and with regard to the person's —

- (a) special vulnerability;
- (b) the legal obligation to provide an opportunity for representations to be made prior to a decision about extending detention;
- (c) the need to consult and consider the views of any appropriate adult; and
- (d) any alternatives to police custody.

C15.3. Before deciding whether to authorise continued detention the officer responsible under paragraphs C15.1 or C15.2 must give an opportunity to make representations about the detention to —

- (a) the detainee, unless in the case of a review as in paragraph C15.1, the detainee is asleep;
- (b) the detainee's legal practitioner if available at the time; and
- (c) the appropriate adult if available at the time.

C15.3A. Other people having an interest in the detainee's welfare may also make representations at the authorising officer's discretion.

C15.3B. Subject to paragraph C15.10, the representations may be made orally in person or by electronic means or in writing. The authorising officer may, however, refuse to hear oral representations from the detainee if the officer considers the detainee unfit to make representations because of his or her condition or behaviour (see Note 15C).

C15.3C. The decision on whether the review takes place in person or by electronic means is a matter for the reviewing officer. In determining the form the review may take, the reviewing officer must always take full account of the needs of the person in custody. The benefits of carrying out a review in person should always be considered, based on the individual circumstances of each case with specific additional consideration if the person is —

- (a) a youth (and the age of the youth);
- (b) mentally vulnerable;
- (c) has been subject to medical attention for other than routine minor ailments; or
- (d) there are presentational or community issues around the person's detention.

C15.4. Before conducting a review or determining whether to extend the maximum period of detention without charge, the officer responsible must make sure the detainee is reminded that he or she is entitled to obtain legal advice (see paragraph C6.5), unless in the case of a review the person is asleep.

C15.5. If, after considering any representations, the officer decides to keep the detainee in detention or extend the maximum period he or she might be detained without charge, any comment made by the detainee must be recorded. If applicable, the officer responsible under paragraph C15.1 or C15.2 must be informed of the comment as soon as practicable (see also paragraphs C11.4 and C11.13).

C15.6. An officer must not put specific questions to the detainee —

- (a) regarding his or her involvement in any offence; or

- (b) in respect of any comments he or she may make —
 - (i) when given the opportunity to make representations; or
 - (ii) in response to a decision to keep him or her in detention or extend the maximum period of detention.

Such an exchange could constitute an interview as in paragraph C11.1A and would be subject to the associated safeguards in section C11 and, in respect of a person who has been charged, paragraph C16.5 (see also paragraph C11.13).

C15.7. A detainee who is asleep at a review (see paragraph C15.1) and whose continued detention is authorised must be informed about the decision and reason as soon as practicable after waking.

C15.7A. When an application is made to a court under section 71 of the Ordinance for a warrant of further detention to extend detention without charge of a person arrested for an imprisonable offence, or under section 72 to extend or further extend that warrant, the detainee —

- (a) must be brought to court for the hearing of the application;
- (b) is entitled to be legally represented if he or she wishes, in which case, the legal practitioner must be given a copy of the information which supports the application and which states —
 - (i) the nature of the offence for which the person to whom the application relates has been arrested;
 - (ii) the general nature of the evidence on which the person was arrested;
 - (iii) what inquiries about the offence have been made and what further inquiries are proposed;
 - (iv) the reasons for believing continued detention is necessary for the purposes of the further inquiries.

Note: A warrant of further detention can only be issued or extended if the court has reasonable grounds for believing that the person's further detention is necessary for the purpose of obtaining evidence of an imprisonable offence for which the person has been arrested and that the investigation is being conducted diligently and expeditiously.

C15.8. [Omitted]

B. Telephone review of detention

C15.9. Section 68 of the Ordinance provides that the officer responsible under section 67 for reviewing the detention of a person who has not been charged does not need to attend the place of lawful custody holding the detainee and may carry out the review by electronic means.

C15.9A. and B. [Omitted]

C15.9C. The reviewing officer can decide at any stage that an electronic review should be terminated and that the review will be conducted in person. The reasons for doing so should be noted in the custody record (see Note 15F).

C15.10. When an electronic review is carried out, an officer at the place of lawful custody holding the detainee must be required by the reviewing officer to fulfil that officer's obligations under section 67 of the Ordinance or this Code by —

- (a) making any record connected with the review in the detainee's custody record;
- (b) if applicable, making a record in (a) in the presence of the detainee; and
- (c) giving the detainee information about the review.

C15.11. When an electronic review is carried out, the requirement in paragraph C15.3 will be satisfied —

- (a) if facilities exist for the immediate transmission of written representations to the reviewing officer, e.g. fax or e-mail message, by giving the detainee an opportunity to make representations —
 - (i) orally by telephone; or
 - (ii) in writing using those facilities; and
- (b) in all other cases, by giving the detainee an opportunity to make his or her representations orally by telephone.

C. Documentation

C15.12. The custody officer must make sure that all reminders given under paragraph C15.4 are noted in the custody record.

C15.13. The grounds for, and extent of, any delay in conducting a review must be recorded.

C15.14. When a telephone review is carried out, a record must be made of —

- (a) the reason the reviewing officer did not attend the place of lawful custody holding the detainee;
- (b) where the reviewing officer was;
- (c) how representations, oral or written, were made to the reviewing officer (see paragraph C15.11).

C15.15. Any written representations must be retained.

C15.16. A record must be made as soon as practicable of —

- (a) the outcome of each review of detention before or after charge, and if paragraph C15.7 applies, when the person was informed and by whom;
- (b) the outcome of any determination by an officer under section 70 whether to extend the maximum period of detention without charge beyond 24 hours from the relevant time; if an authorisation is given, the record must state the number of hours and minutes by which the detention period is extended or further extended;
- (c) the outcome of each application under section 71 for a warrant of further detention, or under section 72 for an extension or further extension of that warrant; if a warrant for further detention is granted under section 71 or extended or further extended under section 72, the record must state the detention period authorised by the warrant and the date and time when it was granted or (as the case may be) the period by which the warrant is extended or further extended.

Notes for Guidance

15A. For the purposes of Part 5, ‘reviewing officer’ for a place of lawful custody means an officer of the rank of sergeant or above who is on call for that place when decisions about detention fall to be reviewed under that Part.

15B. The detention of persons in police custody not subject to the statutory review requirement in paragraph C15.1 should still be reviewed periodically as a matter of good practice. Such reviews must be carried out by a reviewing officer. The purpose of such reviews is to check the particular power under which a detainee is held continues to apply, any associated conditions are complied with and to make sure appropriate action is taken to deal with any changes. This includes the detainee’s prompt release when the power no longer applies, or his or her transfer if the power requires the detainee to be taken elsewhere as soon as the necessary arrangements are made. Examples include a person —

- (a) arrested on warrant because he or she failed to answer bail to appear at court;
- (b) arrested under section 158 of the Ordinance for breaching a condition of bail granted after charge;
- (c) detained to prevent him or her causing a breach of the peace.

The detention of persons remanded into police detention by order of a court under section 140 of the Ordinance (remand) is subject to a statutory requirement to review that detention. This is to make sure the detainee is taken back to court no later than the end of the period authorised by the court or when the need for his or her detention by police ceases, whichever is the sooner.

15C. In the case of a review of detention, but not an extension, the detainee need not be woken for the review. However, if the detainee is likely to be asleep, e.g. during a period of rest allowed as in paragraph C12.2, at the latest time a review or authorisation to extend detention may take place, the officer should, if the legal obligations and time constraints permit, bring forward the procedure to allow the detainee to make representations.

A detainee not asleep during the review must be present when the grounds for his or her continued detention are recorded and must at the same time be informed of those grounds unless the reviewing officer considers the person is incapable of understanding what is said, violent or likely to become violent or in urgent need of medical attention.

15CA. In paragraph C15.3(b) and (c), ‘available’ includes being contactable in time to enable the person to make representations remotely by telephone or other electronic means or in person by attending the place of lawful custody. Reasonable efforts should therefore be made to give the legal practitioner and appropriate adult sufficient notice of the time the decision is expected to be made so that they can make themselves available.

15D. An application to the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court under section 71 or 72 of the Ordinance for a warrant of further detention or its extension should be made if possible during normal court hours. If it appears a special sitting may be needed outside normal court hours, the Clerk of the court should be given notice and informed of this possibility.

15E. [Omitted]

15F. The provisions of section 68 of the Ordinance allowing telephone reviews do not apply to reviews of detention after charge by the custody officer. The officer must allow the use of a telephone to carry out a review of detention before charge. The procedure under section 70 must be done in person.

15G. [Omitted]

15H. Any period during which a person is released on bail does not count towards the maximum period of detention without charge.

C16. Charging detained persons

A. Action

C16.1. When the officer in charge of the investigation is informed by the Attorney General, pursuant to section 62 of the Ordinance, that there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction for the offence (see paragraph C11.6), he or she must without delay, and subject to the following qualification, inform the custody officer who will be responsible for considering whether the detainee should be charged (see Notes 11B and 16A). When a person is detained in respect of more than one offence it is permissible to delay informing the custody officer until the above conditions are satisfied in respect of all the offences (but see paragraph C11.6). If the detainee is a youth, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, any resulting action must be taken in the presence of the appropriate adult if he or she is present at the time (see Notes 16B and 16C).

C16.1A. If guidance issued by the Attorney General under section 62(9) of the Ordinance is in force the custody officer must comply with that Guidance in deciding how to act in dealing with the detainee.

C16.2. When a detainee is charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for an offence (see Note 16B), the detainee must, unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies (see Annex C) be cautioned as follows —

“You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention now something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence.”

Annex C, paragraph 2 sets out the alternative terms of the caution to be used when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies.

C16.3. When a detainee is charged, he or she must be given a written notice showing particulars of the offence and, subject to paragraph C2.6A, the officer’s name and the case reference number. As far as possible the particulars of the charge must be stated in simple terms, but they must also show the precise offence in law with which the detainee is charged. The notice must begin – “You are charged with the offence(s) shown below,” followed by the caution.

If the detainee is a youth, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, the notice should be given to the appropriate adult as well as to the youth or mentally disordered/mentally vulnerable person.

C16.4. If, after a detainee has been charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for an offence, an officer wants to tell him or her about any written statement or interview with another person relating to such an offence, either the detainee must be given a true copy of the written statement or the content of the interview record must be brought to his or her attention. Nothing must be done to invite any reply or comment except to —

- (a) caution the detainee, “You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence.”; and
- (b) remind the detainee about his or her right to legal advice.

C16.4A. If the detainee —

- (a) cannot read - the document may be read to him or her;
- (b) is a youth, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable - the appropriate adult must also be given a copy, or the interview record must be brought to his or her attention.

C16.5. A detainee may not be interviewed about an offence after he or she has been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for it, unless the interview is necessary —

- (a) to prevent or minimise harm or loss to some other person, or the public;
- (b) to clear up an ambiguity in a previous answer or statement;
- (c) in the interests of justice for the detainee to have put to him or her, and have an opportunity to comment on, information concerning the offence which has come to light since he or she was charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted.

Before any such interview, the interviewer must —

(a) caution the detainee, “You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence.”;

(b) remind the detainee about his or her right to legal advice.

(See Note 16B)

C16.6. The provisions of paragraphs C16.2 to C16.5 must be complied with in the appropriate adult’s presence if he or she is already at the place of lawful custody. If he or she is not at that place, these provisions must be complied with again in his or her presence when he or she arrives unless the detainee has been released (see Note 16C).

C16.7. When a youth is charged with an offence and the custody officer authorises his or her continued detention after charge, paragraph C8.8 applies.

B. Documentation

C16.8. A record must be made of anything a detainee says when charged.

C16.9. Any questions put in an interview after charge and answers given relating to the offence must be recorded in full during the interview on forms for that purpose and the record signed by the detainee or, if he or she refuses, by the interviewer and any third parties present. If the questions are audibly recorded or visually recorded the arrangements in Code E or F apply.

C16.10. [Omitted]

Notes for Guidance

16A. The custody officer must take into account guidance on the cautioning of offenders, for persons aged 18 and over.

16AA. [Omitted]

16AB. If a custody officer is informed by the Attorney General, pursuant to section 62 of the Ordinance, that there is sufficient evidence to charge the detainee, the officer may detain the detainee person for no longer than is reasonably necessary to decide how that person is to be dealt with under section 61(7). The period is subject to the maximum period of detention before charge determined by sections 69 to 72.

16B. [Omitted]

16C. There is no power under the Ordinance to detain a person and delay action under paragraphs C16.2 to C16.5 solely to await the arrival of the appropriate adult. Reasonable efforts should therefore be made to give the appropriate adult sufficient notice of the time the decision (charge etc.) is to be implemented so that the adult can be present. If the appropriate adult is not, or cannot be, present at that time, the detainee should be released on bail to return for the decision to be implemented when the adult is present, unless the custody officer determines that the absence of the appropriate adult makes the detainee unsuitable for bail for this purpose.

After charge, bail cannot be refused, or release on bail delayed, simply because an appropriate adult is not available, unless the absence of that adult provides the custody officer with the necessary grounds to authorise detention after charge under section 65 of the Ordinance.

16D. Omitted]

C17. Testing persons for the presence of specified Class A drugs or Class B drugs

A. Action

C17.1. [Omitted]

C17.2. A sample of urine or a non-intimate sample may be taken from a person in police detention for the purpose of ascertaining whether he or she has any specified Class A drug or Class B drug in his or her body only if the person has been brought before the custody officer and —

(a) either the arrest condition (see paragraph C17.3) or the charge condition (see paragraph C17.4) is met;

(b) the age condition (see paragraph C17.5) is met;

(c) the notification condition is met in relation to the arrest condition, the charge condition, or the age condition, as the case may be; and

Notes: Testing on charge and/or arrest must be specifically provided for in the notification for the power to apply. The fact that testing of under-18s is authorised must be expressly provided for in the notification before the power to test such persons applies.

(d) a police officer has requested the person concerned to give the sample (the request condition).

C17.3. The arrest condition is that the person concerned has been arrested for an imprisonable offence but has not been charged with that offence and either —

- (a) the offence is an offence under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance; or
- (b) a police officer of the rank of inspector or above has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by the person of a Class A drug or Class B drug caused or contributed to the offence and has authorised the sample to be taken.

C17.4. The charge condition is that the person —

- (a) has been charged with an imprisonable offence under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance; or
- (b) has been charged with any imprisonable offence and a police officer of the rank of inspector or above, who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by the person of any Class A drug or Class B drug caused or contributed to the offence, has authorised the sample to be taken.

C17.5. The age condition is met if —

- (a) in the case of a detainee who has been arrested but not charged as in paragraph C17.3, he or she is aged 18 or over;
- (b) in the case of a detainee who has been charged as in paragraph C17.4, he or she is aged 14 or over.

C17.6. Before requesting a sample from the person concerned, an officer must —

- (a) inform him or her that the purpose of taking the sample is for drug testing under the Ordinance;
(Note: This is to ascertain whether he or she has a specified Class A drug or Class B drug present in his or her body.)
- (b) warn him or her that if, when so requested, he or she fails without good cause to provide a sample he or she might be liable to prosecution;
- (c) where the taking of the sample has been authorised by an inspector or above in accordance with paragraph C17.3(b) or C17.4(b) above, inform him or her that the authorisation has been given and the grounds for giving it;
- (d) remind him or her of the following rights, which may be exercised at any stage during the period in custody —
 - (i) the right to have someone informed of his or her arrest (see section C5);
 - (ii) the right to consult privately with a legal practitioner (see section C6); and
 - (iii) the right to consult these Codes of Practice (see section C3).

C17.7. In the case of a person who has not attained the age of 18 —

- (a) the making of the request for a sample under paragraph C17.2(d);
- (b) the giving of the warning and the information under paragraph C17.6; and
- (c) the taking of the sample, may not take place except in the presence of an appropriate adult.

C17.8. Authorisation by an officer of the rank of inspector or above within paragraph C17.3(b) or C17.4(b) may be given orally or in writing but, if it is given orally, it must be confirmed in writing as soon as practicable.

C17.9. If a sample is taken from a detainee who has been arrested for an offence but not charged with that offence as in paragraph C17.3, no further sample may be taken during the same continuous period of detention. If during that same period the charge condition is also met in respect of that detainee, the sample which has been taken must be treated as being taken by virtue of the charge condition (see paragraph C17.4) being met.

C17.10. A detainee from whom a sample may be taken may be detained for up to 6 hours from the time of charge if the custody officer reasonably believes the detention is necessary to enable a sample to be taken. Where the arrest condition is met, a detainee whom the custody officer has decided to release on bail without charge may continue to be detained, but not beyond 24 hours from the relevant time (as defined in section 69(2) of the Ordinance), to enable a sample to be taken.

C17.11. A detainee in respect of whom the arrest condition is met, but not the charge condition (see paragraphs C17.3 and C17.4), and whose release would be required before a sample can be taken had he or she not continued to be detained as a result of being arrested for a further offence which does not satisfy the arrest condition, may have a sample taken at any time within 24 hours after the arrest for the offence that satisfies the arrest condition.

B. Documentation

C17.12. The following must be recorded in the custody record —

- (a) if a sample is taken following authorisation by an officer of the rank of inspector or above, the authorisation and the grounds for suspicion;
- (b) the giving of a warning of the consequences of failure to provide a sample;
- (c) the time at which the sample was given; and
- (d) the time of charge or, where the arrest condition is being relied upon, the time of arrest and, where applicable, the fact that a sample taken after arrest but before charge is to be treated as being taken by virtue of the charge condition, where that is met in the same period of continuous detention (see paragraph C17.9).

C. General

C17.13. A sample other than a urine sample may only be taken by a registered dentist (in the case of a dental impression) or a health care professional (in any other case). See section 93 of the Ordinance.

C17.14. Force may not be used to take any sample for the purpose of drug testing.

C17.15. The terms “Class A drug”, “Class B drug” and “misuse” have the same meanings as in the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance.

C17.16. Any sample taken —

(a) may not be used for any purpose other than to ascertain whether the person concerned has a specified Class A drug or Class B drug present in his or her body; and

(b) can be disposed of as clinical waste unless it is to be sent for further analysis in cases where the test result is disputed at the point when the result is known, including on the basis that medication has been taken, or for quality assurance purposes.

D. Assessment of misuse of drugs

C17.17 to C17.22 [Omitted]

Notes for Guidance

17A. When warning a person who is asked to provide a urine or non-intimate sample in accordance with paragraph C17.6(b), the following form of words may be used —

“You do not have to provide a sample, but I must warn you that if you fail or refuse without good cause to do so, you will commit an offence for which you may be imprisoned, or fined, or both.”

17B. A sample has to be sufficient and suitable. A sufficient sample is sufficient in quantity and quality to enable drug-testing analysis to take place. A suitable sample is one which by its nature, is suitable for a particular form of drug analysis.

17C. [Omitted]

17D. The retention of the sample in paragraph C17.16(b) allows for the sample to be sent for confirmatory testing and analysis if the detainee disputes the test.

17E. to 17.F [Omitted]

17G. The definition of ‘appropriate adult’ as used in paragraph C17.7 is given in paragraph C1.7.

ANNEX A – INTIMATE AND STRIP SEARCHES

I. Intimate search

1. An intimate search consists of the physical examination of a person's body orifices other than the mouth. The intrusive nature of such searches means the actual and potential risks associated with intimate searches must never be underestimated.

A. Action

2. Body orifices other than the mouth may be searched only —

(a) if authorised by an officer of the rank of inspector or above who has reasonable grounds for believing that the person may have concealed on himself or herself —

(i) anything which he or she could and might use to cause physical injury to himself or herself or others at the place of lawful custody; or

(ii) a Class A drug or Class B drug which he or she intended to supply to another or to export, and the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that an intimate search is the only means of removing those items; and

(b) if the search is under paragraph 2(a)(ii) (a drug offence search), the detainee's appropriate consent has been given in writing.

2A. Before the search begins, a police officer must tell the detainee —

(a) that the authority to carry out the search has been given;

(b) the grounds for giving the authorisation and for believing that the article cannot be removed without an intimate search.

2B. Before a detainee is asked to give appropriate consent to a search under paragraph 2(a)(ii) (a drug offence search), the detainee must be warned that if he or she refuses without good cause the refusal may harm his or her case if it comes to trial (see Note A6). In the case of youths, mentally vulnerable or mentally disordered suspects the seeking and giving of consent must take place in the presence of the appropriate adult. A youth's consent is only valid if the parent's or guardian's consent is also obtained unless the youth is under 14, when the parent's or guardian's consent is sufficient in its own right. A detainee who is not legally represented must be reminded that he or she is entitled to obtain legal advice (see paragraph C6.5 above) and the reminder noted in the custody record.

3. An intimate search may only be carried out by a health care professional, unless an officer of the rank of inspector or above considers this is not practicable and the search is to take place under paragraph 2(a)(i), in which case a police officer may carry out the search (see Notes A1 to A5).

3A. Any proposal for a search under paragraph 2(a)(i) to be carried out by someone other than a health care professional must only be considered as a last resort and when the authorising officer is satisfied the risks associated with allowing the item to remain with the detainee outweigh the risks associated with removing it (see Notes A1 to A5).

4. An intimate search under paragraph 2(a) may take place only at a police station or the prison, or at a hospital, surgery or other medical premises; and if under paragraph 2(a)(ii) must be carried out by a health care professional.

5. An intimate search at a place of lawful custody of a youth or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person may take place only in the presence of an appropriate adult of the same gender, unless the detainee specifically requests a particular adult of the opposite gender who is readily available. In the case of a youth the search may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the youth signifies in the presence of the appropriate adult that he or she does not want the adult present during the search and the adult agrees. A record must be made of the youth's decision and signed by the appropriate adult.

6. When an intimate search under paragraph 2(a)(i) is carried out by a police officer, the officer must be of the same gender as the detainee. A minimum of two people, other than the detainee, must be present during the search. Subject to paragraph 5, no person of the opposite gender who is not a health care professional must be present, nor must anyone whose presence is unnecessary. The search must be conducted with proper regard to the sensitivity and vulnerability of the detainee.

B. Documentation

7. In the case of an intimate search, the following must as soon as practicable be recorded in the detainee's custody record —

(a) for searches under paragraphs 2(a)(i) and (ii) —

(i) the authorisation to carry out the search;

(ii) the grounds for giving the authorisation;

(iii) the grounds for believing the article could not be removed without an intimate search;

(iv) which parts of the detainee's body were searched;

(v) who carried out the search;

(vi) who was present; and

(vii) the result.

(b) for searches under paragraph 2(a)(ii) —

(i) the giving of the warning required by paragraph 2B;

(ii) the fact that the appropriate consent was given or (as the case may be) refused, and if refused, the reason given for the refusal (if any).

8. If an intimate search is carried out by a police officer, the reason why it was impracticable for a health care professional to conduct it must be recorded.

II. Strip search

9. A strip search is a search involving the removal of more than outer clothing. In this Code, outer clothing includes shoes and socks.

A. Action

10. A strip search may take place only if it is considered necessary to remove an article which a detainee would not be allowed to keep, and the officer reasonably considers the detainee might have concealed such an article. Strip searches must not be routinely carried out if there is no reason to consider that articles are concealed.

11. When strip searches are conducted —

(a) a strip search should whenever practicable be conducted by a police officer of the same gender as the detainee;

(b) a strip search involving exposure of intimate body parts can only be conducted by a police officer of the same gender as the detainee;

(c) the search must take place in an area where the detainee cannot be seen by anyone who does not need to be present, nor by a member of the opposite gender except an appropriate adult who has been specifically requested by the detainee;

(d) except in cases of urgency, where there is risk of serious harm to the detainee or to others, whenever a strip search involves exposure of intimate body parts, there must be at least two people present other than the detainee, and if the search is of a youth or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person, one of the people must be the appropriate adult. Except in urgent cases as above, a search of a youth may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the youth signifies in the presence of the appropriate adult that he or she does not want the adult to be present during the search and the adult agrees. A record must be made of the youth's decision and signed by the appropriate adult. The presence of more than two people, other than an appropriate adult, can be permitted only in the most exceptional circumstances;

(e) the search must be conducted with proper regard to the sensitivity and vulnerability of the detainee in these circumstances and every reasonable effort must be made to secure the detainee's co-operation and minimise embarrassment. A detainee who is searched must not normally be required to remove all his or her clothes at the same time, e.g. a person should be allowed to remove clothing above the waist and redress before removing further clothing;

(f) if necessary to assist the search, the detainee may be required to hold his or her arms in the air or to stand with his or her legs apart and bend forward so that a visual examination may be made of the genital and anal areas provided no physical contact is made with any body orifice;

(g) if articles are found, the detainee must be asked to hand them over. If articles are found within any body orifice other than the mouth, and the detainee refuses to hand them over, their removal would constitute an intimate search, which must be carried out as in Part A;

(h) a strip search must be conducted as quickly as possible, and the detainee allowed to dress as soon as the procedure is complete.

B. Documentation

12. A record must be made on the custody record of a strip search including the reason it was considered necessary, those present and any result.

Notes for Guidance

A1. Before authorising any intimate search, the authorising officer must make every reasonable effort to persuade the detainee to hand the article over without a search. If the detainee agrees, a health care professional should whenever possible be asked to assess the risks involved and, if necessary, attend to assist the detainee.

A2. If the detainee does not agree to hand the article over without a search, the authorising officer must carefully review all the relevant factors before authorising an intimate search. In particular, the officer must consider whether the grounds for believing an article may be concealed are reasonable.

A3. If authority is given for a search under paragraph 2(a)(i), a health care professional must be consulted whenever possible. The presumption should be that the search will be conducted by the health care professional and the authorising officer must make every reasonable effort to persuade the detainee to allow the health professional to conduct the search.

A4. A police officer should only be authorised to carry out a search as a last resort and when all other approaches have failed. In these circumstances, the authorising officer must be satisfied that the detainee might use the article for one or more of the purposes in paragraph 2(a)(i) and that the physical injury likely to be caused is sufficiently severe to justify authorising a police officer to carry out the search.

A5. If an officer has any doubts whether to authorise an intimate search by a police officer, the officer should seek advice from an officer of the rank of inspector or above.

A6. In warning a detainee who is asked to consent to an intimate drug offence search, as in paragraph 2B, the following form of words may be used —

“You do not have to allow yourself to be searched, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial.”

ANNEX B –
DELAY IN NOTIFYING ARREST OR ALLOWING ACCESS TO LEGAL ADVICE

A. Action

1. The exercise of the rights in section C5 or section C6, or both, may be delayed if the person is in police detention, as defined in section 2(4) of the Ordinance, in connection with an imprisonable offence, has not yet been charged with an offence and an officer of the rank of inspector or above, has reasonable grounds for believing their exercise will —

(a) lead to —

(i) interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an imprisonable offence; or

(ii) interference with, or physical injury to, other people; or

(b) lead to alerting other people suspected of having committed an imprisonable offence but not yet arrested for it; or

(c) hinder the recovery of property obtained in consequence of the commission of such an offence.

2. These rights may also be delayed if the officer has reasonable grounds to believe that —

(a) the person detained for an imprisonable offence has benefited from his or her criminal conduct (decided in accordance with the Proceeds of Crime Ordinance (governing the proceeds of crime)); and

(b) the recovery of the value of the property constituting that benefit will be hindered by the exercise of either right.

3. Authority to delay a detainee’s right to consult privately with a legal practitioner may be given only if the authorising officer has reasonable grounds to believe the legal practitioner the detainee wishes to consult will, inadvertently or otherwise, pass on a message from the detainee or act in some other way which will have any of the consequences specified under paragraphs 1 or 2. In these circumstances the detainee must be allowed to choose another legal practitioner (see Note B3).

4. If the detainee wants to see a legal practitioner, access to that legal practitioner may not be delayed on the grounds that he or she might advise the detainee not to answer questions or that the legal practitioner was initially asked to attend the place of lawful custody by someone else. In the latter case the detainee must be told that the legal practitioner has come to the place of lawful custody at another person's request, and must be asked to sign the custody record to signify whether he or she wants to see the legal practitioner.

5. The fact the grounds for delaying notification of arrest may be satisfied does not automatically mean the grounds for delaying access to legal advice will also be satisfied.

6. These rights may be delayed only for as long as grounds exist and in no case beyond 36 hours after the relevant time as defined in section 69 of the Ordinance. If the grounds cease to apply within this time, the detainee must, as soon as practicable, be asked if he or she wants to exercise either right, the custody record must be noted accordingly, and action taken in accordance with the relevant section of the Code.

7. A detained person must be permitted to consult a legal practitioner for a reasonable time before any court hearing.

8. to 12. [Omitted]

B. Documentation

13. The grounds for action under this Annex must be recorded and the detainee informed of them as soon as practicable.

14. Any reply given by a detainee under paragraph 6 must be recorded and the detainee asked to endorse the record in relation to whether he or she wants to receive legal advice at this point.

C. Cautions and special warnings

15. When a suspect detained at a place of lawful custody is interviewed during any period for which access to legal advice has been delayed under this Annex, the court may not draw adverse inferences from his or her silence.

Notes for Guidance

B1. Even if this Annex applies in the case of a youth, or a person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, action to inform the appropriate adult and the person responsible for a youth's welfare if that is a different person, must nevertheless be taken as in paragraphs C3.13 and C3.15.

B2. In the case of Commonwealth citizens and foreign nationals, see Note 7A.

B3. A decision to delay access to a specific legal practitioner is likely to be a rare occurrence and only made when it can be shown that the suspect is capable of misleading that particular legal practitioner and there is more than a substantial risk that the suspect will succeed in causing information to be conveyed which will lead to one or more of the specified consequences.

ANNEX C –
RESTRICTION ON DRAWING ADVERSE INFERENCES FROM SILENCE
AND TERMS OF THE CAUTION WHEN THE RESTRICTION APPLIES

A. The restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence

1. Sections 365, 367 and 368 of the Ordinance describe the conditions under which adverse inferences may be drawn from a person’s failure or refusal to say anything about his or her involvement in the offence when interviewed, after being charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted. These provisions are subject to an overriding restriction on the ability of a court to draw adverse inferences from a person’s silence. This restriction applies —

(a) to any detainee at a place of lawful custody (see Note 10C) who, before being interviewed (see section C11) or being charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted (see section C16) has —

(i) asked for legal advice (see section C6, paragraph C6.1);

(ii) not been allowed an opportunity to consult a legal practitioner as in this Code; and

(iii) not changed his or her mind about wanting to have legal advice (see section C6, paragraph 6.6(d)).

(Note: The condition in (ii) will –

(a) apply when a detainee who has asked for legal advice is interviewed before speaking to a legal practitioner as in section C6, paragraph C6.6(a) or (b).

(b) not apply if the detained person declines to ask for legal advice (see section C6, paragraphs C6.6(c) and (d)).

(b) to any person charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, an offence who —

(i) has had brought to his or her notice a written statement made by another person or the content of an interview with another person which relates to that offence (see section C16, paragraph C16.4);

(ii) is interviewed about that offence (see section C16, paragraph C16.5); or

(iii) makes a written statement about that offence (see Annex D paragraphs 4 and 9).

B. Terms of the caution when the restriction applies

2. When a requirement to caution arises at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies, the caution must be —

“You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence.”

3. Whenever the restriction either begins to apply or ceases to apply after a caution has already been given, the person must be re-cautioned in the appropriate terms. The changed position on drawing inferences and that the previous caution no longer applies must also be explained to the detainee in ordinary language (see Note C2).

Notes for Guidance

C1. The restriction on drawing inferences from silence does not apply to a person who has not been detained and who therefore cannot be prevented from seeking legal advice if he or she wants to.

C2. The following is suggested as a framework to help explain changes in the position on drawing adverse inferences.

(a) If the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence begins to apply, the caution should be in the form —

“The caution you were previously given no longer applies. This is because after that caution [you asked to speak to a legal practitioner but have not yet been allowed an opportunity to speak to a legal practitioner][you have been charged with/informed you may be prosecuted]. This means that from now on, adverse inferences cannot be drawn at court and your defence will not be harmed just because you choose to say nothing. Please listen carefully to the caution I am about to give you because it will apply from now on. You will see that it does not say anything about your defence being harmed.”

(b) If the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence ceases to apply before or at the time the person is charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted, the caution should be in the form —

“The caution you were previously given no longer applies. This is because after that caution you have been allowed an opportunity to speak to a legal practitioner. Please listen carefully to the caution I am about to give you because it will apply from now on. It explains how your defence at court may be affected if you choose to say nothing.”

ANNEX D – WRITTEN STATEMENTS UNDER CAUTION

A. Written by a person under caution

1. A person must always be invited to write down what he or she wants to say.

2. A person who has not been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, any offence to which the statement he or she wants to write relates, must —

(a) unless the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies (see Annex C) be asked to write out and sign the following before writing what he or she wants to say —

“I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence.”;

(b) if the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies, be asked to write out and sign the following before writing what he or she wants to say —

“I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence.”.

3. If a person, when charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for any offence, asks to make a statement which relates to the offence and wants to write it, the person must —

(a) unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence (see Annex C) applied when he or she was so charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted, be asked to write out and sign the following before writing what he or she wants to say —

“I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence.”;

(b) if the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when the person was so charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted, be asked to write out and sign the following before writing what he or she wants to say —

“I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence.”

4. When a person, who has already been charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for any offence, asks to make a statement which relates to the offence and wants to write it, the person must be asked to write out and sign the following before writing what he or she wants to say —

“I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence.”

5. Any person writing his or her own statement must be allowed to do so without any prompting except that a police officer may indicate to him or her which matters are material or question any ambiguity in the statement.

B. Written by a police officer

6. If a person says he or she would like someone to write the statement for him or her, a police officer must write the statement.

7. If the person has not been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, any offence to which the statement he or she wants to make relates, the person must, before starting, be asked to sign, or make his or her mark, to the following —

(a) if the statement is not made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies (see Annex C) —

“I,, wish to make a statement. I wish someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence.”;

(b) if the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies —

“I,, wish to make a statement. I wish someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence”.

8. If, when charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for any offence, the person asks to make a statement which relates to the offence, the person must before starting be asked to sign, or make his or her mark to, the following —

(a) if the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence does not apply (see Annex C) when the person was charged or informed —

“I,, wish to make a statement. I wish someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence.”;

(b) if the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when he or she was charged or informed —

“I,, wish to make a statement. I wish someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence.”

9. If, having already been charged with or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for any offence, a person asks to make a statement which relates to any such offence, the person must before starting, be asked to sign, or make his or her mark to —

“I,, wish to make a statement. I wish someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence.”.

10. The person writing the statement must take down the exact words spoken by the person making it and must not edit or paraphrase it. Any questions that are necessary, e.g. to make it more intelligible, and the answers given, must be recorded at the same time on the statement form.

11. When the writing of a statement is finished the person making it must be asked to read it and to make any corrections, alterations or additions he or she wants. When he or she has finished reading he or she must be asked to write and sign or make his or her mark on the following certificate at the end of the statement —

“I have read the above statement, and I have been able to correct, alter or add anything I wish. This statement is true. I have made it of my own free will.”

12. If the person making the statement cannot read, or refuses to read it, or to write the Certificate as in paragraph 11 at the end of it or to sign it, the person taking the statement must read it to him or her and ask him or her if he or she would like to correct, alter or add anything and to put his or her signature or make his or her mark at the end. The person taking the statement must certify on the statement itself what has occurred.

ANNEX E –
SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS RELATING TO MENTALLY DISORDERED AND OTHERWISE MENTALLY VULNERABLE PEOPLE

1. If a police officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a person of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, or mentally incapable of understanding the significance of questions or his or her replies, the person must be treated as mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable for the purposes of this Code (see paragraph C1.4).

2. In the case of a person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, ‘the appropriate adult’ is a person as defined in paragraph C1.7(b).

3. If the custody officer authorises the detention of a person who is mentally vulnerable or appears to be suffering from a mental disorder, the custody officer must as soon as practicable inform the appropriate adult of the grounds for detention and the person’s whereabouts, and must ask the adult to come to the place of lawful custody to see the person. If the appropriate adult —

(a) is already at the place of lawful custody when information is given as in paragraphs C3.1 to 3.5 - the information must be given in his or her presence;

(b) is not at the place of lawful custody when the provisions of paragraph C3.1 to C3.5 are complied with - these provisions must be complied with again in his or her presence once he or she arrives.

(See paragraphs C3.15 to 3.17)

4. If the appropriate adult, having been informed of the right to legal advice, considers legal advice should be taken, the provisions of section C6 apply as if the mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person had requested access to legal advice (see paragraph C3.19 and Note E1).

5. The custody officer must ensure that a person receives appropriate clinical attention as soon as reasonably practicable if the person appears to be suffering from a mental disorder, or in urgent cases immediately call the nearest health care professional or an ambulance (see paragraphs C9.5 and C9.6).

6. [Omitted]

7. If a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person is cautioned in the absence of the appropriate adult, the caution must be repeated in the appropriate adult's presence (see paragraph C10.12).

8. A mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person must not be interviewed or asked to provide or sign a written statement in the absence of the appropriate adult unless the provisions of paragraphs C11.1 or C11.18 to C11.20 apply. Questioning in these circumstances may not continue in the absence of the appropriate adult once sufficient information to avert the risk has been obtained. A record must be made of the grounds for any decision to begin an interview in these circumstances. (See paragraphs C11.1, C11.15 and C11.18 to C11.20).

9. If the appropriate adult is present at an interview, he or she must be informed that he or she is not expected to act simply as an observer and the purposes of his or her presence are to —

(a) advise the interviewee;

(b) observe whether or not the interview is being conducted properly and fairly;

(c) facilitate communication with the interviewee.

(See paragraph C11.17)

10. If the detention of a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person is reviewed by a reviewing officer, the appropriate adult must, if available at the time, be given an opportunity to make representations to the officer about the need for continuing detention (see paragraph C15.3).

11. If the custody officer charges a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person with an offence or takes other appropriate action when there is sufficient evidence for a prosecution, this must be done in the presence of the appropriate adult.

The written notice embodying any charge must be given to the appropriate adult as well as to the youth or mentally disordered/mentally vulnerable person (see paragraphs C16.1 to C16.4A).

12. An intimate or strip search of a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person may take place only in the presence of the appropriate adult of the same gender, unless the detainee specifically requests the presence of a particular adult of the opposite gender. A strip search may take place in the absence of an appropriate adult only in cases of urgency when there is a risk of serious harm to the detainee or others (see Annex A, paragraphs 5 and 11(c)).

13. Particular care must be taken when deciding whether to use any form of approved restraints on a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person in a locked cell (see paragraph C8.2).

Notes for Guidance

E1. The purpose of the provision at paragraph C3.19 is to protect the rights of a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable detained person who does not understand the significance of what is said to him or her. If the detained person wants to exercise the right to legal advice, the appropriate action should be taken and not delayed until the appropriate adult arrives. A mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable detained person should always be given an opportunity, when an appropriate adult is called to a place of lawful custody, to consult privately with a legal practitioner in the absence of the appropriate adult if he or she wants to do so.

E2. Although people who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable are often capable of providing reliable evidence, they may, without knowing they are doing so or wanting to do so, be particularly prone in certain circumstances to provide information that may be unreliable, misleading or self-incriminating. Special care should always be taken when questioning such a person, and the appropriate adult should be involved if there is any doubt about a person's mental state or capacity. Because of the risk of unreliable evidence, it is important to obtain corroboration of any facts admitted whenever possible.

E3. Because of the risks referred to in Note E2, which the presence of the appropriate adult is intended to minimise, officers of the rank of inspector or above should exercise their discretion to authorise the commencement of an interview in the appropriate adult's absence only in exceptional cases, if it is necessary to avert an immediate risk of serious harm (see paragraphs C11.1 and 11.18 to 11.20).

E4. [Omitted]

ANNEX F –
[Omitted]

ANNEX G – FITNESS TO BE INTERVIEWED

1. This Annex contains general guidance to help police officers and health care professionals assess whether a detainee might be at risk in an interview.

2. A detainee may be at risk in an interview if it is considered that —

- (a) conducting the interview could significantly harm the detainee's physical or mental state;
- (b) anything the detainee says in the interview about his or her involvement or suspected involvement in the offence about which he or she is being interviewed might be considered unreliable in subsequent court proceedings because of his or her physical or mental state.

3. In assessing whether the detainee should be interviewed, the following must be considered —

- (a) how the detainee's physical or mental state might affect his or her ability to understand the nature and purpose of the interview, to comprehend what is being asked, to appreciate the significance of any answers given and to make rational decisions about whether he or she wants to say anything;
- (b) the extent to which the detainee's replies may be affected by his or her physical or mental condition rather than representing a rational and accurate explanation of his or her involvement in the offence;
- (c) how the nature of the interview, which could include particularly probing questions, might affect the detainee.

4. It is essential that health care professionals who are consulted consider the functional ability of the detainee rather than simply relying on a medical diagnosis, e.g. it is possible for a person with severe mental illness to be fit for interview.

5. Health care professionals should advise on the need for an appropriate adult to be present, whether reassessment of the person's fitness for interview may be necessary if the interview lasts beyond a specified time, and whether a further specialist opinion may be required.

6. When a health care professional identifies risks, he or she should be asked to quantify the risks. He or she should inform the custody officer —

(a) whether the person's condition —

- (i) is likely to improve;
- (ii) will require or be amenable to treatment; and

(b) indicate how long it might take for such improvement to take effect.

7. The role of the health care professional is to consider the risks and advise the custody officer of the outcome of that consideration. The health care professional's determination and any advice or recommendations should be made in writing and form part of the custody record.

8. Once the health care professional has provided that information, it is a matter for the custody officer to decide whether or not to allow the interview to go ahead, and if the interview is to proceed, to determine what safeguards are needed. Nothing prevents safeguards being provided in addition to those required under the Code. An example might be to have an appropriate health care professional present during the interview, in addition to an appropriate adult, in order constantly to monitor the person's condition and how it is being affected by the interview.

ANNEX H – DETAINED PERSON OBSERVATION LIST

1. If any detainee fails to meet any of the following criteria, an appropriate health care professional or an ambulance must be called.

2. When assessing the level of rousability, consider —

Rousability – can he or she be woken?

- go into the cell
- call his or her name
- shake gently

Response to questions – can he or she give appropriate answers to questions such as —

- What's your name?
- Where do you live?
- Where do you think you are?

Response to commands – can he or she respond appropriately to commands such as –

- Open your eyes!
- Lift one arm, now the other arm!

3. Remember to take into account the possibility or presence of other illnesses, injury, or mental condition, a person who is drowsy and smells of alcohol may also have the following —

- Diabetes
- Epilepsy
- Head injury
- Drug intoxication or overdose
- Stroke

ANNEX I and J – [Omitted]

ANNEX K – X-RAYS AND ULTRASOUND SCANS

A. Action

1. Under section 87 of the Ordinance a person who has been arrested and is in police detention can have an X-ray taken of him or her or an ultrasound scan carried out on him or her (or both) if it is —

(a) authorised by an officer of the rank of inspector or above who has reasonable grounds for believing that the detainee —

(i) may have swallowed a Class A drug or Class B drug; and

(ii) was in possession of that Class A drug or Class B drug with the intention of supplying it to another or to export; and

(b) the detainee's appropriate consent has been given in writing.

2. Before an X-ray is taken or an ultrasound scan carried out, a police officer must tell the detainee —

(a) that the authority has been given; and

(b) the grounds for giving the authorisation.

3. Before a detainee is asked to give appropriate consent to an X-ray or an ultrasound scan he or she must be warned that if he or she refuses without good cause, his or her refusal may harm his or her case if it comes to trial (see Notes K1 and K2). In the case of youths, mentally vulnerable or mentally disordered suspects the seeking and giving of consent must take place in the presence of the appropriate adult. A youth's consent is only valid if the parent's or guardian's consent is also obtained unless the youth is under 14, when the parent's or guardian's consent is sufficient in its own right. A detainee who is not legally represented must be reminded that he or she is entitled to obtain legal advice (see Code C, paragraph 6.5) and the reminder noted in the custody record.

4. An X-ray may only be taken by a radiographer; an ultrasound scan may only be carried out by a radiographer or a health care professional. Either procedure may only be performed at a hospital, surgery or other medical premises.

B. Documentation

5. The following must be recorded as soon as practicable in the detainee's custody record —

(a) the authorisation to take the x-ray or carry out the ultrasound scan (or both);

(b) the grounds for giving the authorisation;

(c) the giving of the warning required by paragraph 3; and

(d) the fact that the appropriate consent was given or (as the case may be) refused, and if refused, the reason given for the refusal (if any); and

(e) if an X-ray is taken or an ultrasound scan carried out —

(i) where it was taken or carried out;

- (ii) who took it or carried it out;
- (iii) who was present;
- (iv) the result.

6. Paragraphs C1.4 to C1.7 of this Code apply and an appropriate adult should be present when consent is sought to any procedure under this Annex.

Notes for Guidance

K1. If authority is given for an x-ray to be taken or an ultrasound scan to be carried out (or both), consideration should be given to asking a radiographer to explain to the detainee what is involved and to allay any concerns the detainee might have about the effect which taking an x-ray or carrying out an ultrasound scan might have on him or her. If appropriate consent is not given, evidence of the explanation may, if the case comes to trial, be relevant to determining whether the detainee had a good cause for refusing.

K2. In warning a detainee who is asked to consent to an X-ray being taken or an ultrasound scan being carried out (or both), as in paragraph 3, the following form of words may be used–

“You do not have to allow an x-ray of you to be taken or an ultrasound scan to be carried out on you, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial.”

D1. Introduction

D1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

D1.1. This Code of Practice concerns the principal methods used by police to identify people in connection with the investigation of offences and the keeping of accurate and reliable criminal records.

D1.1A. The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the people to whom they apply, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

D1.2. In this Code, identification by an eye-witness arises when a witness who has seen the offender committing the crime is given an opportunity to identify a person suspected of involvement in the offence in a video identification, identification parade or similar procedure. These eyewitness identification procedures (see Part A of section D3 below) are designed to —

- (a) test the witness' ability to identify the suspect as the person the witness saw on a previous occasion;
- (b) provide safeguards against mistaken identification.

While this Code concentrates on visual identification procedures, it does not preclude the police making use of aural identification procedures such as a "voice identification parade", where they judge that appropriate.

D1.2A. In this code, separate provisions in Part B of section D3 below apply when any person ('A'), including a police officer, is asked if A recognises anyone A sees in an image as being someone A knows and to test A's claim to recognise that person as someone who is known to A. Except where stated, these separate provisions are not subject to the eye-witnesses identification procedures described in paragraph D1.2.

D1.3. Identification by fingerprints applies when a person's fingerprints are taken to —

- (a) compare with fingerprints found at the scene of a crime;
- (b) check and prove convictions;
- (c) help to ascertain a person's identity.

D1.3A. Identification using footwear impressions applies when a person's footwear impressions are taken to compare with impressions found at the scene of a crime.

D1.4. Identification by body samples and impressions includes taking samples such as blood or hair to generate a DNA profile for comparison with material obtained from the scene of a crime, or a victim.

D1.5. Taking photographs of arrested people applies to recording and checking identity and locating and tracing persons who —

- (a) are wanted for offences;
- (b) fail to answer their bail.

D1.6. Another method of identification involves searching and examining detained suspects to find, e.g., marks such as tattoos or scars which may help establish their identity or whether they have been involved in committing an offence.

D1.7. The provisions of the Ordinance and this Code are designed to make sure fingerprints, samples, impressions and photographs are taken, used and retained, and identification procedures carried out, only when justified and necessary for preventing, detecting or investigating crime. If these provisions are not observed, the application of the relevant procedures in particular cases may be open to question.

D2. General

D2.1. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

D2.2. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation. Provisions in the Annexes to the Code are provisions of this Code.

D2.3. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a person of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code (see Note 1G to Code C).

D2.4. Any person who appears to be under 18 must be treated as a youth for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence that he or she is older.

D2.5. A person who appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or who has difficulty communicating orally because of a speech impediment, must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary.

D2.6. In this Code, ‘appropriate adult’ and ‘legal practitioner’ have the meanings given those terms by section 2 of the Ordinance, that is to say —

“appropriate adult” means —

(a) in relation to a youth —

(i) the youth’s parent or guardian;

(ii) if the youth is in the care of the Department - a person representing the Department;
or

(iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or a person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

(Note: The ‘Department’ means the Social Services Department.)

(b) in relation to a person who is mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable —

- (i) a relative, guardian or other person responsible for the person's care or custody;
- (ii) someone experienced in dealing with mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable people but who is not a police officer or person employed by the police; or
- (iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

“legal practitioner” means a person who is entitled to practise as an advocate or as a solicitor, attorney or proctor in any court having unlimited jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in some part of the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland.

D2.6A. Establishing gender for purposes of a search of a person is to be done in accordance with Annex F to Code A.

D2.7. References to custody officers include those performing the functions of custody officer.

D2.8. When a record of any action requiring the authority of an officer of a specified rank is made under this Code, subject to paragraph D2.18, the officer's name and rank must be recorded.

D2.9. When this Code requires the prior authority or agreement of an officer of a specified rank or above, the authority may be given by an officer who has been authorised to perform the functions of that rank under section 781 of the Ordinance.

D2.10. Subject to paragraph D2.18, all records must be timed and signed by the maker.

D2.11. Records must be made in the custody record, unless otherwise specified. References to ‘pocket book’ include any official report book issued to police officers.

D2.12. If any procedure in this Code requires a person's consent, the consent of —

- (a) a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person - is only valid if given in the presence of the appropriate adult;
- (b) a youth - is only valid if the consent of the youth's parent or guardian is also obtained, unless the youth is under 14, in which case the parent's or guardian's consent is sufficient in its own right (see Note 2A)

D2.12A. If the only obstacle to an identification procedure in section D3 is that a youth's parent or guardian refuses consent or reasonable efforts to obtain it have failed, the identification officer may apply the provisions of paragraph D3.21.

D2.13. If a person is blind, seriously visually impaired or unable to read, the custody officer or identification officer must make sure the person's legal practitioner, relative, appropriate adult or some other person likely to take an interest in the person and not involved in the investigation is available to help check any documentation. When this Code requires written consent or signing, the person assisting may be asked to sign instead, if the detainee prefers. This paragraph does not require an appropriate adult to be called solely to assist in checking and signing documentation for a person who is not mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, or a youth. (See Note 2B and Code C paragraph C3.15.)

D2.14. If any procedure in this Code requires information to be given to or sought from a suspect, it must be given or sought in the appropriate adult's presence if the suspect is mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a youth. If the appropriate adult is not present when the information is first given or sought, the procedure must be repeated in the presence of the appropriate adult when that person arrives. If the suspect appears to be deaf or there is doubt about his or her hearing or speaking ability or ability to understand English, and effective communication cannot be established, the information must be given or sought through an interpreter.

D2.15. Any procedure in this Code involving the participation of a suspect who is mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a youth, must take place in the presence of the appropriate adult. (See Code C paragraph C1.4.)

D2.15A. Any procedure in this Code involving the participation of a witness who is or appears to be mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a youth should take place in the presence of a support person. However, the support person must not be allowed to prompt any identification of a suspect by a witness. (See Note 2AB)

D2.16. References to —

- (a) 'taking a photograph', include the use of any process to produce a single, still or moving, visual image;
- (b) 'photographing a person', should be construed accordingly;
- (c) 'photographs', 'films', 'negatives' and 'copies' include relevant visual images recorded, stored, or reproduced through any medium;
- (d) 'destruction' includes the deletion of computer data relating to such images or making access to that data impossible.

D2.17. Except as described, nothing in this Code affects the powers and procedures for requiring and taking samples of breath in relation to driving offences, etc. under the Road Traffic Ordinance.

D2.18. Nothing in this Code requires the identity of officers to be recorded or disclosed if the officers reasonably believe recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger. In these cases, they must use warrant or other identification numbers. (See Note 2D)

D2.19 to 21. [Omitted]

Notes for Guidance

2A. For the purposes of paragraph D2.12, the consent required from a parent or guardian may, for a youth in the care of the Crown, be given by the officer with responsibility for that youth. In the case of a youth, nothing in paragraph D2.12 requires the parent, guardian or practitioner of the Social Services Department to be present to give consent, unless the person is acting as the appropriate adult under paragraphs D2.14 or D2.15. However, it is important that a parent or guardian not present is fully informed before being asked to consent. He or she must be given the same information about the procedure and the youth's suspected involvement in the offence as the youth and appropriate adult. The parent or guardian must also be allowed to speak to the youth and the appropriate adult if the parent or guardian wishes. Provided the consent is fully informed and is not withdrawn, it may be obtained at any time before the procedure takes place.

2AB. A pre-trial support person is a person other than a police officer who is asked by the investigating officer to accompany a vulnerable witness during an identification procedure, unless the witness states that he or she does not want a support person to be present. The support person should not be, or be likely to be, a witness in the investigation.

2B. People who are seriously visually impaired or unable to read may be unwilling to sign police documents. The alternative, i.e. their practitioner signing on their behalf, seeks to protect the interests of both police and suspects.

2C. [Omitted]

2D. The purpose of paragraph D2.18 is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to the officers. In cases of doubt, an officer of the rank of inspector or above should be consulted.

D3. Identification and recognition of suspects

Part I. Identification of a suspect by an eye-witness

D3.0. This part applies when an eye-witness has seen the offender committing the crime or in any other circumstances which tend to prove or disprove the involvement of the person the witness saw in the crime, for example, close to the scene of the crime, immediately before or immediately after it was committed. It sets out the procedures to be used to test the ability of the eye-witness to identify a person suspected of involvement in the offence as the person the witness saw on the previous occasion. Except where stated, this part does not apply to the procedures described in Part B and Note 3AA.

D3.1. A record must be made of the suspect's description as first given by a potential witness. This record must —

- (a) be made and kept in a form which enables details of that description to be accurately produced from it, in a visible and legible form, which can be given to the suspect or his or her legal practitioner in accordance with this Code; and

(b) unless otherwise specified, be made before the witness takes part in any identification procedures under paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10, D3.21 or D3.23.

A copy of the record must, where practicable, be given to the suspect or his or her legal practitioner before any procedures under paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10, D3.21 or D3.23 are carried out. (See Note 3E)

A. Cases when the suspect's identity is not known

D3.2. In cases when the suspect's identity is not known, a witness may be taken to a particular neighbourhood or place to see whether he or she can identify the person he or she saw. Although the number, age, gender, race, general description and style of clothing of other people present at the location and the way in which any identification is made cannot be controlled, the principles applicable to the formal procedures under paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10 must be followed as far as practicable. For example —

(a) if it is practicable to do so, a record should be made of the witness' description of the suspect, as in paragraph D3.1(a), before asking the witness to make an identification;

(b) care must be taken not to direct the witness' attention to any individual unless, taking into account all the circumstances, this cannot be avoided. However, this does not prevent a witness being asked to look carefully at the people around at the time or to look towards a group or in a particular direction, if this appears necessary to make sure that the witness does not overlook a possible suspect simply because the witness is looking in the opposite direction, and also to enable the witness to make comparisons between any suspect and others who are in the area (see Note 3F);

(c) if there is more than one witness, every effort should be made to keep them separate and witnesses should be taken to see whether they can identify a person independently;

(d) once there is sufficient information to justify the arrest of a particular individual for suspected involvement in the offence, e.g., after a witness makes a positive identification, the provisions from paragraph D3.4 onwards apply for any other witnesses in relation to that individual. Subject to paragraphs D3.12 and D3.13, it is not necessary for the witness who makes such a positive identification to take part in a further procedure;

(e) the officer accompanying the witness must record, in his or her pocket book, the action taken as soon as, and in as much detail, as possible. The record should include —

(i) the date, time and place of the relevant occasion the witness claims to have previously seen the suspect;

(ii) where any identification was made; how it was made and the conditions at the time (e.g., the distance the witness was from the suspect, the weather and light);

(iii) whether the witness's attention was drawn to the suspect; the reason for this; and anything said by the witness or the suspect about the identification or the conduct of the procedure.

D3.3. A witness must not be shown photographs, computerised or artist's composite likenesses or similar likenesses or pictures (including 'E-fit' images) if the identity of the suspect is known to the police and the suspect is available to take part in a video identification, an identification parade or a group identification. If the suspect's identity is not known, the showing of such images to a witness to obtain identification evidence must be done in accordance with Annex E.

B. Cases when the suspect is known and available

D3.4. If the suspect's identity is known to the police and the suspect is available, the identification procedures set out in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10 may be used. References in this section to a suspect being 'known' mean there is sufficient information known to the police to justify the arrest of a particular person for suspected involvement in the offence. A suspect being 'available' means he or she is immediately available, or will be within a reasonably short time, and willing to take an effective part in at least one of the following and that it is practicable to arrange —

- (a) video identification;
- (b) identification parade;
- (c) group identification.

Video identification

D3.5. A 'video identification' is when the witness is shown moving images of a known suspect, together with similar images of others who resemble the suspect. Moving images must be used unless —

- (a) the suspect is known but not available (see paragraph D3.21); or
- (b) in accordance with paragraph 2A of Annex A of this Code, the identification officer does not consider that replication of a physical feature can be achieved or that it is not possible to conceal the location of the feature on the image of the suspect.

The identification officer may then decide to make use of video identification but using still images.

D3.6. Video identifications must be carried out in accordance with Annex A.

Identification parade

D3.7. An 'identification parade' is when the witness sees the suspect in a line of others who resemble the suspect.

D3.8. Identification parades must be carried out in accordance with Annex B.

Group identification

D3.9. A ‘group identification’ is when the witness sees the suspect in an informal group of people.

D3.10. Group identifications must be carried out in accordance with Annex C.

Arranging identification procedures

D3.11. Except for the provisions in paragraph D3.19, the arrangements for, and conduct of, the identification procedures in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10 and circumstances in which an identification procedure must be held are the responsibility of an officer of the rank of sergeant or above who, so far as practicable, is not involved with the investigation (‘the identification officer’).

Unless otherwise specified, the identification officer may allow another officer to make arrangements for, and conduct, any of these identification procedures. In delegating these procedures, the identification officer must be able to supervise effectively and either intervene or be contacted for advice. No officer or any other person involved with the investigation of the case against the suspect, beyond the extent required by these procedures, may take any part in these procedures or act as the identification officer. This does not prevent the identification officer from consulting the officer in charge of the investigation to determine which procedure to use. When an identification procedure is required, in the interest of fairness to suspects and witnesses, it must be held as soon as practicable.

Circumstances in which an identification procedure must be held

D3.12. Whenever —

(a) a witness has identified a suspect or purported to have identified a suspect prior to any identification procedure set out in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10 having been held; or

(b) there is a witness available, who expresses an ability to identify the suspect, or there is a reasonable chance of the witness being able to do so, and the witness has not been given an opportunity to identify the suspect in any of the procedures set out in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10; and

(c) the suspect disputes being the person the witness claims to have seen,

an identification procedure must be held unless it is not practicable or it would serve no useful purpose in proving or disproving whether the suspect was involved in committing the offence. For example —

(i) if the suspect admits being at the scene of the crime and gives an account of what took place and the eye-witness does not see anything which contradicts that;

(ii) when it is not disputed that the suspect is already well known to the witness who claims to have seen the suspect commit the crime.

D3.13. An eye-witness identification procedure may also be held if the officer in charge of the investigation considers it would be useful.

Selecting an identification procedure

D3.14. If, because of paragraph D3.12, an identification procedure is to be held, the suspect must initially be offered a video identification unless —

- (a) a video identification is not practicable; or
- (b) an identification parade is both practicable and more suitable than a video identification;
or
- (c) paragraph D3.16 applies.

The identification officer and the officer in charge of the investigation must consult each other to determine which option is to be offered. An identification parade may not be practicable because of factors relating to the witnesses, such as their number, state of health, availability and travelling requirements. A video identification would normally be more suitable if it could be arranged and completed sooner than an identification parade. Before an option is offered the suspect must also be reminded of the entitlement to obtain legal advice.

D3.15. A suspect who refuses the identification procedure first offered must be asked to state his or her reason for refusing and may get advice from his or her legal practitioner and/or if present, the appropriate adult. The suspect, legal practitioner and/or appropriate adult must be allowed to make representations about why another procedure should be used. A record must be made of the reasons for refusal and any representations made. After considering any reasons given, and representations made, the identification officer must, if appropriate, arrange for the suspect to be offered an alternative which the officer considers suitable and practicable. If the officer decides it is not suitable and practicable to offer an alternative identification procedure, the reasons for that decision must be recorded.

D3.16. A group identification may initially be offered if the officer in charge of the investigation considers it is more suitable than a video identification or an identification parade and the identification officer considers it practicable to arrange.

Notice to suspect

D3.17. Unless paragraph D3.20 applies, before a video identification, an identification parade or group identification is arranged, the following must be explained to the suspect —

- (a) the purposes of the video identification, identification parade or group identification;
- (b) the suspect's entitlement to obtain legal advice (see paragraph C6.5 of Code C);
- (c) the procedures for holding it, including the suspect's right to have a legal practitioner or friend present;

(d) that the suspect does not have to consent to or co-operate in a video identification, identification parade or group identification;

(e) that if the suspect does not consent to, and co-operate in, a video identification, identification parade or group identification, the refusal may be given in evidence in any subsequent trial and police may proceed covertly without the suspect's consent or make other arrangements to test whether a witness can identify the suspect (see paragraph D3.21);

(f) whether, for the purposes of the video identification procedure, images of the suspect have previously been obtained (see paragraph D3.20), and if so, that the suspect may co-operate in providing further, suitable images to be used instead;

(g) if appropriate, the special arrangements for youths;

(h) if appropriate, the special arrangements for mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable people;

(i) that if the suspect significantly alters his or her appearance between being offered an identification procedure and any attempt to hold an identification procedure, this may be given in evidence if the case comes to trial, and the identification officer may then consider other forms of identification (see paragraph D3.21 and Note 3C);

(j) that a moving image or photograph may be taken of the suspect when he or she attends any identification procedure;

(k) whether, before the suspect's identity became known, the witness was shown photographs, a computerised or artist's composite likeness or similar likeness or image by the police (see Note 3B);

(l) that if the suspect changes his or her appearance before an identification parade, it may not be practicable to arrange one on the day or subsequently and, because of the appearance change, the identification officer may consider alternative methods of identification (see Note 3C);

(m) that the suspect or his or her legal practitioner will be provided with details of the description of the suspect as first given by any witnesses who are to attend the video identification, identification parade, group identification or confrontation (see paragraph D3.1).

D3.18. This information must also be recorded in a written notice handed to the suspect. The suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to read the notice, after which the suspect should be asked to sign a second copy to indicate if he or she is willing to co-operate with the making of a video or take part in the identification parade or group identification. The signed copy must be retained by the identification officer.

D3.19. The duties of the identification officer under paragraphs D3.17 and D3.18 may be performed by the custody officer or some other officer not involved in the investigation if —

(a) it is proposed to release the suspect so that an identification procedure can be arranged and carried out and an officer of the rank of sergeant or above is not available to act as the identification officer (see paragraph D3.11) before the suspect leaves the place of lawful custody; or

(b) it is proposed to keep the suspect in police detention while the procedure is arranged and carried out and waiting for an officer of the rank of sergeant or above to act as the identification officer (see paragraph D3.11) would cause unreasonable delay to the investigation.

The officer concerned must inform the identification officer of the action taken and give that officer the signed copy of the notice (see Note 3C).

D3.20. If the identification officer and officer in charge of the investigation suspect, on reasonable grounds, that if the suspect was given the information and notice as in paragraphs D3.17 and D3.18, he or she would then take steps to avoid being seen by a witness in any identification procedure, the identification officer may arrange for images of the suspect suitable for use in a video identification procedure to be obtained before giving the information and notice. If the suspect's images are obtained in these circumstances, the suspect may, for the purposes of a video identification procedure, co-operate in providing new images which if suitable, would be used instead (see paragraph D3.17(f)).

C. Cases when the suspect is known but not available

D3.21. When a known suspect is not available or has ceased to be available (see paragraph D3.4) the identification officer may make arrangements for a video identification (see Annex A). If necessary, the identification officer may follow the video identification procedures but using still images. Any suitable moving or still images may be used and these may be obtained covertly if necessary. Alternatively, the identification officer may make arrangements for a group identification (see Note 3D). These provisions may also be applied to a youth if the consent of the parent or guardian is either refused or reasonable efforts to obtain that consent have failed (see paragraph D2.12A).

D3.22. Any covert activity should be strictly limited to that necessary to test the ability of the witness to identify the suspect.

D3.23. The identification officer may arrange for the suspect to be confronted by the witness if none of the options referred to in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10 or D3.21 are practicable. A "confrontation" is when the suspect is directly confronted by the witness. A confrontation does not require the suspect's consent. Confrontations must be carried out in accordance with Annex D.

D3.24. Requirements for information to be given to, or sought from, a suspect or for the suspect to be given an opportunity to view images before they are shown to a witness, do not apply if the suspect's lack of co-operation prevents the necessary action.

D. Documentation

D3.25. A record must be made of the video identification, identification parade, group identification or confrontation on forms provided for the purpose.

D3.26. If the identification officer considers it is not practicable to hold a video identification or identification parade requested by the suspect, the reasons must be recorded and explained to the suspect.

D3.27. A record must be made of a person's failure or refusal to co-operate in a video identification, identification parade or group identification and, if applicable, of the grounds for obtaining images in accordance with paragraph D3.20.

E. Showing films and photographs of incidents and information released to the media

D3.28. Nothing in this Code precludes showing films or photographs to the public through the media, or to police officers for the purposes of recognition and tracing suspects. However, when such material is shown to obtain evidence of recognition, the procedures in Part B will apply. (See Note 3AA)

D3.29. When a broadcast or publication is made (see paragraph D3.28), a copy of the relevant material released to the media for the purposes of recognising or tracing the suspect must be kept. The suspect or his or her legal practitioner must be allowed to view such material before any procedures under paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10, D3.21 or D3.23 are carried out, if it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation. Each eye-witness involved in the procedure must be asked, after he or she has taken part, whether he or she has seen any film, photograph or image relating to the offence or any description of the suspect that has been broadcast or published in any media or on any social networking site, and if the witness has, he or she should be asked to give details of the circumstances, such as the date and place as relevant. The replies must be recorded.

This paragraph does not affect any other requirement under the Ordinance to retain material in connection with criminal investigations (see the Code on the recording, retention and disclosure of material obtained in a criminal investigation).

F. Destruction and retention of photographs taken or used in identification procedures

D3.30. Section 115 of the Ordinance (see paragraph D5.12) provides powers to take photographs of suspects and allows the photographs to be used or disclosed only for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions by, or on behalf of, police or other law enforcement and prosecuting authorities inside and outside the Falkland Islands, or the enforcement of a sentence. After being so used or disclosed, they may be retained but can only be used or disclosed for the same purposes.

D3.31. Subject to paragraph D3.33, any photographs (and all negatives and copies), of suspects that are not taken in accordance with paragraph D5.12 and that are taken for the purposes of, or in connection with, the identification procedures in paragraphs D3.5 to D3.10, D.21 or D3.23, must be destroyed unless the suspect —

- (a) is charged with, or informed he or she may be prosecuted for, an imprisonable offence (i.e. an offence for which a sentence of imprisonment can be imposed);
- (b) is prosecuted for an imprisonable offence;
- (c) is cautioned for an imprisonable offence; or
- (d) gives informed consent, in writing, for the photograph or images to be retained or purposes described in paragraph D3.30.

D3.32. When paragraph D3.31 requires the destruction of any photograph of a person, the person must be given an opportunity to witness the destruction or to have a certificate confirming the destruction if the person asks for one within 5 days of being informed that the destruction is required.

D3.33. Nothing in paragraph D3.31 affects any other requirement under the Ordinance to retain material in connection with criminal investigations – see the Code of Practice on the recording, retention and disclosure of material obtained in a criminal investigation (‘Disclosure Code’).

Part II. Evidence of recognition by showing films, photographs and other images

D3.34. This part of this section applies when, for the purposes of obtaining evidence of recognition, any person, including a police officer —

- (a) views the image of an individual in a film, photograph or any other visual medium; and
- (b) is asked whether he or she recognises that individual as someone who is known to the person.

(See Notes 3AA and 3G)

D3.35. The films, photographs and other images must be shown on an individual basis to avoid any possibility of collusion and to provide safeguards against mistaken recognition (see Note 3G). The showing must as far as possible follow the principles for video identification if the suspect is known (see Annex A), or identification by photographs if the suspect is not known (see Annex E).

D3.36. A record of the circumstances and conditions under which the person is given an opportunity to recognise the individual must be made and the record must include —

- (a) whether the person knew or was given information concerning the name or identity of any suspect;

(b) what the person has been told before the viewing about the offence, or the person(s) depicted in the images of the offender, and by whom;

(c) how and by whom the witness was asked to view the image or look at the individual;

(d) whether the viewing was alone or with others and if with others the reason for it;

(e) the arrangements under which the person viewed the film or saw the individual and by whom these arrangements were made;

(f) whether the viewing of the images was arranged as part of a mass circulation to police and the public or for selected purposes;

(g) the date, time and place that images were viewed or further viewed or the individual was seen;

(h) the times between which the images were viewed or the individual seen;

(i) how the viewing of images or sighting of the individual was controlled and by whom;

(j) whether the person was familiar with the location shown in any images or the place where the person saw the individual, and if so, why;

(k) whether or not on this occasion, the person claims to recognise any image shown, or any individual seen, as being someone known to the person, and if so —

(i) the reason;

(ii) the words of recognition;

(iii) any expressions of doubt;

(iv) what features of the image or the individual triggered the recognition.

D3.37. The record under paragraph D3.36 may be made by —

(a) the person who views the image or sees the individual and makes the recognition; or

(b) the officer in charge of showing the images to the person or in charge of the conditions under which the person sees the individual.

Notes for Guidance

3AA. The eye-witness identification procedures in Part A should not be used to test whether a witness can recognise a person as someone the witness knows and would be able to give evidence of recognition along the lines that “On (describe date, time location) I saw an image of an individual who I recognised as AB.” In these cases, the procedures in Part B apply.

3A. A police officer who is a witness for the purposes of this part of the Code is subject to the same principles and procedures as a civilian witness.

3B. When a witness attending an identification procedure has previously been shown photographs, or been shown or provided with computerised or artist’s composite likenesses, or similar likenesses or pictures, it is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to make the identification officer aware of this.

3C. The purpose of paragraph D3.19 is to avoid or reduce delay in arranging identification procedures by enabling the required information and warnings (see sub-paragraphs D3.17(i) and D3.17(l)) to be given at the earliest opportunity.

3D. Paragraph D3.21 would apply when a known suspect deliberately makes himself or herself ‘unavailable’ in order to delay or frustrate arrangements for obtaining identification evidence. It also applies when a suspect refuses or fails to take part in a video identification, an identification parade or a group identification, or refuses or fails to take part in the only practicable options from that list. It enables any suitable images of the suspect, moving or still, which are available or can be obtained, to be used in an identification procedure. Examples include images from custody and other CCTV systems and from visually recorded interview records (see Code F Note 2D).

3E. When it is proposed to show photographs to a witness in accordance with Annex E, it is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to confirm to the officer responsible for supervising and directing the showing, that the first description of the suspect given by that witness has been recorded. If this description has not been recorded, the procedure under Annex E must be postponed (see Annex E paragraph 2).

3F. The admissibility and value of identification evidence obtained when carrying out the procedure under paragraph D3.2 may be compromised if —

- (a) before a person is identified, the witness’ attention is specifically drawn to that person; or
- (b) the suspect’s identity becomes known before the procedure.

3G. The admissibility and value of evidence of recognition obtained when carrying out the procedures in Part B may be compromised if before the person is recognised, the witness who has claimed to know the person is given or is made, or becomes aware of, information about the person which was not previously known to the witness personally but which the witness has purported to rely on to support the claim that the person is in fact known to the witness.

D4. Identification by fingerprints and footwear impressions

Part I. Taking fingerprints in connection with a criminal investigation

A. General

D4.1. References to ‘fingerprints’ mean any record, produced by any method, of the skin pattern and other physical characteristics or features of a person’s fingers or palms.

B. Taking the fingerprints

D4.2. A person’s fingerprints may be taken in connection with the investigation of an offence only with the person’s consent or if paragraph D4.3 applies. If the person is at a place of lawful custody, consent must be in writing.

D4.3. Section 91 of the Ordinance empowers police officers to take fingerprints without consent from the following —

- (a) a person who has been bailed to appear at a court or place of lawful custody if —
 - (i) the person has answered to bail for a person whose fingerprints were taken previously and there are reasonable grounds for believing the two persons are not the same; or
 - (ii) the person who has answered to bail claims to be a different person from a person whose fingerprints were previously taken, and in either case, the court or an officer the rank of sergeant or above authorises the fingerprints to be taken at the court or place of lawful custody; (section 91(3) and (4))

- (b) a person whom a police officer reasonably suspects is committing or attempting to commit, or has committed or attempted to commit, any offence if either —
 - (i) the person’s name is unknown and cannot be readily ascertained by the officer; or
 - (ii) the officer has reasonable grounds for doubting whether a name given by the person is the person’s real name; (section 91(5))

(c) a person detained at a place of lawful custody in consequence of being arrested for an imprisonable offence (see Note 4A); (section 91(7)(a))

(d) a person detained at a place of lawful custody who has been charged with an imprisonable offence (see Note 4A) or informed he or she will be reported for such an offence; (section 91(7)(b))

(e) a person not detained at a place of lawful custody who has been charged with an imprisonable offence (see Note 4A) or informed he or she will be reported for such an offence; (section 91(8))

(f) a person who has been —

(i) convicted of an imprisonable offence; or

(ii) given a caution in respect of such an offence which, at the time of the caution, the person admitted; (section 91(9))

(g) a person who has been arrested for an imprisonable offence and released on bail; (section 91(10))

(h) a person who has been convicted of an offence under the law of a country or territory outside the Falkland Islands which would constitute a qualifying offence if done in the Falkland Islands (see Note 4AB). (section 91(11))

Note 1: Fingerprints may only be taken under paragraphs (c) to (h) if the person has not had his or her fingerprints taken in the course of the investigation of the offence or in exercise of the relevant power, unless the fingerprints taken previously do not constitute a complete set, or some or all of them are not of sufficient quality to allow satisfactory analysis, comparison or matching (section 91(12))

Note 2: Fingerprints may only be taken under those paragraphs if a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above is satisfied that taking fingerprints is necessary to assist in the prevention or detection of crime and authorises them to be taken (section 91(17))

D4.4. Section 95 and Schedule 2 to the Ordinance empower police officers to require (in accordance with Annex G) a person who is not detained to attend a place of lawful custody to have his or her fingerprints taken under the powers in paragraph D4.3. The time-limits for making a requirement are —

(a) persons charged etc. with an imprisonable offence (see paragraph D4.3(e)): The requirement may not be made more than 6 months after —

(i) the day the person was charged or reported if fingerprints have not been taken since then; or

(i) the day the investigating officer was informed that the fingerprints previously taken were incomplete or below standard;

(b) persons convicted or cautioned for an imprisonable offence in the Falkland Islands (see paragraph D4.3(f)). If the offence for which the person was convicted or cautioned is also a qualifying offence (see Note 4AB) there is no time limit for the exercise of this power. If the conviction or caution is for an imprisonable offence which is not a qualifying offence, the requirement may not be made more than 2 years from —

(i) the day the person was convicted or cautioned, if fingerprints have not been taken since then; or

(ii) the day an officer investigating the offence was informed that the fingerprints previously taken were incomplete or below standard;

(c) persons arrested for an imprisonable offence and released (see paragraph D4.3(g)). The requirement may not be made more than 6 months after the day the investigating officer was informed that the fingerprints previously taken were incomplete or below standard;

(d) persons convicted of a qualifying offence (see Note 4AB) outside the Falkland Islands (see paragraph D4.3(h)): There is no time limit for making the requirement.

Note: A person who has had his or her fingerprints taken under any of the powers in section 91 on 2 occasions in relation to any offence may not be required to attend a place of lawful custody for fingerprints to be taken again under section 91 in relation to that offence, unless authorised by an officer of the rank of inspector or above. The fact of the authorisation and the reasons for giving it must be recorded as soon as practicable.

D4.4A. A police officer may arrest without warrant a person who fails to comply with a requirement mentioned in paragraph D4.4.

D4.5. A person's fingerprints may be taken, as above, electronically.

D4.6. Reasonable force may be used, if necessary, to take a person's fingerprints without the person's consent under the powers as in paragraphs D4.3 and D4.4.

D4.7. Before any fingerprints are taken —

(a) without consent under any power in section 91, the person must be informed of —

- (i) the reason the fingerprints are to be taken;
- (ii) the power under which they are to be taken; and
- (iii) the fact that the relevant authority has been given.

(b) with or without consent at a place of lawful custody or elsewhere, the person must be informed —

- (i) that the fingerprints may be subject of a speculative search against other fingerprints (see Note 4B); and
- (ii) that the fingerprints may be retained in accordance with paragraph A2 of Annex F unless they were taken under the power mentioned in paragraph 4.3(e) when they must be destroyed after they have been checked (see Note 4C).

C. Documentation

D4.8A. A record must be made as soon as practicable after the fingerprints are taken, of —

(a) the matters in paragraph D4.7(a)(i) to (iii) and the fact that the person has been informed of those matters; and

(b) the fact that the person has been informed of the matters in paragraph D4.7(b)(i) and (ii).

The record must be made in the person's custody record if the person is detained at a place of lawful custody when the fingerprints are taken.

D4.8. If force is used, a record must be made of the circumstances and those present.

Part II. Taking fingerprints in connection with immigration enquiries

[Omitted]

Part III. Taking footwear impressions in connection with a criminal investigation

A. Action

D4.16. Impressions of a person's footwear may be taken in connection with the investigation of an offence only with the person's consent or if paragraph D4.17 applies. If the person is at a place of lawful custody, consent must be in writing.

D4.17. Section 92 of the Ordinance empowers a police officer to take footwear impressions without consent from any person who is detained at a place of lawful custody —

(a) in consequence of being arrested for an imprisonable offence (see Note 4A) or if the detainee has been charged with such an offence, or informed he or she will be reported for such an offence; and

(b) the detainee has not had an impression of his or her footwear taken in the course of the investigation of the offence unless the previously taken impression is not complete or is not of sufficient quality to allow satisfactory analysis, comparison or matching (whether in the case in question or generally).

D4.18. Reasonable force may be used, if necessary, to take a footwear impression from a detainee without consent under the power in paragraph D4.17.

D4.19. Before any footwear impression is taken with, or without, consent as above, the person must be informed —

(a) of the reason the impression is to be taken;

(b) that the impression may be retained and may be subject of a speculative search against other impressions (see Note 4B), unless destruction of the impression is required in accordance with Annex F, Part A; and

(c) that if the person's footwear impressions are required to be destroyed, the person may witness their destruction as provided for in Annex F, Part A.

B. Documentation

D4.20. A record must be made as soon as possible, of the reason for taking a person's footwear impressions without consent. If force is used, a record must be made of the circumstances and of the persons present.

D4.21. A record must be made when a person has been informed, in accordance with paragraph D4.19(b), of the possibility that his or her footwear impressions may be the subject of a speculative search.

Notes for Guidance

4A. Under section 2 of the Ordinance an 'imprisonable offence' means an offence for which a sentence of imprisonment can be imposed, other than for non-payment of a fine.

4AB. A 'qualifying offence' is a sexual offence or an offence of violence. These terms are defined in section 2 of the Ordinance.

4B. Fingerprints, footwear impressions or a DNA sample (and the information derived from it) taken from a person arrested on suspicion of being involved in an imprisonable offence, or charged with such an offence, or informed he or she will be reported for such an offence, may be subject of a speculative search. This means the fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample may be checked against other fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA records held by, or on behalf of, the police and other law enforcement authorities in, or outside, the Falkland Islands, or held in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence inside or outside the Falkland Islands.

Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples taken from a person suspected of committing an imprisonable offence but not arrested, charged or informed he or she will be reported for it, may be subject to a speculative search only if the person consents in writing. The following is an example of a basic form of words —

“I consent to my fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally.

I understand that my fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample may be checked against other fingerprint, footwear impressions and DNA records held by or on behalf of relevant law enforcement authorities, either in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

I understand that once I have given my consent for my fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent.”

(See Annex F regarding the retention and use of fingerprints and footwear impressions taken with consent for elimination purposes.)

4C. The power described in paragraph D4.3(e) allows fingerprints of a suspect who has not been arrested to be taken in connection with any offence (whether imprisonable or not) using a mobile device and then checked on the street against the database containing the national fingerprint collection. Fingerprints taken under this power cannot be retained after they have been checked. The results may make an arrest for the suspected offence based on the name condition unnecessary (see paragraph G2.9(a) of Code G) and enable the offence to be disposed of without arrest, for example, by summons/charging by post, penalty notice or words of advice.

If arrest for a non-imprisonable offence is necessary for any other reason, this power may also be exercised at a place of lawful custody. Before the power is exercised, the officer should —

- (a) inform the person of the nature of the suspected offence and why the person is suspected of committing it;
- (b) give the person a reasonable opportunity to establish his or her real name before deciding that the name is unknown and cannot be readily ascertained or that there are reasonable grounds to doubt that a name the person has given is the real name;
- (c) as applicable, inform the person of the reason why the name is not known and cannot be readily ascertained or of the grounds for doubting that a name the person has given is his or her real name, including, for example, the reason why a particular document the person has produced to verify the real name is not sufficient.

4D. [Omitted]

D5. Examinations to establish identity and the taking of photographs

I. Detainees at a place of lawful custody

A. Searching or examination of detainees at a place of lawful custody

D5.1. Section 85 of the Ordinance allows a detainee at a place of lawful custody to be searched or examined or both, to establish —

- (a) whether the detainee has any marks, features or injuries that would tend to identify him or her as a person involved in the commission of an offence and to photograph any identifying marks (see paragraph D5.5); or
- (b) the detainee's identity.

A person detained at a place of lawful custody to be searched under a stop and search power (see Code A) is not a detainee for the purposes of these powers.

D5.2. A search and/or examination to find marks under section 85(1)(a) may be carried out without the detainee's consent (see paragraph D2.12) only if authorised by an officer the rank of inspector or above when consent has been withheld or it is not practicable to obtain consent (see Note 5D).

D5.3. A search or examination to establish a suspect's identity under section 85(1)(b) may be carried out without the detainee's consent (see paragraph D2.12) only if authorised by an officer of the rank of inspector or above and only if the detainee has refused to identify himself or herself or the authorising officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting the person is not who he or she claims to be.

D5.4. Any marks that assist in establishing the detainee's identity, or his or her identification as a person involved in the commission of an offence, are identifying marks. Such marks may be photographed with the detainee's consent (see paragraph D2.12), or without consent if it is withheld or it is not practicable to obtain it (see Note 5D).

D5.5. A detainee may only be searched, examined and photographed under section 85 by a police officer of the same gender, except in the case of a strip search not involving exposure of intimate body parts, as to which see paragraph 11(aa) of Annex A to Code C.

D5.6. Any photographs of identifying marks, taken under section 85, may be used or disclosed only for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions by, or on behalf of, police or other law enforcement and prosecuting authorities in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere. After being so used or disclosed, the photograph may be retained, but must not be used or disclosed except for these purposes (see Note 5B).

D5.7. The powers mentioned in paragraph D5.1 do not affect any other requirement under the Ordinance to retain material in connection with criminal investigations – see the Code of Practice on the recording, retention and disclosure of material obtained in a criminal investigation ('Disclosure Code').

D5.8. Authority for the search and/or examination for the purposes of paragraphs D5.2 and 5.3 may be given orally or in writing. If given orally, the authorising officer must confirm it in writing as soon as practicable. A separate authority is required for each purpose which applies.

D5.9. If it is established that a person is unwilling to co-operate sufficiently to enable a search and/or examination to take place or a suitable photograph to be taken, an officer may use reasonable force to —

- (a) search and/or examine a detainee without the person's consent; and
- (b) photograph any identifying marks without the person's consent.

D5.10. The thoroughness and extent of any search or examination carried out in accordance with the powers in section 85 must be no more than the officer considers necessary to achieve the required purpose. Any search or examination which involves the removal of more than the person's outer clothing must be conducted in accordance with Code C, Annex A, paragraph A11.

D5.11. An intimate search may not be carried out under the powers in section 85.

B. Photographing detainees at a place of lawful custody and other persons elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody

D5.12. Under section 85 of the Ordinance, an officer may photograph —

- (a) any person while the person is detained at a place of lawful custody; and
- (b) any person who is elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody and who has been —
 - (i) arrested by a police officer for an offence;
 - (ii) taken into custody by a police officer after being arrested for an offence by a person other than a police officer; or
 - (iii) given a fixed penalty notice by a police officer in uniform under the Road Traffic Ordinance.

D5.12A. Photographs taken under section 115 —

- (a) may be taken with the person's consent, or without the person's consent if consent is withheld or it is not practicable to obtain the person's consent (see Note 5E); and
- (b) may be used or disclosed only for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions by, or on behalf of, police or other law enforcement and prosecuting authorities in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere or the enforcement of any sentence or order made by a court when dealing with an offence. After being so used or disclosed, they may be retained but can only be used or disclosed for the same purposes (see Note 5B).

D5.13. The officer proposing to take a detainee's photograph may, for this purpose, require the person to remove any item or substance worn on, or over, all, or any part of, the person's head or face. If the person does not comply with such a requirement, the officer may remove the item or substance.

D5.14. If it is established that the detainee is unwilling to co-operate sufficiently to enable a suitable photograph to be taken, and it is not reasonably practicable to take the photograph covertly, an officer may use reasonable force (see Note 5F) —

- (a) to take the person's photograph without his or her consent; and
- (b) for the purpose of taking the photograph, remove any item or substance worn on, or over, all, or any part of, the person's head or face which the person has failed to remove when asked.

D5.15. For the purposes of this Code, a photograph may be obtained without the person's consent by making a copy of an image of the person taken at any time on a camera system installed anywhere in a place of lawful custody.

C. Information to be given

D5.16. When a person is searched, examined or photographed as in paragraph D5.1 and D5.12, or a person's photograph is obtained as in paragraph D5.15, the person must be informed of —

- (a) the purpose of the search, examination or photograph;
- (b) the grounds on which the relevant authority, if applicable, has been given; and
- (c) the purposes for which the photograph may be used, disclosed or retained.

This information must be given before the search or examination commences or the photograph is taken, except if the photograph is —

- (i) to be taken covertly;
- (ii) obtained as in paragraph D5.15, in which case the person must be informed as soon as practicable after the photograph is taken or obtained.

D. Documentation

D5.17. A record must be made when a detainee is searched or examined, or a photograph of the person, or of any identifying marks found on the person, is taken. The record must include —

- (a) the identity, subject to paragraph D2.18, of the officer carrying out the search or examination or taking the photograph;
- (b) the purpose of the search, examination or photograph and the outcome;
- (c) the detainee's consent to the search, examination or photograph, or the reason the detainee was searched, examined or photographed without consent;
- (d) the giving of any authority as in paragraphs D5.2 and D5.3, the grounds for giving it and the authorising officer.

D5.18. If force is used when searching, examining or taking a photograph in accordance with this section, a record must be made of the circumstances and of the persons present.

Part II. Persons at a place of lawful custody not detained

D5.19. When there are reasonable grounds for suspecting the involvement of a person in a criminal offence, but that person is at a place of lawful custody voluntarily and not detained, the provisions of paragraphs D5.1 to D5.18 should apply, subject to the modifications in the following paragraphs.

D5.20. References to the 'person being detained' and to the powers mentioned in paragraph D5.1 which apply only to detainees at a place of lawful custody are to be omitted.

D5.21. Force may not be used to —

- (a) search and/or examine the person to —
 - (i) discover whether the person has any marks that would tend to identify him or her as a person involved in the commission of an offence; or
 - (ii) establish the person's identity;
- (b) take photographs of any identifying marks (see paragraph D5.4); or
- (c) take a photograph of the person.

D5.22. Subject to paragraph D5.24, any photograph of a person or of his or her identifying marks which are not taken in accordance with the provisions mentioned in paragraphs D5.1 or D5.12 must be destroyed (together with any negatives and copies) unless the person —

- (a) is charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, an imprisonable offence;
- (b) is prosecuted for an imprisonable offence;
- (c) is cautioned for an imprisonable offence; or
- (d) gives informed consent, in writing, for the photograph or image to be retained as in paragraph D5.6.

D5.23. When paragraph D5.22 requires the destruction of any photograph of a person, the person must be given an opportunity to witness the destruction or to have a certificate confirming the destruction if the person requests such a certificate within 5 days of being informed the destruction is required.

D5.24. Nothing in paragraph D5.22 affects any other requirement under the Ordinance to retain material in connection with criminal investigations – see the Code on the recording, retention and disclosure of material obtained in a criminal investigation ('Disclosure Code').

Notes for Guidance

5A. The conditions under which fingerprints may be taken to assist in establishing a person's identity are described in section D4.

5B. Examples of purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions include —

- (a) checking the photograph against other photographs held in records or in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence to establish whether the person is liable to arrest for other offences;

(b) when the person is arrested at the same time as other people, or at a time when it is likely that other people will be arrested, using the photograph to help establish who was arrested, at what time and where;

(c) when the real identity of the person is not known and cannot be readily ascertained or there are reasonable grounds for doubting a name and other personal details given by the person are the real name and personal details of that person.

(Note: In these circumstances, the photograph may be used or disclosed to help to establish or verify the person's real identity or determine whether the person is liable to arrest for some other offence, e.g. by checking it against other photographs held in records or in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence.)

(d) when it appears that any identification procedure in section D3 may need to be arranged for which the person's photograph would assist;

(e) when the person's release without charge may be required, and if the release is —

(i) on bail to appear at a place of lawful custody - using the photograph to help verify the person's identity when the person answers to bail and if the person does not answer to bail, to assist in arresting the person; or

(ii) without bail - using the photograph to help verify the person's identity or assist in locating the person for the purposes of serving him or her with a summons to appear at court in criminal proceedings;

(iii) when the person has answered to bail at a place of lawful custody and there are reasonable grounds for doubting he or she is the person who was previously granted bail, using the photograph to help establish or verify his or her identity;

(g) when the person arrested on a warrant claims to be a different person from the person named on the warrant and a photograph would help to confirm or disprove the claim;

(h) when the person has been charged with, reported for, or convicted of, an imprisonable offence and the person's photograph is not already on record as a result of (a) to (f) or the photograph is on record but the person's appearance has changed since it was taken and the person has not yet been released or brought before a court.

5C. There is no power to arrest a person convicted of an imprisonable offence solely to take his or her photograph. The power to take photographs in this section applies only when the person is in custody as a result of the exercise of another power, e.g. arrest for fingerprinting under Schedule 2 to the Ordinance.

5D. Examples of when it would not be practicable to obtain a detainee's consent (see paragraph D2.12) to a search or examination or the taking of a photograph of an identifying mark include—

- (a) when the person is drunk or otherwise unfit to give consent;
- (b) when there are reasonable grounds to suspect that if the person became aware that a search or examination was to take place or an identifying mark was to be photographed, the person would take steps to prevent this happening, e.g. by violently resisting, covering or concealing the mark, etc. and it would not otherwise be possible to carry out the search or examination or to photograph any identifying mark;
- (c) in the case of a youth, if the parent or guardian cannot be contacted in sufficient time to allow the search or examination to be carried out or the photograph to be taken.

5E. Examples of when it would not be practicable to obtain the person's consent (see paragraph D2.12) to a photograph being taken include —

- (a) when the person is drunk or otherwise unfit to give consent;
- (b) when there are reasonable grounds to suspect that if the person became aware that a photograph, suitable to be used or disclosed for the use and disclosure described in paragraph D5.6, was to be taken, the person would take steps to prevent it being taken, e.g. by violently resisting, covering or distorting his or her face, etc., and it would not otherwise be possible to take a suitable photograph;
- (c) when, in order to obtain a suitable photograph, it is necessary to take it covertly; and
- (d) in the case of a youth, if the parent or guardian cannot be contacted in sufficient time to allow the photograph to be taken.

5F. The use of reasonable force to take the photograph of a suspect elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody must be carefully considered. The removal of headwear and the taking of a photograph should whenever practicable be by an officer of the same gender as the suspect. It would be appropriate for these actions to be conducted out of public view.

D6. Identification by body samples and impressions

Part I. General

D6.1. References to —

- (a) an 'intimate sample' mean a dental impression or sample of blood, semen or any other tissue fluid, urine, or pubic hair, or a swab taken from any part of a person's genitals or from a person's body orifice other than the mouth;
- (b) a 'non-intimate sample' means —
 - (i) a sample of hair, other than pubic hair, which includes hair plucked with the root (see Note 6A);

- (ii) a sample taken from a nail or from under a nail;
- (iii) a swab taken from any part of a person's body other than a part from which a swab taken would be an intimate sample;
- (iv) saliva;
- (v) a skin impression which means any record, other than a fingerprint, which is a record, in any form and produced by any method, of the skin pattern and other physical characteristics or features of the whole, or any part of, a person's foot or of any other part of the person's body.

Part II. Action

A. Intimate samples

D6.2. Section 93 of the Ordinance provides that intimate samples may be taken from the following —

- (a) a person in police detention, but only —
 - (i) if a police officer of the rank of inspector or above has reasonable grounds to believe such a sample will tend to confirm or disprove the suspect's involvement in an imprisonable offence (see Note 4A) and gives authorisation for a sample to be taken; and
 - (ii) with the suspect's written consent; (section 93(1) and (3))
- (b) a person not in police detention but from whom 2 or more non-intimate samples have been taken in the course of an investigation of an offence and the samples, though suitable, have proved insufficient, if —
 - (i) a police officer of the rank of inspector or above authorises it to be taken; and,
 - (ii) the person concerned gives written consent (see Notes 6B and 6C); (section 93(2) and (3))
- (c) a person convicted outside the Falkland Islands of an offence which if committed in the Falkland Islands would be a qualifying offence (see Note 4AB) and from whom 2 or more non-intimate samples taken under section 94(9) have proved insufficient, if —
 - (i) a police officer of the rank of inspector or above is satisfied that taking the sample is necessary to assist in the prevention or detection of crime and authorises it to be taken; and
 - (ii) the person concerned gives written consent (section 93(4) and (5)).

D6.2A. Section 95 and Schedule 2 to the Ordinance empower police officers to require (in accordance with Annex G) a person who is not detained to attend an approved place (i.e. a police station etc. as listed in section 86(9) of the Ordinance) to have an intimate sample taken under the powers in paragraph D6.2. The time-limits for making a requirement are —

(a) persons from whom 2 or more non-intimate samples have been taken and proved to be insufficient (see paragraph D6.2(b): There is no time limit for making the requirement;

(b) persons convicted outside the Falkland Islands from whom 2 or more non-intimate samples have proved insufficient (see paragraph D6.2(c): There is no time limit for making the requirement.

D6.2AB. A police officer may arrest, without warrant, a person who fails to comply with a requirement mentioned in paragraph D6.2A.

D6.3. Before a suspect is asked to provide an intimate sample, he or she must be —

(a) informed —

(i) of the reason, including the nature of the suspected offence (except if taken under paragraph D6.2(c) from a person convicted outside the Falkland Islands);

(ii) that authorisation has been given and the provision under which given;

(iii) that a sample taken at an approved place may be the subject of a speculative search;

(b) warned that if he or she refuses without good cause, the refusal may harm his or her case if it comes to trial (see Note 6D). If the suspect is in police detention and not legally represented, he or she must also be reminded of the entitlement to obtain legal advice (see Code C, paragraph C6.5) and the reminder must be noted in the custody record. If paragraph D6.2(b) applies and the person is attending an approved place voluntarily, the entitlement to obtain legal advice as in paragraph C3.21 of Code C must be explained to the person.

D6.4. Dental impressions may only be taken by a registered dentist. Other intimate samples, except for samples of urine, may only be taken by a health care professional as defined in section 2 of the Ordinance (see Note 9A in Code C).

B. Non-intimate samples

D6.5. A non-intimate sample may be taken from a detainee only with the detainee's written consent, or if paragraph D6.6 applies.

D6.6. A non-intimate sample may be taken from the following persons without the appropriate consent —

(a) a person who is in police detention as a consequence of his or her arrest for an imprisonable offence and has not had a non-intimate sample of the same type and from the same part of the body taken in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police or has had such a sample taken but it proved insufficient; (section 94(3) and (5));

(b) a person who is being held in custody by the police on the authority of a court if an officer of the rank of inspector or above authorises it to be taken. An authorisation may be given —

(i) if the authorising officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting the person of involvement in an imprisonable offence and for believing that the sample will tend to confirm or disprove that involvement; and

(ii) in writing or orally and confirmed in writing, as soon as practicable;

but an authorisation may not be given to take from the same part of the body a further non-intimate sample consisting of a skin impression unless the previously taken impression proved insufficient; (section 94(4) and (5));

(c) a person who has been arrested for an imprisonable offence and release if the person —

(i) is on bail and has not had a sample of the same type and from the same part of the body taken in the course of the investigation of the offence;

(ii) has had such a sample taken in the course of the investigation of the offence, but it proved unsuitable or insufficient; (section 94(6));

(d) a person (whether or not in police detention or held in custody by the police on the authority of a court) who has been charged with an imprisonable offence or informed that he or she will be reported for such an offence, if the person —

(i) has not had a non-intimate sample taken from him or her in the course of the investigation;

(ii) has had a sample taken, but it proved unsuitable or insufficient for the same form of analysis (see Note 6B); or

(iii) has had a sample taken in the course of the investigation of the offence and the sample has been destroyed and in proceedings relating to the offence there is a dispute as to whether a DNA profile relevant to the proceedings was derived from the destroyed sample; (section 94(7));

(e) a person who has been —

(i) convicted of an imprisonable offence; or

(ii) given a caution in respect of such an offence which, at the time of the caution, the person admitted,

if, since the conviction or caution a non-intimate sample has not been taken from the person or a sample which has been taken since then has proved to be unsuitable or insufficient and in either case, an officer of the rank of inspector or above, is satisfied that taking the sample is necessary to assist in the prevention or detection of crime and authorises the taking; (section 94(8));

(f) a person detained following acquittal on grounds of insanity or finding of unfitnes to plead; (section 94(9));

(g) a person who has been convicted outside the Falkland Islands of an offence which if committed in the Falkland Islands would be a qualifying offence (see Note 4AB) if –

(i) a non-intimate sample has not been taken previously under this power or a sample was so taken but was unsuitable or insufficient; and

(ii) a police officer of the rank of inspector or above is satisfied that taking a sample is necessary to assist in the prevention or detection of crime and authorises it to be taken (section 94(10)).

D6.6A. Section 95 and Schedule 2 to the Ordinance empower police officers to require (in accordance with Annex G) a person who is not detained to attend a place of lawful custody to have a non-intimate sample taken under the powers in paragraph D6.6. The time-limits for making a requirement are —

(a) persons arrested for an imprisonable offence and released (see paragraph D6.6(c): The requirement may not be made more than 6 months after the day the investigating officer was informed that the sample previously taken was unsuitable or insufficient;

(b) persons charged etc. with an imprisonable offence (see paragraph D6.6(d)). The requirement may not be made more than 6 months after —

(i) the day the person was charged or reported if a sample has not been taken since then; or

(iii) the day the investigating officer was informed that the sample previously taken was unsuitable or insufficient;

(c) a person convicted or cautioned for an imprisonable offence in the Falkland Islands (see paragraph D6.6(e)): If the offence is also a qualifying offence (see Note 4AB) there is no time limit for the exercise of this power. If the conviction or caution was for an imprisonable offence that is not a qualifying offence, the requirement may not be made more than 2 years from —

(i) the day the person was convicted or cautioned, if a sample has not been taken since then; or

(ii) the day an officer investigating the offence was informed that the sample previously taken was unsuitable or insufficient;

(d) a person who has been convicted of a qualifying offence outside the Falkland Islands: (see paragraph D6.6(g) and Note 4AB)). There is no time limit for making the requirement.

Note: A person who has had a non-intimate sample taken under any of the powers in section 94 mentioned in paragraph D6.6 on 2 occasions in relation to any offence may not be required under Schedule 2 to attend a place of lawful custody for a sample to be taken again under that section in relation to that offence, unless authorised by an officer of the rank of inspector or above. The fact of the authorisation and the reasons for giving it must be recorded as soon as practicable;

D6.6AB. A police officer may arrest, without warrant, a person who fails to comply with a requirement mentioned in paragraph D6.6A.

D6.7. Reasonable force may be used, if necessary, to take a non-intimate sample from a person without the person's consent under the powers mentioned in paragraph D6.6.

D6.8. Before any non-intimate sample is taken from a person —

(a) without consent under any power mentioned in paragraph D6.6 or D6.6A, the person must be informed of —

(i) the reason for taking the sample;

(ii) the fact that the relevant authorisation has been given if authorisation is required;

(b) with or without consent at a place of lawful custody or elsewhere, the person must be informed —

(i) that the sample or information derived from the sample may be the subject of a speculative search against other samples and information derived from them (see Note 6E); and

(ii) that the sample and the information derived from it may be retained in accordance with Annex F, Part A.

C. Removal of clothing

D6.9. When clothing needs to be removed in circumstances likely to cause embarrassment to the person, no person of the opposite gender who is not a health care professional may be present (unless, in the case of a mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable person or a youth, that person specifically requests the presence of an appropriate adult of the opposite gender who is readily available), nor may anyone whose presence is unnecessary be present. However, in the case of a youth, this is subject to the overriding proviso that such a removal of clothing may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the youth signifies, in the presence of the adult, that he or she prefers the adult's absence, and the adult agrees.

D. Documentation

D6.10. A record must be made as soon as practicable after the sample is taken of —

(a) the matters in paragraph D6.8(a) and the fact that the person has been informed of those matters;

(b) the fact that the person has been informed of the matters in paragraph D6.8(b).

D6.10A. If force is used, a record must be made of the circumstances and the persons present.

D6.11. A record must be made of a warning given as required by paragraph D6.3.

Notes for Guidance

6A. When hair samples are taken for the purpose of DNA analysis (rather than for other purposes such as making a visual match), the suspect should be permitted a reasonable choice as to what part of the body the hairs are taken from. When hairs are plucked, they should be plucked individually, unless the suspect prefers otherwise, and no more should be plucked than the person taking them reasonably considers necessary for a sufficient sample.

6B.(a) An insufficient sample is one which is not sufficient either in quantity or quality to provide information for a particular form of analysis, such as DNA analysis. A sample may also be insufficient if enough information cannot be obtained from it by analysis because of loss, destruction, damage or contamination of the sample or as a result of an earlier, unsuccessful attempt at analysis.

(b) An unsuitable sample is one which, by its nature, is not suitable for a particular form of analysis.

6C. Nothing in paragraph D6.2 prevents intimate samples being taken for elimination purposes with the consent of the person concerned, but the provisions of paragraph D2.12 relating to the role of the appropriate adult should be applied.

6D. In warning a person who is asked to provide an intimate sample as in paragraph D6.3, the following form of words may be used —

“You do not have to provide this sample/allow this swab or impression to be taken, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial.”

6E. Fingerprints or a DNA sample and the information derived from it taken from a person arrested on suspicion of being involved in an imprisonable offence, or charged with such an offence, or informed that he or she will be reported for such an offence, may be subject of a speculative search. This means they may be checked against other fingerprints and DNA records held by, or on behalf of, the police and other law enforcement authorities in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere, or held in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere. Fingerprints and samples taken from any other person, e.g. a person who is suspected of committing an imprisonable offence but who has not been arrested, charged or informed that he or she will be reported for it, may be subject to a speculative search only if the person consents in writing to his or her fingerprints being subject of such a search. The following is an example of a basic form of words —

“I consent to my fingerprints/DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

I understand that this sample may be checked against other fingerprint/DNA records held by or on behalf of relevant law enforcement authorities, either in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

I understand that once I have given my consent for the sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent.”

(See Annex F regarding the retention and use of fingerprints and samples taken with consent for elimination purposes.)

6F. Samples of urine and non-intimate samples taken in accordance with sections 96 and 97 of the Ordinance may not be used for identification purposes in accordance with this Code (see Note 17D in Code C).

ANNEX A - VIDEO IDENTIFICATION

A. General

1. The arrangements for obtaining and ensuring the availability of a suitable set of images to be used in a video identification must be the responsibility of an identification officer, who has no direct involvement with the case.

2. The set of images must include the suspect and at least eight other people who, so far as possible, resemble the suspect in age, height, general appearance and position in life. Only one suspect may appear in any set unless there are 2 suspects of roughly similar appearance, in which case they may be shown together with at least 12 other people.

2A. If the suspect has an unusual physical feature, e.g., a facial scar, tattoo or distinctive hairstyle or hair colour which does not appear on the images of the other people that are available to be used, steps may be taken to —

(a) conceal the location of the feature on the images of the suspect and the other people; or

(b) replicate that feature on the images of the other people.

For these purposes, the feature may be concealed or replicated electronically or by any other method which it is practicable to use to ensure that the images of the suspect and other people resemble each other. The identification officer has discretion to choose whether to conceal or replicate the feature and the method to be used. If an unusual physical feature has been described by the witness, the identification officer should, if practicable, have that feature replicated. If it has not been described, concealment may be more appropriate.

2B. If the identification officer decides that a feature should be concealed or replicated, the reason for the decision and whether the feature was concealed or replicated in the images shown to any witness must be recorded.

2C. If the witness requests to view an image in which an unusual physical feature has been concealed or replicated without the feature being concealed or replicated, the witness may be allowed to do so.

3. The images used to conduct a video identification must, as far as possible, show the suspect and other people in the same positions or carrying out the same sequence of movements. They must also show the suspect and other people under identical conditions unless the identification officer reasonably believes —

(a) because of the suspect's failure or refusal to co-operate or other reasons, it is not practicable for the conditions to be identical; and

(b) any difference in the conditions would not direct a witness' attention to any individual image.

4. The reasons that identical conditions are not practicable must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose.

5. Provision must be made for each person shown in a photograph to be identified by number.

6. If police officers are shown, any numerals or other identifying badges must be concealed. If a prison inmate is shown, either as a suspect or not, then either all, or none of, the people shown should be in prison clothing.

7. The suspect or his or her legal practitioner, friend, or appropriate adult must be given a reasonable opportunity to see the complete set of images before it is shown to any witness. If the suspect has a reasonable objection to the set of images or any of the participants, the suspect must be asked to state the reasons for the objection. Steps must, if practicable, be taken to remove the grounds for objection. If this is not practicable, the suspect and/or his or her practitioner must be told why the objections cannot be met, and the objection, the reason given for it and why it cannot be met must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose.

8. Before the images are shown in accordance with paragraph 7, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are to attend the video identification. When a broadcast or publication is made, as in paragraph D3.28, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner must also be allowed to view any material released to the media by the police for the purpose of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation.

9. The suspect's legal practitioner must, if practicable, be given reasonable notification of the time and place that the video identification is to be conducted so that a practitioner may attend on behalf of the suspect. If a legal practitioner has not been instructed, this information must be given to the suspect. The suspect may not be present when the images are shown to a witness. In the absence of the suspect's practitioner, the viewing itself must be recorded on video. No unauthorised people may be present.

B. Conducting the video identification

10. The identification officer is responsible for making the appropriate arrangements to make sure that, before they see the set of images, witnesses are not able to communicate with each other about the case, see any of the images which are to be shown, see, or be reminded of, any photograph or description of the suspect or be given any other indication as to the suspect's identity, or overhear a witness who has already seen the material. There must be no discussion with the witness about the composition of the set of images and a witness must not be told whether a previous witness has made any identification.

11. Only one witness may see the set of images at a time. Immediately before the images are shown, the witness must be told that the person he or she saw on a specified earlier occasion may, or may not, appear in the images the witness is shown and that if the witness cannot make a positive identification, he or she should say so. The witness must be advised that at any point, he or she may ask to see a particular part of the set of images or to have a particular image frozen for study. Furthermore, it should be pointed out to the witness that there is no limit on how many times he or she can view the whole set of images or any part of them. However, the witness should be asked not to make any decision as to whether the person he or she saw is on the set of images until he or she has seen the whole set at least twice.

12. Once the witness has seen the whole set of images at least twice and has indicated that he or she does not wish to view the images, or any part of them, again, the witness must be asked to say whether the individual he or she saw in person on a specified earlier occasion has been shown and, if so, to identify the individual by number of the image. The witness will then be shown that image to confirm the identification.

13. Care must be taken not to direct the witness' attention to any one individual image or to give any indication of the suspect's identity. If a witness has previously made an identification by photographs, or a computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness, the witness must not be reminded of such a photograph or composite likeness once a suspect is available for identification by other means in accordance with this Code. Nor must the witness be reminded of any description of the suspect.

14. After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he or she has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs, or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence and the reply must be recorded.

C. Image security and destruction

15. Arrangements must be made for all relevant material containing sets of images used for specific identification procedures to be kept securely and their movements accounted for. In particular, no-one involved in the investigation may be permitted to view the material prior to it being shown to any witness.

16. As appropriate, paragraph D3.30 or D 3.31 applies to the destruction or retention of relevant sets of images.

D. Documentation

17. A record must be made of all those participating in, or seeing, the set of images whose names are known to the police.

18. A record of the conduct of the video identification must be made on forms provided for the purpose. This includes anything said by the witness about any identifications or the conduct of the procedure and any reasons it was not practicable to comply with any of the provisions of this Code governing the conduct of video identifications.

ANNEX B – IDENTIFICATION PARADES

A. General

1. A suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to have a legal practitioner or friend present, and must be asked to indicate on a second copy of the notice referred to in paragraph D3.18 whether or not he or she wishes to have one present.

2. An identification parade may take place either in a normal room or one equipped with a screen permitting witnesses to see members of the identification parade without being seen. The procedures for the composition and conduct of the identification parade are the same in both cases, subject to paragraph 8 (except that an identification parade involving a screen may take place only when the suspect's legal practitioner, friend or appropriate adult is present or the identification parade is recorded on video).

3. Before the identification parade takes place, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are attending the identification parade. When a broadcast or publication is made as in paragraph D3.28, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner should also be allowed to view any material released to the media by the police for the purpose of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided it is practicable to do so and would not unreasonably delay the investigation.

B. Identification parades involving prison inmates

4. If a prison inmate is required for identification, and there are no security problems about the person leaving the establishment, he or she may be asked to participate in an identification parade or video identification.

5. An identification parade may be held in the prison but must be conducted, as far as practicable, under normal identification parade rules. Members of the public should comprise the identification parade unless there are serious security or control objections to their admission to the prison. In such cases, or if a group or video identification is arranged within the prison, other inmates may participate. If an inmate is the suspect, he or she is not required to wear prison clothing for the identification parade unless the other people taking part are other inmates in similar clothing, or are members of the public who are prepared to wear prison clothing for the occasion.

C. Conduct of the identification parade

6. Immediately before the identification parade, the suspect must be reminded of the procedures governing its conduct and cautioned in the terms of Code C, paragraphs C10.5 or C10.6, as appropriate.

7. All unauthorised people must be excluded from the place where the identification parade is held.

8. Once the identification parade has been formed, everything that takes place subsequently in respect of it must be in the presence and hearing of the suspect and any interpreter, legal practitioner, friend or appropriate adult who is present (unless the identification parade involves a screen, in which case everything said to, or by, any witness at the place where the identification parade is held, must be said in the hearing and presence of the suspect's legal practitioner, friend or appropriate adult or be recorded on video).

9. The identification parade must consist of at least 8 people (in addition to the suspect) who, as far as possible, resemble the suspect in age, height, general appearance and position in life. Only one suspect is to be included in an identification parade, unless there are 2 suspects of roughly similar appearance, in which case they may be paraded together with at least 12 other people. In no circumstances should more than 2 suspects be included in one identification parade and where there are separate identification parades, they must be made up of different people.

10. If the suspect has an unusual physical feature, e.g., a facial scar, tattoo or distinctive hairstyle or hair colour which cannot be replicated on other members of the identification parade, steps may be taken to conceal the location of that feature on the suspect and the other members of the identification parade if the suspect and his or her legal practitioner, or appropriate adult, agree. For example, by use of a plaster or a hat, so that all members of the identification parade resemble each other in general appearance.

11. When all members of a similar group are possible suspects, separate identification parades must be held for each unless there are 2 suspects of similar appearance, in which case they may appear on the same identification parade with at least 12 other members of the group who are not suspects. When police officers in uniform form an identification parade, any numerals or other identifying badges must be concealed.

12. When the suspect is brought to the place where the identification parade is to be held, he or she must be asked if he or she has any objection to the arrangements for the identification parade or to any of the other participants in it and to state the reasons for the objection. The suspect may obtain advice from his or her legal practitioner or friend, if present, before the identification parade proceeds. If the suspect has a reasonable objection to the arrangements or any of the participants, steps must, if practicable, be taken to remove the grounds for objection. When it is not practicable to do so, the suspect must be told why the objections cannot be met. The objection, the reason given for it and why it cannot be met must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose.

13. The suspect may select his or her own position in the line, but may not otherwise interfere with the order of the people forming the line. When there is more than one witness, the suspect must be told, after each witness has left the room, that he or she can, if he or she wishes, change position in the line. Each position in the line must be clearly numbered, either by means of a number laid on the floor in front of each identification parade member or by other means.

14. Appropriate arrangements must be made to make sure, before witnesses attend the identification parade, that they are not able to —

(a) communicate with each other about the case or overhear a witness who has already seen the identification parade;

(b) see any member of the identification parade;

(c) see, or be reminded of, any photograph or description of the suspect or be given any other indication as to the suspect's identity; or

(d) see the suspect before or after the identification parade.

15. The person conducting a witness to an identification parade must not discuss with the witness the composition of the identification parade and, in particular, must not disclose whether a previous witness has made any identification.

16. Witnesses must be brought in one at a time. Immediately before the witness inspects the identification parade, he or she must be told that the person he or she saw on a specified earlier occasion may, or may not, be present and if the witness cannot make a positive identification, he or she should say so. The witness must also be told that he or she not make any decision about whether the person he or she saw is on the identification parade until he or she has looked at each member at least twice.

17. When the officer (see paragraph D3.11) conducting the identification procedure is satisfied that the witness has properly looked at each member of the identification parade, the officer must ask the witness whether the person the witness saw on a specified earlier occasion is on the identification parade and, if so, to indicate the number of the person concerned.

18. If the witness wishes to hear any identification parade member speak, adopt any specified posture or move, the witness must first be asked whether he or she can identify any person on the identification parade on the basis of appearance only. When the request is to hear members of the identification parade speak, the witness must be reminded that the participants in the identification parade have been chosen on the basis of physical appearance only. Members of the identification parade may then be asked to comply with the witness' request to hear them speak, see them move or adopt any specified posture.

19. If the witness requests that the person he or she has indicated remove anything used for the purposes of paragraph 10 to conceal the location of an unusual physical feature, that person may be asked to remove it.

20. If the witness makes an identification after the identification parade has ended the suspect and, if present, his or her legal practitioner, interpreter or friend must be informed. When this occurs, consideration should be given to allowing the witness a second opportunity to identify the suspect.

21. After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he or she has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence, including any films, photos or descriptions published on the internet, and the reply must be recorded.

22. When the last witness has left, the suspect must be asked whether he or she wishes to make any comments on the conduct of the identification parade.

D. Documentation

23. A video recording must normally be taken of the identification parade. If that is impracticable, a colour photograph must be taken. A copy of the video recording or photograph must be supplied, on request, to the suspect or his or her legal practitioner within a reasonable time.

24. Paragraph D3.30 or D3.31 apply, as far as appropriate, to any photograph or video taken as in paragraph 23.

25. If any person is asked to leave an identification parade because he or she is interfering with its conduct, the circumstances must be recorded.

26. A record must be made of all those present at an identification parade whose names are known to the police.

27. If prison inmates make up an identification parade, the circumstances must be recorded.

28. A record of the conduct of any identification parade must be made on forms provided for the purpose. This includes anything said by the witness or the suspect about any identifications or the conduct of the procedure, and any reason why it was not practicable to comply with any of this Code's provisions.

ANNEX C – GROUP IDENTIFICATION

A. General

1. The purpose of this Annex is to make sure, as far as possible, that group identifications follow the principles and procedures for identification parades so that the conditions are fair to the suspect in the way they test the witness' ability to make an identification.
2. Group identifications may take place either with the suspect's consent and cooperation or covertly without the suspect's consent.
3. The location of the group identification is a matter for the identification officer, although the officer may take into account any representations made by the suspect, appropriate adult, legal practitioner or friend.
4. The place where the group identification is held should be one where other people are either passing by or waiting around informally in groups, such that the suspect is able to join them and be capable of being seen by the witness at the same time as others in the group. For example, people leaving an escalator, pedestrians walking through a shopping centre, passengers on railway and bus stations, waiting in queues or groups or where people are standing or sitting in groups in other public places.
5. If the group identification is to be held covertly, the choice of locations will be limited by the places where the suspect can be found and the number of other people present at that time. In these cases, suitable locations might be along regular routes travelled by the suspect, including buses or trains or public places frequented by the suspect.
6. Although the number, age, gender, race and general description and style of clothing of other people present at the location cannot be controlled by the identification officer, in selecting the location the officer must consider the general appearance and numbers of people likely to be present. In particular, the officer must reasonably expect that over the period the witness observes the group, the witness will be able to see, from time to time, a number of others whose appearance is broadly similar to that of the suspect.
7. A group identification need not be held if the identification officer believes, because of the unusual appearance of the suspect, that none of the locations that it would be practicable to use satisfy the requirements of paragraph 6 that are necessary to make the identification fair.
8. Immediately after a group identification procedure has taken place (with or without the suspect's consent), a colour photograph or video should be taken of the general scene, if practicable, to give a general impression of the scene and the number of people present. Alternatively, if it is practicable, the group identification may be video recorded.

9. If it is not practicable to take the photograph or video in accordance with paragraph 8, a photograph or film of the scene should be taken later at a time determined by the identification officer, if the officer considers it practicable to do so.

10. An identification carried out in accordance with this Code remains a group identification even though, at the time of being seen by the witness, the suspect was alone rather than in a group.

11. Before the group identification takes place, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are to attend the identification. When a broadcast or publication is made, as in paragraph D3.28, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner should also be allowed to view any material released by the police to the media for the purposes of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided that it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation.

12. After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he or she has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence and the reply recorded.

B. Identification with the consent of the suspect

13. A suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to have a legal practitioner or friend present. The suspect must be asked to indicate on a second copy of the notice referred to in paragraph D3.18 whether or not they wish to do so.

14. The witness, the person carrying out the procedure and the suspect's legal practitioner, appropriate adult, friend or any interpreter for the witness, may be concealed from the sight of the individuals in the group they are observing, if the person carrying out the procedure considers this assists the conduct of the identification.

15. The police officer conducting a witness to a group identification must not discuss with the witness the forthcoming group identification and, in particular, must not disclose whether a previous witness has made any identification.

16. Anything said to, or by, the witness during the procedure about the identification should be said in the presence and hearing of the persons present at the procedure.

17. Appropriate arrangements must be made to make sure, before witnesses attend the group identification; they are not able to —

(a) communicate with each other about the case or overhear a witness who has already been given an opportunity to see the suspect in the group;

(b) see the suspect; or

(c) see, or be reminded of, any photographs or description of the suspect or be given any other indication of the suspect's identity.

18. Witnesses must be brought one at a time to the place where they are to observe the group. Immediately before the witness is asked to look at the group, the person conducting the procedure must tell the witness that the person the witness saw may, or may not, be in the group and that if the witness cannot make a positive identification, he or she should say so.

The witness must be asked to observe the group in which the suspect is to appear. The way in which the witness should do this will depend on whether the group is moving or stationary.

Moving group

19. When the group in which the suspect is to appear is moving, e.g. leaving an escalator, the provisions of paragraphs 20 to 24 should be followed.

20. If two or more suspects consent to a group identification, each should be the subject of separate identification procedures. These may be conducted consecutively on the same occasion.

21. The person conducting the procedure must tell the witness to observe the group and ask the witness to point out any person the witness thinks he or she saw on the specified earlier occasion.

22. Once the witness has been informed as in paragraph 21, the suspect should be allowed to take whatever position in the group the suspect wishes.

23. When the witness points out a person as in paragraph 21 the witness must, if practicable, be asked to take a closer look at the person to confirm the identification. If this is not practicable, or the witness cannot confirm the identification, the witness must be asked how sure he or she is that the person he or she has indicated is the relevant person.

24. The witness should continue to observe the group for the period which the person conducting the procedure reasonably believes is necessary in the circumstances for the witness to be able to make comparisons between the suspect and other individuals of broadly similar appearance to the suspect.

Stationary groups

25. When the group in which the suspect is to appear is stationary, e.g. people waiting in a queue, the provisions of paragraphs 26 to 29 should be followed.

26. If two or more suspects consent to a group identification, each should be subject to separate identification procedures unless they are of broadly similar appearance, in which case they may appear in the same group. When separate group identifications are held, the groups must be made up of different people.

27. The suspect may take whatever position in the group he or she wishes. If there is more than one witness, the suspect must be told, out of the sight and hearing of any witness, that the suspect can, if the suspect wishes, change his or her position in the group.

28. The witness must be asked to pass along, or amongst, the group and to look at each person in the group at least twice, taking as much care and time as possible according to the circumstances, before making an identification. Once the witness has done this, the witness must be asked whether the person he or she saw on the specified earlier occasion is in the group and to indicate any such person by whatever means the person conducting the procedure considers appropriate in the circumstances. If this is not practicable, the witness must be asked to point out any person the witness thinks he or she saw on the earlier occasion.

29. When the witness makes an indication as in paragraph 28, arrangements must be made, if practicable, for the witness to take a closer look at the person to confirm the identification. If this is not practicable, or the witness is unable to confirm the identification, the witness must be asked how sure the witness is that the person he or she has indicated is the relevant person.

All cases

30. If the suspect unreasonably delays joining the group, or having joined the group, deliberately conceals himself or herself from the sight of the witness, this may be treated as a refusal to cooperate in a group identification.

31. If the witness identifies a person other than the suspect, that person should be informed what has happened and asked if he or she is prepared to give his or her name and address. There is no obligation upon any member of the public to give these details. There is no duty to record any details of any other member of the public present in the group or at the place where the procedure is conducted.

32. When the group identification has been completed, the suspect must be asked whether he or she wishes to make any comments on the conduct of the procedure.

33. If the suspect has not been previously informed, he or she must be told of any identifications made by the witnesses.

C. Identification without the suspect's consent

34. Group identifications held covertly without the suspect's consent should, as far as practicable, follow the rules for conduct of group identification by consent.

35. A suspect has no right to have a legal practitioner, appropriate adult or friend present, as the identification will take place without the knowledge of the suspect.

36. Any number of suspects may be identified at the same time.

D. Identification at a police station

37. A group identification should not take place at a police station unless for reasons of safety or security or because it is not practicable to hold it anywhere else.

38. A group identification may take place either in a room equipped with a screen permitting witnesses to see members of the group without being seen, or anywhere else at a police station that the identification officer considers appropriate.

39. As many of the additional safeguards applicable to identification parades should be followed as the identification officer considers practicable in the circumstances.

E. Identifications involving prison inmates

40. A group identification involving a prison inmate may only be arranged in the prison or at a police station.

41. When a group identification takes place involving a prison inmate, whether in a prison or at a police station, the arrangements should follow those in paragraphs 37 to 39. If a group identification takes place within a prison, other inmates may participate. If an inmate is the suspect, he or she does not have to wear prison clothing for the group identification unless the other participants are wearing the same clothing.

F. Documentation

42. When a photograph or video is taken as in paragraph 8 or 9, a copy of the photograph or video must be supplied on request to the suspect or his or her legal practitioner within a reasonable time.

43. Paragraph D3.30 or D3.31, as appropriate, applies when a photograph or film taken in accordance with paragraph 8 or 9 includes the suspect.

44. A record of the conduct of any group identification must be made on forms provided for the purpose. This includes anything said by the witness or suspect about any identifications or the conduct of the procedure and any reasons why it was not practicable to comply with any of the provisions of this Code governing the conduct of group identifications.

ANNEX D – CONFRONTATION BY A WITNESS

1. Before the confrontation takes place, the witness must be told that the person he or she saw at the scene may, or may not, be the person he or she is to confront and that if the person he or she confronts is not the person at the scene the witness should say so.

2. Before the confrontation takes place the suspect or his or her legal practitioner must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect given by any witness who is to attend. When a broadcast or publication is made, as in paragraph D3.28, the suspect or his or her legal practitioner should also be allowed to view any material released to the media for the purposes of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided it is practicable to do so and would not unreasonably delay the investigation.

3. Force must not be used to make the suspect's face visible to the witness.

4. Confrontation must take place in the presence of the suspect's legal practitioner, interpreter or friend, unless this would cause unreasonable delay.

5. The suspect must be confronted independently by each witness, who must be asked “Is this the person?” If the witness identifies the person but is unable to confirm the identification, the witness must be asked how sure he or she is that the person is the one the witness saw on the earlier occasion.

6. The confrontation should normally take place at a police station, either in a normal room or one equipped with a screen permitting a witness to see the suspect without being seen. In both cases, the procedures are the same except that a room equipped with a screen may be used only when the suspect’s legal practitioner, friend or appropriate adult is present or the confrontation is recorded on video.

7. After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he or she has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence and the witness’ reply must be recorded.

ANNEX E – SHOWING PHOTOGRAPHS

A. Action

1. An officer of the rank of sergeant or above must be made responsible for supervising and directing the showing of photographs. The actual showing may be done by another officer (see paragraph D3.11).

2. The supervising officer must confirm that the first description of the suspect given by the witness has been recorded before the witness is shown the photographs. If the supervising officer is unable to confirm that the description has been recorded the officer must postpone showing the photographs.

3. Only one witness may be shown photographs at any one time. Each witness must be given as much privacy as practicable and must not be allowed to communicate with any other witness in the case.

4. The witness must be shown not less than 12 photographs at a time, which must, as far as possible, all be of a similar type.

5. When the witness is shown the photographs, he or she must be told that the photograph of the person he or she saw may, or may not, be amongst them and if the witness cannot make a positive identification, he or she should say so. The witness must also be told that he or she should not make a decision until he or she has viewed at least 12 photographs. The witness must not be prompted or guided in any way but must be left to make any selection without help.

6. If a witness makes a positive identification from photographs, unless the person identified is otherwise eliminated from enquiries or is not available, other witnesses must not be shown photographs. But both they, and the witness who has made the identification, must be asked to attend a video identification, an identification parade or group identification unless there is no dispute about the suspect’s identification.

7. If the witness makes a selection but is unable to confirm the identification, the person showing the photographs must ask the witness how sure he or she is that the photograph the witness has indicated is the person he or she saw on the specified earlier occasion.

8. When the use of a computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness has led to there being a known suspect who can be asked to participate in a video identification, appear on an identification parade or participate in a group identification, that likeness must not be shown to other potential witnesses.

9. When a witness attending a video identification, an identification parade or group identification has previously been shown photographs or computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness (and it is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to make the identification officer aware that this is the case), the suspect and his or her legal practitioner must be informed of this fact before the identification procedure takes place.

10. None of the photographs shown is to be destroyed, whether or not an identification is made, as they may be required for production in court. The photographs must be numbered and a separate photograph taken of the frame or part of the album from which the witness made an identification as an aid to reconstituting it.

B. Documentation

11. Whether or not an identification is made, a record must be kept of the showing of photographs on forms provided for the purpose. This includes anything said by the witness about any identification or the conduct of the procedure, any reasons it was not practicable to comply with any of the provisions of this Code governing the showing of photographs, and the name and rank of the supervising officer.

12. The supervising officer must inspect and sign the record as soon as practicable.

ANNEX F – FINGERPRINTS, FOOTWEAR IMPRESSIONS AND SAMPLES; DESTRUCTION AND SPECULATIVE SEARCHES

Note: Annex F of Home Office Code D was based on s.64 of the UK PACE Act 1984 as extensively amended. That section has been replaced by ss. 64D to 64U by the Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 (which is not yet in force in the UK.)

Annex F will presumably be replaced in due course. Meanwhile, the rules on retention and destruction of samples and DNA profiles in the Falkland Islands should be taken to be as in sections 98 to 114 of the Ordinance.

Existing Annex F is set out here for reference only.

A. Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples taken in connection with a criminal investigation

1. When fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA samples are taken from a person in connection with an investigation and the person is not suspected of having committed the offence (see Note F1), they must be destroyed as soon as they have fulfilled the purpose for which they were taken unless —

(a) they were taken for the purposes of an investigation of an offence for which a person has been convicted; and

(b) fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples were also taken from the convicted person for the purposes of that investigation.

However, subject to paragraph 2, the fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples, and the information derived from samples, may not be used in the investigation of any offence or in evidence against the person who is, or would be, entitled to the destruction of the fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples (see Note F2).

2. The requirement to destroy fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA samples, and information derived from samples, and restrictions on their retention and use in paragraph 1, do not apply if the person from whom they were taken gives written consent for the fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples to be retained and used after they have fulfilled the purpose for which they were taken (see Note F1).

3. When a person's fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples are to be destroyed —

(a) any copies of the fingerprints and footwear impressions must also be destroyed;

(b) the person may witness the destruction of the fingerprints, footwear impressions or copies if the person asks to do so within 5 days of being informed that destruction is required;

(c) access to relevant computer fingerprint data must be made impossible as soon as practicable and the person must be given a certificate to this effect within 3 months of asking; and

(d) neither the fingerprints, footwear impressions, the sample, nor any information derived from the sample may be used in the investigation of any offence or in evidence against the person who is, or would be, entitled to its destruction.

4. Fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples, and the information derived from samples taken in connection with the investigation of an offence, which are not required to be destroyed, may be retained after they have fulfilled the purposes for which they were taken. They may be used only for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution in, as well as outside, the Falkland Islands, and may also be subject to a speculative search. This includes checking them against other fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA records held by, or on behalf of, the police and other law enforcement authorities in, as well as outside, the Falkland Islands.

B. Fingerprints taken in connection with immigration enquiries

[Omitted]

Notes for Guidance

F1. Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples given voluntarily for the purposes of elimination play an important part in many police investigations. It is therefore important to make sure that innocent volunteers are not deterred from participating and that their consent to their fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA being used for the purposes of a specific investigation is fully informed and voluntary. If the police or volunteer seek to have the fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples retained for use after the specific investigation ends, it is important the volunteer's consent to this is also fully informed and voluntary.

Examples of consent for:

- DNA/fingerprints/footwear impressions - to be used only for the purposes of a specific investigation;
- DNA/fingerprints/footwear impressions - to be used in the specific investigation and retained by the police for future use.

To minimise the risk of confusion, each consent should be physically separate and the volunteer should be asked to sign each consent.

(a) DNA:

- (i) DNA sample taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screening and to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards:

“I consent to my DNA/mouth swab being taken for forensic analysis. I understand that the sample will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my profile will only be compared to the crime stain profile from this enquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the sample may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of it.”

- (ii) DNA sample to be retained on the National DNA database and used in the future:

“I consent to my DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that this sample may be checked against other DNA records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for the sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent.”

(b) Fingerprints:

- (i) Fingerprints taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screening and to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards:

“I consent to my fingerprints being taken for elimination purposes. I understand that the fingerprints will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my fingerprints will only be compared to the fingerprints from this enquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the fingerprints may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of it.”

- (ii) Fingerprints to be retained for future use:

“I consent to my fingerprints being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that my fingerprints may be checked against other records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for my fingerprints to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent.”

(c) Footwear impressions:

- (i) Footwear impressions taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screening and to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards:

“I consent to my footwear impressions being taken for elimination purposes. I understand that the footwear impressions will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my footwear impressions will only be compared to the footwear impressions from this enquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the footwear impressions may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of it.”

- (ii) Footwear impressions to be retained for future use:

“I consent to my footwear impressions being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution, either nationally or internationally. I understand that my footwear impressions may be checked against other records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for my footwear impressions to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent.”

F2. The provisions for the retention of fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples in paragraph 1 allow for all fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples in a case to be available for any subsequent miscarriage of justice investigation.

ANNEX G –
REQUIREMENT FOR A PERSON TO ATTEND A PLACE OF LAWFUL CUSTODY FOR FINGERPRINTS AND SAMPLES

1. A requirement under Schedule 2 of the Ordinance for a person to attend a place of lawful custody to have fingerprints or samples taken —
 - (a) must give the person a period of at least 7 days within which to attend the place of lawful custody; and
 - (b) may direct the person to attend at a specified time of day or between specified times of day.
2. When specifying the period and times of attendance, the officer making the requirements must consider whether the fingerprints or samples could reasonably be taken at a time when the person is required to attend the place of lawful custody for any other reason. See Note G1.
3. An officer of the rank of sergeant or above may authorise a period shorter than 7 days if there is an urgent need for a person's fingerprints or sample for the purposes of the investigation of an offence. The fact of the authorisation and the reasons for giving it must be recorded as soon as practicable.
4. The police officer making a requirement and the person to whom it applies may agree to vary it so as to specify any period within which, or date or time at which, the person is to attend. However, variation must not have effect for the purposes of enforcement, unless it is confirmed by the officer in writing.

Notes for Guidance

G1. The specified period within which the person is to attend need not fall within the period allowed (if applicable) for making the requirement.

G2. To justify the arrest without warrant of a person who fails to comply with a requirement, (see paragraph D4.4A above), the officer making the requirement, or confirming a variation, should be prepared to explain how, when and where the requirement was made or the variation was confirmed and what steps were taken to ensure that the person understood what to do and the consequences of not complying with the requirement.

Notes for Guidance

E1. General

E1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

E1.02. The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the suspects to whom they apply, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

E1.1. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

E1.2. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation.

E1.3. Nothing in this Code detracts from the requirements of Code C (the Code of Practice for the detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers).

E1.4. The provisions of this Code do not apply to people detained in custody for searches under stop and search powers, except as required by Code A.

E1.5. In this Code, “legal practitioner” means a person who is entitled to practise as an advocate or as a solicitor, attorney or proctor in any court having unlimited jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in some part of the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland.

E1.6. In this Code, “recording media” means any removable, physical audio recording medium (such as magnetic type, optical disc or solid state memory) which can be played and copied.

E1.7. Sections E2 to E6 of this Code set out provisions which apply to all interviews with suspects, including provisions which apply only to interviews recorded using removable media. Section E7 applies to interviews recorded using a secure digital network.

E1.8. [Omitted]

E1.9. [Omitted]

E1.10. References to a pocket book in this Code include any official report book issued to police officers.

E1.11. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a suspect of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code (see Note 1G to Code C).

E1.12. Any suspect who appears to be under 18 must be treated as a youth for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence that he or she is older.

E1.13. A suspect who appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or who has difficulty communicating orally because of a speech impediment, must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary.

E2. Recording and sealing master recordings

E2.1. Recording of interviews must be carried out openly to instil confidence in its reliability as an impartial and accurate record of the interview.

E2.2. One recording, the master recording, will be sealed in the suspect's presence. A second recording will be used as a working copy. The master recording is either of all the recordings made in a multiple deck/drive machine or the only recording in a single deck/drive machine. The working copy is either the repeat recording made in a multiple deck/drive machine or a copy of the master recording made by a single deck/drive machine (see Note 2A).

E2.3. Nothing in this Code requires the identity of an officer conducting an interview to be recorded or disclosed if the interviewer reasonably believes recording or disclosing his or her identity might put the interviewer in danger. In these cases interviewers should use warrant or other identification numbers (see Note 2C).

Notes for Guidance

2A. The purpose of sealing the master recording in the suspect's presence is to show the recording's integrity is preserved. If a single deck/drive machine is used the working copy of the master recording must be made in the suspect's presence and without the master recording leaving the suspect's sight. The working copy must be used for making further copies if needed.

2B. [Omitted]

2C. The purpose of paragraph E2.3 is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to those involved. In cases of doubt, an officer of inspector rank or above should be consulted.

E3. Interviews to be audio recorded

E3.1. Subject to paragraphs E3.3 and E3.4, audio recording must be used at a place of lawful custody for any interview —

(a) with a person cautioned under section C10 of Code C in respect of any imprisonable offence (see Note 3A);

(b) which takes place as a result of an interviewer exceptionally putting further questions to a suspect about an imprisonable offence after the suspect has been charged with, or told he or she may be prosecuted for, that offence (see paragraph C16.5 of Code C);

(c) when an interviewer wishes to tell a person, after the person has been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, an offence described in paragraph E3.1(a), about any written statement or interview with another person (see paragraph C16.4 of Code C).

E3.2. [Omitted]

E3.3. A police officer of the rank of sergeant or above may authorise the interviewer not to audio record the interview if it is —

(a) not reasonably practicable because of equipment failure or the unavailability of a suitable interview room or recorder and the authorising officer considers, on reasonable grounds, that the interview should not be delayed; or

(b) clear from the outset there will not be a prosecution.

(Note: In these cases the interview should be recorded in writing in accordance with section C11 of Code C. In all cases the authorising officer must record the specific reasons for not audio recording (see Note 3B)).

E3.4. If a suspect refuses to go into or remain in a suitable interview room (see paragraph C12.5 of Code C) and a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above considers, on reasonable grounds, that the interview should not be delayed, the interview may, at the that officer's discretion, be conducted in a cell using portable recording equipment or, if none is available, recorded in writing as in section C11 of Code C. The reasons for this must be recorded.

E3.5. The whole of each interview must be audio recorded, including the taking and reading back of any statement.

E3.6. A sign or indicator which is visible to the suspect must show when the recording equipment is recording.

Notes for Guidance

3A. Nothing in this Code is intended to preclude audio recording at police discretion of interviews at a place of lawful custody with people cautioned in respect of offences not covered by paragraph E3.1, or responses made by persons after they have been charged with, or told they may be prosecuted for, an offence, provided that this Code is complied with.

3AA. Attention is drawn to the provisions of Code C about the matters to be considered when deciding whether a detained person is fit to be interviewed.

3AB. Code C sets out the circumstances in which a suspect may be questioned about an offence after being charged with it.

3B. A decision not to audio record an interview for any reason may be the subject of comment in court. The authorising officer should be prepared to justify that decision.

3C. [Omitted]

E4. The interview

A. General

E4.1. The provisions of Code C —

- (a) sections C10 and C11, and the applicable Notes for Guidance, apply to the conduct of interviews to which this Code applies;
- (b) paragraphs C11.7 to C11.14 apply only when a written record is needed.

E4.2. Paragraphs C10.10 and C10.11 and Annex C of Code C describe the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from a suspect's failure or refusal to say anything about his or her involvement in the offence when interviewed or after being charged or informed he or she may be prosecuted, and how it affects the terms of the caution and determines if and by whom a special warning under section 367 or 368 of the Ordinance can be given.

B. Commencement of interviews

E4.3. When the suspect is brought into the interview room the interviewer must, without delay but in the suspect's sight, load the recorder with new recording media and set it to record. The recording media must be unwrapped or opened in the suspect's presence. (This paragraph does not apply to interviews recorded using a secure digital network, as to which see section E7.)

E4.4. The interviewer should tell the suspect about the recording process and point out the sign or indicator which shows that the recording equipment is activated and recording (see paragraph E3.6). The interviewer must —

- (a) say the interview is being audibly recorded;
- (b) subject to paragraph E2.3, give his or her name and rank and that of any other police officer present;
- (c) ask the suspect and any other party present, such as a legal practitioner, to identify himself or herself (see Note 4A);
- (d) state the date, time of commencement and place of the interview;
- (e) state that the suspect will be given a notice about what will happen to the copies of the recording. (This sub-paragraph does not apply to interviews recorded using a secure digital network, as to which see section E7).

E4.5. The interviewer must —

(a) caution the suspect (see section C10 of Code C);

(b) remind the suspect of his or her entitlement to obtain independent legal advice (see paragraph C11.2 of Code C).

E4.6. The interviewer must put to the suspect any significant statement or silence (see paragraph C11.4A of Code C).

C. Interviews with deaf persons

E4.7. If the suspect is deaf or is suspected of having impaired hearing, the interviewer must make a written note of the interview in accordance with Code C at the same time as audio recording it in accordance with this Code (see Notes 4B and 4C).

D. Objections and complaints by the suspect

E4.8. If the suspect objects to the interview being audibly recorded at the outset, during the interview or during a break, the interviewer must explain that the interview is being audibly recorded and that this Code requires the suspect's objections to be recorded on the audio recording. When any objections have been audibly recorded or the suspect has refused to have his or her objections recorded, the interviewer must say that he or she is turning off the recorder, give the reasons and turn it off. The interviewer must then make a written record of the interview as in section C11 of Code C. If, however, the interviewer reasonably considers that he or she may proceed to question the suspect with the audio recording still on, the interviewer may do so. This procedure also applies in cases where the suspect has previously objected to the interview being visually recorded (see F4.8 of Code F), and the investigating officer has decided to audibly record the interview (see Note 4D).

E4.9. If in the course of an interview a complaint is made by or on behalf of the person being questioned concerning the provisions of this Code or Code C, the interviewer must act as in paragraph C12.9 of Code C (see Notes 4E and 4F).

E4.10. If the suspect indicates he or she wishes to tell the interviewer about matters not directly connected with the offence, and is unwilling for these matters to be audio recorded, the suspect should be given the opportunity to tell the interviewer at the end of the formal interview.

E. Changing recording media

F4.11. If the recording media is not of sufficient length to record all of the interview with the suspect, further recording media must be used. When the recording equipment indicates that the recording media has only a short time left to run, the interviewer must advise the suspect and round off that part of the interview. If the interviewer wishes to continue the interview but does not already have further recording media with him, he or she must obtain more media. The suspect should not be left unattended in the interview room. The interviewer will remove the recording media from the recording equipment and insert a new one which has been unwrapped or otherwise opened in the suspect's presence. The recording equipment must then be set to record.

Care must be taken, particularly when a number of sets of recording media have been used, to ensure that there is no confusion between them. This could be achieved by marking the sets of recording media with consecutive identification numbers.

F. Taking a break during interview

E4.12. When a break is taken, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reason for it and the time must be recorded on the audio recording.

E4.12A. When the break is taken and the interview room vacated by the suspect, the recording medium must be removed from the recorder and the procedures for the conclusion of an interview followed (see paragraph E4.18).

E4.13. When a break is a short one and both the suspect and an interviewer remain in the interview room, the recording may be stopped. There is no need to remove the recording medium and when the interview recommences the recording should continue on the same recording medium. The time at which the interview recommences must be recorded on the audio recording.

E4.14. After any break in the interview the interviewer must, before resuming the interview, remind the person being questioned that he or she remains under caution or, if there is any doubt, give the caution in full again (see Note 4G).

G. Failure of recording equipment

E4.15. If there is an equipment failure which can be rectified quickly, e.g. by inserting a new recording medium; the interviewer must follow the appropriate procedures as in paragraph E4.11. When the recording is resumed the interviewer must explain what happened and record the time at which the interview recommences. If, however, it will not be possible to continue recording on that recorder and no replacement recorder is readily available, the interview may continue without being audibly recorded. If this happens, the interviewer must seek the authority of a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above as in paragraph E3.3 (see Note 4H).

H. Removing recording media from the recorder

E4.16. When a recording medium is removed from the recorder during the interview, it must be retained and the procedures in paragraph E4.18 followed.

I. Conclusion of interview

E4.17. At the conclusion of the interview, the suspect must be offered the opportunity to clarify anything that he or she has said and asked if there is anything he or she wishes to add.

E4.18. At the conclusion of the interview, including the taking and reading back of any written statement, the time must be recorded and the recording must be stopped. The interviewer must seal the master recording with a master recording label and treat it as an exhibit in accordance with standing orders, policies and procedures of the Police Force.

The interviewer must sign the label and ask the suspect and any third party present during the interview to sign it. If the suspect or third party refuse to sign the label an officer of the rank of sergeant or above, or, if such an officer is not available, the custody officer, must be called into the interview room and, subject to paragraph E2.3, asked to sign it.

E4.19. The suspect must be given a notice which explains —

(a) how the audio recording will be used;

(b) the arrangements for access to it;

(c) that if the person is charged or informed that he or she will be prosecuted, a copy of the audio recording will be supplied as soon as practicable or as otherwise agreed between the suspect and the police, or on the order of a court.

Notes for Guidance

4A. For the purpose of voice identification, the interviewer should ask the suspect and any other people present to identify themselves.

4B. This provision is to give a person who is deaf or has impaired hearing equivalent rights of access to the full interview record as far as is possible using audio recording.

4C. The provisions of section C13 of Code C on interpreters for deaf persons or for interviews with suspects who have difficulty understanding English continue to apply.

4D. The interviewer should remember that a decision to continue recording against the wishes of the suspect may be the subject of comment in court.

4E. If the custody officer is called to deal with the complaint, the recorder should, if possible, be left on until the custody officer has entered the room and spoken to the person being interviewed. Continuation or termination of the interview should be at the interviewer's discretion, pending action by an officer of the rank of inspector or above under paragraph C9.2 of Code C.

4F. If the complaint is about a matter not connected with this Code or Code C, the decision to continue is at the interviewer's discretion. When the interviewer decides to continue the interview, he or she must tell the suspect that the complaint will be brought to the custody officer's attention at the conclusion of the interview. When the interview is concluded the interviewer must, as soon as practicable, inform the custody officer about the existence and nature of the complaint made.

4FA. In considering whether to caution again after a break, the officer should bear in mind that he or she may have to satisfy a court that the suspect understood that he or she was still under caution when the interview resumed.

4G. The interviewer should remember that it may be necessary to show to the court that nothing occurred during a break or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence. After a break or at the beginning of a subsequent interview, the interviewer should consider summarising on the record the reason for the break and confirming this with the suspect.

4H. If the interview is being recorded and the medium or the recording equipment fails, the officer conducting the interview should stop the interview immediately. If part of the interview is unaffected by the error and is still accessible on the medium, that medium must be copied and sealed in the suspect's presence and the interview recommenced using new equipment or media as required. If the content of the interview has been lost in its entirety the medium should be sealed in the suspect's presence and the interview begun again. If the recording equipment cannot be fixed or no replacement is immediately available, the interview should be recorded in accordance with section C11 of Code C.

E5. After the interview

E5.1. The interviewer must make a note in his or her pocket book that the interview has taken place and was audibly recorded, of its time, duration and date and of the master recording's identification number.

E5.2. If no proceedings follow in respect of the person whose interview was recorded, the recording medium must be kept securely as in paragraph E6.1 and Note 6A.

Note for Guidance

5A. [Omitted]

E6. Media security

E6.1. The officer in charge of each place of lawful custody at which interviews with suspects are recorded must make arrangements for master recordings to be kept securely and their movements accounted for on the same basis as material which may be used for evidential purposes, in accordance with standing orders, policies and procedures of the Police Force (see Note 6A).

E6.2. A police officer has no authority to break the seal on a master recording required for criminal trial or appeal proceedings. If it is necessary to gain access to the master recording, the police officer must arrange for its seal to be broken in the presence of a representative of the Attorney General. The defendant or his or her legal practitioner should be informed and given a reasonable opportunity to be present. If the defendant or his or her legal practitioner is present one of them must be invited to reseal and sign the master recording. If both refuse or neither is present the resealing and signing must be done by the representative of the Attorney General (see Note 6B).

E6.2A. When the master recording seal is broken, a record must be made of the procedure followed, including the date, time, place and persons present.

E6.3. The Chief Police Officer must establish arrangements for breaking the seal of the master copy where no criminal proceedings result, or the criminal proceedings to which the interview relates have been concluded and it becomes necessary to break the seal. These arrangements should be those which the Chief Police Officer considers are reasonably necessary to demonstrate to the person interviewed and any other party who may wish to use or refer to the interview record that the master copy has not been tampered with and that the interview record remains accurate (see Note 6D).

E6.4. Subject to paragraph E6.6, a representative of the prosecution and each defendant must be given a reasonable opportunity to be present when the seal is broken, the master copy copied and resealed.

E6.5. If one or more of the parties is not present when the master copy seal is broken because they cannot be contacted or refuse to attend or paragraph E6.6 applies, arrangements should be made for an independent person to be present. Alternatively, or as an additional safeguard, arrangements should be made for a film or photographs to be taken of the procedure.

E6.6. Paragraph E6.5 does not require a person to be given an opportunity to be present if —

(a) it is necessary to break the master copy seal for the proper and effective further investigation of the original offence or the investigation of some other offence; and

(b) the officer in charge of the investigation has reasonable grounds to suspect that allowing an opportunity might prejudice any such investigation or criminal proceedings which may be brought as a result or endanger any person (see Note 6E).

Notes for Guidance

6A. This section is concerned with the security of the master recording sealed at the conclusion of the interview. Care must be taken of working copies of recordings because their loss or destruction may lead to the need to access master recordings.

6B. If the recording has been delivered to the Supreme Court for safe keeping in a trial on indictment, the Attorney General will apply to the Registrar of the court for the release of the recording for unsealing by the Attorney General.

6C. Reference to the Attorney General in this part of the Code include any other body or person with a statutory responsibility for prosecution for whom the police conduct any recorded interviews.

6D. The most common reasons for needing access to master copies that are not required for criminal proceedings arise from civil actions and complaints against police and civil actions between individuals arising out of allegations of crime investigated by police.

6E. Paragraph E6.6 could apply, for example, when one or more of the outcomes or likely outcomes of the investigation might be —

(a) the prosecution of one or more of the original suspects;

(b) the prosecution of someone previously not suspected, including someone who was originally a witness; and

(c) any original suspect being treated as a prosecution witness and when premature disclosure of any police action, particularly through contact with any parties involved, could lead to a real risk of compromising the investigation and endangering witnesses.

6F. Police officers must arrange that, as far as possible, tape recording arrangements are unobtrusive.

E7. Recording of Interviews by Secure Digital Network

E7.1. A secure digital network does not use removable media and this section specifies the provisions which will apply when a secure digital network is used.

E7.2. A ‘secure digital network’ is a computer network system which enables an original interview recording to be stored as a digital multi-media file or a series of such files, on a secure file server approved for the purpose by the Governor.

E7.2A. The provisions of sections E1 to E6 of this Code which refer or apply only to removable media do not apply to a secure digital network recording.

E7.3. The following requirements are solely applicable to the use of a secure digital network for the recording of interviews.

A. Application of sections E1 to E6 of this Code

E7.4. Sections E1 to E6 of this Code apply except —

- (a) paragraph E2.2 under “Recording and sealing of master recordings”;
- (b) paragraph E4.3 under “(b) Commencement of interviews”;
- (c) paragraph E4.4 (e) under “(b) Commencement of interviews”;
- (d) paragraphs E4.11 to E4.19 under “(e) Changing recording media”, “(f) Taking a break during interview”, “(g) Failure of recording equipment”, “(h) Removing recording media from the recorder” and “(i) Conclusion of interview”;
- (e) paragraphs E6.1 to E6.4 and Notes 6A to 6C under “Media security”.

B. Commencement of Interview

E7.5. When the suspect is brought into the interview room, the interviewer must without delay and in the sight of the suspect switch on the recording equipment and enter the information necessary to log on to the secure network and start recording.

E7.6. The interviewer must then inform the suspect that the interview is being recorded using a secure digital network and that recording has commenced.

E7.7. In addition to the requirements of paragraph E4.4 (a) to (d) above, the interviewer must inform the suspect that —

- (a) if the suspect is charged or informed that he or she will be prosecuted, he or she will be given access to the recording of the interview, but otherwise will only be given access as agreed with the police or on the order of a court; and

(b) the suspect will be given a written notice at the end of the interview setting out his or her rights to access the recording and what will happen to the recording.

C. Taking a break during interview

E7.8. When a break is taken, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reason for it and the time must be recorded on the audio recording. The recording must be stopped and the procedures in paragraphs E7.12 and E7.13 for the conclusion of an interview followed.

E7.9. When the interview recommences the procedures in paragraphs E7.5 to E7.7 for commencing an interview must be followed to create a new file to record the continuation of the interview. The time the interview recommences must be recorded on the audio recording.

E7.10. After any break in the interview the interviewer must, before resuming the interview, remind the suspect that he or she remains under caution or, if there is any doubt, give the caution in full again (see Note 4G.)

D. Failure of recording equipment

E7.11. If there is an equipment failure which can be rectified quickly, e.g. by commencing a new secure digital network recording; the interviewer must follow the appropriate procedures as in paragraphs E7.8 to E7.10. When the recording is resumed the interviewer must explain what happened and record the time the interview recommences. If it is not possible to continue recording on the secure digital network, the interview should be recorded on removable media as in paragraph E4.3 unless the necessary equipment is not available. If this happens the interview may continue without being audibly recorded and the interviewer must seek the authority of a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above, as in paragraph E3.3 (see Note 4H).

E. Conclusion of interview

E7.12. At the conclusion of the interview, the suspect must be offered the opportunity to clarify anything he or she has said and asked if there is anything he or she wants to add.

E7.13. At the conclusion of the interview, including the taking and reading back of any written statement —

(a) the time must be orally recorded;

(b) the suspect must be given a notice which explains —

(i) how the audio recording will be used;

(ii) the arrangements for access to it;

(iii) that if the suspect is charged or informed that he or she will be prosecuted, he or she will be given access to the recording of the interview either electronically or by being given a copy on removable recording media, but otherwise the suspect will only be given access as agreed with the police or on the order of a court (see Note 7A);

(c) the suspect must be asked to confirm that he or she has received a copy of the notice at paragraph E7.13(b). If the suspect fails to accept or to acknowledge receipt of the notice, the interviewer must state for the recording that a copy of the notice has been provided to the suspect and that he or she has refused to take a copy of the notice or has refused to acknowledge receipt;

(d) the time must be recorded and the interviewer must notify the suspect that the recording is being saved to the secure network. The interviewer must save the recording in the presence of the suspect. The suspect must then be informed that the interview is terminated.

F. After the interview

E7.14. The interviewer must make a note in his or her pocket book that the interview has taken place and was audibly recorded, of its time, duration and date and of the original recording's identification number.

E7.15. If no proceedings follow in respect of the person whose interview was recorded, the recordings must be kept securely as in paragraphs E7.16 and 7.17 (see Note 5A.)

G. Security of secure digital network interview records

E7.16. Interview record files must be stored in read only format on non-removable storage devices, for example, hard disk drives, to ensure their integrity. The recordings must first be saved locally to a secure non-removable device before being transferred to the remote network device. If for any reason the network connection fails, the recording remains on the local device and must be transferred when the network connections are restored.

E7.17. Access to interview recordings, including copying to removable media, must be strictly controlled and monitored to ensure that access is restricted to those who have been given specific permission to access for specified purposes when this is necessary. For example, police officers and staff of the Attorney General's Chambers involved in the preparation of any prosecution case, persons interviewed if they have been charged or informed they may be prosecuted, and their legal practitioners.

Note for Guidance

7A. The notice at paragraph E7.13 above should provide a brief explanation of the secure digital network and how access to the recording is strictly limited. The notice should also explain the rights of the suspect, his or her legal practitioner, the police and the prosecutor to access to the recording of the interview. Space should be provided on the form to insert the date and the file reference number for the interview.

F1. General

(Note: There is no statutory requirement to visually record interviews, but if it is done, it must be done in accordance with this Code).

F1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

F1.02. The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the suspects to whom they apply, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

F1.1. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

F1.2. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation.

E1.3. Nothing in this Code detracts from the requirements of Code C (the Code of Practice for the detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers).

F1.4. The interviews to which this Code applies are set out in paragraphs F3.1 to F3.3.

F1.4A. In this Code, “recording media” means any removable, physical audio recording medium (such as magnetic tape, optical disc or solid state memory) which can be played and copied.

F1.4B. In this Code, ‘appropriate adult’ and ‘legal practitioner’ have the meanings given those terms by section 2 of the Ordinance, that is to say —

“appropriate adult” means —

(c) in relation to a youth —

(i) the youth’s parent or guardian;

(ii) if the youth is in the care of the Department - a person representing the Department;
or

(iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or a person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

(Note: The ‘Department’ means the Social Services Department.)

(d) in relation to a person who is mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable —

(i) a relative, guardian or other person responsible for the person's care or custody;

(ii) someone experienced in dealing with mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable people but who is not a police officer or person employed by the police; or

(iii) if a person described in (i) or (ii) is not available - any person over the age of 21 who is not a police officer or person employed by the police and who is considered suitable by the custody officer;

“legal practitioner” means a person who is entitled to practise as an advocate or as a solicitor, attorney or proctor in any court having unlimited jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in some part of the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland.

F1.5. In this Code, the term “interview” has the same meaning as in Code C, i.e. the questioning of a person regarding his or her involvement or suspected involvement in a criminal offence or offences which must be carried out under caution.

F1.5A. The provisions and Notes for Guidance in Code C applicable to the terms ‘interview’, ‘appropriate adult’ and ‘legal practitioner’ apply to this Code where appropriate.

F1.6. Any reference in this Code to visual recording is to be taken to mean visual recording with sound.

F1.7. References to a ‘pocket book’ in this Code include any official report book issued to police officers.

F1.8. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a suspect of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code (see Note 1G to Code C).

F1.9. Any suspect who appears to be under 18 must be treated as a youth for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence that he or she is older.

F1.10. A suspect who appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or who has difficulty communicating orally because of a speech impediment, must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary.

Note for Guidance

1A. [Omitted]

F2. Recording and sealing of master tapes

F2.1. Recording of interviews must be carried out openly to instil confidence in its reliability as an impartial and accurate record of the interview.

F2.2. Any camera used must be placed in the interview room so as to ensure coverage of as much of the room as is practicably possible while the interviews are taking place (see Note 2A).

F2.3. The recording media must be of a high quality, new and previously unused. When the recording media is placed in the recorder and switched on to record, the correct date and time, in hours, minutes and seconds, must be superimposed automatically, second by second, during the whole recording (see Note 2B).

F2.4. One copy of the recording media, referred to in this Code as the master copy, must be sealed before it leaves the presence of the suspect. A second copy must be used as a working copy (see Notes 2C and 2D).

F2.5. Nothing in this Code requires the identity of an officer to be recorded or disclosed if the officer reasonably believes that recording or disclosing the officer's name might put him or her in danger. In this case, the officer must have his or her back to the camera and must use his or her warrant or other identification number. Such instances and the reasons for them must be recorded in the custody record (see Note 2E).

Notes for Guidance

2A. Interviewing officers should arrange that, as far as possible, visual recording arrangements are unobtrusive. It must be clear to the suspect, however, that there is no opportunity to interfere with the recording equipment or the recording medium.

2B. In this context, the recording media will be of either a VHS or digital CD format and should be capable of having an image of the date and time superimposed upon it as it records the interview.

2C. The purpose of sealing the master copy before it leaves the presence of the suspect is to establish his or her confidence that the integrity of the copy is preserved.

2D. The recording of the interview may be used for identification procedures in accordance with paragraph 3.21 or Annex A of Code D.

2E. The purpose of the paragraph F2.5 is to protect police officers and others involved in the investigation of serious organised crime or the arrest of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that the person arrested or his or her associates may threaten or cause harm to the officer or the officer's family or personal property.

F3. Interviews to be visually recorded

F3.1. Subject to paragraph F3.2, if an interviewing officer is considering making a visual recording, it might be appropriate for an interview —

- (a) with a suspect in respect of an imprisonable offence (see Notes 3A and 3B);

(b) which takes place as a result of an interviewer exceptionally putting further questions to a suspect about an imprisonable offence after the suspect has been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for, that offence (see Note 3C);

(c) in which an interviewer wishes to bring to the notice of a person, after that person has been charged with, or informed that he or she may be prosecuted for an offence described in sub-paragraph (a), any written statement made by another person, or the content of an interview with another person (see Note 3D);

(d) with, or in the presence of, a deaf or deaf/blind or speech impaired person who uses sign language to communicate;

(e) with, or in the presence of, anyone who requires an “appropriate adult”; or

(f) in any case where the suspect or his or her representative requests that the interview be recorded visually.

F3.2. [Omitted]

F3.3. A police officer of the rank of sergeant or above may authorise the interviewing officer not to record the interview visually —

(a) if it is not reasonably practicable to do so because of failure of the equipment, or the non-availability of a suitable interview room, or recorder, and the interviewing officer considers on reasonable grounds that the interview should not be delayed until the failure has been rectified or a suitable room or recorder becomes available. In such cases the authorising officer may authorise the interviewing officer to audio record the interview in accordance with the guidance set out in Code E;

(b) if it is clear from the outset that no prosecution will ensue; or

(c) if it is not practicable to do so because at the time the person resists being taken to a suitable interview room or other location which would enable the interview to be recorded, or otherwise fails or refuses to go into such a room or location, and the interviewing officer considers on reasonable grounds that the interview should not be delayed until these conditions cease to apply.

F3.3A. In a case as mentioned in sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph F3.3, the authorising officer may authorise the interviewing officer to audio record the interview in accordance with the guidance set out in Code E, or if this is not feasible to record the interview in writing as in section C11 of Code C.

In all cases mentioned in paragraph F3.3, the interviewing officer must make a note in the custody record of the reasons for not taking a visual record (see Note 3F).

F3.4. When a person who is voluntarily attending a place of lawful custody is required to be cautioned in accordance with Code C prior to being interviewed, the subsequent interview must be recorded, unless the custody officer gives authority in accordance with paragraph F3.3 for the interview not to be so recorded.

F3.5. The whole of each interview must be recorded visually, including the taking and reading back of any statement.

F3.6. A visible illuminated sign or indicator must light and remain on at all times when the recording equipment is activated or capable of recording or transmitting any signal or information.

Notes for Guidance

3A. Nothing in the Code is intended to preclude visual recording at police discretion of interviews at a place of lawful custody with people cautioned in respect of offences not covered by paragraph F3.1, or responses made by interviewees after they have been charged with, or informed they may be prosecuted for, an offence, provided that this Code is complied with.

3B. Attention is drawn to the provisions of Code C about the matters to be considered when deciding whether a detained person is fit to be interviewed.

3C. Code C sets out the circumstances in which a suspect may be questioned about an offence after being charged with it.

3D. Code C sets out the procedures to be followed when, after charge, a person's attention is drawn to a statement made by another person. One method of bringing the content of an interview with another person to the notice of a suspect may be to play him or her a recording of that interview.

3E. [Omitted]

3F. A decision not to record an interview visually for any reason may be the subject of comment in court. The authorising officer should therefore be prepared to justify his or her decision in each case.

F4. The Interview

A. General

F4.1. The provisions of Code C in relation to cautions and interviews and the Notes for Guidance applicable to those provisions applies to the conduct of interviews to which this Code applies.

F4.2. Particular attention is drawn to those parts of Code C that describe the restrictions on drawing adverse inferences from a suspect's failure or refusal to say anything about his or her involvement in the offence when interviewed, or after being charged or informed that he or she may be prosecuted, and how those restrictions affect the terms of the caution and determine whether a special warning under section 367 or 368 of the Ordinance should be given.

B. Commencement of interviews

F4.3. When the suspect is brought into the interview room the interviewer must without delay, but in sight of the suspect, load the recording equipment and set it to record. The recording medium must be unwrapped or otherwise opened in the presence of the suspect (see Note 4A).

F4.4. The interviewer must then tell the suspect formally about the visual recording and point out the sign or indicator which shows that the recording equipment is activated and recording (see paragraph F3.6). The interviewer must —

- (a) explain that the interview is being visually recorded;
- (b) subject to paragraph F2.5, give his or her name and rank, and that of any other police officer present;
- (c) ask the suspect and any other party present (e.g. a legal practitioner) to identify themselves;
- (d) state the date, time of commencement and place of the interview; and
- (e) state that the suspect will be given a notice about what will happen to the recording.

F4.5. The interviewer must then caution the suspect, in the form set out in Code C, and remind the suspect of his or her entitlement to obtain independent legal advice and that the suspect can speak to a legal practitioner on the telephone.

F4.6. The interviewer must then put to the suspect any significant statement or silence (i.e. failure or refusal to answer a question or to answer it satisfactorily) which occurred before the start of the interview, and must ask the suspect whether he or she wishes to confirm or deny that earlier statement or silence or whether he or she wishes to add anything. The definition of a “significant” statement or silence is the same as that set out in Code C.

C. Interviews with the deaf

F4.7. If the suspect is deaf or there is doubt about his or her hearing ability, the provisions of Code C on interpreters for the deaf or for interviews with suspects who have difficulty in understanding English continue to apply (see paragraph C11.4A of Code C and Note 4AB).

D. Objections and complaints by the suspect

F4.8. If the suspect raises objections to the interview being visually recorded, either at the outset or during the interview or during a break in the interview, the interviewer must explain the fact that the interview is being visually recorded and that the provisions of this Code require that the suspect’s objections must be recorded on the visual recording. When any objections have been visually recorded or the suspect has refused to have his or her objections recorded, the interviewer must say that he or she is turning off the recording equipment, give his or her reasons and turn it off. If a separate audio recording is being maintained, the officer must ask the suspect to record the reasons for refusing to agree to visual recording of the interview. Paragraph E4.8 of Code E will apply if the suspect objects to audio recording of the interview. The officer must then make a written record of the interview. If the interviewer reasonably considers that he or she may proceed to question the suspect with the visual recording still on, the interviewer may do so (see Note 4G).

F4.9. If in the course of an interview a complaint is made by the person being questioned, or on his or her behalf, concerning the provisions of this Code or of Code C, the interviewer must act in accordance with Code C, record the complaint in the interview record and inform the custody officer (see Notes 4B and 4C).

F4.10. If the suspect indicates that he or she wishes to tell the interviewer about matters not directly connected with the offence of which the suspected is suspected and that he or she is unwilling for these matters to be recorded, the suspect must be given the opportunity to tell the interviewer about these matters after the conclusion of the formal interview.

E. Changing the recording media

F4.11. If the recording media is not of sufficient length to record all of the interview with the suspect, further recording media must be used. When the recording equipment indicates that the recording media has only a short time left to run, the interviewer must advise the suspect and round off that part of the interview. If the interviewer wishes to continue the interview but does not already have further recording media with him, he or she must obtain more media. The suspect should not be left unattended in the interview room. The interviewer will remove the recording media from the recording equipment and insert a new one which has been unwrapped or otherwise opened in the suspect's presence. The recording equipment must then be set to record.

Care must be taken, particularly when a number of sets of recording media have been used, to ensure that there is no confusion between them. This could be achieved by marking the sets of recording media with consecutive identification numbers.

F4.12. When a break is to be taken during the course of an interview and the interview room is to be vacated by the suspect, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reason for it and the time must be recorded. The recording equipment must be turned off and the recording medium removed. The procedures for the conclusion of an interview set out in paragraph F4.19 should be followed.

F4.13. When a break is to be a short one, and both the suspect and a police officer are to remain in the interview room, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reasons for it and the time must be recorded on the recording medium. The recording equipment may be turned off, but there is no need to remove the recording medium. When the interview is recommenced the recording must continue on the same recording medium and the time at which the interview recommences must be recorded.

F4.14. When there is a break in questioning under caution, the interviewing officer must ensure that the person being questioned is aware that he or she remains under caution. If there is any doubt, the caution must be given again in full when the interview resumes (see Notes 4D and 4E).

G. Failure of recording equipment

F4.15. If there is a failure of equipment which can be rectified quickly, the appropriate procedures set out in paragraph F4.12 must be followed. When the recording is resumed the interviewer must explain what has happened and record the time the interview recommences. If, however, it is not possible to continue recording on that particular recorder and no alternative equipment is readily available, the interview may continue without being recorded visually. In such circumstances, the procedures in paragraph F3.3 of this Code for seeking the authority of an officer of the rank of sergeant or above must be followed (see Note 4F).

H. Removing used recording media from recording equipment

F4.16. Where used recording media are removed from the recording equipment during the course of an interview, they must be retained and the procedures set out in paragraph F4.18 followed.

I. Conclusion of interview

F4.17. Before the conclusion of the interview, the suspect must be offered the opportunity to clarify anything he or she has said and asked if there is anything that he or she wishes to add.

F4.18. At the conclusion of the interview, including the taking and reading back of any written statement, the time must be recorded and the recording equipment switched off. The recording medium must be removed from the recording equipment, sealed with a master copy label and treated as an exhibit in accordance with the standing orders, policies and procedures of the Police Force. The interviewer must sign the label and also ask the suspect and any appropriate adults or other third party present during the interview to sign it. If the suspect or third party refuses to sign the label, an officer of the rank of sergeant or above, or if such an officer is not available, the custody officer, must be called into the interview room and asked, subject to paragraph F2.5, to sign it.

F4.19. The suspect must be given a notice which explains —

- (a) how the audio recording will be used;
- (b) the arrangements for access to it;
- (c) that if the person is charged or informed that he or she will be prosecuted, a copy of the audio recording will be supplied as soon as practicable or as otherwise agreed between the suspect and the police, or on the order of a court.

Notes for Guidance

4A. The interviewer should attempt to estimate the likely length of the interview and ensure that an appropriate quantity of recording media and labels with which to seal the master copies are available in the interview room.

4AB. This provision is to give a person who is deaf or has impaired hearing equivalent rights of access to the full interview record as far as is possible using audio recording.

4B. If the custody officer is called immediately to deal with the complaint, wherever possible the recording equipment should be left to run until the custody officer has entered the interview room and spoken to the person being interviewed. Continuation or termination of the interview should be at the discretion of the interviewing officer, pending action pending action by an officer of the rank of inspector or above as set out in Code C.

4C. If the complaint is about a matter not connected with this Code or Code C, the decision to continue with the interview is at the discretion of the interviewing officer. If the interviewing officer decides to continue with the interview, the person being interviewed must be told that the complaint will be brought to the attention of the custody officer at the conclusion of the interview. When the interview is concluded, the interviewing officer must, as soon as practicable, inform the custody officer of the existence and nature of the complaint made.

4D. In considering whether to caution again after a break, the officer should bear in mind that he or she may have to satisfy a court that the suspect understood that he or she was still under caution when the interview resumed.

4E. The officer should bear in mind that it may be necessary to satisfy the court that nothing occurred during a break in an interview or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence. On the re-commencement of an interview, the officer should consider summarising on the recording medium the reason for the break and confirming this with the suspect.

4F. If any part of the recording media breaks or is otherwise damaged during the interview, it should be sealed as a master copy in the presence of the suspect and the interview resumed where it left off. The undamaged part should be copied and the original sealed as a master recording in the suspect's presence, if necessary after the interview. If equipment for copying is not readily available, both parts should be sealed in the suspect's presence and the interview begun again.

4G. The interviewer should be aware that a decision to continue recording against the wishes of the suspect may be the subject of comment in court.

F5. After the Interview

F5.1. The interviewer must make a note in his or her pocket book of the fact that the interview has taken place and has been recorded, its time, duration and date and the identification number of the master copy of the recording media.

F5.2. If no proceedings follow in respect of the person whose interview was recorded, the recording media must nevertheless be kept securely in accordance with paragraph F6.1 and Note 6A.

Note for Guidance

5A. [Omitted]

F6. Master copy security

A. General

F6.1. The officer in charge of a place of lawful custody at which interviews with suspects are recorded must make arrangements for the master copies to be kept securely and their movements accounted for on the same basis as other material which may be used for evidential purposes, in accordance with standing orders, policies and procedures of the Police Force (see Note 6A).

B. Breaking master copy seal for criminal proceedings

F6.2. A police officer has no authority to break the seal on a master copy which is required for criminal trial or appeal proceedings. If it is necessary to gain access to the master copy, the police officer must arrange for its seal to be broken in the presence of a representative of the Attorney General. The defendant or his or her legal adviser must be informed and given a reasonable opportunity to be present. If the defendant or his or her legal practitioner is present one of them must be invited to reseal and sign the master copy. If either refuses or neither is present, this must be done by the representative of the Attorney General (see Notes 6B and 6C).

C. Breaking master copy seal: other cases

F6.3. The Chief Police Officer must establish arrangements for breaking the seal of the master copy where no criminal proceedings result, or the criminal proceedings to which the interview relates have been concluded and it becomes necessary to break the seal. These arrangements should be those which the Chief Police Officer considers are reasonably necessary to demonstrate to the person interviewed and any other party who may wish to use or refer to the interview record that the master copy has not been tampered with and that the interview record remains accurate (see Note 6D).

F6.4. Subject to paragraph F6.6, a representative of the prosecution and each defendant must be given a reasonable opportunity to be present when the seal is broken, the master copy copied and resealed.

F6.5. If one or more of the parties is not present when the master copy seal is broken because they cannot be contacted or refuse to attend or paragraph F6.6 applies, arrangements should be made for an independent person to be present. Alternatively, or as an additional safeguard, arrangements should be made for a film or photographs to be taken of the procedure.

F6.6. Paragraph F6.5 does not require a person to be given an opportunity to be present if —

- (a) it is necessary to break the master copy seal for the proper and effective further investigation of the original offence or the investigation of some other offence; and
- (b) the officer in charge of the investigation has reasonable grounds to suspect that allowing an opportunity might prejudice any such investigation or criminal proceedings which may be brought as a result or endanger any person (see Note 6E).

D. Documentation

F6.7 When the master copy seal is broken, copied and re-sealed, a record must be made of the procedure followed, including the date, time and place and persons present.

Notes for Guidance

6A. This section is concerned with the security of the master copy which will have been sealed at the conclusion of the interview. Care should, however, be taken of working copies since their loss or destruction might lead to the need to have access to master copies.

6B. If the recording has been delivered to the Supreme Court for safe keeping in a trial on indictment, the Attorney General will apply to the Registrar of the court for the release of the recording for unsealing by the Attorney General.

6C. Reference to the Attorney General in this part of the Code include any other body or person with a statutory responsibility for prosecution for whom the police conduct any recorded interviews.

6D. The most common reasons for needing access to master copies that are not required for criminal proceedings arise from civil actions and complaints against police and civil actions between individuals arising out of allegations of crime investigated by police.

6E. Paragraph F6.6 could apply, for example, when one or more of the outcomes or likely outcomes of the investigation might be —

(a) the prosecution of one or more of the original suspects;

(b) the prosecution of someone previously not suspected, including someone who was originally a witness; and

(c) any original suspect being treated as a prosecution witness and when premature disclosure of any police action, particularly through contact with any parties involved, could lead to a real risk of compromising the investigation and endangering witnesses.

6F. Police officers must arrange that, as far as possible, tape recording arrangements are unobtrusive.

F7. Visual recording of interviews by secure digital network

F7.1. This section applies if an officer wishes to make a visual recording with sound of an interview mentioned in section F3 of this Code using a secure digital network which does not use removable media (see paragraph F1.6(c) above.)

F7.2. A ‘secure digital network’ is a computer network system which enables an original interview recording to be stored as a digital multi-media file or a series of such files, on a secure file server approved for the purpose by the Governor.

F7.3. The provisions of sections F1 to F6 of this Code which refer or apply only to removable media do not apply to a secure digital network recording.

F7.4. The statutory requirement and provisions for the audio recording of interviews using a secure digital network as set out in section E7 of Code E apply to the visual recording with sound of interviews mentioned in section F5 of this Code as if references to audio recordings of interviews include visual recordings with sound.

G1. Introduction

G1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

G1.1. This Code of Practice deals with statutory power of police to arrest persons involved, or suspected of being involved, in a criminal offence. The power of arrest must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for people suspected of committing offences and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

G1.2. The right to liberty is a key principle of the human rights provisions of the Constitution. The exercise of the power of arrest represents an obvious and significant interference with that right.

G1.3. The use of the power must be fully justified and officers exercising the power should consider if the necessary objectives can be met by other, less intrusive means. Arrest must never be used simply because it can be used. Absence of justification for exercising the powers of arrest may lead to challenges if the case goes to court. When the power of arrest is exercised it is essential that it is exercised in a non-discriminatory and proportionate manner, which is incompatible with the right to liberty under section 5 of the Constitution.

G1.4. Part 4 of the Ordinance provides the statutory power of arrest without warrant by police officers and others. If the provisions of the Ordinance and this Code are not observed, both the arrest and the conduct of any subsequent investigation may be open to question.

G1.5. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

G1.6. The Notes for Guidance are not provisions of this Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation.

G1.7. In this Code, ‘street bail’ means bail at a place other than a place of lawful custody.

G2. Elements of arrest under section 44

G2.1. A lawful arrest requires 2 elements —

- (a) a person’s involvement or suspected involvement or attempted involvement in the commission of a criminal offence; and
- (b) reasonable grounds for believing that the person’s arrest is necessary.

Both elements must be satisfied, and it can never be necessary to arrest a person unless there are reasonable grounds to suspect them of committing an offence.

G2.2. The arrested person must be informed that he or she has been arrested, even if this fact is obvious, and of the relevant circumstances of the arrest in relation to both the above elements. The custody officer must be informed of these matters on arrival at a place of lawful custody (see paragraphs G2.9, G3.3 and paragraph C3.4 of Code C).

A. Involvement in an offence

G2.3. A police officer may arrest without warrant in relation to any offence —

- (a) a person who is about to commit an offence or is in the act of committing an offence;
- (b) a person whom the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting is about to commit an offence or to be committing an offence;
- (c) a person whom the officer has reasonable grounds to suspect of being guilty of an offence which the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting has been committed;
- (d) anyone who is guilty of an offence which has been committed or whom the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be guilty of that offence.

G2.3A. There must be some reasonable, objective grounds for the suspicion, based on known facts and information which are relevant to the likelihood that the offence has been committed and that the person liable to arrest committed it (see Notes 2 and 2A.)

B. Necessity criteria

G2.4. The power of arrest is only exercisable if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that it is necessary to arrest the person. The criteria for what may constitute necessity are set out in paragraph G2.9. It remains an operational decision at the discretion of the arresting officer to decide —

- (a) which one or more of the necessity criteria (if any) applies to the individual; and
- (b) if any of the criteria apply, whether to arrest, grant street bail after arrest, report for summons, issue a fixed penalty notice or take any other action that is open to the officer.

G2.5. In applying the criteria, the arresting officer must be satisfied that at least one of the reasons supporting the need for arrest is satisfied.

G2.6. Extending the power of arrest to all offences provides a police officer with the ability to use that power to deal with any situation. However, applying the necessity criteria requires the officer to examine and justify the reason or reasons why a person needs to be arrested or (as the case may be) further arrested and taken to a place of lawful custody for the custody officer to decide whether to authorise the person's detention for the offence (see Note 2C).

G2.7. The criteria in paragraph G2.9 below are based on section 44 of the Ordinance and are exhaustive. However, the circumstances that may satisfy those criteria remain a matter for the operational discretion of individual officers. Some examples are given below of what those circumstances may be, and what officers might consider when deciding whether arrest is necessary.

G2.8. In considering the individual circumstances, the officer must take into account the situation of the victim, the nature of the offence, the circumstances of the suspect and the needs of the investigative process.

G2.9. When it is practicable to tell a person why arresting the person is necessary (as required by paragraphs G2.2, G3.3 and Note 3), the police officer should outline the facts, information and other circumstances which form the basis for believing that the arrest is necessary and which the officer considers necessary for one or more of the following purposes —

(a) to enable the name of the person to be ascertained (if the officer does not know, and cannot readily ascertain, the person's name, or has reasonable grounds for doubting whether a name given by the person as his or her name is the person's real name);

(b) correspondingly as regards the person's address;

(Note: An address is satisfactory for the service of a summons if the person will be at it long enough to serve him or her with a summons; or if some other person at that address specified by the person will accept service of the summons on his or her behalf.)

(c) to prevent the person —

(i) causing physical injury to himself or herself or any other person;

(ii) suffering physical injury;

(iii) causing loss or damage to property;

(iv) committing an offence against public decency (only applies where members of the public going about their normal business cannot reasonably be expected to avoid the person in question); or

(v) causing an unlawful obstruction of the highway;

(d) to protect a child or other vulnerable person from the person being arrested;

(e) to allow the prompt and effective investigation of the offence or of the conduct of the person;

(f) to prevent a prosecution for the offence from being hindered by the disappearance of the person.

G2.9A. Paragraph G2.9(e) may apply if (but is not limited to) —

(a) there are reasonable grounds to believe that the person —

(i) has made false statements;

- (ii) has made statements which cannot be readily verified;
 - (iii) has presented false evidence;
 - (iv) may steal or destroy evidence;
 - (v) may make contact with co-suspects or conspirators;
 - (vi) may intimidate or threaten or make contact with witnesses;
- (b) it is necessary to obtain evidence by questioning;
- (c) an arrest of a person in connection with an imprisonable offence is considered and there is a need to —
- (i) enter and search without a search warrant any premises occupied or controlled by the person or where the person is at or immediately before arrest;
 - (ii) search the person;
 - (iii) prevent the person having contact with others;
 - (iv) take fingerprints, footwear impressions, samples or photographs of the person;
- (d) compliance with statutory drug testing requirements must be ensured;
- (e) there are reasonable grounds for believing that —
- (i) if the person is not arrested he or she will fail to attend court;
 - (ii) street bail after arrest would be insufficient to deter the suspect from trying to evade prosecution.
- (f) an arrest would enable the special warning to be given in accordance with paragraphs C10.10 and C10.11 of Code C when the suspect is found —
- (i) in possession of incriminating objects, or at a place where such objects are found;
or
 - (ii) at or near the scene of the crime at or about the time it was committed.

G3. Information to be given on arrest

A. Need for a caution

G3.1. Paragraphs C10.1 and C10.2 of Code C set out the requirement for a person whom there are grounds to suspect of an offence (see Note 2) to be cautioned before being questioned or further questioned about an offence.

G3.2. [Omitted]

G3.3. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be informed as soon as practicable that he or she is under arrest and of the grounds and reasons for the arrest (see paragraph G2.2 and Note 3).

G3.4. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must also be cautioned unless —

- (a) it is impracticable to caution by reason of the person's condition or behaviour at the time;
- (b) the person has already been cautioned immediately prior to arrest as in paragraph G3.1.

B. Terms of the caution (see section C10 of Code C)

G3.5. The caution, which must be given on arrest, should be in the following terms —

“You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention when questioned something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence.” (See Note 4).

G3.6. Minor deviations from the words of any caution given in accordance with this Code do not constitute a breach of this Code, provided the sense of the relevant caution is preserved (see Note 5).

G3.7. [Omitted]

G4. Records of Arrest

A. General

G4.1. The arresting officer must record in his or her pocket book, or by other methods used for recording information —

- (a) the nature and circumstances of the offence leading to the arrest;
- (b) the reason or reasons why arrest was necessary;
- (c) the giving of the caution;
- (d) anything said by the person at the time of arrest.

G4.2. The record should be made at the time of the arrest unless that is impracticable. If not made at the time of arrest, the record should be completed as soon as possible after it.

G4.3. On arrival at a place of lawful custody, the custody officer must open the custody record (see paragraph C1.1A and section C2 of Code C). The information given by the arresting officer on the circumstances and reason or reasons for arrest must be recorded as part of the custody record. Alternatively, a copy of the record made by the officer in accordance with paragraph G4.1 must be attached as part of the custody record (see paragraph G2.2 below and paragraphs C3.4 and C10.3 of Code C).

G4.4. The custody record will serve as a record of the arrest. Copies of the custody record will be provided in accordance with paragraph 2.4A of Code C, and access for inspection of the original record will be provided in accordance with paragraphs C2.4 and C2.5 of Code C.

B. Interviews and arrests

G4.5. Records of interview, significant statements or silences will be treated in the same way as set out in sections C10 and C11 of Code C and in Codes E and F (audio and visual recording of interviews).

Notes for Guidance

1. For the purposes of this Code, ‘offence’ has the meaning given it by section 2 of the Ordinance, i.e. any statutory or common law offence for which a person may be tried by the Supreme Court, the Magistrate’s Court or the Summary Court and punished if convicted.

1A. This Code does not apply to powers of arrest conferred on police officers under an arrest warrant, or to the powers of police officers to arrest without warrant other than under section 44 for an offence. These other powers to arrest without warrant do not depend on the arrested person committing any specific offence and include —

(a) arrest of a person who fails to answer police bail to attend a place of lawful custody or who is suspected of breaching a condition of that bail;

(b) arrest of a person bailed to attend court who is suspected of breaching, or is believed likely to breach, any condition of bail to take the person to court for bail to be re-considered;

(c) taking mentally disturbed persons into custody under the Mental Health Ordinance so that they can be taken to the hospital;

(d) arrest of a driver under the Road Traffic Ordinance following the outcome of a preliminary breath test to enable the driver to be required to provide an evidential sample;

(e) common law power to stop or prevent a breach of the peace - after arrest a person aged 18 or over may be brought before the Summary Court or the Magistrate’s Court to show cause why he or she should not be bound over to keep the peace; these are not criminal proceedings.

1B. Youths should not be arrested at their place of education unless this is unavoidable. When a youth is arrested at the place of education, the principal or his or her nominee must be informed.

2. Facts and information relevant to a person's suspected involvement in an offence should not be confined to those which tend to indicate the person has committed or attempted to commit the offence. Before making a decision to arrest, a police officer should take account of any facts and information that are available, including claims of innocence made by the person, and that might dispel the suspicion.

2A. Particular examples of facts and information which might point to a person's innocence and may tend to dispel suspicion include those which relate to the statutory defence provided by section 782 which allows the use of reasonable force in the prevention of crime or making an arrest, and the common law of self-defence. This may be relevant when a person appears, or claims, to have been acting reasonably in defence of himself or herself or others or to prevent his or her property or the property of others from being stolen, destroyed or damaged, particularly if the offence alleged is based on the use of unlawful force, e.g. a criminal assault.

2B. [Omitted]

2C. For a police officer to have reasonable grounds for believing it necessary to arrest, the officer is not required to be satisfied that there is no viable alternative to arrest. However, it does mean that in all cases, the officer should consider that arrest is the practical, sensible and proportionate option in all the circumstances at the time the decision is made. This applies equally to a person in police detention after being arrested for an offence who is suspected of involvement in a further offence and the necessity to arrest the person for that further offence is being considered.

2D. Although a warning is not expressly required, officers should if practicable, consider giving a warning which points out the person's offending behaviour, and explains why, if the person does not stop, the resulting consequences may make arrest necessary. Such a warning might —

(a) if heeded, avoid the need to arrest; or

(b) if ignored, support the need to arrest and also help prove the mental element of certain offences, for example, the person's intent or awareness, or help to rebut a defence that the person was acting reasonably.

A person who is warned that he or she may be liable to arrest if his or her real name and address cannot be ascertained, should be given a reasonable opportunity to establish the real name and address before deciding that either or both are unknown and cannot be readily ascertained or that there are reasonable grounds to doubt that a name and address the person has given is the real name and address. The person should be told why his or her name is not known and cannot be readily ascertained and (as the case may be) of the grounds for doubting that a name and address the person has given is the real name and address, including, for example, the reason why a particular document the person has produced to verify his or her real name and/or address, is not sufficient.

2E. The meaning of “prompt” should be considered on a case by case basis taking account of all the circumstances. It indicates that the progress of the investigation should not be delayed to the extent that it would adversely affect the effectiveness of the investigation. The arresting officer also has discretion to release the arrested person on ‘street bail’ as an alternative to taking the person directly to a place of lawful custody (see Note 2J).

2F. An officer who believes that it is necessary to interview the person suspected of committing the offence must then consider whether an arrest is necessary in order to carry out the interview. The officer is not required to interrogate the suspect to determine whether the person will attend a place of lawful custody voluntarily to be interviewed, but must consider whether the suspect’s voluntary attendance is a practicable alternative for carrying out the interview. If it is, then arrest would not be necessary. Conversely, an officer who considers this option but is not satisfied that it is a practicable alternative, may have reasonable grounds for deciding that the arrest is necessary at the outset ‘on the street’. Without such considerations, the officer would not be able to establish that arrest was necessary in order to interview.

Circumstances which suggest that a person’s arrest ‘on the street’ would not be necessary in order to interview the person might be where the officer —

- (a) is satisfied as to the person’s identity and address and that the person will attend a specified place of lawful custody voluntarily to be interviewed, either immediately or by arrangement at a future date and time; and
- (b) is not aware of any other circumstances which indicate that voluntary attendance would not be a practicable alternative (see paragraph G2.9(e)).

When making arrangements for the person’s voluntary attendance, the officer should tell the person that —

- (a) to properly investigate the person’s suspected involvement in the offence the person must be interviewed under caution at a specified place of lawful custody, but in the circumstances an arrest for this purpose will not be necessary if the person attends that place voluntarily to be interviewed;
- (b) if the person attends voluntarily, he or she will be entitled to obtain independent legal advice before, and to have a legal practitioner present at, the interview;
- (c) the date and time of the interview will take account of the person’s circumstances and the needs of the investigation; and

(d) if the person does not agree to attend a specified place of lawful custody voluntarily at a time which meets the needs of the investigation, or having so agreed, fails to attend, or having attended, fails to remain for the interview to be completed, it will be necessary to arrest the person to enable him or her to be interviewed.

2G. When the person attends the specified place of lawful custody voluntarily for interview by arrangement as in Note 2F above, arrest on arrival at that place prior to interview would only be justified if —

(a) new information coming to light after the arrangements were made indicates that from that time, voluntary attendance ceased to be a practicable alternative and the person's arrest became necessary; and

(b) it was not reasonably practicable for the person to be arrested before the person attended the place of lawful custody.

If a person who attends a place of lawful custody voluntarily to be interviewed decides to leave before the interview is complete, the police would at that point be entitled to consider whether an arrest was necessary to carry out the interview. The possibility that the person might decide to leave during the interview is therefore not a valid reason for arresting the person before the interview has commenced (see paragraph 3.21 of Code C).

2H. The necessity criteria do not permit arrest solely to enable the routine taking, checking (speculative searching) and retention of fingerprints, samples, footwear impressions and photographs when there are no prior grounds to believe that checking and comparing the fingerprints, etc. or taking a photograph would provide relevant evidence of the person's involvement in the offence concerned or would help to ascertain or verify the person's real identity.

2I. The necessity criteria do not permit arrest for an offence solely because it happens to be an imprisonable offence or an offence under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance unless there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that misuse of Class A drugs or Class B drugs might have caused or contributed to the offence.

2J. Having determined that the necessity criteria have been met and having made the arrest, the officer can then consider the use of street bail on the basis of the effective and efficient progress of the investigation of the offence in question. It gives the officer discretion to compel the person to attend a specified place of lawful custody at a date/time that best suits the overall needs of the particular investigation. Its use is not confined to dealing with child care issues or allowing officers to attend to more urgent operational duties and granting street bail does not retrospectively negate the need to arrest.

3. An arrested person must be given sufficient information to enable the person to understand that he or she has been deprived of his or her liberty and the reason for the arrest. For example, if a person is arrested on suspicion of committing an offence the person must be told the nature of the suspected offence, and when and where it was committed. The suspect must also be informed of the reason or reasons why arrest is considered necessary. Vague or technical language should be avoided.

When explaining why one or more of the arrest criteria apply, it is not necessary to disclose any specific details that might undermine or otherwise adversely affect any investigative processes. An example might be the conduct of a formal interview when prior disclosure of such details might give the suspect an opportunity to fabricate an innocent explanation or to otherwise conceal lies from the interviewer.

4. Nothing in this Code requires a caution to be given or repeated when informing a person not under arrest that he or she may be prosecuted for an offence. However, a court will not be able to draw any inferences under section 367 or 368 of the Ordinance if the person was not cautioned.

5. If it appears that a person does not understand the caution, the person giving it should explain it in his or her own words.

6. The powers available to an officer as the result of an arrest, such as entry and search of premises, detention without charge for more than 24 hours, holding a person incommunicado and delaying access to legal advice, are only available in respect of imprisonable offences and are subject to the specific requirements on authorisation set out in the Ordinance and the relevant Codes of Practice.

Preamble

1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

1.02. This Code of Practice must be readily available at every police station and every other place of lawful custody for consultation by police officers, detained persons and members of the public.

The Code must also be published on the Falkland Islands Government and/or Royal Falkland Islands Police website, and is to be made available for consultation by members of the public in such civic locations as the Governor directs or, in the absence of such a direction, as the Chief Police Officer considers appropriate (e.g. community library).

1.03. This Code of Practice sets out guidance that police officers must follow if they arrange or conduct interviews of proposed witnesses whose details are disclosed to the prosecution by a defendant pursuant to the disclosure provisions in Part 14 of the Ordinance.

Persons other than police officers who are charged with the duty of conducting an investigation as defined in the Ordinance are to have regard to the relevant provisions of this Code, and should take these into account in applying their own operating procedures. This Code does not apply to persons who are not charged with the duty of conducting an investigation as defined in the Ordinance.

1.04. The powers and procedures in this Code must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for the suspects to whom they apply, and without unlawful discrimination on the grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Police officers when carrying out their functions must have regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and to take steps to foster good relations.

1.05. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a witness of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code (see Note 1G to Code C).

1.06. Any witness who appears to be under 18 must be treated as a youth for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence that he or she is older.

1.07. A witness who appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or who has difficulty communicating orally because of a speech impediment, must be treated as such for the purposes of this Code in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary.

Introduction

1.1. Part 14 of the Ordinance sets out rules governing disclosure of information in the course of criminal proceedings by both the prosecution and the defence.

1.2. Section 218 provides for the defendant to give defence statements to the prosecution and to the court and section 219 sets out what those defence statements must contain. Section 219(2) requires that any defence statement that discloses an alibi must give particulars of it, including details of any witness who the defendant believes is able to give evidence in support of the alibi and any information the defendant has which may assist in identifying or finding such a witness.

1.3. Section 221 requires the defendant to give to the prosecutor and the court a notice indicating whether the defendant intends to call any witnesses at trial and giving details of those witnesses.

1.4. This Code of Practice sets out guidance that police officers must have regard to when they are arranging and conducting interviews of proposed witnesses identified in a defence statement given under section 219(2) or a notice given under section 221.

Definitions

2. In this code —

“officer” means a police officer or other investigating officer conducting, or proposing to conduct, an interview with a defence witness;

“legal practitioner” means a person who is entitled to practise as an advocate or as a solicitor, attorney or proctor in any court having unlimited jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters in some part of the Commonwealth or in the Republic of Ireland;

“witness” means a person identified by a defendant either in a defence statement under section 219(2) as being a witness that the defendant believes is able to give evidence in support of an alibi disclosed in the statement, or in a notice given to the court and the prosecutor under section 221 as being a person that the defendant intends to call as a witness at his trial.

Arrangement of the interview

3.1. If a police officer wishes to interview a witness, the witness must be asked whether he or she consents to being interviewed and informed that —

(a) an interview is being requested following the identification of the witness by the accused as a proposed witness under section 219(2) or section 221 of the Ordinance;

(b) the witness is not obliged to attend the proposed interview;

(c) the witness is entitled, at the witness’ expense, to be accompanied by a legal practitioner at the interview; and

(d) a record will be made of the interview and the witness will subsequently be sent a copy of the record.

3.2. If the witness consents to being interviewed, the witness must be asked whether he or she —

- (a) wishes to have a legal practitioner present at the interview;
- (b) consents to a legal practitioner attending the interview on behalf of the defendant as an observer; and
- (c) consents to a copy of the record being sent to the defendant. If the witness does not consent, he or she must be informed that the effect of disclosure requirements in criminal proceedings may nevertheless require the prosecution to disclose the record to the defendant (and any co-defendant) in the course of the proceedings.

Information to be provided to defendant

4.1. The officer must notify the defendant or, if the defendant is legally represented in the proceedings, the defendant's legal practitioner —

- (a) that the officer requested an interview with the witness;
- (b) whether the witness consented to the interview; and
- (c) if the witness consented to the interview, whether the witness also consented to a legal practitioner attending the interview on behalf of the defendant, as an observer.

4.2. If the defendant is not legally represented in the proceedings, and if the witness consents to a legal practitioner attending the interview on behalf of the defendant, the defendant must be offered the opportunity, a reasonable time before the interview is held, to appoint a legal practitioner to attend it.

Date, time and venue for the interview

5. The officer must nominate a reasonable date, time and venue for the interview and notify the witness of them and any subsequent changes to them.

Notification to the defendant's legal practitioner

6. If the witness has consented to the presence of the defendant's legal practitioner, the practitioner must be notified that the interview is taking place, invited to observe, and given reasonable notice of the date, time and venue of the interview and any subsequent changes.

Conduct of the interview

7. The identity of the officer conducting the interview must be recorded. That person must have sufficient skills and authority, commensurate with the complexity of the investigation, to discharge his or her functions effectively. An officer must not conduct an interview if it is likely to result in a conflict of interest, for instance, if the officer is the victim of the alleged crime which is the subject of the proceedings. The advice of a more senior officer must always be sought if there is doubt as to whether a conflict of interest precludes an individual conducting the interview. If the doubt remains, the advice of the Attorney General must be sought.

Attendance of the defendant's legal practitioner

8.1. The defendant's legal practitioner may only attend the interview if the witness has consented to his or her presence as an observer. If the practitioner was given reasonable notice of the date, time and place of the interview, the fact that the practitioner is not present will not prevent the interview from being conducted. If the witness at any time withdraws consent to the defendant's legal practitioner being present at the interview, the interview may continue without the presence of the practitioner.

8.2. The defendant's legal practitioner may attend only as an observer.

Attendance of the witness's legal practitioner

9. If a witness has indicated that he or she wishes to appoint a legal practitioner to be present, that practitioner must be permitted to attend the interview.

Attendance of any other person

10. A witness under the age of 18, or a witness who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, must be interviewed in the presence of an appropriate adult (as defined in section 2 of the Ordinance).

Recording of the interview

11.1. An accurate record must be made of the interview, whether it takes place at a place of lawful custody or elsewhere. The record must be made, where practicable, by audio recording or by visual recording with sound, or otherwise in writing. Any written record must be made and completed during the interview, unless this would not be practicable or would interfere with the conduct of the interview, and must constitute either a verbatim record of what has been said or, failing this, an account of the interview which adequately and accurately summarises it. If a written record is not made during the interview it must be made as soon as practicable after its completion. Written interview records must be timed and signed by the maker.

11.2. A copy of the record must be given, within a reasonable time of the interview, to —

- (a) the witness; and
- (b) if the witness consents, to the defendant or the defendant's legal practitioner.

1. Introduction

1.01. This Code of Practice is a copy of the Code contained in Schedule 3 to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (in this Code referred to as “the Ordinance”) and is to be read as one with the Ordinance.

1.1. This Code of Practice sets out the manner in which police officers are to record, retain and reveal to the prosecutor material obtained in a criminal investigation and which may be relevant to the investigation, and related matters.

1.2. Persons other than police officers who are charged with the duty of conducting an investigation as defined in the Ordinance are to have regard to the relevant provisions of this Code, and should take these into account in applying their own operating procedures.

1.3. This Code does not apply to persons who are not charged with the duty of conducting an investigation as defined in the Ordinance.

1.4. [Omitted]

2. Definitions

2.1 In this Code —

(a) a ‘criminal investigation’ is an investigation conducted by police officers with a view to it being ascertained whether a person should be charged with an offence, or whether a person charged with an offence is guilty of it. This will include —

(i) investigations into crimes that have been committed;

(ii) investigations whose purpose is to ascertain whether a crime has been committed, with a view to the possible institution of criminal proceedings; and

(iii) investigations which begin in the belief that a crime may have been committed, for example, when the police keep premises or people under observation for a period of time, with a view to the possible institution of criminal proceedings;

- (b) ‘charging a person with an offence’ includes prosecution by way of a summons;
- (c) an ‘investigator’ is any police officer involved in the conduct of a criminal investigation. All investigators have a responsibility for carrying out the duties imposed on them under this Code, including in particular recording information, and retaining records of information and other material;
- (d) the ‘officer in charge of an investigation’ is the police officer responsible for directing a criminal investigation. That officer is also responsible for ensuring that proper procedures are in place for recording information, and retaining records of information and other material, in the investigation;
- (e) the ‘disclosure officer’ is the person responsible for examining material retained by the police during the investigation; revealing material to the prosecutor during the investigation and any criminal proceedings resulting from it, and certifying that the officer has done this; and disclosing material to the accused at the request of the prosecutor;
- (f) the ‘prosecutor’ is the person responsible for the conduct, on behalf of the Crown, of criminal proceedings resulting from a specific criminal investigation;
- (g) ‘material’ is material of any kind, including information and objects, which is obtained in the course of a criminal investigation and which may be relevant to the investigation. This includes not only material coming into the possession of the investigator (such as documents seized in the course of searching premises) but also material generated by the investigator (such as interview records);
- (h) material may be ‘relevant to an investigation’ if it appears to an investigator, or to the officer in charge of an investigation, or to the disclosure officer, that it has some bearing on any offence under investigation or any person being investigated, or on the surrounding circumstances of the case, unless it is incapable of having any impact on the case;
- (i) ‘sensitive material’ is material, the disclosure of which the disclosure officer believes would give rise to a real risk of serious prejudice to an important public interest;
- (j) references to ‘prosecution disclosure’ are to the duty of the prosecutor under sections 216 and 224 of the Ordinance to disclose material which is in his or her possession or which he or she has inspected in pursuance of this Code, and which might reasonably be considered capable of undermining the case against the accused, or of assisting the case for the accused;
- (k) references to the disclosure of material to a person accused of an offence include references to the disclosure of material to his or her legal practitioner;
- (l) ‘national security’ means the security of the United Kingdom, the Falkland Islands, other British Overseas Territories and the Crown dependencies.

3. General responsibilities

3.1. The functions of the investigator, the officer in charge of an investigation and the disclosure officer are separate. Whether they are undertaken by one, two or more persons will depend on the complexity of the case. If they are undertaken by more than one person, close consultation between them is essential to the effective performance of the duties imposed by this Code.

3.2. [Omitted]

3.3. The Chief Police Officer must put in place arrangements to ensure that in every investigation the identity of the officer in charge of an investigation and the disclosure officer is recorded. Disclosure officers should have sufficient skills and authority, commensurate with the complexity of the investigation, to discharge their functions effectively. An individual must not be appointed as a disclosure officer, or continue in that role, if it is likely to result in a conflict of interest, for instance, if the disclosure officer is the victim of the alleged crime which is the subject of the investigation. The advice of a more senior officer must always be sought if there is doubt as to whether a conflict of interest precludes an individual acting as the disclosure officer. If the doubt still remains, the advice of the Attorney General should be sought.

3.4. The officer in charge of an investigation may delegate tasks to another police officer, but remains responsible for ensuring that these have been carried out and for accounting for any general policies followed in the investigation. In particular, it is an essential part of the duties of the officer in charge to ensure that all material which may be relevant to an investigation is retained, and either made available to the disclosure officer or (in exceptional circumstances) revealed directly to the prosecutor.

3.5. In conducting an investigation, the investigator should pursue all reasonable lines of inquiry, whether these point towards or away from the suspect. What is reasonable in each case will depend on the particular circumstances. For example, where material is held on computer, it is a matter for the investigator to decide how many files on the computer it is reasonable to inquire into, and in what manner.

3.6. If the officer in charge of an investigation believes that other persons may be in possession of material that may be relevant to the investigation, and if this has not been obtained under paragraph 3.5, the officer should ask the disclosure officer to inform them of the existence of the investigation and invite them to retain the material in case they receive a request for its disclosure. The disclosure officer should inform the prosecutor that they may have such material. However, the officer in charge of an investigation is not required to make speculative enquiries of other persons: there must be some reason to believe that they may have relevant material. That reason may come from information provided to the police by the accused or from inquiries made or from some other source.

3.7. If, during a criminal investigation, the officer in charge of an investigation or disclosure officer for any reason no longer has responsibility for the functions falling to him, either the officer's supervisor or the police officer in charge of criminal investigations must assign someone else to assume that responsibility. That person's identity must be recorded, as with those initially responsible for these functions in each investigation.

4. Recording of information

4.1. If material which may be relevant to the investigation consists of information which is not recorded in any form, the officer in charge of an investigation must ensure that it is recorded in a durable, retrievable or readable form (whether in writing, on video or audio tape, or on computer disk).

4.2. If it is not practicable to retain the initial record of information because it forms part of a larger record which is to be destroyed, its contents should be transferred as a true record to a durable and more easily-stored form before that happens.

4.3. Negative information is often relevant to an investigation. If it may be relevant, it must be recorded. An example might be a number of people present in a particular place at a particular time who state that they saw nothing unusual.

4.4. If information which may be relevant is obtained, it must be recorded at the time it is obtained or as soon as practicable after that time. This includes, for example, information obtained in house-to-house enquiries, although the requirement to record information promptly does not require an investigator to take a statement from a potential witness where it could not otherwise be taken.

5. Retention of material

A. Duty to retain material

5.1. The investigator must retain material obtained in a criminal investigation which may be relevant to the investigation. Material may be photographed, video-recorded, captured digitally or otherwise retained in the form of a copy rather than the original at any time, if the original is perishable; the original was supplied to the investigator rather than generated by the investigator and is to be returned to its owner; or the retention of a copy rather than the original is reasonable in all the circumstances.

5.2. If material has been seized in the exercise of the powers of seizure conferred by the Ordinance, the duty to retain it under this code is subject to the provisions on the retention of seized material in section 30 of the Ordinance.

5.3. If the officer in charge of an investigation becomes aware as a result of developments in the case that material previously examined but not retained (because it was not thought to be relevant) may now be relevant to the investigation, the officer should, wherever practicable, take steps to obtain it or ensure that it is retained for further inspection or for production in court if required.

5.4. The duty to retain material includes the duty to retain material falling into the following categories, if it may be relevant to the investigation —

(a) crime reports (including crime report forms, relevant parts of incident report books or police officers' notebooks);

(b) custody records;

(c) records which are derived from tapes of telephone messages (for example 999 calls) containing descriptions of an alleged offence or offender;

(d) final versions of witness statements (and draft versions where their contents differ from the final version), including any exhibits mentioned (unless these have been returned to their owner on the understanding that they will be produced in court if required);

(e) interview records (written records, or audio or video tapes, of interviews with actual or potential witnesses or suspects);

(f) communications between the police and experts such as forensic scientists, and reports of work carried out by experts for the purposes of criminal proceedings;

(g) records of the first description of a suspect by each potential witness who purports to identify or describe the suspect, whether or not the description differs from that of subsequent descriptions by that or other witnesses;

(h) any material casting doubt on the reliability of a witness.

5.5. The duty to retain material if it may be relevant to the investigation also includes the duty to retain material which may satisfy the test for prosecution disclosure in the Ordinance, such as —

(a) information provided by an accused person which indicates an explanation for the offence with which the person has been charged;

(b) any material casting doubt on the reliability of a confession;

(c) any material casting doubt on the reliability of a prosecution witness.

5.6. The duty to retain material falling into these categories does not extend to items which are purely ancillary to such material and possess no independent significance (for example, duplicate copies of records and reports).

B. Length of time for which material is to be retained

5.7. All material which may be relevant to the investigation must be retained until a decision is taken whether to institute proceedings against a person for an offence.

5.8. If a criminal investigation results in proceedings being instituted, all material which may be relevant must be retained at least until the accused is acquitted or convicted or the prosecutor decides not to proceed with the case.

5.9. If the accused is convicted, all material which may be relevant must be retained until —

(a) the convicted person is released from custody, or discharged from hospital, in cases where the court imposes a custodial sentence or a hospital order;

(b) 6 months from the date of conviction, in all other cases.

If the court imposes a custodial sentence or hospital order and the convicted person is released from custody or discharged from hospital earlier than 6 months from the date of conviction, all material which may be relevant must be retained at least until 6 months from the date of conviction.

5.10. If an appeal against conviction is in progress when the release or discharge occurs, or at the end of the period of 6 months specified in paragraph 5.9, all material which may be relevant must be retained until the appeal is determined.

6. Preparation of Material for Prosecutor

A. Introduction

6.1 The officer in charge of the investigation, the disclosure officer or an investigator may seek advice from the prosecutor about whether any particular item of material may be relevant to the investigation.

6.2. Material which may be relevant to an investigation, which has been retained in accordance with this Code and which the disclosure officer believes will not form part of the prosecution case, must be listed in one of the two schedules mentioned below.

6.3. Material which the disclosure officer does not believe is sensitive must be listed in a schedule of non-sensitive material. The schedule must include a statement that the disclosure officer does not believe the material is sensitive.

6.4. Any material which is believed to be sensitive must be listed in a schedule of sensitive material. If there is no sensitive material, the disclosure officer must record this fact in a schedule of sensitive material.

6.4A. If in doubt as to whether material should be classified as sensitive, the disclosure officer should consult the prosecutor.

6.4B. A schedule of unused non-sensitive material should be disclosed to the defendant, but a schedule of unused sensitive material should not be.

6.5. Paragraphs 6.9 to 6.11 apply to both sensitive and non-sensitive material. Paragraphs 6.12 to 6.14 apply to sensitive material only.

6.6 to 6.8. [Omitted]

B. Way in which material is to be listed on schedule

6.9. The disclosure officer should ensure that each item of material is listed separately on the schedule, and is numbered consecutively. The description of each item should make clear the nature of the item and should contain sufficient detail to enable the prosecutor to decide whether he or she needs to inspect the material before deciding whether or not it should be disclosed.

6.10. In some enquiries it may not be practicable to list each item of material separately. For example, there may be many items of a similar or repetitive nature. These may be listed in a block and described by quantity and generic title.

6.11. Even if some material is listed in a block, the disclosure officer must ensure that any items among that material which might satisfy the test for prosecution disclosure are listed and described individually.

C. Treatment of sensitive material

6.12. Subject to paragraph 6.13, the disclosure officer must list on a sensitive schedule any material the disclosure of which the officer believes would give rise to a real risk of serious prejudice to an important public interest, and the reason for that belief. The schedule must include a statement that the disclosure officer believes the material is sensitive. Depending on the circumstances, examples of such material may include the following —

- (a) material relating to national security;
- (b) material received from the intelligence and security agencies;
- (c) material relating to intelligence from foreign sources which reveals sensitive intelligence gathering methods;
- (d) material given in confidence;
- (e) material relating to the identity or activities of informants, under-cover police officers, witnesses or other persons supplying information to the police who may be in danger if their identities are revealed;
- (f) material revealing the location of any premises or other place used for police surveillance, or the identity of any person allowing a police officer to use them for surveillance;
- (g) material revealing, either directly or indirectly, techniques and methods relied upon by a police officer in the course of a criminal investigation, for example covert surveillance techniques, or other methods of detecting crime;
- (h) material the disclosure of which might facilitate the commission of other offences or hinder the prevention and detection of crime;
- (i) material upon the strength of which search warrants were obtained;
- (j) material containing details of persons taking part in identification parades;
- (k) material supplied to an investigator during a criminal investigation which has been generated by an official of a body concerned with the regulation or supervision of bodies corporate or of persons engaged in financial activities, or which has been generated by a person retained by such a body;

(l) material supplied to an investigator during a criminal investigation which relates to a child or young person and which has been generated by a probation officer, the Social Services Department or some other party contacted by an investigator during the investigation.

(m) material related to the private life of a witness.

6.13. In exceptional circumstances, if an investigator considers that material is so sensitive that its revelation to the prosecutor by means of an entry on the sensitive schedule is inappropriate, the existence of the material must be revealed to the prosecutor separately. This will apply only if compromising the material would be likely to lead directly to the loss of life, or directly threaten national security.

6.14. In such circumstances, the responsibility for informing the prosecutor lies with the investigator who knows the detail of the sensitive material. The investigator should act as soon as is reasonably practicable after the file containing the prosecution case is sent to the prosecutor. The investigator must also ensure that the prosecutor is able to inspect the material so that the prosecutor can assess whether it is disclosable and if so, whether it needs to be brought before a court for a ruling on disclosure under Part 14 of the Ordinance.

7. Revelation of material to prosecutor

7.0. In relation to imprisonable summary offences, the police must produce schedules and provide them to the prosecution as soon as practicable after a not guilty plea has been entered; and in relation to indictment-only offences, the police must produce schedules as soon as practicable after the case has been sent to the Supreme Court.

7.1. The disclosure officer must send the schedules to the prosecutor. Wherever practicable, this should be at the same time as the officer sends the file containing the material for the prosecution case.

7.2. The disclosure officer should draw the attention of the prosecutor to any material that an investigator has retained (including material to which paragraph 6.13 applies) which may satisfy the test for prosecution disclosure in the Ordinance, and should explain why the officer has come to that view.

7.3. At the same time as complying with the duties in paragraphs 7.1 and 7.2, the disclosure officer must give the prosecutor a copy of any of the following (unless it has already been given to the prosecutor as part of the file containing the material for the prosecution case) —

(a) information provided by an accused person which indicates an explanation for the offences with which he or she has been charged;

(b) any material casting doubt on the reliability of a confession;

(c) any material casting doubt on the reliability of a prosecution witness;

(d) any other material which the investigator believes may satisfy the test for prosecution disclosure in the Ordinance.

7.4. If the prosecutor asks to inspect material which has not already been copied to the prosecutor, the disclosure officer must allow the prosecutor to inspect it. If the prosecutor asks for a copy of material which has not already been copied to the prosecutor, the disclosure officer must give the prosecutor a copy. This does not apply if the disclosure officer believes, having consulted the officer in charge of an investigation, that the material is too sensitive to be copied and can only be inspected.

7.5. If material consists of information which is recorded other than in writing, whether it should be given to the prosecutor in its original form as a whole, or by way of relevant extracts recorded in the same form, or in the form of a transcript, is a matter for agreement between the disclosure officer and the prosecutor.

8. Subsequent action by disclosure officer

8.1. At the time a schedule of non-sensitive material is prepared, the prosecutor may not have given advice about the likely relevance of particular items of material. Once these matters have been determined, the disclosure officer must give the prosecutor, if necessary, an amended schedule, listing any additional material which —

- (a) may be relevant to the investigation;
- (b) does not form part of the case against the accused;
- (c) is not already listed on the schedule; and
- (d) the officer believes is not sensitive,

unless the officer is informed in writing by the prosecutor that the prosecutor intends to disclose the material to the defence.

8.2. Section 224 of the Ordinance imposes a continuing duty on the prosecutor, for the duration of criminal proceedings against the accused, to disclose material which meets the tests for disclosure (subject to public interest considerations). To enable the prosecutor to do this, any new material coming to light should be treated in the same way as earlier material.

8.3. In particular, after a defence statement has been given, the disclosure officer must look again at the material which has been retained and must draw the attention of the prosecutor to any material which might reasonably be considered capable of undermining the case for the prosecution against the accused, or of assisting the accused; and the officer must reveal it to the prosecutor in accordance with paragraphs 7.4 and 7.5.

9. Certification by disclosure officer

9.1. The disclosure officer must certify to the prosecutor that to the best of the officer's knowledge and belief, all relevant material which has been retained and made available to the officer has been revealed to the prosecutor in accordance with this Code. The officer must sign and date the certificate. It will be necessary to certify not only at the time when the schedule and accompanying material is submitted to the prosecutor, and when relevant material which has been retained is reconsidered after the accused has given a defence statement, but also whenever a schedule is otherwise given or material is otherwise revealed to the prosecutor.

10. Disclosure of material to the accused

10.1. If material has not already been copied to the prosecutor, and the prosecutor requests its disclosure to the accused on the grounds that —

- (a) it falls within the test for prosecution disclosure; or
- (b) the court has ordered its disclosure after considering an application from the accused, the disclosure officer must disclose it to the accused.

10.2. If material has been copied to the prosecutor and it is to be disclosed, the decision as to whether it is disclosed by the prosecutor or the disclosure officer is a matter for agreement between the two of them.

10.3. The disclosure officer must disclose material to the accused person, whether by giving the person a copy or by allowing the person to inspect it. If the accused person asks for a copy of any material which the person has been allowed to inspect, the disclosure officer must give it to the person, unless in the opinion of the disclosure officer that is either not practicable (for example because the material consists of an object which cannot be copied, or because the volume of material is so great), or not desirable (for example because the material is a statement by a child witness in relation to a sexual offence).

10.4. If material which the accused has been allowed to inspect consists of information which is recorded other than in writing, the decision as to whether it should be given to the accused in its original form or in the form of a transcript is a matter for the discretion of the disclosure officer. If the material is transcribed, the disclosure officer must ensure that the transcript is certified to the accused as a true record of the material which has been transcribed.

10.5. If a court concludes that an item of sensitive material satisfies the prosecution disclosure test and that the interests of the defence outweigh the public interest in withholding disclosure, it will be necessary to disclose the material if the case is to proceed. This does not mean that sensitive documents must always be disclosed in their original form; for example, the court may agree that sensitive details still requiring protection should be blocked out, or that documents may be summarised, or that the prosecutor may make an admission about the substance of the material under section 361 of the Ordinance.

(section 239(2))

DISCLOSURE APPLICATIONS

Contents

1. Prosecution disclosure
2. Prosecutor's application for public interest ruling
3. Defence disclosure
4. Defendant's application for prosecution disclosure
5. Review of public interest ruling
6. Defendant's application to use disclosed material
7. Unauthorised use of disclosed material
8. Court's power to vary requirements under Part 14

1. Prosecution disclosure

If, pursuant to section 216 of the Ordinance, the prosecutor —

- (a) discloses prosecution material to the defendant; or
- (b) serves on the defendant a written statement that there is no such material to disclose, the prosecutor must at the same time so inform the appropriate officer of the court.

2. Prosecutor's application for public interest ruling

(1) This rule applies if the prosecutor —

- (a) without a court order, would have to disclose material; and
- (b) wants the court to decide whether it would be in the public interest to disclose it.

(2) The prosecutor must —

- (a) apply in writing for such a decision; and
- (b) serve the application on —
 - (i) the appropriate officer of the court;
 - (ii) any person whom the prosecutor thinks would be directly affected by disclosure of the material; and
 - (iii) the defendant, but only to the extent that serving it on the defendant would not disclose what the prosecutor thinks ought not be disclosed.

(3) The application must —

- (a) describe the material, and explain why the prosecutor thinks that —
 - (i) it is material that the prosecutor would have to disclose;
 - (ii) it would not be in the public interest to disclose that material; and
 - (iii) no measure such as the prosecutor's admission of any fact, or disclosure by summary, extract or edited copy, would adequately protect both the public interest and the defendant's right to a fair trial;
 - (b) omit from any part of the application that is served on the defendant anything that would disclose what the prosecutor thinks ought not be disclosed (in which case, sub-paragraph (4) of this paragraph applies); and
 - (c) explain why, if no part of the application is served on the defendant.
- (4) If the prosecutor serves only part of the application on the defendant, the prosecutor must —
- (a) mark the other part, to show that it is only for the court; and
 - (b) in that other part, explain why the prosecutor has withheld it from the defendant.
- (5) Unless already done, the court may direct the prosecutor to serve an application on —
- (a) the defendant; and
 - (b) any other person who the court considers would be directly affected by the disclosure of the material.
- (6) The court must determine the application at a hearing which —
- (a) is in private, unless the court otherwise directs; and
 - (b) if the court so directs, may take place, wholly or in part, in the defendant's absence.
- (7) At a hearing at which the defendant is present —
- (a) the general rule is that the court will receive, in the following sequence —
 - (i) representations first by the prosecutor and any other person served with the application, and then by the defendant, in the presence of them all;
 - (ii) further representations by the prosecutor and any such other person in the defendant's absence; but
 - (b) the court may direct other arrangements for the hearing.

(8) The court may only determine the application if satisfied that it has been able to take adequate account of —

- (a) such rights of confidentiality as apply to the material; and
- (b) the defendant's right to a fair trial.

(9) Unless the court otherwise directs, the appropriate officer of the court —

- (a) must not give notice to anyone other than the prosecutor —
 - (i) of the hearing of an application under this rule, unless the prosecutor served the application on that person; or
 - (ii) of the court's decision on the application;
- (b) may —
 - (i) keep a written application or representations; or
 - (ii) arrange for the whole or any part to be kept by some other appropriate person, subject to any conditions that the court may impose.

3. Defence disclosure

If —

- (a) pursuant to section 218 of the Ordinance, the defendant gives a defence statement; or,
- (b) pursuant to section 221 the defendant gives a defence witness notice, the defendant must serve the statement or notice on the prosecutor and on the appropriate officer of the court.

4. Defendant's application for prosecution disclosure

(1) This rule applies if the defendant —

- (a) has served a defence statement given under section 218 of the Ordinance; and
- (b) wants the court to require the prosecutor to disclose material.

(2) The defendant must serve an application on the prosecutor and on the appropriate officer of the court.

(3) The application must —

- (a) describe the material that the defendant wants the prosecutor to disclose;
- (b) explain why the defendant thinks there is reasonable cause to believe that —
 - (i) the prosecutor or some department of the government has that material; and
 - (ii) it is material that the Ordinance requires the prosecutor to disclose; and
- (c) ask for a hearing, if the defendant wants one, and explain why it is needed.

(4) The court may determine an application under this rule —

- (a) at a hearing, in public or in private; or
- (b) without a hearing.

(5) The court must not require the prosecutor to disclose material unless the prosecutor —

- (a) is present; or
- (b) has had at least 14 days in which to make representations.

5. Review of public interest ruling

(1) This rule applies if the court has ordered that it is not in the public interest to disclose material that the prosecutor otherwise would have to disclose, and —

- (a) the defendant wants the court to review that decision; or
- (b) the court reviews that decision on its own initiative.

(2) If the defendant wants the court to review that decision, the defendant must —

(a) serve an application on the prosecutor and the appropriate officer of the court; and

(b) in the application —

- (i) describe the material that the defendant wants the prosecutor to disclose, and
- (ii) explain why the defendant thinks it is no longer in the public interest for the prosecutor not to disclose it.

(3) The prosecutor must serve any such application on any person whom the prosecutor thinks would be directly affected if that material were disclosed.

(4) The prosecutor, and any such person, must serve any representations on —

- (a) the appropriate officer of the court; and
- (b) the defendant, unless to do so would in effect reveal something that either thinks ought not be disclosed.

(5) The court may direct —

- (a) the prosecutor to serve any such application on any person whom the court considers would be directly affected if that material were disclosed;
- (b) the prosecutor and any such person to serve any representations on the defendant.

(6) The court must review a decision to which this rule applies at a hearing which —

- (a) is in private, unless the court otherwise directs; and
- (b) if the court so directs, may take place, wholly or in part, in the defendant's absence.

(7) At a hearing at which the defendant is present —

- (a) the general rule is that the court will receive, in the following sequence —
 - (i) representations first by the defendant, and then by the prosecutor and any other person served with the application, in the presence of them all;
 - (ii) further representations by the prosecutor and any such other person in the defendant's absence; but
- (b) the court may direct other arrangements for the hearing.

(8) The court may only conclude a review if satisfied that it has been able to take adequate account of —

- (a) such rights of confidentiality as apply to the material; and
- (b) the defendant's right to a fair trial.

6. Defendant's application to use disclosed material

(1) This rule applies if a defendant wants the court's permission to use disclosed prosecution material —

- (a) otherwise than in connection with the case in which it was disclosed; or
- (b) beyond the extent to which it was displayed or communicated publicly at a hearing.

(2) The defendant must serve an application on the prosecutor and on the appropriate officer of the court.

(3) The application must —

- (a) specify what the defendant wants to use or disclose; and
- (b) explain why.

(4) The court may determine an application under this rule —

- (a) at a hearing, in public or in private; or
- (b) without a hearing.

(5) The court must not permit the use of such material unless —

- (a) the prosecutor has had at least 28 days in which to make representations; and
- (b) the court is satisfied that it has been able to take adequate account of any rights of confidentiality that may apply to the material.

7. Unauthorised use of disclosed material

(1) This rule applies if a person is accused of using disclosed prosecution material in contravention of section 238 of the Ordinance.

(2) The court must not exercise its power to forfeit material used in committing the offence unless the prosecutor, and any other person directly affected by the disclosure of the material, is present, or has had at least 14 days in which to make representations.

8. Court's power to vary requirements under Part 14

The court may —

- (a) shorten or extend (even after it has expired) a time limit under Part 14 or this Schedule;
- (b) allow a defence statement, or a defence witness notice, to be in any written Form, as long as it contains what Part DM requires;
- (c) allow an application under Part 14 to be in any form, or to be presented orally; and
- (d) specify the period within which —
 - (i) any application under Part 14 must be made; or
 - (ii) any material must be disclosed, on an application to which rule 4 applies (defendant's application for prosecution disclosure).

SCHEDULE 5
(section 271)

FORMS FOR PLEAS OF GUILTY IN ABSENCE

Form 1

FALKLAND ISLANDS MAGISTRATE'S COURT/SUMMARY COURT GUILTY PLEA IN ABSENCE - NOTICE TO DEFENDANT

To:
Address:

Read this notice and everything sent with the summons carefully before you fill in any forms

With this notice you will find a summons. It lists the offences which the prosecutor says you have committed. The evidence for this is in the enclosed statement of facts. This notice tells you about the Court procedure and the choices open to you. It also tells you how to fill in the plea form and the other forms enclosed with the summons.

Warning: If you do not reply to the summons, the court may find you guilty in your absence.

Your decisions

After reading all the papers, you must decide which course of action to take. You can –

- plead guilty by post (Section 1 explains what to do);
- attend court and plead guilty (Section 2 explains what to do); or
- plead not guilty (Section 3 explains what to do).

Decide how you want to plead. If you need help with this, see a lawyer or advice agency at once. If you need general help about the summons contact the court office. The address and telephone number are on the summons.

Section 1: Pleading guilty by post

If you admit the offences, you may plead guilty in writing without attending court. If this is your decision, sign in box 1 on the plea form.

Fill in the enclosed statement of means form (about your income and expenses) and send it to the court with your plea form. Giving these details helps the court decide the right amount of fine. If you do not give these details, you may be ordered to pay a fine which is more than you can afford.

You should also tell the court anything about the offences or yourself which you feel the court should know when deciding what sentence to give you. To do this fill in the enclosed mitigation form. Send the completed form to the court with the plea form and your statement of means.

If the summons indicates you must send your driving license to the court, please ensure you do so.

If the court orders your license to be endorsed you must surrender it to the court within 7 days of the date of conviction. Failure to do so may result in the commission of a further offence.

At the hearing the court will only hear –

- The statement of facts sent with these papers, or a summary of them;
- Any other details (such as a claim for costs) which came with the summons;
- Details of your driving record; and
- Anything you write on the plea, statement of means form, and the mitigation form.

If you want to plead guilty in writing, you must act quickly. Fill in the plea form, statement of means form and the mitigation form. Then send them to the court so that they get there at least 3 days before the hearing date shown on the summons.

If you plead guilty by post you will normally be convicted by the court on the hearing date shown on the summons. The court will write to you soon after the hearing to tell you what sentence has been given to you. If the court decides not to accept your guilty plea, it will tell you why in writing and give you a fresh hearing date.

Changing your plea: If you have sent the plea form to the court saying that you want to plead guilty, you can change your mind at any time before the hearing. If you do change your mind you must tell the court in writing as soon as possible that you want to plead not guilty.

Section 2: Pleading guilty at court

If you admit the offences and want to plead guilty, you can do this in person at court. If this is your decision, sign in box 2 on the plea form and return it to the court. You must attend court at the time and on the date shown in the summons. You must bring your driving licence to court if the summons says that you should.

Complete the statement of means form and send it to the court so that it reaches court at least 3 days before the hearing or bring it with you to court so that it can be handed to the Clerk of the court at the hearing.

At the court hearing, you will be asked to say that you still want to plead guilty. The court will hear –

- The statement of facts sent with these papers, or a summary of them;
- Any other details (such as a claim for costs) which came with the summons; and
- Details of your driving record.

The court will listen to anything you say about the offences and your income and expenses, and then decide what sentence to give you.

Attending court to plead guilty lets you tell the court things, in your own words, which might be difficult to explain in writing. For example, if an offence was committed in very unusual circumstances or if your income and expenses are complicated.

Section 3: Pleading not guilty

If you do not admit the offences and you want to plead not guilty, sign in box 3 on the plea form and return it to the court.

You may attend court on the date shown on the summons but this hearing will not be the trial date. The court will tell you in writing of a fresh date for a trial hearing when you must attend with any witnesses and any documents you want the court to see. You should bring the original documents not photocopies. If your trial is expected to occupy some time or involve a lot of witnesses, the court may ask you to attend a pre-trial hearing to review your case so that the trial can be planned and arrangements made for the witnesses so that they do not have to wait at court longer than necessary.

Your Witnesses

It is important that you tell the court the number and the names of the witnesses you want to give evidence for you and when you or any of your witnesses cannot attend in the next 3 months. Fill in the relevant part of the Plea Form to give the court this information. The court will try and use it when fixing the date of your trial hearing.

The Prosecutor's Witnesses

At the trial hearing, the prosecutor may read out any witness statements sent to you unless you tell them that you want the witnesses to come to the court to give evidence. If you want any of these witnesses to give oral evidence, you should tell the prosecutor, whose name and address is on the notice accompanying the statements, as soon as possible. If you do not do this within 7 days of receiving the statements, you will lose your right to prevent the statements being tendered in evidence and you will be able to require the attendance of the witnesses only with the court's permission.

What will happen if you do not reply to the summons

If you do not reply to the summons, the court may deal with your case in your absence on the date shown in the summons. The prosecutor will read statements served upon you to the court or give a summary of them. Having heard what is in the witness statements, the court will find you either guilty or not guilty of each of the offences in the summons. If you are found guilty of any offence, the court may sentence you in your absence.

Prosecution costs

If you plead guilty or are found guilty, the prosecutor will normally ask the court to order the prosecution costs for bringing the case. The amount is normally £85.

If you intend to consult a legal practitioner you should do so before taking any action in response to this notice. Please note that you will be responsible for any fees that they may charge for advising you. The legal practitioners in the Falkland Islands are:

SCHEDULE 13
(sections 775 and 777)

CRIMINAL JUSTICE COUNCIL AND SENTENCING GUIDELINES COMMITTEE

PART 'A' – CRIMINAL JUSTICE COUNCIL
Composition of the Council

1. The Chief Justice is President of the Council.
2. The Council consists of the persons performing the duties of the following offices—
 - The Senior Magistrate
 - The Law Commissioner
 - The Head of Courts and Tribunals
 - The Attorney General
 - The Chief of Police
 - The Probation Officer.
3. The President of the Council, using an open and objective advertising and selection process, must select the following 6 additional persons to be members of the Council from among eligible persons —
 - (a) 2 justices of the peace;
 - (b) 2 legal practitioners providing criminal defence services in the Falkland Islands;
 - (c) 2 lay representatives who demonstrate an understanding of civic and community issues and human rights issues.

4. Members of the Council appointed by virtue of their office remain members for as long as they hold the office.
5. Members of the Council invited under paragraph 3(b) or (c) hold office for 3 years but can be removed from membership or have their membership extended by decision of the Council.
6. Members of the Council will not be remunerated but may claim reasonable expenses in accordance with the rules of the Council.
7. The President must appoint one member as Chair and one member as Deputy Chair of the Council for such terms as the President deems appropriate.
8. The President, with the approval of the Council, may designate a member of the Council or a public officer as secretary to the Council. A secretary who is not a member of the Council does not have a vote at meetings of the Council.
9. The Council may set its own rules of procedure.

Conduct of members

10. Every member of the Council is expected to —
 - (a) act in a corporate manner, rather than as a representative of any constituency or group;
 - (b) have strategic ability and ability to analyse complex data and information and identify the major issues;
 - (c) apply intelligence, knowledge and experience to the Council's advantage; and be an effective contributor to discussions at Council;
 - (d) observe the following principles:
 - Selflessness - Holders of public office should take decisions solely in terms of the public interest. They should not do so in order to gain financial or other material benefits for themselves, their families or their friends.
 - Integrity - Holders of public office should not place themselves under any financial or other obligation to outside individuals or organisations that might influence them in the performance of their official duties.
 - Objectivity - In carrying out public business, including making public appointments, awarding contracts or recommending individuals for rewards and benefits, holders of public office should make choices on merit.

- Accountability - Holders of public office are accountable for their decisions and actions to the public and must submit themselves to whatever scrutiny is appropriate to their office.
- Openness - Holders of public office should be as open as possible about all the decisions and actions that they take. They should give reasons for their decisions and restrict information only when the wider public interest clearly demands.
- Honesty - Holders of public office have a duty to declare any private interests relating to their public duties and to take steps to resolve any conflicts arising in a way that protects the public interest.
- Leadership - Holders of public office should promote and support these principles by leadership and example.

11. Council members should in all their work for the Council exercise such skills as they possess and such care and diligence as would be expected from a reasonable person in the circumstances.

Procedure of the Council

12. The Council must meet not less than 2 times a year but may meet more frequently by agreement or at the request of the President.

13. The business of the Council may be conducted by exchange of e-mails or by other electronic means provided that all e-mails or electronic messages are sent to all parties and all parties are copied into all exchanges.

14. Minutes of the decisions of the Council must be kept.

15. The quorum of the Council is 7 members' present in person or by video link or telephone conference or similar means, provided that all participants can hear and be present throughout the meeting and subject to paragraph 16 of this Part.

16. Of the 7 members for a quorum at least 3 members must be from the groups referred to in paragraph 3 of this Part.

17. The Council will seek to make decisions by consensus but, in the absence of consensus, decisions of the Council must be by a majority of those so present and voting.

18. If there is an equality of votes, the Chair, or in the absence of the Chair the Deputy Chair, has a casting vote.

19. (1) The President does not sit on the Council, but all recommendations of the Council made in accordance with either section 776 or 778 (except paragraphs (e) and (f) of section 776) require the approval of the President.

(2) If the Council does not have the approval of the President on any matter falling under section 776(f), the Council must state the President's view on the matter in its record of the decision.

20. The Council may appoint sub-committees of its members to report to the Council on specific topics.

21. The Council and any sub-committee of the Council may invite advisors to attend its meetings in a non-voting capacity.

21. The Council's annual report must —

(a) include a summary of the Council's action plan for the reporting year detailing what has been achieved and assessing the effectiveness of the work completed in relation to the Council's aims and the use of budget allocations and resources deployed;

(b) identify areas of work for the next financial year, with the resources required, the financial implications, a risks and benefits analysis and an assessment of how each area fulfils the Council's aims;

(c) if there is any material disagreement among Council members regarding the content of the annual report – specify the nature of the disagreement, identify the members who disagree, and give details of their views; and

(d) if the President has not approved any recommendation in the annual report, including any sentencing guideline – indicate that the recommendation is not approved, and is therefore of no effect.

PART 'B' –
SENTENCING GUIDELINES COMMITTEE
Procedure of the Committee

23. Meetings of the Sentencing Guidelines Committee must be designated as such and held separately from meetings of the Council.

24. At a meeting of the Committee, the procedure is as for the Council, except that the Senior Magistrate and the justices of the peace each have 3 votes.

25. The Committee's annual report must include —

(a) a summary of the sentencing guidelines that have been recommended during the calendar year;

(b) a summary of the resources and budget allocations that have been employed by the Committee during the calendar year; and

(c) a summary of the operation and effect of the sentencing guidelines as a whole, with an assessment of their effectiveness.

26. When the Committee has prepared guidelines it must publish them as draft guidelines and must consult the following persons about them —

- (a) the Governor;
- (b) any persons the Governor directs should be consulted;
- (c) the members of the Legislative Assembly;
- (d) any other persons the Committee considers appropriate to consult.

27. The Committee, having considered the responses to the consultation required by paragraph 26, and after making any amendments of the guidelines which it considers appropriate, may, if the Chief Justice approves the guidelines, recommend them to the Council for publication as definitive guidelines.

28. The Council must publish any sentencing guidelines recommended to it by the Committee, in the Gazette and in other appropriate media, as well as in its annual report as required by section 778 of the Ordinance.

29. The Committee may, in accordance with the procedure set out in paragraphs 26 and 27, review the sentencing guidelines and may, with the approval of the Chief Justice, recommend the Council to publish revised guidelines from time to time.

Sentencing guidelines principles

30. When exercising functions under this Schedule, the Committee must have regard to section 482(2) and the following matters —

- (a) the maximum sentences that may be imposed in the Falkland Islands for offences;
- (b) the need to promote consistency in sentencing;
- (c) the impact of sentencing decisions on victims of offences;
- (d) the results of the monitoring carried out under paragraph 36.

31. When exercising functions under this Schedule, the Committee must ensure so far as practicable that sentencing guidelines which relate to a particular offence are structured in the way described in paragraphs 30 to 37.

32. The guidelines should, to the extent practicable given the nature of the offence, describe, by reference to one or more of the factors mentioned in this paragraph, different categories of case involving the commission of the offence which illustrate in general terms the varying degrees of seriousness with which the offence may be committed. Those factors are —

- (a) the offender's culpability in committing the offence;
- (b) the harm caused, or intended to be caused or which might foreseeably have been caused, by the offence;
- (c) any other factors the Committee considers to be particularly relevant to the seriousness of the offence in question.

33. The guidelines should —

- (a) specify the range of sentences (“the offence range”) which, in the opinion of the Committee, it may be appropriate for a court to impose on an offender convicted of that offence; and
- (b) if the guidelines describe different categories of case in accordance with paragraph 30, specify for each category the range of sentences (“the category range”) within the offence range which, in the opinion of the Committee, it may be appropriate for a court to impose on an offender in a case which falls within the category.

34. The guidelines should also —

- (a) specify the sentencing starting point in the offence range; or
- (b) if the guidelines describe different categories of case in accordance with paragraph 26, specify the sentencing starting point in the offence range for each of those categories.

35. The guidelines should —

- (a) list any aggravating or mitigating factors which, by virtue of Part 23 of the Ordinance the court is required to take into account when considering the seriousness of the offence and any other aggravating or mitigating factors which the Committee considers are relevant to such a consideration;
- (b) list any other mitigating factors which the Committee considers are relevant in mitigation of sentence for the offence; and
- (c) include criteria, and provide guidance, for determining the weight to be given to previous convictions of the offender and such of the other factors within sub-paragraph (a) or (b) as the Committee considers relevant.

36. For the purposes of paragraph 33(b) the following are to be disregarded —

- (a) reduction in sentences for guilty pleas;

(b) reduction in sentences in consequence of assistance given (or offered to be given) by the offender to the prosecutor or investigator of an offence;

(c) any rule of law as to the totality of sentences.

37. The sentencing starting point in the offence range —

(a) for a category of case described in the guidelines in accordance with paragraph 26, is the sentence within that range which the Committee considers to be the appropriate starting point for cases within that category —

(i) before taking account of the factors mentioned in paragraph 30; and

(ii) assuming the offender has pleaded not guilty, and

(b) if the guidelines do not describe categories of case in accordance with paragraph 30, is the sentence within that range which the Committee considers to be the appropriate starting point for the offence —

(i) before taking account of the factors mentioned in paragraph 34; and

(ii) assuming the offender has pleaded not guilty.

38. The Committee must monitor the operation and effect of its sentencing guidelines, and in particular assess —

(a) the frequency with which, and extent to which, courts depart from sentencing guidelines;

(b) the factors which influence the sentences imposed by courts;

(c) the effect of the guidelines on the promotion of consistency in sentencing;

(d) the effect of the guidelines on the promotion of public confidence in the criminal justice system; and

(e) the effectiveness of the imposition of non-custodial sentences as alternatives to custody.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE ORDINANCE 2014

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Background

It was recognised by Executive Council in 2012 that the laws of the Falkland Islands are in an unsatisfactory state. The Falkland Islands does not have a complete suite of domestic legislation on which it can rely. As a consequence it is necessary to apply English legislation. However in doing so it was decided in 2005 that a cut-off date would be implemented of 31 July 2004 for all English legislation. This had the effect of freezing at that date a substantial part of the law as it applied in the Falkland Islands. Consequently Falkland Islands law has become increasingly out of date. In addition in many areas the laws of the Falkland Islands have not been consolidated for many years so amendments and corrections have been inserted, making it difficult to be certain exactly what provisions apply.

It was noted the unsatisfactory state was particularly acute in relation to criminal law and procedure. There are significant gaps in the law and the procedure is badly out of date, making the law difficult to interpret and to apply.

Accordingly approval was given by the Executive Council to draft a Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance (Paper 247/12 refers). It was a companion Ordinance to the Crimes Ordinance and was introduced in the Legislative Assembly at the same time (and is referred to in these Notes as the 'Crimes Ordinance 2014'.)

The project commenced in January 2013. A consultation process identified key areas of policy and a draft Ordinance was prepared. A consultation group was formed comprising two MLAs, Mr. Dick Sawle and Mrs. Sharon Halford, representatives from the police, legal practitioners and the Court. Draft Parts were sent to the group and then revised in the light of feedback received. The project stalled in August 2013 due to personnel changes but recommenced in December 2013 when a further detailed consultation process was undertaken. Two new MLAs, the Honourable Roger Edwards and the Honourable Mike Summers, replaced Mr Sawle and Ms Halford on the consultation group and the process of revision of the Parts recommenced. The Ordinance was presented to the Legislative Assembly in the summer of 2014 and was subsequently enacted on 30th October 2014.

The Ordinance consolidates a large number of provisions relating to the investigation of crime, the bringing of criminal proceedings, the trial of offences and the sentencing of offenders. It is a codifying and consolidating measure but also introduces several new provisions into the laws of Falkland Islands as set out in Appendix 1 to these Explanatory Notes. (Appendix 2 sets out the rationale for listing indictment-only offences and for setting the penalty levels for other offences.)

The new provisions are designed to address the distinct features of the existing criminal justice system and to enable the system to adapt to change and possible increase in the volume and nature of criminal work in the future.

Derivation

The Ordinance incorporates the provisions of most of the current Falkland Islands criminal procedure laws, but updated and modified in line with the equivalent UK provisions. They are –

- Criminal Justice Ordinance (except Proceeds of Crime provisions)
- Criminal Justice (Evidence) Ordinance
- Criminal Justice (Amendment) (Miscarriages of Justice) Ordinance 2006
- Criminal Jurisdiction (Offshore Activities) Order 1998
- Criminal Procedure and Investigations Ordinance
- Administration of Justice Ordinance to the extent that it applies to criminal proceedings
- Jury Ordinance

The local laws were then repealed, but the Destination Table shows where equivalent provisions are found in the Ordinance, if they have been replaced.

The Ordinance also incorporates a large number of UK statutory provisions dealing with criminal procedure and applying to the Falkland Islands (or which usefully could apply.) Some of the main UK statutes are –

- Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974
- Magistrate's Courts Act 1980
- Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ('PACE')
- Criminal Procedure & Investigations Act 1996
- Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999
- Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000
- Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001
- Criminal Justice Act 2003

The UK laws are as amended to the end of 2013 and include recent amendments made by the Policing & Crime Act 2009, Coroners & Justice Act 2009, Crime & Security Act 2010, Protection of Freedoms Act 2012, Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012, etc., some of which are not yet in force in the UK.

(Note: A reference to 'UK' is in fact to the law in England and Wales.)

The Ordinance incorporates adaptations and changes to some of the UK laws to make the provisions more applicable to the Falkland Island context. Where this occurs the Notes on Sections below highlight the changes.

The origins of each section, whether a Falkland Islands law or a UK law, or both, are shown at the foot of the section with the amendments. They are listed without the amendments in the Derivation Table.

For a commentary on the UK laws, reference has been made to Archbold, Criminal Pleading, Evidence & Practice 2013 Edition and supplements to the end of 2013.

Contents

As mentioned, the Ordinance includes several new features, as listed in Appendix 1 to these Notes. It also includes provisions for Jury Trial which are at present in a separate Ordinance.

The Ordinance omits some existing features of the Falkland Islands criminal justice system which are no longer required, such as probation orders. It does not replace exclusion orders for drinkers under Licensing Ordinance. Nor does it deal with regulatory offences, such as road traffic, environmental, shipping, aviation and fishery offences. The Ordinance does not include emergency powers provisions.

Provisions relating to international co-operation and proceeds of crime have also been omitted from the Ordinance. These areas of criminal law are extensive and complex and are currently covered in separate Ordinances which require revision. Extradition law is not covered as this is currently under review across the Overseas Territories and awaits FCO guidance. It is anticipated that this issue will be the subject of a separate Ordinance in the near future.

Appeals to the Court of Appeal have been omitted as these are governed by the Criminal Appeals Ordinance. Appeals to the Privy Council are governed by the Judicial Committee orders.

The Ordinance will be supplemented by criminal procedure rules and practice directions made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council. Framework rules have already been drafted for the consideration of the CJC.

Role of the Governor

The Ordinance confers several functions on the Governor – sometimes acting in discretion and sometimes having consulted one or multiple bodies.

In accordance with s.66 of the Constitution, the Governor must consult the Executive Council before performing functions. This convention is confirmed by the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance which confirms that the term ‘Governor’ means the Governor after consulting Executive Council, therefore any reference in the Ordinance to ‘the Governor’ alone means the Governor after consulting Executive Council.

S66(2)(c) of the Constitution states that if the Governor is required to consult with any person or authority other than the Executive Council, the Governor's obligation to consult with the Executive Council is displaced:

'The Governor shall not be obliged to consult with the Executive Council.....when exercising any function conferred on the Governor by this Constitution or any other law where it is provided, either expressly or by necessary implication, that the Governor exercise such function in his or her discretion or in his or her judgement or in accordance with the advice of, or after consultation with, any person or authority other than the Executive Council'

Some provisions within the Ordinance require the Governor to consult some other person or body, such as the Criminal Justice Council, the Advisory Committee or the Chief Justice, and the requirement to consult Executive Council is therefore displaced, as per s66(2)(c) of the Constitution, above.

Having carefully considered the need in some instances for the Governor to have the benefit of advice both from the Judicial and Executive branches of Government, there are some provisions which require the Governor to consult both the Executive Council and some other person or body. This, in effect requires consensus of the two bodies unless the Governor chooses to disregard the advice in accordance with Article 67 of the Constitution. In order to preserve the role of Executive Council as a required consultee, the term 'Governor in Council' is used to ensure clarity that the obligation to consult with Executive Council has not been displaced but is in addition to the obligation to consult with the stated body.

The Governor must report to the Legislative Assembly any disagreement with the advice given, as provided by section 788. The obligation under section 67 of the Constitution to report to Secretary of State any disagreement with Executive Council's advice remains.

Style and structure

The Ordinance is drafted in gender-neutral language and in what is known as a 'Plain English' style. This makes it more readily understood by ordinary readers and is the drafting style adopted in many Commonwealth countries nowadays, including the UK.

The Ordinance is divided into 13 Chapters and 36 Parts. There are also 15 Schedules, which are set out at the end of the whole Ordinance, in line with the usage in the UK.

After the preliminary sections, the Ordinance follows as closely as possible the sequence of events in a criminal case. It first sets out the powers of the police in respect of the investigation of crime, the detention, treatment and questioning of suspects and charging. Next come provisions as to diversion from the criminal justice system. The Ordinance then continues with Chapters on court jurisdiction, the events in a trial, sentencing and appeals. It ends with repeals and savings and other supplementary provisions.

The Ordinance begins with the Long Title which describes the purpose of the Ordinance, and the enacting formula.

CHAPTER 1 - PRELIMINARY

PART 1 – PRELIMINARY

Introduction

Part 1 sets out general principles governing the interpretation and application of the Ordinance. It is based on provisions of the common law, the Criminal Justice Ordinance, the Administration of Justice Ordinance and UK statute law. It includes some general interpretative provisions. Other general powers are contained in Part 36.

Notes on Sections

Section 1 gives the Ordinance a short title, and enables the Governor (i.e. the Governor after consulting the Executive Council) to appoint one or more commencement dates.

Section 2 contains definitions of terms used throughout the Ordinance; other terms are defined in individual Parts. Terms defined in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance are not defined here unless they are given a different meaning e.g. ‘document’. Some new terms are defined, such as ‘Criminal Justice Council’ (which is established by Part 35) and ‘criminal procedure rules’. They are defined as rules made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council as required by section 785. The section also has other interpretative provisions including sub-section (5) which states that gender-specific wording of a provision does not preclude the application of the provision to a corporation.

Bail terms e.g. surety, recognisance etc. have the meaning given them by Part 9.

Section 3 defines ‘criminal proceedings’ and says when they start and finish.

Section 4 states the common law rule about not being punished twice for the same offence. It complements the rule stated in section 6(6) of the Constitution

Section 5 says that if a matter is not provided for by the Ordinance or by criminal procedure rules or practice directions made under it, reference can be made to the relevant provisions of English criminal procedure and law. It is expected that this will rarely be needed, however, as there will be local criminal procedure rules and practice directions.

CHAPTER 2 – POLICE POWERS

PART 2 – POWERS TO STOP AND SEARCH OR ENTER AND SEARCH

Introduction

Part 2 is based on Parts I and II (Sections 1 to 18) of the UK Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (‘PACE’) as amended, but omitting sections 6 and 7 which are not required (they relate to statutory undertakings.) It replaces sections 168 to 170 and 179 to 189 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance with minor modifications and in more modern language.

The Part deals with police powers to stop and search people or vehicles and to enter and search premises. It does not deal with powers of seizure of items or arrest in general, which are contained in later Parts.

The Part includes additions to PACE made by the UK Anti-terrorism, Crime & Security Act 2001 and the Serious Crime Act 2007 – Sections 8 and 9. It also includes amendments made by the Crime & Security Act 2010 section 10. An additional offence created by the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 is included in Part 7 (Offensive weapons) of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 and is reflected in section 6(7).

Following changes in the UK law, the Part replaces the concept of an ‘arrestable offence’ by an ‘imprisonable’ offence as defined in section 2 – “an offence for which a sentence of imprisonment can be imposed on conviction, other than for non-payment of a fine.” This change is reflected in the other Parts dealing with police powers as well.

The relevant text of PACE is annotated at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.15-39 to 15-91.

Judicial officers

The Part makes provision as to who should have the power to grant access to excluded material etc. under Schedule 1. The Schedule gives the power to the ‘judicial officer’ who is defined in para. 16 to mean the Senior Magistrate, but if necessary the Chief Justice in chambers, (which would enable the Chief Justice to deal with an application outside the Falkland Islands) or 3 justices of the peace. A similar formulation is adopted for the power to order return of material under Part 3 – see section 40 and the definition in section 25(3).

Notes on Sections

Section 6 confers powers on police officers to stop and search persons and vehicles for stolen or prohibited articles if they have reasonable suspicion that they will find such articles. Prohibited articles are offensive weapons, sharp or pointed articles, and articles intended for use in burglary etc. There are limitations in respect of private premises.

Section 7 contains various rules about the exercise of the power to stop and search, such as producing documentary evidence that the officer is a police officer. The section provides that an application for compensation in respect of a searched vehicle should be made in writing to the Chief Police Officer.

The UK extension to vessels and aircraft is not needed in view of the definition of ‘vehicle’ within the Interpretation section – see section 2.

Section 8 confers power on a police officer to stop and search persons or vehicles in anticipation of, or after, violence. The power can only be exercised if an authorisation is given in respect of the relevant locality by a police officer of the rank of inspector or above, and only for up to 24 hours, unless the authorisation is extended by a more senior officer). This power was added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 and extended the previous powers of stop and search already included in PACE.

Section 8 gives a police officer above the rank of sergeant the power to authorise the use of stop and search powers anywhere in the Falkland Islands for up to 24 hours if the officer “reasonably believes that –

(a) incidents involving serious violence are likely to take place in any locality in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) it is necessary and expedient to give an authorisation under this section to prevent their occurrence.”

This is a different, narrower wording to the UK legislation under section 60 Criminal Justice and Public Order 1994 which states that a senior police officer may authorise the use of stop and search powers if the officer “reasonably believes that –

(a) incidents involving serious violence may take place in any locality in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) it is expedient to give an authorisation under this section to prevent their occurrence.”

The Legislative Assembly considered the current UK wording and the issues surrounding this section in the UK, which is controversial. The Honourable members also considered the issues raised in the UK case (R on the Application of Ann Juliette Roberts v The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police v The Secretary of State for the Home Department [2012] EWHC 1977 (Admin) which was an unsuccessful challenge to the provision of section 60. Stop and search powers generally have long been at the centre of tensions between ethnic minority groups and the police in the UK. A Metropolitan Police review has resulted in recent changes to policy in London, including a more intelligence-led and targeted approach. In July 2013, the Home Secretary, Theresa May, announced a public consultation on the use of the powers, but no amendments have been tabled. However the Legislative Assembly took the view that a more restrictive approach was appropriate in the Falkland Islands.

Section 9 contains provisions supplementing section 8.

Section 10 requires officers to keep a record of searches made under the Part. The UK version does not include a duty to record the identity of the person or vehicle seized, but this requirement was in the Criminal Justice Ordinance and it was appropriate to retain – sub-Sections (2) to (5).

Section 11 governs the conduct of roadside checks of vehicles that are stopped under section 45 of the Road Traffic Ordinance (which empowers a police officer to stop a vehicle but not to search it). The officer must suspect that a person in the vehicle has committed an imprisonable offence or is a witness to such an offence or intends to commit such an offence or is unlawfully at large. The power to authorise action under this section is given to an officer of the rank of inspector or above. This provision was not in the Criminal Justice Ordinance but is in line with modern policing policy.

Section 12 requires the Chief of Police to make an annual report to Executive Council of searches and road checks. This does not appear in the Criminal Justice Ordinance but follows section 5 of PACE.

Section 13 empowers the Senior Magistrate or two justices of the peace to issue a search warrant on the application of a police officer if there are reasonable grounds for believing an imprisonable offence has been committed. The warrant may be for specific premises, or for all premises occupied and controlled by a specified person. The power does not extend to items subject to legal privilege, excluded material or special procedure material. These terms are defined in Sections 15, 16, and 19 respectively.

The term “relevant evidence” is defined in section 2 to mean anything that would be admissible in evidence at a trial for the offence.

Section 14 prescribes a special procedure for making of orders for access to excluded material or special procedure material. The details are in Schedule 1 which is based on Schedule 1 to PACE. (The abolition of other powers of search of premises in section 180(2) of the Criminal Justice Ordinance have not been repeated as it has had effect).

Section 15 defines items subject to legal privilege as communications between a legal practitioner and his or her client and associated items. The term “legal practitioner” is defined in section 2 by reference to the Legal Practitioners Ordinance and means a person who has a right of audience in the courts of the Falkland Islands.

Section 16 defines “excluded material” to mean personal records created in the course of a trade, profession or business or created in an unpaid office and held in confidence; human tissue taken for the purpose of diagnosis or treatment and held in confidence; and journalistic material held in confidence.

Section 17 defines personal records as meaning records about a person’s health or spiritual counselling or welfare assistance.

Section 18 defines journalistic material as material acquired or created for the purpose of journalism.

Section 19 defines “special procedure material” as meaning personal records and journalistic material that are not excluded material, but are still held in confidence. It could include e.g. material created in the course of a trade, business or profession etc. and acquired by an employee from the employer. There is a reference in (6) to associated companies which is defined in the UK by reference to the UK Corporation Tax Act 2010.

Section 20 sets out rules for the issue of a search warrant. It must relate to entry on one occasion only (unless it specifies that it authorises multiple entries) and identify the articles or persons to be sought etc. As mentioned under section 13, the warrant may be for specific premises, or for all premises occupied and controlled by a specified person.

Section 21 sets out rules for the execution of a search warrant. It must be executed within a month of issue, be executed at a reasonable hour and so on.

Section 22 confers on police officers power to enter and search premises without a warrant for a number of specified purposes. They include arresting a person for an imprisonable offence, recapturing an escaped prisoner, preventing death or serious personal injury or preventing serious damage to property.

Arresting persons for offences of criminal trespass with elements of damage or violence also justifies entry and search without warrant. (The abolition by section 188(4) of the Criminal Justice Ordinance of common law powers to enter premises has not been repeated as it has had effect).

Section 23 confers on police officers power to enter and search premises occupied or controlled by a person who has been arrested for an imprisonable offence if they suspect there is evidence on the premises relating to that offence or a connected imprisonable offence. A police inspector is stated as the appropriate rank for supervising this power.

Section 24 confers on police officers powers at an airport to stop and search airport employees, vehicles carrying airport employees, and aircraft, and to make arrests. This removes any doubt that employees and aircraft at an airport, which has its own security provisions, are subject to stop and search provisions. Other police powers apply in the normal way to airports, which are 'premises' and to aircraft, which are 'vehicles'.

Schedule 1 sets out the procedure for obtaining an order for access to excluded material on a search under section 14. The Schedule is also referred to in later Parts of the Ordinance. The power to make an order for access is given to a judicial officer, defined as the Senior Magistrate, or if necessary a judge in chambers, or in the last resort 3 justices of the peace by a majority.

PART 3 - POWERS OF SEIZURE, ETC.

Introduction

Part 3 confers powers of seizure on police officers. It is derived from sections of the UK PACE Act and of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ('the 2001 Act') as amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

The powers of seizure extend to property in a person's possession as well as on or in premises, including a ship or aircraft (see the definition of 'premises' in section 2.) The powers are in addition to any other powers of seizure in the laws of the Falkland Islands, but those other powers must be exercised in accordance with this Part.

Sections 27 to 30 are based on sections 19 to 22 of PACE and replace sections 190 to 193 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. The remaining Sections are based on sections 50 to 62 of the 2001 Act. Sections 25 and 26 are also based on the 2001 Act. The Criminal Justice Ordinance does not include the 2001 Act provisions and they were not included in the 2006 draft Police & Criminal Evidence Ordinance.

Sections 190 to 193 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance are reproduced in Sections 27 to 30. Sections 194 to 196 Investigation into the proceeds of criminal conduct do not have any equivalent in PACE and need to be considered separately. They relate to Proceeds of Crime.

The Part deals with police powers to seize and retain property found on a person who has been stopped and searched or on premises, vehicles, ships or aircraft that have been searched under the powers in Part 2. The powers of seizure conferred by this Part are in addition to any other powers of seizure in Falkland Islands laws, but those other powers must be exercised in accordance with this Part.

One issue that should be noted is the scope of the additional powers of seizure in Sections 31 and 32. In the 2001 Act there is a Schedule with 3 parts, listing the UK enactments that confer powers of seizure to which the additional powers under equivalent sections of the Act apply. The distinction between the 3 parts of the UK Schedule makes operational decisions difficult for police officers and listing powers in a Schedule means that if they are amended or added to or deleted by another enactment, the Schedule needs to be amended. Another problem is that if any powers are missed, there is a doubt as to whether the powers conferred by Part 2 apply. In the light of these considerations, it was considered appropriate that the additional powers in Sections 31 and 32 should apply in relation to powers of seizure contained in any enactment. The same reasoning applies to the obligation to return excluded and special procedure material under section 36; it will apply to all powers of seizure in Falkland Islands laws.

The Codes of Practice are included in Schedule 3 – see Part 7 below.

The relevant text of PACE is annotated at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.15-92 to 15-102.

The CIPA 2001 provisions are annotated at paras.51-103 to 51-126.

Notes on Sections

Section 25 defines terms that are used in this Part but are not defined in section 2, including the ‘relevant time’ when something is in a person’s possession. It is based on s.66 CIPA 2001.

The term ‘document’ is defined in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance to mean “any publication and any matter written, expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, characters, figures or marks, or by more than one of these means.”

Section 26 provides that seizure of a document can include taking a copy and can include electronic copies. It is based on s.63 CIPA 2001.

Section 27 confers on a police officer who is lawfully on premises the power to seize anything on the premises if the officer reasonably believes the thing has been obtained by an offence, or that it is evidence in relation to an offence, and that it is necessary to seize it to prevent it being hidden, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed. The power does not extend to items subject to legal privilege as defined in section 15 i.e. communications between a lawyer and a client.

The section also empowers a police officer to require any information stored in electronic form which the officer believes as mentioned to be produced in a form in which it can be taken away and read.

Section 28 extends the powers of seizure under this Ordinance or any other Falkland Islands legislation to computerised information on the same basis as in section 27.

Section 29 requires the officer to give the occupier of the premises or owner of the thing a record of what was seized, and to allow the person access to it for the purpose of making a copy. However, there is no duty to grant access to material or to allow copying of it, if to do so would prejudice the investigation or any resulting criminal proceedings.

Section 30 provides that a thing that has been seized may be retained for as long as is necessary in the circumstances, e.g. for use in a trial, or to establish the identity of the lawful owner. If something was seized because it might be used to cause injury or damage or to interfere with evidence or assist escape it cannot be retained if the person from whom it was seized is released without charge or on bail. Nor can a thing be retained as evidence if a photograph of it would suffice as evidence.

Section 31 provides an additional power to seize things found on premises that are being searched under the powers in Part 2, in order to ascertain whether they might contain something that can be seized under section 27. This additional power includes anything in which or on which the suspect item is found if the suspect item cannot readily be separated from it in order to check whether the suspect item is something that can be seized.

Section 32 provides an additional power of seizing things found on a person who is being searched under the powers of search in Part 2, in order to ascertain whether they might be or contain something that can be seized under section 27.

Section 33 requires written notice to be given to occupiers of premises and to persons from whom things are seized of the exercise of a power of seizure under section 31 and 32. The notice must tell the person about the right to be present at an examination of the thing and the right to apply to the court for the return of the thing under sections 40 to 42.

Section 34 regulates the examination and return of property that has been seized under the additional powers conferred by Sections 31 and 32. The examination must be carried out as soon as possible, and any item not suspect (i.e. an item that cannot be seized under section 27) must be separated from suspect items if that is reasonably practicable.

Section 35 imposes an obligation to return items that have been seized but are found to be subject to legal privilege, as defined in section 15. They must be returned as soon as reasonably practicable.

Section 36 regulates the return of items that are excluded or consist of special procedure material, as defined in Sections 16 to 19. It creates an obligation in certain circumstances to return excluded and special procedure material that has been seized under a relevant power and the retention of which is not authorised under section 37.

Section 37 authorises the retention of property that has been seized if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that it has been obtained in the commission of an offence, or is evidence in relation to an offence, and it is necessary to retain it to prevent it being hidden, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed (i.e. the same grounds as for seizure under section 27).

Section 38 limits the power of retention in relation to property seized under the additional powers in Sections 31 and 32. Such property can only be retained if the item itself could be seized under the powers in section 27 i.e. it is itself evidence of an offence etc. In the CIPA there is a list of UK laws that also confer powers of retention of seized property. This section adopts a more broad-brush approach by referring to all written laws and enactments in force in the Falkland Islands that confer powers to seize property.

Section 39 specifies the persons to whom seized property is to be returned, if there is an obligation to return property. It must be returned to the person from whom it was seized (or the occupier of the premises, if it was seized from premises), unless some other person appears to have a better right to the property. If there is a dispute, the property can be retained until the dispute is resolved.

Section 40 entitles any person with an interest in seized property to apply to the Magistrate's Court for return of it and specifies the grounds. The grounds are that there was no power to make the seizure; or that the property included items that have legal privilege, or excluded material or special procedure material. The court can give directions about examination of the property, etc. The court can order the retention of the property if it would be liable to be seized again on being returned. The 'persons with an interest' in the property include the person from whom it was seized and a person who had custody of it at the time of seizure.

Sections 41 and 42 impose an obligation to ensure that property that has been seized is made secure if a court so orders on an application made under section 40. This is so that e.g. commercial advantage cannot be taken of the seizure of property, or it cannot become a security risk etc.

Section 41 sets out the circumstances in which there is a duty to ensure the security of the seized property if a person applies for its return.

Section 42 describes the duty as being the duty to ensure that the item is not examined, copied or put to any unauthorised use except with the consent of the applicant or an order of the Magistrate's Court.

Section 43 regulates the way in which property that is inextricably linked to seized property is to be dealt with. It extends the duty to secure to property that has been seized under the additional powers in Sections 31 and 32 but which has been retained, even though not itself suspect in terms of section 27, if the reason for retaining it is that it is inextricably linked to property that has been seized and is suspect. The test for being inextricably linked is the same as for not being able to separate property to which a suspect item is attached under sections 31 and 32.

PART 4 – POWERS OF ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT

Introduction

Part 4 confers powers of arrest without warrant on police officers and other persons. It does not displace other statutory powers of arrest without warrant. Powers of arrest on warrant contained in various enactments are also not affected, though the procedure in police detention after such an arrest is governed by Parts 5 to 9. Common law powers of arrest without warrant are preserved.

Part 4 is based mainly on Part III (sections 24 to 32) of the UK PACE Act 1984 as amended by various UK Acts, namely the Children Act 1989, the Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001, the Police Reform Act 2002, the Criminal Justice Act 2003, the Courts Act 2003, the Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 2004 and the Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005.

This Part will replace and amplify Part XIII (sections 198 to 205) of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. However, section 201 relating to the use of force in making an arrest will appear in a later part, as a general provision, based on s.117 of PACE.

The relevant text of PACE is annotated at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.15-127 to 15-152.

Place of custody

An issue raised by this Part was whether places other than Stanley Police Station should be designated for purposes of taking persons arrested, or requiring arrested persons to report. The UK uses the phrase ‘a police station’ and the Criminal Justice Ordinance follows that, but this was thought to be problematical in the Falkland Islands context. The Assembly agreed that it would be appropriate to have other places designated for receiving arrested persons and answering to bail and even detaining for short periods. See also Parts 5 and 6 for further implications.

This Part therefore uses the phrase ‘lawful place of custody’. It is defined in section 2 to mean any police station, or any other place designated in writing by any police officer of the rank of inspector or above in relation to a particular investigation. The term ‘police station’ is defined to mean Stanley Police Station or the Mount Pleasant Guard Room or any place designated by the Governor as a police station.

Notes on Sections

Section 44 empowers a police officer to arrest without warrant a person who is about to commit an offence, is committing an offence or whom the officer reasonably suspects is about to commit or is committing an offence. The power applies to any offence, but is limited to situations where the officer reasonably believes the arrest is necessary for one of a number of specified purposes e.g. to obtain the person’s name or address, to prevent the person causing injury or damage, to protect children etc. (sub-section (5)). There is no power to arrest without warrant a person committing an offence merely because the person is not ordinarily resident in the Falkland Islands but that might be a relevant consideration under sub-section (5)(f).

Section 45 empowers persons other than police officers to arrest without a warrant, but the grounds are narrower, so that the offence in question must be an imprisonable offence, and the justifications are limited to preventing the person from causing or suffering injury, causing loss or damage, or ‘making off’ i.e. running or driving away before a police officer can take charge. Sub-section (5) excludes offences under sections 536 to 547 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014. These are offences of stirring up racial or religious or sexual orientation hatred. The reason for excluding them is to avoid inflaming tension by removing the right of the public to arrest someone for e.g. a race hate speech.

Section 46 saves existing powers of arrest without warrant conferred on police officers or other persons by other written laws of the Falkland Islands (i.e. not UK applied laws.). This reverses the repeal effected by s.201 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance but is appropriate as such powers are needed in the context of their respective laws e.g. arrest by customs officers, or arrest for being drunk and disorderly in a public place. The exercise of the powers will however be governed by Parts 5 to 9 and other provisions of this Ordinance.

Section 47 is based on section 63A of UK PACE Act which was introduced by the Crime & Security Act 1010 and replaced section 27. It gives effect to Schedule 2 which is based on Schedule 2A to PACE – see also section 95(11). The Schedule refers to powers to take fingerprints contained in Part 6.

Section 48 says that a person who is arrested must be told that he or she is under arrest and must be given the reasons for it, even if the fact of arrest and the reason for it are obvious. This rule does not apply if the person escapes from arrest before being told the reason.

Section 49 says that a person who attends voluntarily at a place of lawful custody to assist an investigation must be allowed to leave unless arrested.

Section 50 provides that a person who is arrested elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody must be taken to the place of lawful custody as soon as practicable, and released if there are no grounds for keeping him or her. The UK provisions about designating a police station are replaced by the concept of a place of lawful custody.

Sections 51 to 54 are based on sections of the UK PACE Act which enable bail to be given by police officers elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody, e.g. at the scene of a crime or in hospital. (This is known as ‘street bail’).

Section 51 says that a police officer may release on bail a person who is arrested elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody and may impose as conditions of the bail any requirement that appears to the officer to be necessary to secure that the person surrenders to custody, does not commit an offence on bail, does not interfere with witnesses or obstruct the course of justice or for the person’s own protection or welfare.

Section 52 requires a notice to be given setting out the conditions of bail.

Section 53 says that a person who is released on police bail can be re-arrested without warrant if new evidence justifies it.

Section 54 enables a custody officer to vary the conditions of bail on request by the person to whom bail was granted at a place of lawful custody.

Section 55 enables the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court to vary the conditions of bail granted by a custody officer, on request by the person to whom bail was granted.

Section 56 enables a police officer to arrest without a warrant a person who has been released on bail under Section 51 but fails to attend the place of lawful custody at the specified time.

Section 57 says that if a person is detained for an offence and is about to be released, but a police officer wishes to arrest the person for another offence, that arrest must be done before the release.

Section 58 enables the police to search a person who is at a place other than a place of lawful custody after an arrest. The search is limited to anything the person might use to assist the person to escape from lawful custody or that might be evidence relating to an offence. If the person was arrested on premises, the premises can be searched, but only for things for which the person could be searched. The power to search a person does not include removal of clothing (except a coat, jacket or gloves) or search of the mouth. The power to search premises is limited to a dwelling place. The powers of retention are also limited.

Schedule 2 is given effect by section 47 and is also applied by section 95(11). It relates to attendance at a place of lawful custody for the taking of fingerprints and samples.

PART 5 – POLICE DETENTION

Introduction

Part 5 regulates police detention (as distinct from detention by a court.) It is based on Part IV of the UK PACE Act (sections 34 to 47) as amended by various UK Acts. It replaces and amplifies Part X (sections 150 to 164) of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. It is similar to Chapter 4 of Part II of the Falkland Islands draft PACE Bill of 2006 duly updated. There is material from recent UK statutes, including the Children Act 1989, Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994, Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001, Police Reform Act 2002, Criminal Justice Act 2003, Courts Act 2003, Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005, Drugs Act 2005, Police and Justice Act 2006, Coroners & Justice Act 2009, Police (Detention & Bail) Act 2011 and Police Reform & Social Responsibility Act 2011.

The PACE Act provisions about designating police stations where arrested people can be held in custody are omitted, as there is only one police station in the Falkland Islands. The concept of a ‘place of lawful custody’ adopted in Part 4 is carried over to this Part.

The PACE Act requires a custody officer to be appointed for each place of lawful custody who will make initial decisions about the detention of arrested persons brought to that place. The requirement is adopted, but modified by making the desk officer successively on duty at each such place the custody officer. The more senior officer on call at each such place becomes the ‘reviewing officer’, with power to review the decisions of custody officers.

The PACE Act requires custody officers to obtain the advice of the UK Crown Prosecution Service on whether detained persons should be charged or released. This requirement becomes a requirement to consult the Attorney General of the Falkland Islands.

The Part gives functions about bail decisions and extension of detention to the Summary Court as well as the Magistrate’s Court.

The Part sets time limits on the period of detention without charge (known as the ‘custody clock’). The basic rule is that a person must be charged within 24 hours of being arrested, but a senior officer may authorise detention for up to 36 hours, and a court may allow extensions of up to a maximum of 96 hours. (The Part requires the courts to sit on weekends and public holidays for considering extensions beyond 36 hours). A person who is in custody must then be brought to court within 72 hours of being charged.

The Part recognises the right of a detained person to the services of a legal practitioner (i.e. a lawyer), at the person’s own expense. The term ‘legal practitioner’ is defined in section 2 by reference to the Legal Practitioners’ Ordinance.

As with other Parts of the Ordinance relating to police powers, there is a Code of Practice governing the detention of arrested persons. (See Code C in Schedule 3).

The relevant text of the UK PACE Act is annotated at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.3-136 to 3-172.

The relevant UK rules are in Part 18 (Warrants for arrest, detention or imprisonment) and Part 19 (Bail and custody time limits) of the Criminal Procedure Rules 2012.

Notes on Sections

Section 59 requires there to be custody officers at each place of lawful custody. They will be responsible for making and keeping the custody record at that place and making decisions about detention. The ‘custody record’ is a record of particulars relating to the custody of a person who is arrested and brought to the place of lawful custody. The ‘custody officer’ is each police officer who is on desk duty when an arrested person is brought to the place of lawful custody and when decisions about the person’s detention fall to be made and recorded. The ‘reviewing officer’ for a place of lawful custody is an officer of the rank of sergeant or above who is on call for that place when custody decisions are to be reviewed. A custody officer or reviewing officer should not be involved in the investigation of the offence for which a person was arrested.

Section 60 imposes limitations on keeping an arrested person at a place of lawful custody. A custody officer must release a person once it becomes apparent that the original grounds for detention have ceased to apply and there are no other grounds for detention. A person who was unlawfully at large when arrested need not be released.

Release must be without bail unless further investigations are needed or proceedings are likely for the offence. The decision whether to grant bail, and if so, on what conditions, is governed by Part 9.

The provisions also apply to people arrested for failing a breath test under the Road Traffic Ordinance, and a person who attends the place of lawful custody to answer to bail.

Section 61 sets out the functions of custody officers in relation to persons in custody. They must make various decisions as to whether continued detention is justified, release people, on bail if appropriate, and keep a record of the decisions and action taken.

The custody officer must decide whether there is sufficient evidence to charge the person with an offence and may detain the person for as long as is necessary to make that decision. If the officer decides there is not enough evidence the person must be released either on bail or without bail, unless there is a need to secure and preserve evidence or to question the person, in which case the person may be detained.

If the custody officer decides that there is sufficient evidence to charge the arrested person, the person must be charged and released with or without bail. Persons released on bail must be informed as to whether a decision to prosecute has been made.

A person may be detained if a sample is required to be taken or if the person is not in a fit state to be released.

The duties under this section must be carried out as soon as practicable. The term “relevant time” used in (11) is defined in section 69(2).

Section 62 is new, but appears in the Falkland Islands PACE Bill of 2006 and is based on UK PACE Act 1984 ss.37A and 37B inserted by CJA 2003. It gives to the Attorney General the power to decide upon the sufficiency of evidence and formulation of any charges. The Attorney General can issue guidelines as to the information required for such decisions to be made and can delegate the decision-making power as appropriate.

Section 63 prescribes what happens if a person fails to answer to bail, after being released under section 61. Further bail can be granted if appropriate. It also provides for the situation where the Attorney General’s decision has not been given under section 62.

Section 64 makes further provisions about release on bail under section 61 or 63. Decisions under this section and Sections 65 and 66 are made by the custody officer. Under sub-section (1) the officer can appoint a different or additional time from that set under the original bail. (The setting of time is a normal condition of bail, as section 77 makes clear). This further condition must be made in writing and does not otherwise affect the conditions of bail. Sub-Sections (4) and (5) make provision for the keeping in custody of a person, in particular if the person is not in a fit state to be dealt with.

Section 65 sets out what should happen to a person detained at the police station once he or she has been charged, other than on a warrant endorsed for bail. The person should be released unless one of a number of conditions is met. They include situations where the person’s name or address cannot be ascertained; there are grounds for believing the person will not answer to bail, or will commit another imprisonable offence; a sample is required (in which case detention for up to 6 hours is allowed); there is a need to prevent harm to others or property; or detention is for the person’s own protection.

In the case of a youth, he or she should be sent to a segregated area of the police station.

The term “warrant endorsed for bail” has its natural meaning. The term ‘youth’ means a child or young person as in section 2. “Imprisonable offence” is defined in section 2 to mean an offence for which imprisonment can be imposed as a penalty (other than for non-payment of a fine.) A written record must be kept of decisions under this section.

Section 66 requires persons who are detained to be treated in accordance with this Ordinance and any relevant code of practice issued under it. All matters relating to such persons which are required to be recorded must be recorded in the custody record.

The custody officer may transfer custody of a person to an investigating officer or other officer but on the person being returned into the custody of the custody officer, he or she must also receive a report from that officer as to how the Ordinance and codes have been complied with during that time.

If a higher ranking officer orders a person to be treated differently, the custody officer must report the matter to the Chief Police Officer.

Section 67 requires reviews of detention to be carried out at regular intervals by the reviewing officer, and requires the officer to consider representations by or on behalf of the person detained (unless the person is asleep or unfit to make them due to his or her condition or behaviour). In certain circumstances the reviews may be postponed and in such cases they must be carried out as soon as practicable.

If the reviewing officer is given conflicting directions by a higher ranking officer, the reviewing officer must refer the matter to the Chief Police Officer.

Section 68 provides that the telephone may be used for the purpose of a review under section 67. It sets out the manner in which this is to be conducted, who has a duty to make the required record, and how representations are to be heard.

Section 69 provides that a person cannot be detained for longer than 24 hours without being charged, unless the period is extended by authorisation under section 70 or order of a court under section 71. The custody clock runs from when the person arrives at the place of lawful custody unless the person was arrested outside the Falkland Islands or attends the place voluntarily. Different considerations apply when the person is removed to a hospital for treatment. Sub-section (7) prohibits persons released from police detention being rearrested for the same offence without warrant unless new evidence has come to light since their release.

Section 70 enables detention of a person without charge to be continued for up to 36 hours if a police officer of the rank of inspector or above considers it necessary in order to secure or preserve evidence relating to an offence for which the person is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning the person. The officer must be satisfied that the offence is imprisonable and that the investigation is being carried out diligently and expeditiously. The authorisation can be given by telephone. A legal practitioner can also make representations by telephone. The person detained must be informed of the grounds of continued detention and this must be recorded. The person must be reminded of the right to have legal representation and to have someone informed of their arrest, if that has not already been done. At the end of the 36 hours the person must be released unless charged or unless further detention is authorised under section

Section 71 allows detention for a further period on a warrant by the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court. This is an informal hearing, not a court session, and in the Summary Court can be conducted by two justices of the peace – see section 73(1).

The application is made on oath by a police officer. A copy of the information on which the application is based (including the nature of the offence, the nature of the evidence, the inquiries undertaken and proposed and the reasons for requesting an extension) must be provided to the person detained and the person must be brought before the court. Sub-section (3) states the person's entitlement to be legally represented at the person's own expense. Further detention may be authorised under this section for up to 36 hours.

Section 72 allows for further detention on a warrant by the court in certain circumstances. See section 73(1) for the composition of the court. Such extension can take detention up to 96 hours from the "relevant time". The basis for the making of such an extension is similar to that of the original warrant (although of course the police will need to justify their actions since that warrant was issued).

Section 73 says that an application under section 71 or 72 can only be made on the authority of an officer of the rank of inspector or above. It also states the composition of the courts that can issue warrants under those sections. They sit otherwise than in open court, and the Summary Court consists of 2 justices only. The section requires the courts to sit on weekdays and public holidays for hearing an application under section 71 or 72. The section further says that any reference to a period of time or a time of day is to be treated as approximate only.

Section 74 requires a person who has been charged to be brought before the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court as soon as practicable, and in any event within 72 hours. (This means the full court sitting as such). Sub-Sections (2) and (3) provide for situations where the court might not be sitting at the required time or the person is in hospital and not well enough to be brought before the court.

Section 75 confers on police officers a power of arrest without warrant of a person who fails to answer bail, or who has breached the conditions of the police bail.

Section 76 deals with the grant of bail by police officers after arrest. Normal bail conditions available in criminal proceedings apply to release on bail under this section i.e. appointing of a time and place for appearance, taking of recognizances and sureties. The general rules about bail in criminal proceedings are in Part 9. The section provides for the setting of a date to appear before the court, which must be the first date that is convenient to all parties on which the appropriate court can sit.

The court can then set bail, and in doing so can vary the conditions attached by the police.

Section 77 applies to police bail the rules about conditions of bail in Part 9 with certain modifications. The police officer granting bail must give reasons in order to assist persons who may later review the decision.

Section 78 provides that a person who is re-arrested for absconding on bail is subject to the same rules as a person who is arrested for an offence.

Section 79 is a requirement for police records to be kept about persons in police detention. The Chief Police Officer must keep written records listing annually the numbers of persons detained for over 24 hours, the number of warrants for further detention applied for and the results of the applications.

Section 80 is a saving for the prerogative writ of habeas corpus. It also saves powers of detention for immigration offences.

Section 81 relates to the detention of youths. It requires the custody officer to inform the parent or guardian or other relevant person whenever a youth is detained. The supervisor must also be informed if there is an extant supervision order in relation to the youth.

PART 6 - QUESTIONING AND TREATMENT OF PERSONS BY POLICE

Introduction

Part 6 deals with the questioning and other treatment by the police of arrested persons at the police station and other approved places. In particular it deals with the taking of samples and the searching of persons. It replaces and expands Part XI of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. It is similar to Chapter 5 of Part II of the Falkland Islands draft PACE Bill of 2006, but with recent UK changes included.

Part 6 is based on Part V (sections 53 to 64) of the UK PACE Act as amended and expanded by various Acts, including the Criminal Justice Act 1988, Children Act 1989, Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001, Police Reform Act 2002, Extradition Act 2003, Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 2004, Drugs Act 2005 and Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005. Sections QT17 to QT33 on retention and destruction of samples and DNA profiles are based on recent UK law in Part 1 of the Protection of Freedoms Act 2012. This replaced the law introduced by the Crime & Security Act 2010 and is intended to comply with the human rights norms established in the EU.

The Part does not give any powers to justices of the peace or the Summary Court.

The Part allows searches etc. to take place at any place of lawful custody.

The Part retains the requirement for consent to be given before an intimate sample can be taken, but does not require consent before an intimate search is undertaken. A search can be conducted, but not for the taking of an intimate sample.

The Part differs from the UK law in not having a concept of ‘recordable offence’ or ‘arrestable offence’ or ‘indictable offence’. The distinction is between imprisonable offences (i.e. those for which a sentence of imprisonment can be imposed, as distinct from only a fine) and others.

The Part also differs from the UK law in reducing the seniority of the police officer by whom certain action can or must be taken. If authorisation is required for an action by another police officer it must be given by an officer of the rank of sergeant or above, but in some cases requires the rank of inspector or above.

The Part removes the requirement for a ‘trigger offence’ to justify a sample being taken for a drug search. See the formulation in section 96(2) and (3). There is therefore no Schedule of trigger offences. However, there is still a requirement for consent to be given before a drug search can be conducted.

The Part differs from the UK law in respect of offences committed outside the Falkland Islands. In UK law, an offence committed outside the UK which would be an offence in a place outside the UK can justify taking of samples and searching. The preferred approach for the Falkland Islands was that only behaviour which would also be an offence in the Falkland Islands renders the person liable to the taking of samples or searching. The Part therefore inserts an ‘and’ in the relevant paragraphs. See Sections 85(10), 91(13), 94(9) and 113(3).

The Part does not include provisions about a Biometric Data Commissioner, national DNA database, or Secretary of State’s guidelines, as in the UK. It does however give the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, power to make regulations about the storage of and access to samples and databases – see section 117.

This Part, and the police powers parts generally, do not include special provisions relating to drug trafficking offences as in the UK Drug Trafficking Act 1994. Nor do they incorporate the additional powers under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 or the Terrorism Act 2000.

Codes of Practice governing criminal investigations, searches and taking of samples are in Schedule and will have the force of law in the Falkland Islands under the authority of Part 7.

There is a commentary on the relevant UK PACE Act provisions at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 15-155 to 15-203

Notes on Sections

Section 82 defines various terms used in the Part that are not defined in section 2 or in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance. It also explains what is meant by an insufficient sample.

The term ‘relevant material’ is used to mean section 98 material i.e. fingerprints and DNA profiles.

Section 83 abolishes existing powers of search of detained persons by police officers. Although the existing powers were abolished by s.165 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance, there might be new UK powers that have become part of the Falkland Islands law since then so the abolition is repeated. The common law powers are also abolished.

The abolition does not apply to searches of stopped and arrested persons under Part 5. Nor does it apply to searches by non-police officers e.g. customs officers. Specific search rules in other Parts or in the Crimes Ordinance 2014 are not needed, unless there are other powers related to a search which should remain in effect. Any power to search persons detained at a place of lawful custody given by a future enactment will need to match with this Part.

Section 84 requires the custody officer to ascertain and record everything which a detained person has with him or her. If necessary for this purpose, the person may be searched i.e. the disclosure of property will be voluntary in the first instance. Anything that might be used to cause injury or damage or to assist an escape can be seized. Searches must be by an officer of the same gender wherever practicable and must be of the same gender for intimate searches.

Section 85 enables an officer of the rank of sergeant or above to authorise a search of a person to ascertain the person's identity. This can include the taking of photographs; but see section 115 for further rules on photographing suspects.

Section 86 enables an officer of the rank of inspector or above to authorise an intimate search of a person if the officer believes the person might have concealed drugs or things that could be used to cause injury. Intimate searches can only be carried out at a place of lawful custody or a medical establishment. An adverse inference can be drawn from failure to consent. People who are searched must be given reasons, and the Chief Police Officer must make an annual report about intimate searches made under this section.

Section 87 enables an officer of the rank of inspector or above to authorise the taking of X-rays and ultrasound scans if the officer thinks a person has swallowed drugs. The consent of an appropriate person is required, and the procedure can only be carried out at a medical establishment. An adverse inference can be drawn from failure to consent. The Chief Police Officer must make an annual report about X-rays and scans taken under this section.

Section 88 provides that a person who is arrested has the right to have a person informed of the arrest. Delay in informing a person is permitted in certain circumstances.

Section 89 provides additional protection for children and young persons who are arrested. The identity of the person responsible for welfare of the child or young person must be ascertained if possible, and that person told of the arrest.

Section 90 provides that an arrested person is entitled to have access to legal advice if the person so requests, but delay in providing such access is permissible in certain circumstances.

Under the present Legal Aid scheme a person in custody at the police station is entitled to free legal advice and assistance. However this has not been referred to in the Ordinance to avoid amendments having to be made should the Legal Aid scheme be altered in the future. Arrangements will be made with the Chief of Police to ensure that the suspect's Notice of Rights includes the information that legal representation will be free under the Legal Aid scheme, which can then be easily altered should the position change.

Section 91 prohibits the taking of a person's fingerprints without the written consent of the person unless the person is arrested for an imprisonable offence or has been charged with such an offence, and had not had his or her fingerprints taken previously. Fingerprints can also be taken of a person who is convicted of an imprisonable offence, or if there is a doubt about the identity of a person who answers to bail. Sub-section (16) provides for electronic fingerprinting by a device approved by the Governor in Council.

Section 92 permits impressions of footwear to be taken, but only with the appropriate consent unless the person is detained for an imprisonable offence. The term 'appropriate consent' is defined in section 82.

Section 93 permits the taking of intimate samples on the authority of an officer of the rank of inspector or above, and with the appropriate consent. The manner and place of the taking of a sample are prescribed. The court may draw adverse inferences from a person's refusal to consent to the taking of an intimate sample.

Section 94 permits the taking of other samples from a person without the appropriate consent in certain circumstances. The terms 'intimate sample' and 'non-intimate sample' are defined in section 82. Sub-section (18) provides for electronic taking of impressions by a device approved by the Governor in Council.

Section 95 enables fingerprints, footwear impression and samples to be compared with similar evidence taken previously in the Falkland Islands by other public authorities, or taken by an equivalent authority outside the Falkland Islands. This is known as a 'speculative search' as the section heading indicates. Schedule 2 governs the taking of fingerprints and taking of samples at a police station or other place of lawful custody.

Section 96 provides additional powers for the taking of urine samples or non-intimate samples from a person who has been arrested for or charged with an offence under the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance or if an officer suspects that misuse of a Class A drug or Class B drug caused or contributed to an imprisonable offence for which the person has been arrested or charged. The section does not include the requirement as in the UK Act for the Governor to notify the Chief Police Officer that the place of lawful custody has the necessary facilities, as if they do not exist, testing will not be done.

The terms 'Class A drugs' and 'Class B drugs' are defined in section 82 by reference to the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance.

Section 97 is supplementary to section 96. It creates an offence of failing to provide a sample under that section. It also requires the authorisation to be given in writing and recorded

Sections 98 to 114 are expanded versions of provisions that were originally sections 176 and 177 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance based on section 64 of the UK PACE Act. They are now replaced by sections 63D to U of PACE by Part 1 of the UK Protection of Freedoms Act 2012. They require fingerprints and DNA profiles to be destroyed after 3 years if the person from whom they were taken is not convicted. Footwear impressions must also be destroyed. However, such material can be retained if a person is convicted, or if the Chief Police Officer judges that there is a need to retain them. Provision is made for application to a court for an extension of the period. Samples and DNA profiles obtained unlawfully must be destroyed. Copies must also be destroyed or rendered inaccessible. Nothing is said about computer records, as such, but they would be records like any others and subject to the general rules.

Section 100(5)(c) gives power to the Governor in his or her discretion the power to authorise retention of DNA material on a written application by the Chief Police Officer. In the UK it is the Commissioner for the Retention and Use of Biometric Material.

Sections 106 and 113 use the term 'national security'. This is defined in section 2 to include the Falkland Islands, other Overseas Territories, the Crown dependencies and the UK. (The UK PACE Act uses 'national security' but does not define it).

Section 114 excludes from the rules about retention and destruction certain other material which is governed by other legislation.

Section 115 is based on section 64A of PACE but is placed after the later sections as it does not relate to the taking and destruction of samples. It permits a person who is detained at a place of lawful custody to be photographed with or without the appropriate consent. It also permits a person who is elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody to be photographed without consent if the person has been arrested for an offence or given a fixed penalty notice under the Road Traffic Ordinance. The purposes for which the photograph can be used are specified in sub-section (4).

Section 116 is a reminder that audio and visual recordings of interviews with suspected may be made, but that they are governed by the relevant Code of Practice.

Section 117 enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to make regulations about the storage of and access to samples and DNA profiles.

Schedule 2 is given effect by section 47 and is also applied by section 95(11). It relates to attendance at a place of lawful custody for the taking of fingerprints and samples.

PART 7 – CODES OF PRACTICE

Introduction

This Part gives effect to Schedule 3 which contains a number of Codes of Practice for the guidance of the police in the performance of their functions under the Ordinance. The Part is based on provisions of the UK PACE Act and the Criminal Procedure & Investigations Act 1996 as amended. There are no equivalent provisions in the Criminal Justice Ordinance, although Codes of Practice 'A' to 'E' were issued some years ago purporting to be made under s.137 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance 1989. That Ordinance (now Title 24.1) does not in fact give power to issue codes of practice, and it is a mystery as to how those Codes of Practice came into being or what their status is. This situation was remedied earlier in 2014 by publishing abbreviated Codes of Practice (See Executive Council Paper 42/14) which are now replaced by the provisions in this Ordinance.

Part III of the Criminal Procedure & Investigations Ordinance (Title 24.4) is based on sections 23 and 24 of the UK Criminal Procedure and Investigations (CPI) Act 1996 and contemplates the issuing of a code of practice on criminal investigations. It refers to an ‘English code’ being used meanwhile; this was the Home Office code issued under the CPI Act which was adopted, with minor modifications, as the Falkland Islands code by the Code of Practice in Relation to Disclosure Order 2003 (Title 24.4.1). That has become the ‘Disclosure Code’ included in Schedule 4 pursuant to section 120.

This Part includes provisions similar to sections 66 and 67 of UK PACE Act. It also has provisions similar to sections 21A to 25 of the CPI Act and section 60 and 60A of PACE. However, rather than empowering the Governor to issue Codes of Practice, it sets them out in Schedule 3 so that they are enacted by the legislature. The Governor is then given power, after consulting the CJ Council, by order to amend Schedule 3 by amending, adding or deleting any Code of Practice.

The UK Acts have been amended by the Criminal Justice & Court Services Act 2000, Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001, Police Reform Act 2002, Criminal Justice Act 2003, Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005 and Protection of Freedoms Act 2012. Provisions of the UK Terrorism Act 2000 which require a code of practice are not included as the additional powers of arrest, search etc. in that Act are not included in the Ordinance. Provisions of the UK Equality Act 2010 which are not being enacted as Falkland Islands law are nonetheless reflected in Code G on powers of arrest.

There are 9 codes in Schedule 3. The first 5 will replace existing Codes A to E supposedly made under the Criminal Justice Ordinance, as mentioned above. The Codes are based on similar codes issued by the Home Office but adapted to the circumstances of the Falkland Islands, and with references to the CPE Ordinance 2014.

Part 7 does not make any mention of Home Office Circulars or Attorney General’s Guidelines on these topics as they are too ephemeral to codify and are not legislative in nature. They can of course be referred to by judges and practitioners.

Codes of practice are discussed in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 15-2 to 15-17. See also paras. 15-173 to 15-177. The text of the codes is in the First Supplement 2013. The Falkland Islands texts are set out in Schedule 3 to the present Ordinance.

Notes on Sections

Section 118 requires there to be one or more codes of practice on search, arrest, seizure, etc. This requirement is met by Codes A to D and Code G in Schedule 3.

Section 119 requires the issue of one or more codes of practice on the recording of interviews. This requirement is met by Codes E and F in Schedule 3 which relate to audio recording and visual recording respectively. These codes also meet the requirement in Section 116 for codes of practice in relation to tape recording and visual recording of interviews.

Section 120 requires there to be one or more codes of practice on criminal investigations and records generally. The section provides examples of disclosure provisions. This requirement is met by the 'Disclosure' Code in Schedule 3.

Section 121 requires there to be one or more codes of practice on interviews with witnesses who have been notified to the police by the defendant. This requirement relates to the obligation on the defence under Sections 220 and 222 to disclose the identity of witnesses they intend to call. The requirement is met by the 'Defence Witnesses Code' in Schedule 3.

Section 122 empowers the Governor, after consulting the CJ Council, by order to amend, delete or add to the codes of practice in Schedule 3. The amendment must be published in draft, revised if necessary, and submitted to the Legislative Assembly under the negative resolution procedure (i.e. approved if not negative within 30 days of the amendment being laid).

If not disapproved, the code is published in the Gazette and comes into force by order of the Governor, after consulting the CJC. There is no requirement for consultation with any particular person or body.

Section 123 provides that a code of practice is admissible in evidence in all criminal proceedings and is to be taken into account in deciding any question. Failure to observe a code of practice by a police officer or any other person to whom it applies does not invalidate action taken but a provision or failure may be taken into account in deciding any question. Failure by a police officer to observe a provision of a code can also amount to a disciplinary offence. Sub-section (6) provides that any Code of Practice purporting to have been issued under the Criminal Justice Ordinance 1989 and the Code of Practice set out in the Code of Practice in Relation to Disclosure Order 2003 cease to have effect upon the commencement of the Part (because the Schedule 3 codes will then come into force).

Section 124 requires Codes of Practice to be published on government websites and made available at civic locations. They must also be available at police stations and other places designated as places of lawful custody.

CHAPTER 3 - CAUTIONING

PART 8 – SIMPLE AND CONDITIONAL CAUTIONS

Introduction

This Part deals with the giving of a caution to a person who has admitted a criminal offence. A caution is an 'out-of-court disposal', an alternative to prosecution, but becomes part of the police record relating to the person. It is to be distinguished from the term 'to caution' which informs a suspect of the possible consequences of answering or not answering questions in the course of a criminal investigation. Out-of-court disposals allow the police to deal quickly and proportionately with low-level, often first-time offending which does not merit prosecution. This allows the resources of the criminal justice system as a whole to be focused on more serious offending behaviour. It is important that out-of-court disposals are used appropriately and that their use is understood by practitioners; the Attorney General has issued guidance on their use as a part of the reform programme.

Cautions have been part of police practice in the Falkland Islands for some years, but have not been governed by Falkland Islands legislation up to now. In the UK, cautions are regulated by sections 22 and 23 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 for adults. For young offenders, the previous system of reprimands and warnings was abolished from 8 April 2013 and replaced with youth cautions (s.135(1) Legal Aid Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012).

This Part provides for one system for adults and youths, based upon current UK law.

There are two types of caution – simple and conditional. A simple caution is to the effect that although the person admits the offence no prosecution will follow on this occasion. A conditional caution means that although the person admits the offence, there will be no prosecution provided certain conditions are adhered to. The conditions that may be attached must be appropriate, proportionate and achievable. The aims should be rehabilitation of the offender, and reparation to the victim of the offence or to the community generally (as, for example, if the offence is damaging public property).

Provision is made in the Part for both types of caution to become spent although this is limited in certain circumstances (see Part 29). A simple caution becomes spent immediately, but a conditional caution only after 3 months, or, if the offence is subsequently prosecuted, at the end of any rehabilitation period for the offence – see section 136.

The form of cautions will be included in the published guidelines under section 135.

Part 29 contains provisions about the use of spent cautions in court – see Sections 637 and 638. Section 372 allows spent cautions to be adduced as evidence of bad character in court. These are exceptions provided for by section 136.

Archbold 2013 Ed. does not deal with cautions of this kind. There is a commentary in Blackstone 2013 Ed. at D2.23 to 44. Reference should also be made to the UK DPP's guidelines and various Home Office circulars and to the Falkland Islands Attorney General's Guidelines.

Notes on Sections

Section 125 contains definitions of terms used in the Part that are not defined elsewhere in the Ordinance or in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance.

Section 126 explains the nature of cautions generally. The decision on whether to give a caution, rather than prosecute or take no proceedings, is for the Attorney General. Sub-section (6) provides that a signed caution becomes part of the police records in respect of the offender and may be produced in any proceedings as rebuttable evidence of its contents.

Section 127 sets out in more detail the nature of simple cautions.

Section 128 sets out the nature of conditional cautions and the contents of a 'notice of caution'.

Section 129 says what kind of conditions can be attached to a conditional caution. It limits the hours that the offender can be required to spend at any specified place.

Section 130 goes into more detail about the nature of financial reparation conditions. The amount that can be required to be paid is limited to a fine at level 1 on the standard scale, which is £250 at present.

Section 131 enables the variation of conditions of a conditional caution in certain circumstances.

Section 132 says that if the offender fails to comply with the conditions of a conditional caution, he or she is liable to be prosecuted.

Section 133 says that if a person is to be prosecuted for breach of a conditional caution, he or she is liable to be arrested.

Section 134 makes various modifications to the police powers provisions of the Ordinance so that an arrest under section 132 is treated as an arrest for all purposes.

Section 135 enables the Governor, after consulting the CJC, to publish guidelines about the giving of conditional cautions.

Section 136 defines 'spent caution' and prohibits questioning of a person about a spent caution. The Governor, after consulting the CJC, can create exceptions to some of the prohibitions. The section does not extend to 'ancillary circumstances' as in the UK. Nor does it prevent evidence of a spent caution being adduced in evidence under other specified provisions.

Section 137 prohibits the unauthorised disclosure of spent cautions for any purpose.

CHAPTER 4 – BAIL

PART 9 – BAIL IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

Introduction

Part 9 regulates the granting of bail in criminal proceedings, up to the point of sentencing. The principles stated apply equally to the grant of bail by a court and by a custody officer at a police station under Part 5. They do not apply to a police officer arresting a person elsewhere than at a police station (sometimes called 'street bail') as to which see Sections 51 to 53 in Part 4. There are linkages to Part 5 in relation to persons granted bail by the police; see e.g. section 60(10).

The Part replaces in modern language most of the provisions relating to bail in Part IX of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. (Some of the Part IX provisions deal with committal for sentence etc). The Criminal Justice Ordinance provisions were derived from common law or UK statute.

The Part sets out in Sections 141 to 143 a number of principles for the grant of bail. They are essentially the same as those in the Schedule to the UK Bail Act 1976 and were already part of Falkland Islands law by virtue of section 143 of and Schedule 3 to the Criminal Justice Ordinance. These principles have long been observed in the courts in the Falkland Islands.

The Part incorporates many of the provisions of the UK Bail Act 1976 as amended by subsequent Acts, including the Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001, Criminal Justice Act 2003, Courts Act 2003, Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008, Coroners & Justice Act 2009 and the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012. The Part also incorporates some provisions of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 relating to bail.

The Part deals with bail granted by a court. Bail granted by the police after arrest is governed by the police powers provisions and is dealt with in Part 5. Section 3A of the Bail Act is at section 76 and the limit in section 142 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance on police powers to impose conditions of bail e.g. place of residence, is repealed.

The Part does not include provisions of the UK law relating to residence in a bail hostel, or 'associated persons'. It does include a power to require electronic monitoring as a condition of bail. It was anticipated that the electronic monitoring equipment will be readily available for use by the police in the very near future.

The Part restates the UK rule that recognisances cannot be taken from persons granted bail, but only from their sureties. A recognisance is a promise to pay cash, which would not be enforceable upon a defendant if they abscond. A defendant may however be required to provide non-cash security or a surety.

The Part refers to 'conditions' of bail rather than the 'requirements' of bail, except in reference to a requirement for a surety etc. It enables electronic monitoring of adults as well as youths to be a condition of bail.

The Part provides that the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court have the same powers on bail; but if JPs are making a bail decision other than as a court, there must be two JPs sitting together (and called a 'judicial authority'). Powers given to a 'judicial authority' under this Part can be delegated to the Clerk of the court if desired, by criminal procedure rules made under Part 36.

The provisions of the UK Acts other than the PACE provisions are discussed in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 3-1 to 3-134 and 3-173 to 3-218.

Notes on Sections

Section 138 defines some terms used in the Part and makes general statements about how the bail system works.

Section 139 sets out some general principles for the grant of bail. No recognisances (i.e. cash) can be taken from the person in question, but he or she can be required to give security, or to provide sureties from whom recognisances can be taken. Sub-section (6) provides for bail decision by the Supreme Court or a judge to be made on the papers if necessary.

Section 140 provides that if a court has power to remand a person the court may either remand the person in custody or on bail. The Magistrate's Court has the same options when sending a person for trial or committing a person for sentence. The section also provides for the continuation of bail if a person is remanded because of illness or accident.

Section 141 provides that a person who appears before any court charged with an offence is entitled to bail, up to the point where the person is convicted, subject to the rules in section 142.

There are exceptions for cases involving treason and murder, and offences involving the misuse of drugs call for special consideration.

Section 142 sets out the grounds on which a court can refuse bail. Sub-Sections (2) to (4) are derived from the Schedule to the UK Bail Act 1976 and include specific examples of the general rules. A person who is refused bail is entitled to a written statement of the reasons and to be told of his or her right to apply to the Supreme Court for bail.

Section 143 sets out the kind of conditions that can be attached to the grant of bail, and the considerations that can apply. The conditions must be only such as will ensure that the person surrenders to custody, does not commit an offence while on bail, does not interfere with witnesses, and makes himself or herself available for any report that the court requires. The court can order a person to surrender his or her passport. A court or a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above can also order electronic monitoring of compliance with bail conditions. The list is not exhaustive but sets out the most common conditions of bail.

Section 144 sets out the conditions under which electronic monitoring of compliance with bail conditions can be imposed.

Section 145 is based on the Schedule to the UK Bail Act 1976. It sets out the factors that the court must have regard to in considering whether to grant bail and on what conditions. They are – the nature and seriousness of the offence; the character etc. of the defendant; the defendant's record in relation to previous bail; and the strength of the evidence, plus any other factors that appear relevant, including any misuse of controlled drugs.

Section 146 requires a police officer or a court when granting or refusing bail or varying the conditions of bail to keep a written record of the decision. The officer or court must give a copy of the record to the defendant or his or her legal practitioner, whether or not it is requested. The court must also issue a certificate if it hears a fully argued bail application.

Section 147 deals with bail in relation to youths. They must be granted bail unless the case is one of treason, homicide, rape or other serious crime, in which case Sections 161 and 162 apply, or there are other compelling reasons for refusing it. A parent or guardian who consents may be required to stand surety for a youth.

Section 148 enables any court to vary the time at which a person given bail by the police at a place of lawful custody is to appear. It also enables any court to vary the conditions of police bail, on application by the Attorney General or the defendant. (Note that variation of police bail given elsewhere than at a place of lawful custody is governed by Sections 54 and 55).

Section 149 enables any court to reconsider a bail decision by that court, on the application of the Attorney General or defendant. It also enables the Magistrate's Court to vary a bail decision of the Summary Court when a case is committed for sentence to the Magistrate's Court, and enables the Supreme Court to vary a bail decision of either court when a case is sent for trial to the Supreme Court.

Section 150 sets out some general principles governing the variation of bail conditions. In general, it can only be done if new information comes to light. If the person is not before the court and a decision is made to refuse bail, the court must order the person to surrender to the court; the person will be arrested if he or she fails to surrender. Reasons for a change of a bail decision must be given. When an application for variation of bail is made, the court must give notice of the application and of the grounds for it to the other party. The form of notice can be prescribed by criminal procedure rules, if desired.

Section 151 enables the Attorney General or defendant to appeal to the Magistrate's Court from a bail decision of the Summary Court. The defendant may appeal by way of written notice within 14 days of the court decision to withhold bail. If the Attorney General is going to appeal, oral notice must be given to be given to the court immediately, and the court must remand the defendant in custody pending hearing of the appeal. The hearing of the appeal must commence within 2 days of the notice of intention to appeal being received. This is a new provision giving the Magistrate's Court appellate jurisdiction as recommended in the 2013 Court Review.

Section 152 enables a person who applied for bail to the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court to appeal to the Supreme Court against a refusal of bail, or against conditions of bail which are 'unacceptable' to the defendant. The appeal does not require a judge to be in the Falkland Islands as the appeal can be dealt with on the papers or via a video link, although the hearing would be in person if there is a judge in the Falkland Islands at the time.

There is no right for the Attorney General to appeal to the Supreme Court against a bail decision. This is similar to the position in the UK where the prosecution does not have a right of appeal against the grant of bail by the Crown Court (except, rarely, by way of judicial review). Nor is there any right of appeal on bail decisions to the Court of Appeal, though that court can grant or refuse bail in a case which comes before it on appeal, under the Court of Appeal Ordinance.

Section 153 enables the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court to grant bail to a person who is appealing against a decision of the court or who has asked for a case to be stated for the opinion of the Supreme Court.

Section 154 empowers the Supreme Court to grant bail to a person who appears before it in custody on committal or sending from the Magistrate's Court or who is awaiting disposal of his or her case or who is appealing to the Court of Appeal. A decision on bail if the person has been sent or committed from the Magistrate's Court must be made within 28 days.

Section 155 describes the system of sureties and sets out the principles for fixing them and the procedure for taking them. In deciding whether sureties are sufficient, regard may be had to the surety's financial resources; his or her character and any convictions; and his or her proximity to the defendant, in kinship or residence or otherwise. Sureties must be taken by the court or a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above.

Section 156 provides for the forfeiture of the recognisances of sureties, or for forfeiture of the defendant's security, if the defendant fails to appear as required. If the recognisance or security is money it must be paid as if it were a fine. Otherwise, it is enforceable as a civil debt.

Section 157 states the general duty to surrender to bail and makes it an offence for a person to abscond i.e. fail to appear in answer to bail. The Magistrate's Court or Summary Court can commit a person for sentence to the Supreme Court for absconding on a serious offence charge. (Note that the sending to the Supreme Court would not be for a higher penalty but for consideration of the totality of the offences.)

Section 158 empowers police officers to arrest without warrant a person who absconds or breaks the conditions of bail. A person on bail can also be arrested if a surety notifies the police that he or she no longer wishes to stand surety. The court must then decide whether to continue the bail or remand the person in custody.

Section 159 creates the offence of agreeing to indemnify sureties in criminal proceedings.

Section 160 provides that time spent on bail does not count towards a sentence if the person is sentenced to a custodial sentence.

Section 161 limits the circumstances in which a person can be granted bail in cases of treason or murder. It can only be granted by a judge, who will deal with the application on the papers if necessary. Bail must not be granted unless the court is of opinion that there is no significant risk of the defendant committing another imprisonable offence while on bail. Bail in a treason or murder case can only be granted by a judge, and must include a condition that the defendant undergoes a psychiatric examination, unless a report has already been obtained.

Section 162 limits the circumstances in which a person can be granted bail in a case of other serious crime i.e. attempted murder, manslaughter, rape or attempted rape. If the defendant has been previously convicted and imprisoned for an offence in the Falkland Islands, the UK, a British Overseas Territory or a Crown dependency, bail can only be granted if there are exceptional circumstances justifying it. This is in line with rulings of the European Court of Human Rights on the grant of bail.

Section 163 states that a court or justice of the peace when issuing a warrant of arrest can endorse it for bail if appropriate i.e. add a direction that the arrested person be released on bail to appear before a court at a specified time (a "warrant endorsed for bail").

Section 164 enables the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules relating to bail, so as to supplement the provisions of the Part. In the UK, the relevant rules are in Part 19 of the Criminal Procedure Rules 2012. See Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 3-118 to 3-134.

CHAPTER 5 – JURISDICTION

PART 10 – CONTROL OF PROSECUTIONS

Introduction

This Part deals with the control of the prosecution process. It codifies some common law provisions on the subject and incorporates some provisions of the UK Prosecution of Offences Act 1985. The Falkland Islands does not have a Director of Public Prosecutions, but the Attorney General has general supervision of the prosecution process. The main principles are set out in the 2008 Constitution at section 72 -

“Powers of Attorney General in relation to criminal proceedings

72.—(1) The Attorney General shall have power in any case in which he or she considers it desirable to do so—

(a) to institute and undertake criminal proceedings before any court of law (not being a court established by a disciplinary law);

(b) to take over and continue any such criminal proceedings that may have been instituted by any other person or authority; and

(c) to discontinue at any stage before judgment is delivered any such criminal proceedings instituted or undertaken by himself or herself or any other person or authority.

(2) The powers of the Attorney General under sub-section (1) may be exercised by the Attorney General in person or through other persons acting in accordance with his or her general or special instructions.

(3) The powers conferred on the Attorney General by sub-section (1)(b) and (c) shall be vested in him or her to the exclusion of any other person or authority; but, where any other person or authority has instituted criminal proceedings, nothing in this sub-section shall prevent the withdrawal of those proceedings by or at the instance of that person or authority at any stage before the person against whom the proceedings have been instituted has been charged before the court.

(4) In the exercise of the powers conferred on him or her by this section the Attorney General shall not be subject to the direction or control of any other person or authority.

(5) For the purposes of this section, any appeal from any determination in any criminal proceedings before any court of law, or any case stated or question of law reserved for the purposes of any such proceedings to any other court of law shall be deemed to be part of those proceedings.”

This Part seeks to supplement that section, by stating certain principles derived from English case law. The Part also incorporates some UK statute law. In particular, it provides for the setting of time limits for the conduct of prosecutions once a charge has been laid. (This is as distinct from the time limits for the bringing of proceedings which are set out in Part 11).

For a commentary on the UK provisions, see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 1- 324 to 1-366.

Notes on Sections

Section 165 empowers the Attorney General to appoint any counsel as a prosecuting counsel. It also sets out the powers of prosecuting counsel, including directing any other counsel appointed in a private prosecution. Prosecuting counsel is subject to the directions of the Attorney General. Section 166 provides that any police officer, or any public officer who has power to initiate proceedings, may prosecute cases in the Magistrate’s Court or the Summary Court that are instituted by the police or the service to which the officer belongs, subject to the directions of the Attorney General.

Section 167 retains the rule that private persons can bring prosecutions, but subject to the control of the Attorney General.

Section 168 deals with consents to prosecutions that are required in some statutory provisions. If such consent is necessary, it does not prevent a person being arrested for the offence. Evidence of the Attorney General's consent is admissible in the same way as evidence of a nolle prosequi – see section 165(5).

Section 169 sets out the time limits for the commencement of prosecutions. This is to ensure that prosecutions are conducted with due despatch and that defendants are not remanded in custody for long periods awaiting trial. The Chief Justice is given power to amend the time limits by criminal procedure rules and to make rules implementing them in particular cases. (In the UK the limits are set by regulations made by the Secretary of State).

Section 170 provides that the court may extend a time limit on a number of grounds, including the absence of the judge. This might occur if the Chief Justice was not available to conduct an indictment-only trial. The section provides that if the time-limits are exceeded, the defendant must be released on bail, with or without conditions.

Section 171 enables the Chief Justice to make additional rules relating to the timing of trials involving persons who are youths at the time of their arrest.

Section 172 provides for the re-institution of proceedings that have been stayed by a court as a result of the time limits in sections 169 or 170 being overrun.

Section 173 gives the Attorney General power to enter a nolle prosequi (i.e. a direction to discontinue the prosecution) in all criminal cases, including those brought by a private person.

Section 174 provides for discontinuance of proceedings in the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court. There is no bar to proceedings being reinstated but such a decision would be subject to close scrutiny by the court and possible abuse of process arguments from the defence.

Section 175 provides for the discontinuance of trials in the Supreme Court. There is no bar to proceedings being reinstated.

PART 11 – CRIMINAL JURISDICTION

Introduction

This Part sets out the general criminal jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court.

The Part is derived from and replaces sections of the Administration of Justice Ordinance dealing with criminal jurisdiction. That Ordinance was amended by the AOJ (Amendment) Ordinance 2013 and the AOJ (Amendment) (No.2) Ordinance 2013, both of which are reflected in this Part. The new Schedule 4 on Sending for Trial is incorporated in a separate Part 12.

The Administration of Justice Ordinance provisions were based on criminal law provisions of the UK Senior Courts Act 1981 (as it now is) and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and, more recently, the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The civil jurisdiction provisions of the Ordinance will need to be dealt with in due course by way of a separate Ordinance.

This Part does not include appeals and cases stated which is dealt with in Part 31 on appeals. Nor does it include committal for sentence which is dealt with in Part 13.

The Part does include extradition powers of the Senior Magistrate in section 178 by reference to the UK Extradition Act 2003. It also includes offshore jurisdiction in section 179.

The Part does not set out the procedure of the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court which is dealt with in Part 16 and by criminal procedure rules. Until such rules are made, the practice and procedure is equated to that of equivalent courts in England. The Part therefore omits references to the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and omits Schedules I and II of the AOJO, as the relevant provisions are in other Parts, or will be incorporated in criminal procedure rules.

The Part provides that until relevant criminal procedure rules are made, the practice and procedure of the Supreme Court in its appellate jurisdiction will be equated to that of the Court of Appeal and in its original jurisdiction to that of the Crown Court – see section 176.

The Part abolishes the role of assessors, but empowers the Senior Magistrate to invite justices of the peace to sit with him or her during criminal proceedings as observers for training purposes only. The existing justices of the peace were consulted on this change and were content in the light of their extended role in the Summary Court which will result in them sitting much more frequently than before.

All courts can deal with offences committed in the face of the court e.g. breach of confidentiality rules in Part 14, contempt of court etc. if empowered to act on their own initiative. (This is not stated but implied). A judge or the Senior Magistrate can exercise certain judicial functions while outside the Falkland Islands in certain circumstances – see section 183. Cases may also be transferred from the Summary Court to the Magistrate's Court and vice versa – see Sections 186 to 188. The Chief Justice (but not the Senior Magistrate) is given power to issue practice directions in relation to transfer of cases. The power to issue practice directions generally is included in Part 36. These provisions were designed to ensure maximum flexibility for court proceedings to go ahead given the geographic isolation of the Falkland Islands and the low number of legal practitioners resident here.

The provisions for all summary matters to be first listed in the Summary Court to determine venue are in Part 16.

There are no specific Archbold references for this Part, but see under various UK provisions for a commentary.

Notes on Sections

Section 176 sets out the criminal jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. There is a reference to the practice and procedures of the English courts, but only if there are no local criminal procedure rules. There is no limit to the power to impose a custodial sentence or a fine up to the prescribed maximum (or both, if so indicated by a penalty provision).

Section 177 sets out the criminal jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court, and provides that the practice and procedure are equated to that of an English District Judge (in a magistrates' court) until relevant criminal procedure rules are made by the Chief Justice after consultation with the CJC. There is no limit on the sentencing power up to the prescribed maximum. But the Magistrate's Court cannot deal with indictment-only offences. The Senior Magistrate has the power of a District Judge under the UK Extradition Act 2003 (which will be localised in due course).

Section 178 sets out the criminal jurisdiction of the Summary Court and provides that the practice and procedure are equated to that of a Magistrate's court in England until relevant criminal procedure rules are made. The Summary Court is restricted to imposing a maximum sentence of imprisonment of 6 months and there is a cross-reference to Part 27 in relation to the limit on the power to fine.

Section 179 incorporates an order made under the Offshore Minerals Ordinance 1994 as to offshore jurisdiction.

Section 180 is based on a provision in the Criminal Justice Ordinance, as amended by the Administration of Justice (Amendment) Ord. 2013. It says that lower courts can try any offence except an indictment-only offence, and that only indictment-only offences go to the Supreme Court for trial. This in effect abolished the distinction between indictable, summary and either-way offences.

Section 181 says that certain offences are triable on indictment only. They are offences stated in the Crimes Ordinance 2014 or in this or any other Ordinance or in a UK law applying to the Falkland Islands to be triable on indictment only. Attempts and conspiracy and other ancillary offences in relation to those offences are also indictment-only. The indictment-only offences include murder, manslaughter, piracy, treason, genocide, sexual offences that carry a life sentence, serious offences against the person, serious explosives offences, and corporate manslaughter. All other offences are summary offences although they include offences with a maximum sentence of imprisonment of up to 18 years. Appendix 2 to these Notes sets out the rationale for listing indictment-only offences and for setting the penalty levels for other offences.

Section 182 sets out the rules for the time-limit for commencing criminal proceedings. The rules are simplified from those in the Criminal Justice Ordinance which were extremely complex and differ from those in the UK. In the UK there is a 6-month time limit for offences that can only be tried in a magistrates' court; there is no time limit for either-way or indictable offences. This Ordinance provides that there is no time limit for indictment-only offences and those summary offences which carry a maximum penalty in excess of 6 months imprisonment. For summary offences carrying a maximum penalty of up to 6 months imprisonment there will be a time limit in which proceedings can be brought of 6 months from the date of the commission of the offence.

Section 183 says where courts can sit and when proceedings can be conducted while a judge or the Senior Magistrate is outside the Falkland Islands, whether by electronic means or otherwise. It incorporates some of the provisions of the AOJO as amended in 2013 with regard to the Senior Magistrate sitting outside the Falkland Islands.

(Note that the Falkland Islands Constitution is silent on place of sitting of the Supreme Court. Section 86 says the Court of Appeal can sit outside the Falkland Islands i.e. convene in London or elsewhere.)

Section 184 empowers the Senior Magistrate to invite justices of the peace to sit with the Senior Magistrate during criminal proceedings as observers. They do not take any part in the proceedings but are there for training purposes only. They may retire with the Senior Magistrate and may attend when the court is sitting in private. This facilitates an appeal if either party is aggrieved by the judgment or ruling. The record may be kept electronically, i.e. recorded, if facilities are available.

Sections 185 to 187 regulate the transfer of cases between the Summary Court and the Magistrate's Court. This is for administrative convenience only. It may be done before a trial begins, or after it has been concluded (e.g. for the enforcement of a fine.) It does not constitute a fresh trial, or affect the powers of sentencing of either court.

Section 188 gives the Chief Justice (but not the Senior Magistrate) power to issue practice directions on this topic.

PART 12 – SENDING FOR TRIAL

Introduction

This Part says how cases that are to be tried on indictment are sent to the Supreme Court. Part 13 deals separately with committals for sentence from the Summary Court to the Magistrate's Court.

In the UK, committal for trial has been replaced by sending for trial of certain offences since 2012. In the Falkland Islands, a policy decision to adopt the sending procedure for all indictment-only offences was taken and reflected in the Administration of Justice (Amendment) Ordinance passed in February 2013. That Ordinance created a new Schedule 4 to the Administration of Justice Ordinance and this Part is largely based on that Schedule.

Schedule 4 was in turn based on Schedule 3 to the UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998, as replaced by the Criminal Justice Act 2003. This Part adds some provisions to make the scheme more complete, based on provisions of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, the Criminal Procedure Rules 2013 and the practice of the courts. They relate to avoidance of delay, public notice, filing of the indictment, etc. as in Section 196 to 198.

There are rules supplementing the UK statutory provisions at Part 9 of the Criminal Procedure Rules 2012. For a commentary on the UK legislation see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 1-21 to 1-56

Notes on Sections

Section 189 states the extent of the application of the Part and defines some terms that are not defined elsewhere in the Ordinance.

Section 190 states the power and obligation of the lower courts to send adults for trial to the Supreme Court if they are charged with an indictment-only offence. It derives from ss.16 and 27 of the Administration of Justice Ordinance. Indictment-only offences are defined in section 181 above.

Section 191 states the power and obligation of the lower courts to send youths to the Supreme Court for trial.

Most of the remaining sections are derived from Schedule 4 to the Administration of Justice Ordinance as amended in February 2013. That Schedule was in turn based on Schedule 3 of the UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 as amended. For a detailed explanation of the sections, see the Objects and Reasons note to the Administration of Justice (Amendment) Ordinance.

Section 192 provides for an adjournment of a summary trial if the offence is linked to an indictment-only offence and sent to the Supreme Court.

Section 193 requires the lower court to give a sending notice when sending a person for trial. No time-limit is prescribed, but the notice must be issued as soon as practicable.

Section 194 provides that the person may be sent for trial either in custody or on bail.

Section 195 says that the documents containing the evidence must be sent to the Supreme Court within 56 days, or any longer period allowed by the judge on application. It also says what documents are admissible. They include written statements, depositions and other statements admissible under Part 20 on hearsay evidence.

Section 196 is not in Schedule 4. It requires public notice to be given of the outcome of sending proceedings.

Section 197 is also not in Schedule 4. It requires the lower court and the Supreme Court to avoid delay in dealing with cases involving child witnesses. The case should be brought before the next sitting of the Supreme Court unless the Chief Justice directs otherwise.

Section 198 is also new. It requires the Attorney General to file the indictment within 56 days of receiving the sending notice, or any longer time the judge allows.

Section 199 enables persons sent for trial to apply to the Supreme Court to dismiss the charge or charges. This was introduced by Schedule 4 and replaced the previous system of 'no case to answer' submissions. However, the principle on which a charge would be dismissed is the same i.e. that no jury properly directed would convict the person on the charge.

Section 200 restricts the reporting of the sending proceedings as well as on dismissal applications.

Section 201 restricts the reporting of applications for dismissal.

Section 202 applies to both types of restriction and lists the things that can be reported.

Sections 203 to 205 allow reporting of dismissal applications in certain circumstances.

Section 206 creates offences for a breach of the reporting restrictions and specifies the maximum penalty (a fine at level 5).

[Note that although there are criminal penalties for breaching reporting restrictions in this and other Parts, they can also be punished as contempt of court if committed in the face of the court i.e. in the presence of the judge. See Part 18 (Judicial proceedings) of the Crimes Ordinance 2014].

Section 207 empowers justices of the peace, when a person has been sent for trial, to take additional depositions of persons who are potential witness in the trial, whether they have already made a statement or not.

Section 208 empowers the justices to issue summonses and commit people to custody for refusing to give evidence.

Section 209 says that such depositions can be used as evidence in the trial.

PART 13 – COMMITTAL FOR SENTENCE

Introduction

This Part enables the Summary Court, after convicting a person of an offence, to send the person to the Magistrate's Court for sentencing, if the Summary Court considers its powers of sentencing to be inadequate. It incorporates, in a revised form, sections 14 and 15 of the Administration of Justice Ordinance, and part of section 58 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

The Part broadly reflects sections 1 to 7 of the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000, as amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003. However, the complex provisions of the 2003 Act relating to dangerous offenders and youths were not included as they were not considered appropriate for the Falkland Islands.

The reason for the Summary Court committing a person to the Magistrate's Court for sentence would be that the Summary Court considers that its powers of sentencing are insufficient in a particular case. As all first appearances take place in the Summary Court there may be cases which the justices feel require a higher sentence than they can impose; or a case might be transferred from the Magistrate's Court for administrative reasons after a plea of guilty so needs to go back to the Magistrate's Court for sentence.

In sentencing a youth, the Summary Court will be bound by rules about the age of the offender, and although these rules will apply also to the Magistrate's Court, that court could impose a higher sentence on a youth.

For a commentary on the UK legislation see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 5-25 to 5-41. Rule 42.10 of the UK CPR says what documents should be sent by the committing court and will be reflected in local criminal procedure rules.

Notes on Sections

Section 210 enables the Summary Court to commit a person to the Magistrate's Court for sentence if the person has been convicted of an offence for which the maximum sentence is higher than the Summary Court can impose (6 months imprisonment or a fine of £5,000).

Section 211 says that other offences and suspended sentences and breaches of conditional discharges can be included in a committal for sentence.

Section 212 sets out the powers and duties of the Magistrate's Court on a committal for sentence.

Section 213 regulates the position if the person is a youth.

Section 214 contains supplementary provisions relating to giving of notice, copies of court records and the provision of legal aid.

CHAPTER 6 - TRIAL

PART 14 - DISCLOSURE OF MATERIAL

Introduction

The aim of this Part is to reduce the possibility of either side in the adversarial process springing surprises that might cause an application to be made for an adjournment or that might have the appearance of unfairness.

The Part restates with modifications the provisions about disclosure of material that were enacted in 2003 in the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Ordinance. That Ordinance was based on the UK Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996, which has been amended by the Crime & Disorder Act 1998 and the Criminal Justice Act 2003. The Part therefore includes all the provisions of the Criminal Procedure & Investigations Ordinance, but omitted sections that were no longer relevant (e.g. as to commencement dates) or which were based on UK sections that have been repealed.

The Part includes sections based on ones added by the CJ Act 2003 – see Sections 219 to 223. It also includes provisions of the Sexual Offences (Protected Material) Act 1997 to sexual offences; that Act came into force in the UK in 2012.

The Part provides sanctions for acting in contravention of the confidentiality provisions. In the UK a contravention is treated as contempt of court; in Falkland Islands it is a summary offence.

The UK provisions are supplemented by a Home Office code of practice on the retention and disclosure of evidentiary material. The equivalent Falkland Islands Code will be the Code of Practice on the recording, retention and disclosure of material obtained in a criminal investigation ('Disclosure Code') included in Schedule 3 under Part 7.

The annotated UK texts are in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 12-45 to 12-122. See also the First Supplement paras. 12-52 to 12-113 which deal with the SO (PM) Act 1997 which only came into force in November 2012. See also Archbold paras. 12-2 to 12-44f for a discussion of the privilege against self-incrimination, legal professional privilege and public interest immunity. Note that sensitive material is dealt with at para.6.12 of the Disclosure Code.

Notes on Sections

Section 215 sets out the scope of the Part i.e. the situations in which the duty to disclose arises. They extend to persons charged with imprisonable summary offences to which they plead not guilty, and persons charged with indictment-only offences. The Part is limited to alleged offences into which a criminal investigation has not been commenced prior to the commencement of the Part.

Sections 216 and 217 set out the initial duty on the prosecutor. It is to disclose to the defendant any prosecution material which has not previously been disclosed and which might undermine the case for the prosecution or assist the case for the defendant. If there is no such material, the prosecutor must give the defendant a written notice to that effect. The prosecutor may apply to the court to refuse disclosure of material in the public interest. Disclosure must be made as soon as is reasonably practicable taking into account the nature and volume of the material.

Sections 218 to 223 impose obligations on the defendant in respect of documents and expert witnesses. There is a duty on the defence in certain circumstances to provide a defence statement to the prosecution. It must contain the nature of the defence or defences to be relied upon, matters of fact in dispute, matters of fact on which the defence intends to rely, points of law that may be raised and, if it contains an indication of there being an alibi, details of the witnesses the defence will rely on.

Section 221 imposes an obligation on the defence to disclose the names of its witnesses. A Code of Practice regulating the interviewing of defence witnesses by the police is in Schedule 3 – the ‘Defence Witnesses Code’.

Section 224 imposes a continuing duty on the prosecutor to disclose new material which comes to light. The duty may arise either independently or in response to defence disclosures.

Section 225 provides for the defendant to apply for disclosure from the prosecution if the defence believes that the prosecution has failed to comply with its duty to respond to the defence statement.

Sections 226 to 228 deal with the situations where the prosecutor or defence fail to observe time limits, or there are defaults in disclosure by the defendant. Failure to observe time limits by the prosecution is not in itself a ground for a stay of proceedings (nor is it contempt of court) but it does constitute such grounds if the delay is such that the defendant is denied a fair trial.

Section 227 provides that faults in disclosure by the defendant may be the subject of appropriate comments and the court or jury may draw appropriate inferences in deciding whether the defendant is guilty of the offence concerned (although it cannot be the only reason for conviction).

Sections 229 to 234 are based on the UK Sexual Offences (Protected Material) Act 1997 as amended by the CJ Act 2003. They create a more restricted regime for the disclosure of protected material i.e. material relating to sexual offences. The material must not be shown directly to the defendant, but only to a legal practitioner or other appropriate person who must ensure that the defendant does not copy or otherwise misuse the material. The term 'sexual offence' is defined in section 2.

Sections 235 and 236 provide for review of decisions that material is not to be disclosed for reasons of public interest. Section 235 relates to summary trials and section 236 to trial on indictment.

Sections 237 and 238 impose a duty on defendants not to use material that is disclosed except in connection with the criminal proceedings. A contravention is a summary offence (in the UK it is a contempt of court with an unlimited fine).

Section 239 sets out some procedural requirements. It requires the court to give a person who is applying for disclosure or review an opportunity to be heard. It also gives effect to Schedule 4 which incorporates Rule 22 of the UK Criminal Procedure Rules.

Section 240 empowers the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules relating to disclosure of material, in addition to the rules in Schedule 4.

Section 241 is a saving provision for other duties of disclosure, including the public interest principle. (See para. 5 of Schedule 4 for applying for a public interest ruling).

Section 242 repeats the provisions of Part 7 relating to the Disclosure Code in Schedule 3 and says that that code applies to police officers making decisions under this Part.

Schedule 4 incorporates the main provisions of Rule 22 of the Criminal Procedure Rules of England and Wales about serving of documents and the making of applications under the Part. It is anticipated that the forms will be included in criminal procedure rules made under section 240 or in a practice direction, as in the UK.

PART 15 – PRELIMINARY HEARINGS

Introduction

This Part enables courts to hold preliminary hearings in criminal cases and to order the parties to a criminal trial to do certain things before the trial commences. It applies in a trial on indictment or a summary trial of an imprisonable offence. The power to order a preliminary hearing therefore extends to the Summary Court when dealing with offences that are less than serious, and to that extent is wider than the UK power.

The Part is based on Part IV of the Criminal Procedure & Investigations Ordinance, which was based on Part IV of the UK Criminal Procedure & Investigations Act 1996. Other provisions of that Act were also included in the CPI Ordinance and have been restated in Part 14 on disclosure of material.

The Part adapts Part IV of the CPI Ordinance to remove the distinction between preparatory hearings and pre-trial hearings. The only reason for the distinction was that the Summary Court could not make rulings in preliminary hearings on evidence and other matters of law, whereas the Senior Magistrate could do so, as well as a judge. The Part provides for only one type of hearing – a preliminary hearing, in which orders can be made by all courts, including rulings on evidence and law. (All courts can also make such rulings in the course of a trial).

The Part combines various provisions about restrictions on reporting, which were duplicated in the CPI Ordinance.

The Part follows the CPI Ordinance in providing for an appeal only on rulings; there is no appeal against the making of an order to hold a hearing under section 246.

A power for the Supreme Court and Court of Appeal and Senior Magistrate to hear appeals on preliminary hearing rulings outside of the Falkland Islands is included in section 183.

The Part incorporates the rule-making power into Section 247, rather than having it as a separate power. It will be exercised by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council in accordance with section 783.

This Part provides for only one type of hearing, with power for all courts to make rulings, and no appeal on orders, but only on rulings.

For a commentary on the English provisions see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.4-112 to 4-156. Note that many topics dealt with in the English law are not needed in Falkland Islands, as there is no choice of venue.

Notes on Sections

Section 243 says how the Part applies and defines certain terms. The term ‘imprisonable offence’ is defined in section 2 to mean punishable by imprisonment. The term ‘linked offence’ is also defined in section 2.

Section 244 enables a judge (i.e. a judge of the Supreme Court, the Senior Magistrate or justices of the peace comprising a Summary Court) to order a preliminary hearing when there is to be a trial of a not guilty plea to an indictment-only offence or an imprisonable summary offence.

Section 245 makes provision about the timing of a preliminary hearing, etc.

Section 246 lists the orders that can be made at a preliminary hearing, including listing of documents, witnesses, etc.

Section 247 makes further provision about such orders, including a power for criminal procedure rules to do certain things. The Chief Justice is given power to make such rules to resolve any problems, including the relationship between this Part and Part 14 on disclosure.

Section 248 says what happens in the later stages of a trial if an order under section 246 is not complied with.

Section 249 enables any court to make rulings on points of evidence and law before a trial begins.

Section 250 provides for appeals against such rulings; to the Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court or the Senior Magistrate, as the case may be. This is needed as appeals to the Court of Appeal on rulings are not provided for in the Court of Appeal Ordinance. The appeal can be conducted by a judge or the Senior Magistrate while outside the Falkland Islands.

Section 251 imposes restrictions on reporting of preliminary hearings and orders made at them, and of rulings on evidence or law, until after a trial has concluded. The restrictions are similar to those in relation to sending for trial in Part 12.

Section 252 sets out certain exceptions to the rule against reporting of preliminary hearings, etc.

Section 253 makes it an offence to publish a report in contravention of the restrictions and prescribes the maximum penalty.

PART 16 – SUMMARY PROCEDURE

Introduction

This Part deals with both the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court procedure. It supplements Part 11 on criminal jurisdiction so as to provide for the proceedings of the lower courts. Part 17 deals with the procedure in the Supreme Court, including adjournments.

There were no equivalent provisions in the previous Falkland Islands laws and no Ordinance specifically dealing with the lower courts. The Administration of Justice Ordinance made a few jurisdictional provisions, but otherwise incorporated into Falkland Islands law provisions of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980. (Precisely which provisions of the Act as amended it was difficult to ascertain).

English procedure as contained in the 1980 Act therefore governed the lower courts. This Part sets out the key features of that procedure and thus reduced the need for reliance on the 1980 Act, except where there remained gaps. These will be filled by criminal procedure rules made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

Decisions on the role of justices of the peace e.g. how they will be chosen for each case, whether 2 or 3 justices should sit, will be taken by the Head of Courts, subject to relevant criminal procedure rules. The members of a Summary Court will choose their own Chair for the duration of a case.

In the UK, the choice of venue is a matter for the court, and the defendant can elect jury trial even if the court proposes summary trial for an either-way offence. In the Falkland Islands there is no choice – certain serious offences are indictment-only; other offences are triable summarily, unless an offence is a linked offence. The only issue on a summary offence is whether it should be heard by the Summary Court, the Magistrate's Court or the Supreme Court (see below).

Transfer between the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court as provided in the recent amendment to the Administration of Justice Ordinance is dealt with in Part 11. Sending for trial is dealt with in Part 12. Preliminary Hearings are in Part 15. Committal for sentencing is dealt with in Part 13 and bail in Part 9. Appeals to the Supreme Court are dealt with in Part 31. Evidence and sentencing dealt are also dealt with separately.

Provisions of this Part have been mainly derived from the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, as amended by a number of enactments, principally the Criminal Justice Act 2003.

The Part provides that all cases commence in the Summary Court and at the first hearing the bench determines the venue for the trial, whether the Magistrate's Court, the Summary Court, or (in the case of an indictment-only offence) the Supreme Court. This process is known as 'allocation'.

The Part prescribes the periods for which the lower courts can remand a person in custody or on bail. They are the same as in the UK.

The Part provides for a defendant to plead guilty to a minor offence without attending court. This repeats the previous system, but the provisions are clarified and made more consistent and includes corporations. A power to order the payment of costs is included, and the scheme can apply to corporations as well as individuals.

For a commentary on summary procedure, reference can be made to Archbold – Magistrates' Courts Criminal Practice 2013.

Notes on Sections

Sections 254 to 256 are preliminary provisions about interpretation and application of the Part, and the composition and sittings of the lower courts. They must sit at places in the Falkland Islands as directed by the Chief Justice and at times decided by the Head of Courts. The Summary Court must have a legally qualified or trainee legal advisor when in attendance when sitting.

Sections 257 to 262 say how a person can be brought before the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court. The basic methods are either an information and summons or an arrest and charge.

Section 258 sets out that once an information has been laid a JP may if the requirements of 258(3) are satisfied either issue a summons requiring the accused to attend court to answer the summons or issue a warrant for the accused's arrest (known as a 'first instance warrant').

Section 258(5) makes it clear that a warrant can only be issued if the accused is over 18 and either the offence is imprisonable or that the accused's address cannot be ascertained for the purpose of serving a summons.

There is no power for a court to issue a first instance warrant for a person under 18 as it is not considered an appropriate method of commencing proceedings against a youth. Usually either a summons would be issued, or a police officer will have arrested the youth without a warrant and charged him to come before the court either in custody or on bail, as per section 257(1)(b) or (c).

Section 258(3) includes a provision on territorial jurisdiction, which is consistent with the rule in section 179.

Section 263 provides that all cases commence in the Summary Court and at the first hearing the bench determines the court for the trial, whether the Magistrate's Court, the Summary Court, or the Supreme Court (in the case of an indictment-only offence).

Section 264 says that there can be an adjournment if the court conducts a preliminary hearing, as provided for by Part 15.

Sections 265 to 270 set out the procedure on the summary trial of an information, including of either party does not appear.

Section 271 provides for a plea of guilty in the absence of the defendant. It restates the Magistrate's and Summary Courts (Guilty Pleas in Absence) Rules made under the Administration of Justice Ordinance.

Schedule 5 contains the Forms prescribed by those Rules, with modifications.

Note that the provision is not limited to road traffic offences but is limited to offences for which the penalty is no more than 3 months imprisonment. The provision applies to corporations as well as individuals.

Section 272 deals with the situation where the defendant appears even after pleading guilty in absence.

Sections 273 to 277 set out the powers of the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court to remand persons brought before them. Remands for longer than 8 days are possible in certain circumstances, up to a limit of 28 days.

Sections 278 and 279 regulate the power of justices of the peace to summon witnesses, etc. See Archbold para. 9-137 and cases there mentioned. There are similar provisions in Part 17 in relation to the Supreme Court.

Sections 280 and 281 restate the ancient power to bind over persons to keep the peace.

Sections 282 and 283 deal with the postponement of taking recognisances and the forfeiture of a recognisance. See also Part 27 for fines and recognisances generally.

Sections 284 and 285 relate to proceedings against corporations.

Section 286 enables the court to re-open a case to rectify a mistake.

Section 287 empowers the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules to implement the Part, in particular in relation to guilty pleas in absence and the functions of the Clerk of the court, and to make rules governing summary procedure generally.

Schedule 5 prescribes the Forms for use in connection with section 271 on pleas of guilty in absence.

PART 17 - SUPREME COURT PROCEDURE

Introduction

This Part sets out some provisions about trials in the Supreme Court. It parallels Part 17 on trials in the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court and supplements other Parts which govern aspects of the procedure, such as Part 34 on mentally disordered offenders, and Part 9 on the grant of bail.

Section 48(3) of the Administration of Justice Ordinance provides that practice and procedure of the Supreme Court in criminal proceedings is that of the Crown Court in England. That rule is restated in section 176. This Part therefore incorporates relevant UK legislation such as the Indictments Act 1915, Criminal Justice Act 1988 and Criminal Procedure (Attendance of Witnesses) Act 1965. Other UK law only applies to the extent that a matter is not provided for in this Part or the Ordinance generally.

The Part provides that in general only the Attorney General can prefer an indictment, but provides for indictments on the direction of the Court of Appeal or a judge and for 'voluntary bills'.

Provisions on orders by the Supreme Court as to tainted acquittals etc. are in Part 32 on retrials etc.

The Part includes the provisions in Schedule 4 to the Administration of Justice Ordinance giving the Supreme Court power to deal with summary offences which are related to indictment-only offences.

See UK CPR Rules Part 14 as to indictments and Rule 28 as to witnesses. See also the Indictments Rules 1971 and the Indictments (Procedure) Rules 1971. All these will be replaced by FI criminal procedure rules.

Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 1-177 to 1-269 and 1-309 to 1-314 as to indictments. Also paras. 8-1 to 8-39 as to summoning witnesses.

Notes on Sections

Section 288 is a statement about jury trial. The defendant will be tried by a judge and jury unless the defendant elects to be tried by the judge alone. If there is more than one defendant, the trial will be by judge and jury unless all the defendants elect to be tried by judge alone – see section 298. For the details of jury selection and jury trial, see Part 18.

Section 289 regulates the times and places of sitting of the Supreme Court. It must sit in Stanley, except for matters that can be dealt with by a judge outside the Falkland Islands as set out in Section 183.

Sections 290 to 294 deal with the rules for the framing of indictments. See also the Indictment (Procedure) Rules 1971 as to voluntary bills. The rules are saved in Part 36 and will be re-made as criminal procedure rules under that Part.

Section 290 says who can prefer an indictment. It is normally the Attorney General unless the indictment is at the direction of the Court of Appeal or Supreme Court or by an individual with the consent of a judge (known as a “voluntary bill”).

Section 292 on joining of counts in an indictment is based on section 40 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 but adapted in view of the provisions of this Part as to choice of mode of trial. It does not affect the provisions in Part 12 as to summary offences being included in cases sent for trial to the Supreme Court.

Sections 295 to 297 provide for the various kinds of plea that can be entered. Section 297, based on section 122 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1988, says it is for the judge to decide issues of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict.

Sections 298 and 299 are local provisions that were originally in the Jury Ordinance. They enable a defendant who is sent for trial to elect whether to have trial by a jury or by judge alone.

Section 298 provides that a defendant will be tried by a judge and jury unless the defendant elects to be tried by the judge alone. If there is more than one defendant, the trial will be by judge and jury unless all the defendants elect to be tried by judge alone.

Section 299 makes further provisions about the choice of mode of trial, which takes place after the plea. The defendant is bound once the jury is sworn or a witness is called.

Sections 300 to 308 provide for the attendance of witnesses, based on the UK Criminal Procedure (Attendance of Witnesses Act) 1965 as amended in 1996. These provisions were part of existing Falkland Islands laws by virtue of s.48(3) of the AOJO which adopted the practice and procedure of the Crown Court in England and they reflect the practice in the Falkland Islands.

Contempt of court as referred to in section 306 is dealt with in Part 18 (Judicial proceedings) of the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Section 308 makes explicit provision for the payment of expenses to a witness which is currently only an administrative practice. See section 279(6) for expenses in the lower courts.

Sections 309 to 311 enable the Supreme Court to deal with summary offences that are sent for trial as being linked to an indictment-only offence.

Section 310 enables the Supreme Court to proceed in the absence of the defendant if the defendant is disorderly, or if the defendant’s legal practitioner indicates that that procedure is acceptable to the defendant.

Section 311 deals with the situation if a person has been convicted of a summary offence which was linked to an indictment-only offence and that offence is dismissed on appeal.

Section 312 empowers the Supreme Court to compel the appearance of defendants. There are equivalent powers in relation to the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court in Part 16.

Section 313 restates the rules in the Falkland Islands on adjournment of proceedings. There are similar rules in relation to the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court in Part 16 – see section 266.

Section 314 empowers the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules to implement the Part, in particular in relation to the functions of the Registrar, and to make rules governing Supreme Court procedure generally.

PART 18 – JURY TRIAL

Introduction

This Part incorporates into the CPE Ordinance most of the provisions of the Jury Ordinance. It also includes some provisions of the Administration of Justice Ordinance about juries in criminal cases. Sections 16 and 17 of the Jury Ordinance on choice of mode of trial are now in Part 11 on criminal jurisdiction where they fit more logically with other provisions about indictment-only offences.

The Part includes some new provisions shown as derived from 'common law' i.e. case law. They reflect the practice in the English and Falkland Islands courts and were included in a revised Jury Ordinance in a similar exercise for Gibraltar.

The Part includes a Schedule 6 based on the Schedule to the Jury Ordinance.

For clarity, the sequence of sections was varied from that in the Jury Ordinance. Some sections were combined. Section 339 about rules and directions is new. The statements of penalty have been simplified. The phrase 'in pursuance of the summons' is replaced by 'in response to the summons'.

The Jury Ordinance was based largely on the UK Juries Act 1974 as amended up to 2001. The relevant UK rules are in the CPR 2012 Part 19. There is a commentary on the Act in Archbold 2013 Ed. Paras. 4-266 to 328 and 4-502 to 509.

Section 40 of the AOJO giving the judge power to summon jurors is not included.

Section 8 of Jury Ordinance relating to talesmen (i.e. people in the vicinity of the court being called for jury service) was omitted following consultation.

The Part includes a requirement for the Governor, after consulting the CJC, to issue a code of practice about the summoning of jurors, to ensure fairness and that undue hardship is not caused - see section 319(6).

The Part provides for the appointment of a foreman which is not in the Jury Ordinance but is current practice and is in the UK Juries Act. As in the UK, the term ‘foreman’ is retained.

Note that section 339 gives the Chief Justice power to make rules about views by the jury.

Notes on Sections

Section 315 defines some terms used in the Part. Other terms are defined in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance or in section 2 of the Ordinance.

Section 316 sets out the qualification for jury service. The exemptions are in Schedule 6.

Section 317 requires certain information to be provided by immigration officers to the Registrar.

Section 318 states the general liability of all qualified persons in Falkland Islands to perform jury service.

Section 319 says how persons are to be summoned for jury service. Sub-section (6) requires the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to issue a code of practice about the summoning of jurors.

Section 320 says how notices are to be served.

Section 321 provides for the empanelling of jurors.

Section 322 provides for excusal for previous jury service.

Section 323 provides for discretionary refusal.

Section 324 states the circumstances in which a jury summons can be discharged.

Section 325 regulates the size and composition of juries. They should have 12 members for murder and other serious offences, and 7 members for lesser offences.

Section 326 regulates the taking of the ballot and the swearing of jurors. The same jury can deal with a second case within 24 hours of the end of the first. The jury does not deal with special pleas (autrefois acquit or autrefois convict or pardon) nor does it decide the issue of fitness to be tried.

Section 327 allows a defendant to challenge jurors. Peremptory challenge was abolished in the UK in 1988 and in the Falkland Islands by the Jury Ordinance. For the avoidance of doubt, this section states the fact. The right of the prosecution to ask jurors to ‘stand by’ for the Crown is not included.

Section 328 requires a foreman of the jury to be appointed and states the duties. (The term ‘foreman’ is retained as it is still used in England and Wales).

Section 329 limits the circumstances on which documents produced as exhibits can be taken by the jury to the jury room. This is not in the Jury Ordinance but is current practice and is in the UK Juries Act.

Section 330 enables the judge to allow the jury to separate after being sworn and before they give a verdict. The need for a warning on separation is not statutory in the UK but is well established in case law. The section also enables the judge to allow jurors to have refreshment at the court's expense.

Section 331 provides for the continuation of a trial on the death or discharge of a juror, but with minimum numbers specified.

Section 332 enables the judge to discharge a jury if there is reason to suspect that it has been tampered with. Jury tampering will be an offence under the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Section 333 says that the verdict must be delivered in open court.

Section 334 enables the judge to take a majority verdict after a minimum of 2 hours of deliberation.

Section 335 enables the judge to discharge a jury without giving a verdict if it is unable to agree; a minimum period of 3 hours must elapse.

Section 336 says that judgment after the verdict cannot be stayed or reversed just because of formal defects in the process for empanelling a jury. Personation of a juror was a common law offence and was included in the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Section 337 authorises the payment of jurors for their service. It differs from the provision in the Juries Ordinance by making payment a right, subject to amounts fixed by criminal procedure rules.

Section 338 creates a number of offences relating to juries and jurors, including impersonating a juror – see R v Kelly [1950] 2 K.B. Sub-section (6) comes from the Administration of Justice Ordinance. The penalty for contempt is stated in the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Section 339 is new; it gives the Chief Justice power to make criminal procedure rules and give directions as contemplated by earlier sections. The rule-making power includes the power to regulate juries viewing the scene of the crime, etc.

Schedule 6 sets out the categories of people that are ineligible for or disqualified from jury service. The Legislative Assembly made a number of changes to those categories which has reduced the number of occupations ineligible and narrowed the group of people ineligible on grounds of mental disorder so that people receiving treatment for e.g., depression, bi-polar disorder and possibly epilepsy will be eligible for jury service if capable of doing so.

CHAPTER 7 – EVIDENCE
PART 19 – EVIDENCE: GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Introduction

This Part brings together a number of rules relating to the admission and reception of evidence in criminal proceedings. It restates the provisions of the Criminal Justice (Evidence) Ordinance other than those dealing with vulnerable witnesses, which are included in Part 22. It also restates the provisions of the Criminal Justice Ordinance relating to evidence.

The Part includes some principles about reception etc. of evidence derived from UK case law. These are noted as ‘case law summarised’.

The Part includes new material based on UK legislation on the subject. In particular, it includes provisions as to when evidence of bad character can be introduced and restrictions on the making of derogatory assertions in the course of mitigation.

The CJ (Evidence) Ordinance incorporated into Falkland Islands law the UK Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, which has been amended or replaced in a number of respects since 1999, and this Part incorporates those amendments. Section 48 of the CJ (Evidence) Ordinance says that other provisions of the Youth & Criminal Justice Act 1999 are not part of Falkland Islands law, but this Part does not restate that; it is in the repeals and disapplication provisions in Part 36.

The Part also has provisions based on the Magistrate’s Courts Act 1980, the Criminal Procedure (Attendance of Witnesses) Act 1965, the Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (‘PACE’) and the Criminal Procedure & Investigations Act 1996, all as amended.

Other provisions relating to the admissibility of evidence in criminal proceedings are contained in Part 20 on hearsay and documentary evidence, in Part 21 on live links, and in Part 22 on vulnerable witnesses.

There is no definition section in this Part as all relevant terms are defined in section 2.

Several different sections of Archbold 2013 deal with evidence. The relevant paragraphs can be found by reference to the Table of Statutes and the Contents.

Various provisions of the UK Criminal Procedure Rules 2013 also apply, in particular Rule 33. These will be reflected in criminal procedure rules to be made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council as required by section 36.

Notes on Sections

Sections 340 to 342 set out some basic principles for admission of evidence, derived from the UK PACE Act 1984 as amended.

Section 340 sets out the principles for the admission of statements. Sub-section (1) allows a court to refuse to admit a statement otherwise admissible under Part 20 (hearsay evidence) if in its opinion the interests of justice are best served by not admitting it. Sub-section (2) says what the court needs to take into account in coming to its decision, including the nature and sources of the document concerned, the extent to which the statement appears to supply evidence which would otherwise not be readily available, the relevance of the evidence and the risk that the admission or rejection would cause unfairness to the defendant.

Section 341 is a general rule regarding the exclusion of unfair evidence. It says that in any proceedings the court may refuse to allow evidence on which the prosecution proposes to rely to be given if it appears to the court that having regard to all the circumstances, including the circumstances in which the evidence was obtained, the admission of the evidence would have such an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings that the court ought not to admit it. This is in addition to any other rule of law that requires a court to exclude evidence.

Section 342 retains the rule that a defendant must prove an exception, etc., which has been held by the UK Supreme Court to be not inconsistent with the right to a fair trial.

Summoning and calling of witnesses

Sections 343 to 347 are derived from the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and case law, but applied to all courts. They govern the power to summon and examine witnesses, in addition to the specific rules in Part 16 as to the lower courts and Part 17 as to the Supreme Court. Criminal procedure rules will need to prescribe the rates of costs and expenses to be tendered to witnesses summoned to appear in court.

Section 343 sets out a general power to examine witnesses etc. It allows a court, at any stage of criminal proceedings, to examine any person in attendance whether summoned as a witness or not and recall and re-examine any person already examined. Sub-section (3) gives parties the right to cross-examine witnesses and allows the court to adjourn proceedings if in its opinion the adjournment is necessary to allow the cross-examination to be adequately prepared.

Section 344 empowers the court to order the Chief of Police to bring a witness who is in custody before the court.

Section 345 provides for the arrest and punishment of recalcitrant witnesses. This section empowers the courts to deal with persons who appear before them as witnesses and refuse to give evidence or fail to appear at all.

Section 346 deals with the giving of evidence by the defendant in criminal proceedings. The evidence will usually be given from the witness box (unless the court orders otherwise) and failing to do so may not be made the subject of any adverse comment by the prosecution, except under Section 366 below.

Section 347 states when a defendant is to give evidence in a trial if he or she chooses to give evidence. The general rule is that a defendant will be the first witness for the defence.

Section 348 sets out the general rule that evidence given before a court in criminal proceedings must be given on oath, subject to any provision allowing the reception of unsworn evidence. An oath includes an affirmation or declaration where appropriate (see section 2).

Competence and compellability

Sections 349 to 356 are about the competence and compellability of witnesses. They replace and expand sections 40 to 43 of the Criminal Justice (Evidence) Ordinance. Some of the provisions are based on UK case law and existing Falkland Islands practice, while others come from the UK PACE Act 1984 or the Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

Section 349 states the general rule that, subject to exceptions, all persons regardless of age are competent to give evidence at every stage of criminal proceedings. Sub-section (2) makes an exception for persons who cannot understand questions put to them and give understandable answers. Sub-section (3) says that a person charged is not competent to give evidence for the prosecution even if the person is only one of two or more persons charged. This exception does not include persons who have pleaded guilty already or are otherwise no longer liable to be convicted. Part 1 includes a general provision about interpretation of evidence – see section 2(7).

Section 350 says how the competence of witnesses is to be decided. It is for the party calling the witness to satisfy the court that on the balance of probabilities the witness is competent.

Section 351 deals with whether or not a witness can be sworn. A witness may not be sworn unless he or she is at least 14 years of age and has a sufficient appreciation of the solemnity of the occasion and of the particular responsibility to tell the truth that the taking of an oath entails.

Section 352 provides for the reception of unsworn evidence. The penalty for false unsworn evidence is in section 480 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Section 353 abolishes the right of the defendant to make an unsworn statement (a statement from the dock). This comes from the UK Criminal Justice Act 1982. Subject to the provisions of this section a defendant who wishes to make a statement must be sworn and is liable to cross-examination. This does not affect the right of a person to represent themselves and thereby make any representation that a legal practitioner could make, or any right to make a statement conferred by any other law, or to plead in mitigation. This section will not affect trials or proceedings which began before its commencement.

Section 354 states the rules about the competence of persons charged and their spouses. The general rule is that a person charged with an offence, and the spouse of the person, is a competent witness for the defence at every stage of proceedings. However, a person charged may not be called as a witness in proceedings except on his or her own application and the spouse may not be called as a witness except on the application of the person charged unless so provided in this Part. Sub-section (4) says that nothing in this Part compels a spouse to disclose any communications made during the marriage by the other spouse. Sub-section (5) allows for incriminating questions to be put to a defendant.

Sections 355 and 356 state the rules about the compellability of defendants' spouses. A defendant's spouse can be compelled to give evidence on the defendant's behalf (unless the spouse is also a defendant). The spouse can be compelled on behalf of a co-defendant or the prosecution if the evidence against the defendant relates to a specified offence. Former spouses are treated as if they had never been married to the defendant.

The term “specified offence” is defined in section 358 as an offence which involves an assault on, or injury or threat of injury to the spouse or a person under the age of 16, or it is a sexual offence committed against a person under the age of 16.

The term ‘spouse’ is defined in section 2 to include civil partners, although these are not provided for in Falkland Islands law, as people from the UK may well have such partners.

Convictions and acquittals

Section 357 provides that in the Magistrate’s Court and Summary Court, evidence of previous convictions is admissible after conviction, if notice of them has been served on the defendant. They will be relevant to sentencing.

Section 358 sets out the procedure to be followed to prove a conviction or an acquittal. It can be done by production of a certificate of conviction or acquittal from the proper officer of the relevant court.

Section 359 explains how convictions can be evidence of the commission of an offence. The general rule is that in any proceedings where the fact is admissible the fact that the defendant or a person other than the defendant has been convicted of an offence in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving that such person committed the offence unless the contrary is proved.

Sections 358 and 359 both apply to convictions in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere in the world, not limited to the EU, and include convictions in a court martial.

Section 360 says how fingerprints can be adduced as evidence in criminal proceedings. It is based on case law as there is no statutory provision on the subject.

Admissions and confessions

Sections 361 to 364 are about the evidentiary value of admissions and confessions. They come largely from the UK PACE Act 1984, as amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003. The term ‘confession’ is defined in section 2 as in s.82 of the PACE Act 1984, i.e. a statement wholly or partly adverse to the person who made it, whether made to a person in authority or not and whether made in words or otherwise.

Section 361 sets out the circumstances in which a party may formally admit a fact and the use to which such an admission may be put by the parties. (See CPR Rule 37.6 on this point.)

Section 362 provides that in any proceedings a confession made by a defendant may be given in evidence against the defendant in so far as it is relevant to any matter in issue in the proceedings, unless it is excluded by the court. There is an exception with regard to confessions obtained by oppression or as a result of something said or done that may render it unreliable. The exclusion of a confession does not render inadmissible anything discovered as a result of it and parts of it may still be used for particular purposes (such as to prove that the defendant express himself or herself in a particular way).

Section 363 sets out how confessions made by a defendant may be used by a co-defendant. The rules governing this are similar to those governing the use by the prosecution.

Section 364 deals with a confession made by a mentally handicapped person. Special care must be taken by the court if it is the only evidence against the person, and a particular direction must be given to the jury if the confession was not made in the presence of an independent person (i.e. a person other than a police officer or a person employed for police purposes).

Inferences from silence

Sections 365 to 370 are about inferences that can be drawn from a defendant's silence on various matters and at various stages of the proceedings. While not abolishing the right of silence, these provisions give a right to draw adverse inferences from silence, which was not the case in Falkland Islands law prior to this Ordinance. The provisions are derived from the UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 as amended by the Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999. These Sections are not inconsistent with the right to remain silent contained in section 5(5) of the Constitution because the right of silence is preserved, but the judge gives an appropriate direction.

Section 365 provides that in proceedings for an offence, if evidence is given that the defendant before being charged with the offence, when questioned under caution by a police officer, failed to mention a fact relied on in defence in the proceedings or failed to mention a fact that the defendant could reasonably have been expected to mention, the court or jury may draw any inference from the failure that appears proper. The police caution given to a suspect upon arrest and/or interview is modified to reflect the inferences which can be drawn.

The provisions have now been in daily use in the UK for some 20 years. A body of case law has been developed and there are directions for Judges in respect of the approach to take in addressing the issues of inferences which can be drawn and the directions to be given to a jury on such matters.

Section 366 is about the defendant's silence at trial. If the defendant does not give evidence or fails without good cause to answer any question, inferences that appear proper may be drawn.

Sections 367 and 368 enable inferences to be drawn in cases where the defendant has failed or refused to account for objects, substances or marks on his or her person, in his or her possession or at any place at which he or she was arrested etc. and for failure or refusal to account for his or her presence at a particular place.

Section 369 is an interpretation and saving provision for the previous Sections about inferences from silence.

Section 370 is about inferences in homicide cases, where the offence of causing or allowing the death of a child or vulnerable adult has been preferred in respect of the same death. Sub-section (3) ensures that in cases of murder or manslaughter submissions of no case to answer may only be made at the conclusion of all the evidence. The section is based on section 6 of the UK Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004. Other provisions of section 6 on the relationship between common assault and murder or manslaughter are included in Part 4 (Offences against the Person) of the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

Evidence of bad character

Sections 371 to 385 are new in the Falkland Islands. They enable a defendant's bad character to be adduced in evidence in certain circumstances and are based on Chapter 1 of Part 11 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003.

There always have been some exceptions to the rule that a defendant's bad character is not admissible in evidence. If all parties agreed; or if the defendant either attacked the character of a witness or put his or her own in issue were such examples, with the leave of the judge. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 expanded the circumstances when evidence of bad character can be adduced; but only with the leave of the judge and when certain circumstances apply. The provisions have been in use in the UK for nearly 10 years. A substantive body of case law has been developed regarding the appropriate circumstances when such evidence can be admitted.

Section 371 contains interpretative provisions for the following sections on evidence of bad character. It includes signposts to definitions and explanations given in other sections. The section also clarifies the scope of these sections by reference to similar and related topics in other sections and Parts (including impeaching the character of one's own witnesses etc.)

Section 372 defines "bad character" as evidence of or of a disposition towards misconduct other than that in the alleged facts of the offence charged or in connection with the investigation or prosecution of that offence. A previous conviction, including one resulting in an absolute or conditional discharge, and a caution, may be adduced as evidence of bad character, even if any relevant rehabilitation period has expired. But the admissibility of any bad character evidence is subject to Sections 374 to 385.

Section 373 abolishes the common law rule that bad character cannot be adduced in evidence. (This was needed as the status in Falkland Islands of the provision of the CJ Act 2003 which abolished the rules was not clear).

Section 374 enables evidence to be given of the bad character of a person who is not a defendant. It is admissible if it is important explanatory evidence, it has substantive probative value or all parties agree to it being admitted.

Section 375 enables evidence to be given of the defendant's bad character if all parties agree; if the evidence is adduced by the defendant; if it amounts to important explanatory evidence relating to a matter in issue between the defendant and the prosecution, or a matter in issue between the defendant and a co-defendant; if it corrects a false impression given by the defendant; or if the defendant attacks another person's character.

Section 376 defines the term "important explanatory evidence".

Section 377 defines the term "matter in issue between the defendant and the prosecution". The test is whether evidence of bad character would tend to show a propensity to commit the kind of offence with which the defendant is charged. Evidence that a person has committed a specified offence, as listed in Schedule 7, can be given to show such a propensity.

Section 378 defines the term “matter in issue between the defendant and a co-defendant”.

Section 379 enables evidence to be given to correct a false impression.

Section 380 enables evidence of a defendant’s bad character to be given if the defendant attacks another person’s character.

Section 381 provides that if in a jury trial the evidence has been contaminated by the wrongful admission of evidence of bad character, the court must either direct the jury to acquit or, if it considers there should be a retrial, discharge the jury.

Section 382 deals with the admission of evidence of offences committed by a defendant when a child. If the conviction relates to an offence committed when the defendant was under 14 and the defendant is now over 21 the evidence may only be admitted if both offences were indictment-only and the court is satisfied that it is in the interests of justice that the evidence should be admitted.

Section 383 creates a presumption of truth when the relevance or probative value of evidence of bad character is being assessed.

Section 384 requires a court to give reasons for its rulings on the admission of evidence of bad character.

Section 385 enables the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules relating to the admission of evidence of bad character, with particular reference to requiring a prosecutor to serve on the defendant a notice of intention to adduce evidence of bad character of the defendant or, through cross-examination, of a witness.

Expert evidence

Section 386 provides for the admissibility of expert reports and for their admission without oral evidence with the leave of the court.

Section 387 provides for the form in which expert evidence is to be given and for a glossary of technical terms to be provided in a jury trial.

Section 388 enables evidence to be given by an expert on the basis of work prepared by another person unless the court otherwise orders. The court must take into account the cost of calling the original person and the interests of justice.

Section 389 requires advance notice of expert evidence to be given by the party proposing to call the expert. Criminal procedure rules may be made on this aspect.

Proof of non-payment of sum adjudged

Section 390 is about evidence of non-payment of sums adjudged and is based on the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980.

Schedule 7 lists the offences that can be regarded as offences of the same description for the purpose of adducing evidence of a propensity to commit an offence under section 377. There are 2 categories - offences of theft, etc. and sexual offences. It is necessary to have a list as not all offences of either category are relevant for this purpose. (In the UK the categories are prescribed by Statutory Instrument; see the list in S.I. 2004 No.3346).

PART 20 – HEARSAY AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Introduction

This Part sets out the rules which allow evidence other than first-hand evidence to be given in criminal proceedings. The two main categories are hearsay evidence and documentary evidence, but within those categories there are various types of evidence, including evidence given by signs, video camera evidence and so on.

There are no local statutory provisions specifically about hearsay evidence in Falkland Islands law at present, but many of the rules are already observed in the Falkland Islands courts as they are based on common law and conventional practice of the English courts.

The hearsay provisions of the Part are largely based on the codification of the hearsay rules as contained in Chapter 2 of Part 11 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003. It also includes provisions of the UK Criminal Procedure Act 1865 which were part of the practice of the courts in the Falkland Islands (Sections 401 and 402).

The provisions on documentary evidence are derived from various sources, including the UK Criminal Justice Act 1967 and the Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as well as some provisions of the Gibraltar Criminal Procedure Act.

Other aspects of hearsay evidence, such as confessions and admissions, expert evidence and the use of statements are dealt with in other Parts of the Ordinance.

The Part does not include any provisions about the admissibility of computer evidence. Section 69 of the UK PACE Act 1984 (which restricted the use of computer records) was repealed by s.60 of the Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999. The CJ (Evidence) Ordinance at s.45 stated the position correctly –

“Evidence from computer records

Any provision of the written law of the Falkland Islands which would or might render evidence from computer records inadmissible unless conditions relating to proper use and operation of the computer are shown to be satisfied shall cease to have effect and the common law in relation to the admissibility of such evidence shall again apply.”

It is not necessary to retain that provision as evidence from computer outputs will normally be admissible as a record under the general rules. It must be given appropriate weight, like any other evidence, and evidence that the computer was working correctly etc. is only one of the factors.

Section 122 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, which is about documents produced as exhibits accompanying the jury when they retire, is in Part 18 on jury trial (see section 329). It is therefore also omitted from this Part.

The provisions of this Part apply to all courts and do not need express extension to lower courts as in the UK.

For a commentary on hearsay evidence see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 11-1 to 11-76. See also Chapter 9 on documentary evidence.

Notes on Sections

Section 391 provides definitions of terms that are not defined in section 2.

Hearsay: Main provisions

Section 392 says that hearsay evidence is not in general admissible but that it can be admitted if all parties agree, or if the court is satisfied that it is in the interests of justice to admit the evidence. The test for the interests of justice includes the probative value of the evidence; what other evidence has been or can be given; how important the evidence is in the context of the case as a whole; the circumstances in which the statement was made; how reliable the maker of it appears to be; whether oral evidence of the matter can be given and if not, why not; how difficult it would be to challenge the statement; and whether that difficulty would prejudice the party facing it.

Principal categories of admissibility

Section 393 says what is meant by a statement or matter stated. It can include for example a sketch or photofit of a person.

Section 394 says a hearsay statement is admissible if the witness is unavailable because dead or unfit to attend court; is outside the Falkland Islands and cannot easily be brought to court; cannot be found after taking reasonable steps to find the witness; or is afraid to come to court. The court must consider the interests of justice, having regard to any risk that excluding the statement would result in unfairness to any party, and having regard to the possibility of special measures being available to protect a witness. (See section 429 below).

Section 395 allows the admission of statements contained in documents created or received by a person in the course of business. The court can refuse to admit such a statement if there is doubt about its contents, the source of the information, the way in which it was supplied or the way in which the document was created.

Section 396 preserves existing categories of admissible hearsay, including public information, evidence of reputation, res gestae (things said at the time), confessions, admissions and expert evidence. Detailed provisions on some of these categories are in Part 19.

Section 397 makes previous inconsistent statements admissible in certain circumstances as set out in the following 2 Sections.

Under section 398, if a witness proves adverse (i.e. gives evidence against the party calling the witness) a previous inconsistent statement made by the witness can be put in evidence by that party in order to discredit the witness.

Under section 399 a previous inconsistent statement of a witness can be put in evidence by a cross-examining party in order to discredit the witness.

Section 400 provides that a previous consistent statement of a witness can be put in evidence in order to rebut an allegation that the witness' evidence in court is fabricated.

Hearsay: Supplementary

Section 401 imposes an additional requirement for admissibility of multiple hearsay (i.e. hearsay evidence intended to make other hearsay evidence admissible.) It provides that such hearsay is only admissible if it is admissible under the previous rules, or the parties agree to its admission, or the court is satisfied that the value of the second hearsay evidence is so high that the interests of justice require it to be admitted.

Sections 402 and 403 deal with capability and credibility of witnesses. Hearsay evidence is only admissible if given by a witness who is capable and credible.

Capability is explained in section 402 to mean the witness must be capable of understanding questions and giving understandable answers. If there is a jury, this issue has to be tried in the absence of the jury. There are similar provisions in Part 19 and a provision about interpreters as an aid to understanding is included in Part 1 – see section 2(7).

Section 403 enables the credibility of a hearsay witness to be tested in the same way as that of a witness giving oral evidence.

Section 404 enables a court to stop a case if it is based wholly or mainly on hearsay evidence and that evidence is unconvincing. This applies equally to trials with a jury and to trials by judge alone and summary trials.

Section 405 gives the court a general discretion to exclude hearsay if to admit it would involve undue waste of time, having regard to the value of the evidence.

Section 406 provides for representations other than by a person e.g. by a diagram or machine. They are admissible but only if it is proved that the information fed in was accurate. The presumption that a mechanical device works correctly is not affected.

Section 407 enables criminal procedure rules to be made on the topic, including rules about giving notice of an intention to adduce such evidence. The UK rules are in Part 34 of the CPR 2013.

Documentary evidence

Sections 408 to 414 are provisions about the admissibility of documentary evidence of various types.

Under section 408 a written statement by a witness is admissible if it is signed by the person making it and contains a declaration that it is true to the best of the maker's knowledge and belief. A copy must be served on the other party, who is entitled to object within 7 days. The party adducing the statement can still call the maker of it, as can the court.

Section 409 makes various certificates and statutory declarations admissible. They include a police certificate about a map or plan, a certificate of ownership of a motor vehicle, and a declaration about the despatch of a mail package. Sub-section (2) makes a statement by a person under the Road Traffic Ordinance, that the person was the driver of a vehicle on a particular occasion, admissible in evidence.

(Some other Falkland Islands ordinances also provide for certified documents of various kinds to be admissible in evidence and section 417 preserves these provisions.)

Section 410 enables copies of a document containing an admissible statement to be adduced in evidence if authenticated in a manner the court approves.

Section 411 allows a witness to refresh his or her memory from a statement or record made by the witness earlier. This might be in the form of a police officer's notebook or the transcript of a recorded statement.

Section 412 is about microfilm copies. It enables a document to be produced in evidence by a microfilm copy, authenticated in a manner the court approves.

Section 413 provides for the admissibility of copies of statements or documents that are admissible in evidence by virtue of this Part.

Section 414 sets out 3 supplementary principles about documentary evidence based on common law principles.

Video recordings

Sections 415 and 416 enable video recordings of someone making a statement to be used as evidence in criminal trials in all courts.

Under section 415, a video recording of an account of an event given by a witness to the event is admissible in evidence if the court so directs. The court must be satisfied that the video recording is likely to provide a more accurate account than oral evidence by the witness in court, and must have regard to the time and quality of the recording and the views of the witness in deciding what the interest of justice require.

Section 416 allows part recordings to be admitted if they would not prejudice the defendant. It also says that a court cannot direct a video recording to be admitted unless the court is satisfied that there are facilities in the court for playing such a recording.

PART 21 – LIVE LINK EVIDENCE

Introduction

This Part makes provision for the use of television or other forms of live link for the giving of evidence in criminal proceedings in all courts when a witness is not available. The Part incorporates with appropriate modifications provisions of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003 on this topic.

There are other provisions about the use of live link evidence in Part 22. They enable live link evidence to be given as a way of protecting vulnerable witnesses. There are also provisions in Part 19 allowing the use in evidence of video recordings of persons making statements, but this is not live link evidence as provided for in this Part.

The Part confers powers on justices of the peace when sitting as a Summary Court, as well as on the Senior Magistrate and a judge.

For a commentary on the UK provisions see Archbold 2103 Ed. paras. 8-139 to 8-144.

The UK CPR 2013 Part 29 has some provisions on live link evidence.

Notes on Sections

Section 417 provides a definition of “live link” and makes savings for other powers of the courts. The live link must be capable of being seen by relevant persons in the court, as defined. The list is similar to but more extensive than that in section 446.

Section 418 provides for a witness (but not a defendant) who is outside the Falkland Islands to give evidence by live link with the leave of the court. It is based on section 32 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1988.

Section 419 provides for any witness (but not a defendant) to give evidence by live link if the court is satisfied, after hearing representations from the parties, that it is in the interests of the justice for the person concerned to give evidence in the proceedings through a live link and that suitable facilities for receiving evidence through a live link are available. It is based on section 51 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003.

Sections 420 and 421 are additional provisions about the giving of evidence by live link pursuant to section 422. They are based on sections 52 and 54 of the 2003 Act.

Section 422 states two procedural rules based on the rule-making powers in section 55 of the 2003 Act.

Section 423 is based on section 55 of the same Act applied generally. It enables the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules relating to live links. (In the UK, Part 29 of the Criminal Procedure Rules 2013 is relevant.)

Section 424 is based on part of section 32 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 applied generally. It makes it clear that giving false evidence on oath by live link is the same as if it were given in court i.e. it is an offence of perjury.

PART 22 – VULNERABLE WITNESSES

Introduction

The main aim of the Part is to protect vulnerable witnesses and vulnerable defendants in court proceedings from situations that might make them reluctant to testify or might negatively affect the quality of their evidence. In so doing it seeks to ensure that the court has access to the evidence necessary to reach the best possible decision in a criminal case.

The particular problems that the Part seeks to avoid include over-intrusive cross-examination of a witness by or on behalf of a defendant; unsettling and intimidating encounters by victims with their alleged attackers; inappropriate exposure to the media of the details of certain offences; and witnesses reluctant to give evidence because of fear of reprisals from defendants. The Part empowers a court to vary the normal rules of procedure and evidence in order to protect witnesses and defendants from harassment, etc. but only in specified circumstances and to a limited extent.

The Part restates sections 4 to 39 of the Criminal Justice (Evidence) Ordinance, but taking into account recent amendments to the UK laws on which those were based i.e. the Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999, the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992, the Courts Act 2003 and the Coroners and Justice Act 2009.

The 2009 Act repealed and replaced the Criminal Evidence (Anonymity of Witnesses) Act 2008 which introduced the new concept of anonymity for witnesses in certain situations. That Act was in response to the House of Lords judgment in R v Davis (18 June 2008) which held that the use of anonymous witness evidence in a trial was not permissible at common law. It replaced the rules of the common law with a statutory framework to secure anonymity of witnesses in those proceedings, where to do so is compatible with the defendant's right to a fair trial guaranteed by Article 6 ECHR.

The Part provides for the Summary Court as well as the Magistrate's Court and Supreme Court to have power to make special directions orders and other orders.

The Part sets the age of 18 as the age of a child witness.

The Part imposes restrictions on the reporting of the identity of victims of certain offences and of witnesses. Following current UK law, the Part does not impose restrictions on the reporting of the identity of adult defendants

Some key definitions are in section 2 e.g. 'picture', 'recording'

For a commentary on the UK provisions see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.8-71 to 8-144; also 8-147 to 8-179 as to anonymity orders and 8-225 to 8-252 as to cross-examination etc.) The commentary on reporting restrictions is at paras. 4-30 to 4-39. The anonymity provisions are at paras. 20-257 to 20-262.

The relevant UK Rules are in Parts 29 and 31 and 36 of the CPR 2012. Local rules will be made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

The UK Practice Direction on video recorded evidence in chief is incorporated in section 439. There is also UK Ministry of Justice guidance on ‘good practice’ – see Archbold paras. 8-91 to 8-92. There is also a UK Practice Direction about witness anonymity orders - see paras 8-167 to 8-175.

Notes on Sections

Section 425 defines certain terms used in the Part that are not defined in section 2 or in the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance. It also makes general interpretative provisions for the Part.

Special measures

Sections 426 to 444 provide that courts may give special measures directions in relation to eligible witnesses. Such measures may be made available for child witnesses, witnesses who have mental disorders, learning difficulties, physical disabilities or disorders. They may also be made available in respect of witnesses who are fearful or distressed about giving evidence, for example because of the behaviour of the defendant or the family of the defendant towards the witness. A witness in a sexual case is automatically eligible for special measures unless he or she indicates they are not needed.

Sections 426 and 427 set out the criteria for eligibility.

Section 428 requires the court to be satisfied that special measures facilities are available before making a direction.

Sections 429 and 430 say how the courts are to exercise the power to give a special measures direction.

Sections 431 to 433 make particular provisions for children or young persons where the offence is a sexual offence or an offence of violence and the witness is under 18 years old. (These terms are defined in section 2 to mean offences in Schedule 3 and 4 respectively to the Crimes Ordinance 2014).

Sections 434 to 441 set out the various special measures directions which can be made where appropriate. They include the removal of wigs and gowns in court, the giving of evidence through video, a live television link or an intermediary and the giving of evidence in private.

Section 439 is derived from a UK practice direction about editing and production of video recordings issued in 1992 and repeated in 2002. See Archbold para. 8-90.

Section 440 allows for the video recording of the cross-examination or re-examination of a witness. This is based on section 28 of the UK Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 as amended by the Courts Act 2003 s.109. It is not yet fully in force in the UK. The other Special Measures in the 1999 Act have been commenced gradually since the Act was passed and section 28 was commenced on 30 December 2013 for a pilot evaluation in the Crown Court at Liverpool, Leeds and Kingston upon Thames. Following a successful pilot, it is anticipated that section 28 will be applied across England and Wales by the end of 2015.

Sections 443 and 444 define the status of evidence given under special measures.

Sections 445 to 448 provide for the use of live links and intermediaries for the evidence of certain defendants so that vulnerable defendants may be permitted by the court to give evidence by live television link or through an intermediary.

Sections 449 to 454 empower the court to prohibit defendants from directly cross-examining certain witnesses – for example a person charged with a sexual offence would be prohibited from directly cross-examining the alleged victim of the offence. In connection with sexual offences the Part allows the court to restrict the evidence which can be given about the complainant's sexual behaviour.

Section 453 requires the court to appoint a legal practitioner, payable out of public funds, to cross-examine a complainant on behalf of a defendant in a sexual case who is unrepresented. Criminal procedure rules to implement this obligation will be needed.

Reporting restrictions

Sections 455 to 467 restrict the reporting of certain types of proceedings. They limit the reporting of offences and alleged offences involving children and in relation to other criminal offences. Publications which breach these provisions are liable to prosecution for a criminal offence.

Sections 458 and 459 impose reporting restrictions that go beyond those currently in force in the UK, but are contained in the YJCE Act 1999.

Sections 465 to 467 provide that in cases involving sexual offences, no matter relating to the victim may during that person's lifetime be included in any publication, if it is likely to lead members of the public to identify that person. This rule can be displaced in the public interest, but the mere fact of acquittal of the defendant does not itself displace it.

No provision was made for restricting the identity of a defendant accused of sexual offences because there is no provision for this in either UK or FI law at present. The Bill Select Committee considered whether it was appropriate in this legislation to include such a change and concluded that anonymity should not be extended to defendants in sex offence cases.

Anonymity of witnesses

Sections 468 to 475 create a statutory power for the courts to grant witnesses anonymity in criminal proceedings provided this is consistent with the right of a defendant to a fair trial. They provide for the making of witness anonymity orders in criminal proceedings where witnesses are intimidated or where disclosure of identity will cause real harm to the public interest.

Section 468 which abolishes the common law rule is taken from the Criminal Evidence (Anonymity of Witnesses) Act 2008. That provision was not repeated in the 2009 Act as the rule was by then abolished, but it is included for the avoidance of doubt in the Falkland Islands context.

Section 473 includes a requirement to give a warning in a summary trial as well as a trial on indictment.

Sections 474 and 475 enable a court to discharge or vary an order. The term ‘appellate court’ used in section 478(6) is defined in section 2 as the Court of Appeal or Supreme Court, as the case may be.

Savings

Section 476 saves the operation of any other rule of law in relation to evidence in criminal proceedings, including public interest immunity.

CHAPTER 8 – SENTENCING

PART 23 - SENTENCING: GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Introduction

Part 23 sets out general principles about sentencing powers of the courts, including provisions about deferment of sentence and powers of punishment generally. It replaces some sections of the Criminal Justice Ordinance dealing with sentencing.

The term “sentence” is defined in section 2 as including any order made by a court when dealing with an offender in respect of the offence. There are some general principles about penalties in this Part derived from Part II of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

This Part should be considered in conjunction with other parts dealing with specific aspects of sentencing. Part 24 deals with discharges, Part 25 with community sentences, Part 26 with custodial sentences, Part 27 with fines, recognisances, etc. and Part 33 with young offenders.

The Part applies to the Magistrate’s Court and Summary Court as well as the Supreme Court.

The provisions of this Part are derived from some sections of the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 (‘the Sentencing Act’) and on sections in Chapter 1 of Part 12 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003 (‘the 2003 Act’). It includes amendments to those Acts made by e.g. the Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008, the Coroners & Justice Act 2009 and the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012.

Section 17 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance on deferred sentences is expanded into Sections 489 to 492. Section 10 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance is repeated in section 492.

The Part includes powers to take into account aggravating factors as in sections 145 and 146 of the 2003 Act. Those factors are racial or religious aggravation and aggravation related to disability or sexual orientation which the legislature considered to be of sufficient seriousness to merit the court having the power to impose sentence uplift in such cases.

The Part also includes a discount for assisting the authorities, as a factor relevant in mitigation. It also includes provision for victims of offences to make submissions in the sentencing process – see Sections 498 to 500.

There is a commentary on general sentencing principles in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.5-1 to 5-168. The UK Sentencing Council Guidelines are in the first 2013 Supplement. They will be replaced by guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Committee under section 485 and Part 35 in due course. There are various UK Practice Directions on the use of antecedents etc.

Notes on Sections

Sections 477 and 478 are based on sections 142 and 144 respectively of the 2003 Act. They do not however refer to minimum sentences or required custodial sentences as such sentences are not appropriate in the Falkland Islands.

Section 477 states the purposes of sentencing to be punishment of offenders; reduction of crime; reform and rehabilitation of offenders; making of reparation by offenders. However, these principles do not necessarily apply to young offenders, to sentences fixed by law (i.e. life imprisonment) or to detention under the Mental Health Ordinance.

Section 478 says how the seriousness of an offence is to be determined. The court must consider the offender's culpability in committing the offence and any harm which the offence caused. The court must take into account previous convictions and whether the offence was committed on bail.

Sub-sections (6) and (7) are based on sections 145 and 146 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and provide for enhanced sentencing if the court is satisfied that the offender at the time of the offence demonstrated hostility or was motivated by hostility towards the victim based upon race, religion, disability or sexual orientation.

These provisions only apply if the court is sentencing for an offence which is not an aggravated offence under the provisions of sections 546 to 550 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014. Those offences carry an increased maximum penalty to cover the specific type of aggravation charged, which the prosecution have to prove beyond reasonable doubt. The enhanced sentencing provisions of Section 481 do not increase the maximum penalty but do increase the seriousness with which the offence is viewed and influence the court's choice of sentence within the range.

Section 479 is based on section 143 of the 2003 Act and says how guilty pleas can be taken into account. It does not say that a court can reduce a sentence for a guilty plea; this is left to the common law and court practice. What it says is that if the court intends to reduce a sentence for a guilty plea, it must take into account the stage in the proceedings when the indication of an intention to plead guilty was given and the circumstances in which it was given. (It does not include guilty pleas in courts martial held in the Falkland Islands, as they are governed by military law and do not necessarily relate to offences committed in the Falkland Islands).

Section 480 makes general statements about sentencing, including that penalties are maxima, and are cumulative or alternative, as in the Criminal Justice Ordinance. It confers a power to mitigate sentence by taking into account any relevant matters. This is based on s.166 of the 2003 Act but expressed as a power to mitigate, rather than as a saving of an inherent power.

Section 481 is based on section 34 of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and is expanded to confer powers of mitigation on all courts. A 'community sentence' is a form of non-custodial sentence under Part 25; the term is defined in section 2, as is 'mentally disordered offender'. The section also provides for mitigation to be heard in private if necessary and for documents not to be read aloud. See Archbold 2013 Ed. para. 5 -128 and the case law cited there for the full principles.

Section 482 empowers the Criminal Justice Council, on the recommendation of the Sentencing Guidelines Committee, and after consulting as required by Schedule 13, to publish sentencing guidelines, similar to those published in the UK by the Sentencing Guidelines Council and the Sentencing Council for England and Wales. The Sentencing Guidelines Council established by the CJ Act 2003 was abolished by the Coroners & Justice Act 2009 and replaced by the Sentencing Council for England and Wales. Guidelines were issued in 2004 and revised in July 2007 and in the absence of guidelines published by the Criminal Justice Council those guidelines will apply in the Falkland Islands until replaced. This section is a simplified version of the sections of the CJ Act 2003 and C&J Act 2009 establishing guidelines and requiring courts to follow them.

Guidelines must be based on the need to promote consistency in sentencing; the cost and relative effectiveness of various types of sentence; the need to promote public confidence in the criminal justice system; and any views on the subject communicated to the Criminal Justice Council in writing. Other principles are set out in Part 'B' of Schedule 13.

Section 483 imposes a duty to give reasons for sentencing decisions, including any departure from a relevant sentencing guideline and any aggravating or mitigating factors. It is based on section 174 of the 2003 Act as replaced by s.64 of the LASPO Act. It does not mention minimum or required custodial sentences, however. The sentencing guidelines will be those published or applied under section 482.

If a custodial sentence is imposed, the court must say why the rule against a custodial sentence in section 558 does not apply. The court must tell the defendant the effect of the sentence, including the results of payment to failure to pay a fine, etc. There is no power to disapply the requirement for reasons to be given, nor to keep them from the defendant.

Sections 484 to 486 deal with derogatory assertions about a person by a defendant in a speech in mitigation. If an assertion made during mitigation is derogatory to a person's character (e.g. because it suggests that the person's conduct is or has been criminal, immoral or improper) and if the assertion is false or the facts asserted are irrelevant to the sentence, the court can make an order.

Section 485 provides that if an order is made, the assertion is not to be reported, as it might not be true and has not been tested.

Section 486 makes it an offence to publish an assertion in breach of an order under section 484.

Section 487 provides that a sentence commences from the beginning of the day on which it is imposed. It applies to the Magistrate's Court and Summary Court, as well as the Supreme Court. Section 564(1) states a similar rule about imprisonment.

Section 488 confers power on the Supreme Court power to vary or rescind a sentence or order within 28 days (or 56 days in the case of a joint trial).

Sections 489 to 492 on deferment of sentence are all based on section 17 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. That in turn was based on sections 1 to 1D of the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 which have since been replaced by section 278 and Schedule 23 of the 2003 Act.

The scheme in the Criminal Justice Ordinance is retained i.e. sentence can be deferred if the defendant consents, and gives undertakings about his or her conduct during the deferment. Deferment cannot be for more than 6 months and can only be done once.

The Criminal Justice Ordinance scheme is expanded adding a requirement for the appointment of the probation officer as a supervisor.

Section 489(1) does not mention reparation as that is only available under a community sentence. A probation officer is to be designated as supervisor under this section and section 490.

Section 490 says that if a defendant breaches an undertaking during the deferment period, the court can issue a summons to attend court for sentence for the original offence, or a warrant for arrest if the defendant does not respond to the summons.

Section 491 makes similar provision if a defendant commits a further offence during the deferment period.

Under section 492, when a defendant appears on a summons or warrant under the previous 2 sections, the court must sentence the person for the original offence, as well as for any offence committed during the deferment period, if convicted. The power to bind over to come up for judgment is available to any court in Falkland Islands.

Section 493 requires a court to obtain a pre-sentence report from a probation officer before imposing any sentence, unless it considers such a report unnecessary. This is an extension of the previous provision in s.61 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which enabled the Governor by regulations to require reports to be produced for specified proceedings. There is also s.32 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which required a social inquiry report to be produced before a court imposed a custodial sentence (as to which see section 560). The court can remand a defendant in custody for up to 4 weeks in order for a pre-sentence report to be made. This is an exception to the general principle in section 273.

Section 494 says how a court is to take into account previous offences committed by the offender.

Section 495 requires a court to obtain a medical report before imposing a custodial sentence on an offender who appears to be mentally disordered.

Section 496 requires pre-sentence reports that are not given orally in open court to be disclosed to the defendant or his or her legal practitioner, with certain exceptions. The age limit has been increased from 17 in the Criminal Justice Ordinance to 18 which is consistent with other age limits in the Ordinance.

Section 497 enables a court that is considering passing a suspended sentence or community sentence to require the offender (aged 14 and over) to provide samples to ascertain if there are controlled drugs in his or her body.

Sections 498 to 500 reflect the development in the UK of a greater focus on the needs of victims within the criminal justice system. The UK government published the Victim's Charter in 1996 and introduced a Victim's Code in 2006. The personal statement scheme is part of a range of measures intended to enable victims and their families to have a higher level of involvement in the criminal justice process. Victim Personal Statements have been considered by the courts in the UK since October 2007 and have proved successful. The scope of the scheme was formally extended to include Family Impact Statements for the families of deceased victims and Community Impact Statements as well by way of the Criminal Practice Direction on Sentencing issued by the Lord Chief Justice on 7 October 2013. The provisions require the court before sentencing to take account of any statement made by a victim of an offence as to the effect of the crime on him or her, and any statement made by the police about the prevalence of a given type of offence. The statements will be written (except in the case of death when the family may make an oral or written statement) and must be referred to if made. The Chief Justice, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may issue codes of practice and guidelines about the making of such statements and about the rights of victims generally.

Section 501 confers power on a court to recommend deportation of a person who has attained the age of 18 and who does not have Falkland Islands status. This is a simplified statement for the Falkland Islands of the UK immigration law on this subject which is very complex. See also Part II of the Immigration Ordinance which enables the Governor to order deportation.

PART 24 – ABSOLUTE OR CONDITIONAL DISCHARGES

Introduction

This Part provides for the making of an order for the absolute or conditional discharge of a person found guilty of an offence. Other types of non-custodial sentence are provided for in Part 25 (Community Sentences) and Part 27 (Fines & Recognisances).

Separate provision is made in the Ordinance in relation to other sentences that can be imposed on young offenders and mentally disordered offenders – see Parts 33 and 34.

The Part is derived from sections 24 to 29 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which include some provisions about probation as well as discharges. Probation is no longer a sentence available to the courts in the Falkland Islands, and has been replaced by community sentences (i.e. community orders and youth rehabilitation orders). Sections 18 to 24 and Schedule 1 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance were repealed upon commencement of this Ordinance and the provisions about discharges were revised and re-arranged as free-standing provisions. They are based on sections 12 to 15 of the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 (known as the ‘Sentencing Act.’)

Archbold 2013 Ed. has a commentary on discharges in paras. 5-169 to 5-174.

Notes on Sections

Section 502 enables a court, instead of sentencing a convicted person, to grant a discharge, either absolutely or on condition that the person does not offend again within a specified period of up to 3 years.

Section 503 enables the court, on the application of a person sentenced to a community sentence, to substitute a conditional discharge for a community order, if the original order is no longer appropriate e.g. because of illness, absence of work etc.

Section 504 says what a court can do if a person subject to a conditional discharge commits a further offence during the conditional discharge period. The person must be brought before the court which made the order. That court can then impose any sentence that it could have imposed for the offence originally.

Section 505 describes various legal effects of a conviction leading to an order for conditional discharge. The conviction is to be treated for certain purposes as a conviction, but not for other purposes. See also section 372. ‘Forfeiture’ was not mentioned in Criminal Justice Ordinance but is mentioned in section 505

Section 506 says that if a young offender on whom a conditional discharge order has been made commits a further offence after the age of 18, the court can deal with the offender as an adult.

Section 507 sets out further legal consequences of an order for conditional discharge, including a right of appeal from a sentence imposed by a court when dealing with a breach or a further offence.

PART 25 – COMMUNITY SENTENCES

Introduction

This Part makes provision for one type of non-custodial sentence that a court can impose on a conviction for a criminal offence. It is the ‘community order’, or in the case of a youth, a ‘youth rehabilitation order’. The two types of order are called in this Ordinance ‘community sentences’, although that term includes other types of sentences in the UK law e.g. ‘custody plus’ and ‘custody minus’ etc., which have not been adopted in this Ordinance.

The Part replaces the provisions in the Criminal Justice Ordinance for community service orders which were based on old UK laws. It also replaces the system of probation orders as provided for in the Criminal Justice Ordinance but which has been abolished in England and Wales.

Other non-custodial sentences are provided in Part 27 (Fines and Recognisances) and Part 24 (Absolute or conditional discharges.) Separate provision is made in the Ordinance in relation to other sentences that can be imposed on young offenders and mentally disordered offenders – see Parts 33 and 34 respectively.

The provisions of this Part are derived from the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003 and Schedule 1 to that Act, and the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008. The 2008 Act replaced youth community orders with youth rehabilitation orders but applied the same principles to them as apply to community orders under the 2003 Act. The two sets of provisions have been combined in this Part.

The Part includes recent amendments made by the UK Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 as to extension of time etc. It also includes LASPOA additions to the orders that can be made (a foreign travel prohibition order and an alcohol abstinence and monitoring requirement.) In the case of youths the LASPOA provides for a drug treatment and testing requirement which in this Part is subsumed under the drug rehabilitation requirement.

The Part retains the distinction between community sentences for adults and youth rehabilitation orders for persons aged 10 to 18 years to allow for the differences to be made clear.

There is a commentary on community sentences in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 5-185 to 5-398.

There are relevant UK rules in the CP Rules 2012. See rule 42.2 as to notification of orders and Part 44 as to breach, revocation and amendment of community orders.

There are also some Practice Directions noted in Archbold.

Differences from UK law

The provisions in this Part were widely consulted upon prior to enactment to ensure that the community orders would be practicable in the Falkland Islands context. The Part does not include provision for an attendance centre requirement for under 25’s. Nor does it include an intensive supervision and surveillance regime for youths or a fostering regime or provision for a ‘youth offending team’.

The Part does not include an education requirement for youths as truancy is not a significant problem in Falkland Islands.

The Part enables a foreign travel restriction requirement to be imposed on youths as well as adults, unlike the UK where it cannot be imposed on youths (though the reason is not apparent).

The Part makes all adults requirements capable of being attached to a youth rehabilitation order, except as identified in section 529. Enforcement and amendment provisions are the same for both types of order, except that, as in the UK, imprisonment cannot be imposed for breach of a youth rehabilitation order).

The Part enables an intoxicating substance treatment requirement to be imposed on an adult as well as on a youth.

The Part gives all supervisory functions to the probation officer, as there is no Community Service officer in Falkland Islands.

The Summary Court is given the same functions as the Magistrate's Court, but if the Supreme Court directs that a case of failure to comply with an order, etc. is to be dealt with by the Magistrate's Court, it can only be dealt with by the Summary Court if the Senior Magistrate is unavailable – see section 557.

Notes on Sections

Section 508 contains definitions of terms used in the Part, including 'relevant order' and 'probation officer'. Other terms, used also in other Parts, are defined in section 2. A 'community sentence' is defined as a community order or youth rehabilitation order.

Section 509 sets out some general rules about the making of community orders. Similar provisions are in section 528 with regard to youth rehabilitation orders, in relation to offenders aged under 18.

Sections 510 to 527 set out the various requirements that can be attached to a community order.

Section 510 defines the unpaid work requirement. Section 511 defines the activity requirement. Section 512 defines the programme requirement. Section 513 defines the prohibited activity requirement. Section 514 defines the curfew requirement. Section 515 defines the exclusion requirement. Section 516 defines the residence requirement.

Section 517 defines the foreign travel prohibition requirement introduced by s.72 of the LASPO Act 2012.

Sections 518 and 519 provide for mental treatment to be part of a community sentence. It could include treatment outside Falkland Islands as provided by Part 9 of the Mental Health Ordinance.

Section 520 defines the drug rehabilitation requirement. Sections 521 and 522 require drug rehabilitation orders to be reviewed by a court at least every month.

Section 523 defines the alcohol treatment requirement as amended by the LASPOA. It omits a minimum period, as does the Act.

Section 524 defines the alcohol abstinence and monitoring requirement introduced by s.76 of LASPOA. It specifies the number of days of abstinence and the level of alcohol in the body but empowers the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to amend the figures. It makes clear that the provision has no effect on section 76 Licensing Ordinance (the power to prohibit a person from consuming alcohol etc. under that Ordinance).

Section 525 enables the court to include in a relevant order an intoxicating substance treatment requirement which is wider than an alcohol treatment requirement.

Section 526 defines the supervision requirement.

Section 527 defines the electronic monitoring requirement

Section 528 makes additional provision about youth rehabilitation orders. Any of the adult requirements can be imposed on a youth. It is similar to section 509 but adds a requirement for family circumstances to be taken into account. The orders that can be made on a youth include a foreign travel prohibition which is not available in the UK.

Section 529 sets out some differences in the requirements in relation to youths, compared to adults.

Sections 530 to 535 are miscellaneous provisions governing the procedure for making community orders or youth rehabilitation orders.

Section 530 says that the Supreme Court can make a direction in relation to further proceedings. See Section 557 for the role of the Summary Court

Section 531 relates to the making of relevant orders on an appeal against sentence.

Section 532 sets out the duties of the probation officer.

Section 533 says that a requirement attached to an order must avoid conflict with the offender's religious beliefs, etc.

Section 534 requires copies of relevant orders to be provided to specified people.

Section 535 imposes a duty on the offender to keep in touch with the probation officer

Sections 536 to 541 say how courts can deal with breaches of requirements of community sentences. A summons or warrant can be issued by any court and courts can deal with the offender for the original offence. Section 541 imposes restrictions on the powers of the courts when treatment is required.

Sections 542 to 545 enable courts to revoke orders or to amend the requirements attached to them.

Sections 546 and 547 enable courts to extend the period of orders.

Sections 548 to 550 provide for the powers of the courts if a person who is subject to a community sentence is convicted of a further offence during the period of the sentence.

Sections 551 to 557 make supplementary provisions about community sentences.

Section 551 sets out some general restrictions on imposing community sentences.

Section 552 says that a relevant order is not to be made while appeal against conviction is pending.

Section 553 provides for the issue of a summons or warrant under certain sections.

Section 554 enables the Governor, after consulting the CJC, to make regulations about community sentences.

Section 555 regulates hearings by the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court about relevant orders.

Section 556 enables the courts to review relevant orders.

Section 557 says that the Summary Court can deal with cases directed to be dealt with by the Magistrate's Court if the Senior Magistrate is unavailable.

PART 26 - CUSTODIAL SENTENCES

Introduction

This Part makes general provisions about the imposing of custodial sentences, i.e. sentences of imprisonment on adults. Sentences of detention on young offenders are mostly dealt with in Part 33, although this Part applies to sentences of detention for some purposes. The Part deals with general principles, duration of sentence, consecutive sentences, suspended sentences, extended sentences and life sentences. It also deals with the release of prisoners. It replaces some of the provisions of Parts III and V of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. It reflects sentencing policy decisions previously made.

Principles of sentencing generally are set out in Part 23. Provisions about sentences other than custodial ones are in Part 27 relating to fines, Part 24 relating to discharges, and Part 25 relating to community sentences. Remission of sentence is provided for in section 29 of the Prison Ordinance and respite and reduction of sentence are provided for in section 71 of the Constitution.

The provisions of this Part are derived in part from the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 ('the Sentencing Act') and in part from the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003 ('the 2003 Act'), both as amended to October 2012. They also repeat some of the provisions of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which are still relevant or which are more appropriate than the UK provisions in the Falkland Islands context.

The Part does not include provision for intermittent custody or for compulsory or extended custodial sentences for dangerous offenders or for minimum sentences for firearms offences, as these were not considered appropriate in the Falkland Islands context. The Part does not include provision for additional days for disciplinary offences as in the UK Crime (Sentencing) Act 1997, as these are included in the Prison Regulations.

The Part retains ‘old-style’ suspended sentences under the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 rather than introducing the more complex ‘custody minus’ provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003. However, it does include supervision in conjunction with suspended sentences.

The Part includes provision for release on licence of prisoners, including life prisoners, as that is a requirement of the European Convention on Human Rights which binds the UK. It requires the Governor to consult the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy before authorising release on licence, and to make rules governing release and recall. This Part needs to be read in conjunction with section 71 of the Constitution; the Remit and Rules of the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy, and the Prison Ordinance relating to remission of sentence.

The Part includes provision for extended sentences for persistent offenders – see section 575.

For a discussion of custodial sentences, see Archbold 2013 Ed, paras.5-399 to 5-670.

There are no relevant UK Criminal Procedure Rules, but there are sentencing guidelines issued by the UK Sentencing Council – see the Explanatory Note to Part 23. These guidelines will be replaced by local guidelines in due course formulated by the Criminal Justice Council and approved by the Chief Justice.

Notes on Sections

Sections 558 to 562 impose restrictions on the impositions of custodial sentences in various circumstances.

Section 558 says that a court can only impose a discretionary custodial sentence if no other method of dealing with the offender is appropriate. A failure to agree to e.g. a community sentence with requirements would justify a custodial sentence. The court must state the reason and explain it to the offender.

Section 559 says that a court must not sentence a first offender who is not legally represented to prison unless of the opinion that no other method of dealing with the person is appropriate. This and section 558 are both derived from s.31 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance, but with modifications, as that section does not mention legal representation.

Section 560 is based on s.32 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and requires a pre-sentence report to be obtained and considered whenever the court contemplates a custodial sentence under section 559. It is similar to section 493 which is based on s.61 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. Both Sections find echoes in s.156 of the CJ Act 2003.

Section 561 requires that if a custodial sentence is passed, it should be for the shortest period commensurate with the seriousness of the offence.

Section 562 says that in the absence of a period specified in relation to an offence, the power to impose a sentence of imprisonment on conviction on indictment is limited to 2 years.

Sections 563 and 564 provide for calculating the duration of a custodial sentence, including time spent on appeal. The commencement of a sentence generally is regulated by section 487.

Under section 563, time spent in custody or in police detention before conviction counts towards a sentence. Time spent in custody before the imposition of a probation order or conditional discharge or suspended sentence subsequently breached and resulting in a custodial sentence does not count towards the sentence.

Under section 564, time spent in custody pending an appeal counts towards a sentence unless the court directs otherwise.

Sections 565 to 572 are based on, and expand, sections 45 to 50 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. They empower the courts to continue the practice of imposing suspended sentences in appropriate cases. The 2003 Act introduced a system of conditions and supervisory powers which is not appropriate for the Falkland Islands. The more straightforward provisions of the Criminal Justice Ordinance are continued instead. They are based on the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 Chapters IV & V but adapted to the needs of the Falkland Islands. In particular, they include a power to partly suspend sentences which is not in the UK law.

Under section 565 a court can suspend a sentence of not more than 2 years' imprisonment for a period of from one to 3 years. The court must explain the effect of the suspension, and it counts as a sentence of imprisonment for all purposes, except disqualification from office or loss of office or pension.

Sections 566 and 567 provide for partly suspended sentences if a court passes a sentence of imprisonment for not less than 3 months and not more than 2 years. They are not based on UK precedent but derive from the second part of s.47 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

The 'appropriate officer' is defined in section 2 to mean the Registrar or the Clerk of the court, as the case may be.

Section 568 says what happens if the offender commits a further offence during the period of suspension of a sentence. The court can order the suspended sentence to take effect; substitute a lesser term; re-suspend the sentence for up to 2 years; or make no order with regard to the suspended sentence. The court must normally order the suspended sentence to take effect unless it would be unjust to do so.

Section 569 specifies which court is to deal with the breach of a suspended sentence.

Section 570 specifies the procedure if the court convicting a person of a further offence does not deal with a suspended sentence; a judge, the Senior Magistrate or a justice of the peace can issue a summons requiring the offender to appear at a specified time and place.

Section 571 provides for a supervision order to be made on a person who is given a suspended sentence. The supervising officer is the probation officer (which is defined in section 2). Section 571(3) is new and provides that a suspended sentence supervision order can impose similar requirements upon the offender as are available under a community sentence, including electronic monitoring.

Section 572 says what happens if the person is in breach of a supervision order. In effect, the person is treated as having breached a community sentence and can be dealt with accordingly, as provided by sections 539 to 541 suitably modified.

Section 573 states the principle that two or more custodial sentences imposed at the same time can be made to run concurrently or consecutively, and sets out some principles for deciding whether to impose concurrent or consecutive sentences. It also states that where a person is already imprisoned for an offence, a later sentence can be made to run consecutively.

[Note that under section 178 the Summary Court has power to impose consecutive sentences but the aggregate of the term cannot exceed 6 months. The maximum sentence of detention on a person under 21 is 24 months under section 726].

Section 574 says how partly suspended sentences are to be dealt with in the context of consecutive sentences.

Sections 575 and 576 provide for the punishment of persistent offenders by the imposition of an extended sentence of imprisonment. This concept is no longer part of English law but is in sections 51 and 52 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance so is incorporated in these sections.

Sections 577 to 579 enable the Supreme Court to recommend a minimum term of imprisonment when imposing a mandatory life sentence, by reference to a starting point. The Sections are based on Chapter 7 of Part 12 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 but adapted to conform to recent case law in the European Court of Human Rights. The legislature was aware of the ECHR ruling in the case of Bamber in respect of a whole life tariff as well as the UK Court of Appeal decision in the case of McLoughlin and debated the issue in some detail during the Select Committee stage of the Bill. The Select Committee recommended to the Legislative Assembly that the maximum starting point should be 40 years rather than 'whole life' and this was accordingly enacted.

These sections provide that life prisoners can apply to the Governor for release on licence, once the minimum tariff period has been served. The Governor must consult with the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy. Any recommendation made by a court under section 577 would be one of the factors considered by the Advisory Committee.

Section 577 requires the court to determine a starting point. For a very serious offence the starting point is 40 years. For a less serious but still serious offence the starting point is 30 years.

For other types of murder, the starting point is 15 years, unless the offender was under 18 in which case it is 12 years.

Section 578 requires the court, having chosen a starting point, to take into account aggravating or mitigating factors in order to arrive at a recommended minimum term the offender must serve. Aggravating factors include the amount of planning, the vulnerability of the victim, the abuse of a position of trust, threats to other persons, and whether the victim was providing a public service. Mitigating factors include lack of premeditation, the fact that the offender was provoked (but not to the extent of reducing the charge to manslaughter under the Crimes Ordinance 2014), a belief that the killing was an act of mercy, and the age of the offender.

Section 579 requires the court to state its reasons for deciding on the order made.

Sections 580 to 584 are based on sections 90 to 94 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. They provide for release on licence of prisoners after 1/3 of a sentence has been served, on application by the prisoner and at the discretion of the Governor. This is not the same as automatic remission after 2/3 of a sentence has been served, as provided by section 29 of the Prison Ordinance. Nor is it an exercise of the prerogative of mercy as provided for by section 71 of the Constitution. However, the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy is given a role in the exercise of the Governor's functions under these sections. The sections govern release on licence of young offenders, with any modifications made under section 726(7) and (8).

Section 585 specifies the terms of a warrant ordering imprisonment.

Section 586 says that imprisonment must be served in prison in the Falkland Islands unless otherwise directed by the Governor. If a person is to serve imprisonment outside the Falkland Islands, e.g. in the UK, the Governor can so direct, subject to the provisions of the Colonial Prisoners Removal Acts 1869 and 1884, the accompanying regulations and the UK Prison Service Order number 6650.

These provisions provide for the transfer of prisoners between Overseas Territories and the UK. A prisoner can be transferred to the UK for various reasons set out in section 2 of the 1884 Act, one of which is for 'more efficiently carrying his sentence into effect'. The regulations may provide for varying the conditions of a sentence passed in the OT where they differ in order to conform to the UK conditions but the prisoner cannot receive a longer sentence than he would have in the OT:

Regulation 1 of 'The Colonial Prisoners Removal Order in Council 1907 states that a prisoner being removed to the UK will be dealt with as if he had been sentenced in the UK for the same period. The Act and the regulations are both silent about the topic of remission per se but are clear in the wording, 'in the same manner as if he had been sentenced in the United Kingdom to imprisonment' – which would seem to include the period of remission for good behaviour.

The UK Prison Service Order no. 6650 'Sentence Calculation' confirms this:

'10.5 Transfers under the Colonial Prisoners Removal Act 1884: Prisoners transferred to England and Wales under this Act must have their release dates calculated as if they had been sentenced by a court in this jurisdiction. Credit must be given for any time spent in custody (including police detention) before sentence only if that time has been allowed in the jurisdiction in which the prisoner was sentenced, as with prisoners transferred under the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997.

The decision to move the prisoner to the UK is taken by the ‘removing authority’; which is defined in section 5 of the 1884 Act as, ‘a Secretary of State acting with the concurrence of the Government of every British possession concerned’.

Section 6 of the 1884 Act explains further, ‘The concurrence of the Government of a British possession, and any requisition by the Government of a British possession, may be given or made by the Governor in Council or such other authority as may be from time to time provided by the law of that possession, but shall be signified by writing under the hand of the Governor or of the Colonial Secretary or of any other officer appointed in this behalf by the law of that possession’.

Section 587 is based on section 96 Criminal Justice Ordinance and says that a person’s release can be ordered even if the person is not in detention.

Section 588 is based on section 97 Criminal Justice Ordinance and provides for warrants for the arrest of escaped prisoners.

PART 27 – FINES AND RECOGNISANCES

Introduction

This Part regulates the imposition of fines as sentences for criminal offences, and the enforcement of the payment of fines and of recognisances taken for bail or binding over purposes. The provisions are derived partly from the Criminal Justice Ordinance, but with additional material from the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 in relation to the Supreme Court, and of the UK Magistrates’ Courts Act 1980 in relation to the Magistrate’s Court.

The UK Acts were amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012, and the resulting UK scheme is very complex. This Part sought to retain useful features of the UK legislative scheme, duly adapted for the Falkland Islands. In doing so it replaced sections 11 to 16 and Schedules 6 and 7 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

The Part includes provisions about enforcement of unpaid fines and recognisances. It also includes enforcement of a recognisance to keep the peace as provided under ‘Common Assault’ in the Crimes Ordinance 2014 (but not called ‘forfeiture’).

The Part does not include provisions about fines on youths and young persons, or orders that can be made against parents and guardians, as these provisions are in Part 33.

The Part gives the power to fine in addition to imprisonment to the Magistrate’s Court and Summary Court as well as to the Supreme Court. The Part includes a provision of the Administration of Justice Ordinance which limits the power of the Summary Court to fine by reference to the age of the offender. It also enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to amend the figures.

The Part enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to vary the level of all fines prescribed for offences (see section 591.)

The Part gives all courts similar powers relating to enforcement of fines and recognisance, including the power to make financial circumstances orders. For a power to search a parent or guardian, see section 734.

The sums in the Schedules are based on current values at the time of enactment of the Ordinance. A power to amend all Schedules, including Schedules 8 and 9, is included in Part 36.

A commentary on some of the relevant provisions is at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 5-676 to 5-689 (fines) and at paras.5 -1296, 1297 (recognisances). See also Archbold 3-215 for estreat of recognisances under the Civil Procedure Rules.

Notes on Sections

Section 589 is a general statement of the power to fine a person who is convicted of any offence. It is derived from s.13 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which was adapted from s.163 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003. It provides that the Supreme Court can impose a fine up to any limit prescribed, instead of or in addition to imprisonment, but that the lower courts can only do so if the penalty provision so provides (as it usually does). The Summary Court's power to fine adults is limited to £5,000 but this figure can be increased by the Governor. The power to fine a youth is governed by section 731.

Section 590 is similar to Criminal Justice Ordinance s.11(1) to (4) and creates a standard scale of fines in Part A of Schedule 8. The Criminal Justice Ordinance provision adopted a similar scheme in the UK Criminal Justice Act 1982.

The section explains the terms 'maximum level on the standard scale' or 'level [xx] on the standard scale.' There are at present 12 levels, ranging from £200 to £625,000. They can be varied under section 591.

The section does not mention English and Falkland Islands enactments separately as in Criminal Justice Ordinance s.11, as they are all covered by the term 'enactment' as defined in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance.

Section 591 is based on Criminal Justice Ordinance s.12. It enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, by order to amend any provision of Falkland Islands laws that specifies a penalty by way of a level on the standard scale of fines, by altering the specified level. This cannot be retrospective, however.

Section 592 says that fines must reflect the seriousness of the offences and requires courts to take into account the financial circumstances of the offender.

Section 593 enables a court to make a financial circumstances order on an individual offender. The offender must comply with the order.

Section 594 enables a court to remit the whole or part of a fine it has imposed if it subsequently discovers that the offender's financial circumstances are different.

Section 596 enables a court to allow time for payment of a fine, to permit payment by instalments, or to reduce or remit a recognisance.

Sections 597 to 604 provide for the enforcement of fines and recognisances. It can be done by way of an attachment of earnings order, a warrant for distress or imprisonment if necessary. The periods of imprisonment in default of payment are set out in Schedule 9.

Section 597 on attachment of earnings is a simplified version of the scheme provided for in Schedule 5 of the UK Courts Act 2003 and the Collection of Fines (Final Scheme) Order 2006.

Section 605 says how monies in the hands of the court are to be disposed of, and that fines and forfeited recognisances are to be paid into the Consolidated Fund.

Section 606 is based on s.85 of the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012. It says that if the maximum fine for an offence is £10,000 or more, a fine of any amount can be imposed. Also, that power to create an offence carrying a maximum fine of £10,000 or more confers power to create offences carrying fines of an unlimited amount. The rationale is that once a maximum fine is in the thousands, the court should have the power to impose whatever seems appropriate, particularly if a corporation is involved in e.g. an environmental offence. (The UK Act specifies £5,000 but that is not a level in Falkland Islands).

Schedule 8 is the standard scale of fines. It is based on the Criminal Justice (Revised Standard Scale of Fines) Order 2011.

Schedule 9 is the table of imprisonment that can be imposed for failure to pay a fine or recognisance. Additional rules about calculating terms of imprisonment are set out in section 599.

PART 28 – COMPENSATION, RESTITUTION, DEPRIVATION, ETC.

Introduction

This Part deals with a number of ancillary issues that arise on conviction. They are: the award of compensation to victims of crime, restitution orders, return of property and deprivation of property. There is also a provision about rewards for those who are killed or injured while assisting in the prevention of crime. There is no provision for rewarding informants etc. Nor is there provision for compensating victims of crime out of public funds.

There is a separate Part about the award of costs in criminal cases – see Part 30. And there is separate legislation about the confiscation of the proceeds of crime – see the Proceeds of Crime Ordinance. There are various powers in the Crimes Ordinance 2014 to forfeit property used in connection with the commission of crime. Reparation is dealt with in Part 33 if the offence is by a youth. Reparation can also be an aspect of a community sentence under Part 25 or of a conditional caution under Part 8.

The Part replaces sections 15 and 53 to 56 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and incorporates some of the provisions of the UK Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 as amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012, among others. (See in particular section 608(2) which imposes a duty to consider a compensation order when sentencing).

The Part does not include s.57 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which empowered a court to impose imprisonment for failure to pay under a compensation order, as it is no longer law in the UK. Section 15 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance relates also to costs and is reflected in Part 30.

The Part does include a right of appeal against a compensation order, up to the Judicial Committee, and a right of appeal against the other types of order, as in the UK law. This is in line with the right of appeal against a costs order in Part 30.

The Part includes provisions about ‘barring’ of persons convicted of certain offences from working with children or vulnerable adults. They are based on the Safeguarding of Children Act 2006 but simplified and adapted to the circumstances of the Falkland Islands – see Sections 619 and 620.

There is a commentary on compensation in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.5-691 – 710. Restitution orders are dealt with at paras.5-711 to 715 and Deprivation orders at paras.5-726 to 5-735. See also CPR Rules 42.7 for the victim’s application for restitution, which will be replaced by local criminal procedure rules in due course.

Notes on Sections

Section 607 enables a court to recommend to the Legislative Assembly the award of compensation to someone who is injured or killed in trying to arrest a person subsequently charged with an offence. The court can also recommend an award if someone helps in the arrest of a person who is then convicted by the court.

This power partially filled the gap created by the absence of a Criminal Injuries Compensation scheme in the Falkland Islands. There appear to be no equivalent provisions in UK criminal law. The section is based on a provision in the Gibraltar CPE Act which was also adopted in the St Helena CPE Ordinance. This formulation was preferred to that in s.9 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which gave the power directly to the Legislative Assembly, used the term ‘moral or legal duty’ and enabled the award to be varied even after being paid.

Sections 608 to 613 empower a court to order a convicted person to pay compensation for any personal injury, loss or damage resulting from the offence or any offence taken into consideration. A court can also order the person to make payments for funeral expenses or bereavement in respect of a death resulting from the offence, other than a death arising out of a traffic accident. There are provisions for appeal and review and for the relationship between such orders and civil claims for damages.

The reference to the UK Fatal Accidents Act in section 609(6) means that any increase in the UK becomes part of Falkland Islands law automatically.

Section 609(7) takes account of the fact that offences that have not been proved can be taken into account in a sentence, as provided by section 494(1).

Section 610(2) limits the compensation that can be awarded by the Summary Court to £5,000, which is the current figure in the Magistrates' Courts in the UK.

Section 611 provides for appeals against compensation orders to the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court, as the case may be. This adds to the list in s.4 of the Court of Appeal Ordinance. (There is no mention of compensation in the Court of Appeal Ordinance except s.87 re abatement).

Section 614 provides for enforcement of compensation orders in the same way as fines. The provisions of Part 27 on enforcement of fines will then apply, including the power to direct payment by instalments and to distrain on goods.

Section 615 empowers a court to order a person in possession or control of stolen goods to restore them to the person entitled to recover them. If the goods have been sold, the court can order the value of the stolen goods to be paid out of money of the person convicted taken out of his possession on his arrest, to the person who would be entitled to recover them.

Sub-section (10) says that the powers in sub-sections (2)(c) and (4) are exercisable on the court's own initiative or on the application of any person appearing to the court to be interested in the property concerned.

Section 616 provides for appeals in respect of restitution orders at every level of the appellate system.

Section 617 empowers a court to order the deprivation of property taken from a convicted person or which is in the person's possession or control if it has been used for the purpose of committing, or facilitating the commission of, any offence or was intended by the person to be used for that purpose. The word 'deprivation' is now used instead of 'forfeiture' which has other connotations, though it still appears in some Falkland Islands laws. The section is similar to section 59 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance, but that limits the offence to one punishable by imprisonment for 2 years, whereas the UK law extends to any offence. A vehicle is included in the scope of property that can be confiscated under this section.

Section 618 is based on s.60 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and empowers a court to disqualify from driving any person convicted of an offence in which a motor vehicle was used to commit the offence, whether driven by the convicted person or anyone else (to cover an offence of assisting etc.)

Sections 619 and 620 provide that a person who is convicted of certain offences is automatically barred for life from working with youths or vulnerable adults. Persons convicted of other offences involving children or vulnerable adults may be barred by order of the court. The definition of a vulnerable adult is the same as in section 79 in the Crimes Ordinance 2014. The automatic disqualification offences include the offences listed in Schedule 3 to the Crimes Ordinance 2014, and offences ancillary to those offences. The discretionary disqualification offences involve children aged under 16 or vulnerable adults.

Section 621 provides for the return to a defendant of property taken from them on arrest, whether or not the person is convicted, if it is appropriate to do so. There is a saving for title to stolen property. Section 51 of the Police Ordinance 2000 incorporates the UK Police (Property) Act 1897.

Section 622 enables a court to make an order for disposal of property regarding which an offence has been committed. It can order the proceeds of forfeited property to be paid to the victim of the offence instead of making a compensation order or can order forfeited items to be sold or disposed of and the proceeds applied as if they were a fine.

Section 623 is a general statement, similar to that in section 653(6), that orders must not be enforced while an appeal is pending.

Section 624 precludes enforcement of orders under this Part until after the time for appealing has expired or the defendant has indicated there will be no appeal.

Section 625 gives the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, power to vary any monetary limits stated in the Part.

Section 626 contains saving provisions in respect of related powers.

PART 29 – REHABILITATION OF OFFENDERS

Introduction

This Part contains provisions about rehabilitation of offenders and rules about spent convictions. It replaced similar provisions in Part VIII of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and in the Rehabilitation of Offenders (Exceptions) Order. The provisions are based on the UK Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 as amended, on Exceptions Orders made under the 1974 Act, and on a Practice Direction issued by the Chief Justice of England & Wales. The Part incorporates amendments to the 1974 Act made by the Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 (POFA) and the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 (LASPOA).

The provisions are intended to promote the rehabilitation of persons who have been convicted of crime. The Part provides that after a certain period, and subject to certain conditions, a conviction or caution should be regarded as spent for all purposes and the person should be treated as rehabilitated in respect of the conviction or caution.

The Part is structured differently from Part VIII of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and the UK Act in that the rehabilitation periods are set out in a schedule to the Ordinance – Schedule 10 – rather than as a table in the text. The exceptions are also set out in a schedule – Schedule 11 – rather than in subsidiary legislation. Schedule 11 incorporates local exceptions made by the Falkland Islands Rehabilitation of Offenders (Exceptions) Order 1989. Under Part 36, the Schedules can be amended by the Governor by order after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

Changes to the UK rehabilitation periods proposed by the LASPOA were incorporated, and came into force on 10th March 2014 in the UK.

Cautions are dealt with in Part 8, which also deals with spent cautions. However, provisions about spent cautions and spent convictions are included in section 637 and in section 638, which deals with character reports prepared for the court. A spent conviction or caution cannot be disclosed in a character report unless it concerns a sexual offence or offence of violence or an offence involving children.

The Part includes the provisions about disregarding convictions and cautions in respect of homosexual offences contained in the UK Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 – see Sections 639 to 645.

There is a commentary at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 13-120 to 13-137.

Notes on Sections

Section 627 sets out the basic principle, but attaches a number of conditions. They include the person not being sentenced to imprisonment for life or for more than 48 months or to detention during Her Majesty's pleasure (section 629). This means that only sentences of up to 4 years can be treated as spent under this Part.

A subsequent conviction does not prevent the original conviction being the subject of rehabilitation. Nor does non-payment of a fine or failure to comply with the conditions of a sentence mean the person cannot become rehabilitated (section 630(4)).

The reference in section 627(8) to probation orders will become historic on the commencement of Part 25 which replaces such orders with community sentences; see also section 630(5) on this point.

Section 628 sets out the consequences of a conviction being spent. No evidence is admissible in court to prove that the person has committed or been charged with or prosecuted for or convicted for the offence and the person must not be asked, and, if asked, is not required to answer, any question relating to his or her past which cannot be answered without acknowledging or referring to the spent conviction. There is an exception in relation to evidence of bad character under Part 19 – see section 372(2).

The rule also applies to non-court proceedings, so that, for example, a prospective employer cannot ask about such convictions. A question about past convictions is to be treated as not relating to spent convictions, and the answer may be framed accordingly. The person questioned must not be prejudiced because of failure to acknowledge or disclose a spent conviction (section 628(2)).

Section 629 lists the excepted sentences.

Section 630 prescribes the rehabilitation periods i.e. the time from the conviction which must pass before the conviction can be treated as spent. The periods are set out in Schedule 10 which lists in tabular form provisions that are set out at length in the UK Act. For example, the rehabilitation period for a sentence of between 6 and 30 months is 48 months for an adult and 24 months for a youth (at the date of conviction). The Schedule includes probation orders imposed under repealed Part III of the Criminal Justice Ordinance before commencement of this Ordinance.

Section 631 contains detailed provisions on the calculation of the rehabilitation period, including the effect of a further conviction during the period. Generally, the period in relation to the first conviction is extended to the end of the period in relation to the later conviction. The section also deals with the effect of a breach of a conditional discharge or probation order made under repealed Part III of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

Section 632 is a saving section for the grant of a free pardon, the quashing of a conviction or sentence or commutation of a sentence, enforcement of a fine etc., or any disqualification, disability, prohibition or other penalty the period of which extends beyond the rehabilitation period. The Governor after consulting the Criminal Justice Council can exclude the application of the rehabilitation principle in appropriate cases.

Section 633 provides for exceptions to the right to rehabilitation in various different respects. They are based on the UK Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 as amended. See also Schedule 11.

Section 634 contains various definitions etc. for the purposes of section 633.

Section 635 regulates the relationship between rehabilitation and defamation actions. An allegation that a person was convicted is defamatory if the allegation is made after the conviction becomes spent. However, a report of judicial proceedings contained in a series of law reports, or published for educational, scientific or professional purposes, or given in the course of a lecture, class or discussion given or held for any of those purposes, is not defamatory even if it mentions a spent conviction.

Section 636 makes it an offence for a person who, in the course of his or her official duties, has custody of or access to any official record or information about spent convictions to disclose the information to another person, except in the course of those duties. The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, can create exceptions to this rule.

Section 637 says that courts and those who appear in them should not refer to a spent conviction if it can reasonably be avoided; that reference should not be made in open court to a spent conviction without the authority of the presiding officer; and that a person when passing sentence should not refer to spent convictions unless it is necessary to explain the sentence. No offence is created for a breach of these rules, which are derived from the UK Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) 2002 para.1.6. (There is no general duty on the media under this Part not to disclose spent convictions, but if the rules in section 637 are observed, the media will not be aware of spent convictions so will not report them. If they do, they presumably run the risk of an action for defamation).

Section 638 is included to ensure compliance with Article 8 of the ECHR. It provides that convictions and cautions are to be ‘filtered’ i.e. not included in disclosure reports once they are spent. They are ‘protected’ convictions and cautions. Offences which do not fall in that category are listed in sub-section (7). They include most sexual offences and offences of violence as listed in Schedules 3 and 4 to the Crimes Ordinance 2014 and other offences relating to the care of children. The Governor is given power to add to the list, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

Sections 639 to 645 enable the Governor to direct that convictions and cautions for buggery or gross indecency between males under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 (which was law in the Falkland Islands until replaced by provisions of the Sexual Offences Act 2003) are to be disregarded for records purposes. This is because those acts are no longer offences under UK or Falkland Islands law and are not offences under the Crimes Ordinance 2014. The Governor in Council is required to consult the CJC in the performance of these functions and provision is made for an advisory panel and for appeals.

Section 639 states the basic principle.

Section 640 says how applications for a decision to disregard are made and processed.

Section 641 states the effect on police records of a decision to disregard.

Section 642 states the effect of disregard for disclosure and other purposes

Section 643 contains supplementary provisions.

Section 644 provides a right of appeal to the Supreme Court against the Governor’s decision.

Section 645 enables the Governor to appoint advisors before making a decision.

See also sections 311 and 312 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 on this topic.

Schedule 10 sets out the rehabilitation periods i.e. the time from the conviction which must pass before the conviction can be treated as spent.

Schedule 11 contains more detailed exceptions to the right to rehabilitation. It lists excepted professions, offices, occupations, licences, proceedings and decisions.

The Governor is empowered under Part 36 to amend the Schedules, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

CHAPTER 9 – COSTS

PART 30 – COSTS IN CRIMINAL CASES

Introduction

This Part deals with the award of costs in criminal proceedings. It enables courts to make an award of costs out of central funds (i.e. the Consolidated Fund) or out of legal aid funds to private prosecutors, defendants and successful appellants and respondents. It regularises the present position that costs are routinely awarded against defendants on application by the prosecution if a defendant pleads guilty or is found guilty after trial.

Prior to enactment of this Ordinance there was little local legislative provision in the Falkland Islands on the award of costs in criminal proceedings. The Criminal Justice Ordinance only mentioned costs in passing and in relation to enforcement, and the Administration of Justice Ordinance says nothing about costs in criminal proceedings. The Court of Appeal Rules have provisions about the assessment of costs in appeals to the Court of Appeal which are incorporated by reference in 655(3). This was due to the fact that sections 16 to 21 of the UK Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 which deal with the issue of costs in criminal proceedings and the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986 both applied in the Falkland Islands by virtue of the Administration of Justice Ordinance (Title 22.1) as part of the practice and procedure applicable in English courts.

This Part therefore applied sections 16 to 21 of the UK Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 as amended. Section 647 is based on the Gibraltar CPE Act and the St Helena CPE Ordinance and is a simplified statement of the UK provisions.

The amendments made by the Legal Aid, Sentencing & Punishment of Offences Act 2012 were not included as they deal mainly with public funding of legal aid. Section 16A of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 as inserted by LASPOA was not therefore included. As legal aid in the Falkland Islands is administered under a non-statutory scheme it is mentioned in the Part, but not put on a statutory footing.

In this Part, the UK law has been modified and adapted as appropriate. In particular it gives courts substantive powers to make certain kinds of orders, rather than merely giving a power to make rules – see sections 648 to 650.

Under this Part, no costs may be ordered against legal aid funds.

There is no Falkland Islands enactment governing appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, but this Part extends to an award of costs by the Judicial Committee – see section 647(1)(d) and (e).

Much of the UK law on criminal costs is contained in Practice Directions, in the Criminal Procedure Rules and in case law. There is an extensive commentary on the subject in Archbold 2013 Ed. at paras.6-1 to 6-171.

Notes on Sections

Section 646 defines terms that are not defined elsewhere in the CPE Ordinance or in the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance. They include ‘central funds’ which are the Consolidated Fund of the Falkland Islands, and ‘witness’ which is any person attending to give evidence, except as to character.

Section 647 lists the circumstances in which costs can be awarded in criminal cases, including appeals. It says who pays the costs, states some principles and sets some limits.

Sub-section (6) provides that costs against a youth must not exceed the fine imposed, or the limit prescribed by section 733 i.e. £250 for a child, or level 3 on the Standard Scale for a youth or the maximum fine for the offence in the Supreme Court.

Section 648 provides for costs orders in relation to two special sets of circumstances.

Sub-sections (1) and (2) enable a court to make a costs order against a party in criminal proceedings who causes another to incur costs as a result of an unnecessary or improper act or omission. (In the UK, this power depends on the making of criminal procedure rules, but this section gives a substantive power).

Sub-section (3) enables a court to order the payment of the expenses of witnesses who are called by the court, rather than by a party, of medical practitioners who make expert reports to the court, and of other persons who are appointed to assist the court in the course of proceedings.

Section 649 enables a court to disallow the ‘wasted costs’ of a legal practitioner, or even to make an order against a legal practitioner to pay such costs. Wasted costs arise as a result of an improper, unreasonable, or negligent act or omission on the part of the legal practitioner, or any employee. (In the UK, this power depends on the making of criminal procedure rules, but this section gives a substantive power).

Section 650 enables a court to award costs in criminal proceedings against a person who is not a party to the proceedings (a ‘third party’) if there has been serious misconduct (whether or not constituting a contempt of court) by the person. (In the UK, this power depends on the making of criminal procedure rules, but this section gives a substantive power, except as to types of misconduct).

Section 651 provides for appeals to the Supreme Court on costs. An appeal may not be brought if the costs in the lower court were less than £50, and can only be brought with leave of the trial court or the appeal court. There is no appeal against a refusal of costs or from a costs order by the Supreme Court. However, the Supreme Court or Court of Appeal can vary a costs order made in conjunction with a conviction or sentence that is reversed or varied on appeal.

Section 652 says how costs are to be assessed, both in terms of their amount, and the mechanism. Costs should compensate the person to whom they are awarded for all expenses properly incurred in the conduct of the prosecution, defence, appeal or application, including preliminary or incidental proceedings. The amount should be stated in the order or left to be assessed.

Section 653 is about enforcement of costs orders. The court may allow time for the payment of the sum due or direct payment of it by instalments. A costs order against a defendant is enforceable as if it were a fine imposed on a conviction. An order against any other party or by a legal practitioner is enforceable as a civil debt.

Section 654 enables criminal procedure rules to be made about costs in criminal proceedings, including prescribing scales of costs and expenses. The rules can also provide for reviews of costs orders.

Section 655(1) saves other provisions about criminal costs, including payment out of the legal aid fund. It also saves awards of costs out of assets that might be made under other legislation, such as money-laundering and drugs trafficking. Sub-section (2) is a saving for any compensation payable by a defendant.

CHAPTER 10 – APPEALS

PART 31 – APPEALS TO AND FROM THE SUPREME COURT

Introduction

This Part provides for appeals in criminal cases from the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court to the Supreme Court; for an appeal from the lower courts by way of case stated to the Supreme Court; and for the revision of cases in the lower courts by a judge of the Supreme Court. The powers and procedure in relation to appeals are similar in many respects to the powers and procedure under the UK Magistrates’ Court Act 1980 and the Senior Courts Act 1981 in appeals from a Magistrates’ court to the Crown Court. The provisions in relation to appeals by case stated are similar to the provisions for cases to be stated to the High Court in England. There is no direct parallel in UK law to the power of revision but it is found in the criminal procedure laws of Gibraltar and St Helena and was provided for in the Administration of Justice Ordinance.

Court of Appeal Ordinance

The right of appeal from the Supreme Court in its appellate capacity, as well as from convictions on indictment in the Supreme Court, is governed by the Court of Appeal Ordinance and there was no need to reproduce it in this Ordinance. That Ordinance goes into some detail on the procedure, and there are Court of Appeal Rules. Section 48(2) of the Administration of Justice Ordinance says that the practice and procedure of the Supreme Court on appeals is to be similar to that of the Court of Appeal in England. Now that there are an Ordinance and Rules governing the practice and procedure of the Falkland Islands Court of Appeal it was more appropriate to refer to them, and Section 659 does so in relation to documents and exhibits. The Part does not seek to adapt the CA Rules to the Supreme Court in its appellate capacity, as it was anticipated that in due course new rules will be made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

The Court of Appeal Ordinance omits some provisions that have been included in this Part, such as a general power to enlarge time limits and a power to correct errors and omissions. It also omits the provisions about the effect of death on appeals contained in Section 676; the CA Rules simply say an appeal abates on death of the appellant. It would be possible to make this Part and the CA Ordinance more parallel if desired by adding more provisions to the CA Ordinance, and (possibly as consequential amendments in this Ordinance) some minor amendments to the CA Ordinance should also be made e.g. to update references to the Constitution etc.

Administration of Justice Ordinance

This Part replaces some sections of the Administration of Justice Ordinance which deal with appeals from the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court to the Supreme Court – see sections 19, 20, 21, 31, 48 and 51. Section 31 of the Administration of Justice Ordinance says that provisions on appeal that apply to the Summary Court also apply to the Magistrate's Court so this Part is expressed to apply to both courts.

The Part updates the language of the Ordinance, and also incorporates some provisions from the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, Senior Courts Act 1981 and Criminal Appeal Act 1968. It incorporates as substantive sections some provisions of the Criminal Procedure Rules 2012. Some of the sections are based on the existing Gibraltar and St Helena criminal procedure legislation which accurately reflects the practice in the Falkland Islands.

Prosecution appeals

Under section 4(1)(g) of the Court of Appeal Ordinance the prosecution can appeal to the Court of Appeal against a decision of the Supreme Court on appeal, but not against a ruling in a trial on indictment – unless by judicial review. There is however a right of appeal for both parties against orders and rulings in preliminary hearings – see section 250 in Part 15.

Section 670 therefore gives the prosecution a right to appeal against a ruling of the Supreme Court including a terminating ruling which did not exist in Falkland Islands law previously. The section is based on the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss.58 to 61 suitably adapted.

The right of the prosecution to apply for a review of a sentence is dealt with in Part 32 on retrials and references. The prosecution right to apply for a retrial is also in Part 32. It will supplement section 14 of the Court of Appeal Ordinance which enables a court to order a retrial on the application of the defence on conviction in the Supreme Court or from a decision of the Supreme Court in its appellate capacity.

Section 671 similarly gives the prosecution a limited right to appeal against a ruling of the Magistrate's Court which also did not exist in Falkland Islands law previously. This was not extended to the Summary Court because the provisions in the UK only apply to the Crown Court; the Summary Court is unlikely to deal with complex matters leading to a terminating ruling on a serious case (as this is a criterion for allocating the case to the Magistrate's Court in the first instance).

The section also provides for a prosecution appeal against an unduly lenient sentence of the Magistrate's Court in respect of offences where the maximum penalty is 10 years or more. This limitation (and the omission of the power in respect of Summary Court cases) was included in order to restrict the power of referral to only the most serious offences and is analogous to the restrictions of the power in the UK legislation under sections 35 and 36 Criminal Justice Act 1988, where the majority of the offences eligible to be referred carry a maximum sentence of at least ten years. Thus the provision ensures that the provision is used only sparingly and in the most serious of cases. The reference can only be made by or with the consent of the Attorney General.

Other powers

There is a right of appeal from decisions of the Supreme Court in its appellate capacity in the Court of Appeal Ordinance – see section 4(1)(g). The Part does however include a saving for further appeals at section 679 as a reminder of that power.

The Part retains the existing system of appeals by way of case stated for the opinion of the Supreme Court, although the system arguably adds little to the appellate powers of the Supreme Court. (In the CA Ordinance there is also a right of appeal by case stated from the Supreme Court in its appellate capacity).

The Part also retains the power of a Supreme Court judge to revise decisions of the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court. This power is unique to Overseas Territories, although it has similarities to the judicial review process. However, as that can power can be initiated by the parties; there is a saving for it in section 683.

The Part does not include a requirement for a recognisance to prosecute an appeal without delay as in section 114 of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980.

Appeals to the Privy Council continue to be governed by the UK Judicial Committee Act 1915 and rules made under it.

Transitional provisions in Part 36 deal with appeals after commencement of the Ordinance against convictions or sentences before commencement.

Bail on appeal is dealt with in Part 9, and also by the CA Ordinance as regards bail by the Court of Appeal. This Part therefore does not say anything about bail on appeal.

Commentary

See Archbold (Criminal Pleading etc.) 2013 Ed. Chapter 7 for appeals generally, including appeals to the Court of Appeal. In particular paras.7-2 to 7-19 for the case stated procedure. The rest of Archbold is about appeals to the Court of Appeal. For appeals to the Crown Court, as in this Part, see Archbold: Magistrate's Courts Criminal Practice 2013 Part 11, or Stone's Justices Manual. See CPR Rule 63 for appeals to the Crown Court and CPR Rule 64 for appeals to the High Court by case stated.

Notes on Sections

Section 656 describes the scope of the right to appeal from the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court to the Supreme Court against conviction or sentence.

Section 657 says how and when a notice of appeal must be filed.

Section 658 provides for the abandonment of appeal before it has begun.

Section 659 sets out some of the duties of the Registrar of the Supreme Court in relation to an appeal to that court.

Section 660 enables the Chief Justice to dismiss an appeal without a hearing if satisfied that it is frivolous or vexatious. There is an appeal, with leave, from such a decision.

Section 661 prescribes some aspects of the procedure at an appeal hearing and refers to the Court of Appeal Rules for other aspects. An appellant is entitled to be present at every stage of an appeal, including an appeal on a point of law or an appeal conducted by live link. Any stage of an appeal can be conducted outside the Falkland Islands if the conditions in section 183 are met (i.e. parties have an opportunity to make representations etc.).

Section 662 says what the Supreme Court can do on hearing an appeal.

Section 663 says how the Supreme Court should make a decision on an appeal against conviction.

Section 664 makes additional provision about appeals against sentence, based on provisions in the CA Ordinance.

Section 665 says that the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court must be notified of the result of an appeal.

Section 666 says how decisions on an appeal are to be enforced i.e. as if they were the decision of the lower court.

Section 667 confers a right of appeal in mental disorder cases. If the appeal is against a finding of unfitness to be tried the provisions of Part 34 on mentally disordered defendants will apply. If the appeal is against a hospital order the person has the same right of appeal as against conviction. See also Part 34 for appeals to the Court of Appeal on findings of unfitness to be tried and for appeals on other orders.

Section 668 provides for appeals against a finding of a lower court that a person was not guilty by reason of mental disorder. These two sections are different from the provisions in the CA Ordinance on insanity cases, but have the same overall effect.

Section 669 provides for appeals in cases concerning youths, in particular against fines imposed on parents and other ancillary decisions concerning youths.

Section 670 provides for a limited right of appeal by the prosecution against rulings, including a finding of no case to answer, given in the Supreme Court.

Section 671 provides for a similar right in respect of rulings in the Magistrate's Court and against over-lenient sentences imposed by that court.

Sections 672 to 674 govern the procedure for an appeal by way of a statement of a case by the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court.

Section 673 says that the Supreme Court can send the case back for amendment.

Section 674 says how the question is to be determined and how the decision is enforced.

Section 675 enables the Supreme Court to enlarge the time for the doing of anything required by the Part.

Section 676 enables the Supreme Court to correct errors or omissions in the records of the lower courts.

Section 677 deals with the effect of death on an appeal to the Supreme Court. The previous rule – that an appeal abates on death – is replaced by a right of a family member or similar person to apply to prosecute the appeal, in order to clear the name of the deceased.

Sections 678 makes similar provision in respect of appeals from the Supreme Court, as there is no equivalent provision at present in the Court of Appeal Ordinance. Both Sections are based on provisions of the UK Criminal Appeals Act 1968.

Section 679 is derived from the Court of Appeal procedure and provides that any order by the lower court for restitution of property is stayed pending an appeal.

Section 680 also derives from the Court of Appeal procedure. It enables the Supreme Court to obtain further evidence in order to be able to decide an appeal.

Section 681 is a saving for appeals from the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeal, which are governed by the Court of Appeal Ordinance.

Sections 682 to 685 empower a judge of the Supreme Court to call for the records of a lower court and to revise its decisions in certain circumstances.

Section 680(1) defines a judge in a manner consistent with sections 86 and 88 of the Constitution which designate the Chief Justice or any acting judge as the sole judge of the Supreme Court. Revision can take place outside the Falkland Islands.

Section 681 sets out the powers of a judge on a revision, including powers as on an appeal and power to alter or reverse an order.

Section 682 is a saving for the right to apply for judicial review and the making of an order or granting of a declaration or injunction in respect of the proceedings of the lower courts.

PART 32 – RETRIALS, REFERENCES, ETC.

Introduction

This Part introduces some new procedures into the criminal law of the Falkland Islands which allow courts to order retrials after an acquittal. They are derived from existing English practice and therefore apply as part of Falkland Islands law, but were not set out in a local statute.

One procedure (Sections 686 to 703) enables the Court of Appeal to order a retrial on the application of the prosecution if a person has been acquitted on indictment but there is new and compelling evidence which in the interests of justice should be put before a jury. It is based on provisions in the UK Criminal Justice Act 2003.

Another procedure (Sections 704 to 707) enables the Supreme Court on the application of the Attorney General to order a retrial if a person has been acquitted on a trial in any court and the acquittal might have been tainted by improper conduct in relation to witnesses or the jury ('jury-tampering'). It is based on provisions in the UK Criminal Procedure & Investigations Act 1996.

The Part also includes some other new provisions (Sections 708 to 712) that enable the Attorney General to refer a sentence to the Court of Appeal for review and to ask the Court of Appeal for an opinion on a point of law after an acquittal in the Supreme Court. These are based on provisions of the UK Criminal Justice Acts 1972 and 1988.

Finally, the Part reproduces in Sections 713 to 718 the provisions of the Criminal Justice (Amendment) (Miscarriages of Justice) Ordinance enabling the Governor to refer cases to the Court of Appeal or Supreme Court.

Power for a Supreme Court judge to call up the decisions of lower courts for revision is not in this Part, but is included in Part 31 – see Sections 682 to 685.

Retrial powers

The powers to order a retrial on new evidence or because of a tainted acquittal are justifiable departures from the principle that no-one should be tried twice for the same offence. They are intended to avoid people being wrongly acquitted of serious crimes only because the evidence was not available, whether because it was deliberately suppressed or otherwise, or because of jury tampering or interference with witnesses. Section 6 of the Falkland Islands Constitution says-

“(6) No person who shows that he or she has been tried by a competent court for a criminal offence and either convicted or acquitted shall again be tried for that offence or for any other criminal offence of which he or she could have been convicted at the trial for that offence, save upon the order of a superior court in the course of appeal or review proceedings relating to the conviction or acquittal, or save where a court makes an order under an Ordinance permitting a person to be retried for an offence of which he or she has been acquitted where in all the circumstances a retrial is in the interests of justice.”

So the Constitution explicitly contemplates the enactment of provisions about retrials. But the previous power, in section 56 of the Administration of Justice Ordinance was too wide -

“Rehearing

(1) The judge shall in every case heard in the Supreme Court have the power to order a new trial to be had upon such terms as he thinks reasonable and in the meantime to stay the proceedings.

(2) A new trial may be ordered on any question without interfering with the finding or decision on any other question.”

This appeared to confer on a judge the power to order the whole or any part of a civil or criminal trial in the Supreme Court to be re-opened, without assigning any reason. (Sub-section (2) seems to imply that the rehearing would be only on an interlocutory issue, but sub-section (1) is not so limited).

No English authority is identified as the source of this section, and the power was too wide in the context of criminal trials, where a rehearing exposes the defendant to a double jeopardy. This Part therefore did not reproduce section 56 of the AOJO but limited the power to order a retrial to the Court of Appeal, and in the interests of justice in the light of new evidence.

The provisions for retrial on the application of the prosecution include restrictions on publication of the application, to avoid prejudicing an acquitted person. If a retrial is authorised, the police can re-arrest the acquitted person and hold him or her in custody or on bail, as if the case were starting afresh.

The offences that can be the subject of a prosecution retrial application are ‘qualifying offences’, which in the UK Act are set out in Schedule 7. In the Falkland Islands context it seems appropriate to include all indictment-only offences, as listed in section 181.

References by Attorney General

Sections 708 to 712 enable the prosecution to refer certain matters to the Court of Appeal for a decision or /advisory opinion.

Note that Part 31 empowers the Supreme Court to review decisions of the Magistrate’s Court and Summary Court and provides for appeals from those courts to the Supreme Court against conviction or sentence. That Part also provides for appeals by the prosecution on points of law against acquittals. The Court of Appeal Ordinance provides for appeals from the Supreme Court in its original or appellate capacity on all these matters. These sections supplement those provisions by providing for review by the Court of Appeal of Supreme Court sentences and referral of points of law (as distinct from an appeal or an application for retrial) in cases of acquittal.

References by Governor

Sections 713 to 718 reproduce most of the Criminal Justice (Amendment) (Miscarriages of Justice) Ordinance. This was enacted in 2006 to incorporate into Falkland Islands law the provisions of the UK Criminal Appeal Act 1995 enabling the Criminal Cases Review Commission to refer cases to the Court of Appeal (or the High Court, in the case of decisions of the lower courts.) That Ordinance gave the power of reference to the Governor and these sections do the same, but only on the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy. The Advisory Committee will perform broadly the same function as the Criminal Cases Review Commission in the UK.

The Part does not include section 16C of the UK Criminal Appeal Act 1968 which relates only to a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity and which can be assimilated in the powers of the Court of Appeal on that topic.

The Part includes provisions enabling the Chief Justice to make rules so that applications and interlocutory matters to be dealt with outside the Falkland Islands – see Sections 686, 710, and 715. Under section 92(2) of the Constitution the Court of Appeal can sit outside the Falkland Islands.

For a commentary on retrials, see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.276 to 7-307. The UK rules are in Part 41 of the CPR 2012.

For a commentary on tainted acquittals see Archbold paras.4-196 to 4-200. The UK rules are in Part 40 of the CPR 2012.

For a commentary on Attorney Generals' references see Archbold paras.7-437 to 7-460. The UK rules are in Part 70 of the CPR 2012.

For a commentary on the Criminal Cases Review Commission powers see Archbold paras. 7-157 to 7-160 and 2-173.

Notes on Sections

Retrials

Sections 686 to 694 provide that an application to the Court of Appeal for a retrial can be made if there is new and compelling evidence and the interests of justice so require.

Sections 695 to 703 regulate the procedure on a retrial, including the evidence that may be given and the granting of bail.

Section 686 says what cases can be retried i.e. qualifying offences. Persons who have been acquitted of a qualifying offence in proceedings on indictment in the Falkland Islands or on appeal against a conviction etc. in the Falkland Islands or on an appeal following a previous appeal (e.g. after an appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council) can be retried if the conditions are met. Under sub-section (4) a person who has been acquitted outside the Falkland Islands of an offence which would have been an indictment-only offence in the Falkland Islands can be retried. The term "indictment-only offence" is defined in Section 2 as an offence listed in Section 181.

Section 687 enables the Attorney General, if there has been an acquittal in a trial in the Supreme Court on an indictment-only offence, to apply to the Court of Appeal for an order quashing the acquittal and ordering a retrial. It also provides for cases where the acquittal occurred outside the Falkland Islands. The Attorney General must be satisfied that there is new and compelling evidence (as defined in Section 689), that it is in the public interest to make the application and that any retrial would not be contrary to the obligations of the Falkland Islands with respect to the double jeopardy rule. Only one application may be made in relation to an acquittal.

Section 688 sets out the decision making process of the Court of Appeal. The court must be satisfied that there is new and compelling evidence and that it would be in the interests of justice to make the order. It must also be satisfied that the application does not breach the section 6(6) of the Constitution.

Section 689 defines ‘new and compelling evidence’. Evidence is new if it was not adduced at the original proceedings. Evidence is compelling if it is reliable, substantial and in the context of the outstanding issues it appears highly probative of the case against the acquitted person.

Section 690 sets out the ‘interests of justice’ test. The court needs to consider whether a fair trial is likely, the length of time since the offence was allegedly committed, whether the new evidence was available at the time of the original trial but for failure by a police officer or prosecutor, and whether since then the police and or prosecutors have acted with due diligence.

Section 691 sets out the procedure as to notice, presence at the hearing, etc. in relation to an application for a retrial.

Section 692 enables the acquitted person or the Attorney General to appeal against a decision made by the Court of Appeal to Her Majesty in Council i.e. the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Sections 693 and 694 allow the Court of Appeal to place restrictions on what can be published in relation to such matters if there is substantial risk that a publication would prejudice the administration of justice in a retrial. For definitions of ‘publication’ ‘programme’ and ‘programme service’ see Part 12 and section 2.

Sections 695 to 703 regulate the procedure on a retrial, including the evidence that may be given and the powers relating to bail.

Section 695 requires a retrial to be on indictment preferred on the direction of the Court of Appeal, and to be in the same mode as the original (i.e. by judge and jury or by judge alone). A time limit of 2 months is specified and the person may only be arraigned after that time with the leave of the Court of Appeal if it is satisfied that the prosecutor has acted with due expedition and there is good and sufficient cause for the trial despite the lapse of time.

Section 696 contains provisions about the evidence admissible on a retrial, the hearing of oral evidence and use of depositions. Court transcripts can be read out if agreed by the prosecution and defence or if the judge is satisfied that the witness is dead or unfit to give evidence or attend for that purpose or that all reasonable efforts have been made to find the witness or secure his or her attendance have been made without success.

Section 697 provides for investigations into the qualifying offence. Such an investigation (subject to Section 698) may only be undertaken with the written consent of the Attorney General after an application made by a police officer of the rank of Inspector or above. The Attorney General may only give consent if satisfied that it is likely that new evidence will be forthcoming and that it would be in the public interest to proceed.

Section 698 provides an exception with respect to urgent investigative steps where there is a real risk that not acting in such matter would substantially and irrevocably prejudice the investigation.

Section 699 applies with modifications the police powers provisions of the Ordinance dealing with arrest and detention to proceedings under this Part.

Sections 700 to 703 provide for bail and custody at various stages of proceeding on an application for retrial and for revocation of bail.

Tainted acquittals

Sections 704 to 707 are about tainted acquittals. They enable the Supreme Court to order a retrial where there is a suspicion that an acquittal in any court was obtained by intimidation. The power differs from the power of the Court of Appeal to order a retrial where new evidence comes to light, which is provided for in sections 686 to 703.

References by Attorney General

Section 708 enables the Court of Appeal to review a sentence passed by the Supreme Court that is considered by the prosecution to be too lenient. The power extends to any case in which sentence is passed on a person by the Supreme Court for an indictment-only offence, other than a sentence substituted on an appeal.

Section 709 states the powers of the Court of Appeal and provides for an appeal to Her Majesty in Council (i.e. the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.)

Section 710 regulates the procedure on a review of sentence and enables criminal procedure rules to be made as to court fees and other matters.

Section 711 enables the Attorney General to refer a point of law to the Court of Appeal in a case in which a person has been acquitted, without affecting the acquittal.

Section 710 provides for a right of appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from an opinion given under section 709.

References by the Governor

Section 713 enables the Governor, on the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy, to refer a conviction or sentence to the Court of Appeal where there has been a conviction in the Supreme Court, whether or not there has already been an appeal, and whether or not the person pleaded guilty.

Section 714 enables the Governor, on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy, to refer a conviction or sentence to the Supreme Court where there has been a conviction in a summary trial, whether or not there has already been an appeal, and even if the defendant pleaded guilty.

Section 715 requires a person who wishes a reference to be made to petition the Governor who must obtain the advice of the Advisory Committee. A reference can only be made if the Advisory Committee considers that there is a real possibility that the conviction, verdict or finding would not be upheld because there was a failure to argue a relevant point of law or to introduce relevant evidence in the case referred.

Section 716 sets out the procedure for a petition to the Governor, including the role of the Attorney General.

Section 717 makes further provisions about references, including the criteria for reversing a conviction, verdict or finding.

Section 718 makes provision for the payment of compensation for a miscarriage of justice.

CHAPTER 11 – YOUTHS AND YOUNG OFFENDERS

PART 33 – YOUNG OFFENDERS AND YOUTH PROTECTION

Introduction

This Part makes provision for the treatment of youths and young offenders in the criminal courts, and for the protection of youths in the courts. (A ‘youth’ is defined in section 2 to mean a child or young person. A child is defined as a person under the age of 14 and a young person as a person between 14 and 18. A young offender is a person aged 18, 19 or 20 who is convicted of an offence).

The Part replaces and expands sections 33 to 40 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and some of Part VII of the Criminal Justice Ordinance (sections 110 to 117) by provisions based on the UK Children & Young Persons Act 1933 as amended in 1963 and 1969. It includes provisions of recent UK legislation including the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 as amended. It governs the detention of youths and provides for the making of reparation orders on youths and for fining and binding over of parents and guardians.

The custodial scheme envisaged by the Part is that no person under the age of 21 will be sentenced to prison. The sentence will be one of detention, and the Governor, after consulting the CJC, must designate the place for detention. The place can be a discrete area of the prison building.

The Part has not retained the provisions about supervision of young offenders in Part VII of the Criminal Justice Ordinance (sections 118 to 131) as they are superseded by the community sentence provisions in Part 25. Nor does it not refer to attendance centres or young offender institutions as such centres and institutions are not provided in the Falkland Islands (and young offender institutions have been abolished in the UK). The Part varies the provisions of the Criminal Justice Ordinance about periods of detention that can be imposed on youths and young offenders.

The Part does not include provision for Youth Panels or parenting orders or child safety orders or curfew orders as these are not considered appropriate in the Falkland Islands. Nor is there any provision for formal reprimands and warnings, as these require reference to youth offending teams which are not available in the Falkland Islands.

There are however various other options open to courts in dealing with youths and young offenders, and this Part expressly saves those provisions. They include community sentences i.e. community orders and youth rehabilitation orders, which are dealt with in Part 25. Provisions on care of youths are in the Children Ordinance 2014. Conditional cautions on youths, which can include reparation requirements, are provided for by Part 8. Absolute and conditional discharges are provided for by Part 24. Suspended sentences of detention are possible under Part 26.

The Part includes some provisions which overlap with other Parts dealing with sentences; it incorporates e.g. a provision on restriction on imprisonment of persons under 21. It also incorporates provisions about fines on youths. It imposes a duty on the court to fine parents rather than youths unless the parent cannot be found, etc.

The Part includes provisions designed to protect youths from publicity, but does not include the reporting restrictions in ss.44 and 45 of Youth Justice & Criminal Evidence Act 1999 which are not in force in the UK.

The Part includes provisions designed to protect youths from the consequences of proceedings for certain offences involving violence against youths. See Sections 745 to 750 and Schedule 12.

Commentaries on these topics can be found in various places in Archbold 2013 Ed. For general principles of sentencing youths see paras. 5-66 etc. For reparation see paras.5 – 717 on. For reporting restrictions see paras. 4-15 on. For fines on parents, see paras. 5-1277 on.

Notes on Sections

Section 719 defines some terms that are used in the Part but not defined elsewhere. There are also savings for other provisions of the Ordinance that deal with sentencing of youths and young offenders.

Section 720 makes general statements of principle about sentencing of youths and young offenders.

Sections 721 to 725 provide for the constitution, procedure and jurisdiction of the Youth Court. It is in effect the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court when dealing with offences by youths. The sections provide for the remitting of cases to and from the Youth Court.

Section 726 restricts in general terms the power to pass custodial sentences on persons under 21 years of age and requires the court to take certain factors into account before imposing a custodial sentence. A court cannot sentence a person under 21 to prison for any offence or in default of payment of a fine, damages or costs. There is an exception for remand and committal to a higher court for sentence. The section is based on part of s.33 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance.

Sections 727 and 728 regulate the imposition of sentences of detention on young offenders and youths respectively (though the age limit is not fixed at 18 as in the definition of youth.) These sections are different from the equivalent provisions in the Criminal Justice Ordinance and are based broadly on the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 as amended.

Sections 729 and 730 regulate the imposition of sentences on youths and young offenders for indictment-only offences and other serious crimes. Detention at Her Majesty's pleasure or for a specified period is made obligatory for certain offences.

Section 731 says that detention can be imposed for contempt of court by a person under the age of 21. It is based on section 40 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance which limits the age to 18 and over but, as contempt can be committed by a youth, that limitation is removed.

Section 732 enables the Governor to designate the place of detention. It must not be the prison unless no other place is suitable. The Governor, after consulting the CJC, also controls detention at Her Majesty's pleasure.

Sections 733 to 736 provide for fines on youth offenders, including ordering a parent or guardian to pay. Other provisions about enforcement of fines, etc. are contained in Part 27.

Section 733 prescribes the maximum amount that a child or young person can be fined by the Youth Court, but gives the Governor, after consulting the CJC, power to amend the figures.

Section 734 requires a court to order a parent or guardian to pay a fine, costs and compensation ordered on a conviction of a youth.

Section 735 enables a financial circumstances order to be made against a parent or guardian.

Section 736 adapts section 592 as to the fixing of the level of fine.

Sections 737 and 738 enable a court to bind over the parent or guardian of a youth offender.

Section 738 enables a court to require the attendance of a parent or guardian at court.

Sections 739 to 744 provide for reparation orders to be made on youths. They incorporate some provisions of Schedule 8 of the 2000 Act as substantive provisions governing reparation orders.

Sections 743 to 748 contain special rules about proceedings for certain offences involving youths. The rules are designed to protect youths from harm as a result of the proceedings. The offences, which are listed in Schedule 12, are all offences of violence and are included in the Crimes Ordinance 2014.

There is a presumption about age in section 745 and a power to proceed with a case in the absence of a youth in section 746.

Section 750 enables a warrant to be issued to search for a missing youth. The equivalent UK provisions are found in ss.44 and 102 of the Children Act 1989, but the older Children and Young Persons Act 1933 provision was considered to be more appropriate in Falkland Islands and is replicated in this section.

Sections 751 to 754 are general protective provisions about youths and young offenders, including a requirement to segregate youths in police detention, a prohibition of unnecessary presence of children in court, and a rule about evidence of a child.

Sections 755 and 756 relate to publication of certain matters in newspapers and by programme services (i.e. radio or TV or internet broadcast). Section 755 is a total prohibition in relation to certain proceedings, while section 756 gives a court power to prohibit publication in all types of proceedings.

Sections 757 to 760 are miscellaneous provisions.

Section 757 is about evidence and procedure in relation to youths. If a person attains the age of 18 during the proceedings, they should continue as if the person were still under 18.

Section 758 provides for ascertaining the age of a youth, whether a defendant or a witness, in any proceedings. The requirement to adjourn the case if necessary is in line with recent UK case law on the subject and makes the Falkland Islands compliant with human trafficking awareness standards.

Section 759 provides that the age of a young offender for the purpose of sentencing is the age at the date of conviction. If a person attains the age of 18 during the proceedings, they should continue as if the person were still under 18.

Section 760 enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to make regulations empowering courts to impose maintenance orders on parents of youths in detention.

Schedule 12 is the list of offences for the purposes of sections 745 to 750.

CHAPTER 12 – MENTALLY DISORDERED OFFENDERS

PART 34 - MENTALLY DISORDERED OFFENDERS

Introduction

This Part deals with persons who are before a court on a criminal charge but who are unfit to be tried because of mental disorder or who are not guilty by reason of mental disorder. It does not deal with treatment or other issues relating to the mentally disordered, which are dealt with in the Mental Health Ordinance 2010 (MHO). Part 8 of the MHO also deals with “persons concerned in criminal proceedings or under sentence” so this Part does not deal with those matters in general. There is however a saving for that Ordinance at section 761.

The Part needs to be read in conjunction with the MHO which governs the treatment to be given to mental patients and will govern the treatment to be given under a hospital treatment order or supervision order made under this Part.

The Part incorporates extant provisions of the UK Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 as replaced by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity and Unfitness to Plead) Act 1991 and amended by the Domestic Violence, Crime & Victims Act 2004. It avoids using the terms ‘insanity’ or ‘unfitness to plead’.

With regard to acquittal on the ground of mental disorder, section 2 of the Trial of Lunatics Act 1883 is still extant and is incorporated in section 763. The verdict is known as a ‘special verdict’.

The Part does not use the term “medical practitioner” but instead uses the term “approved doctor” which is used in the Mental Health Ordinance and is defined in section 91 of that Ordinance to mean a doctor approved by the Governor. The term “hospital” is also defined by reference to the Mental Health Ordinance.

The system of supervision orders for those found unfit to plead or not guilty by reason of mental disorder introduced by the UK Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 Sched.1A as replaced by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 is included – see sections 768 to 772.

The Part is wider than the UK provisions as it gives the same powers to the Supreme Court, Magistrate’s Court and Summary Court to make hospital orders and supervision orders and to revoke, amend or review them. The review will be by the court that made the original order, but there can be an appeal.

The Part includes some provisions based on the Gibraltar Criminal Procedure Act and the St Helena CPE Ordinance which are relevant to the Falkland Islands.

For UK text and commentary see Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.4 -230 to 4 -251 (Fitness to be tried), 4 -535 and 536 (special verdict) and 19-95 (evidence). Also para.17-73 for the meaning of ‘insanity’ in this context.

Notes on Sections

Section 761 defines various terms, including ‘hospital order’. This is defined to mean an order under section 766(2).

‘Mental disorder’ is defined as in s.4 (2) of the MHO which is the same as in the UK Mental Health Act 2007 (MHA). The ‘supervising officer’ is the probation officer.

Sections 762 and 763 deal with the issue of fitness to be tried (previously called ‘fitness to plead’). They provide for a special finding on that issue to be made by the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court, or by the Supreme Court without a jury, at any stage in the proceedings.

Section 764 and 765 provide for a special finding by the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court or by a jury (or judge sitting alone) in the Supreme Court that the defendant did the act or made the omission charged against him or her or alternatively for a special verdict of acquittal on the ground of mental disorder.

Section 766 provides that if there is a finding that a person is unfit to be tried and did the act, or if a person is acquitted on the ground of mental disorder, the court must make a hospital treatment order or a supervision order, or grant an absolute discharge (unless the sentence is fixed by law).

Section 767 provides that if the person is fit to be tried, the trial must proceed in the normal way.

Sections 768 to 772 enable a court to make a supervision order under which a person who is not fit to be tried, or who is acquitted on the ground of mental disorder, is required to undergo medical treatment but not confined to hospital. Such orders are made on the same grounds as a community treatment order under the Mental Health Ordinance and can be made for up to two years. They may be reviewed by the court that made them.

Section 773 provides for appeals to the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court, as the case may be, on the making of hospital treatment orders and supervision orders. Note that section 763 provides for an appeal to the Court of Appeal on the question of fitness to be tried. See also Sections 667 and 668 for appeals from the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court to the Supreme Court on mental health issues. See also Part 7 of the Mental Health Ordinance as to appeals under that Ordinance.

Section 774 provides that if the defence on a charge of murder seek to establish mental disorder or diminished responsibility owing to abnormality of mind, the prosecution can adduce evidence to the contrary. It is based on section 6 of the UK Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964, but using the term 'abnormality of mental functioning' as introduced by the Coroners and Justice Act 2009, rather than 'insanity'.

CHAPTER 13 – SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

PART 35 – CRIMINAL JUSTICE COUNCIL

Introduction

This Part establishes a Criminal Justice Council for the Falkland Islands. It is an innovation and brings together in a single body the functions found in a range of bodies in other common law jurisdictions. In summary, its role is to maintain an overview of the working of the criminal justice system in the Falkland Islands and to ensure that the system provides an efficient and effective service to the people of the Falkland Islands. The Council serves as part of the judicial branch of the Falkland Islands constitutional system of government and therefore is free of constraint or interference by the executive and legislative branches in its operation. It is not a corporate body and has no separate legal personality. It will include representatives of the judiciary (including JPs), government departments, legal practitioners working in criminal defence and members representing civil society, selected in accordance with the Nolan principles of public service (which already apply in the Falkland Islands under the Management Code and the Legislative Assembly Standing Rules and Orders). The Council's main functions are to advise the Chief Justice on the making of criminal procedure rules and, in its capacity as the Sentencing Guidelines Committee, to issue sentencing guidelines. It will also provide a forum to identify new areas where procedures or rules need to be developed; and to provide advice, when requested, to the Governor and the legislature on matters relating to the criminal justice system.

This body is an innovation in the Falkland Islands and as constituted is unique in the common law world, although it has similarities to the Criminal Justice Board, Criminal Rules Committee and the Sentencing Guidelines Council in England and Wales. It has been structured in such a way as to maintain judicial independence whilst providing oversight of the criminal justice system. It will have the ability to influence any necessary adjustments to processes and procedures by advising on the making of criminal procedure rules and by issuing sentencing guidelines. Certain other specific functions are also given to the Council by some provisions of the Ordinance.

The Governor will need to consult the Criminal Justice Council on the exercise of some functions under this Ordinance, if a section so requires.

Notes on Sections

Section 775 establishes the Council and requires the Government to provide funding for it. Details of its composition and procedure are set out in Part 'A' of Schedule 13.

Section 776 sets out the aims and activities of the Council. The aim is to have a criminal justice system that reduces crime, reduces reoffending, punishes offenders, protects the public, encourages the making of reparation, increases public confidence in the system, and is fair and just.

Section 777 provides that the Council is also the Sentencing Guidelines Committee and sets out the aim of that committee, which is to promote consistency in sentencing. To achieve that, the Committee must publish sentencing guidelines for use in the criminal courts. The committee's procedure is similar to that of the Council and is set out in Part 'B' of Schedule 13.

Section 778 requires the Council to make an annual report to the Governor, who must lay the report before the Legislative Assembly. The Council's report must include a report from the Committee with any sentencing guideline it has published. The report is to be made public.

Section 779 requires the Council to prepare rules of practice and procedure to be applied in the criminal courts. The rules must be submitted to the Chief Justice and once approved must be made by the Chief Justice as criminal procedure rules. The Council must also prepare guidelines relating to the early release of prisoners and miscarriages of justice to be used by the Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy and the Governor in the exercise of the discretion conferred by section 71 of the Constitution.

Part 'A' of Schedule 13 sets out the composition of the Council and rules for its procedure, including reports. Part 'B' sets out the procedure of the Committee and principles for developing sentencing guidelines, which are based on the model used in England and Wales but simplified in terms of the required monitoring and reporting.

PART 36 – MISCELLANEOUS AND TRANSITIONAL

Introduction

This Part contains miscellaneous provisions, including the repeal of the Criminal Justice Ordinance and other criminal procedure laws of the Falkland Islands, the disapplication of UK laws on the subject, and transitional and consequential provisions.

Notes on Sections

Section 780 applies the provisions of the Ordinance relating to the investigation of offences, the searching, questioning and detention of suspects, the seizure of property and the retention of evidence to other public officers who have power to investigate offences or charge offenders as they apply to police officers. The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may make modifications to the manner in which provisions of this Ordinance apply to such officers.

Sub-section (3) confers the relevant powers on customs officers and immigration officers as they are not expressly conferred by the Customs Ordinance or Immigration Ordinance respectively.

Sections 781 and 782 are provisions about the powers of police officers and other public officers derived from the UK PACE Act and the Criminal Law act 1967 which do not fit elsewhere in the Ordinance.

Section 782 justifies the use of force in preventing crime or effecting an arrest by police officers and others. The general rule (that force is justified) is still law in the UK and it was considered appropriate to include in the Ordinance. It does not replace the common law rules on self-defence.

Section 783 makes it clear that the Ordinance is capable of applying to corporate bodies, whatever they are called. It states that corporate liability applies to all offences capable of being committed by a corporate body, or by an individual officer on behalf of a body. The rule is stated in various ways in the UK Acts where it appears, and is of general application. The rule is sometimes stated separately, as in section 429 of the Crimes Ordinance 2014 which is about corporate bodies benefitting from an offence committed by someone who is not an officer or member. See also section 503 of that Ordinance as to bribery by corporate bodies.

Sub-section (5) states that gender-specific wording of a provision does not preclude the application of the provision to a corporation.

Section 784 provides for the service of documents by various means, in addition to service by post which is governed by section 9 of the Interpretation & General Clauses Ordinance (IGCO). It includes service by electronic means, but, recognising that often people have multiple email addresses, a caveat was provided to ensure that an inference of good service can only be drawn where service has been to an email address which has been published or advertised. It is reasonable to expect a person to check their post and email on a regular basis and to make suitable arrangements for the collection of post at times of absence. Sub-section (2) governs service on corporations.

Section 785 enables the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council as constituted by Part 35, and to issue practice directions after so consulting. Such directions usually supplement the rules but could be displaced by them if necessary.

Section 786 enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to make regulations to implement the provisions of this Ordinance, in particular in relation to the obligations of the Government under international law.

Section 787 enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to amend any of the Schedules, but subject to specific requirements in relation to Schedule 3, as stated in section 122. An order would need to be laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly and would be subject to section 36 of the IGCO. This requirement is extended to other orders made under the Ordinance.

Section 788 sets out the relationship between the Governor's obligation to consult the Council or the Advisory Committee or the Chief Justice under this Ordinance, and the requirement to consult Executive Council in s.66 of the Constitution and in the definition of 'Governor' in s.2 of the IGCO. If the function is legislative, the Governor is required to consult both bodies.

Section 789 repeals the Ordinances listed in Part 'A' of Schedule 14 and disapplies the UK enactments listed in Part 'B' of that Schedule. The term 'disapply' is given a meaning for this purpose, by reference to the powers in Chapter X of the IGCO which enables the Governor to declare UK enactments never to have been adopted.

The section saves subsidiary legislation made under them that could be made under this Ordinance. It also saves directions, exemptions, notices and other non-legislative instruments made or issued by the Governor or any person or body under any of the repealed Ordinances.

Schedule 14 lists the Falkland Islands Ordinances that are repealed and the UK enactments that are disapplied as a result of their provisions being incorporated in this Ordinance.

UK statutes since the 'cut-off' date of 31 July 2004 are not included (see section 78(7) of the IGCO).

Section 790 makes transitional provisions in respect of investigations, proceedings, appeals, etc. that are in progress when the Ordinance comes into force. Sentences, summonses etc. will continue to have effect under the Criminal Justice Ordinance or the AOJO as the case may be.

Section 791 makes consequential amendments to other enactments, by means of a general provision about references to provisions of the repealed Ordinances. It enables the Governor to amend other Ordinances by order. Without affecting that power, certain textual amendments are contained in Schedule 15. The Governor can amend Schedule 15 by virtue of the power in section 785.

Schedule 15 lists some consequential amendments to the definitions in the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinances to bring them into conformity with this Ordinance.

Section 792 provides that the Ordinance is binding on Crown. This is needed to displace the opposite rule in section 66 of the IGCO. All Government departments will therefore be required to observe the provisions of the Ordinance.

APPENDIX 1

The main new or updated provisions of the Ordinance are:

Police powers

- Police officers able to grant bail after arrest, to grant ‘street bail’ and to impose conditions on police bail. (Part 4)
- Police officers able to stop and search persons or vehicles in anticipation of, or after, violence. In force in UK since 1994 (Part 2)
- Changes to the power of arrest; the abolition of arrestable and non-arrestable offences; now called imprisonable offences. (Part4)
- Detention periods amended to bring them into line with the UK PACE (Part 5)
- New provisions on retention and destruction of samples and DNA profiles aligned to UK Protection of Freedoms Act 2012. (Part 6)

Conditional cautioning for adults and youths (Part 8).

Bail (Part 9)

- Police able to impose a condition on bail after charge.
- Bail in absence with consent.
- 17 year olds treated for the purposes of bail as youths.
- Remands in custody in absence
- Prosecution able to appeal refusal of bail
- Electronic monitoring of persons on bail and as part of a sentence– ‘curfew tags’

Jurisdiction

- First appearance of all cases in the Summary Court (Section 257)
- Role of the Justices of the Peace expanded (Part 11)

- Introduction of an allocation for trial procedure (Part 16)
- Role of assessors abolished. (Part 11)
- Judge or the Senior Magistrate able to exercise certain judicial functions while outside the Falkland Islands in certain circumstances – (section 183).
- All types of pre-trial review and case management hearings rationalised into preliminary hearings (Part 15)
- Time limits for commencement of prosecutions simplified (Section 182)
- The Chief Justice and Criminal Justice Council (CJC), to issue a code of practice about the summoning of jurors. (Part 18).
- Exclusion of groups for jury service narrowed in line with UK practice (Part 18)
- The courts given wider powers to impose reporting restrictions as in the UK (Part 22)

Criminal Justice Council established (Part 35).

APPENDIX 2 INDICTMENT-ONLY OFFENCES

The Criminal Justice Ordinance lists a small number of offences that are triable on indictment only. They do not include all offences that carry a discretionary life sentence. The reason why the list of indictment-only offences is so small was due to the problems historically in empanelling a jury. However the population is increasing and so is the jury pool. The legislature decided that it was anomalous to have offences potentially carrying a discretionary life sentence being heard by a Senior Magistrate and without the right of jury trial.

All of the offences carrying life imprisonment were reviewed, and in some cases the maximum penalty was reduced e.g. robbery and assault with intent to rob to 18 years. The remaining offences carrying life imprisonment became indictment-only offences.

Given that the list of indictment-only offences is now larger than before, there was no particular merit in listing the sexual offences and the criminal damage offences, as before in the CJO. Accordingly, when section 181 of the CPE Ordinance was drafted, which defines indictment-only offences; the offences have not been listed.

The following offences are now indictment-only offences by reference to sections of the Crimes Ordinance

These, other than the sexual offences, were selected on the basis that they are all offences which involve either a fatality or a high risk of one:

Part 4 Offences against the person

- 46: Murder
- 50: Manslaughter
- 52: Soliciting murder
- 56: Infanticide
- 57: Child destruction
- 77: Causing or allowing the death of or harm to a child or vulnerable adult
- 112(1): Genocide (whether murder or not)
- 112(2): Acts ancillary to genocide
- 114: Piracy endangering life
- 116: Torture

Part 5 Corporate manslaughter

- 122: Corporate manslaughter

Part 8 Explosive substances

- 180: Causing an explosion likely to endanger life
- 181: Making or keeping explosives with intent to endanger life

Part 9 (Criminal damage)

- 195(2): Aggravated criminal damage
- 196(2): Aggravated arson

Part 10 Sexual offences

- 204: Rape
- 205: Assault by penetration
- 207: Causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent (Aggravated)
- 208: Rape of a child under 13
- 209: Assault of a child under 13 by penetration
- 211: Causing or inciting a child under 13 to engage in sexual activity

Aggravated offences under the following sections –

- 232: Sexual activity with a person with a mental disorder impeding choice
- 233: Causing or encouraging a person with a mental disorder impeding choice to engage in sexual activity
- 236: Causing a person with a mental disorder to engage in or agree to engage in sexual activity by inducement, etc.
- 237: Engaging in sexual activity in the presence, procured by inducement etc., of a person with a mental disorder
- 240: Care workers: Sexual activity with a person with a mental disorder
- 260: Paying for sexual services of a child

281: Committing an offence with intent to commit a sexual offence

Part 16 (Treason)

442(1) and (2): Treason

Part 22 (Hate crimes)

548: Aggravated criminal damage or arson, with racial aggravation

Offences remaining summary offences with the maximum penalty reduced to 18 years:

115(1): Kidnapping

353(1): Robbery and Assault with intent to rob

355(1): Aggravated burglary

Offences remaining summary offences with the maximum penalty reduced to 14 years:

58: Administering drugs or using instruments to procure abortion

63: Impeding rescue from a shipwreck

64: Wounding, etc. with intent to do GBH

66: Attempting to choke, etc. with intent to facilitate a serious offence

67: Using drugs to facilitate a serious offence

115(2): False Imprisonment

178: Causing grievous harm by explosion

179: Causing explosion, etc. with intent to cause GBH etc.

The two categories were formulated on the basis that these are offences where the risk to life is lower and based upon current sentencing practice/sentencing guidelines in the UK where life sentences for these offences are rarely handed down.

UK Sentencing guidelines are of some help:

GBH/Wounding with intent – Starting point on conviction after plea of NG for a category 1 offence (the most serious) is 12 years with a range of 13 to 16 years.

Aggravated burglary – Starting point is 10 years, range 9 to 13 years for a category 1 offence.

Violent personal robberies in the home – range 13 to 16 years, but there is an overlap with Aggravated burglary.

Street robbery, minor commercial robbery (category 1 offence) – Starting point 8 years, range 7 to 12 years.

Serious commercial robbery – where firearms carried but no injury would be 15 years; the most serious commercial robberies are in the range 15 – 20 years on a PG; 20 to 30 years on a plea of NG. (R v Turner 1975)

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE ORDINANCE 2014
DESTINATION TABLE

Most of the criminal procedure laws of the Falkland Islands are to be repealed or disapplied by the CPE Ordinance. This table shows where provisions equivalent to the repealed Ordinances listed in Part A of Schedule 14 can be found. Some are derived directly from the FI law, others are substantially modified. Individual sections of the Ordinances are identified in the Derivation Table under the relevant Part of the CPE Ordinance.

The second column below shows where in the CPE Ordinance an equivalent provision can be found. The third column shows the titles of existing provisions.

A blank against a section means there is no equivalent in the CPE Ordinance.

The destination of disappplied UK enactments listed in Part B of Schedule 14 can be identified by reference to the Derivation table. If the enactment is not in that table, it has been allowed to lapse as being of no current relevance (or repealed in the UK.)

(3) A reference in this Ordinance to the Magistrate’s Court or the Summary Court includes either of those courts when sitting as a Youth Court, but subject to any limitation on the jurisdiction and powers of a Youth Court.

(4) Subject to section 756 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 as regards the ascertainment of the age of a person who appears to the court to be a youth, the age of a person is to be taken as that which it appears to the court to be after considering any available evidence.

(5) For the purposes of this Ordinance, a reference to a person being convicted of an offence under the law of a place outside the Falkland Islands includes —

(a) a finding by a court exercising jurisdiction under the law of that place in respect of such an offence equivalent to a finding that the person is not guilty by reason of mental disorder; and

(b) a finding by such a court in respect of such an offence equivalent to a finding that the person is under a disability and did the act charged against the person in respect of the offence.

[UK Theatres Act 1968 s.18; PACE Act 1984 s.23; Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001 s.66(1); Broadcasting Act 1990 s.201; Gibraltar Criminal Offences Act s.2]

PART 2 – GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Criminal liability

3. Age of criminal responsibility

(1) There is a conclusive presumption that no child under the age of 10 years can be guilty of any offence.

(2) The rebuttable presumption of criminal law that a child aged 10 or over is incapable of committing an offence is abolished.

[Crimes Ord. s.37; UK Children & Young Persons Act 1933 s.50 am. by Children & Young Persons Act 1963 s.16; UK Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s.34]

4. Inferences as to intent

A court or jury, in determining whether a person has committed an offence —

(a) is not bound in law to infer that the person intended or foresaw a result of the person’s actions by reason only of its being a natural and probable consequence of those actions; but

(b) must decide whether the person did intend or foresee that result by reference to all the evidence, drawing such inferences from the evidence as appear proper in the circumstances.

[UK CJ Act 1967 s.8]

5. Automatism

(1) This section applies in the case of a person who is not mentally disordered within the meaning of section 2 of the Mental Health Ordinance.

(2) A person must not be found guilty of an offence if —

(a) the person acts in a state of automatism;

(b) the act —

(i) is a reflex, spasm or convulsion; or

(ii) occurs while the person is in a condition (whether of sleep, unconsciousness, impaired consciousness or otherwise) depriving the person of effective control of the act; and

(c) the act or condition is not the result of anything done or omitted with the mental element required for the offence nor the result of voluntary intoxication.

(3) A person must not be found guilty of an offence by virtue of an omission to act if —

(a) the person is physically incapable of acting in the way required; and

(b) his or her being so incapable is not the result of anything done or omitted with the mental element required for the offence nor the result of voluntary intoxication.

[Crimes Ord. s.26; UK case law]

Offences committed outside the Falkland Islands

6. Offences committed partly outside the Falkland Islands

(1) An offence begun outside the Falkland Islands and completed in the Falkland Islands may be treated as having been committed in the Falkland Islands.

(2) If —

(a) a person dies in the Falkland Islands in consequence of any act or omission outside the Falkland Islands; and

(b) the person committing that act or making that omission would, if the act or omission had been in the Falkland Islands, be guilty of the murder or manslaughter of the person who dies, the offence may be treated as having been committed in the Falkland Islands.

(3) If a person —

(a) dies outside the Falkland Islands in consequence of any act or omission in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) the person committing the act or making the omission would, if the death had occurred in the Falkland Islands, be guilty of the murder or manslaughter of the person who dies, the offence may be treated as having been committed in the Falkland Islands.

[Common law]

7. Offences to which sections 8 to 13 apply

(1) Sections 8 to 13 apply to Group A offences and Group B offences.

(2) The Group A offences are —

(a) an offence under any of the following provisions of Part 12 —

347 - Offence of theft

359 - Handling stolen goods

367 - Blackmail

368 - Offence of fraud

369 - Fraud by false representation

370 - Fraud by failing to disclose information

371 - Fraud by abuse of position

374 - Participating in fraudulent business carried on by sole trader, etc.

375 - Obtaining services dishonestly

378 - False accounting

379 - False statements by company directors, etc.

380 - Suppression, etc. of documents

381 - Dishonestly retaining a wrongful credit

382 - Cheating the public revenue

(b) an offence under any of the following provisions of Part 13 —

390 - Forgery

391 - Copying a false instrument

392 - Using a false instrument

393 - Using a copy of a false instrument

394 - Offences relating to money orders, share certificates, passports, etc.

401 - Reproducing currency notes

402 - Making, etc. imitation protected coins

(3) The Group B offences are —

(a) conspiracy to commit an offence listed in subsection (2)(a) or (b);

(b) attempting to commit an offence listed in subsection (2)(a) or (b);

(c) encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the commission of an offence listed in subsection (2)(a) or (b).

(4) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order amend subsection (2) or (3) by adding or removing any offence.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

8. Jurisdiction in respect of Group A offences

(1) A person may be convicted of a Group A offence if any of the events which are relevant events in relation to the offence occurred in the Falkland Islands.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), “relevant event” means any act or omission or other event (including any result of one or more acts or omissions) proof of which is required for conviction of the offence.

(3) In relation to an offence under section 368, “relevant event” includes —

(a) if the fraud involved an intention to make a gain and the gain occurred - that occurrence;

(b) if the fraud involved an intention to cause a loss or expose another to a risk of loss and the loss occurred - that occurrence.

(4) For the purpose of determining whether or not a particular event is a relevant event in relation to a Group A offence, any question as to where it occurred is to be disregarded.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

9. Questions immaterial to jurisdiction in the case of certain offences

(1) A person may be convicted of a Group A or Group B offence whether or not the person had Falkland Islands status at any material time.

(2) On a charge of conspiracy to commit a Group A offence, or on a charge of conspiracy to defraud in the Falkland Islands, a person may be convicted of the offence whether or not —

(a) the person became a party to the conspiracy in the Falkland Islands;

(b) any act or omission or other event in relation to the conspiracy occurred in the Falkland Islands.

(3) On a charge of attempting to commit a Group A offence, a person may be convicted of the offence whether or not —

(a) the attempt was made in the Falkland Islands;

(b) it had an effect in the Falkland Islands.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply in relation to an offence if a different rule about national status of the defendant is included in the provision which creates the offence.

(5) Subsection (2) does not apply in relation to a charge of conspiracy brought by virtue of section 24.

(6) Subsection (3) does not apply in relation to a charge of attempt brought by virtue of section 36.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

10. Rules relating to the location of events

In relation to a Group A or Group B offence —

(a) there is an obtaining of property in the Falkland Islands if the property is either despatched from or received at the Falkland Islands;

(b) there is a communication in the Falkland Islands of any information, instruction, request, demand or other matter if it is sent by any means —

(i) from the Falkland Islands to a place elsewhere; or

(ii) from a place elsewhere to the Falkland Islands.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

11. Conspiracy and encouraging

(1) A person may be convicted of conspiracy to defraud if —

(a) a party to the agreement constituting the conspiracy, or a party's agent, did anything in the Falkland Islands in relation to the agreement before its formation; or

(b) a party to it became a party in the Falkland Islands (by joining it either in person or through an agent); or

(c) a party to it, or a party's agent, did or omitted anything in the Falkland Islands in pursuance of it, and the conspiracy would be triable in the Falkland Islands but for the fraud which the parties to it had in view not being intended to take place in the Falkland Islands.

(2) A person may be convicted of encouraging the commission of a Group A offence if the encouragement —

(a) takes place in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) would be triable in the Falkland Islands but for what the defendant had in view not being an offence triable in the Falkland Islands.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are subject to section 12.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

12. Extended jurisdiction in relation to certain attempts

(1) If this section applies to an act, what the person doing the act had in view is to be treated as an offence to which section 19 (Attempts generally) applies.

(2) This section applies to an act if —

(a) it is done in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) it would fall within section 19(1) as more than merely preparatory to the commission of a Group A offence but for the fact that that offence, if completed, would not be an offence triable in the Falkland Islands.

(3) Subsection (1) is subject to section 13.

(4) If a person does any act to which this section applies, the offence which the person commits is to be treated for all purposes as the offence of attempting to commit the relevant Group A offence.

[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

13. Relevance of external law

(1) A person commits an offence triable by virtue of section 11(1) only if pursuing the agreed course of conduct would at some stage involve —

(a) an act or omission by one or more of the parties; or

(b) the happening of some other event,

constituting an offence under the law in force where the act, omission or other event was intended to take place.

(2) A person commits an offence triable by virtue of section 11(2) only if what the person had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place.

(3) Conduct punishable under the law in force in any place is an offence under that law for the purposes of this section, however it is described in that law.

(4) Subject to subsection (6), a condition specified in subsection (1) or (2) is to be taken as satisfied unless, not later than 28 days after the defendant is charged with the offence, the defence serve on the prosecution a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the relevant conduct, the condition is not in their opinion satisfied;

(b) showing their grounds for that opinion; and

- (c) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied.
- (5) In subsection (4) “the relevant conduct” means —
 - (a) if the condition in subsection (1) is in question - the agreed course of conduct; and
 - (b) if the condition in subsection (2) is in question - what the defendant had in view.
- (6) The court may, if it thinks fit, permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of a notice under subsection (4).
- (7) In the Supreme Court, the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone.
[UK CJ Act 1993 ss.1 to 6]

Alternative verdicts

14. Conviction of offence other than that charged

- (1) A person who is charged with an offence may plead not guilty of the offence charged but guilty of another offence of which the person might be found guilty on that charge.
- (2) If, pursuant to subsection (1), a defendant pleads not guilty of an offence charged but guilty of some other offence of which the person might be found guilty on that charge, and the person is convicted on that plea of guilty without trial for the offence of which the person has pleaded not guilty, then (whether or not the 2 offences are separately charged in distinct counts) the person’s conviction of the one offence is an acquittal of the other.
- (3) If, on a person’s trial for any offence except treason or murder, the court, or the jury if there is one, finds the person not guilty of the offence specifically charged, but the allegations amount to or include (expressly or by implication) an allegation of another offence falling within the jurisdiction of the court, the court or jury, as the case may be, may find the person guilty of that other offence or of an offence of which the person could be found guilty on a charge for that other offence.
- (4) For the purposes of subsection (3) —
 - (a) an allegation of an offence is to be taken as including an allegation of attempting to commit that offence;
 - (b) if a person is charged with attempting to commit an offence or with any assault or other act preliminary to an offence, but not with the completed offence, then (subject to the discretion of the court to permit the bringing of a charge or the preferment of an indictment for the completed offence) the person may be convicted of the offence charged notwithstanding that the person is shown to be guilty of the completed offence.

(5) Subsections (1) and (3) apply to charge containing more than one offence as if each offence were a separate charge.

(6) On an indictment for murder a person found not guilty of murder may be found guilty —

(a) of manslaughter, or of causing grievous bodily harm with intent to do so; or

(b) of any offence of which the person may be found guilty under an enactment specifically so providing, or under section 15; or

(c) of an attempt to commit murder, or of an attempt to commit any other offence of which the person might be found guilty; but may not be found guilty of any offence not included in this subsection.

(7) Nothing in this section excludes the application of any law which —

(a) restricts the power of a court to imprison;

(b) authorises an offender to be dealt with in a way not authorised by the enactment specially relating to the offence; or

(c) authorises a person to be found guilty of an offence other than that with which the person is charged.

[Crimes Ord. s.8; UK Criminal Law Act 1967 s.6]

15. Person tried for offence may be convicted of ancillary offence

If on a trial for an imprisonable offence the court, or the jury if there is one —

(a) is satisfied that the offence charged (or some other offence of which the defendant might on that charge be convicted) was committed; but

(b) finds the defendant not guilty of that offence, the court or jury, as the case may be, may convict the defendant of an offence under any of sections 31 (Offence of encouragement), 42 (Aiding and abetting) or 43 (Assisting offenders) if it is satisfied that the defendant committed such an offence in relation to the offence charged (or that other offence).

[Criminal Law Act 1967 s.4(2)]

Miscellaneous

16. Proceedings by and against spouses

(1) This Ordinance applies in relation to the parties to a marriage, and to property belonging to either of them, whether or not by reason of an interest derived from the marriage, as it would apply if they were not married and any such interest subsisted independently of the marriage.

(2) A person has the same right to bring proceedings against that person's spouse for any offence (whether under this Ordinance or otherwise) as if they were not married, and a person bringing any such proceedings is competent to give evidence for the prosecution at every stage of the proceedings.

(3) Subject to subsection (5), proceedings may not be commenced against a person for any offence of stealing or doing unlawful damage to property which at the time of the offence belongs to that person's spouse, or for any attempt or conspiracy to commit such an offence, or encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the commission of such an offence, except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(4) In subsection (3), the term "proceedings" includes —

(a) an arrest without warrant made by the spouse; and

(b) a warrant of arrest issued on an information laid by the spouse.

(5) Subsection (3) —

(a) does not apply to proceedings against another person charged with committing the offence jointly with the person;

(b) does not apply if by virtue of any judicial decree or order (wherever made) the person and the spouse are at the time of the offence under no obligation to cohabit;

(c) does not prevent the arrest, or the issue of a warrant for the arrest, of a person for an offence, or the remand in custody or on bail of a person charged with an offence, if the arrest (if without a warrant) is made, or the warrant of arrest issues on an information laid, by someone other than the spouse of the person.

(6) In this section, a reference to a spouse includes a reference to a civil partner as defined in section 2 and a reference to a marriage includes a reference to a civil partnership as so defined.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.30 adapted; Common law]

17. Application of Ordinance to corporations

(1) This Ordinance applies in relation to a corporation as if —

(a) the corporation were an individual aged 18 or over;

(b) the words "he or she" or grammatical variations of those words were "it" or the corresponding grammatical variation of "it"; and

(c) the words "in custody or on bail" were omitted wherever they appear.

(2) If an offence under this or any other Ordinance is committed by a corporate body and it is proved —

- (a) to have been committed with the consent or connivance of an officer; or
- (b) to be attributable to any neglect on the part of an officer, the officer as well as the corporate body commits the offence and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly.

(3) In subsection (2) “officer”, in relation to a corporate body, means a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body, or a person purporting to act in any such capacity.

(4) If the affairs of a corporate body are managed by its members, subsection (2) applies in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his or her functions of management as if he or she were a director of the body.

(5) A reference in this Ordinance to a defendant or other person by a gender-specific term does not preclude the application of that provision to a corporation.

[Crimes Ord. s.51; UK Public Order Act 1986 s.28; UK Knives Act 1997 s.10 etc.]

18. No requirement for corroboration

(1) There is no requirement at a trial for the court to give itself, or the jury if there is one, a warning about convicting the defendant on the uncorroborated evidence of a person merely because that person is —

- (a) an alleged accomplice of the defendant; or
- (b) if the offence charged is a sexual offence – the person in respect of whom it is alleged to have been committed.

(2) There is no requirement at a trial for the court to give itself, or the jury if there is one, a warning about convicting the defendant on the uncorroborated evidence of a child.

(3) Unsworn evidence admitted by virtue of section 352 or 353 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 may corroborate evidence (sworn or unsworn) given by any other person.

(4) This section does not affect —

- (a) any requirement for a warning to the tribunal of fact about convicting a defendant on uncorroborated evidence imposed by this Ordinance or any other written law;
- (b) any rule of law that requires the tribunal of fact to be warned to exercise caution or to look for supporting material before acting on the unsupported evidence of a certain type of witness;
- (c) any rule of law relating to —

- (i) confessions by mentally disabled persons;
- (ii) identification evidence;
- (iii) evidence relating to sudden unexplained infant deaths; or
- (iv) unconvincing hearsay evidence.

[Crimes Ord. s.49; UK CJ Act 1988 s.34; Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.32]

PART 3 – ANCILLARY OFFENCES

Attempts

19. Attempts generally

(1) A provision in any written law of the Falkland Islands which creates or results in the creation of an offence (other than an offence created by this Part), whether indictment-only or summary, is deemed to include a provision that an attempt to commit such an offence itself constitutes an offence which may, subject to section 21(1) in respect of the penalty for attempted murder, be dealt with and punished in the same way as if the offence had been committed.

(2) A person charged with an offence may be convicted of having attempted to commit that offence although the person was not charged with the attempt.

(3) In this Part, an attempt means any act done with intent to commit an offence which is more than merely preparatory to the commission of the offence.

(4) A person may be convicted of attempting to commit an offence to which this section applies even though the facts are such that the commission of the offence is impossible.

(5) In any case where —

(a) apart from this subsection a person’s intention would not be regarded as having amounted to an intent to commit an offence; but

(b) if the facts of the case had been as the person believed them to be, the person’s intention would be so regarded, then, for the purposes of subsection (1), the person is to be regarded as having had an intention to commit that offence.

[Crimes Ord. s.10; UK Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s.1 (part)]

20. Application of procedural and other provisions to offences of attempt

(1) A provision to which this section applies has effect with respect to an offence under section 19 as it has effect with respect to the offence attempted.

(2) This section applies to provisions of any enactment, whenever coming into operation —

- (a) whereby proceedings may not be commenced or carried on otherwise than by, or on behalf or with the consent of, any person;
- (b) conferring power to commence proceedings;
- (c) as to the venue of proceedings;
- (d) whereby proceedings may not be commenced after the expiration of a time limit;
- (e) conferring a power of arrest or search;
- (f) conferring a power of seizure and detention of property;
- (g) whereby a person may not be convicted or committed for trial on the uncorroborated evidence of one witness (including any provision requiring the evidence of not less than 2 credible witnesses);
- (h) conferring a power of forfeiture or deprivation, including any power to deal with anything liable to be forfeited;
- (i) whereby, if an offence committed by a corporate body is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of another person, that person also commits the offence.

[UK Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s.2 adapted]

21. Procedural rules

(1) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence of attempted murder is life imprisonment.

(2) In any case in which a court may proceed to trial of an indictment or charge charging a person with an offence and an indictment or charge charging the person with an offence under section 19 of attempting to commit that offence, the court may, without the person's consent, try the indictments or charges together.

(3) If, in proceedings against a person for an offence under section 19, there is evidence sufficient in law to support a finding that the person did an act falling within subsection (1) of that section, the question whether or not the act fell within that subsection is a question of fact.

[UK Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s.4]

22. Effect of sections 19 to 21 on common law

(1) The offence of attempt at common law and any offence at common law of procuring materials for crime are abolished for all purposes not relating to acts done before the commencement of this Part.

(2) Except as regards offences committed before the commencement of this Part, references in any enactment coming into operation before the commencement of this Part which fall to be construed as references to the offence of attempt at common law are to be construed as references to the offence under section 19.

[UK Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s.6]

Conspiracy

23. Conspiracy

(1) Subject to the following provisions of this Part, a person who agrees with any other person or persons that a course of conduct is to be pursued which, if the agreement is carried out in accordance with their intentions, either —

(a) will necessarily amount to or involve the commission of any offence or offences by one or more of the parties to the agreement; or

(b) would do so but for the existence of facts which render the commission of the offence or any of the offences impossible, commits the offence of conspiracy to commit the offence or offences in question.

Penalty: As provided in section 26.

(2) Even if liability for any offence may be incurred without knowledge on the part of the person committing it of any particular fact or circumstance necessary for the commission of the offence, a person does not commit conspiracy to commit that offence by virtue of subsection (1) unless that person and at least one other party to the agreement intend or know that that fact or circumstance will exist at the time when the conduct constituting the offence is to take place.

(3) In this Part “offence” —

(a) means an offence triable in the Falkland Islands; and

(b) includes murder even if the murder in question would not be triable in the Falkland Islands, if it was committed in accordance with the intentions of the parties to the agreement.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.1 am. by Criminal Attempts Act 1981]

24. Conspiracy to commit offences outside the Falkland Islands

(1) If each of the following conditions is satisfied in the case of an agreement, this Part has effect in relation to the agreement as it has effect in relation to an agreement falling within section 23(1).

(2) The first condition is that the pursuit of the agreed course of conduct would at some stage involve —

(a) an act by one or more of the parties; or

(b) the happening of some other event,

intended to take place outside the Falkland Islands.

(3) The second condition is that that act or other event constitutes an offence under the law in force in that place.

(4) The third condition is that the agreement would fall within section 23(1) as an agreement relating to the commission of an offence but for the fact that the offence would not be an offence triable in the Falkland Islands if committed in accordance with the parties' intentions.

(5) The fourth condition is that —

(a) a party to the agreement, or a party's agent, did anything in the Falkland Islands in relation to the agreement before its formation; or

(b) a party to the agreement became a party in the Falkland Islands (by joining it either in person or through an agent); or

(c) a party to the agreement, or a party's agent, did or omitted anything in the Falkland Islands in pursuance of the agreement.

(6) In the application of this Part to an agreement in the case of which each of the above conditions is satisfied, a reference to an offence is to be read as a reference to what would be the offence in question but for the fact that it is not an offence triable in the Falkland Islands.

(7) Conduct punishable under the law in force in any place is an offence under that law for the purposes of this section, however it is described in that law.

(8) Subject to subsection (9), the second condition is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than 28 days after the defendant is charged with the offence, the defence serve on the prosecution a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the agreed course of conduct, the condition is not in their opinion satisfied;

(b) showing their grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied.

(9) The court may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the second condition is satisfied without the prior service of a notice under subsection (8).

(10) In the Supreme Court, the question whether the second condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone, and treated as a question of law.

(11) Any act done by means of a message (however communicated) is to be treated for the purposes of the fourth condition as done in the Falkland Islands if the message is sent or received in the Falkland Islands.

(12) In any proceedings in respect of an offence triable by virtue of this section, it is immaterial whether or not the defendant had Falkland Islands status at the time of any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence.

(13) References in any enactment, instrument or document (except those in this Part) to an offence of conspiracy to commit an offence include an offence triable in the Falkland Islands as such a conspiracy by virtue of this section (without affecting subsection (6)).

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.1A ins. by Criminal Justice (Terrorism & Conspiracy) Act 1998]

25. Exemptions from liability

(1) A person does not by virtue of section 23 commit conspiracy to commit any offence if the person is an intended victim of that offence.

(2) A person does not by virtue of section 23 commit conspiracy to commit any offence or offences if the only other person or persons with whom the person agrees are (both initially and at all times during the currency of the agreement) —

(a) the person's spouse or civil partner;

(b) a person under the age of criminal responsibility; or

(c) an intended victim of that offence or of each of those offences.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

26. Penalties

(1) The maximum penalty on conviction for conspiracy by virtue of section 23 is —

(a) in a case falling within subsection (3) or (4) of this section - imprisonment for a term related in accordance with the respective subsection to the gravity of the offence or offences in question (referred to in this section as the relevant offence or offences);

(b) in any other case - a fine.

(2) Subsection (1)(a) does not affect the application of section 565 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Suspended sentences of imprisonment) in a case falling within subsection (3) or (4).

(3) If the relevant offence or any of the relevant offences is —

(a) an offence of murder, or any other offence the sentence for which is fixed by law;

(b) an offence for which a sentence extending to imprisonment for life is provided; or

(c) an indictment-only offence punishable with imprisonment for which no maximum term of imprisonment is provided, the maximum penalty on conviction for conspiracy is imprisonment for life.

(4) If, in a case other than one to which subsection (3) applies, the relevant offence or any of the relevant offences is punishable with imprisonment, the maximum penalty on conviction for conspiracy is imprisonment for a term not exceeding the maximum term provided for that offence or (if more than one such offence is in question) for any one of those offences (taking the longer or the longest term as the limit for the purposes of this section where the terms provided differ).

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

27. Restrictions on the commencement of proceedings

(1) Proceedings under section 23 for conspiracy to commit any offence or offences may not be commenced against any person except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(2) If —

(a) an offence has been committed in pursuance of any agreement; and

(b) proceedings may not be commenced for that offence because any time limit applicable to the commencement of any such proceedings has expired, proceedings under section 23 for conspiracy to commit that offence may not be commenced against any person on the basis of that agreement.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

28. Conspiracy under other enactments

Sections 23 and 25 apply for determining whether a person commits an offence of conspiracy under any enactment other than section 23 but conduct which is an offence under any such other enactment is not also an offence under section 23.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

29. Effect of acquittal of other defendant

(1) The fact that the person or persons who, so far as appears from the indictment or charge on which any person has been convicted of conspiracy, were the only other parties to the agreement on which the conviction was based have been acquitted of conspiracy by reference to that agreement (whether after being tried with the person convicted or separately) is not a ground for quashing the conviction unless under all the circumstances of the case the conviction is inconsistent with the acquittal of the other person or persons in question.

(2) Any rule of law or practice inconsistent with subsection (1) is abolished.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

30. Abolitions, savings, transitional provisions

(1) Subject to the following provisions, the offence of conspiracy at common law is abolished.

(2) Subsection (1) does not affect the offence of conspiracy at common law if and in so far as it may be committed by entering into an agreement to engage in conduct which —

(a) tends to corrupt public morals or outrages public decency; but

(b) would not amount to or involve the commission of an offence if carried out by a single person otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement.

(3) Subsection (1) does not affect —

(a) any proceedings commenced before the time when this Part comes into force;

(b) any proceedings commenced after that time against a person charged with the same conspiracy as that charged in any proceedings commenced before that time; or

(c) subject to subsection (5), any proceedings commenced after that time in respect of a trespass committed before that time.

(4) A person convicted of conspiracy to trespass in any proceedings brought by virtue of subsection (3)(c) is not in respect of that conviction liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding 6 months.

(5) Incitement to commit the offence of conspiracy (whether the conspiracy incited would be an offence at common law or under this Part or any other enactment) ceases to be an offence.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 ss.2 to 5]

Encouragement of offences

31. Offence of encouragement

(1) A person who —

(a) does an act capable of encouraging the commission of an offence; and

(b) intends to encourage its commission,

commits an offence.

Penalty: As provided in section 40.

(2) A person is not to be taken to have intended to encourage the commission of an offence under subsection (1) merely because such encouragement was a foreseeable consequence of the person's act.

(3) A person who — does an act capable of encouraging the commission of an offence; and

- (a) believes that —
 - (i) the offence will be committed; and
 - (ii) the act will encourage its commission,

commits an offence.

Penalty: As provided in section 40.

(4) A person who —

- (a) does an act capable of encouraging the commission of one or more of a number of offences; and
- (b) believes that —
 - (i) one or more of those offences will be committed; and
 - (ii) the act will encourage the commission of one or more of them,

commits an offence.

Penalty: As provided in section 40.

(5) It is immaterial for the purposes of subsection (4)(b) whether the person has any belief as to which offence will be encouraged.

(6) If a person is charged with an offence under subsection (4) the charge —

- (a) must specify the offences alleged to be the “number of offences” mentioned in subsection (4)(a); but
- (b) need not specify all the offences potentially comprised in that number.

(7) In relation to an offence under subsection (4), any reference in this Part to the offences specified in the charge is to the offences specified by virtue of subsection (6)(a).

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss.44, 45 and 46 adapted]

32. Proving an offence under section 31

(1) Section 31 is to be read in accordance with this section.

(2) If it is alleged under section 31(1) that a person (‘A’) intended to encourage the commission of an offence, it is sufficient to prove that A intended to encourage the doing of an act which would amount to the commission of that offence.

(3) If it is alleged under section 31(3) that A believed that an offence would be committed and that A's act would encourage its commission, it is sufficient to prove that A believed that —

(a) an act would be done which would amount to the commission of that offence; and

(b) A's act would encourage the doing of that act.

(4) If it is alleged under section 31(4) that A believed that one or more of a number of offences would be committed and that A's act would encourage the commission of one or more of them, it is sufficient to prove that A believed that —

(a) one or more of a number of acts would be done which would amount to the commission of one or more of those offences; and

(b) A's act would encourage the doing of one or more of those acts.

(5) In proving for the purposes of this section whether an act done by A is one which, if done, would amount to the commission of an offence —

(a) if the offence is one requiring proof of fault, it must be proved that —

(i) A believed that, if the act were done, it would be done with that fault;

(ii) A was reckless as to whether or not it would be done with that fault; or

(iii) A's state of mind was such that, if A were to do it, it would be done with that fault;

(b) if the offence is one requiring proof of particular circumstances or consequences (or both), it must be proved that A —

(i) believed that, if the act were done, it would be done in those circumstances or with those consequences; or

(ii) was reckless as to whether or not it would be done in those circumstances or with those consequences.

(6) For the purposes of subsection (5)(a)(iii), A is to be assumed to be able to do the act in question.

(7) In the case of an offence under section 31(1) —

(a) subsection (5)(b)(i) is to be read as if the reference to "A believed" were a reference to "A intended or believed"; but

(b) A is not to be taken to have intended that an act would be done in particular circumstances or with particular consequences merely because its being done in those circumstances or with those consequences was a foreseeable consequence of A's act of encouragement or assistance.

(8) A reference in this section to the doing of an act includes a reference to —

(a) a failure to act;

(b) the continuation of an act that has already begun;

(c) an attempt to do an act (except an act amounting to the commission of the offence of attempting to commit another offence).

(9) In this Part (unless otherwise provided) a reference to the anticipated offence is —

(a) in relation to an offence under section 31(1) - a reference to the offence mentioned in subsection (2); and

(b) in relation to an offence under section 31(3) - a reference to the offence mentioned in subsection (3).

(10) In relation to an offence under section 31(4) —

(a) it is sufficient to prove the matters mentioned in subsection (5) by reference to one offence only; but

(b) the offence or offences by reference to which those matters are proved must be one of the offences specified in the indictment or charge.

(11) Subsection (10) does not affect any enactment or rule of law under which a person charged with one offence may be convicted of another and is subject to section 39 (Alternative verdicts and guilty pleas).

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss.47 and 48 adapted]

33. Supplemental provisions

(1) A person may be convicted of an offence under section 31 whether or not any offence capable of being encouraged by the person's act is committed.

(2) If a person's act is capable of encouraging the commission of a number of offences —

(a) section 31(1) applies separately in relation to each offence that the person intends to encourage to be committed; and

(b) section 31(2) applies separately in relation to each offence that the person believes will be encouraged to be committed.

(3) A person may, in relation to the same act, commit an offence under more than one provision of section 31.

(4) In reckoning whether —

(a) for the purposes of section 31(2), an act is capable of encouraging the commission of an offence; or

(b) for the purposes of section 31(3), an act is capable of encouraging the commission of one or more of a number of offences, an offence under section 31 and any other offence of encouraging, assisting, inciting, soliciting, inducing or conspiring with another person to commit an offence (whether any of those words is used in the description of that other offence or not) is to be disregarded.

(5) For the purposes of section 31(3)(b)(i) and 31(4)(b)(i) it is sufficient for the person concerned to believe that the offence (or one or more of the offences) will be committed if certain conditions are met.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 s.49 and Schedule 3 adapted]

34. Defences

(1) A person ('A') is not guilty of an offence under section 31 if A proves that —

(a) A knew certain circumstances existed; and

(b) it was reasonable for A to act as A did in those circumstances.

(2) A person ('A') is not guilty of an offence under section 31 if A proves that —

(a) A believed certain circumstances to exist;

(b) A's belief was reasonable; and

(c) it was reasonable for A to act as A did in the circumstances as A believed them to be.

(3) Factors to be considered in determining whether it was reasonable for the purposes of subsections (1) and (2) for a person to act as the person did include —

(a) the seriousness of the anticipated offence (or, in the case of an offence under section 31(4) the offences specified in the charge);

(b) any purpose for which the person claims to have been acting;

(c) any authority by which the person claims to have been acting.

(4) A person is not guilty of an offence under section 31 by reference to a protective offence if the person —

(a) falls within the protected category; and

(b) is the person in respect of whom the protective offence was committed or would have been if it had been committed.

(5) In subsection (4) “protective offence” means an offence that exists (wholly or in part) for the protection of a particular category of persons (“the protected category”).

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss.50 and 51 adapted]

35. Jurisdiction

(1) If a person knew or believed that what he or she anticipated might take place wholly or partly in the Falkland Islands, the person can be convicted of an offence under section 31 no matter where the person was at any relevant time.

(2) If it is not proved that the person knew or believed that what he or she anticipated might take place wholly or partly in the Falkland Islands, the person cannot be convicted of an offence under section 31 unless subsection (1), (3) or (8) of section 36 applies.

(3) A reference in this section (and in any of those paragraphs) to what a person anticipated —

(a) in relation to an offence under section 31(1) or (3) - is to the act which would amount to the commission of the anticipated offence;

(b) in relation to an offence under section 31(4) - is to an act which would amount to the commission of any of the offences specified in the indictment or charge.

(4) Nothing in this section or section 40 restricts the operation of any enactment by virtue of which an act constituting an offence under section 31 is triable under the law of the Falkland Islands.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 s.52 adapted]

36. Extended jurisdiction in certain cases

(1) This subsection applies if —

(a) any relevant behaviour of a person takes place wholly or partly in the Falkland Islands;

(b) the person knows or believes that what he or she anticipates might take place wholly or partly in a place outside the Falkland Islands; and

(c) either —

(i) the anticipated offence is one that would be triable under the law of the Falkland Islands if it were committed there; or

- (ii) if there are relevant conditions, it would be so triable if it were committed there by a person who satisfies the conditions.
- (2) In this subsection (1) “relevant condition” means a condition that —
- (a) determines (wholly or in part) whether an offence committed outside the Falkland Islands is nonetheless triable under the law of the Falkland Islands; and
 - (b) relates to the citizenship, nationality or residence of the person who commits it.
- (3) This subsection applies if —
- (a) subsection (1) does not apply;
 - (b) any relevant behaviour of a person takes place wholly or partly in the Falkland Islands;
 - (c) the person knows or believes that what he or she anticipates might take place wholly or partly in a place outside the Falkland Islands; and
 - (d) what the person anticipates would amount to an offence under the law in force in force in that place.
- (4) The condition in subsection (3)(d) is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than 28 days after the defendant is charged with the offence, the defence serve on the prosecution a notice —
- (a) stating that on the facts as alleged the condition is not in their opinion satisfied;
 - (b) showing their grounds for that opinion; and
 - (c) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied.
- (5) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without prior service of a notice under subsection (4).
- (6) In the Supreme Court, the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone.
- (7) An act punishable under the law in force in any place outside the Falkland Islands constitutes an offence under that law for the purposes of subsection (3), however it is described in that law.
- (8) This subsection applies if —
- (a) any relevant behaviour of a person takes place wholly outside the Falkland Islands;
 - (b) the person knows or believes that what he or she anticipates might take place wholly or partly in a place outside the Falkland Islands; and

(c) the person could be tried under the law of the Falkland Islands if he or she committed the anticipated offence in that place.

(9) For the purposes of subsection (8)(c), the person is to be assumed to be able to commit the anticipated offence.

(10) In relation to an offence under section 31(4), a reference in this section to the anticipated offence is a reference to any of the offences specified in the indictment or charge.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 Schedule 4]

37. Commencement of proceedings, etc. for an offence

(1) Any provision to which this section applies has the same effect with respect to an offence under section 31 as it has with respect to the anticipated offence.

(2) This section applies to any provision in or under an enactment (whenever coming into operation) that —

(a) provides that proceedings may not be commenced or carried on except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General;

(b) confers power to commence proceedings;

(c) confers power to seize and detain property;

(d) confers a power of forfeiture or deprivation, including a power to deal with anything liable to be forfeited.

(3) In relation to an offence under section 31(4) —

(a) the reference in subsection (1) to the anticipated offence is a reference to any offence specified in the indictment or charge; and

(b) each of the offences specified in the indictment or charge must be an offence in respect of which the prosecutor has power to commence proceedings.

(4) Any consent to proceedings required as a result of this section is in addition to any consent required by subsection (6).

(5) Proceedings for an offence triable by reason only of a provision of section 36 may not be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss.53, 54 (part) and 55, with s.34 definitions]

38. Persons who may be convicted

(1) In proceedings for an offence under section 31, a person can be convicted if —

(a) it is proved that the person must have committed that offence or the anticipated offence; but

(b) it is not proved which of those offences the person committed.

(2) For the purposes of this section, a person is not to be treated as having committed the anticipated offence merely because the person aided, abetted, counselled or procured its commission.

(3) In relation to an offence under section 31(4), a reference in this section to the anticipated offence is a reference to an offence specified in the indictment or charge.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss. 56 to 59]

39. Alternative verdicts and guilty pleas

(1) If in proceedings for an offence under section 31(1) or (3) a person is not found guilty of that offence by reference to the specified offence, the person may be found guilty of that offence by reference to an alternative offence.

(2) If in proceedings for an offence under section 31(4) a person is found not guilty of that offence by reference to any specified offence, the person may be found guilty of that offence by reference to one or more alternative offences.

(3) If in proceedings for an offence under section 31(4) a person is found guilty of the offence by reference to one or more specified offences, the person may also be found guilty of it by reference to one or more other alternative offences.

(4) For the purposes of this section, an offence is an alternative offence if —

(a) it is an offence of which, on a trial for the specified offence, a defendant may be found guilty; and

(b) condition in subsection (5) is satisfied.

(5) The condition referred to in subsection (4)(b) is that the indictment or charge under section 31 includes allegations which amount to or include (expressly or by implication) an allegation of that offence by reference to it.

(6) Subsection (4) does not apply if the specified offence, or any of the specified offences, is murder or treason.

(7) In the application of subsection (5) to proceedings for an offence under section 31(1), the allegations in the indictment or charge are to be taken to include an allegation of that offence by reference to the offence of attempting to commit the specified offence.

(8) Section 33(4) applies to an offence which is an alternative offence in relation to a specified offence as it applies to that specified offence.

(9) In this section —

(a) in relation to a person charged with an offence under section 31(1) or (3), “the specified offence” means the offence specified in the indictment or charge as the one alleged to be the anticipated offence;

(b) in relation to a person charged with an offence under section 31(4), “specified offence” means an offence specified in the indictment or charge (within the meaning of subsection (4) of that section), and related expressions are to be read accordingly.

(10) A person being tried for an offence under section 31 may plead guilty to an offence of which the person could be found guilty under this section on the same indictment or charge.

(11) This section applies to an indictment or charge containing more than one offence as if each offence were the subject of a separate count or allegation.

(12) This section does not affect section 14 (Conviction of offence other than that charged).
[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss. 56 to 59]

40. Penalties

(1) Subsections (2) and (3) apply if a person is convicted —

(a) of an offence under section 31(1) or (3); or

(b) of an offence under section 31(4) by reference to only one offence (“the reference offence”).

(2) The maximum penalty on conviction of a person for encouragement is —

(a) if the anticipated or reference offence is murder - imprisonment for life;

(b) in any other case - any penalty for which the person would be liable on conviction of the anticipated or reference offence.

(3) Subsections (4) to (7) apply if a person is convicted of an offence under section 31(4) by reference to more than one offence (“the reference offences”).

(4) If one of the reference offences is murder, the convicted person is liable to imprisonment for life.

(5) The maximum penalty on conviction of a person for encouragement, if none of the reference offences is murder, but one or more of them is punishable with imprisonment, is imprisonment for the maximum term prescribed for any one of those offences (taking the longer or the longest term as the limit for the purposes of this paragraph if the terms prescribed differ).

(6) The maximum penalty on conviction of a person for encouragement in any other case is a fine.

(7) Subsections (2)(b), (5) and (6) are subject to any contrary provision made by or under any other enactment.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss. 56 to 59]

41. Abolition of common law offence of incitement

(1) The common law offence of inciting the commission of another offence is abolished.

(2) A reference in any enactment to the offence of incitement is to be read as a reference to the offence of encouragement under section 31(1), (3) or (4), according to the circumstances of the case, and the offender may be prosecuted and punished in accordance with sections 31 to 40.

[UK Serious Crime Act 2007 ss. 56 to 59]

Accessories

42. Aiding and abetting

(1) A person who aids, abets, counsels, procures, suborns or commands the commission of an offence is guilty of the offence of aiding and abetting the principal offence and is liable to be dealt with, tried and punished as a principal offender.

(2) A person may be charged with and tried for an offence of aiding and abetting another person even if that other person is not charged as a principal.

[UK Accessories & Abettors Act 1861 am. by Criminal Law Act 1977; Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s.44]

43. Assisting offenders

(1) If a person ('A') has committed an imprisonable offence, any other person who, knowing or believing A to be guilty of the offence or of some other imprisonable offence, does without lawful authority or reasonable excuse any act with intent to impede A's arrest or prosecution, commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) if the offence is one for which the person must or may be sentenced to imprisonment for life – imprisonment for 12 years;
(ii) if the offence is one for which a person (not previously convicted) may be sentenced to imprisonment for 18 years – imprisonment for 9 years;
(iii) if the offence is one for which a person (not previously convicted) may be sentenced to imprisonment for 14 years – imprisonment for 7 years;
(iv) if the offence is not one included above but for which a person (not previously convicted) may be sentenced to imprisonment for 10 years – imprisonment for 5 years;
(iv) in any other case – imprisonment for 3 years.

(2) No proceedings for an offence under subsection (1) may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(3) Subsection (2) does not prevent the arrest, or the issue of a warrant for the arrest, of a person for an offence under subsection (1), or the remand in custody or on bail of a person charged with such an offence.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1967 s.4(1) and (3) adapted]

44. Concealing offences and false information

(1) If a person ('A') has committed an imprisonable offence, any other person ('B') who, knowing or believing that —

(a) the offence or some other imprisonable offence has been committed; and

(b) B has information which might be of material assistance in securing the prosecution or conviction of an offender for it, accepts or agrees to accept for not disclosing that information any consideration other than the making good of loss or injury caused by the offence, or the making of reasonable compensation for that loss or injury, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who causes any wasteful employment of the police by knowingly making to any person a false report tending to —

(a) show that an offence has been committed;

(b) give rise to fear for the safety of any persons or property; or

(c) show that the person has information material to any police inquiry,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(4) The compounding of an offence other than treason is not an offence otherwise than under this section.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1967 s.5]

Miscellaneous

45. Consequences of conviction for ancillary offence

(1) If —

(a) any written law of the Falkland Islands confers a power or imposes a duty which must or may be exercised or performed consequent upon a conviction of an offence or in relation to a person who is detained in custody for an offence; or

(b) a reference is otherwise made in any written law of the Falkland Islands to an offence, that power or duty or that reference is deemed to be also exercisable or performable consequent upon a conviction of, or include a reference to, as the case may be —

- (i) an attempt to commit that offence;
- (ii) a conspiracy to commit that offence;
- (iii) encouraging that offence;
- (iv) aiding and abetting that offence.

(2) The powers and duties to which subsection (1) applies include, but are not limited to powers—

- (a) to authorise search and seizure and detention of property;
- (b) to order forfeiture or deprivation of property;
- (c) to award costs;

(d) to cancel, suspend or refuse to issue any licence, permit or other authorisation.

[Crimes Ord. s.11 modified]

CHAPTER 2 – CRIMES AGAINST THE INDIVIDUAL

PART 4 – OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON

Causing and threatening death

46. Murder

(1) A person who with intent to kill or to cause grievous bodily harm to any person causes the death of another person by an unlawful act or omission commits the offence of murder.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (2).

(2) A person convicted of murder must be sentenced to life imprisonment, but —

(a) sections 577 and 582 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 apply in relation to the recommendation of a minimum term; and

(b) section 729 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 applies if the person convicted is a youth.

(3) In relation to murder and other fatal offences there is no requirement that the death should occur within a year and a day after the infliction of injury, but no prosecution for murder or any other fatal offence may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General if—

(a) the injury alleged to have caused the death was sustained more than 3 years before the death occurred; or

(b) the accused person has previously been convicted of an offence alleged to be connected with the death.

(4) In subsection (3) “fatal offence” means —

(a) murder, manslaughter, infanticide or any other offence of which one of the elements is causing a person’s death; or

(b) the offence of encouraging, or aiding and abetting, a person’s suicide.

(5) The offence of murder is triable on indictment only.

[Common law; Crimes Ord. ss.22 and 23B; UK Murder (Abolition of Death Penalty) Act 1965 s.1 adapted]

47. Abolition of constructive malice

(1) If a person kills another in the course or furtherance of some other offence, the killing does not amount to murder unless done with the same intention as is required for a killing to amount to murder when not done in the course or furtherance of another offence.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a killing done in the course or for the purpose of resisting an officer of justice, or of resisting or avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest, or of effecting or assisting an escape or rescue from legal custody, is to be treated as a killing in the course or furtherance of an offence.

[Crimes Ord. s.23 modified; UK Homicide Act 1957 s.1]

48. Diminished responsibility

(1) A person (‘A’) who kills or is a party to the killing of another is not to be convicted of murder if A was suffering from an abnormality of mental functioning which —

(a) arose from a recognised medical condition;

(b) substantially impaired A’s ability to do one or more of the things mentioned in subsection (2); and

(c) provides an explanation for A’s acts and omissions in doing or being a party to the killing.

(2) The things referred to in subsection (1)(b) are to —

(a) understand the nature of A’s conduct;

(b) form a rational judgment;

(c) exercise self-control.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1)(c), an abnormality of mental functioning provides an explanation for A's conduct if it causes, or is a significant contributory factor in causing, A to carry out that conduct.

(4) On a charge of murder, it is for the defence to prove that the defendant is by virtue of this section not liable to be convicted of murder.

(5) A person who but for this section would be liable, whether as principal or as accessory, to be convicted of murder is liable instead to be convicted of manslaughter.

(6) The fact that one party to a killing is by virtue of this section not liable to be convicted of murder does not affect the question whether the killing amounted to murder in the case of any other party to it.

[Crimes Ord. s.24 modified; UK Homicide Act 1957 s.2 am. by Coroners & Justice Act 2009 s.52]

49. Loss of self-control

(1) If a person ('A') kills or is a party to the killing of another ('B'), A is not to be convicted of murder if —

(a) A's acts and omissions in doing or being a party to the killing resulted from A's loss of self-control;

(b) the loss of self-control had a qualifying trigger; and

(c) a person of A's sex and age, with a normal degree of tolerance and self-restraint and in the circumstances of A, might have reacted in the same or in a similar way to A.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a), it is irrelevant whether or not the loss of self-control was sudden.

(3) In subsection (1)(c) the reference to "the circumstances of A" is a reference to all of A's circumstances other than those whose only relevance to A's conduct is that they bear on A's general capacity for tolerance or self-restraint.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply if, in doing or being a party to the killing, A acted in a considered desire for revenge.

(5) On a charge of murder, if sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue with respect to the defence under subsection (1), the court, or jury if there is one, must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not.

(6) For the purposes of subsection (5), sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue with respect to the defence if evidence is adduced on which, in the opinion of the trial judge, a jury, properly directed, could reasonably conclude that the defence might apply.

(7) A person who, but for this section, would be liable to be convicted of murder is liable instead to be convicted of manslaughter.

(8) The fact that one party to a killing is by virtue of this section not liable to be convicted of murder does not affect the question whether the killing amounted to murder in the case of any other party to it.

(9) A loss of self-control had a qualifying trigger if —

(a) A's loss of self-control was attributable to A's fear of serious violence from B against A or another identified person;

(b) A's loss of self-control was attributable to a thing or things done or said (or both) which —

(i) constituted circumstances of an extremely grave character; and

(ii) caused A to have a justifiable sense of being seriously wronged; or

(c) A's loss of self-control was attributable to a combination of the matters mentioned in paragraphs (a) and (b).

(10) In determining whether a loss of self-control had a qualifying trigger —

(a) A's fear of serious violence is to be disregarded to the extent that it was caused by a thing which A incited to be done or said for the purpose of providing an excuse to use violence;

(b) a sense of being seriously wronged by a thing done or said is not justifiable if A incited the thing to be done or said for the purpose of providing an excuse to use violence;

(c) the fact that a thing done or said constituted sexual infidelity is to be disregarded.

(11) The common law defence of provocation is abolished.

[Crimes Ord. s.25 modified; Coroners and Justice Act 2009 ss.54 & 55]

50. Manslaughter

(1) A person who kills another by an unlawful act likely to cause bodily harm commits the offence of manslaughter.

(2) A person who kills another by gross negligence commits the offence of manslaughter.

(3) The maximum penalty on conviction for manslaughter, whether the conviction is under subsection (1) or (2) of this section, or under section 48(5), 49(7), 54(1) or 56, is imprisonment for life.

(4) If manslaughter is committed in the course of driving a motor vehicle, the driver must upon conviction be disqualified from driving for a minimum period of 2 years.

(5) The offence of manslaughter is triable on indictment only.

[Common law; UK OAP Act 1861 s.5 adapted; Road Traffic Offences Act 1988]

51. Murder or manslaughter outside the Falkland Islands

(1) An offence of murder or manslaughter committed on land anywhere outside the Falkland Islands by a person who has Falkland Islands status may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in the Falkland Islands.

(2) This section does not prevent any person from being tried in any place outside the Falkland Islands for any murder or manslaughter committed outside the Falkland Islands.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.9]

52. Soliciting murder

(1) A person who solicits, encourages, persuades or endeavours to persuade or proposes to any person, to murder any other person in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere, commits an offence. Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) An offence under subsection (1) is triable on indictment only.

(3) A person may be prosecuted for an offence under this section, or under Part 3 for the offence of aiding and abetting murder, but not for both offences arising out of the same facts.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.4 am by Criminal Law Act 1977]

53. Threats to kill

A person ('A') who without lawful excuse makes to another person ('B') a threat, intending that B would fear it would be carried out, to kill B or a third person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.16 subst. by Criminal Law Act 1977]

54. Suicide pacts

(1) A person ('A') who, in pursuance of a suicide pact between A and another person ('B') —

(a) kills B; or

(b) is party to the killing of B by a third person, commits the offence of manslaughter.

(2) If it is shown that a person ('A') charged with the murder of another person ('B') killed B or was a party to B's being killed, it is for the defence to prove that A was acting in pursuance of a suicide pact between A and B.

(3) For the purposes of this section —

(a) "suicide pact" means a common agreement between 2 or more persons having for its object the death of all of them, whether or not each is to take his or her own life; but

(b) nothing done by a person who enters into a suicide pact is to be treated as done by the person in pursuance of the pact unless it is done while the person has the settled intention of dying in pursuance of the pact.

[UK Homicide Act 1957 s.4 am. by Suicide Act 1961]

55. Complicity in suicide

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A does an act capable of encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the suicide or attempted suicide of another person; and

(b) A's act was intended to encourage, or aid and abet, suicide or an attempt at suicide.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The person referred to in subsection (1)(a) need not be a specific person (or class of persons) known to, or identified by, A.

(3) A may commit an offence under this section whether or not a suicide, or an attempt at suicide, occurs.

(4) If on the trial of an indictment for murder or manslaughter of a person it is proved that the deceased person committed suicide, and the defendant committed an offence under subsection (1) in relation to that suicide, the court, or jury if there is one, may find the defendant guilty of the offence under subsection (1).

(5) If A arranges for a person ('B') to do an act that is capable of encouraging or assisting the suicide or attempted suicide of another person and B does that act, A is to be treated for the purposes of this Part as having done it.

(6) If the facts are such that an act is not capable of encouraging or assisting suicide or attempted suicide, for the purposes of this section it is to be treated as so capable if the act would have been so capable had the facts been as A believed them to be at the time of the act; or had subsequent events happened in the manner A believed they would happen, or both.

(7) A reference in this section to a person doing an act that is capable of encouraging the suicide or attempted suicide of another person includes a reference to the person's doing so by threatening another person or otherwise putting pressure on another person to commit or attempt suicide.

(8) A reference in this section to an act includes a reference to a course of conduct, and a reference to doing an act is to be read accordingly.

(9) No prosecution for an offence against this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Suicide Act 1961 s.2 am. by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s.59]

56. Infanticide

(1) If a woman by any wilful act or omission causes the death of her child, being a child under the age of 12 months, but at the time of the act or omission the balance of her mind was disturbed by reason of —

(a) her not having fully recovered from the effect of giving birth to a child; or

(b) the effect of lactation consequent upon the birth of the child,

then, if the circumstances were such that but for this section the offence would have amounted to murder or manslaughter, she commits the offence of infanticide

(2) If on the trial of a woman for the murder of her child, being a child under the age of 12 months, the court, or jury if there is one, are of the opinion that she by any wilful act or omission caused the death of the child, but that at the time of the act or omission the balance of her mind was disturbed as described in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (1), the court or jury as the case may be may, if the circumstances were such that but for the provisions of this section they might have returned a verdict of murder or manslaughter, return instead a verdict of infanticide.

(3) A woman convicted of infanticide may be dealt with and punished as if she had committed the offence of manslaughter of the child.

(4) This section does not affect the power of the court or jury, as the case may be, upon an indictment for the murder of a child to return a verdict of manslaughter, or a verdict of not guilty by reason of mental disorder.

(5) An offence under subsection (1) is triable on indictment only.

[UK Infanticide Act 1938 s.1 am. by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s.57]

57. Child destruction

(1) Subject to this section, a person who, with intent to destroy the life of a child capable of being born alive, by any wilful act causes a child to die before it has an existence independent of its mother, commits the offence of child destruction.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) A person is not to be found guilty of an offence against this section unless it is proved that the act which caused the death of the child was not done in good faith for the purpose only of preserving the life of the mother.

(3) For the purposes of this section, evidence that a woman had at any material time been pregnant for a period of 28 weeks or more is prima facie proof that she was at that time pregnant of a child capable of being born alive.

(4) No offence under this section is committed by a registered medical practitioner who terminates a pregnancy in accordance with section 60.

(5) For the purposes of the law relating to abortion —

(a) anything done with intent to procure a woman's miscarriage (or, in the case of a woman carrying more than one foetus, her miscarriage of any foetus) is unlawfully done unless authorised by section 60; and

(b) in the case of a woman carrying more than one foetus, anything done with intent to procure her miscarriage of any foetus is authorised by that section if —

(i) the ground for termination of the pregnancy specified in subsection 60(1)(d) applies in relation to any foetus and the thing is done for the purpose of procuring the miscarriage of that foetus; or

(ii) any of the other grounds for termination of the pregnancy specified in section 60 applies.

(6) If on the trial of a person for the murder or manslaughter of a child, or for infanticide, or for an offence under section 58 (Administering drugs or using instruments to procure abortion), the court, or jury if there is one, are of opinion that the defendant is not guilty of murder, manslaughter or infanticide, or of an offence under section 58 as the case may be, but that the defendant is guilty of child destruction —

(a) the court or jury, as the case may be, may find the person guilty of that offence; and

(b) the person is liable to be punished as if he or she had been convicted of an offence under this section.

(7) If on the trial of a person for child destruction the court, or jury if there is one, are of opinion that the defendant is not guilty of that offence, but that the person is guilty of an offence under section 58 —

(a) the court or jury, as the case may be, may find the person guilty of that offence; and

(b) the person is liable to be punished as if he or she had been convicted of an offence under that section.

(8) An offence under subsection (1) is triable on indictment only.
[UK Infant Life Preservation Act 1929 ss.1 and 2; Abortion Act 1967 s.5]

Termination of pregnancy

58. Administering drugs or using instruments to procure abortion

(1) A pregnant woman who, with intent to procure her own miscarriage, unlawfully administers to herself any poison or other noxious thing, or unlawfully uses any other means with that intent, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman, whether she is or is not with child, unlawfully administers to her or causes to be taken by her any poison or other noxious thing, or unlawfully uses any instrument or other means with that intent, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.58 am. by CJ Act 1948 s.1]

59. Supplying drugs, etc. to procure abortion

A person who unlawfully supplies or procures any poison or other noxious thing, or any instrument or thing, knowing that it is intended to be unlawfully used or employed with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman, whether she is or is not with child, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.59 am by CJ Act 1948 s.1]

60. Medical termination of pregnancy

(1) Subject to this section, a person does not commit an offence under section 58 or 59 when a pregnancy is terminated by a registered medical practitioner if 2 medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith that —

(a) the pregnancy has not exceeded its 24th week and that the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman or any existing children of her family;

(b) the termination is necessary to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman;

(c) the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated; or

(d) there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped.

(2) In determining whether the continuance of a pregnancy would involve such risk of injury to health as is mentioned in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (1), account may be taken of the pregnant woman's actual or reasonably foreseeable environment.

(3) Except as provided by subsection (4), any treatment for the termination of pregnancy must be carried out in the King Edward VII Hospital or in a place approved for the purposes of this section by the Governor.

(4) Subsection (3), and so much of subsection (1) as relates to the opinion of 2 registered medical practitioners, do not apply to the termination of a pregnancy by a registered medical practitioner in a case where he or she is of the opinion, formed in good faith, that the termination is immediately necessary to save the life or to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman.

(5) An opinion as referred to in subsection (1) must be certified by the practitioners concerned in the form and at the time prescribed.

(6) Certificates made for the purposes of this section must be preserved and disposed of in the prescribed manner.

(7) A registered medical practitioner who terminates a pregnancy must give notice of the termination and other prescribed information relating to the termination to the Attorney General within 14 days of the termination.

(8) The disclosure, except to prescribed persons or for prescribed purposes, of notices given or information furnished pursuant to this section, is prohibited.

(9) In this section “prescribed” means prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State under the UK Abortion Act 1967 or any replacement of that Act.

(10) A person who wilfully contravenes or wilfully fails to comply with the requirements of this section or of regulations made under it commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

[UK Abortion Act 1967 ss.1 and 2 as amended and adapted]

61. Conscientious objection to participation in treatment

(1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3), no person is under any duty, whether by contract or by any statutory or other legal requirement, to participate in any treatment authorised by section 60 to which the person has a conscientious objection.

(2) In any legal proceedings the burden of proof of conscientious objection rests on the person claiming to rely on it.

(3) Subsection (1) does not affect any duty to participate in treatment which is necessary to save the life or to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of a pregnant woman.

[UK Abortion Act 1967 s.4 am. by the Human Fertilisation & Embryology Act 1990]

Concealing the birth of a child

62. Concealing the birth of a child

If a woman gives birth to a child, any person who, by any secret disposition of the dead body of the child, whether the child died before, at, or after its birth, endeavours to conceal the birth of it, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.60]

Endangering life

63. Impeding rescue from shipwreck

A person ('A') who unlawfully and maliciously prevents or impedes any person ('B') who is on board of or has abandoned any ship or vessel that is in distress, wrecked, stranded or cast on shore, and who is endeavouring —

- (a) to save B's own life; or
- (b) to save the life of any other person in such peril,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.17 adapted]

64. Wounding, etc. with intent to do grievous bodily harm

A person who unlawfully and maliciously by any means wounds or causes any grievous bodily harm to any person, with intent —

- (a) to do some grievous bodily harm to any person; or
- (b) to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of any person,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.18 am. by Criminal Law Act 1967]

65. Malicious wounding

A person who unlawfully and maliciously wounds or inflicts any grievous bodily harm upon any other person, either with or without any weapon or instrument, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.20]

66. Attempting to choke, etc. with intent to facilitate a serious offence

A person ('A') who, by any means —

- (a) attempts to choke, suffocate or strangle another person ('B'); or

(b) by any means calculated to choke, suffocate or strangle, attempts to render B insensible, unconscious or incapable of resistance, with intent to enable A or any other person to commit, or to assist any other person in committing, a serious offence, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.21 am. by CJ Act 1948 and Criminal Law Act 1967]

67. Using drugs to facilitate a serious offence

A person ('A') who —

(a) unlawfully applies or administers to another person ('B');

(b) causes to be taken by, or attempts to apply or administer to another person ('B'); or

(c) attempts to cause to be administered to or taken by, another person ('B'), any chloroform, laudanum, or other stupefying or overpowering drug, matter, or thing, with intent to enable A or any other person to commit, or to assist in committing, a serious offence, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.22 am. by CJ Act 1948]

68. Administering poison

(1) A person who unlawfully and maliciously administers to or causes to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing so as to endanger the life of the other person or cause that person any grievous bodily harm commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who unlawfully and maliciously administers to or causes to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing with intent to injure, aggrieve or annoy that other person commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(3) If, on the trial of a person for an offence under subsection (1) the court (or the jury, if there is one) is not satisfied that the person is guilty of that offence, but is satisfied that the person is guilty of the offence under subsection (2), the court or jury, as the case may be, may acquit the person of the offence under subsection (1) and convict him or her of an offence under subsection (2).

[UK OAP Act 1861 ss.23 to 25 am. by CJ Act 1948 and Criminal Law Act 1967]

69. Setting spring guns, etc.

(1) A person who sets or places, or causes to be set or placed, any spring gun, man trap or other device calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm, with the intent that it should or whereby it might destroy or inflict grievous bodily harm upon a trespasser or other person coming in contact with it, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who knowingly and wilfully permits any such spring gun, man trap or other device which has been set or placed by another person in a place that subsequently comes into A's possession or occupation to continue so set or placed, is deemed to have set and placed it with the intention mentioned in subsection (1).

(3) Nothing in this section makes it illegal to set or place any gin or trap such as is usually set or placed to destroy vermin.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.31 am. by CJ Act 1948]

Assaults

70. Common assault

(1) A person who unlawfully assaults or beats any other person commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) In addition to or instead of imposing any penalty the court may order the offender to enter into a recognisance, with or without sureties, to keep the peace and to be of good behaviour for a period not exceeding 12 months.

(3) In this Part —

(a) an assault occurs when a person intentionally or recklessly causes another person to apprehend immediate unlawful violence, whether or not physical contact is made;

(b) a battery occurs when a person intentionally or recklessly applies unlawful force to another person.

[Common law; UK OAP Act 1861 s.42 replaced by CJ Act 1988 s.39]

71. Assault occasioning actual bodily harm

A person who commits an assault occasioning actual bodily harm commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.47]

72. Assaulting police officer

(1) A person who assaults —

(a) a police officer in the execution of the officer's duty; or

(b) a person assisting a police officer in the execution of the officer's duty,

commits an offence.

Penalty: As provided in subsections (3) to (5).

(2) A person who resists or wilfully obstructs —

(a) a police officer in the execution of the officer's duty; or

(b) a person assisting a police officer in the execution of the officer's duty,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), the maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(4) If a person convicted of an offence under subsection (1) is shown to have had a firearm or an imitation firearm in his or her possession at the time of the offence, unless the person shows that he or she had it in possession for a lawful object, then, subject to subsection (5), the person is liable to imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(5) A person is not liable to the increased penalty provided by subsection (4) unless, before the person enters a plea in respect of the alleged offence, the person is notified in writing that the prosecution intend to show that he or she was in possession of a firearm or imitation firearm at the time of the offence.

[Crimes Ord. s.33; Police Ord. s.55; UK Police Act 1996 s.89 adapted]

73. Assault to prevent arrest

A person ('A') who assaults another person ('B') with intent to resist or prevent the lawful arrest or detention of A or of any other person for any offence, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.38 am. by Criminal Law Act 1967]

74. Assaulting persons when preserving wrecks

A person who assaults and strikes or wounds any justice of the peace, police officer or other authorised person who is exercising a duty concerning the preservation of —

(a) a vessel in distress; or

(b) any vessel, goods, or effects wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or lying under water,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.37 am. by CJ Act 1948]

75. Obstructing or assaulting clergyman

(1) A person who by threats or force —

(a) obstructs or prevents; or

(b) endeavours to obstruct or prevent, any clergyman or other Minister of religion in or from celebrating divine service or otherwise officiating in any church, chapel, meeting house or other place of divine worship, or in or from the performance of that person's duty in the lawful burial of the dead in any burial place, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who —

(a) strikes or offers any violence to; or

(b) upon any civil process, or under the pretence of executing any civil process, arrests, any clergyman or other Minister of religion who is engaged in any rites or duties, or who to the knowledge of the offender is about to engage in, is going to perform or is returning from the performance of, any rites or duties, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.36]

76. Certificate of dismissal

(1) If the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court, upon hearing on its merits any case of assault or battery in which the complaint was preferred by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, finds the offence not proved, or the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, and accordingly dismisses the complaint, the court must forthwith issue a certificate stating the fact of such dismissal to the party against whom the complaint was preferred.

(2) If a person, against whom a complaint for an offence of assault or battery has been preferred by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, has —

(a) obtained a certificate under subsection (1); or

(b) having been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment or a fine, or both, has served the term of imprisonment or paid the fine, or both, no further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, may be brought against the person for the same cause.

[UK OAP Act 1861 ss.44 and 45 am. by CJ Act 1988 and Courts Act 2003]

Endangering the life of a child or vulnerable adult

77. Causing or allowing the death of or harm to a child or vulnerable adult

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) a child or vulnerable adult ('B') dies or suffers serious physical harm as a result of the unlawful act of a person who —

(i) was a member of the same household as B; and

(ii) had frequent contact with B;

(b) A was such a person at the time of the act;

(c) at that time there was a significant risk of serious physical harm being caused to B by the unlawful act of such a person; and

(d) either A was the person who caused the death or serious physical harm, or —

(i) A was, or ought to have been, aware of the risk mentioned in paragraph (c);

(ii) A failed to take such steps as A could reasonably have been expected to take to protect B from the risk; and

(iii) the act occurred in circumstances of the kind that A foresaw or ought to have foreseen.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (7).

(2) The prosecution does not have to prove whether it is paragraph (i) in subsection (1)(d) that applies, or paragraphs (ii) and (iii) that apply.

(3) If A was not the mother or father of B —

(a) A cannot be charged with an offence if A was under the age of 16 at the time of the act that caused the death or serious physical harm;

(b) for the purposes of subsection (1)(d)(ii), A could not have been expected to take any such step as is there referred to before attaining that age.

(4) For the purposes of this section —

(a) A is to be regarded as a member of a particular household, even if A does not live in it, if A visits it so often and for such periods of time that it is reasonable to regard A as a member of it;

(b) if B lived in different households at different times, "the same household as B" in subsection (1)(a)(i) means the household in which B was living at the time of the act that caused the death or serious physical harm.

(5) For the purposes of this section, an unlawful act is one that —

- (a) constitutes an offence; or
- (b) would constitute an offence but for being the act of a person other than A who is —
 - (i) under the age of 10; or
 - (ii) entitled to rely on a defence of insanity.

(6) In this section —

“act” includes a course of conduct and an omission;

“child” means a person under the age of 16;

“serious physical harm” means harm that amounts to grievous bodily harm for the purpose of section 64.

(7) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section is —

- (a) for causing or allowing a person’s death - imprisonment for 14 years;
- (b) for causing or allowing a person to suffer serious physical harm - imprisonment for 10 years.

(8) An offence under subsection (7) is triable on indictment only.

[UK Domestic Violence, Crime & Victims Act 2004 s.5 am. by DVCV (Am) Act 2012]

78. Inferences in murder and manslaughter cases

(1) Subsections (2) to (4) apply if a person (“the defendant”) is charged in the same proceedings with an offence of murder or manslaughter and with an offence under section 77 in respect of the same death (“the section 77 offence”).

(2) If by virtue of a provision in Part 19 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 a court, or a jury if there is one, is permitted, in relation to the section 77 offence, to draw such inferences as appear proper from the defendant’s failure to give evidence or refusal to answer a question, the court or jury, as the case may be, may also draw such inferences in determining whether the defendant is guilty —

- (a) of murder or manslaughter; or
- (b) of any other offence of which the defendant could lawfully be convicted on the charge of murder or manslaughter, even if there would otherwise be no case for the defendant to answer in relation to that offence.

(3) The charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be dismissed on the ground that the evidence against the defendant would not be sufficient for a court or a jury, if there is one, properly to convict the defendant, unless the section 77 offence is also dismissed on that ground.

(4) At the defendant's trial the question whether there is a case for the defendant to answer on the charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be considered before the close of all the evidence (or, if at some earlier time the defendant ceases to be charged with the section 77 offence, before that earlier time).

(5) An offence under section 77 is, for the purposes of section 722 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 an offence of homicide.

[UK Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s.6 am. by DVCV (Am) Act 2012 and adapted]

79. Inferences in cases of serious physical harm

(1) Subsections (3) to (5) apply if a person ("the defendant") is charged in the same proceedings with a relevant offence and with an offence under section 77 in respect of the same harm ("the section 77 offence").

(2) In this section "relevant offence" means —

(a) an offence under section 64 or 65 (grievous bodily harm etc);

(b) an offence under section 19 of attempting to commit murder.

(3) If by virtue of a provision in Part 19 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 a court, or a jury if there is one, is permitted, in relation to the section 77 offence, to draw such inferences as appear proper from the defendant's failure to give evidence or refusal to answer a question, the court or jury, as the case may be, may also draw such inferences in determining whether the defendant is guilty of a relevant offence, even if there would otherwise be no case for the defendant to answer in relation to that offence.

(4) The charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be dismissed on the ground that the evidence against the defendant would not be sufficient for a court or jury, if there is one, properly to convict the defendant, unless the section 77 offence is also dismissed on that ground.

(5) At the defendant's trial the question whether there is a case for the defendant to answer on the charge of the relevant offence is not to be considered before the close of all the evidence (or, if at some earlier time the defendant ceases to be charged with the section 77 offence, before that earlier time).

[UK Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s.6A ins. by DVCV (Am) Act 2012 and adapted]

80. Abandoning young child

A person who unlawfully abandons or exposes any child under the age of 5 years, with the result that —

- (a) the life of the child is endangered; or
- (b) the health of the child is or is likely to be permanently injured,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.27 am by CJ Act 1948]

81. Being drunk while in charge of a child

A person who is drunk in any highway or other public place, whether a building or not, or on any licensed premises, while having the charge of a child under the age of 7 years, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 2 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Licensing Act 1902 s.2]

82. Cruelty to or neglect of person under 16

(1) A person ('A') of or over the age of 16 years who has responsibility for any person under that age ('B') and who intentionally or recklessly subjects B, or allows B to be subjected to maltreatment, whether by act or omission, such that B child suffers, or is likely to suffer, significant harm, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section —

“harm” means the impairment of —

- (a) physical or mental health; or
- (b) physical, intellectual, emotional, social or behavioural development;

“recklessly” means that A foresaw a risk that an act or omission regarding B would be likely to result in significant harm to B, but nonetheless unreasonably took that risk;

“maltreatment” includes —

- (a) neglect (including abandonment);
- (b) physical abuse;
- (c) sexual abuse;
- (d) exploitation; and
- (e) emotional abuse.

(3) If the question of whether harm suffered by B is significant turns on B's health or development, B's health or development is to be compared with that which could reasonably be expected of a similar person of that age.

(4) For the purposes of this section, a parent or other person who is legally liable to maintain a person under the age of 16 years ('B'), or the legal guardian of B, is deemed to have neglected B in a manner likely to cause injury to B's health if —

(a) the parent or other person or legal guardian has failed to provide adequate food, clothing, medical aid or lodging for B; or

(b) having been unable otherwise to provide such food, clothing, medical aid or lodging, has failed to take steps to procure it from any relevant Government department.

(5) For the purposes of this section, if it is proved that —

(a) the death of a child under the age of 3 years was caused by suffocation while the child was in bed with some other person ('A') who has attained the age of 16 years;

(b) the death was not caused by suffocation caused by disease or the presence of any foreign body in the throat or air passages of the child; and

(c) A was, when he or she went to bed, under the influence of drink,

A is deemed to have neglected the child in a manner likely to cause injury to its health.

(6) A person may be convicted of an offence under this section —

(a) even if actual suffering or injury to health, or the likelihood of actual suffering or injury to health, was obviated by the action of another person; and

(b) even if the child or young person has died.

[UK Children & Young Persons Act 1933 s.1 as amended; Child Maltreatment Bill 2014]

83. Illegal tattooing of youths

(1) Subject to subsection (2), it is an offence for a person to tattoo a youth except when the tattoo is performed for medical reasons by a medical practitioner or by a person working under such a practitioner's direction.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under subsection (1) to show that at the time the tattoo was performed the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the person tattooed was of or over the age of 18 and did in fact so believe.

(3) In this section, "tattoo" means the insertion into the skin of any colouring material designed to leave a permanent mark.

Child abduction, etc.

84. Abduction of child by parent, etc.

(1) Subject to subsections (5) and (8), a person ('A') connected with a child under the age of 18 commits an offence if A takes or sends the child out of the Falkland Islands without the appropriate consent.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A is connected with a child for the purposes of this section if —

(a) A is a parent of the child;

(b) in the case of a child whose parents were not married to each other at the time of the child's birth - there are reasonable grounds for believing that A is the father of the child;

(c) A is a guardian of the child;

(d) A is a person in whose favour a residence order is in force with respect to the child; or

(e) A has custody of the child.

(3) In this section, "the appropriate consent" in relation to a child means —

(a) the consent of each of the following —

(i) the child's mother;

(ii) the child's father, if the father has parental responsibility for the child;

(iii) any guardian of the child;

(iv) any person in whose favour a residence order is in force with respect to the child;

(v) any person who has custody of the child;

(b) the leave of the court granted under or by virtue of any provision of the Children Ordinance 2014; or

(c) if any person has custody of the child - the leave of the court which awarded custody to that person.

(4) A person ('A') does not commit an offence under this section by taking or sending a child out of the Falkland Islands without obtaining the appropriate consent if —

(a) A is a person in whose favour there is a residence order in force with respect to the child;
and

(b) A takes or sends the child out of the Falkland Islands for a period of less than one month.

(5) Subsection (4) does not apply if the person taking or sending the child out of the Falkland Islands does so in breach of an order under the Children Ordinance 2014.

(6) A person ('A') does not commit an offence under this section by doing anything without the consent of another person (B) whose consent is required under the foregoing provisions if A —

(a) does it in the belief that B —

(i) has consented; or

(ii) would consent if B was aware of all the relevant circumstances; or

(b) has taken all reasonable steps to communicate with B but has been unable to communicate with B; or

(c) B has unreasonably refused to consent.

(7) Subsection (6)(c) does not apply if —

(a) the person who refused to consent is a person —

(i) in whose favour there is a residence order in force with respect to the child; or

(ii) who has custody of the child; or

(b) the person taking or sending the child out of the Falkland Islands is, by so acting, in breach of an order made by a court in the Falkland Islands.

(8) If, in proceedings for an offence under this section, there is sufficient evidence to raise an issue as to the application of subsection (6), it is for the prosecution to prove that that subsection does not apply.

[UK Child Abduction Act 1984 s.1 am. by Children Act 1989]

85. Abduction of child by other persons

(1) Subject to subsection (3), a person, other than one mentioned in subsection (2), commits an offence if, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, the person takes or detains a child under the age of 16 so as to —

(a) remove the child from the lawful control of any person having lawful control of the child;
or

(b) keep the child out of the lawful control of any person entitled to lawful control of the child.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The persons referred to in subsection (1)(b) are —

(a) if the father and mother of the child in question were married to each other at the time of the child's birth - the child's father and mother;

(b) if the father and mother of the child in question were not married to each other at the time of the child's birth - the child's mother; and

(c) any other person mentioned in section 84(2)(c) to (e).

(3) In proceedings against A person ('A') for an offence under this section, it is a defence for A to prove —

(a) if the father and mother of the child in question were not married to each other at the time of the child's birth —

(i) that A is the child's father; or

(ii) that, at the time of the alleged offence, A believed, on reasonable grounds, that A was the child's father; or

(b) that, at the time of the alleged offence, A believed that the child had attained the age of 16.

[UK Child Abduction Act 1984 s.2 am. by Children Act 1989]

86. Child abduction: Supplementary

(1) In section 84 —

“guardian of a child” means a person appointed as a guardian under the Children Ordinance 2014;

“residence order” means an order settling the arrangements to be made as to the person with whom a child is to live.

(2) For the purposes of section 84, a person is to be treated as having custody of a child if there is in force —

(a) an order of a Falkland Islands court; or

(b) an order of a court outside the Falkland Islands recognised by the Falkland Islands courts as having effect in the Falkland Islands, and awarding the person (whether solely or jointly with another person) custody, legal custody or care and control of the child.

(3) In the case of a child who is in the care of the Crown pursuant to the Children Ordinance 2014, section 84 has effect as if —

(a) the reference in subsection (1) to the appropriate consent were a reference to the consent of the Crown; and

(b) subsection (3) were omitted.

(4) In the case of a child who is —

(a) detained in a place of safety under the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014; or

(b) remanded to secure accommodation under the provision of any Ordinance, section 84 has effect as if —

(i) the reference in subsection (1) to the appropriate consent were a reference to the leave of the court that makes the order; and

(ii) subsection (3) were omitted.

(5) In the case of a child who is the subject of —

(a) a pending application for an adoption order; or

(b) an order under the UK Adoption Act 1976 as applied to the Falkland Islands relating to adoption abroad, or of a pending application for such an order,

section 84 has effect as if —

(i) the reference in subsection (1) to the appropriate consent were a reference —

(A) in a case within paragraph (5)(a) above - to the leave of the court to which the application was made; and

(B) in a case within paragraph (5)(b) above - to the leave of the court which made the order or, as the case may be, to which the application was made; and

(ii) subsection (3) were omitted.

(6) For the purposes of sections 84 and 85, a person ('A') —

(a) takes a child if A causes or induces the child to accompany A or any other person, or causes the child to be so taken;

(b) sends a child if A causes the child to be sent;

(c) detains a child if A causes the child to be detained or induces the child to remain with A or any other person;

(7) References in those sections to a child's parents and to a child whose parents were (or were not) married to each other at the time of the child's birth are to be construed in accordance with any law of the Falkland Islands that extends their meaning.

(8) No prosecution for an offence against either section 84 or 85 may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Child Abduction Act 1984 ss.3, 4 and 105 and Schedule am. by Children Act 1989]

87. Trafficking people for labour exploitation

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if A intentionally arranges or facilitates —

(a) the arrival in, or entry into, the Falkland Islands or another country of another person ('B');

(b) the travel of B within the Falkland Islands or another country, or

(c) the departure of B from the Falkland Islands or another country, with a view to the exploitation of B.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a) and (c) A's arranging or facilitating is with a view to the exploitation of B if (and only if) —

(a) A intends to exploit B, after B's arrival, entry or (as the case may be) departure but in any part of the world; or

(b) A believes that another person is likely to exploit B, after B's arrival, entry or (as the case may be) departure but in any part of the world.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1)(b) A's arranging or facilitating is with a view to the exploitation of B if (and only if) —

(a) A intends to exploit B, during or after the journey and in any part of the world; or

(b) A believes that another person is likely to exploit B, during or after the journey and in any part of the world.

(4) For the purposes of this section B is exploited if (and only if) B —

(a) is the victim of behaviour that contravenes Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights (Prohibition of slavery and forced labour);

(b) is encouraged, required or expected to do anything as a result of which B or another person would commit an offence;

(c) is subjected to force, threats or deception designed to induce B —

(i) to provide services of any kind;

(ii) to provide another person with benefits of any kind;

(iii) to enable another person to acquire benefits of any kind; or

(d) is requested or induced to undertake any activity, having been chosen as the subject of the request or inducement on the grounds that —

(i) B is mentally or physically ill or disabled, or is young or has a family relationship with a person; and

(ii) a person without the illness, disability, youth or family relationship would be likely to refuse the request or resist the inducement.

(5) A person who has Falkland Islands status commits an offence under this section regardless of —

(a) where the arranging or facilitating takes place; or

(b) which country is the country of arrival, entry, travel or (as the case may be) departure.

(6) A person who does not have Falkland Islands status commits an offence under this section if —

(a) any part of the arranging or facilitating takes place in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) the Falkland Islands are the country of arrival, entry, travel or (as the case may be) departure.

(7) In this section, “country” includes any territory or other part of the world.

Female genital mutilation

88. Offence of female genital mutilation

(1) Subject to subsections (2) and (4), a person who excises, infibulates or otherwise mutilates the whole or any part of a girl's labia majora, labia minora or clitoris commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both

(2) No offence is committed by an approved person who performs —

(a) a surgical operation on a girl which is necessary for her physical or mental health; or

(b) a surgical operation on a girl who is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth.

(3) The following are approved persons —

(a) in relation to an operation falling within subsection (2)(a) - a registered medical practitioner;

(b) in relation to an operation falling within subsection (2)(b) - a registered medical practitioner, a person registered as a midwife under the Medical Practitioners, Midwives and Dentists Ordinance, or a person undergoing a course of training with a view to becoming such a practitioner or midwife.

(4) No offence is committed by a person who —

(a) performs a surgical operation falling within subsection (2)(a) or (b) outside the Falkland Islands; and

(b) in relation to such an operation exercises functions corresponding to those of an approved person.

(5) For the purpose of determining whether an operation is necessary for the mental health of a girl it is immaterial whether she or any other person believes that the operation is required as a matter of custom or ritual.

(6) In this section, "girl" means a female person of any age.

[UK Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 ss.1 and 5 replacing Prohibition of Female Circumcision Act 1985]

89. Female genital mutilation: Ancillary offences

(1) A person who encourages, or aids and abets, a girl to excise, infibulate or otherwise mutilate the whole or any part of her own labia majora, labia minora or clitoris commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who encourages, or aids and abets, a person to do a relevant act of female genital mutilation outside the Falkland Islands commits an offence.
Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years.

(3) An act is a relevant act of female genital mutilation for the purpose of subsection (2) if —

(a) it is done in relation to a United Kingdom national or person with Falkland Islands status, and

(b) it would, if done by such a person, constitute an offence under section 88.

(4) Sections 88 and this section extend to any act done outside the Falkland Islands by a person with Falkland Islands status.

[UK Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 ss.2, 3 and 4]

Forced marriages: Offence

90. Offence of forced marriage

(1) It is an offence for a person ('A') to use violence, threats or any other form of coercion for the purpose of causing another person ('B') to enter into a marriage, if A believes, or ought reasonably to believe, that the conduct may cause B to enter into the marriage without free and full consent.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In relation to a victim B who lacks capacity to consent to marriage, the offence under subsection (1) is capable of being committed by any conduct carried out for the purpose of causing B to enter into a marriage (whether or not the conduct amounts to violence, threats or any other form coercion).

(3) It is an offence for a person ('A') to practise any form of deception with the intention of causing another person ('B') to leave the Falkland Islands, if A intends B to be subjected to conduct outside the Falkland Islands that is an offence under subsection (1) or would be an offence under that subsection if B were in the Falkland Islands.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years.

(4) In this section —

“marriage” means any religious or civil ceremony of marriage, whether legally binding or not;

“lacks capacity” means lacks capacity within the meaning of section 91.

(5) For purposes of this section it is irrelevant whether the conduct mentioned in subsection (1) is directed at B or another person.

(6) A person commits an offence under subsection (1) or (3) only if, at the time of the conduct or deception —

- (a) A and B are both in the Falkland Islands;
- (b) neither A nor B is in the Falkland islands but at least one of them is habitually resident in the Falkland Islands; or
- (c) neither A nor B is in the Falkland Islands but at least one of them has Falkland Islands status.

[UK Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.121]

91. Lack of capacity

(1) For the purposes of section 90, a person lacks capacity in relation to a matter if at the material time the person is unable to make a decision for himself or herself in relation to the matter because of an impairment of, or a disturbance in the functioning of, the mind or brain, whether permanent or temporary.

(2) A lack of capacity is to be established on the balance of probabilities and cannot be established merely by reference to —

- (a) a person's age or appearance; or
- (b) a condition or an aspect of behaviour that might lead others to make unjustified assumptions about the person's capacity.

(3) A person is not to be regarded as unable to understand the information relevant to a decision if he or she is able to understand an explanation of it given in a way that is appropriate to the circumstances (using simple language, visual aids or any other means).

(4) The fact that a person is able to retain the information relevant to a decision for a short period only does not prevent the person from being regarded as able to make the decision.

[UK Mental Capacity Act 2005 ss.1 and 2 adapted]

Forced marriages: Protection orders

92. Forced marriage protection orders

(1) The court may make an order for the purposes of protecting —

- (a) a person from being forced into a marriage or from any attempt to be forced into a marriage; or
- (b) a person who has been forced into a marriage.

(2) In deciding whether to exercise its powers under this section and, if so, in what manner, the court must have regard to all the circumstances including the need to secure the health, safety and well-being of the person to be protected.

(3) In ascertaining that person’s well-being, the court must, in particular, have such regard to the person’s wishes and feelings (so far as they are reasonably ascertainable) as the court considers appropriate in the light of the person’s age and understanding.

(4) For the purposes of this Part a person (“A”) is forced into a marriage if another person (“B”) forces A to enter into a marriage (whether with B or another person) without A’s free and full consent.

(5) For the purposes of subsection (4) it does not matter whether the conduct of B which forces A to enter into a marriage is directed against A, B or another person.

(6) In this Part —

“force”, as a verb, includes to coerce by threats or other psychological means (and related expressions are to be read accordingly); and “forced marriage protection order” means an order under this section.

(7) In this section and sections 93 to 101, “the court” means the Magistrate’s Court, unless the Supreme Court or the Summary Court is able, by virtue of section 94(6), to make an order without an application being made, in which case it means the Supreme Court or the Summary Court, as the case may be.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

93. Contents of orders

(1) A forced marriage protection order may contain —

(a) such prohibitions, restrictions or requirements; and

(b) such other terms,

as the court considers appropriate for the purposes of the order.

(2) The terms of such orders may, in particular, relate to —

(a) conduct outside the Falkland Islands as well as (or instead of) conduct within the Falkland Islands;

(b) respondents who are, or may become, involved in other respects as well as (or instead of) respondents who force or attempt to force, or may force or attempt to force, a person to enter into a marriage;

(c) other persons who are, or may become, involved as accessories in any respect as well as respondents of any kind.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

94. Applications and other occasions for making orders

- (1) The court may make a forced marriage protection order —
 - (a) on an application being made to it; or
 - (b) without an application being made to it but in the circumstances mentioned in subsection (6).
- (2) An application may be made by —
 - (a) the person who is to be protected by the order; or
 - (b) the Attorney General.
- (3) An application may be made by any other person with the leave of the court.
- (4) In deciding whether to grant leave, the court must have regard to all the circumstances including —
 - (a) the applicant’s connection with the person to be protected;
 - (b) the applicant’s knowledge of the circumstances of the person to be protected; and
 - (c) the wishes and feelings of the person to be protected so far as they are reasonably ascertainable and so far as the court considers it appropriate, in the light of the person’s age and understanding, to have regard to them.
- (5) An application under this section may be made in other family proceedings or without any other family proceedings being instituted.
- (6) The circumstances in which the court may make an order without an application being made are where —
 - (a) any other family proceedings are before the court (“the current proceedings”);
 - (b) the court considers that a forced marriage protection order should be made to protect a person (whether or not a party to the current proceedings); and
 - (c) a person who would be a respondent to any such proceedings for a forced marriage protection order is a party to the current proceedings.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

95. Orders without notice

- (1) The court may, in any case where it considers that it is just and convenient to do so, make a forced marriage protection order even though the respondent has not been given such notice of the proceedings as would otherwise be required by criminal procedure rules.

(2) In deciding whether to exercise its powers under subsection (1), the court must have regard to all the circumstances including —

(a) any risk of significant harm to the person to be protected or another person if the order is not made immediately;

(b) whether it is likely that an applicant will be deterred or prevented from pursuing an application if an order is not made immediately; and

(c) whether there is reason to believe that —

(i) the respondent is aware of the proceedings but is deliberately evading service; and

(ii) the delay involved in effecting substituted service will cause serious prejudice to the person to be protected or (if a different person) an applicant.

(3) The court must give the respondent an opportunity to make representations about any order made by virtue of subsection (1).

(4) The opportunity must be —

(a) as soon as just and convenient; and

(b) at a hearing of which notice has been given to all the parties in accordance with criminal procedure rules.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

96. Undertakings instead of orders

(1) The court may, subject to subsection (3), accept an undertaking from the respondent to proceedings for a forced marriage protection order if it has power to make such an order.

(2) No power of arrest may be attached to an undertaking given under subsection (1).

(3) The court may not accept an undertaking under subsection (1) instead of making an order if a power of arrest would otherwise have been attached to the order.

(4) An undertaking given to the court under subsection (1) is enforceable as if the court had made the order in terms corresponding to those of the undertaking.

(5) This section does not affect the powers of the court apart from this section.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

97. Duration and variation or discharge of orders

(1) A forced marriage protection order may be made for a specified period or until varied or discharged.

- (2) The court may vary or discharge a forced marriage protection order on an application by —
- (a) any party to the proceedings for the order;
 - (b) the person being protected by the order (if not a party to the proceedings for the order); or
 - (c) any person affected by the order.
- (3) The court may also vary or discharge a forced marriage protection order made by virtue of section 92(1)(b) even though no application under subsection (1) above has been made to the court.
- (4) Section 93 applies to a variation of a forced marriage protection order as it applies to the making of such an order.
- (5) Section 94 applies to proceedings for a variation of a forced marriage protection order as it applies to proceedings for the making of such an order.
- (6) Accordingly, references in sections 93 and 94 to making a forced marriage protection order are to be read for the purposes of subsections (2) and (3) above as references to varying such an order.
- (7) Subsection (8) applies if a power of arrest has been attached to provisions of a forced marriage protection order by virtue of section 98.
- (8) The court may vary or discharge the order under this section so far as it confers a power of arrest (whether or not there is a variation or discharge of any other provision of the order).
[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

98. Attachment of power of arrest to orders

- (1) Subsection (2) applies if the court —
- (a) intends to make a forced marriage protection order otherwise than by virtue of section 95; and
 - (b) considers that the respondent has used or threatened violence against the person being protected or otherwise in connection with the matters being dealt with by the order.
- (2) The court must attach a power of arrest to one or more provisions of the order unless it considers that, in all the circumstances of the case, there will be adequate protection without such a power.
- (3) Subsection (4) applies if the court —
- (a) intends to make a forced marriage protection order by virtue of section 95; and

(b) considers that the respondent has used or threatened violence against the person being protected or otherwise in connection with the matters being dealt with by the order.

(4) The court may attach a power of arrest to one or more provisions of the order if it considers that there is a risk of significant harm to a person, attributable to conduct of the respondent, if the power of arrest is not attached to the provisions immediately.

(5) The court may provide for a power of arrest attached to any provisions of an order under subsection (4) to have effect for a shorter period than the other provisions of the order.

(6) Any period specified for the purposes of subsection (5) may be extended by the court (on one or more occasions) on an application to vary or discharge the order.

(7) In this section “respondent” includes any person who is not a respondent but to whom an order is directed.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

99. Exercise of power of arrest

(1) Subsection (2) applies if a power of arrest is attached to provisions of a forced marriage protection order under section 98.

(2) A police officer may arrest without warrant a person whom the officer has reasonable cause for suspecting to be in breach of any such provision or otherwise in contempt of court in relation to the order.

(3) A person arrested under subsection (2) must be brought before the relevant court within 24 hours after the person’s arrest (ignoring Christmas Day, Good Friday and any Sunday.)

(4) Subsection (5) applies if the court has made a forced marriage protection order but —

(a) no power of arrest is attached to any provision of the order under section 98;

(b) such a power is attached only to certain provisions of the order; or

(c) such a power was attached for a shorter period than other provisions of the order and that period has expired.

(5) An interested party may apply to the relevant court for the issue of a warrant for the arrest of a person if the interested party considers that the person has failed to comply with the order or is otherwise in contempt of court in relation to the order.

(6) The relevant court must not issue a warrant on an application under subsection (5) unless —

(a) the application is substantiated on oath; and

(b) the court has reasonable grounds for believing that the person to be arrested has failed to comply with the order or is otherwise in contempt of court in relation to the order.

(7) In this section “interested party”, in relation to a forced marriage protection order, means —

- (a) the person being protected by the order;
- (b) (if a different person) the person who applied for the order; or
- (c) any other person,

but no application may be made under subsection (5) by a person falling within paragraph (c) without the leave of the relevant court.

(8) In this section, “relevant court” means the court which made the forced marriage protection order.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

100. Remand

(1) The court before which an arrested person is brought to court under or by virtue of section 99 may, if the matter is not then disposed of immediately, remand the person concerned in custody or on bail as provided by subsections (4) and (5).

(2) The decision whether to remand in custody or on bail must be taken in accordance with Part 9 (Bail in Criminal Proceedings) of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014.

(3) If a person remanded under this section is granted bail, the person may be required by the court to comply, before release on bail or later, with any requirements that appear to the court to be necessary to secure that the person does not interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice.

(4) The power to remand a person under subsection (1) may only be exercised for the purpose of enabling a medical examination and report to be made and only if the court has reason to consider that a medical report will be required.

(5) A remand under subsection (1) must not be for more than 4 weeks at a time unless the court remands the accused in custody, in which case the adjournment must not be for more than 3 weeks at a time.

(6) If there is reason to suspect that a person who has been arrested under or pursuant to section 99 is suffering from mental disorder, the court has the same power to make an order under section 48 of the Mental Health Ordinance (Remand to hospital for report) as the court has under that section in the case of an accused person (within the meaning of that section.)

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

101. Forced marriage protection orders: Supplementary

(1) A forced marriage protection order may be the subject of an appeal —

- (a) to the Supreme Court if made by the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court; or
- (b) to the Court of Appeal if made by the Supreme Court.

(2) The Chief Justice may by criminal procedure rules provide for —

- (a) the application of the Court of Appeal Ordinance, or of Part 31 of the Criminal Procedure Ordinance 2014 as the case may be, to appeals under this section;
- (b) any other matter necessary or appropriate to regulate the making and enforcement of forced marriage protection orders.

(3) The powers in relation to contempt of court arising out of a person's failure to comply with a forced marriage protection order or otherwise in connection with such an order may be exercised by the court which made the order.

(4) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may issue guidance to such persons or classes of persons as the Governor considers appropriate about —

- (a) the making and effect of a forced marriage protection order; or
- (b) other matters relating to forced marriages, but this section does not permit the Governor to give guidance to any court or tribunal.

(5) If the Governor issues guidance under subsection (4), a person exercising public functions to whom guidance is given must have regard to it in the exercise of those functions.

(6) The provisions of this Part relating to forced marriage protection orders do not affect any other protection or assistance available to a person who —

- (a) is being, or may be, forced into a marriage or subjected to an attempt to be forced into a marriage; or
- (b) has been forced into a marriage.

In particular, but without limiting that statement, the provisions do not affect —

- (i) the inherent jurisdiction of the Supreme Court;
- (ii) any criminal liability;
- (iii) any civil remedies relating to protection from harassment;

(iv) any protection or assistance under the Children Ordinance 2014;

(v) any claim in tort; or

(vi) the law of marriage.

[UK Family Law Act 1996 ss.63A to 63R, ins. by Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007]

Domestic violence protection

102. Power to issue a domestic violence protection notice

(1) A police officer of the rank of inspector or above (“the authorising officer”) may issue a domestic violence protection notice (a ‘DVPN’) under this section.

(2) A DVPN may be issued to a person (‘P’) aged 18 years or over if the authorising officer has reasonable grounds for believing that —

(a) P has been violent towards, or has threatened violence towards, an associated person; and

(b) the issue of the DVPN is necessary to protect that person from violence or a threat of violence by P.

(3) Before issuing a DVPN, the authorising officer must, in particular, consider —

(a) the welfare of any person under the age of 18 whose interests the officer considers relevant to the issuing of the DVPN (whether or not that person is an associated person);

(b) the opinion of the person for whose protection the DVPN would be issued as to the issuing of the DVPN;

(c) any representations made by P as to the issuing of the DVPN; and

(d) in the case of provision included by virtue of subsection (8) - the opinion of any other associated person who lives in the premises to which the provision would relate.

(4) The authorising officer —

(a) must take reasonable steps to discover the opinions mentioned in subsection (3); but

(b) may issue a DVPN in circumstances where the person for whose protection it is issued does not consent to the issuing of the DVPN.

(5) A DVPN must contain provision to prohibit P from molesting the person for whose protection it is issued.

(6) Provision required to be included by virtue of subsection (5) may be expressed so as to refer to molestation in general, to particular acts of molestation, or to both.

(7) If P lives in premises which are also lived in by a person for whose protection the DVPN is issued, the DVPN may also contain provision —

- (a) to prohibit P from evicting or excluding from the premises the person for whose protection the DVPN is issued;
- (b) to prohibit P from entering the premises;
- (c) to require P to leave the premises; or
- (d) to prohibit P from coming within such distance of the premises as may be specified in the DVPN.

(8) In this section, “associated person” means either of 2 persons who —

- (a) are or have been married to each other;
- (b) are or have been civil partners of each other;
- (c) are cohabitants or former cohabitants;
- (d) live or have lived in the same household, otherwise than merely by reason of one of them being the other’s employee, tenant, lodger or boarder;
- (e) are relatives;
- (f) have agreed to marry one another (whether or not that agreement has been terminated);
- (g) have or have had an intimate personal relationship with each other which is or was of significant duration;
- (h) in relation to any child, are both parents of the child (including by adoption), or have or have had parental responsibility for the child; or
- (i) are parties to the same family proceedings (other than proceedings under this Part).

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 s.24; Family Law Act 1996 s.62]

103. Contents and service of a DVPN

(1) A DVPN must state —

- (a) the grounds on which it has been issued;
- (b) that a police officer may arrest P without warrant if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that P is in breach of the DVPN;

(c) that an application for a DVPO will be heard within 48 hours of the time of service of the DVPN and a notice of the hearing will be given to P;

(d) that the DVPN continues in effect until that application has been determined; and

(e) the provisions that a court may include in a DVPO.

(2) A DVPN must be in writing and must be served on P personally by a police officer.

(3) On serving P with a DVPN, the police officer must ask P for an address for the purposes of being given the notice of the hearing of the application for the domestic violence protection order.

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

104. Breach of a DVPN

(1) A police officer may arrest P without a warrant if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that P is in breach of the DVPN.

(2) A person arrested under subsection (1) for a breach of a DVPN must be held in custody and brought before the Summary Court, or, if that court is not sitting, the Magistrate's Court —

(a) within 24 hours of the time of the arrest (excluding Christmas Day, Boxing Day and any Sunday); or

(b) if earlier, at the hearing of that application.

(3) If the person is brought before the court by virtue of subsection (2)(a), the court may remand the person in custody or on bail (applying to that decision the principles set out in Part 9 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014.)

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

105. Application for a domestic violence protection order

(1) If a DVPN has been issued, the Attorney General may apply for a domestic violence protection order ('a DVPO').

(2) The application must be made by complaint to the Summary Court or, if that court is not sitting, to the Magistrate's Court.

(3) The court must hear the application within 48 hours after the DVPN was served pursuant to section 103(2) (ignoring Christmas Day, Boxing Day and any Sunday).

(4) A notice of the hearing of the application must be given to P, but is deemed to be given if it has been left at the address given by P under section 103(3).

(5) But if the notice has not been given because no address was given by P under section 103(3), the court may hear the application for the DVPO if satisfied that the Attorney General has made reasonable efforts to give P the notice.

(6) The court may adjourn the hearing of the application, in which case —

(a) section 104(3) applies;

(b) the DVPN continues in effect until the application has been determined.

(7) On the hearing of an application for a DVPO, section 279 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (relating to the summoning of witnesses) does not apply in relation to a person for whose protection the DVPO would be made, unless that person has given oral or written evidence at the hearing.

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

106. Conditions for and contents of a DVPO

(1) The court may make a DVPO if —

(a) the court is satisfied on the balance of probabilities that P has been violent towards, or has threatened violence towards, an associated person; and

(b) the court thinks that making the DVPO is necessary to protect that person from violence or a threat of violence by P.

(2) Before making a DVPO, the court must, in particular, consider —

(a) the welfare of any person under the age of 18 whose interests the court considers relevant to the making of the DVPO (whether or not that person is an associated person); and

(b) any opinion of which the court is made aware —

(i) of the person for whose protection the DVPO would be made; and

(ii) in the case of provision included by virtue of subsection (5), of any other associated person who lives in the premises to which the provision would relate.

(3) The court may however make a DVPO even if the person for whose protection it is made does not consent to the making of the DVPO.

(4) A DVPO must contain provision to prohibit P from molesting the person for whose protection it is made, expressed so as to refer to molestation in general, to particular acts of molestation, or to both.

(5) If P lives in premises which are also lived in by a person for whose protection the DVPO is made, the DVPO may also contain provision —

- (a) prohibiting P from evicting or excluding from the premises the person for whose protection the DVPO is made;
- (b) prohibiting P from entering the premises;
- (c) requiring P to leave the premises; or
- (d) prohibiting P from coming within a distance of the premises specified in the DVPO.

(6) A DVPO must state that a police officer may arrest P without warrant if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that P is in breach of the DVPO.

(7) A DVPO must state the period for which it is to be in force, which must be —

(a) not less than 14 days beginning with the day on which it is made; and

(b) not more than 28 days beginning with that day.

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

107. Breach of a DVPO

(1) A person in respect of whom a DVPO has been made and who contravenes the order in any respect commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person arrested for an offence under subsection (1) must be held in custody and brought before the court that made the order within 24 hours, (ignoring Christmas Day, Boxing Day and any Sunday).

(3) The court may adjourn the hearing of the application, in which case —

(a) section 104(3) applies;

(b) the DVPO continues in effect until the application has been determined.

(4) If the court has reason to suspect that a medical report will be required, the power to remand a person may be exercised for the purpose of enabling a medical examination to take place and a report to be made.

(5) If the person is remanded in custody for that purpose, the adjournment may not be for more than 3 weeks at a time.

(6) If the person is remanded on bail for that purpose, the adjournment may not be for more than 4 weeks at a time.

(7) If the court has reason to suspect that the person is suffering from a mental disorder, the court has the same power to make an order under section 48 of the Mental Health Ordinance

(Remand to hospital for report) as it has under that section in the case of an accused person (within the meaning of that section).

(8) The court may, when remanding the person on bail, require the person to comply, before release on bail or later, with such requirements as appear to the court to be necessary to secure that the person does not interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice.

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

108. Guidance

(1) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may from time to time issue guidance relating to the exercise by police officers of functions under sections 102 to 109.

(2) A police officer must have regard to any guidance issued under subsection (1) when exercising a function to which the guidance relates.

[UK Crime & Security Act 2010 ss. 25 to 31]

Human organ transplants

109. Prohibition of commercial dealings in human organs

(1) A person who —

(a) makes or receives any payment for the supply of, or for an offer to supply, an organ which has been or is to be removed from a dead or living person and which is intended to be transplanted into another person whether in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere;

(b) seeks to find a person willing to supply for payment such an organ as is mentioned in paragraph (a), or to offer to supply such an organ for payment;

(c) initiates or negotiates any arrangement involving the making of any payment for the supply of, or for an offer to supply, such an organ; or

(d) takes part in the management or control of a body of persons corporate or unincorporate whose activities consist of or include the initiation or negotiation of such arrangements,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1)(b), a person who causes to be published or distributed, or knowingly publishes or distributes in the Falkland Islands an advertisement —

(a) inviting persons to supply for payment any such organs as are mentioned in subsection (1)(a) or offering to supply any such organs for payment; or

(b) indicating that the advertiser is willing to initiate or negotiate any such arrangement as is mentioned in subsection (1)(c),

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(3) In this section “payment” means payment in money or money’s worth but does not include any payment for defraying or reimbursing —

(a) the cost of removing, transporting or preserving the organ to be supplied; or

(b) any expenses or loss of earnings incurred by a person reasonably and directly attributable to the person’s supplying an organ from his or her body.

(4) In this section “advertisement” includes any form of advertising whether to the public generally, to any section of the public or individually to selected persons.

[UK Human Organs Transplant Act 1989 ss.1 to 3]

110. Restriction on transplants between persons not genetically related

(1) A person who —

(a) removes from a living person an organ intended to be transplanted into another person; or

(b) transplants an organ removed from a living person into another person, commits an offence unless the person into whom the organ is to be or, as the case may be, is transplanted is genetically related to the person from whom the organ is removed.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section a person is genetically related to —

(a) his or her natural parents and children;

(b) his or her brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood;

(c) the brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood of either of his or her natural parents;
and

(d) the natural children of his or her brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood or of the brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood of either of his or her natural parents, but a person is not in any particular case to be treated as related in any of those ways unless the fact of the relationship has been established by means specified by regulations made by the Governor.

(3) The prohibition in subsection (1) does not apply if —

(a) the authority constituted under section 111(1)(a) is satisfied —

- (i) that no payment has been or is to be made in contravention of section 109; and
- (ii) that any other conditions specified in the regulations are satisfied; and

(b) any other requirements specified in the regulations under that section are complied with.
[UK Human Organs Transplant Act 1989 ss.1 to 3]

111. Human organ transplants: Supplementary

(1) The Governor may make regulations —

(a) constituting or designating an authority to exercise powers under section 110 and this section;

(b) requiring the persons specified in the regulations to supply to the authority information so specified with respect to transplants that have been or are proposed to be carried out in the Falkland Islands using organs removed from dead or living persons;

(c) providing for other matters for which regulations are required by section 110.

(2) The authority must keep a record of information supplied to it pursuant to the regulations made under this section.

(3) A person who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with regulations made under subsection (1)(b) commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(4) A person who, in purported compliance with such regulations, knowingly or recklessly supplies information which is false or misleading in a material respect commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

(5) The power to make regulations under this section and section 110 is exercisable by the Governor in Council after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

(6) The expenses of the authority must be defrayed by the Governor out of money provided by the Legislative Assembly.

[UK Human Organs Transplant Act 1989 ss.1 to 3]

Crimes against humanity

112. Genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes

(1) It is an offence against the law of the Falkland Islands for a person to commit genocide, a crime against humanity or a war crime.

Penalty: As provided in subsections (3) and (4).

(2) It is an offence against the law of the Falkland Islands for a person to engage in conduct ancillary to an offence under subsection (1).

Penalty: As provided in subsections (3) and (4).

(3) A person convicted of —

- (a) an offence under this section involving murder; or
- (b) an offence ancillary to an offence involving murder, must be sentenced as for an offence of murder.

(4) In any other case a person convicted of an offence under this section is liable to imprisonment for 30 years.

(5) An offence under subsection (1) or (2) is triable on indictment only.

[UK International Criminal Court (OT) Order 2001 Schedule 2 Arts. 55 to 57]

113. Genocide, etc.: Supplementary provisions

(1) For the purposes of this Part —

“crime against humanity” means a crime against humanity as defined in Article 7 of the Statute;

“genocide” means an act of genocide as defined in Article 6 of the Statute;

“war crime” means a war crime as defined in Article 8.2 of the Statute; and

“the Statute” means the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court which entered into force on 1 July 2002, as amended from time to time.

(2) In interpreting and applying the provisions of the Articles mentioned in subsection (1) a court must take into account —

- (a) any relevant Elements of Crimes adopted in accordance with Article 9 of the Statute; and
- (b) until such time as Elements of Crimes are adopted under that article, any relevant Elements of Crimes contained in the report of the Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court adopted on 30 June 2000.

(3) The Articles referred to in subsection (1) are for the purposes of this Part to be construed subject to and in accordance with any relevant reservation or declaration made by the United Kingdom when ratifying any treaty or agreement relevant to the interpretation of those Articles.

(4) In interpreting and applying the provisions of the Articles referred to in subsection (1) the court must take into account any relevant judgment or decision of the International Criminal Court. Account may also be taken of any other relevant international jurisprudence.

(5) Section 112(1) and (2) apply to acts committed —

(a) in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) outside the Falkland Islands by a person who has Falkland Islands status or a person ordinarily resident in the Falkland Islands.

(6) Subsection (5) applies to an act that if committed in the Falkland Islands would constitute an offence under section 112 (1) or (2) but which, being committed (or intended to be committed) outside the Falkland Islands, does not constitute such an offence.

(7) No proceedings for an offence under section 112 may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(8) In section 112(3) “murder” means the killing of a person in such circumstances as would, if committed in the Falkland Islands, constitute murder.

[UK International Criminal Court (OT) Order 2001 Schedule 2 Arts. 55 to 57]

Miscellaneous offences

114. Piracy endangering life

(1) A person who, with intent to commit or at the time of or immediately before or immediately after committing the crime of piracy in respect of any ship or vessel —

(a) assaults, with intent to murder, any person who is on board of or belongs to the ship or vessel;

(b) stabs, cuts, or wounds any such person; or

(c) unlawfully does any act by which the life of any such person may be endangered,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Life imprisonment.

(2) For purposes of this Part, “piracy” means piracy jure gentium as understood in the courts of England and Wales, and includes, but is not limited to, piracy as defined in Articles 101 to 103 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

(3) An offence under this section is triable on indictment only.

[UK Piracy Act 1837 s.2 adapted]

115. Kidnapping and false imprisonment

(1) A person who, by force or fraud, takes or carries away a person —

(a) without the consent of that person; and

(b) without lawful excuse,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 18 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who imprisons another person or restrains another person from freely moving from any place —

(a) without the consent of that person; and

(b) without lawful excuse,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[Common law and UK case law]

116. Torture

(1) A person who is —

(a) a public officer; or

(b) a person of any nationality acting in an official capacity, and who, in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere, intentionally inflicts severe pain or suffering on another person in the performance or purported performance of official duties, commits the offence of torture.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) A person who does not fall within subsection (1) above and who, in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere, intentionally inflicts severe pain or suffering on another person at the instigation or with the consent or acquiescence of —

(a) a public officer; or

(b) a person of any nationality acting in an official capacity, who is performing or purporting to perform official duties when he or she instigates the commission of the offence or consents to or acquiesces in it, commits the offence of torture.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(3) It is immaterial whether the pain or suffering is physical or mental and whether it is caused by an act or an omission.

(4) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under this section in respect of any conduct to prove that the person had lawful authority, justification or excuse for that conduct.

(5) For the purposes of this section “lawful authority, justification or excuse” means —

(a) in relation to pain or suffering inflicted in the Falkland Islands – lawful authority, justification or excuse under the law of the Falkland Islands;

(b) in relation to pain or suffering inflicted outside the Falkland Islands —

(i) if it was inflicted by a the Falkland Islands public officer acting under Falkland Islands law or by a person acting in an official capacity under that law - lawful authority, justification or excuse under that law;

(ii) in any other case - lawful authority, justification or excuse under the law of the place where it was inflicted.

(6) No prosecution for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General

(7) An offence under subsection (1) or (2) is triable on indictment only.

[UK CJ Act 1988 ss.134, 135; CJ Act (OT) Order 1988]

117. Slavery, servitude and forced or compulsory labour

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A holds another person in slavery or servitude and the circumstances are such that A knows or ought to know that the person is so held; or

(b) A requires another person to perform forced or compulsory labour and the circumstances are such that A knows or ought to know that the person is being required to perform such labour.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In subsection (1) the references to holding a person in slavery or servitude or requiring a person to perform forced or compulsory labour are to be construed in accordance with Article 4 of the Human Rights Convention (Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms) agreed by the Council of Europe at Rome on 4 November 1950.

[UK Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s.71]

118. Bigamy

(1) Subject to subsection (2), a married person ('A') who marries any other person during the life of A's former husband or wife commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to a person ('A') who marries a second time if —

(a) A's husband or wife has been continually absent from A for at least 7 years up to the date of the second marriage and has not been known by A to be living within that time;

(b) at the time of the second marriage, A has been divorced from the bonds of the first marriage; or

(c) A's first marriage has been annulled or declared void by a court of competent jurisdiction.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.57]

Use of force

119. Use of force in making arrest, etc.

Section 780 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 applies in relation to the use of force in effecting an arrest or in assisting in the prevention of crime.

120. Self-defence

(1) This section applies if in proceedings for an offence —

(a) an issue arises as to whether a person charged with the offence (“D”) is entitled to rely on a defence within subsection (2); and

(b) the question arises whether the degree of force used by D against a person (“V”) was reasonable in the circumstances.

(2) The defences are —

(a) the common law defence of self-defence;

(b) the common law defence of defence of property; and

(c) the defence provided by section 119.

(3) The question whether the degree of force used by D was reasonable in the circumstances is to be decided by reference to the circumstances as D believed them to be, and subsections (4) to (8) also apply in connection with deciding that question.

(4) If D claims to have held a particular belief as regards the existence of any circumstances —

(a) the reasonableness or otherwise of that belief is relevant to the question whether D genuinely held it; but

(b) if it is determined that D did genuinely hold it, D is entitled to rely on it for the purposes of subsection (3), whether or not —

(i) it was mistaken; or

(ii) if it was mistaken - the mistake was a reasonable one to have made.

(5) Subsection (4)(b) does not enable D to rely on any mistaken belief attributable to intoxication that was voluntarily induced.

(6) The degree of force used by D is not to be regarded as having been reasonable in the circumstances as D believed them to be if it was disproportionate in those circumstances.

(7) In deciding the question mentioned in subsection (3) the following considerations are to be taken into account (so far as relevant in the circumstances of the case) —

(a) that a person acting for a legitimate purpose may not be able to weigh to a nicety the exact measure of any necessary action; and

(b) that evidence of a person's having only done what the person honestly and instinctively thought was necessary for a legitimate purpose constitutes strong evidence that only reasonable action was taken by that person for that purpose.

(8) In deciding the question mentioned in subsection (3), a possibility that D could have retreated is to be considered (so far as relevant) as a factor to be taken into account, rather than as giving rise to a duty to retreat.

(9) Subsection (7) is not to be read as preventing other matters from being taken into account if they are relevant to deciding the question mentioned in subsection (3).

(10) In this section —

(a) “legitimate purpose” means —

(i) the purpose of self-defence under the common law; or

(ii) the prevention of crime or effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of persons mentioned in the provisions referred to in subsection (2)(b);

(b) references to self-defence include acting in defence of another person; and

(c) references to the degree of force used are to the type and amount of force used.

PART 5 - CORPORATE MANSLAUGHTER

Preliminary

121. Interpretation

(1) In this Part —

“corporation” does not include a corporation sole but includes any corporate body wherever incorporated;

“employee” means an individual who works under a contract of employment or apprenticeship (whether express or implied and, if express, whether oral or in writing), and related expressions are to be construed accordingly;

“employers’ association” means an organisation which consists wholly or mainly of employers and whose principal purposes include the regulation of relations between employers and workers or trade unions; or any constituent or affiliated organisation having the same purposes;

“enforcement authority” means an authority responsible for the enforcement of any health and safety legislation of or applicable to the Falkland Islands;

“exempt department” means a department of the Government that is exempted from the application of this Part by an order made under subsection (2) in relation to the whole or any provision of this Part;

“health and safety legislation” means any enactment of or applied to the Falkland Islands that deals with health and safety matters;

“partnership” means a partnership within the Companies and Private Partnership Ordinance or a firm or entity of a similar character formed under the law of a place outside the Falkland Islands;

“premises” includes land, buildings and moveable structures;

“public authority” includes any person any of whose functions are functions of a public nature, but does not include —

(a) any court or tribunal;

(b) the Legislative Assembly or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in the Legislative Assembly;

“publicity order” means an order under section 134(1);

“remedial order” means an order under section 133(1);

“trade union” has the meaning given by the Trade Unions and Trade Disputes Ordinance.

(2) The Governor may by order exempt any department of the Government from the application of this Part, or any provision of this Part, if the Governor considers it to be in the public interest to do so.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.25 adapted; Human Rights Act 1998 s.6; UK Trade Union and Labour (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.122]

122. Corporate manslaughter

(1) An organisation to which this section applies commits the offence of corporate manslaughter if the way in which its activities are managed or organised —

(a) causes a person's death; and

(b) amounts to a gross breach of a relevant duty of care owed by the organisation to the deceased.

Penalty: A fine.

(2) The organisations to which this section applies are —

(a) a corporation;

(b) a department of the Government (other than an exempt department);

(c) a police force;

(d) a partnership, or a trade union or employers' association that is an employer.

(3) An organisation commits an offence under this section only if the way in which its activities are managed or organised by its senior management is a substantial element in the breach referred to in subsection (1).

(4) For the purposes of this Part —

(a) "relevant duty of care" has the meaning given by section 123, read with sections 124 to 128;

(b) a breach of a duty of care by an organisation is a "gross" breach if the conduct alleged to amount to a breach of that duty falls far below what can reasonably be expected of the organisation in the circumstances;

(c) "senior management", in relation to an organisation, means the persons who play significant roles in —

(i) the making of decisions about how the whole or a substantial part of its activities are to be managed or organised; or

(ii) the actual managing or organising of the whole or a substantial part of those activities.

(5) The offence of corporate manslaughter is triable on indictment only

(6) This section applies only if the harm resulting in death is sustained —

(a) in the Falkland Islands (including its territorial waters);

(b) on a ship or aircraft registered in the Falkland Islands; or

(c) on, under or above an installation in waters to which section 179 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 applies, or any waters within 500 metres of any such installation.

(7) For the purposes of subsection (6)(b), harm sustained on a ship or aircraft includes harm sustained by a person who —

(a) is then no longer on board the ship or aircraft in consequence of the wrecking of it or of some other mishap affecting it or occurring on it; and

(b) sustains the harm in consequence of that event.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

Relevant duty of care

123. Meaning of “relevant duty of care”

(1) A “relevant duty of care”, in relation to an organisation, means any of the following duties owed by it under the law of negligence —

(a) a duty owed to its employees or to other persons working for the organisation or performing services for it;

(b) a duty owed as occupier of premises;

(c) a duty owed in connection with —

(i) the supply by the organisation of goods or services (whether for consideration or not);

(ii) the carrying on by the organisation of any construction or maintenance operations;

(iii) the carrying on by the organisation of any other activity on a commercial basis; or

(iv) the use or keeping by the organisation of any plant, vehicle or other thing;

(d) a duty owed to a person who, by reason of being a person within subsection (2), is someone for whose safety the organisation is responsible.

(2) A person is within this subsection if the person —

(a) is detained at a prison or in a custody area at a court or police station;

(b) is being transported in a vehicle, or being held in any premises, pursuant to prison escort arrangements or immigration escort arrangements;

(c) is detained under the Mental Health Ordinance.

(3) Subsection (1) is subject to sections 124 to 129.

(4) A reference in subsection (1) to a duty owed under the law of negligence includes a reference to a duty that would be owed under the law of negligence but for any statutory provision under which liability is imposed in place of liability under that law.

(5) For the purposes of this Part —

(a) whether a particular organisation owes a duty of care to a particular individual is a question of law; and

(b) the judge must make any findings of fact necessary to decide that question.

(6) For the purposes of this Part there is to be disregarded —

(a) any rule of the common law that has the effect of preventing a duty of care from being owed by one person to another by reason of the fact that they are jointly engaged in unlawful conduct;

(b) any such rule that has the effect of preventing a duty of care from being owed to a person by reason of the person's acceptance of a risk of harm.

(7) In this section —

“construction or maintenance operations” means operations of any of the following descriptions—

(a) construction, installation, alteration, extension, improvement, repair, maintenance, decoration, cleaning, demolition or dismantling of —

(i) any building or structure;

(ii) anything else that forms, or is to form, part of the land; or

(iii) any plant, vehicle or other thing;

(b) operations that form an integral part of, or are preparatory to, or are for rendering complete, any operations within paragraph (a);

“the law of negligence” includes, but is not limited to, health and safety legislation.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

124. Public policy decisions, exclusively public functions and statutory inspections

(1) Any duty of care owed by a public authority in respect of a decision as to matters of public policy (including in particular the allocation of public resources or the weighing of competing public interests) is not a “relevant duty of care”.

(2) Any duty of care owed in respect of things done in the exercise of an exclusively public function is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of section 123(1).

(3) Any duty of care owed by a public authority in respect of inspections carried out in the exercise of a statutory function is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within paragraph (a) or (b) of section 123(1).

(4) In this section —

“exclusively public function” means a function that falls within the prerogative of the Crown or is, by its nature, exercisable only with authority conferred —

(a) by the exercise of that prerogative; or

(b) by or under a statutory provision;

“statutory function” means a function conferred by or under a statutory provision.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

125. Military activities

(1) Any duty of care owed by the Ministry of Defence of the United Kingdom or by the Government in relation to the Falkland Islands Defence Force in respect of —

(a) operations within subsection (2);

(b) activities carried on in preparation for, or directly in support of, such operations; or

(c) training of a hazardous nature, or training carried out in a hazardous way, which it is considered needs to be carried out, or carried out in that way, in order to improve or maintain the effectiveness of the armed forces with respect to such operations, is not a “relevant duty of care”.

(2) The operations within this subsection are operations, including peacekeeping operations and operations for dealing with terrorism, civil unrest or serious public disorder, in the course of which members of the armed forces or of the Falkland Islands Defence Force, as the case may be, come under attack or face the threat of attack or violent resistance.

(3) Any duty of care owed by the Ministry of Defence in respect of activities carried on by members of the special forces is not a “relevant duty of care”.

(4) In this section “the special forces” means those units of the armed forces the maintenance of whose capabilities is the responsibility of the Commander British Forces, South Atlantic Islands, or which are for the time being subject to the operational command of the Commander.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

126. Policing and law enforcement

(1) Any duty of care owed by a public authority in respect of —

(a) operations within subsection (2);

(b) activities carried on in preparation for, or directly in support of, such operations; or

(c) training of a hazardous nature, or training carried out in a hazardous way, which it is considered needs to be carried out, or carried out in that way, in order to improve or maintain the effectiveness of officers or employees of the public authority with respect to such operations, is not a “relevant duty of care”.

(2) Operations are within this subsection if —

(a) they are operations for dealing with terrorism, civil unrest or serious disorder;

(b) they involve the carrying on of policing or law-enforcement activities; and

(c) officers or employees of the public authority in question come under attack, or face the threat of attack or violent resistance, in the course of the operations.

(3) Any duty of care owed by a public authority in respect of other policing or law-enforcement activities is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of section 123(1).

(4) In this section “policing or law-enforcement activities” includes —

(a) activities carried on in the exercise of functions that are —

(i) functions of the police force; or

(ii) functions of the same or a similar nature exercisable by public authorities other than the police force;

(b) activities carried on in the exercise of functions of police officers employed by a public authority;

(c) activities carried on to enforce any provision contained in or made under the Immigration Ordinance.

127. Emergencies

(1) Any duty of care owed by an organisation within subsection (2) in respect of the way in which it responds to emergency circumstances is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of section 123(1)..

(2) The organisations within this subsection are —

(a) a fire and rescue authority;

(b) any other organisation providing a service of responding to emergency circumstances either —

(i) pursuant to an arrangement made with the Government; or

(ii) (if not pursuant to such an arrangements) otherwise than on a commercial basis;

(c) a public hospital;

(d) an organisation providing ambulance services pursuant to an arrangement made with the Government;

(e) an organisation providing services for the transport of organs, blood, equipment or personnel pursuant to an arrangement with the Government;

(f) the armed forces;

(g) Falkland Islands Defence Force.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), the way in which an organisation responds to emergency circumstances does not include the way in which —

(a) medical treatment is carried out; or

(b) decisions within subsection (4) are made.

(4) The decisions within this subsection are decisions as to the carrying out of medical treatment, other than decisions as to the order in which persons are to be given such treatment.

(5) Any duty of care owed in respect of the carrying out, or attempted carrying out, of a rescue operation at sea in emergency circumstances is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within section 123(1)(a) or (b).

(6) Any duty of care owed in respect of action taken in order to comply with a safety direction under the Merchant Shipping Ordinance or any UK enactment applied by the Merchant Shipping

(Adoption of Legislation) Ordinance, or with action in lieu of direction, is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within section 123(1)(a) or (b).

(7) In this section —

“emergency circumstances” means circumstances that are present or imminent and —

- (a) are causing, or are likely to cause, serious harm or a worsening of such harm; or
- (b) are likely to cause the death of a person;

“medical treatment” includes any treatment or procedure of a medical or similar nature;

“serious harm” means —

- (a) serious injury to or the serious illness (including mental illness) of a person;
- (b) serious harm to the environment (including the life and health of plants and animals);
- (c) serious harm to any building or other property.

(8) A reference in this section to emergency circumstances includes a reference to circumstances that are believed to be emergency circumstances.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

128. Child protection and probation functions

(1) A duty of care to which this section applies is not a “relevant duty of care” unless it falls within paragraph (a), (b) or (d) of section 123(1).

(2) This section applies to any duty of care that the Crown owes in respect of the exercise by it of functions conferred by or under the Children Ordinance 2014.

(3) This section also applies to any duty of care that a public authority owes in respect of the exercise by it of supervision or similar functions conferred by or under the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

129. Gross breach: Factors

(1) This section applies if —

- (a) it is established that an organisation owed a relevant duty of care to a person; and
- (b) it falls to the court, or the jury, if there is one, to decide whether there was a gross breach of that duty.

(2) The court or jury, as the case may be, must consider whether the evidence shows that the organisation failed to comply with any health and safety legislation that relates to the alleged breach, and if so —

(a) how serious that failure was;

(b) how much of a risk of death it posed.

(3) The court or jury, as the case may be, may also —

(a) consider the extent to which the evidence shows that there were attitudes, policies, systems or accepted practices within the organisation that were likely to have encouraged any such failure as is mentioned in subsection (2), or to have produced tolerance of it;

(b) have regard to any health and safety guidance that relates to the alleged breach.

(4) This section does not prevent the court or jury, as the case may be, from having regard to any other matters they consider relevant.

(5) In this section “health and safety guidance” means any code, guidance, manual or similar publication that is concerned with health and safety matters and is made or issued (under a statutory provision or otherwise) by an authority responsible for the enforcement of any health and safety legislation.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.1 to 8]

Application to particular categories of organisation

130. Application to public bodies

(1) An organisation that is a servant or agent of the Crown is not by virtue of its status immune from prosecution under this Part.

(2) For the purposes of this Part —

(a) every department of the Government (other than an exempt department); and

(b) every corporation that is a servant or agent of the Crown, is to be treated as owing whatever duties of care it would owe if it were a corporation that was not a department of the Government or servant or agent of the Crown.

(3) For the purposes of section 122 —

(a) a person who is —

(i) employed by or under the Crown for the purposes of a department of the Government;
or

(ii) employed by a person whose staff constitute such a department, is to be treated as employed by that department.

(b) any premises occupied for the purposes of —

(i) a department of the Government; or

(ii) a person whose staff constitute such a department, are to be treated as occupied by that department.

(4) For the purposes of sections 122 to 127, anything purporting to be done by a department or body of the Government, although in law done by the Crown or by the holder of a particular office, is to be treated as done by the department or body itself.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.11]

131. Application to police force

(1) For the purposes of this Part, the police force is to be treated as owing whatever duties of care it would owe if it were a corporate body.

(2) For the purposes of section 122 —

(a) a member of the police force is to be treated as employed by the force;

(b) a reserve police officer is to be treated as employed by the police force;

(c) a probationary police officer undergoing training with a view to becoming a member of the police force is to be treated as employed by the force.

(3) For the purposes of section 122, any premises occupied for the purposes of the police force are to be treated as occupied by the force.

(4) For the purposes of sections 122 to 127, anything that would be regarded as done by the police force if the force were a corporate body is to be so regarded.

(5) If —

(a) by virtue of subsection (3) a person is treated for the purposes of section 122 as employed by the police force; and

(b) by virtue of any other statutory provision (whenever made) the person is, or is treated as, employed by another organisation, the person is to be treated for those purposes as employed by both the force and the other organisation.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.13]

132. Application to partnerships

(1) For the purposes of this Part a partnership is to be treated as owing whatever duties of care it would owe if it were a body corporate.

(2) Proceedings for an offence under this Part alleged to have been committed by a partnership are to be brought in the name of the partnership (and not in that of any of its members).

(3) A fine imposed on a partnership on its conviction of an offence under this Part is to be paid out of the funds of the partnership.

(4) This section does not apply to a partnership that is a legal person under the law by which it is governed.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.14]

Enforcement and procedure

133. Power to order breach, etc. to be remedied

(1) A court before which an organisation is convicted of corporate manslaughter may make an order (a “remedial order”) requiring the organisation to take specified steps to remedy —

(a) the breach mentioned in section 122(1) (“ the relevant breach”);

(b) any matter that appears to the court to have resulted from the relevant breach and to have been a cause of the death;

(c) any deficiency, as regards health and safety matters, in the organisation’s policies, systems or practices of which the relevant breach appears to the court to be an indication.

(2) A remedial order —

(a) may be made only on an application by the prosecution specifying the terms of the proposed order;

(b) must be on such terms (whether those proposed or others) as the court considers appropriate having regard to any representations made, and any evidence adduced, in relation to that matter by the prosecution or on behalf of the organisation.

(3) Before making an application for a remedial order the prosecution must consult such enforcement authority or authorities as it considers appropriate having regard to the nature of the relevant breach.

(4) A remedial order —

(a) must specify a period within which the steps referred to in subsection (1) are to be taken;

(b) may require the organisation to supply to an enforcement authority consulted under subsection (3), within a specified period, evidence that those steps have been taken.

(5) A period specified under subsection (4) may be extended or further extended by order of the court on an application made before the end of that period or extended period.

(6) An organisation that fails to comply with a remedial order commits an offence, the maximum penalty for which is a fine.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.9]

134. Power to order conviction, etc. to be publicised

(1) A court before which an organisation is convicted of corporate manslaughter may make an order (a “publicity order”) requiring the organisation to publicise in a specified manner —

(a) the fact that it has been convicted of the offence;

(b) specified particulars of the offence;

(c) the amount of any fine imposed;

(d) the terms of any remedial order made.

(2) In deciding on the terms of a publicity order that it is proposing to make, the court must —

(a) ascertain the views of such enforcement authority or authorities (if any) as it considers appropriate; and

(b) have regard to any representations made by the prosecution or on behalf of the organisation.

(3) A publicity order —

(a) must specify a period within which the requirements referred to in subsection (1) are to be complied with;

(b) may require the organisation to supply to any enforcement authority whose views have been ascertained under subsection (2), within a specified period, evidence that those requirements have been complied with.

(4) An organisation that fails to comply with a publicity order commits an offence, and liable on conviction on indictment to a fine.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.10]

135. Procedure, evidence and sentencing

(1) Any statutory provision (whenever made) about criminal proceedings applies, subject to any prescribed adaptations or modifications, in relation to proceedings under this Part against —

- (a) a department of the Government;
- (b) the police force;
- (c) a partnership;
- (d) a trade union; or
- (e) an employers' association that is not a corporation,

as it applies in relation to proceedings against a corporation.

(2) An individual cannot be guilty of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence of corporate manslaughter.

(3) No proceedings for an offence of corporate manslaughter may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(4) In this section —

“prescribed” means prescribed by criminal procedure rules made under the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014;

“provision about criminal proceedings” includes —

- (a) provision about procedure in or in connection with criminal proceedings;
- (b) provision about evidence in such proceedings;
- (c) provision about sentencing, or otherwise dealing with, persons convicted of offences.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 ss.15, 17 and 18]

136. Convictions under this Part and under health and safety legislation

(1) If in the same proceedings there is —

- (a) a charge of corporate manslaughter arising out of a particular set of circumstances; and
- (b) a charge against the same defendant of a health and safety offence arising out of some or all of those circumstances, the court, or the jury, if there is one, may, if the interests of justice so require, be invited to return a verdict on each charge.

(2) An organisation that has been convicted of corporate manslaughter arising out of a particular set of circumstances may, if the interests of justice so require, be charged with a health and safety offence arising out of some or all of those circumstances.

(3) In this section “health and safety offence” means an offence under any health and safety legislation.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.19]

Miscellaneous

137. Transfer of functions

(1) This section applies if —

(a) a person’s death has occurred, or is alleged to have occurred, in connection with the carrying out of functions by a relevant public organisation; and

(b) subsequently there is a transfer of those functions, with the result that they are still carried out but no longer by that organisation.

(2) In this section “relevant public organisation” means —

(a) a department of the Government (other than an exempt department);

(b) a corporation that is a servant or agent of the Crown or Government;

(c) the police force.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), any proceedings commenced against a relevant public organisation after the transfer for an offence under this Part in respect of the person’s death are to be commenced against —

(a) the relevant public organisation, if any, by which the functions mentioned in subsection (1) are currently carried out;

(b) if no such organisation currently carries out the functions - the relevant public organisation by which the functions were last carried out.

(4) If an order made by the Governor so provides in relation to a particular transfer of functions, the proceedings referred to in subsection (3) may be commenced, or (if they have already been commenced) may be continued, against —

(a) the organisation mentioned in subsection (1); or

(b) any relevant public organisation (other than the one mentioned in subsection (1) or subsection (3)(a) or (b)) specified in the order.

(5) Subject to subsection (6), if the transfer occurs while proceedings for an offence under this Part in respect of the person’s death are in progress against a relevant public organisation, the proceedings are to be continued against —

(a) the relevant public organisation, if any, by which the functions mentioned in subsection (1) are carried out as a result of the transfer;

(b) if as a result of the transfer no such organisation carries out the functions - the same organisation as before.

(6) If an order made by the Governor so provides in relation to a particular transfer of functions, the proceedings referred to in subsection (5) may be continued against —

(a) the organisation mentioned in subsection (1); or

(b) any relevant public organisation (other than the one mentioned in subsection (1) or subsection (5)(a) or (b)) specified in the order.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.16]

138. Abolition of liability of corporations for manslaughter at common law

The common law offence of manslaughter by gross negligence is abolished in its application to corporations, and in any application it has to other organisations to which section 122 applies.

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.20]

139. Power to extend section 122 to other organisations

(1) The Governor may by order amend section 122 so as to extend the categories of organisation to which that section applies.

(2) An order under this section may make any amendment to this Part that is incidental or supplemental to, or consequential on, an amendment made by virtue of subsection (1).

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.21]

140. Power to extend section 123(2)

(1) The Governor in Council, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order amend section 123(2) to make it include any category of person (not already included) who is —

(a) required by virtue of a statutory provision to remain or reside on particular premises; or

(b) otherwise subject to a restriction of his or her liberty.

(2) An order under this section may make any amendment to this Part that is incidental or supplemental to, or consequential on, an amendment made by virtue of subsection (1).

[UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s.23]

PART 6 – PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT

141. Interpretation of Part

(1) This section applies for the interpretation of this Part.

(2) References to harassing a person include alarming the person or causing the person distress.

(3) References to a person, in the context of the harassment of a person, are references to a person who is an individual.

(4) A “course of conduct” must involve —

(a) in the case of conduct in relation to a single person (see section 142(1)), conduct on at least 2 occasions in relation to that person; or

(b) in the case of conduct in relation to 2 or more persons (see section 142(2)), conduct on at least one occasion in relation to each of those persons.

(5) A person’s conduct on any occasion, if aided, abetted, counselled or procured by another, is to be taken to be —

(a) conduct on that occasion of the other (as well as conduct of the person whose conduct it is); and

(b) conduct in relation to which the other’s knowledge and purpose, and what the other ought to have known, are the same as they were in relation to what was contemplated or reasonably foreseeable at the time of the aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring.

(6) “Conduct” includes speech.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.7 am. by Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005]

Harassment and stalking

142. Prohibition of harassment

(1) A person must not pursue a course of conduct which —

(a) amounts to harassment of another; and

(b) the person knows or ought to know amounts to harassment of the other.

(2) A person (‘A’) must not pursue a course of conduct —

(a) which involves harassment of 2 or more persons;

(b) which A knows or ought to know involves harassment of those persons, and

(c) by which A intends to persuade any person (whether or not one of those mentioned in (a) or (b)) —

(i) not to do something that that person is entitled or required to do; or

(ii) to do something that that person is not under any obligation to do.

(3) For the purposes of this section or section 143, the person whose course of conduct is in question ought to know that it amounts to or involves harassment of another if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct amounted to or involved harassment of the other.

(4) Subsection (1) or (2) does not apply to a course of conduct if the person who pursued it shows —

(a) that it was pursued for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime;

(b) that it was pursued under any enactment or rule of law or to comply with any condition or requirement imposed by any person under any enactment; or

(c) that in the particular circumstances the pursuit of the course of conduct was reasonable.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.1 am. by Serious Organised Crime & Police Act 2005]

143. Offence of harassment

A person who pursues a course of conduct in breach of section 142(1) or (2) commits an offence. Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.2]

144. Offence of stalking

(1) A person commits an offence if —

(a) the person pursues a course of conduct in breach of section 142; and

(b) the course of conduct amounts to stalking.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(b) and section 146(1)(a), a person's course of conduct amounts to stalking of another person if —

(a) it amounts to harassment of that person;

(b) the acts or omissions involved are ones associated with stalking; and

(c) the person whose course of conduct it is knows or ought to know that the course of conduct amounts to harassment of the other person.

(3) The following are examples of acts or omissions which, in particular circumstances, are ones associated with stalking —

(a) following a person;

- (b) contacting, or attempting to contact, a person by any means;
- (c) publishing any statement or other material —
 - (i) relating or purporting to relate to a person; or
 - (ii) purporting to originate from a person;
- (d) monitoring the use by a person of the internet, e-mail or any other form of electronic communication;
- (e) loitering in any place (whether public or private);
- (f) interfering with any property in the possession of a person;
- (g) watching or spying on a person.

(4) This section does not limit the effect of section 146.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.2A ins. by Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 s.111]

145. Putting people in fear of violence

(1) A person ('A') whose course of conduct causes another person ('B') to fear that violence will be used against ('B'), commits an offence if A knows or ought to know that his or her course of conduct will cause B so to fear on each of those occasions.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section, A ought to know that his or her course of conduct will cause B to fear that violence will be used against B on any occasion if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct would cause B so to fear on that occasion.

(3) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under this section to show that —

- (a) the course of conduct was pursued for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime;
- (b) the course of conduct was pursued under any enactment or rule of law or to comply with any condition or requirement imposed by any person under any enactment; or
- (c) the pursuit of the course of conduct was reasonable for the protection of the defendant or another or for the protection of property of the defendant another.

(4) If on the trial of a person charged with an offence under this section the court or jury finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, it may find the person guilty of an offence under section 143 or 144.

(5) If by virtue of subsection (4) a person is convicted of an offence under section 143, the court has the same powers and duties in relation to the person as it would have on convicting the person of that offence.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.4]

146. Stalking involving fear of violence or serious alarm or distress

(1) A person (“A”) whose course of conduct —

(a) amounts to stalking; and

(b) either —

(i) causes another (“B”) to fear, on at least 2 occasions, that violence will be used against B; or

(ii) causes B serious alarm or distress which has a substantial adverse effect on B’s usual day-to-day activities, commits an offence if A knows or ought to know that A’s course of conduct will cause B so to fear on each of those occasions or (as the case may be) will cause such alarm or distress.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section A ought to know that A’s course of conduct will cause B to fear that violence will be used against B on any occasion if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct would cause B so to fear on that occasion.

(3) For the purposes of this section A ought to know that A’s course of conduct will cause B serious alarm or distress which has a substantial adverse effect on B’s usual day-to-day activities if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct would cause B such alarm or distress.

(4) It is a defence for A to show that —

(a) A’s course of conduct was pursued for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime;

(b) A’s course of conduct was pursued under any enactment or rule of law or to comply with any condition or requirement imposed by any person under any enactment; or

(c) the pursuit of A’s course of conduct was reasonable for the protection of A or another or for the protection of A’s or another’s property.

(5) If on the trial of a person charged with an offence under this section the court finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, it may find the person guilty of an offence under section 143 or 144.

(6) If by virtue of subsection (5) a person is convicted of an offence under section 143 or 144, the court has the same powers and duties in relation to the person as it would have on convicting the person of that offence.

(7) This section does not limit the effect of section 145.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act s.2A ins. by Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 s.111]

147. Harassment outside a house

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A is present outside or in the vicinity of any premises that are used by any individual ("the resident") as his or her dwelling;

(b) A is present there for the purpose (by his or her presence or otherwise) of representing to the resident or another individual (whether or not one who uses the premises as his or her dwelling), or of persuading the resident or such another individual —

(i) that he or she should not do something that he or she is entitled or required to do; or

(ii) that he or she should do something that he or she is not under any obligation to do;

(c) A —

(i) intends his or her presence to amount to the harassment of, or to cause alarm or distress to, the resident; or

(ii) knows or ought to know that his or her presence is likely to result in the harassment of, or to cause alarm or distress to, the resident; and

(d) the presence of A —

(i) amounts to the harassment of, or causes alarm or distress to, any person falling within subsection (2); or

(ii) is likely to result in the harassment of, or to cause alarm or distress to, any such person.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person falls within this subsection if he or she is —

(a) the resident;

(b) a person in the resident's dwelling; or

(c) a person in another dwelling in the vicinity of the resident's dwelling.

(3) The references in subsection (1)(c) and (d) to a person's presence are references to his or her presence either alone or together with that of any other persons who are also present.

(4) For the purposes of this section a person ('A') ought to know that his or her presence is likely to result in the harassment of, or to cause alarm or distress to, a resident if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think that A's presence was likely to have that effect.

(5) A police officer in uniform may arrest without warrant any person he or she reasonably suspects is committing or has committed an offence under this section.

[UK Criminal Justice & Police Act 2001 s.42A ins. by Serious & Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s.126]

Ancillary provisions

148. Civil remedy for breach of section 142(1)

(1) An actual or apprehended breach of section 142(1) may be the subject of a claim in civil proceedings in the Magistrate's Court by the person who is or may be the victim of the course of conduct in question.

(2) On such a claim, damages may be awarded for (among other things) any anxiety caused by the harassment and any financial loss resulting from the harassment.

(3) If —

(a) in such proceedings the Magistrate's Court grants an injunction for the purpose of restraining the defendant from pursuing any conduct which amounts to harassment; and

(b) the claimant considers that the defendant has done anything which the defendant is prohibited from doing by the injunction, the claimant may apply for the issue of a warrant for the arrest of the defendant.

(4) The court on an application under subsection (3) may only issue a warrant if —

(a) the application is substantiated on oath; and

(b) the court has reasonable grounds for believing that the defendant has done anything which the defendant is prohibited from doing by the injunction.

(5) If —

(a) the court grants an injunction for the purpose mentioned in subsection (3)(a); and

(b) without reasonable excuse the defendant does anything which the defendant is prohibited from doing by the injunction, the defendant commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(6) If a person is convicted of an offence under subsection (5) in respect of any conduct, that conduct is not punishable as a contempt of court.

(7) A person cannot be convicted of an offence under subsection (5) in respect of any conduct which has been punished as a contempt of court.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.3]

149. Injunction for breach of section 142(2)

(1) This section applies if there is an actual or apprehended breach of section 142(2) by any person (“the relevant person”).

(2) In such a case, any person who is or may be —

(a) a victim of the course of conduct in question; or

(b) a person falling within section 142(2)(c),

may apply to the Magistrate’s Court for an injunction restraining the relevant person from pursuing any conduct which amounts to harassment in relation to any person or persons mentioned or described in the injunction.

(3) Section 148(3) to (7) apply in relation to an injunction granted under subsection (2) above as they apply in relation to an injunction granted as mentioned in section 148(3)(a).

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.3A ins. by Serious & Organised Crime Act 2005 s.125]

150. Power of entry in relation to offence of stalking

(1) A justice of the peace may, on an application by a police officer, issue a warrant authorising a police officer to enter and search premises if the justice of the peace is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that —

(a) an offence under section 144 or 146 has been, or is being, committed;

(b) there is material on the premises which is likely to be of substantial value (whether by itself or together with other material) to the investigation of the offence;

(c) the material —

(i) is likely to be admissible in evidence at a trial for the offence; and

(ii) does not consist of, or include, items subject to legal privilege, excluded material or special procedure material (within the meanings given by Part 2 of the Criminal Procedure & Evidence Ordinance 2014; and

(d) either —

- (i) entry to the premises will not be granted unless a warrant is produced; or
- (ii) the purpose of a search may be frustrated or seriously prejudiced unless a police officer arriving at the premises can secure immediate entry to them.

(2) A police officer may —

(a) seize and retain anything for which a search has been authorised under subsection (1);

(b) use reasonable force, if necessary, in the exercise of any power conferred by virtue of this section.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act s.2B ins. by Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 s.112]

151. Restraining orders on conviction

(1) A court sentencing or otherwise dealing with a person (“the defendant”) convicted of an offence may (as well as sentencing the person or dealing with the person in any other way) make an order under this section.

(2) For the purpose of protecting the victim or victims of the offence, or any other person mentioned in the order, from further conduct which —

(a) amounts to harassment; or

(b) will cause a fear of violence,

the court may prohibit the defendant from doing anything described in the order.

(3) The order may have effect for a specified period or until further order.

(4) In proceedings under this section both the prosecution and the defence may lead, as further evidence, any evidence that would be admissible in proceedings for an injunction under section 148.

(5) The prosecutor, the defendant or any other person mentioned in the order may apply to the court which made the order for it to be varied or discharged by a further order.

(6) Any person mentioned in the order is entitled to be heard on the hearing of an application under subsection (5).

(7) A defendant who without reasonable excuse does anything which the defendant is prohibited from doing by an order under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(8) A court dealing with a person for an offence under this section may vary or discharge the order in question by a further order.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.5 am. by Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s.12]

152. Restraining orders on acquittal

(1) A court before which a person (“the defendant”) is acquitted of an offence under this Ordinance may, if it considers it necessary to do so to protect a person from harassment or fear of violence by the defendant, make an order prohibiting the defendant from doing anything described in the order.

(2) Subsections (2) to (8) of section 151 apply to an order under this section as they apply to an order under that section.

(3) If the Supreme Court allows an appeal against conviction it may remit the case to the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court, as the case may be to consider whether to proceed under this section.

(4) If a case is remitted to the Magistrate’s Court or Summary Court under subsection (3), the reference in subsection (1) to a court before which a person is acquitted of an offence is to be read as referring to that court.

(5) A person who is subject to an order under this section has the same right of appeal against the order as if —

(a) the person had been convicted of the offence in question before the court which made the order; and

(b) the order had been made under section 151.

[UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s.5A ins. by Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s.12]

Sending letters, etc. with intent to cause distress

153. Offence of sending letters etc. with intent to cause distress or anxiety

(1) A person who sends to another person —

(a) a letter, communication, or article of any description which conveys —

(i) a message which is indecent or grossly offensive;

(ii) a threat; or

(iii) information which is false and known or believed to be false by the sender; or

(b) any article or communication which is, in whole or part, of an indecent or grossly offensive nature, commits an offence if the conditions in subsection (2) are met.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

(2) The conditions are that the defendant's purpose, or one of the defendant's purposes, in sending the letter, article or communication is that it should cause distress or anxiety to the recipient or to any other person to whom the defendant intends that it or its contents or nature should be communicated.

(3) A person does not commit an offence under subsection (1)(a)(ii) if the person shows —

(a) that the threat was used to reinforce a demand made by the person on reasonable grounds; and

(b) that the person believed, and had reasonable grounds for believing, that the use of the threat was a proper means of reinforcing the demand.

(4) In this section references to sending include references to delivering or transmitting and to causing to be sent, delivered or transmitted, and "sender" is to be construed accordingly.

[UK Malicious Communications Act 1988 s.1]

Improper use of public electronic communications network

154. Offence of improper use of public electronic communications network

(1) A person who —

(a) sends by means of a public electronic communications network a message or other matter that is grossly offensive or of an indecent, obscene or menacing character; or

(b) causes any such message or matter to be so sent,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person who, for the purpose of causing annoyance, inconvenience or needless anxiety to another —

(a) sends by means of a public electronic communications network a message that the person knows to be false;

(b) causes such a message to be sent; or

(c) persistently makes use of a public electronic communications network,

commits an offence.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) do not apply to anything done in the course of providing a programme service.

(4) In this section, “electronic communications network” means —

(a) a transmission system for the conveyance, by the use of electrical, magnetic or electro-magnetic energy, of signals of any description; and

(b) such of the following as are used, by the person providing the system and in association with it, for the conveyance of the signals —

(i) apparatus comprised in the system;

(ii) apparatus used for the switching or routing of the signals; and

(iii) software and stored data.

[UK Communications Act 2003 ss.127 and 32]

PART 7 – OFFENSIVE WEAPONS

155. Interpretation of Part

In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“caravan” means any structure designed or adapted for human habitation which is capable of being moved from one place to another (whether by being towed, or by being transported on a motor vehicle or trailer) and any motor vehicle so designed or adapted;

“implement” means a flick knife, razor blade, axe or other article of the kind described in section 160(2) or 161(2);

“knife” means an instrument which has a blade or is sharply pointed;

“offensive weapon” means any article —

(a) made or adapted for use for causing injury to persons; or

(b) intended by the person who has it with him or her for such use by him or her or by some other person;

“publication” includes publication in electronic form and, in the case of a publication which is, or may be, produced from electronic data, any medium on which the data are stored;

“school” means an institution in which education is provided to persons under the age of 18, whether or not the institution also provides education to persons above the age of 18 years, and whether or not any person is at the time in question present upon the premises for the purpose of education;

“school premises” means land used for the purposes of a school, excluding any land occupied solely as a dwelling by a person employed at the school;

“suitable for combat” means suitable for use as a weapon for inflicting injury on a person or causing a person to fear injury;

“vehicle” includes —

- (a) any vehicle, whether or not it is in a fit state for use on roads;
- (b) any chassis or body, with or without wheels, which appears to have formed part of such a vehicle;
- (c) any load carried by, and anything attached to, such a vehicle; and
- (d) a caravan;

“violent behaviour” means an unlawful act inflicting injury on a person or causing a person to fear injury.

Knives

156. Unlawful marketing of knives

(1) It is an offence for a person to market a knife in a way which —

- (a) indicates, or suggests, that it is suitable for combat; or
- (b) is otherwise likely to stimulate or encourage violent behaviour involving the use of the knife as a weapon.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this Part, an indication or suggestion that a knife is suitable for combat may, in particular, be given or made by a name or description —

- (a) applied to the knife;
- (b) on the knife or on any packaging in which it is contained; or
- (c) included in any advertisement which, expressly or by implication, relates to the knife.

(3) For the purposes of this Part, a person markets a knife if the person —

- (a) sells or hires it;
- (b) offers, or exposes, it for sale or hire; or
- (c) has it in his or her possession for the purpose of sale or hire.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.1 to 4]

157. Publications

It is an offence for a person to publish any written, pictorial or other material in connection with the marketing of any knife which —

- (a) indicates, or suggests, that the knife is suitable for combat; or
- (b) is otherwise likely to stimulate or encourage violent behaviour involving the use of the knife as a weapon.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.1 to 4]

158. Exempt trades

(1) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under section 156 to prove that —

- (a) the knife was marketed —
 - (i) for use by the armed forces of any country;
 - (ii) as an antique or curio; or
 - (iii) as falling within some other prescribed category;
- (b) it was reasonable for the knife to be marketed in that way; and
- (c) there were no reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person into whose possession the knife might come in consequence of the way in which it was marketed would use it for an unlawful purpose.

(2) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under section 157 to prove that —

- (a) the material was published in connection with marketing a knife —
 - (i) for use by the armed forces of any country;
 - (ii) as an antique or curio; or
 - (iii) as falling within some other prescribed category;
- (b) it was reasonable for the knife to be marketed in that way; and
- (c) there were no reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person into whose possession the knife might come in consequence of the publishing of the material would use it for an unlawful purpose.

(3) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order prescribe the categories for the purpose of subsection (1)(a)(iii) or (2)(a)(iii) by reference to the type of knife or the circumstances of the marketing or publication, as the case may be.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.1 to 4]

159. Other defences

(1) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under section 156 to prove that the person did not know or suspect, and had no reasonable grounds for suspecting, that the way in which the knife was marketed —

(a) amounted to an indication or suggestion that the knife was suitable for combat; or

(b) was likely to stimulate or encourage violent behaviour involving the use of the knife as a weapon.

(2) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under section 157 to prove that the person did not know or suspect, and had no reasonable grounds for suspecting, that the material—

(a) amounted to an indication or suggestion that the knife was suitable for combat; or

(b) was likely to stimulate or encourage violent behaviour involving the use of the knife as a weapon.

(3) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under section 156 or 157 to prove that the person took all reasonable precautions and exercised all due diligence to avoid committing the offence.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.1 to 4]

160. Manufacture and sale of flick knives, etc.

(1) It is an offence for a person to —

(a) manufacture;

(b) sell or hire or offer for sale or hire, or to expose for sale or hire;

(c) have in the person's possession for the purpose of sale or hire; or

(d) lend or give to any other person, a weapon to which this section applies.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) This section applies to —

(a) a knife which has a blade which opens automatically by hand pressure applied to a button, spring or other device in or attached to the handle of the knife, sometimes known as a “flick knife” or “flick gun”; or

(b) a knife which has a blade which is released from the handle or sheath by the force of gravity or the application of centrifugal force and which, when released, is locked in place by means of a button, spring, lever or other device, sometimes known as a “gravity knife”.

[Gibraltar Criminal Offences Act s.41]

161. Sale of knives etc. to persons under 16

(1) A person who sells to a person under the age of 16 an article to which this section applies commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) This section applies to —

(a) any knife, knife blade or razor blade;

(b) any axe; and

(c) any other article which has a blade or which is sharply pointed and which is made or adapted for use for causing injury to the person.

(3) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under subsection (1) to prove that the person took all reasonable precautions and exercised all due diligence to avoid the commission of the offence.

[UK CJ Act 1988 s.141A ins. by Offensive Weapons Act 1996]

162. Entry, seizure and retention

(1) If, on an application made by a police officer, a justice of the peace is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that —

(a) a person has committed an offence under section 156, 160 or 161 in relation to knives or other implements of a particular description; and

(b) knives or implements of that description and in the person’s possession or under the person’s control are to be found on particular premises, the justice of the peace may issue a warrant authorising a police officer to enter those premises, search for the knives or implements and seize and remove any that the officer finds.

(2) If, on an application made by a police officer, a justice of the peace is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that —

(a) a person has committed an offence under section 157 in relation to particular material; and

(b) publications consisting of or containing that material and in the person's possession or under the person's control are to be found on particular premises,

the justice of the peace may issue a warrant authorising a police officer to enter those premises, search for the publications and seize and remove any that the officer finds.

(3) A police officer, in the exercise of the powers under a warrant issued under this section, may if necessary use reasonable force.

(4) Any knives, implements or publications which have been seized and removed by a police officer under a warrant issued under this section in respect of a person may be retained until the conclusion of proceedings against the person.

(5) For the purposes of this section, proceedings in relation to a person are concluded if —

(a) the person is convicted and sentenced or otherwise dealt with for the offence;

(b) the person is acquitted;

(c) proceedings for the offence are discontinued; or

(d) it is decided not to prosecute the person.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.5 to 7]

163. Forfeiture of knives and publications

(1) If a person is convicted of an offence under section 156, section 160 or section 161 in relation to a knife or other implement of a particular description, the court may make an order for forfeiture in respect of any knives or implements of that description —

(a) seized under a warrant issued under section 162; or

(b) in the person's possession or under the person's control at the relevant time.

(2) If a person is convicted of an offence under section 157 in relation to particular material, the court may make an order for forfeiture in respect of any publications consisting of or containing that material which —

(a) have been seized under a warrant issued under section 162; or

(b) were in the person's possession or under the person's control at the relevant time.

(3) The court may make an order under subsection (1) or (2) —

(a) whether or not it also deals with the convicted person in respect of the offence in any other way; and

(b) without regard to any restrictions on forfeiture in any enactment.

(4) In considering whether to make an order, the court must have regard —

(a) to the value of the property; and

(b) to the likely financial and other effects on the convicted person of the making of the order (taken together with any other order that the court contemplates making).

(5) In this section “relevant time”, in relation to an offence under section 156 or 157, means the time of the arrest for the offence or of the issue of a summons in respect of it.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.5 to 7]

164. Effect of a forfeiture order

(1) An order under section 163 (a “forfeiture order”) operates to deprive the convicted person of that person’s rights, if any, in the property to which it relates.

(2) The property to which a forfeiture order relates must be taken into the possession of the police (if it is not already in their possession).

(3) The court may, on an application made by a person who —

(a) claims property to which a forfeiture order applies, but

(b) is not the person from whom it was forfeited, make an order (a “recovery order”) for delivery of the property to the applicant if it appears to the court that the applicant owns it.

(4) No application for a recovery order may be made later than 6 months after the date on which the forfeiture order was made.

(5) No application for a recovery order may succeed unless the applicant satisfies the court that the applicant —

(a) did not consent to the convicted person having possession of the property; or

(b) did not know, and had no reason to suspect, that the offence was likely to be committed.

(6) Any right to recover property which is in the possession of another in pursuance of a recovery order —

(a) is not affected by the making of the recovery order for up to 6 months from the date on which the order was made; but

(b) is lost at the end of that period.

(7) Section 622 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance applies in relation to property forfeited under section 163 if —

(a) no application for a recovery order has been made within 6 months of the forfeiture order being made; or

(b) no such application has succeeded.

[UK Knives Act 1997 ss.5 to 7]

Crossbows

165. Sale, etc., of crossbows to young persons

(1) Subject to subsection (2), it is an offence for a person ('A') to sell or let on hire a crossbow or a part of a crossbow to a person ('B') under the age of 17 years.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) It is a defence for A to prove that on reasonable grounds A believed that B was aged 17 years or over.

(3) A person under the age of 17 who buys or hires a crossbow or part of a crossbow commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(4) Nothing in subsection (1) or (3) applies to a toy crossbow, that is to say a crossbow with a draw weight of less than 1.4 kilograms.

[Crimes Ord. s.17; UK Crossbows Act 1987 ss.1, 2 and 6]

166. Possession of crossbow by person under the age of 17

(1) Except as provided by subsection (2), a person under the age of 17 commits an offence if the person has with him or her —

(a) a crossbow (other than a toy crossbow) which is capable of discharging a missile; or

(b) parts of a crossbow (other than a toy crossbow) which together (and without any other parts) can be assembled to form a crossbow capable of discharging a missile.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) No offence is committed under subsection (1) if —

(a) the person under the age of 17 is under the supervision of a person who aged 21 or more; or

(b) the crossbow is within the dwelling-house within which the person under the age of 17 usually resides.

[Crimes Ord. s.18; UK Crossbows Act 1987 ss.3 and 6]

167. Prohibited use of crossbows

(1) It is an offence for a person to discharge a crossbow (other than a toy crossbow) —

(a) in any road or public place;

(b) on any beach;

(c) on any other land without the permission of the occupier of that land;

(d) in any sanctuary or reserve (including Stanley Common); or

(e) in any place so that a bolt or missile discharged by the crossbow falls in or traverses a place in which, had the crossbow been discharged there, an offence would have been committed under any of paragraphs (a) to (d).

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) A person who uses at night a crossbow (other than a toy crossbow) in any place outside a building commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

[Crimes Ord. s.19]

168. Forfeiture of crossbows

(1) A court which convicts a person of an offence to which subsection (1) relates may, on conviction, order that the crossbow be delivered up to the court and be forfeited to the Crown.

(2) A person who fails to deliver up the crossbow in question within 7 days of the making of the order under subsection (1) or any longer time the court allows when making the order, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or to a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) An appeal lies against an order under subsection (1) as if it were a sentence imposed on conviction.

[Crimes Ord. s.20; UK Crossbows Act 1987 s.7 (part)]

Offensive weapons generally

169. Having an article with blade or point in a public place

(1) Subject to subsections (4) and (5), any person who has an article to which this section applies with him or her in a public place commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) This section applies, subject to subsection (3), to any article which has a blade or is sharply pointed.

(3) This section does not apply to a folding pocket knife unless the cutting edge of its blade exceeds 3 inches.

(4) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under this section to prove that the person had good reason or lawful authority for having the article with him or her in a public place.

(5) Without limiting subsection (4), it is a defence for a person charged with an offence under this section to prove that the person had the article with him or her —

(a) for use at work;

(b) for religious reasons; or

(c) as part of a national costume.

[Crimes Ord. s.16; UK CJ Act 1988 s.139]

170. Having an offensive weapon, etc. on school premises

(1) A person who has with him or her on school premises an article to which section 169 applies commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who has with him or her on school premises any other offensive weapon as defined in section 155 commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under subsection (1) or (2) to prove that the person had good reason or lawful authority for having the article or weapon with him or her on the school premises.

(4) Without limiting subsection (3), it is a defence for a person charged with an offence under subsection (1) or (2) to prove that the person had the article or weapon in question with him or her —

(a) for use at work;

(b) for educational purposes;

(c) for religious reasons; or

(d) as part of a national costume.

[Crimes Ord. s.16A; UK CJ Act 1988 s.139A]

171. Threatening with offensive weapon, etc. on school premises

(1) A person who —

(a) has an article to which this section applies with him or her on school premises;

(b) unlawfully and intentionally threatens another person with the article; and

(c) does so in such a way that there is an immediate risk of serious physical harm to that other person,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 4 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This section applies to an offensive weapon and any article to which section 169 applies.

(3) For the purposes of this section physical harm is serious if it amounts to grievous bodily harm for the purposes of Part 4.

(4) If on a person's trial for an offence under this section the person is found not guilty of that offence but it is proved that the person committed an offence under any of sections 169, 170 or 172, the person may be convicted of the offence under that other section.

[UK CJ Act 1988 s.139AA ins. by LASPO Act 2012 s.142]

172. Entry and search of school premises for offensive weapons, etc.

(1) A police officer may enter school premises and search those premises and any person on those premises for —

(a) any article to which section 169 applies; or

(b) any other offensive weapon as defined in section 155,

if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that an offence under section 170 or section 171 is being, or has been, committed.

(2) If in the course of a search under this section a police officer discovers an article or weapon which he or she has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be an article or weapon of a kind described in subsection (1), the officer may seize and retain it.

(3) A police officer may use any reasonable force that is necessary in the exercise of the power of entry conferred by this section.

[UK CJ Act 1988 s.139B]

173. Carrying offensive weapon

(1) A person who, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, which the person must prove, has with him or her in any public place any offensive weapon commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 4 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person is convicted of an offence under subsection (1), the court may make an order for the forfeiture or disposal of the weapon in respect of which the offence was committed.

[UK Prevention of Crime Act 1953 s.1 am. by Offensive Weapons Act 1996 and s.1A ins. by LASPO Act 2012]

174. Dealing in offensive weapons

(1) A person who —

- (a) manufactures, sells or hires or offers for sale or hire;
- (b) exposes or has in the person's possession for the purpose of sale or hire;
- (c) lends or gives to any other person; or
- (d) imports,

an offensive weapon to which this section applies commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) This section applies to the following weapons —

- (a) a knuckleduster, that is, a band of metal or other hard material worn on one or more fingers, and designed to cause injury, and any weapon incorporating a knuckleduster;
- (b) a swordstick, that is, a hollow walking-stick or cane containing a blade which may be used as a sword;
- (c) the weapon sometimes known as a "handclaw", being a band of metal or other hard material from which a number of sharp spikes protrude, and worn around the hand;
- (d) the weapon sometimes known as a "belt buckle knife", being a buckle which incorporates or conceals a knife;
- (e) the weapon sometimes known as a "push dagger", being a knife the handle of which fits within a clenched fist and the blade of which protrudes from between two fingers;
- (f) the weapon sometimes known as a "hollow kubotan", being a cylindrical container containing a number of sharp spikes;
- (g) the weapon sometimes known as a "footclaw", being a bar of metal or other hard material from which a number of sharp spikes protrude, and worn strapped to the foot;
- (h) the weapon sometimes known as a "shuriken", "shaken" or "death star", being a hard non-flexible plate having three or more sharp radiating points and designed to be thrown;
- (i) the weapon sometimes known as a "balisong" or "butterfly knife", being a blade enclosed by its handle, which is designed to split down the middle, without the operation of a spring or other mechanical means, to reveal the blade;

(j) the weapon sometimes known as a “telescopic truncheon”, being a truncheon which extends automatically by hand pressure applied to a button, spring or other device in or attached to its handle;

(k) the weapon sometimes known as a “blowpipe” or “blow gun”, being a hollow tube out of which hard pellets or darts are shot by the use of breath;

(l) the weapon sometimes known as a “kusari gama”, being a length of rope, cord, wire or chain fastened at one end to a sickle;

(m) the weapon sometimes known as a “kyoketsu shoge”, being a length of rope, cord, wire or chain fastened at one end to a hooked knife;

(n) the weapon sometimes known as a “manrikigusari” or “kusari”, being a length of rope, cord, wire or chain fastened at each end to a hard weight or hand grip;

(o) a disguised knife, that is any knife which has a concealed blade or concealed sharp point and is designed to appear to be an everyday object of a kind commonly carried on the person or in a handbag, briefcase, or other hand luggage (such as a comb, brush, writing instrument, cigarette lighter, key, lipstick or telephone);

(p) a stealth knife, that is a knife or spike, which has a blade, or sharp point, made from a material that is not readily detectable by apparatus used for detecting metal and which is not designed for domestic use or for use in the processing, preparation or consumption of food or as a toy;

(q) a straight, side-handled or friction-lock truncheon (sometimes known as a baton);

(r) a sword with a curved blade of 50 cms or over in length; and for the purposes of this subparagraph, the length of the blade is the straight line distance from the top of the handle to the tip of the blade.

(3) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order amend subsection (2).

(4) It is a defence for any person charged with an offence under this section to prove that the person’s conduct was only for the purpose of —

(a) performing functions on behalf of the Crown or a visiting force; or

(b) making the weapon available to a museum or gallery in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

(5) If a person acting on behalf of a museum or gallery is charged with hiring or lending a weapon to which this section applies, it is a defence for the person to prove that he or she had reasonable grounds for believing that the person to whom he or she lent or hired it would use it only for cultural, artistic or educational purposes.

(6) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence relating to a weapon mentioned in subsection (2)(r) to show —

(a) that the weapon in question was made in Japan before 1954 or was made in Japan at any other time according to traditional methods of forging swords; and

(b) that the person's conduct was for the purpose only of making the weapon available for the holding of a permitted activity by an organisation which holds public liability insurance in relation to liabilities to third parties arising from or in connection with the organisation and the holding of the activity.

(7) For the purposes of subsection (6), a person is taken to have shown a matter specified in that subsection if —

(a) sufficient evidence of that matter is adduced to raise an issue with respect to it; and

(b) the contrary is not proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

(8) In this section —

“historical re-enactment” means any presentation or other event held for the purpose of re-enacting an event from the past or of illustrating conduct from a particular time or period in the past; insurance” means a contract of insurance or other arrangement made for the purpose of indemnifying a person or persons named in the contract or under the arrangement;

“museum or gallery” —

(a) includes any institution which has as its purpose, or one of its purposes, the preservation, display and interpretation of material of historical, artistic or scientific interest and gives the public access to it; but

(b) does not include an institution that distributes profits.

“permitted activity” means an historical re-enactment or a sporting activity;

“sporting activity” means the practising of a sport which requires the use of a weapon described in subsection (2)(r); third parties” includes participants in, and spectators of, a permitted activity and members of the public.

UK CJ Act 1988 s.141; CJ Act 1988 (Offensive Weapons) Order 1988 (S.I. 1988/2019 as am. by 2002/1668, 2004/1271 and 2008/97)

175. Authorisation in anticipation of violence in an area

(1) If the Chief Police Officer reasonably believes —

(a) that —

(i) incidents involving serious violence may occur in any area of the Falkland Islands;
and

(ii) it is expedient to do so to prevent their occurrence; or

(b) that persons are carrying knives or offensive weapons in any area of the Falkland Islands without good reason, the Chief Police Officer may authorise the powers to stop and search persons and vehicles conferred by section 176 to be exercised in that area for a specified period not exceeding 24 hours.

(2) The authorisation referred to in subsection (1) may be given by an officer of the rank of Inspector or above if the officer reasonably believes that incidents involving serious violence or use of knives or offensive weapons in the area are imminent and the Chief Police Officer is not available.

(3) If it appears to the Chief Police Officer or to the officer who gave the authorisation that it is expedient to do so, having regard to offences which have, or are reasonably suspected to have, been committed in connection with any incident or activity in the area, the officer may extend the authorisation for a further period not exceeding 24 hours.

(4) An authorisation or extension under this section must be in writing signed by the Chief Police Officer or the police officer who gives it, and must specify —

(a) the area in which and the period during which the powers conferred by section 176 are exercisable;

(b) the grounds for the authorisation or extension.

(5) If an officer other than the Chief Police Officer gives an authorisation under subsection (1) or an extension under subsection (3) the officer must as soon as practicable inform the Chief Police Officer.

[UK Knives Act 1997 s.8 incorporating s.60 of the CJ and PO Act 1994 as am by Anti-terrorism, Crime & Security Act 2001]

176. Powers to search for and seize offensive weapons in an area

(1) An authorisation under section 175 in relation to an area of the Falkland Islands confers on any police officer in uniform power in the area and during the period specified in the authorisation —

(a) to stop any pedestrian and search the pedestrian or anything carried by the pedestrian for knives or offensive weapons;

(b) to stop any vehicle and search the vehicle, its driver and any passenger for knives or offensive weapons.

(2) A police officer may, in the exercise of the power in subsection (1), stop any person or vehicle in the area and make any search the officer thinks fit, whether or not he or she has any grounds for suspecting that the person or vehicle is carrying knives or offensive weapons.

(3) If in the course of a search under this section a police officer discovers a knife or an article which the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be an offensive weapon, the officer may seize it.

(4) This section applies (with the necessary modifications) to ships and aircraft as it applies to vehicles.

(5) A person who fails to stop or (as the case may be) to stop a vehicle when required to do so by a police officer in the exercise of the powers under this section commits an offence, for which the maximum penalty on conviction is imprisonment for 1 month.

(6) If —

(a) a vehicle is stopped by a police officer under this section; and

(b) the driver applies in writing within 12 months from the day on which the vehicle was stopped, the Chief Police Officer must give the driver a written statement that the vehicle was stopped under the powers conferred by this section.

(7) If —

(a) a pedestrian is stopped and searched by a police officer under this section; and

(b) the pedestrian applies in writing within 12 months from the day on which he or she was stopped and searched, the Chief Police Officer must give the pedestrian a written statement that he or she was stopped under the powers conferred by this section.

(8) Anything seized by a police officer under subsection (3) may be retained in accordance with Part 3 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Powers of Seizure).

(9) For the purposes of this section, a person carries a knife or an offensive weapon if the person has it in his or her possession.

(10) The powers conferred by this section are in addition to and do not limit any power of stopping, search and seizure otherwise conferred by any other law.

[UK Knives Act 1997 s.8 incorporating s.60 & 60A of the CJ and PO Act 1994 as am. by Anti-terrorism, Crime & Security Act 2001]

PART 8 - EXPLOSIVE SUBSTANCES

177. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“explosive” —

(a) means gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, dynamite, gun-cotton, blasting powders, fulminate of mercury or of other metals, coloured fires, and every other substance, whether similar to those above-mentioned or not, used or manufactured with a view to produce a practical effect by explosion or a pyrotechnic effect; and

(b) includes fog-signals, fireworks, fuses, rockets, percussion caps, detonators, cartridges, ammunition of all descriptions, and every adaptation or preparation of an explosive as above defined;

“explosive substance” includes —

(a) explosives and ingredients for making explosives;

(b) any apparatus, machine, implement, or materials used, or intended to be used, or adapted for causing, or aiding in causing, any explosion in or with any explosive substance;

(c) any part of any such apparatus, machine, or implement;

(2) The Governor may by order declare that any substance which appears to the Governor to be specially dangerous to life or property by reason either of its explosive properties, or of any process in the manufacture of it being liable to explosion, is deemed to be an explosive within the meaning of this Part and the provisions of this Part (subject to any exceptions, limitations, and restrictions specified in the order) then extend to such a substance as if it were included in the term “explosive” in this Part.

[UK Explosives Act 1875 ss.3 and 104; Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.9]

Explosive substances offences

178. Causing grievous harm by explosion

A person who unlawfully and maliciously, by the explosion of any explosive substance, burns, maims, disfigures, disables or does any grievous bodily harm to any person, commits an offence.

[UK OAP Act 1861, s.29]

180. Causing explosion likely to endanger life or property

(1) A person who unlawfully and maliciously causes by any explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to —

(a) endanger life; or

(b) cause serious injury to property,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) It is immaterial for the purposes of subsection (1) whether any injury to person or property is caused or not.

(3) An offence under subsection (1) is triable on indictment only.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.2 am. by CJ Act 1975]

181. Acting or conspiring to cause explosion, or making or keeping explosives with intent

(1) A person who unlawfully and maliciously —

- (a) does any act with intent to cause; or
- (b) conspires to cause,

by an explosive substance an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or cause serious injury to property, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) A person who unlawfully and maliciously makes or has in the person's possession or under the person's control an explosive substance with intent by means of it —

- (a) to endanger life;
- (b) to cause serious injury to property; or
- (c) to enable any other person to endanger life or cause serious injury to property,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(3) It is immaterial for the purposes of subsection (1) or (2) whether —

- (a) any explosion does or does not take place;
- (b) any injury to person or property is caused or not.

(4) An offence under subsection (1) or (2) is triable on indictment only.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.3 am. by CJ Act 1975]

182. Placing explosives with intent

(1) A person who unlawfully and maliciously places or throws in, into, upon, against or near any building, ship, or aircraft any explosive substance, with intent to do any bodily injury to any person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years.

(2) It is immaterial for the purposes of subsection (1) whether —

- (a) any explosion takes place or not;
- (b) any bodily injury is caused or not.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.30]

183. Making explosives for an unlawful purpose

(1) A person ('A') who makes any explosive substance in circumstances that give rise to a reasonable suspicion that A made the substance, or is making it, for an unlawful purpose, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years.

(2) A does not commit an offence under subsection (1) if A can show that A made or is making the explosive substance for a lawful purpose.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.4 adapted]

184. Possession of explosives with intent

A person who has in the person's possession any explosive substance —

(a) with intent by means of the substance to commit an offence under this Ordinance; or

(b) for the purpose of enabling any other person to commit such an offence,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years.

[UK OAP Act 1861 s.64 adapted]

185. Ancillary offences

(1) A person who, by supplying or soliciting for money, providing premises, supplying materials, or in any other manner procures, counsels, aids, abets, or is accessory to, the commission of an offence under this Part commits that offence and is liable to be tried and punished for it as if the person had been a principal.

(2) A person who —

(a) knows that another person has an explosive substance in that person's possession or under that person's control;

(b) knows facts giving rise to a reasonable suspicion that that person did not have the substance in that person's possession or under that person's control for a lawful object; and

(c) was present actively encouraging or in some way helping that person in the commission of the offence, commits the offence of aiding and abetting an offence under section 184 and is liable on conviction to the penalty there specified.

(3) A person may be prosecuted for an offence under this section, or under Part 3 for the offence of aiding and abetting an offence under this Part, but not for both offences arising out of the same facts.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.5 amplified]

186. Explosives found on vessels

(1) If the master or owner of any vessel has reasonable cause to suspect that any explosive substance or other goods of a dangerous nature which, if found, the master would be entitled to throw overboard pursuant to the merchant shipping laws are concealed on board the vessel —

(a) the master may search any part of the vessel for such goods, and for the purpose of such search may, if necessary, break open any box, package, parcel, or receptacle on board the vessel;

(b) if the master finds any such goods they may be dealt with in the manner provided by the merchant shipping laws; and

(c) if the master does not find any such goods, he or she is not subject to any liability, civil or criminal, if it appears to a tribunal before which the question of the master's liability is raised that he or she had reasonable cause to suspect that such goods were so concealed.

(2) In this section, "the merchant shipping laws" means merchant shipping legislation of the United Kingdom that applies to the Falkland Islands by its own force or by Order in Council, or any Ordinance of the Falkland Islands replacing that legislation.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.8]

Offences relating to public safety

187. Offences related to minefields

(1) A person who —

(a) wilfully enters a minefield without lawful authority; or

(b) without lawful authority wilfully causes a mine to explode or attempts so to do; or

(c) without lawful authority wilfully cuts or removes any part of any fence dividing any minefield from any other land; or

(d) without lawful authority removes, damages or obscures any sign or notice warning of the existence of or depicting the boundaries or a boundary of a minefield, or warning of the possibility that mines may be found in the vicinity; or

(e) wilfully drives any animal into a minefield,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), "without lawful authority" means without authority given by or on behalf of the Commander British Forces.

[Crimes Ord. s.12]

188. Possession of unexploded ordnance

(1) A person who knowingly possesses any unexploded ordnance without lawful authority commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section —

“unexploded ordinance” means any grenade, mine, mortar round, rocket or shell containing any explosive substance; and “without lawful authority” has the same meaning as it has under section 187(2).

(3) A person does not commit an offence under subsection (1) if the ordinance in question is upon any land or in any building of which the person is the occupier and the person or a predecessor in occupation has reported the presence of the ordinance to the Royal Engineers Explosive Ordinance Detachment or to the police; but the burden of proof of such report lies upon the person.

[Crimes Ord. s.13]

189. Sale of explosives

A person who —

(a) sells any explosive to any other person under the age of 16 years; or

(b) sells or offers for sale any explosive in any road, street, alleyway, thoroughfare or public place,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

[Crimes Ord. s.14]

190. Casting fireworks, etc.

A person who casts any firework —

(a) in any road, street, alleyway, thoroughfare or public place; or

(b) without the authority of the occupier, into or upon any land or building,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

[Crimes Ord. s.15]

Miscellaneous provisions

191. Procedure and saving

(1) No proceedings for an offence under this Part may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(2) This Part does not exempt any person from any proceeding for an offence punishable at common law, under the UK Explosives Acts 1875 or 1923 as applied to the Falkland Islands, or under any other written law other than this Ordinance, but no person may be punished twice for the same criminal act.

[UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 s.7]

192. Seizure and detention of explosives liable to forfeiture

(1) If a police officer has reasonable cause to believe that any explosive substance found by the officer, whether in the course of a criminal investigation or otherwise, is liable to be forfeited under this Ordinance or the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014, the officer may seize and detain the substance until the Magistrate's Court has decided, on an application by the Attorney General, whether or not it is liable to be forfeited.

(2) An officer who seizes an explosive substance pursuant to subsection (1) may —

(a) require the occupier of the place in which it was seized (whether a building or other place, including a vehicle, vessel or aircraft) to detain it in that place or in any place under the control of the occupier; or

(b) remove it in a manner and to a place that will in the officer's opinion least endanger the public safety, and there detain it and, if it appears necessary for the public safety, and on the written authority of a justice of the peace or a police officer of the rank of Inspector or above, cause it to be destroyed or otherwise rendered harmless.

(3) Before destroying or rendering harmless the explosive substance, the officer must —

(a) take and keep a sample of it; and

(b) if requested, give a portion of the sample to the person who owns the explosive substance, or has it under the person's control at the time of the seizure.

(4) A person who is an occupier of premises or a vehicle, vessel or aircraft and who —

(a) by that person or by others, fails to keep the explosive substance when required pursuant to subsection (2)(a) to detain it; or

(b) except with the authority of the officer who seized it, or in case of emergency for the purpose of preventing explosion or fire, removes, alters, or in any way tampers or deals with it while it is so detained,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(5) A person convicted of an offence under subsection (4) is liable to forfeit all explosive substances which are at the time of the offence in the person's possession or under the person's control at the place to which the offence relates.

(6) Proceedings before the Magistrate's Court to decide whether an explosive substance is liable to forfeiture must be commenced as soon as practicable after the seizure.

(7) A receptacle containing any explosive substance may be seized, detained, and removed in the same way as the contents of it.

(8) A police officer who seizes any explosive substance under this section —

(a) may use for the purposes of the removal and detention of it any vehicle, vessel or aircraft in which it was seized, and any equipment belonging to the vehicle, vessel or aircraft; and

(b) must pay to the owner reasonable compensation for such use, to be determined, in case of dispute, by the Magistrate's Court and recovered as a civil debt of the Government.

(9) The explosive substance must, as far as practicable, be kept and conveyed in accordance with the UK Explosives Act 1875 and regulations made under it, as applied to the Falkland Islands, and with all due care to prevent accident.

(10) A person who seizes, removes, detains, keeps or conveys the substance is not liable to any penalty or forfeiture under this or any other Ordinance, or to any damages, for keeping or conveying it, if the person does so using all due care as mentioned.

(11) A person who seizes an explosive substance, or deals with it pursuant to this section, is not liable for damage caused by the seizure or dealing, or any act incidental to or consequential on it, unless it is proved that the person acted without reasonable cause, or caused the damage by some wilful neglect or default.

[UK Explosives Act 1875 s.74]

193. Forfeiture of subject-matter of offence

(1) If a person is convicted of an offence against this Part, the court may order that the explosive substance in respect of which the offence was committed or any part of that substance be forfeited to the Crown.

(2) A receptacle containing any explosive substance may be forfeited, sold, destroyed, or otherwise disposed of, in the same way as the contents of it.

(3) Any explosive substance or receptacle forfeited pursuant to this Part may be sold, destroyed, or otherwise disposed of in the manner the court declaring the forfeiture directs, and the proceeds of any such sale or disposal must be paid as provided by section 90 of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance.

[UK Explosives Act 1875 s.89]

PART 9 - CRIMINAL DAMAGE

194. Meaning of “property”

(1) For purposes of this Part, “property” means property of a tangible nature, whether real or personal, including money and —

(a) includes wild creatures that have been tamed or are normally kept in captivity, and any other wild creatures or their carcasses if, but only if, they have been reduced into possession which has not been lost or abandoned or are in the course of being reduced into possession; but

(b) does not include mushrooms growing wild on any land, or flowers, fruit or foliage or plants growing wild on any land.

(2) In subsection (1), “mushroom” includes any fungus and “plant” includes any shrub or tree.

(3) Property is to be treated for the purposes of this Part as belonging to any person who —

(a) has the custody or control of it;

(b) has in it any proprietary right or interest (other than an equitable interest arising only from an agreement to transfer or grant an interest); or

(c) has a charge on it.

(4) If property is subject to a trust, the persons to whom it belongs are to be treated as including any person who has a right to enforce the trust.

(5) Property of a corporation sole is to be treated as belonging to the corporation even if there is a vacancy in the corporation.

(6) For the purposes of this Part, a modification of the contents of a computer is not to be regarded as damaging any computer or computer storage medium unless its effect on that computer or storage medium impairs its physical condition.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 s.10 am. by Police & Justice Act 2006]

195. Destroying or damaging property

(1) A person who without lawful excuse destroys or damages any property belonging to another, intending to destroy or damage the property or being reckless as to whether the property would be destroyed or damaged, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years.

(2) A person who without lawful excuse destroys or damages any property, whether belonging to that person or another —

(a) intending to destroy or damage any property or being reckless as to whether any property would be destroyed or damaged; and

(b) intending by the destruction or damage to endanger the life of another, or being reckless as to whether the life of another would be thereby endangered,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(3) In this part, “damage” includes not only permanent or temporary physical harm to property but also permanent or temporary impairment of value or usefulness of the property.

(4) An offence under subsection (2) is triable on indictment only.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss.1 to 3]

196. Arson

(1) A person who commits an offence under section 195(1) by destroying or damaging property by fire commits the offence of arson.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who commits an offence under section 195(2) by destroying or damaging property by fire commits the offence of aggravated arson.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(3) An offence under subsection (2) is triable on indictment only.

(4) The offence of arson at common law is abolished.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss.1 to 3]

197. Threats to destroy or damage property

A person (‘A’) who without lawful excuse makes to another person (‘B’) a threat, intending that (‘B’) would fear it would be carried out —

(a) to destroy or damage any property belonging to B or a third person; or

(b) to destroy or damage A’s own property in a way which A knows is likely to endanger the life of B or a third person,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss.1 to 3]

198. Possessing anything with intent to destroy or damage property

It is an offence for a person (‘A’) to have anything in A’s custody or under A’s control, if A intends without lawful excuse to use it or cause or permit another person (‘B’) to use it —

(a) to destroy or damage any property belonging to some other person ('C'); or

(b) to destroy or damage A's own or B's property in a way which A knows is likely to endanger the life of C or some other person.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss.1 to 3]

199. Lawful excuse

(1) This section applies to —

(a) any offence under section 195; and

(b) any offence under section 197 or 198 except one involving —

(i) a threat by the person charged to destroy or damage property in a way that the person knows is likely to endanger the life of another; or

(ii) an intent by the person charged to use or cause or permit the use of something in that person's custody or under that person's control so to destroy or damage property.

(2) A defendant charged with an offence to which this section applies is, whether or not the person would be treated for the purposes of this Part as having a lawful excuse apart from this subsection, to be treated for those purposes as having a lawful excuse —

(a) if at the time of the act or acts alleged to constitute the offence the defendant believed that the person or persons whom the defendant believed to be entitled to consent to the destruction of or damage to the property in question had so consented, or would have so consented if that person or persons had known of the destruction or damage and its circumstances; or

(b) if the defendant destroyed or damaged or threatened to destroy or damage the property in question or, in the case of a charge of an offence under section 198, intended to use or cause or permit the use of something to destroy or damage it, in order to protect property belonging to the defendant or another, or a right or interest in property which was or which the defendant believed to be vested in the defendant or another, and at the time of the act or acts alleged to constitute the offence the defendant believed that —

(i) the property, right or interest was in immediate need of protection; and

(ii) the means of protection adopted or proposed to be adopted were or would be reasonable having regard to all the circumstances.

(3) For the purposes of this section it is immaterial whether a belief is justified or not if it is honestly held.

(4) For the purposes of subsection (2) a right or interest in property includes any right or privilege in or over land, whether created by grant, licence or otherwise.

(5) This section is not to be construed as casting doubt on any defence recognised by law as a defence to criminal charges.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 s.5]

200. Search for things intended for use in committing offences of criminal damage

(1) If it is made to appear by information on oath before a justice of the peace that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in his or her custody or under his or her control or on his or her premises anything which there is reasonable cause to believe has been used or is intended for use without lawful excuse —

(a) to destroy or damage property belonging to another; or

(b) to destroy or damage any property in a way likely to endanger the life of another, the justice may grant a warrant authorising any police officer to search for and seize that thing.

(2) A police officer who is authorised under this section to search premises for anything, may enter (if need be by force) and search the premises accordingly and may seize anything which the officer believes to have been used or to be intended to be used as aforesaid.

(3) Sections 621 to 623 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (disposal of property in the possession of the police) apply to property which has come into the possession of the police under this section as it applies to property which has come into the possession of the police in the circumstances mentioned in those sections.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 s.6]

201. Evidence in connection with offences under this Part

(1) A person is not to be excused from —

(a) answering any question put to the person in proceedings for the recovery or administration of any property, for the execution of any trust or for an account of any property or dealings with property; or

(b) complying with any order made in any such proceedings, on the ground that do so may incriminate the person or the person's spouse of an offence under this Part.

(2) No statement or admission made by a person in answering a question put or complying with an order made pursuant to subsection (1) is, in proceedings for an offence under this Part, admissible in evidence against the person or (unless they married or became partners after the making of the statement or admission) against the person's spouse or partner.

[UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 s.9]

PART 10 – SEXUAL OFFENCES

202. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“care worker” has the meaning given to it by section 243;

“consent” has the meaning given to it by sections 292 to 294;

“image” means a moving or still image and includes an image produced by any means and, if the context permits, a three-dimensional image;

“indecent” in relation to an act or thing means an act or thing that right-thinking people will consider an affront to sexual modesty when applying the objective test of the recognised standards of propriety pertaining in the Falkland Islands at the time;

“mental disorder” has the meaning given by section 4 of the Mental Health Ordinance;

“penetration” is a continuing act from entry to withdrawal;

“touching” includes touching —

- (a) with any part of the body;
- (b) with anything else;

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.1 to 14]

215. Child sex offences committed by youths

A person who is a youth commits an offence if the person does anything which would be an offence under any of sections 211 to 214 if the person were an adult.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.1 to 14]

216. Arranging or facilitating commission of a child sex offence

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally arranges or facilitates something that A intends to do, intends another person to do, or believes that another person will do, in any part of the world; and

(b) doing it will involve the commission of an offence under any of sections 211 to 215.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') does not commit an offence under this section if —

(a) A arranges or facilitates something that A believes another person will do, but that A does not intend to do or intend another person to do; and

(b) any offence within subsection (1)(b) would be an offence against a child for whose protection A acts.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2), a person acts for the protection of a child if the person acts for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the child from sexually transmitted infection;

(b) protecting the physical safety of the child;

(c) preventing the child from becoming pregnant; or

(d) promoting the child's emotional well-being by the giving of advice, and not for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification or for the purpose of causing or encouraging the activity constituting the offence within subsection (1)(b) or the child's participation in it.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.1 to 14]

217. Meeting a child following sexual grooming etc.

(ii) A travels with the intention of meeting B in any part of the world, or arranges to meet B in any part of the world; or

(iii) B travels with the intention of meeting A in any part of the world;

(b) A intends to do anything to or in respect of B, during or after the meeting and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission by A of a relevant offence;

(c) B is under 16; and

(d) A does not reasonably believe that B is 16 or over.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In subsection (1) —

(a) the reference to A having met or communicated with B is a reference to A having met B in any part of the world or having communicated with B by any means from, to or in any part of the world;

(b) “relevant offence” means —

(i) an offence under this Part; or

(ii) anything done in a place outside the Falkland Islands which is not an offence in that place but would be an offence under this Part if done in the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.15 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

Abuse of position of trust

218. Abuse of position of trust: Sexual activity with a child

(1) A person aged 18 or over (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally touches another person (‘B’);

(b) the touching is sexual;

(c) A is in a position of trust in relation to B;

(d) if subsection (2) applies - A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which A is in a position of trust in relation to B; and

(e) either —

(i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This subsection applies if A —

- (a) is in a position of trust in relation to B by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and
- (b) is not in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances.

(3) If in proceedings for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that that person was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant reasonably believed it.

(4) If in proceedings for an offence under this section —

- (a) it is proved that the defendant was in a position of trust in relation to the other person by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and
- (b) it is not proved that the defendant was in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances, it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he or she was in such a position of trust, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he or she knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of those circumstances.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.16 to 19]

219. Abuse of position of trust: Causing or encouraging a child to engage in sexual activity

(1) A person aged 18 or over ('A') commits an offence if —

- (a) A intentionally causes or encourages another person ('B') to engage in an activity;
- (b) the activity is sexual;
- (c) A is in a position of trust in relation to B;
- (d) if subsection (2) applies - A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which A is in a position of trust in relation to B; and
- (e) either —
 - (i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or
 - (ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This subsection applies if A —

(a) is in a position of trust in relation to B by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and

(b) is not in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances.

(3) If in proceedings for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that that person was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant reasonably believed it.

(4) If in proceedings for an offence under this section —

(a) it is proved that the defendant was in a position of trust in relation to the other person by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he or she was in such a position of trust, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he or she knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of those circumstances.

(b) it is not proved that the defendant was in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances,

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.16 to 19]

220. Abuse of position of trust: Sexual activity in the presence of a child

(1) A person aged 18 or over ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally engages in an activity;

(b) the activity is sexual;

(c) for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, A engages in it—

(i) when another person ('B') is present or is in a place from which A can be observed; and

(ii) knowing or believing that B is aware, or intending that B should be aware, that A is engaging in it;

(d) A is in a position of trust in relation to B;

(e) if subsection (2) applies - A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which A is in a position of trust in relation to B; and

(f) either —

(i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This subsection applies if A is —

(a) in a position of trust in relation to B by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and

(b) not in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances.

(3) If in proceedings for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that that person was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant reasonably believed it.

(4) If in proceedings for an offence under this section —

(a) it is proved that the defendant was in a position of trust in relation to the other person by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he or she was in such a position of trust, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he or she knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of those circumstances.

(b) it is not proved that the defendant was in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances,

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.16 to 19]

221. Abuse of position of trust: Causing a child to watch a sexual act

(1) A person aged 18 or over ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, A intentionally causes another person ('B') to watch a third person engaging in an activity, or to look at an image of any person engaging in an activity;

(b) the activity is sexual;

(c) A is in a position of trust in relation to B;

(d) if subsection (2) applies, A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which A is in a position of trust in relation to B; and

(e) either —

(i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This subsection applies if A —

(a) is in a position of trust in relation to B by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and

(b) is not in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances.

(3) If in proceedings for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that that person was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant reasonably believed it.

(4) If in proceedings for an offence under this section —

(a) it is proved that the defendant was in a position of trust in relation to the other person by virtue of circumstances within section 222; and it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he or she was in such a position of trust, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he or she knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of those circumstances.

(b) it is not proved that the defendant was in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances,

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.16 to 19]

222. Positions of trust

(1) For the purposes of sections 218 to 221, a person ('A') is in a position of trust in relation to another person ('B') if —

(a) A has attained the age of 18 years and B has not; and

(b) A holds any position mentioned in subsection (2); or

(c) the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, by order declares a position held by A to be a position of trust for those purposes.

(2) The positions which are positions of trust are —

(a) A is a probation officer appointed to supervise B under the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 and in that capacity has regular unsupervised access to the child as a requirement of a court order made in criminal proceedings;

(b) A is a guardian for the child, appointed under the Children Ordinance 2014 or any other enactment relating to adoption, family proceedings or otherwise;

(c) A looks after persons under 18 who are detained in an institution by virtue of a court order, or under an enactment, and B is so detained in that institution;

(d) A looks after persons under 18 who are resident in a community home or other place in which accommodation and maintenance are provided under the Children Ordinance 2014 or any other enactment and B is resident, and is so provided with accommodation and maintenance or accommodation, in that place;

(e) A looks after persons under 18 who are accommodated and cared for in a hospital, a nursing home, an independent clinic, a care home or a private hospital, and B is accommodated and cared for in that institution;

(f) A looks after persons under 18 who are receiving education at an educational institution and B is receiving, and A is not receiving, education at that institution;

(g) A is engaged in the provision of services under, or pursuant to anything done under the Education Ordinance and, in that capacity, looks after B on an individual basis;

(h) A regularly has unsupervised contact with B (whether face to face or by any other means) in the exercise of functions of the Crown;

(i) A, as a person who is to report to the court under the Children Ordinance 2014 or any other enactment on matters relating to the welfare of B, regularly has unsupervised contact with B (whether face to face or by any other means);

(j) B is subject to requirements imposed by or under an enactment on his or her release from detention for a criminal offence, or is subject to requirements imposed by a court order made in criminal proceedings, and A looks after B on an individual basis pursuant to those requirements;

(k) B is subject to a care order or a supervision order under the Children Ordinance 2014 or any other enactment and A looks after B on an individual basis in the exercise of functions conferred on A by the order.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.21 am. by Children Act 2004 and adapted]

223. Positions of trust: Interpretation

(1) The following provisions apply for the purposes of section 222.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), a person ('A') looks after persons under 18 if A is regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of such persons.

(3) A person ('A') looks after another person ('B') on an individual basis if —

(a) A is regularly involved in caring for, training or supervising B; and

(b) in the course of A's involvement, A regularly has unsupervised contact with B (whether face to face or by any other means).

(4) A person receives education at an educational institution who —

(a) is registered or otherwise enrolled as a pupil or student at the institution; or

(b) receives education at the institution under arrangements with another educational institution at which the person is so registered or otherwise enrolled.

(5) In section 222 —

“care home” means an establishment which provides accommodation, together with nursing or personal care for persons who —

(a) are or have been ill;

(b) have or have had a mental disorder;

(c) are disabled or infirm; or

(d) are or have been dependent on alcohol or drugs,

but an establishment is not a care home if it is a school, a hospital, an independent clinic or a children's home or the child's family home;

“children's home” means an establishment which provides care and accommodation wholly or mainly for children, other than a school, hospital or care home or the child's family home;

“community home” means a home provided by the Crown —

(a) for the care and accommodation of children looked after by the Crown; or

(b) for purposes connected with the welfare of children, (whether or not looked after by the Crown);

“hospital” means the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital Stanley and any other establishment the main purpose of which is provide medical or psychiatric treatment for illness or mental illness or palliative care;

“independent clinic” means an establishment, other than a hospital, in which services are provided by a medical practitioner (whether or not any services are also provided for the purposes of the establishment elsewhere).

224. Sections 218 to 221: Exception for spouses or civil partners

(1) Conduct by a person ('A') which would otherwise be an offence under any of sections 218 to 221 against another person ('B') is not an offence under that section if at the time —

(a) B is 16 or over; and

(b) A and B are lawfully married or are civil partners of each other.

(2) In proceedings for such an offence it is for the defendant to prove that A and B were at the time lawfully married or were civil partners of each other.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.22 to26]

225. Sections 218 to 221: Sexual relationships which pre-date position of trust

(1) Conduct by a person ('A') which would otherwise be an offence under any of sections 218 to 221 against another person ('B') is not an offence under that section if, immediately before the position of trust arose, a sexual relationship existed between A and B.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply if at that time sexual intercourse between A and B would have been unlawful.

(3) In proceedings for an offence under any of sections 218 to 221 it is for the defendant to prove that such a relationship existed at that time.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.22 to26]

Familial child sex offences

226. Sexual activity with a child family member

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally touches another person ('B');

(b) the touching is sexual;

(c) the relation of A to B is within section 228;

(d) A knows or could reasonably be expected to know that A's relation to B is of a description falling within that section; and

(e) either —

(i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (4) or (5).

(2) If in proceedings against a person ('A') for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person ('B') was under 18, A is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that B was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether A reasonably believed it.

(3) If in proceedings against a person ('A') for an offence under this section it is proved that the relation of A to the other person ('B') was of a description falling within section 228, it is to be taken that A knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that A's relation to B was of that description, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether A knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that it was.

(4) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section, if the defendant is aged 18 or over at the time of the offence and subsection (6) applies, is imprisonment for 14 years.

(5) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section if the defendant is under 18 at the time of the offence, or if subsection (6) does not apply, is imprisonment for 5 years.

(6) This subsection applies if the touching involved —

(a) penetration of B's anus or vagina with a part of A's body or anything else;

(b) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis;

(c) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body; or

(d) penetration of A's mouth with B's penis.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.22 to 26]

227. Encouraging a child family member to engage in sexual activity

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally encourages another person ('B') to touch, or allow himself or herself to be touched by, A;

(b) the touching is sexual;

(c) the relation of A to B is within section 228;

(d) A knows or could reasonably be expected to know that A's relation to B is of a description falling within that section; and

(e) either —

(i) B is under 18 and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (4) or (5).

(2) If in proceedings against a person ('A') for an offence under this section it is proved that the other person ('B') was under 18, A is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that B was 18 or over, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether A reasonably believed it.

(3) If in proceedings against a person ('A') for an offence under this section it is proved that the relation of A to the other person ('B') was of a description falling within section 228, it is to be taken that A knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that A's relation to B was of that description, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether A knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that it was.

(4) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section, if the defendant is aged 18 or over at the time of the offence and subsection (6) applies, is imprisonment for 14 years.

(5) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section if the defendant is under 18 at the time of the offence, or if subsection (6) does not apply, is imprisonment for 5 years.

(6) This subsection applies if the touching to which the encouragement related involved —

(a) penetration of B's anus or vagina with a part of A's body or anything else;

(b) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis;

(c) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body; or

(d) penetration of A's mouth with B's penis.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.22 to26]

228. Family relationships

(1) The relation of one person ('A') to another ('B') is within this section if it is within any of subsections (2) to (4).

(2) The relation of A to B is within this subsection if —

(a) one of them is the other's parent, grandparent, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, aunt or uncle, including by adoption; or

(b) A is or has been B's foster parent or guardian.

(3) The relation of A to B is within this subsection if A and B live or have lived in the same household, or A is or has been regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of B, and —

- (a) one of them is or has been the other's step-parent;
- (b) A and B are cousins;
- (c) one of them is or has been the other's stepbrother or stepsister; or
- (d) the parent or present or former foster parent or guardian of one of them is or has been the other's foster parent or guardian.

(4) The relation of A to B is within this subsection if —

- (a) A and B live in the same household; and
- (b) A is regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of B.

(5) For the purposes of this section —

- (a) “aunt” means the sister or half-sister of a person's parent, and “uncle” has a corresponding meaning;
- (b) “cousin” means the child of an aunt or uncle;
- (c) a person is a child's foster parent if the person fosters the child under arrangements made with the person by the Crown or fosters the child privately;
- (d) a person is a child's guardian if he or she has been appointed guardian of the child under the Children Ordinance 2014;
- (e) “step-parent” includes a parent's partner; and “stepbrother” and “stepsister” includes the child of a parent's partner;
- (f) “partner” means either one of 2 people who live together in an enduring family relationship that is not marriage or a civil partnership.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.30 to 44]

243. Care workers: Interpretation

(1) For the purposes of sections 239 to 242, a person ('A') is involved in the care of another person ('B') in a way that falls within this section if any of subsections (2) to (4) applies.

(2) This subsection applies if —

(a) B is accommodated and cared for in a care home, community home, children's home or voluntary home; and

(b) A has functions to perform in the home in the course of employment which have brought A, or are likely to bring A, into regular face to face contact with B.

(3) This subsection applies if B is a patient for whom services are provided by the Crown or in an independent hospital or independent clinic, and A has functions to perform for the Crown or hospital in the course of employment which have brought A or are likely to bring A into regular face to face contact with B.

(4) This subsection applies if A —

(a) is, whether or not in the course of employment, a provider of care, assistance or services to B in connection with B's mental disorder; and

(b) as such, has had or is likely to have regular face to face contact with B.

(5) In this section —

“care home”, “children's home”, “community home”, “hospital” and “independent clinic” each have the meanings given those terms by section 223(5);

“employment” means any employment, whether paid or unpaid and whether under a contract of service or apprenticeship or under a contract for services or otherwise than under a contract and includes service under the Crown;

“independent hospital” means a hospital which is not a hospital operated by the Crown;

“voluntary home” means a children's home which is operated by a voluntary organisation which is not a community home.

244. Sections 239 to 242: Exception for spouses and civil partners

(1) Conduct by a person ('A') which would otherwise be an offence under any of sections 239 to 242 against another person ('B') is not an offence under that section if at the time —

(a) B is 16 or over; and

(b) A and B are lawfully married or are civil partners of each other.

(2) In proceedings for such an offence it is for the defendant to prove that A and B were at the time lawfully married or were civil partners of each other.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.30 to 44]

245. Sections 239 to 242: Sexual relationships which pre-date care relationships

(1) Conduct by a person ('A') which would otherwise be an offence under any of sections 239 to 242 against another person ('B') is not an offence under that section if, immediately before A became involved in B's care in a way that falls within section 243, a sexual relationship existed between A and B.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply if at that time sexual intercourse between A and B would have been unlawful.

(3) In proceedings for an offence under any of sections 239 to 242, it is for the defendant to prove that such a relationship existed at that time.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.30 to 44]

Indecent photographs of youths

246. Possession of indecent photograph of a youth

(1) Subject to section 248, it is an offence for a person to have any indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a youth in the person's possession.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person is charged with an offence under subsection (1), it is a defence for the person to prove that —

(a) he or she had a legitimate reason for having the photograph or pseudo-photograph in his or her possession;

(b) he or she had not seen the photograph or pseudo-photograph and did not know, nor had any cause to suspect, it to be indecent; or

(c) the photograph or pseudo-photograph was sent to him or her without any prior request made by him or her or on his or her behalf and that he or she did not keep it for an unreasonable time.

[UK CJ Act 1988 s.160 am. by Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994]

247. Taking and publishing indecent photographs of youths

(1) Subject to section 248, it is an offence for a person ('A') —

(a) to take or permit to be taken, or to make, any indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a youth;

(b) to distribute or show such indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs;

(c) to have in A's possession such indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs, with a view to their being distributed or shown by A or others; or

(d) to publish or cause to be published any advertisement likely to be understood as conveying that the advertiser distributes or shows such indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs, or intends to do so.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years, or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1)(b), a person ('A') is to be regarded as distributing an indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph if A parts with possession of it to, or exposes or offers it for acquisition by, another person.

(3) If a person ('A') is charged with an offence under subsection (1)(b) or (c), it is a defence for A to prove that —

(a) A had a legitimate reason for distributing or showing the photographs or pseudo-photographs or (as the case may be) having them in his or her possession; or

(b) A had not seen the photographs or pseudo-photographs and did not know, nor had any cause to suspect, them to be indecent.

[UK Protection of Children Act 1978 s.1 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

248. Marriage or similar relationship

(1) This section applies if, in proceedings for an offence under section 246(1) relating to an indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a youth, the defendant ('A') proves that the photograph or pseudo-photograph was of the youth aged 16 or over, and that at the time of the offence charged the youth and A —

(a) were married or civil partners of each other; or

(b) lived together as partners in an enduring family relationship.

(2) This section also applies if, in proceedings for an offence under section 247(1) relating to an indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a youth, the defendant proves that the photograph or pseudo-photograph was of the youth aged 16 or over, and that at the time when A obtained it the youth and A —

(a) were married or civil partners of each other; or

(b) lived together as partners in an enduring family relationship.

(3) This section applies whether the photograph shows the youth alone or with the defendant, but not if it shows any other person.

(4) If sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether —

(a) the youth consented to the photograph or pseudo-photograph being taken or made, distributed, or in the defendant's possession, as the case may be; or

(b) the defendant reasonably believed that the youth so consented, the defendant is not guilty of the offence unless it is proved that the youth did not so consent and that the defendant did not reasonably believe that the youth so consented.

(5) In the case of an offence under section 247(1)(b), the defendant is not guilty of the offence unless it is proved that the distributing or showing was to a person other than the youth.

(6) In the case of an offence under section 247(1)(c), if sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue both as to whether —

(a) the youth consented to the photograph being in the possession of the defendant ('A'), or as to whether A reasonably believed that the youth so consented; and

(b) A had the photograph in A's possession with a view to its being distributed or shown to anyone other than the youth, the defendant is not guilty of the offence unless it is proved either that —

(i) the youth did not so consent and that A did not reasonably believe that the youth so consented; or

(ii) A had the photograph in A's possession with a view to its being distributed or shown to a person other than the youth.

[UK CJ Act 1988 s.160A; UK Protection of Children Act 1978 s.1A ins. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

249. Exception for criminal proceedings, investigations etc.

(1) In proceedings for an offence under section 247(1)(a) of making an indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a youth, the defendant ('A') is not guilty of the offence if A proves that it was necessary for A to make the photograph or pseudo-photograph for the purposes of the prevention, detection or investigation of crime, or for the purposes of criminal proceedings, in any part of the world.

(2) No proceedings for an offence under section 246 or 247 may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Protection of Children Act 1978 s.1B ins. by Sexual Offences Act 2003 and adapted]

250. Entry, search and seizure – Schedule 1

(1) The following subsections apply if a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath, laid by or on behalf of the Attorney General or by a police officer, that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that, in any premises, there is an indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a child.

(2) The justice of the peace may issue a warrant under his or her hand authorising any police officer to enter (if need be by force) and search the premises, and to seize and remove any articles which the officer believes (with reasonable cause) to be or include indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs of children.

(3) Articles seized under the authority of the warrant, and not returned to the occupier of the premises, must be disposed of in accordance with Schedule 1.

(4) This section and Schedule 1 apply in relation to any stall, vehicle or vessel, as they apply in relation to premises, with the necessary modifications of references to premises and the substitution of references to use for references to occupation.

[UK Protection of Children Act 1978 s.4 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

251. Indecent photographs: Interpretation

(1) The following subsections apply for the interpretation of sections 246 and 247 and Schedule 1.

(2) References to an indecent photograph include an indecent film, a copy of an indecent photograph or film, and an indecent photograph comprised in a film.

(3) Photographs (including those comprised in a film), if they show youths and are indecent, are to be treated for all purposes of this Part as indecent photographs of youths and similarly in respect of pseudo-photographs.

(4) References to a photograph include —

(a) the negative as well as the positive version; and

(b) data stored on a computer disc or by other electronic means which is capable of conversion into a photograph.

(5) “Film” includes any form of video-recording.

(6) A person is to be taken as having been a youth at any material time if it appears from the evidence as a whole that he or she was then under the age of 18.

(7) “Pseudo-photograph” means an image, whether made by computer-graphics or otherwise howsoever, which appears to be a photograph.

(8) If the impression conveyed by a pseudo-photograph is that the person shown is a youth, the pseudo-photograph is to be treated for all purposes of this Ordinance as showing a youth and a pseudo-photograph is to be similarly treated if the predominant impression conveyed is that the person shown is a youth, even if some of the physical characteristics shown are those of an adult.

(9) References to an indecent pseudo-photograph include —

(a) a copy of an indecent pseudo-photograph; and

(b) data stored on a computer disc or by other electronic means which is capable of conversion into a pseudo-photograph.

[UK Protection of Children Act 1978 ss.2 and 7 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

Prohibited images of youths

252. Possession of prohibited images of youths

(1) It is an offence for a person to be in possession of a prohibited image of a youth.
Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A prohibited image is an image which —

(a) is pornographic;

(b) falls within subsection (6); and

(c) is grossly offensive, disgusting or otherwise of an obscene character.

(3) An image is “pornographic” if it is of such a nature that it must reasonably be assumed to have been produced solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal.

(4) Where (as found in the person’s possession) an image forms part of a series of images, the question whether the image is of such a nature as is mentioned in subsection (3) is to be determined by reference to —

(a) the image itself; and

(b) (if the series of images is such as to be capable of providing a context for the image) the context in which it occurs in the series of images.

(5) So, for example, if —

(a) an image forms an integral part of a narrative constituted by a series of images; and

(b) having regard to those images as a whole, they are not of such a nature that they must reasonably be assumed to have been produced solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal, the image may, by virtue of being part of that narrative, be found not to be pornographic, even though it might have been found to be pornographic if taken by itself.

(6) An image falls within this subsection if it —

(a) is an image which focuses solely or principally on a youth’s genitals or anal region; or

(b) portrays any of the acts mentioned in subsection (7).

(7) Those acts are —

(a) the performance by a person of an act of intercourse or oral sex with or in the presence of a youth;

(b) an act of masturbation by, of, involving or in the presence of a youth;

(c) an act which involves penetration of the vagina or anus of a youth with a part of a person’s body or with anything else;

(d) an act of penetration, in the presence of a youth, of the vagina or anus of a person with a part of a person’s body or with anything else;

(e) the performance by a youth of an act of intercourse or oral sex with an animal (whether dead or alive or imaginary);

(f) the performance by a person of an act of intercourse or oral sex with an animal (whether dead or alive or imaginary) in the presence of a youth.

(8) For the purposes of subsection (6), penetration is a continuing act from entry to withdrawal.

(9) No proceedings for an offence under subsection (1) may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Coroners & Justice Act 2009 ss.62 and 66]

253. Exclusion of classified works

(1) Section 252(1) does not apply to excluded images.

(2) An “excluded image” is an image which forms part of a series of images contained in a recording of the whole or part of a classified work.

(3) But such an image is not an “excluded image” if —

(a) it is contained in a recording of an extract from a classified work; and

(b) it is of such a nature that it must reasonably be assumed to have been extracted (whether with or without other images) solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal.

(4) If an extracted image is one of a series of images contained in the recording, the question whether the image is of such a nature as is mentioned in subsection (3)(b) is to be determined by reference to —

(a) the image itself; and

(b) (if the series of images is such as to be capable of providing a context for the image) the context in which it occurs in the series of images.

(5) In determining for the purposes of this section whether a recording is a recording of the whole or part of a classified work, any alteration attributable to —

(a) a defect caused for technical reasons or by inadvertence on the part of any person; or

(b) the inclusion in the recording of any extraneous material (such as advertisements), is to be disregarded.

(6) In this section —

“classified” in relation to a work means classified by the British Board of Film Censors or an equivalent authority in another jurisdiction as suitable for general viewing and unrestricted supply, with or without advice as to the desirability of parental guidance with regard to the viewing of the work by young children or as to its suitability for such viewing;

“extract” includes an extract consisting of a single image;

“pornographic” has the same meaning as in section 252;

“recording” means any disc, tape or other device capable of storing data electronically and from which images may be produced (by any means).

[UK Coroners & Justice Act 2009 s.63]

254. Defences

(1) If a person is charged with an offence under section 252(1), it is a defence for the person to prove that —

(a) the person had a legitimate reason for being in possession of the image concerned;

(b) the person had not seen the image concerned and did not know, nor had any cause to suspect, it to be a prohibited image of a child; or

(c) the person —

(i) was sent the image concerned without any prior request having been made by or on behalf of the person; and

(ii) did not keep it for an unreasonable time.

(2) In this section, “prohibited image” of a youth has the meaning given that term by section 252(2).

[UK Coroners & Justice Act 2009 s.64]

255. Sections 252 to 254: Supplementary

(1) For the purposes of sections 252 to 254, “image” includes —

(a) a moving or still image (produced by any means); and

(b) data (stored by any means) which is capable of conversion into an image within paragraph (a), but does not include an indecent photograph, or indecent pseudo-photograph, of a youth.

(2) If an image shows a person, the image is to be treated as an image of a youth if —

(a) the impression conveyed by the image is that the person shown is a youth; or

(b) the predominant impression conveyed is that the person shown is a youth, even if some of the physical characteristics shown are not those of a youth.

(3) References to an image of a person include references to an image of an imaginary person.

- (4) References to an image of a youth include references to an image of an imaginary youth.
- (5) The provisions of section 250 and Schedule 1 apply in relation to prohibited images of youths as they apply in relation to indecent photographs of youths.
- (6) In this section —

“prohibited image” of a youth has the meaning given that term by section 252;

“prohibited photograph” and “prohibited pseudo-photograph” mean indecent photograph and indecent pseudo-photograph as in sections 246 and 247.

[UK Coroners & Justice Act 2009 ss.65 and 67]

Extreme pornographic images

256. Possession of extreme pornographic images

- (1) It is an offence for a person to be in possession of an extreme pornographic image.
Penalty: (i) If the offence relates to an image that portrays an act within subsection (7)(a) or (b) - imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.
(ii) In any other case – imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.
- (2) An “extreme pornographic image” is an image which is both —
- (a) pornographic, and
 - (b) an extreme image.
- (3) An image is “pornographic” if it is of such a nature that it must reasonably be assumed to have been produced solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal.
- (4) If (as found in the person’s possession) an image forms part of a series of images, the question whether the image is of such a nature as is mentioned in subsection (3) is to be determined by reference to —
- (a) the image itself; and
 - (b) (if the series of images is such as to be capable of providing a context for the image) the context in which it occurs in the series of images.
- (5) So, for example, if —
- (a) an image forms an integral part of a narrative constituted by a series of images; and

(b) having regard to those images as a whole, they are not of such a nature that they must reasonably be assumed to have been produced solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal, the image may, by virtue of being part of that narrative, be found not to be pornographic, even though it might have been found to be pornographic if taken by itself.

(6) An “extreme image” is an image which —

(a) falls within subsection (7); and

(b) is grossly offensive, disgusting or otherwise of an obscene character.

(7) An image falls within this subsection if it portrays, in an explicit and realistic way, any of the following —

(a) an act which threatens a person's life;

(b) an act which results, or is likely to result, in serious injury to a person's anus, breasts or genitals;

(c) an act which involves sexual interference with a human corpse; or

(d) a person performing an act of intercourse or oral sex with an animal (whether dead or alive), and a reasonable person looking at the image would think that any such person or animal was real.

(8) In this section “image” means —

(a) a moving or still image (produced by any means); or

(b) data (stored by any means) which is capable of conversion into an image within paragraph (a).

(9) In this section references to a part of the body include references to a part surgically constructed (in particular through gender reassignment surgery).

(10) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 1998 ss.63 and 67]

257. Exclusion of classified works

(1) Section 256 does not apply to excluded images.

(2) An “excluded image” is an image which forms part of a series of images contained in a recording of the whole or part of a classified work.

(3) But such an image is not an “excluded image” if —

(a) it is contained in a recording of an extract from a classified work; and

(b) it is of such a nature that it must reasonably be assumed to have been extracted (whether with or without other images) solely or principally for the purpose of sexual arousal.

(4) If an extracted image is one of a series of images contained in the recording, the question whether the image is of such a nature as is mentioned in subsection (3)(b) is to be determined by reference to —

(a) the image itself; and

(b) (if the series of images is such as to be capable of providing a context for the image) the context in which it occurs in the series of images, and section 256(5) applies in connection with determining that question as it applies in connection with determining whether an image is pornographic.

(5) In determining for the purposes of this section whether a recording is a recording of the whole or part of a classified work, any alteration attributable to —

(a) a defect caused for technical reasons or by inadvertence on the part of any person; or

(b) the inclusion in the recording of any extraneous material (such as advertisements), is to be disregarded.

(6) In this section —

“classified” has the same meaning as in section 253(6);

“extract” includes an extract consisting of a single image;

“image” and “pornographic” have the same meanings as in section 256;

“recording” means any disc, tape or other device capable of storing data electronically and from which images may be produced (by any means).

[UK Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 1998 s.64]

258. Defences

(1) If a person is charged with an offence under section 256, it is a defence for the person to prove that the person —

(a) had a legitimate reason for being in possession of the image concerned;

(b) had not seen the image concerned and did not know, nor had any cause to suspect, it to be an extreme pornographic image;

(c) was sent the image concerned without any prior request having been made by or on behalf of the person and did not keep it for an unreasonable time.

(2) If —

(a) a person (“D”) is charged with an offence under section 256; and

(b) the offence relates to an image that portrays an act or acts within paragraphs (a) to (c) (but not paragraph (d)) of subsection (7) of that section, subsection (3) below applies.

(3) In the circumstances mentioned in subsection (2), it is a defence for D to prove —

(a) that D directly participated in the act or any of the acts portrayed; and

(b) that the act or acts did not involve the infliction of any non-consensual harm on any person; and

(c) if the image portrays an act within section 256(7)(c), that what is portrayed as a human corpse was not in fact a corpse.

(4) For the purposes of this section harm inflicted on a person is “non-consensual” harm if —

(a) the harm is of such a nature that the person cannot, in law, consent to it being inflicted on himself or herself; or

(b) the person can, in law, consent to it being so inflicted, but does not in fact consent to it being so inflicted.

[UK Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 1998 ss.65 and 66]

Abuse of children through prostitution and pornography

259. Paying for sexual services of a child

(1) A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally obtains for A, or for any other person, the sexual services of another person (‘B’);

(b) before obtaining those services, A has made or promised payment for those services to B or a third person, or knows that another person has made or promised such a payment; and

(c) either —

- (i) B is under 18, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or
- (ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3), (4) or (5).

(2) In this section, “payment” means any financial advantage, including the discharge of an obligation to pay or the provision of goods or services (including sexual services) gratuitously or at a discount.

(3) The maximum penalty on a conviction for an offence under this section against a person under 13 is —

- (a) if subsection (6) applies - imprisonment for life;
- (b) in any other case - imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(4) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section against a person under 16, but not under 13, is —

- (a) if subsection (6) applies - imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both;
- (b) in any other case - imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(5) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section against a person under 18, but not under 16, is imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(6) This subsection applies if the offence involved —

- (a) penetration of B’s anus or vagina with a part of A’s body or anything else;
- (b) penetration of B’s mouth with A’s penis;
- (c) penetration of A’s anus or vagina with a part of B’s body or by B with anything else; or
- (d) penetration of A’s mouth with B’s penis.

(7) An offence under subsection (1) for which the maximum penalty is imprisonment for life is triable on indictment only.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.47 adapted]

260. Causing or encouraging child prostitution or pornography

A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

- (a) A intentionally causes or encourages another person (‘B’) to become a prostitute, or to be involved in pornography, in any part of the world; and

(b) either —

(i) B is under 18, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

261. Controlling a child prostitute or a child involved in pornography

A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally controls any of the activities of another person ('B') relating to B's prostitution or involvement in pornography in any part of the world, and

(b) either —

(i) B is under 18, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over, or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

262. Arranging or facilitating child prostitution or pornography

A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally arranges or facilitates the prostitution or involvement in pornography in any part of the world of another person ('B'); and

(b) either —

(i) B is under 18, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over; or

(ii) B is under 13.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

263. Sections 259 to 262: Interpretation

(1) For the purposes of sections 259 to 262, a person is involved in pornography if an indecent image of that person is recorded; and "pornography" and similar expressions are to be interpreted accordingly.

(2) In those sections "prostitute" means a person ('A') who, on at least one occasion and whether or not compelled to do so, offers or provides sexual services to another person in return for payment or a promise of payment to A or a third person; and "prostitution" is to be interpreted accordingly.

(3) In subsection (2), “payment” means any financial advantage, including the discharge of an obligation to pay or the provision of goods or services (including sexual services) gratuitously or at a discount.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

Exploitation of prostitution

264. Causing or encouraging prostitution for gain

A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally causes or encourages another person to become a prostitute in any part of the world; and

(b) A does so for or in the expectation of gain for A or a third person.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

265. Controlling prostitution for gain

A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally controls any of the activities of another person (‘B’) relating to B’s prostitution in any part of the world; and

(b) A does so for or in the expectation of gain for A or a third person.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.48 to 53]

266. Paying for sexual services of a prostitute subjected to force, etc.

(1) A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A makes or promises payment for the sexual services of a prostitute (‘B’);

(b) a third person (‘C’) has engaged in exploitative conduct of a kind likely to induce or encourage B to provide the sexual services for which A has made or promised payment; and

(c) C engaged in that conduct for or in the expectation of gain for C or another person (apart from A or B).

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) In relation to an offence under subsection (1), the following are irrelevant —

(a) where in the world the sexual services are to be provided;

(b) whether those services are provided; and

(c) whether A is, or ought to be, aware that C has engaged in exploitative conduct.

(3) C engages in exploitative conduct if —

(a) C uses force, threats (whether or not relating to violence) or any other form of coercion; or

(b) C practises any form of deception.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.53A ins. by Policing and Crime Act 2009]

267. Loitering or soliciting for purposes of prostitution

(1) It is an offence for a person persistently to loiter or solicit in a street or public place for the purpose of prostitution.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3).

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1) —

(a) conduct is persistent if it takes place on 2 or more occasions in any period of 3 months;

(b) a reference to a person loitering or soliciting for the purposes of prostitution is a reference to a person loitering or soliciting for the purposes of offering services as a prostitute.

(3) A person who commits an offence under this section is liable on conviction to —

(a) a fine at level 2 on the standard scale; or

(b) for an offence committed after a previous conviction for a similar offence - a fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(4) A police officer may arrest without warrant a person the officer finds in a street or public place and suspects, with reasonable cause, to be committing an offence under this section.

[UK Street Offences Act 1959 s.1 am. by CJ Act 1982, Sexual Offences Act 2003 and Policing and Crime Act 2009]

268. Soliciting prostitution

(1) It is an offence for a person in a street or public place to solicit another ('B') for the purpose of obtaining B's sexual services as a prostitute.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) The reference to a person in a street or public place includes a person in a motor vehicle in a street or public place.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.51A ins. by Policing and Crime Act 2009]

269. Prostitution offences: Interpretation

(1) In sections 264 to 266, "gain" means —

(a) any financial advantage, including the discharge of an obligation to pay or the provision of goods or services (including sexual services) gratuitously or at a discount; or

(b) the goodwill of any person which is or appears likely, in time, to bring financial advantage.

(2) In those sections, “prostitute” and “prostitution” have the meaning given by section 263(2).

(3) For the purposes of sections 264, 265 and 267 —

(a) “street” includes any bridge, road, lane, footway, subway, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, which is for the time being open to the public; and

(b) the doorways and entrances of premises abutting on a street (as defined), and any ground adjoining and open to a street, is to be treated as forming part of the street.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 1985 s.4 am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003; Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.54]

Brothel-keeping

270. Keeping a brothel

(1) It is an offence for a person to keep, or to manage, or to act or assist in the management of, a brothel to which people resort for practices involving prostitution (whether or not also for other practices).

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3) or (4)

(2) In this section “prostitution” has the meaning given by section 263(2).

(3) The maximum sentence on conviction for keeping a brothel, unless subsection (4) applies, is imprisonment for 3 months or a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(4) If the defendant has previously been convicted of an offence under —

(a) this section;

(b) any of sections 271, 272 or 273; or

(c) any of sections 34, 35 or 36 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 as applied to the Falkland Islands, the maximum sentence on conviction for keeping a brothel is imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss.33 to 36 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

271. Landlord letting premises for use as brothel

(1) It is an offence for a person who is the lessor or landlord of any premises or an agent of that person —

(a) to let the whole or part of the premises with the knowledge that it is to be used, in whole or in part, as a brothel; or

(b) if the whole or part of the premises is used as a brothel - to be wilfully a party to that use continuing.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (2) or (3).

(2) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section, unless section (3) applies, is imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) If the person has previously been convicted of an offence under —

(a) this section;

(b) any of sections 270, 272 or 273,; or

(c) any of sections 33, 33A, 35 or 36 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 as applied to the Falkland Islands, the maximum sentence on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss.33 to 36 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

272. Tenant permitting premises to be used as a brothel

(1) It is an offence for the tenant or occupier, or person in charge, of any premises knowingly to permit the whole or part of the premises to be used as a brothel.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (6) or (7).

(2) If the tenant or occupier of any premises is convicted of knowingly permitting the whole or part of the premises to be used as a brothel, the rights of the lessor or landlord with respect to the assignment or determination of the lease or other contract under which the premises are held by the person convicted are varied as set out in subsection (3).

(3) The variations referred to in subsection (2) are —

(a) the lessor or landlord may require the tenant to assign the lease or other contract under which the premises are held by the tenant to some person approved by the lessor or landlord;

(b) if the tenant fails to do so within 3 months, the lessor or landlord may determine the lease or contract (but without prejudice to the rights or remedies of any party thereto accrued before the date of the determination);

(c) if the lease or contract is determined under this subsection, the court by which the tenant was convicted may make a summary order for delivery of possession of the premises to the lessor or landlord;

(d) the approval of the lessor or landlord for the purposes of paragraph (a) must not be unreasonably withheld.

(4) If the tenant or occupier of any premises is so convicted, or was so convicted under section 35 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 before the commencement of this Part, and either —

(a) the lessor or landlord ('A'), after having the conviction brought to A's notice, fails or failed to exercise A's statutory rights in relation to the lease or contract under which the premises are or were held by the person convicted; or

(b) A, after exercising A's statutory rights so as to determine that lease or contract, grants or granted a new lease or enters or entered into a new contract of tenancy of the premises to, with or for the benefit of the same person, without having all reasonable provisions to prevent the recurrence of the offence inserted in the new lease or contract, then, if subsequently an offence under this section is committed in respect of the premises during the subsistence of the lease or contract referred to in paragraph (a) or (if paragraph (b) applies) during the subsistence of the new lease or contract, A is deemed to be a party to that offence unless A shows that he or she took all reasonable steps to prevent the recurrence of the offence.

(5) References in subsection (4) to the statutory rights of a lessor or landlord refer to his or her rights under subsection (3).

(6) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both, unless subsection (7) applies.

(7) If the person has previously been convicted of an offence under —

(a) this section;

(b) any of sections 270, 271 or 273; or

(c) any of sections 33, 33A, 34 or 36 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 as applied to the Falkland Islands, the maximum sentence on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss.33 to 36 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

273. Tenant permitting premises to be used for prostitution

(1) It is an offence for the tenant or occupier of any premises knowingly to permit the whole or part of the premises to be used for the purposes of prostitution.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (2) or (3).

(2) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both, unless subsection (3) applies.

(3) If the person has previously been convicted of an offence under —

(a) this section;

(b) any of sections 270, 271 or 272; or

(c) any of sections 33, 33A, 34 or 35 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 as applied to the Falkland Islands, the maximum sentence on conviction for an offence under this section is imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss.33 to 36 as am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

274. Allowing persons under 16 to be in a brothel

It is an offence for a person who has responsibility for a child or young person who has attained the age of 4 years and is under the age of 16 years to allow that child or young person to reside in or to frequent a brothel.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 2 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Children & Young Persons Act 1933 s.3]

Sex trafficking

275. Trafficking people for sexual exploitation

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if A intentionally arranges or facilitates —

(a) the arrival in, or entry into, the Falkland Islands or another country of another person ('B');

(b) the travel of B within the Falkland Islands or another country; or

(c) the departure of B from the Falkland Islands or another country, with a view to the sexual exploitation of B.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a) and (c), A's arranging or facilitating is with a view to the sexual exploitation of B if, and only if —

(a) A intends to do anything to or in respect of B, after B's arrival, entry or (as the case may be) departure but in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of a relevant offence; or

(b) A believes that another person is likely to do something to or in respect of B, after B's arrival, entry or (as the case may be) departure but in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of a relevant offence.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1)(b), A's arranging or facilitating is with a view to the sexual exploitation of B if, and only if —

(a) A intends to do anything to or in respect of B, during or after the journey and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of a relevant offence; or

(b) A believes that another person is likely to do something to or in respect of B, during or after the journey and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of a relevant offence.

(4) A person who has Falkland Islands status commits an offence under this section regardless of —

(a) where the arranging or facilitating takes place; or

(b) which country is the country of arrival, entry, travel or (as the case may be) departure.

(5) A person who does not have Falkland Islands status commits an offence under this section if—

(a) any part of the arranging or facilitating takes place in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) the Falkland Islands are the country of arrival, entry, travel or (as the case may be) departure.

(6) In this section —

“country” includes any territory or other part of the world;

“relevant offence” means — any offence under this Part; or

(a) anything done outside the Falkland Islands which is not an offence within paragraph

(b) but would be if done in the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act s.59A ins.by Protection of Freedom Act 2012]

276. Forfeiture of land vehicle, ship or aircraft

(1) This section applies if a person is convicted of an offence under section 275.

(2) The court may order the forfeiture of a land vehicle used or intended to be used in connection with the offence if the convicted person —

(a) owned the vehicle at the time the offence was committed;

(b) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned the vehicle;

- (c) was at that time in possession of the vehicle under a hire-purchase agreement;
 - (d) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which was in possession of the vehicle under a hire-purchase agreement; or
 - (e) was driving the vehicle in the course of the commission of the offence.
- (3) The court may order the forfeiture of a ship or aircraft used or intended to be used in connection with the offence if the convicted person —
- (a) owned the ship or aircraft at the time the offence was committed;
 - (b) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned the ship or aircraft;
 - (c) was at that time in possession of the ship or aircraft under a hire-purchase agreement;
 - (d) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which was in possession of the ship or aircraft under a hire-purchase agreement;
 - (e) was at that time a charterer of the ship or aircraft; or
 - (f) committed the offence while acting as captain of the ship or aircraft.
- (4) In a case to which subsection (3)(a) or (b) does not apply, forfeiture may be ordered only—
- (a) in the case of a ship - if subsection (5) or (6) applies;
 - (b) in the case of an aircraft - if subsection (5) or (7) applies.
- (5) This subsection applies if a person who, at the time the offence was committed, owned the ship or aircraft or was a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned it, knew or ought to have known of the intention to use it in the course of the commission of an offence under section 275.
- (6) This subsection applies if a ship's gross tonnage is less than 500 tons.
- (7) This subsection applies if the maximum weight at which an aircraft (which is not a hovercraft) may take off in accordance with its certificate of airworthiness is less than 5,700 kgs.
- (8) If a person who claims to have an interest in a land vehicle, ship or aircraft applies to a court to make representations on the question of forfeiture, the court may not make an order under this section in respect of the vehicle, ship or aircraft unless the person has been given an opportunity to make representations.

(9) Disposal of an item ordered to be forfeited under this section is governed by section 622 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.60A ins.by Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 and am. by Protection of Freedoms act 2012]

277. Detention of land vehicle, ship or aircraft

(1) If a person has been arrested for an offence under section 275, a police officer of the rank of inspector or above may detain a relevant vehicle, ship or aircraft —

(a) until a decision is taken as to whether or not to charge the arrested person with that offence;

(b) if the arrested person has been charged, until the person is acquitted, the charge is dismissed or the proceedings are discontinued; or

(c) if the person has been charged and convicted - until the court decides whether or not to order forfeiture of the vehicle, ship or aircraft.

(2) A vehicle, ship or aircraft is a relevant vehicle, ship or aircraft, in relation to an arrested person if it is a land vehicle, ship or aircraft which the police or immigration officer concerned has reasonable grounds for believing could, on conviction of the arrested person for the offence for which the person was arrested, be the subject of an order for forfeiture under section 276.

(3) A person (other than the arrested person) may apply to the court for the release of a land vehicle, ship or aircraft on the grounds that the applicant —

(a) owns the vehicle, ship or aircraft;

(b) was, immediately before the detention of the vehicle, ship or aircraft, in possession of it under a hire-purchase agreement; or

(c) is a charterer of the ship or aircraft.

(4) The court to which an application is made under subsection (3) may, on such security or surety being tendered as it considers satisfactory, release the vehicle, ship or aircraft on condition that it is made available to the court if —

(a) the arrested person is convicted; and

(b) an order for its forfeiture is made under section 276.

(5) In this section, “court” means —

(a) if the arrested person has not been charged, or the person has been charged but proceedings for the offence have not begun to be heard - the Magistrate’s Court or the Youth Court;

(b) if the person has been charged and proceedings for the offence are being heard - the court hearing the proceedings.

278. Sections 276 and 277: Interpretation

(1) In sections 276 and 277, unless the contrary intention appears —

“aircraft” includes hovercraft;

“captain” means master (of a ship) or commander (of an aircraft);

“land vehicle” means any vehicle other than a ship or aircraft;

“ship” includes every description of vessel used in navigation.

(2) In those sections a reference to being an owner of a vehicle, ship or aircraft includes a reference to being any of a number of persons who jointly own it.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.60C ins.by Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006]

Preparatory offences

279. Administering a substance with intent

A person (‘A’) commits an offence if A intentionally administers a substance to, or causes a substance to be taken by, another person (‘B’) —

(a) knowing that B does not consent; and

(b) intending to stupefy or overpower B, so as to enable any other person (including A) to engage in a sexual activity that involves B.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.61 to 63]

280. Committing an offence with intent to commit a sexual offence

(1) A person who commits an offence with the intention of committing a relevant sexual offence commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3)(a) or (b).

(2) In this section, “relevant sexual offence” means any offence under this Part (including an offence of encouraging, or aiding and abetting such an offence).

(3) The maximum sentence on conviction for an offence under this section is —

(a) if the offence is committed by kidnapping or false imprisonment - imprisonment for life;

(b) in other cases - imprisonment for 10 years.

(4) An offence under subsection (1) for which the maximum penalty is imprisonment for life is triable on indictment only.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.61 to 63]

281. Trespass with intent to commit a sexual offence

(1) A person commits an offence if the person —

(a) is a trespasser on any premises;

(b) intends to commit a relevant sexual offence on the premises; and

(c) knows that, or is reckless as to whether, he or she is a trespasser.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In this section —

“premises” includes a structure or part of a structure;

“relevant sexual offence” has the same meaning as in section 280(2);

“structure” includes a tent, vehicle or vessel or other temporary or movable structure.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.61 to 63]

Sex with an adult relative (Incest)

282. Sex with an adult relative: Penetration

(1) A person (‘A’) aged 16 or over commits an offence if —

(a) A intentionally penetrates the vagina or anus of another person (‘B’) with a part of A’s body or anything else, or (being a male) penetrates B’s mouth with his penis;

(b) the penetration is sexual;

(c) B is aged 18 or over;

(d) A and B are related in a way mentioned in subsection (2); and

(e) A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the relationship.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The relationship referred to in subsection (1) is that of parent, grandparent, child, grandchild, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, uncle, aunt, nephew or niece.

(3) In subsection (2) —

“parent” includes an adoptive parent;

“child” includes an adopted child;

“uncle” means the brother of a person’s parent, and “aunt” has a corresponding meaning;

“nephew” means the child of a person’s brother or sister, and “niece” has a corresponding meaning.

(4) If subsection (1) applies in a case where A is related to B as B’s child through adoption, A does not commit an offence unless A is 18 or over.

(5) If in proceedings for an offence under this section it is proved that the defendant was related to the other person in any of the ways mentioned in subsection (2), it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the relationship, unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of it.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.64 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

283. Sex with an adult relative: Consenting to penetration

(1) A person (‘A’) aged 16 or over commits an offence if —

(a) another person (‘B’) penetrates A’s vagina or anus with a part of B’s body or anything else, or penetrates A’s mouth with B’s penis;

(b) A consents to the penetration;

(c) the penetration is sexual;

(d) B is aged 18 or over;

(e) A is related to B in a way mentioned in section 282(2); and

(f) A knows or could reasonably be expected to know of the relationship.

Penalty: imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) Subsections (2) to (5) of section 282 apply to an offence under subsection (1) of this section as they apply to an offence under subsection (1) of that section.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.65 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

Other sexual offences

284. Genital exposure

A person commits an offence if the person —

(a) intentionally exposes his or her genitals; and

(b) intends that someone will see them and be caused alarm or distress.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.
[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.66 to 71]

285. Voyeurism

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if A —

(a) for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, observes another person ('B') doing a private act; and

(b) knows that B does not consent to being observed for A's sexual gratification.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') commits an offence if A —

(a) operates equipment with the intention of enabling another person ('B') to observe, for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, a third person ('C') doing a private act; and

(b) knows that C does not consent to A's operating equipment with that intention.

(3) A person ('A') commits an offence if A —

(a) records another person ('B') doing a private act;

(b) does so with the intention that A or a third person will, for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, look at an image of B doing the act; and

(c) knows that B does not consent to A's recording the act with that intention.

(4) A person ('A') commits an offence if A installs equipment, or constructs or adapts a structure or part of a structure, with the intention of enabling A or another person to commit an offence under subsection (1).

(5) For the purposes of this section, a person is doing a private act if the person is in a place which, in the circumstances, would reasonably be expected to provide privacy, and —

(a) the person's genitals, buttocks or breasts are exposed or covered only with underwear;

(b) the person is using a lavatory; or

(c) the person is doing a sexual act that is not of a kind ordinarily done in public.

(6) In this section "structure" includes a tent, vehicle or vessel or other temporary or movable structure.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.66 to 71]

286. Intercourse with an animal

(1) A male person commits an offence if —

- (a) he intentionally performs an act of penetration with his penis;
- (b) what is penetrated is the vagina or anus of an animal (whether dead or alive); and
- (c) he knows that, or is reckless as to whether, that is what is penetrated.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person of either gender ('A') commits an offence if —

- (a) A intentionally causes, or allows, A's vagina or anus to be penetrated;
- (b) the penetration is by the penis of an animal (whether dead or alive); and
- (c) A knows that, or is reckless as to whether, that is what A is being penetrated by.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.66 to 71]

287. Sexual penetration of a corpse

A person ('A') commits an offence if —

- (a) A intentionally performs an act of penetration with a part of A's body or anything else;
- (b) what is penetrated is a part of the body of a dead person;
- (c) A knows that, or is reckless as to whether, that is what is penetrated; and
- (d) the penetration is sexual.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.66 to 71]

288. Sexual activity in a public lavatory

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if A —

- (a) is in a lavatory to which the public or a section of the public has or is permitted to have access, whether on payment or otherwise;
- (b) A intentionally engages in an activity; and
- (c) the activity is sexual.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section, an activity is sexual if a reasonable person would, in all the circumstances, but regardless of any person's purpose, consider it to be sexual.

Miscellaneous provisions

289. Sexual offences outside the Falkland Islands – Schedule 2

(1) If —

(a) a person who has Falkland Islands status does an act in a place outside the Falkland Islands; and

(b) the act, if done in the Falkland Islands, would constitute a sexual offence to which this section applies, the person is guilty in the Falkland Islands of that sexual offence.

(2) If —

(a) a person who is a resident of the Falkland Islands does an act in a place outside the Falkland Islands;

(b) the act constitutes an offence under the law in force in that place; and

(c) the act, if done in the Falkland Islands, would constitute a sexual offence to which this section applies, the person is guilty in the Falkland Islands of that sexual offence.

(3) If —

(a) a person does an act in a place outside the Falkland Islands at a time when the person did not have Falkland Islands status nor was a resident of the Falkland Islands;

(b) the act constituted an offence under the law in force in that place;

(c) the act, if done in the Falkland Islands, would have constituted a sexual offence to which this section applies; and

(d) the person meets the residence or nationality condition at the relevant time, proceedings may be brought against the person in the Falkland Islands for that sexual offence as if the person had done the act there.

(4) The person meets the residence or nationality condition at the relevant time if the person has Falkland Islands status or is a resident of the Falkland Islands at the time when the proceedings are brought.

(5) An act punishable under the law in force in any place constitutes an offence under that law for the purposes of subsections (2) and (3) however it is described in that law.

(6) The condition in subsection (2)(b) or (3)(b) is to be taken to be met unless, not later than 28 days after the defendant is charged with the offence, the defendant serves on the prosecution a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the act in question, the condition is not in the defendant's opinion met;

(b) showing the grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the prosecution to prove that it is met.

(7) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defendant to require the prosecution to prove that the condition is met without service of a notice under subsection (6).

(8) In the Supreme Court the question whether the condition is met is to be decided by the judge alone.

(9) The sexual offences to which this section applies are those listed in Part A of Schedule 2.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.72 replaced by s.72(1) Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

290. Encouraging, etc. the commission of certain sexual acts outside the Falkland Islands – Schedule 2

(1) This section applies if —

(a) any act done by a person in the Falkland Islands would amount to the offence of encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the commission of an offence to which this section applies but for the fact that what the person had in view would not be an offence in the Falkland Islands;

(b) the whole or part of what the person had in view was intended to take place in a place outside the Falkland Islands; and

(c) what the person had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law of that place.

(2) If this section applies —

(a) what the person had in view is to be treated as that offence for the purposes of any charge of encouraging brought in respect of that act; and

(b) any such offence is accordingly triable in the Falkland Islands.

(3) Any act done by means of a message (however communicated) is to be treated as done in the Falkland Islands if the message is sent or received in the Falkland Islands.

(4) Conduct punishable as an offence under the law of a place outside the Falkland Islands is an offence under that law for the purposes of subsection (1) and (2), however it is described in that law.

(5) Subject to subsection (6), a condition in subsection (1) is to be taken as met unless, not later than 28 days after the defendant is charged with the offence, the defendant serves on the prosecution a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to what the accused had in view, the condition is not in the defendant's opinion met;

(b) showing the grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the prosecution to show that it is met.

(6) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defendant to require the prosecution to show that the condition is met without the prior service of a notice under subsection (5).

(7) In the Supreme Court the question whether the condition is met is to be decided by the judge alone.

(8) In any proceedings in respect of an offence triable by virtue of this section, it is immaterial to guilt whether or not the accused had Falkland Islands status at the time of any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence.

(9) The sexual offences to which this section applies are those listed in Part B of Schedule 2. [UK Sexual Offences (Conspiracy & Encouragement) Act 1996 ss.2 and 3 and Schedule am. by Sexual Offences Act 2003]

291. Exceptions to encouraging, etc.

(1) A person is not guilty of encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the commission against a child of an offence to which this section applies if the person acts for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the child from sexually transmitted infection;

(b) protecting the physical safety of the child;

(c) preventing the child from becoming pregnant; or

(d) promoting the child's emotional well-being by the giving of advice, and not for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification or for the purpose of causing or encouraging the activity constituting the offence or the child's participation in it.

(2) This section applies to —

- (a) an offence under any of sections 207 to 210 (offences against children under 13);
- (b) an offence under section 211 (sexual activity with a child);
- (c) an offence under section 215 (child sex offences by youths) which would be an offence under section 211 if the offender were aged 18;
- (d) an offence under any of sections 218, 226, 231, 235 and 239 (sexual activity) against a person under the age of 16.

(3) This section does not affect any other enactment or any rule of law restricting the circumstances in which a person is guilty of encouraging, or aiding and abetting an offence under this Part.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.73 to 77]

292. Meaning of “consent”

(1) For the purposes of this Part, a person consents only if the person agrees by choice, and has the freedom and capacity to make that choice.

(2) If in proceedings for an offence to which this section applies it is proved that —

- (a) the defendant did the relevant act;
- (b) any of the circumstances specified in subsection (3) existed; and
- (c) the defendant knew that those circumstances existed, then the complainant is to be taken not to have consented to the relevant act unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he or she consented and the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that the complainant consented unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether the defendant reasonably believed it.

(3) This section applies if —

- (a) any person was, at the time of the relevant act or immediately before it began, using violence against the complainant or causing the complainant to fear that immediate violence would be used against him or her;
- (b) any person was, at the time of the relevant act or immediately before it began, causing the complainant to fear that violence was being used, or that immediate violence would be used, against another person;
- (c) the complainant was, and the defendant was not, unlawfully detained at the time of the relevant act;

(d) the complainant was asleep or otherwise unconscious at the time of the relevant act;

(e) because of the complainant's physical disability, the complainant would not have been able at the time of the relevant act to communicate to the defendant whether the complainant consented;

(f) any person had administered to or caused to be taken by the complainant, without the complainant's consent, a substance which, having regard to when it was administered or taken, was capable of causing or enabling the complainant to be stupefied or overpowered at the time of the relevant act.

(4) In subsection (2)(a) and (b), the reference to the time immediately before the relevant act began is, in the case of an act which is one of a continuous series of sexual activities, a reference to the time immediately before the first sexual activity began.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.73 to 77]

293. Conclusive presumptions about consent

(1) If in proceedings for an offence to which this section applies it is proved that the defendant did the relevant act and that either or both of the circumstances specified in subsection (2) existed, it is to be conclusively presumed —

(a) that the complainant did not consent to the relevant act; and

(b) that the defendant did not believe that the complainant consented to the relevant act.

(2) This section applies if —

(a) the defendant intentionally deceived the complainant as to the nature or purpose of the relevant act;

(b) the defendant intentionally induced the complainant to consent to the relevant act by impersonating a person known personally to the complainant.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.73 to 77]

294. Sections 292 and 293: Relevant acts

In relation to an offence to which section 292 or 293 applies, references in those sections to the relevant act and to the complainant are to be read as follows —

Offence	Relevant act
An offence under section 203 (Rape)	The defendant intentionally penetrating, with his penis, the vagina, anus or mouth of another person (“the complainant”)
An offence under section 204 (Assault by penetration)	The defendant intentionally penetrating, with a part of his or her body or anything else, the vagina or anus of another person (“the complainant”), if the penetration is sexual
An offence under section 205 (Sexual assault)	The defendant intentionally touching another person (“the complainant”), if the touching is sexual

An offence under section 206 (Causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent)	The defendant intentionally causing another person (“the complainant”) to engage in an activity, if the activity is sexual

(2) Any time-limit for the making of complaints in the Magistrate’s Court under any other enactment does not apply to an application for an order on a complaint under this Part.

(3) If the defendant on an application for an order under this Part, or for the variation, renewal or discharge of an order, is a youth, a reference in this Part to the Magistrate’s Court is a reference to that court sitting as the Youth Court.

(4) For the purposes of this Part, acts, behaviour, convictions and findings include those occurring before the commencement of this Part.

(5) In construing any reference to an offence listed in Schedule 3, any condition subject to which an offence is so listed that relates —

(a) to the way in which the defendant is dealt with in respect of an offence so listed or a relevant finding; or

(b) to the age of any person,

is to be disregarded.

(6) This Part applies to a sentence of detention for a specified period imposed on a youth under sections 725 and 726 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 as it applies to an equivalent sentence of imprisonment, and references in this Part to imprisonment are to be interpreted accordingly.

(7) This Part applies to an order for detention during Her Majesty’s pleasure imposed on a youth under section 727 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 as it applies to a sentence of life imprisonment, and references in this Part to imprisonment are to be interpreted accordingly.

(8) In this Part —

(a) a reference to a conviction includes a reference to a finding of a court under section 762 of the Criminal Proceedings and Evidence Ordinance 2014 that the defendant did the act charged;

(b) a reference to a person being or having been found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged against him or her in respect of an offence means a finding under Part 34 of that Ordinance that the person is —

(i) unfit to be tried for the offence;

(ii) mentally disordered so that the trial for the offence cannot or could not proceed; or

(iii) unfit to be tried and to have done the act charged against him or her in respect of the offence.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.22, 113, 131, 135 and passim]

Notification requirements

296. Persons subject to notification requirements – Schedule 3

(1) A person is subject to the notification requirements of this Part for the period set out in section 298 (“the notification period”) if, in respect of an offence listed in Schedule 3, the person has been since 10 June 2005 (the date of commencement of the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005) —

(a) convicted of the offence;

(b) found not guilty of the offence by reason of mental disorder;

(c) found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged in respect of the offence;
or

(d) cautioned in respect of the offence.

(2) For purposes of this section, an absolute discharge in respect of an offence does not count as a conviction.

(3) A person to whom subsection (1) applies is a relevant offender for purposes of this Part.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.80]

297. The notification period

(1) The notification period for a relevant offender is the period in the second column of the following Table opposite the description that applies to the person.

TABLE
Description of relevant offender	Notification period
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or	An indefinite period beginning with the has been sentenced to imprisonment for life, or to imprisonment for 30 months or more	relevant date

A person who, in respect of the offence or finding, is or has been detained in a hospital subject to a restriction order	An indefinite period beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or has been sentenced to imprisonment for more than 6 months but less than 30 months	10 years beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence, is or has been sentenced to imprisonment for 6 months or less	7 years beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence or finding, is or has been detained in a hospital without being subject to a restriction order	7 years beginning with that date
A person who, in respect of the offence, is cautioned	2 years beginning with that date
A person in whose case an order for conditional discharge is made in respect of the offence	The period of conditional discharge
A person of any other description	5 years beginning with the relevant date

(2) If a person is or was under 18 on the relevant date, subsection (1) has effect as if for any reference a period of years specified in subsection (1) there were substituted a reference to one-half of that period.

(3) If a relevant offender is or has been sentenced in respect of 2 or more offences listed in Schedule 3 —

- (a) to consecutive terms of imprisonment; or
- (b) to terms of imprisonment which are partly concurrent, the notification period is calculated as if the relevant offender was or had been sentenced, in respect of each of the offences, to a term of imprisonment which —

- (i) in the case of consecutive terms - is equal to the aggregate of those terms;
- (ii) in the case of partly concurrent terms (X and Y, which overlap for a period Z) - is equal to X plus Y minus Z.

(4) If a relevant offender who is the subject of a finding within section 296(1)(c) is or has been subsequently tried for the offence, the notification period relating to the finding ends at the conclusion of the trial.

(5) In this section and section 298, “relevant date” means —

(a) in the case of a person within section 296(1)(a) - the date of the conviction;

(b) in the case of a person within section 296(1)(b) or (c) - the date of the finding;

(c) in the case of a person within section 296(1)(d) - the date of the caution.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.82 am. by Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006]

298. Notification requirements: Initial notification

(1) A relevant offender must, within 3 days after the relevant date (or, if later, the commencement of this Part), give to the police the information set out in subsection (5).

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to a relevant offender in respect of a conviction, finding or caution within section 296(1) if the offender —

(a) immediately before the conviction, finding or caution was subject to the notification requirements of this Part as a result of another conviction, finding or caution or an order of a court (“the earlier event”);

(b) at that time had made a notification under subsection (1) in respect of the earlier event; and

(c) throughout the period referred to in subsection (1) remains subject to the notification requirements as a result of the earlier event.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply to a relevant offender in respect of a conviction, finding or caution within section 296(1) if the offender complied with section 83(1) of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 in respect of the conviction, finding, caution or order.

(4) If a notification order is or has been made in respect of a conviction, finding or caution, subsection (1) does not apply to the relevant offender in respect of the conviction, finding or caution if the offender —

(a) immediately before the order was made was subject to the notification requirements of this Part as a result of another conviction, finding or caution or an order of a court (“the earlier event”);

(b) at that time had made a notification under subsection (1) in respect of the earlier event; and

(c) throughout the period referred to in subsection (1) remains subject to the notification requirements as a result of the earlier event.

(5) The information to be given in relation to the relevant offender is —

(a) the date of birth;

(b) the Tax Identification Number or, in the case of a person who does not have Falkland Islands status, the work permit or immigration permit number;

(c) the name on the relevant date and, if more or other names were used on that date, each of those names;

(d) the home address on the relevant date;

(e) the name on the date on which notification is given and, if one or more other names are used on that date, each of those names;

(f) the home address on the date on which notification is given;

(g) the address of any other premises in the Falkland Islands at which, at the time the notification is given, the person regularly resides or stays;

(h) whether the person has any passport and the details set out in subsection (6) in relation to each passport.

(6) The details required in relation to each passport are —

(a) the issuing authority;

(b) the number;

(c) the dates of issue and expiry;

(d) the name and date of birth given as being those of the passport holder.

(7) When determining the period for the purpose of subsection (1), there is to be disregarded any time when the relevant offender is —

(a) remanded in or committed to custody by an order of a court;

(b) serving a sentence of imprisonment;

(c) detained in a hospital; or

(d) outside the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.83 to 85 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

299. Notification requirements: Changes

(1) A relevant offender must, within 3 days after —

(a) using a name which has not been notified to the police under section 298;

(b) changing his or her home address;

(c) residing or staying for a qualifying period at any premises in the Falkland Islands the address of which has not been notified to the police under section 298;

(d) being released from custody pursuant to an order of a court or from imprisonment or detention in a hospital;

(e) losing or ceasing to have a passport notified to the police under section 298; or

(f) receiving a passport which has not been notified to the police under section 298(1) and (6), notify to the police that name, new home address, address of those premises, date of release, details of losing or ceasing to have the passport (as set out in subsection (6) of section 298) and other information set out in that section.

(2) A notification under subsection (1) may be given before the name is used, the change of home address occurs or the qualifying period ends, but in that case the relevant offender must also specify the date when the event is expected to occur.

(3) If a notification is given in accordance with subsection (2) and the event to which it relates occurs more than 2 days before the date specified, the notification does not affect the duty imposed by subsection (1).

(4) If a notification is given in accordance with subsection (2) and the event to which it relates has not occurred by the end of the period of 3 days beginning with the date specified —

(a) the notification does not affect the duty imposed by subsection (1); and

(b) the relevant offender must, within the period of 6 days beginning with the date specified, notify to the police the fact that the event did not occur within the period of 3 days beginning with the date specified.

(5) Section 298(7) applies to the determination of the period of 3 days mentioned in subsection (1) and the period of 6 days mentioned in subsection (4)(b), as it applies to the determination of the period mentioned in section 298(1).

(6) In this section, “qualifying period” means —

(a) a period of 7 days; or

(b) 2 or more periods, in any period of 12 months, which taken together amount to 7 days.
[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.83 to 85 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

300. Notification requirements: Periodic notification

(1) A relevant offender must, within the prescribed period after each event within subsection (2), notify to the police the information set out in section 298(5), unless within that period he or she has given a notification under section 299(1).

(2) The events are —

(a) the commencement of this Part (including persons who became relevant offenders before that commencement);

(b) any notification given by the relevant offender under section 298(1) or 299(1); and

(c) any notification given under subsection (1).

(3) The prescribed period is one year, except that if the home address of the relevant offender given under section 298(1), 299(1) or subsection (1) of this section is not the person's sole or main residence in the Falkland Islands, the prescribed period is 7 days.

(4) If the period referred to in subsection (1) would (apart from this subsection) end while subsection (5) applies to the relevant offender, that period is to be treated as continuing until the end of the period of 3 days beginning when subsection (5) first ceases to apply.

(5) This subsection applies to a relevant offender who is —

(a) remanded in or committed to custody by an order of a court;

(b) serving a sentence of imprisonment;

(c) detained in a hospital; or

(d) outside the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.83 to 85 am. by Criminal Justice & Immigration Act 2008]

301. Notification requirements: Travel outside the Falkland Islands

(1) A relevant offender who leaves the Falkland Islands must —

(a) at least 7 days before he or she leaves the Falkland Islands, notify the Chief Police Officer in accordance with this section;

(b) if he or she returns to the Falkland Islands, notify the Chief Police Officer at least 7 days before arriving, in accordance with this section.

(2) A notification under this section must disclose —

(a) the date on which the offender will leave or return to the Falkland Islands;

(b) the countries or territories to which he or she will travel and the point of arrival in those countries or territories;

(c) the identity of any carrier or carriers he or she intends to use to depart from and return to the Falkland Islands, and of travelling to any other place;

(d) details of his or her accommodation arrangements on arrival in a place outside the Falkland Islands;

(e) any other information which the offender has about his or her departure from or return to the Falkland Islands and which the Chief Police Officer reasonably requests.

(3) A notification under this section must include —

(a) the offender's name, address in the Falkland Islands and date of birth; and

(b) any other name the offender is using.

(4) If the information provided under subsection (2) changes before the offender departs from or returns to the Falkland Islands, he or she must notify the Chief Police Officer as soon as practicable.

(5) The Governor in Council, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by regulations amend or add to the requirements of this section and the regulations may make different provision for different categories of person.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.86 adapted; S.I 2004/1220]

302. Method of notification and related matters

(1) A person gives a notification under any of sections 298(1), 299(1) or 300(1) by —

(a) attending at a place of lawful custody; and

(b) giving an oral or written notification to the police officer in charge of the station.

(2) A notification under this section must be acknowledged in writing in a form approved by the Chief Police Officer.

(3) If a notification is given under any of sections 298(1), 299(1) or 300(1), the relevant offender must, if requested to do so by the police officer referred to in subsection (1)(b), allow the officer to —

(a) take the offender's fingerprints;

(b) photograph any part of the offender; or

(c) do both those things, for the purpose of verifying the identity of the offender.

(4) In this section, “photograph” includes any process by means of which an image may be produced.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.87 and 88]

303. Young offenders: Parental directions

(1) If a person within the first column of the following Table (“the young offender”) is under 18 when before the court referred to in the second column of the Table, that court may direct that subsection (2) applies in respect of an individual (“the parent”) having parental responsibility for the young offender.

TABLE
Description of person	Court which may make the direction
A relevant offender within section 296(1)(a) to (c)	The court which deals with the offender in respect of the offence or finding
A relevant offender within section 336(1)(a) to (c)	The court which deals with the offender in respect of the offence or finding
A person who is the subject of a notification order, interim notification order, SOPO or interim SOPO	The court which makes the order
A relevant offender who is the defendant to an application under subsection (4)	The court which hears the application

(2) If this subsection applies —

(a) the obligations that would (apart from this subsection) be imposed by or under sections 298 to 301 on the young offender are to be treated instead as obligations on the parent, and

(b) the parent must ensure that the young offender attends at the place of lawful custody with him or her, when a notification is being given.

(3) A direction under subsection (1) takes immediate effect and applies —

(a) until the young offender attains the age of 18; or

(b) for any shorter period that the court declares when giving the direction.

(4) The Attorney General may apply to the Youth Court for a direction under subsection (1) in respect of a relevant offender (“the defendant”) who —

(a) resides in the Falkland Islands or whom the Attorney General believes is intending to come to the Falkland Islands; and

(b) is under 18.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.89 to 92]

304. Parental directions: Variation, renewal and discharge

(1) A person within subsection (2) may apply to the appropriate court for an order varying, renewing or discharging a direction under section 304(1).

(2) The persons are —

- (a) the young offender;
- (b) the parent;
- (c) the Attorney General.

(3) An application under subsection (1) may be made —

- (a) if the appropriate court is the Supreme Court - in accordance with the practice of that court;
- (b) in any other case - by complaint.

(4) On an application under this section, the court, after hearing the person making the application and (if they wish to be heard) the other persons mentioned in subsection (2), may make any order, varying, renewing or discharging the direction, that the court considers appropriate.

(5) In this section “the appropriate court” means —

- (a) if the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeal gave the direction - the Supreme Court;
- (b) if the Youth Court gave the direction - that court.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.89 to 92]

305. Offences relating to notification

(1) A person who —

- (a) fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of sections 298(1), 299(1), 301(1), 302(3) or 303(2)(b) or any requirement imposed by or under section 302; or
- (b) notifies to the police, in purported compliance with section 298(1), 299(1) or 300(1) or any requirement imposed by or under section 301, any information which the person knows to be false,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) Subject to subsection (3) —

(a) a person commits an offence under subsection (1)(a) on the day on which the person first fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with section 298(1), 299(1) or 300(1) or a requirement imposed by or under section 301; and

(b) continues to commit it throughout any period during which the failure continues.

(3) A person must not be prosecuted under subsection (1) more than once in respect of the same failure.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.89 to 92]

306. Certificates for purposes of this Part

(1) Subsection (2) applies when on any date a person is —

(a) convicted of an offence listed in Schedule 3;

(b) found not guilty of such an offence by reason of mental disorder; or

(c) found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged in respect of such an offence.

(2) If the court by or before which the person is so convicted or found —

(a) states in open court —

(i) that on that date the person has been convicted, found not guilty by reason of insanity or found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged; and

(ii) that the offence in question is an offence listed in Schedule 3; and

(b) certifies those facts, whether at the time or subsequently,

the certificate is, for the purposes of this Part, evidence of those facts.

(3) Subsection (4) applies when on any date a person is cautioned in respect of an offence listed in Schedule 3.

(4) If the police officer who gives the caution —

(a) informs the person that he or she has been cautioned on that date and that the offence in question is an offence listed in Schedule 3; and

(b) certifies those facts, whether at the time or subsequently, in writing in a form approved by the Chief Police Officer, the certificate is, for the purposes of this Part, evidence of those facts.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.89 to 92]

Review of indefinite notification requirements

307. Review of indefinite notification requirements: General

(1) Sections 308 and 309 apply to a person who, at any time after 10 June 2005, became or becomes subject to the notification requirements of this Part for an indefinite period by virtue of section 297(1) (a “relevant sex offender”).

(2) For the purposes of this Part, the date of discharge is —

(a) if the relevant sex offender was aged 18 or over on the relevant date - the date falling 15 years after that date;

(b) if the relevant sex offender was aged under 18 on the relevant date - the date falling 8 years after that date.

(3) In determining the date of discharge under subsection (2), there is to be disregarded any time when the relevant sex offender was —

(a) remanded in or committed to custody by order of a court;

(b) serving a sentence of imprisonment;

(c) detained in hospital; or

(d) outside the Falkland Islands,

before the relevant sex offender first notified information to the police under section 83(1) of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 or section 298(1) of this Part.

(4) If a notification continuation order made under this Part has effect in respect of the relevant sex offender, for the purposes of this Part the further date of discharge is the date of expiry of the fixed period specified in that order.

(5) In this section —

“relevant date” has the same meaning as in section 297(5);

“notification continuation order” means an order made under section 308.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.88A to 88G ins. by Sexual Offences (Remedial) Order 2012 and adapted]

308. Review of indefinite notification requirements: Procedure and grounds

(1) The Chief Police Officer must no later than the date of discharge of a relevant sex offender either —

(a) make a notification continuation order in respect of the offender; or

(b) notify the offender that he or she ceases to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part on the date of discharge.

(2) A notification continuation order is an order making the relevant sex offender subject to the notification requirements of this Part for a fixed period of not more than 15 years from the date which would, but for the order, have been the date of discharge.

(3) The Chief Police Officer may make a notification continuation order only if satisfied, on the balance of probabilities, that the relevant sex offender poses a risk of sexual harm to the public, or any particular members of the public, in the Falkland Islands.

(4) In deciding whether to make a notification continuation order, the Chief Police Officer must take into account —

(a) the seriousness of the offence (or offences) —

(i) of which the relevant sex offender was convicted;

(ii) of which the relevant sex offender was found not guilty by reason of mental disorder;

(iii) in respect of which the relevant sex offender was found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged; or

(iv) in respect of which the relevant sex offender was cautioned, which made the relevant sex offender subject to the notification requirements of this Part for an indefinite period;

(b) the period of time which has elapsed since the relevant sex offender committed the offence (or offences);

(c) whether the relevant sex offender has committed any offence under section 307;

(d) the age of the relevant sex offender at the time of the decision;

(e) the age of the relevant sex offender at the time the offence (or offences) referred to in paragraph (a) was (or were) committed;

(f) the age of any person who was a victim of any such offence (where applicable) and the difference in age between the victim and the relevant sex offender at the time the offence was committed;

(g) any convictions or findings made by a court in respect of the relevant sex offender for any other offence listed in Schedule 3;

(h) any caution which the relevant sex offender has received for an offence which is listed in Schedule 3;

(i) whether any criminal proceedings for any offences listed in Schedule 3 have been commenced against the relevant sex offender but have not concluded;

(j) any written submission or evidence of the risk of sexual harm posed by the relevant sex offender to the public, or any particular members of the public, in the Falkland Islands;

(k) any submission or evidence presented by or on behalf of the relevant sex offender which demonstrates that he or she does not pose a risk of sexual harm to the public, or any particular members of the public, in the Falkland Islands; and

(l) any other matter which the Chief Police Officer considers to be appropriate.

(5) A notification continuation order must state —

(a) the reasons why the order was made; and

(b) the reasons for the determination of the fixed period in the order.

(6) A notification continuation order must be notified in writing to the relevant sex offender.

(7) In this section, “sexual harm” means physical or psychological harm caused by the relevant sex offender doing anything which would constitute an offence listed in Schedule 3 if done in any part of the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.88A to 88G ins. by Sexual Offences (Remedial) Order 2012 and adapted]

309. Review of indefinite notification requirements: Further review and appeal

(1) If a notification continuation order has been made, the Chief Police Officer must no later than the further date of discharge —

(a) make another notification continuation order in respect of the relevant sex offender; or

(b) notify the relevant sex offender that the offender ceases to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part on the further date of discharge.

(2) Section 308(2) to (7) apply in relation to this section, but a reference to the date of discharge is to be read as a reference to the further date of discharge.

(3) The decision of the Chief Police Officer —

(a) to make a notification continuation order; and

(b) setting the fixed period of the notification continuation order, may be appealed to the Magistrate's Court by the relevant sex offender within 21 days after the offender receives notice of the decision.

(4) On an appeal under this section, the Magistrate's Court may —

- (a) uphold or quash the decision of the Chief Police Officer;
- (b) make a notification continuation order; or
- (c) vary the fixed period in that order.

(5) The relevant sex offender remains subject to the existing notification requirements of this Part until the expiry of 21 days after the offender receives notice of the decision of the Chief Police Officer or an appeal is decided or abandoned, as the case may be.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.88A to 88G ins. by Sexual Offences (Remedial) Order 2012 and adapted]

Ending notification requirements for homosexual offences

310. Homosexual offences: Ending of notification requirement

(1) This section and section 311 apply if a relevant offender is subject to the notification requirements of this Part as a result of a conviction, finding or caution in respect of an offence under —

- (a) section 12 or 13 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956 as applied to the Falkland Islands (buggery or indecency between men); or
- (b) section 61 of the Offences against the Person Act 1861.

(2) The relevant offender may apply to the Governor for a decision as to whether it appears that, at the time of the offence, the other party to the act of buggery or gross indecency —

- (a) if subsection (1)(a) applies - was aged 16 or over;
- (b) if subsection (1)(b) applies - was aged 17 or over,

and consented to the act.

(3) An application must be in writing and state —

- (a) the name, address and date of birth of the relevant offender;
- (b) the offender's name and address at the time of the conviction, finding or caution;
- (c) so far as known to the offender, the time when and the place where the conviction or finding was made or the caution given and, for a conviction or finding, the case number;

(d) any other information the Governor may reasonably require.

(4) An application may include representations by the relevant offender about the matters mentioned in subsection (2).

(5) In making the decision applied for, the Governor must consider —

(a) any representations included in the application; and

(b) any available record of the investigation of the offence and of any proceedings relating to it that appears to the Governor to be relevant, but must not seek evidence from any witness.

(6) On making the decision the Governor must —

(a) record it in writing; and

(b) give notice in writing to the relevant offender.

(7) If the Governor decides that it appears as mentioned in subsection (2), the relevant offender ceases, from the beginning of the day on which the decision is recorded under subsection (6), to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part as a result of the conviction, finding or caution in respect of the offence.

(8) Subsection (7) does not affect the operation of this Part as a result of any other conviction, finding or caution or any court order.

(9) In this section a reference to an offence includes —

(a) a reference to an attempt, conspiracy or incitement to commit that offence; and

(b) a reference to aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of that offence.

(10) In the case of an attempt, conspiracy or incitement, references in subsection (1) to the act of buggery or gross indecency are references to the act of buggery or gross indecency to which the attempt, conspiracy or incitement related (whether or not that act occurred).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.93 and Schedule 4, part]

311. Homosexual offences: Right of appeal

(1) If the Governor decides that it does not appear as mentioned in section 310(2), and if the Supreme Court gives permission, the relevant offender may appeal to that court.

(2) On an appeal under this section the court may not receive oral evidence.

(3) The court —

(a) if it decides that it appears as mentioned in subsection 310(2), must make an order to that effect;

(b) otherwise, must dismiss the appeal.

(4) An order under subsection (3)(a) has the same effect as a decision of the Governor recorded under subsection (6) of section 310 has under subsection (7) of that section.

(5) There is no appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court under this section.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.93 and Schedule 4, part]

Information relating to notification

312. Supply of information to Governor, etc. for verification

(1) This section applies to information notified to the police under sections 298 to 301.

(2) The Chief Police Officer may, for the purposes of the prevention, detection, investigation or prosecution of offences under this Part, supply information to which this section applies to —

(a) the Governor; or

(b) a person providing services to the Governor in connection with a relevant function, for use for the purpose of verifying the information.

(3) In relation to information supplied under subsection (2) to any person, the reference to verifying the information is a reference to —

(a) checking its accuracy by comparing it with information held by a person within subsection (2)(b) in connection with the provision of the services; and

(b) compiling a report of that comparison.

(4) Subject to subsection (5), the supply of information under this section does not breach any restriction on the disclosure of information (however arising or imposed).

(5) This section does not affect any power existing apart from this section to supply information.

(6) In this section, “relevant function” means —

(a) a function relating to social security, child support, employment or training;

(b) a function relating to passports;

(c) a function relating to the licensing of vehicles.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.94 to 96]

313. Supply of information by Governor, etc.

(1) A report compiled under section 312 may be supplied to the Chief Police Officer by —

- (a) the Governor; or
- (b) a person within section 312(2)(b).

(2) Such a report may contain any information held —

- (a) by the Governor in connection with the exercise of a relevant function; or
- (b) by a person within section 312(2)(b) in connection with the provision of services referred to there.

(3) If a report compiled under section 312 contains information within subsection (2), the Chief Police Officer may —

- (a) retain the information, whether or not used for the purposes of the prevention, detection, investigation or prosecution of an offence under this Ordinance; and
- (b) use the information for any purpose related to the prevention, detection, investigation or prosecution of offences (whether or not under this Ordinance), but for no other purpose.

(4) Subsections (4) to (6) of section 312 apply in relation to this section as they apply in relation to that section.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.94 to 96]

314. Information about release or transfer

(1) This section applies to a relevant offender who is serving a sentence of imprisonment, or is detained in a hospital.

(2) The person who is responsible for an offender must notify the Chief Police Officer, in the prescribed manner, of any occasion when the offender is released or a different person becomes responsible for the offender.

(3) The person who is responsible for an offender must, in giving notice, provide —

- (a) any prescribed information about the offender; and
- (b) a photograph of the offender.

(4) In this section, “photograph” includes any process by means of which an image may be produced.

(5) The Governor in Council, on the advice of the Criminal Justice Council, may make regulations to implement this section and in this section “prescribed” means prescribed by the regulations.

(6) The regulations may —

(a) make provision for determining who is to be treated for the purposes of this section as responsible for an offender;

(b) make different provision for different purposes;

(c) prescribe penalties for failure to comply with the requirements of this section or the regulations.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.94 to 96]

315. Power of entry and search for offender’s home address

(1) If on an application made by or on behalf of the Chief Police Officer, a justice of the peace is satisfied that the requirements in subsection (2) are met in relation to any premises, the justice of the peace may issue a warrant authorising a police officer —

(a) to enter the premises for the purpose of assessing the risks posed by the relevant offender to which the warrant relates; and

(b) to search the premises for that purpose.

(2) The requirements are that —

(a) the address of each set of premises specified in the application is an address falling within subsection (3);

(b) the relevant offender is not one to whom subsection (4) applies;

(c) it is necessary for a police officer to enter and search the premises for the purpose mentioned in subsection (1)(a); and

(d) on at least 2 occasions a police officer has sought entry to the premises in order to search them for that purpose and has been unable to obtain entry for that purpose.

(3) An address falls within this subsection if —

(a) it is the address which was last notified in accordance with this Part by a relevant offender to the police as his or her home address; or

(b) there are reasonable grounds to believe that a relevant offender resides there or may regularly be found there.

(4) This subsection applies to a relevant offender who is —

- (a) remanded in or committed to custody by order of a court;
 - (b) serving a sentence of imprisonment;
 - (c) detained in a hospital; or
 - (d) outside the Falkland Islands.
- (5) A warrant issued under this section —
- (a) must specify each of the premises to which it relates;
 - (b) may authorise the police officer executing it to use reasonable force if necessary to enter and search the premises;
 - (c) may authorise entry to and search of premises on more than one occasion if, on the application, the justice of the peace is satisfied that it is necessary to authorise multiple entries in order to achieve the purpose mentioned in subsection (1)(a).
- (6) If a warrant issued under this section authorises multiple entries, the number of entries authorised may be unlimited or limited to a maximum.
- (7) In this section a reference to the relevant offender to whom the warrant relates is a reference to a relevant offender —
- (a) who has in accordance with this Part notified the police that the premises specified in the warrant are his or her home address; or
 - (b) in respect of whom there are reasonable grounds to believe that he or she resides there or may regularly be found there.
- [UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.96B ins. by Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006]*

Notification orders

316. Notification orders: Applications and grounds

- (1) The Attorney General may by complaint to the Magistrate’s Court or, in the case of a defendant under 18, the Magistrates Court sitting as the Youth Court, apply for an order under this section (a “notification order”) in respect of a person (“the defendant”) if —
- (a) it appears that the following conditions are met with respect to the defendant; and
 - (b) the defendant resides in the Falkland Islands or the Attorney General believes that the defendant is in, or is intending to come to, the Falkland Islands.
- (2) The first condition is that under the law in force in a place outside the Falkland Islands —

(a) the defendant has been convicted of a relevant offence (whether or not he or she has been punished for it);

(b) a court exercising jurisdiction under that law has made in respect of a relevant offence a finding equivalent to a finding that the defendant is not guilty by reason of mental disorder;

(c) such a court has made in respect of a relevant offence a finding equivalent to a finding that the defendant is under a disability and did the act charged in respect of the offence; or

(d) the defendant has been cautioned in respect of a relevant offence.

(3) The second condition is that the notification period set out in section 297(1) (as modified by subsections (2) and (3) of that section) in respect of the relevant offence) has not expired.

(4) If on the application it is proved that the conditions in subsections (2) and (3) are met, the court must make a notification order.

(5) In this section and section 317 “relevant offence” has the meaning given by section 318.
[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.97 to 101]

317. Notification orders: Effect

(1) If a notification order is made —

(a) the application of this Part to the defendant in respect of the conviction, finding or caution to which the order relates is subject to the modifications set out below; and

(b) subject to those modifications, the defendant becomes or (as the case may be) remains subject to the notification requirements of this Part for the notification period set out in section 297.

(2) The “relevant date” means —

(a) in the case of a person within section 316(2)(a) - the date of the conviction;

(b) in the case of a person within section 316(2)(b) or (c) - the date of the finding;

(c) in the case of a person within section 316(2)(d) - the date of the caution.

(3) In section 296, the reference to offences listed in Schedule 3 is to be read as a reference to relevant offences.

(4) In sections 298 and 299, references to the commencement of this Part are to be read as references to the date of service of the notification order.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.97 to 101]

318. Sections 316 and 317: Relevant offences

(1) In sections 316 and 317 the term “relevant offence” means an act which —

(a) constituted an offence under the law in force in the place concerned; and

(b) would have constituted an offence listed in Schedule 3 if it had been done in the Falkland Islands.

(2) An act punishable under the law in force in a place outside the Falkland Islands constitutes an offence under that law for the purposes of subsection (1) however it is described in that law.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), on an application for a notification order the condition in subsection (1)(b) is to be taken as met unless, within 28 days of receiving notice of the application, the defendant serves on the applicant a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the act concerned, the condition is not in the defendant’s opinion met;

(b) showing the grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the applicant to prove that the condition is met.

(4) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defendant to require the applicant to prove that the condition is met without service of a notice under subsection (3).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.97 to 101]

319. Interim notification orders

(1) This section applies when an application for a notification order (“the main application”) has not been determined.

(2) An application for an order under this section (“an interim notification order”) —

(a) may be made in the main application; or

(b) if the main application has been made, may be made by supplementary application to the court to which that application has been made.

(3) The court may, if it considers it just to do so, make an interim notification order.

(4) An interim notification order —

(a) has effect only for a fixed period, specified in the order;

(b) ceases to have effect, if it has not already done so, on the determination of the main application.

- (5) While such an order has effect —
- (a) the defendant is subject to the notification requirements of this Part;
 - (b) this Part applies to the defendant, subject to the modification set out in subsection (6).
- (6) For purposes of this section, “relevant date” means the date of service of the order.
- (7) The applicant or the defendant may apply to the court that made the interim notification order for the order to be varied, renewed or discharged.
[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.97 to 101]

320. Notification orders: Appeals

A defendant may appeal to the Supreme Court against the making of a notification order or interim notification order.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.97 to 101]

Sexual harm prevention orders (SHPOs)

321. Sexual harm prevention orders: Applications and grounds – Schedules 3 and 4

(1) A court may make an order under this section (a “sexual harm prevention order” or “SHPO”) in respect of a person (“the defendant”) if subsection (2) or (3) applies to the defendant.

(2) This subsection applies to the defendant if —

(a) the court deals with the defendant in respect of —

- (i) an offence listed in Schedule 3 or Schedule 4;
- (ii) a finding that the defendant is not guilty of such an offence by reason of mental disorder; or
- (iii) a finding that the defendant is under a disability and has done the act charged against the defendant in respect of such an offence; and

(b) the court is satisfied that it is necessary to make a SHPO for the purpose of —

- (i) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from sexual harm from the defendant; or
- (ii) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from sexual harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

(3) This subsection applies to the defendant if —

(a) an application under subsection (4) has been made in respect of the defendant and it is proved on the application that the defendant is a qualifying offender; and

(b) the court is satisfied that the defendant's behaviour since the appropriate date makes it necessary to make a SHPO, for the purpose of —

(i) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from sexual harm from the defendant; or

(ii) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from sexual harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

(4) The Attorney General may by complaint to the Magistrate's Court, or, in the case of a defendant under 18, the Magistrates Court sitting as the Youth Court, apply for a SHPO in respect of a person if it appears to the Attorney General that —

(a) the person is a qualifying offender; and

(b) the person has since the appropriate date acted in such a way as to give reasonable cause to believe that it is necessary for such an order to be made.

(5) The Attorney General may make an application under subsection (4) only in respect of a person —

(a) who resides in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) whom the Attorney General believes is intending to come to the Falkland Islands.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

322. Section 321: Supplementary provisions

(1) In section 321 —

“appropriate date”, in relation to a qualifying offender, means the date or (as the case may be) the first date on which the offender was convicted, found or cautioned as mentioned in subsection (2) or (3) below;

“qualifying offender” means a person within subsection (2) or (3) below.

(2) A person is within this subsection if, whether before or after the commencement of this Part, the person —

(a) has been convicted of an offence listed in Schedule 3 or Schedule 4;

(b) has been found not guilty of such an offence by reason of mental disorder;

(c) has been found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged against him or her in respect of such an offence; or

(d) has been cautioned in respect of such an offence.

(3) A person is within this subsection if, under the law in force in a place outside the Falkland Islands, whether before or after the commencement of this Part —

(a) the person has been convicted of a relevant offence (whether or not the person has been punished for it);

(b) a court exercising jurisdiction under that law has made in respect of a relevant offence a finding equivalent to a finding that the person is not guilty by reason of mental disorder;

(c) such a court has made in respect of a relevant offence a finding equivalent to a finding that the person is under a disability and did the act charged against the person in respect of the offence; or

(d) the person has been cautioned in respect of a relevant offence.

(4) In subsection (3), “relevant offence” means an act which —

(a) constituted an offence under the law in force in the country concerned; and

(b) would have constituted an offence listed in Schedule 3 or Schedule 4 if it had been done in the Falkland Islands.

For this purpose an act punishable under the law in force in a place outside the Falkland Islands constitutes an offence under that law, however it is described in that law.

(5) Subject to subsection (6), on an application under section 321(4) the condition in subsection (3)(b) above (where relevant) is to be taken as met unless, not later than criminal procedure rules may provide, the defendant serves on the applicant a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the act concerned, the condition is not in the defendant’s opinion met;

(b) showing the grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the applicant to prove that the condition is met.

(6) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defendant to require the applicant to prove that the condition is met without service of a notice under subsection (6).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

323. Effect of a SHPO

- (1) A SHPO prohibits the defendant from doing anything described in the order.
- (2) Subject to section 324(1), a prohibition contained in a SHPO has effect —
 - (a) for a fixed period, specified in the order, of at least 5 years; or
 - (b) until further order.
- (3) A SHPO may specify —
 - (a) that some of its prohibitions have effect until further order and some for a fixed period;
 - (b) different periods for different prohibitions.
- (4) The only prohibitions that may be included in a SHPO are those necessary for the purpose of —
 - (a) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from sexual harm from the defendant; or
 - (b) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from sexual harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.
- (5) If a court makes a SHPO in relation to a person who is already subject to such an order (whether made by that court or another), the earlier order ceases to have effect.
[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

324. SHPOs: Prohibition on foreign travel

- (1) A prohibition on foreign travel contained in a SHPO prevention order must be for a fixed period of not more than 5 years.
- (2) A “prohibition on foreign travel” means —
 - (a) a prohibition on travelling to any country outside the Falkland Islands named or described in the order;
 - (b) a prohibition on travelling to any country outside the Falkland Islands other than a country named or described in the order; or
 - (c) a prohibition on travelling to any country outside the Falkland Islands.
- (3) Subsection (1) does not prevent a prohibition on foreign travel from being extended for a further period (of no more than 5 years each time) under section 325.

(4) A SHPO that contains a prohibition within subsection (2)(c) must require the defendant to surrender all of the defendant's passports at a place of lawful custody specified in the order —

(a) on or before the date when the prohibition takes effect; or

(b) within a period specified in the order.

(5) Any passports surrendered must be returned as soon as reasonably practicable after the person ceases to be subject to a SHPO containing a prohibition within subsection (2)(c) unless the person is subject to an equivalent prohibition under another order).

(6) Subsection (5) does not apply in relation to —

(a) a passport issued by or on behalf of the authorities of a place outside the Falkland Islands if the passport has been returned to those authorities;

(b) a passport issued by or on behalf of an international organisation if the passport has been returned to that organisation.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

325. SHPOs: Variation, renewal and discharge

(1) The defendant or the Attorney General may apply to the appropriate court by complaint for an order varying, renewing or discharging a SHPO.

(2) Subject to subsections (3) and (5), on the application the court, after hearing the person making the application and (if that person wishes to be heard) the other person mentioned in subsection (1), may make any order varying, renewing or discharging the SHPO that the court considers appropriate.

(3) An order may be renewed, or varied so as to impose additional prohibitions on the defendant, only if it is necessary to do so for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from sexual harm from the defendant; or

(b) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youth or vulnerable adults, from sexual harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

Any renewed or varied order may contain only such prohibitions as are necessary for this purpose and is subject to section 324(1).

(4) The court must not discharge an order before the end of 5 years beginning with the day on which the order was made, without the consent of the defendant, and the Attorney General.

(5) Subsection (4) does not apply to an order containing a prohibition on foreign travel and no other prohibitions.

(6) In this section “the appropriate court” means the court that made the original order, except that if the Youth Court made the order and the defendant is aged 18 or over, it means the Magistrate’s Court (subject to section 331 and any rules made under it.)

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

326. Interim SHPOs

(1) This section applies if an application under section 321(4) (“the main application”) has not been determined.

(2) An application for an order under this section (“an interim sexual harm prevention order”) —

(a) may be made by the complaint by which the main application is made; or

(b) if the main application has been made, may be made by the person who has made that application, by complaint to the court to which that application has been made.

(3) The court may, if it considers it just to do so, make an interim SHPO, prohibiting the defendant from doing anything described in the order.

(4) Such an order —

(a) has effect only for a fixed period, specified in the order;

(b) ceases to have effect, if it has not already done so, on the determination of the main application.

(5) The applicant or the defendant may by complaint apply to the court that made the interim SHPO for the order to be varied, renewed, or discharged.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

327. SHPOs and interim SHPOs: Notification requirements

(1) If —

(a) a SHPO is made in respect of a defendant who was a relevant offender immediately before the making of the order; and

(b) the defendant would (apart from this subsection) cease to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part while the order (as renewed from time to time) has effect, the defendant remains subject to the notification requirements.

(2) If a SHPO is made in respect of a defendant who was not a relevant offender immediately before the making of the order —

(a) the order causes the defendant to become subject to the notification requirements of this Part from the making of the order until the order (as renewed from time to time) ceases to have effect; and

(b) this Part applies to the defendant, except that the relevant date is the date of service of the order.

(3) Subsections (1) to (3) apply to an interim SHPO as if references to a SHPO were references to an interim SHPO, and with the omission of “(as renewed from time to time)” in both places.

(4) If —

(a) a SHPO is in effect in relation to a relevant offender; and

(b) by virtue of sections 311 and 312 the relevant offender ceases to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part,

the SHPO ceases to have effect.

(5) On an application for a SHPO made by the Attorney General, the court must make a notification order in respect of the defendant (either in addition to or instead of a SHPO) if —

(a) the applicant invites the court to do so; and

(b) it is proved that the conditions in section 316(2) to (4) are met.

(6) On an application for an interim SHPO made by the Attorney General, the court may, if it considers it just to do so, make an interim notification order (either in addition to or instead of an interim SHPO).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

328. SHPOs and interim SHPOs: Appeals

(1) A defendant may appeal against the making of a SHPO —

(a) if the order was made by virtue of section 321(2)(a)(i) - as if the order were a sentence passed on the defendant for the offence;

(b) if the order was made by virtue of section 321(2)(a)(ii) or (iii) - as if the defendant had been convicted of the offence and the order were a sentence passed on the defendant for that offence;

(c) if the order was made on an application under section 321(4) - to the Supreme Court.

(2) A defendant may appeal to the Supreme Court against the making of an interim SHPO.

(3) A defendant may appeal against the making of an order under section 325, or the refusal to make such an order —

(a) if the application for such an order was made to the Supreme Court - to the Court of Appeal;

(b) in any other case - to the Supreme Court.

(4) On an appeal under subsection (1)(c), (2) or (3)(b), the Supreme Court may make —

(a) any order necessary to give effect to its determination of the appeal; and

(b) any incidental or consequential order as appear to the court to be just.

(5) Any order made by the Supreme Court on an appeal under subsection (1)(c) or (2) (other than an order directing that an application be reheard by the Magistrate's Court is for the purposes of section 325(1) or 326(5) to be treated as if it were an order of the court from which the appeal was brought, and not an order of the Supreme Court.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

329. Offence: Breach of SHPO or interim SHPO, etc.

(1) A person who, without reasonable excuse, does anything that the person is prohibited from doing by —

(a) a SHPO;

(b) an interim SHPO;

(c) a Sexual Offences Prevention Order (“SOPO”);

(d) an interim SOPO; or

(e) a foreign travel order,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a requirement imposed under section 324(4) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(3) If a person is convicted of an offence under this section, it is not open to the court by or before which the person is convicted to make, in respect of the offence, an order for conditional discharge.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

330. SHPOs and interim SHPOs: Guidance

(1) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, must issue written guidance to police officers in relation to the exercise by them of their powers with regard to SHPOs and interim SHPOs.

(2) The Governor, after so consulting, may from time to time revise the guidance issued under subsection (1).

(3) The Governor must arrange for any guidance issued or revised under this section to be published in a manner the Governor considers appropriate.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

331. SHPOs and interim SHPOs: Supplementary

(1) The Youth Court may give permission for an application under section 321(4) against an adult to be made to the Youth Court if —

(a) an application to the Youth Court has been made, or is to be made, under that section against a youth; and

(b) the Youth Court thinks that it would be in the interests of justice for the applications to be heard together.

(2) The Chief Justice may by criminal procedure rules make provision in relation to a person attaining the age of 18 after proceedings against that person by virtue of section 321, 325, 326 or 327(5) or (6) have begun —

(a) prescribe circumstances in which the proceedings may or must remain in the Youth Court;

(b) make provision for the transfer of the proceedings from the Youth Court to the Magistrate's Court sitting other than as the Youth Court (including provision applying section 326 with modifications).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.103A to 103K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

Sexual risk orders (SROs)

332. Sexual risk orders: Applications, grounds and effect

(1) The Attorney General may by complaint to the Magistrate's Court, or in the case of a defendant under 18 the Magistrates Court sitting as the Youth Court, apply for an order under this section (a "sexual risk order" or "SRO") in respect of a person ("the defendant") if it appears to the Attorney General that the condition in subsection (2) is met.

(2) The condition is that the defendant has, whether before or after the commencement of this Part, done an act of a sexual nature as a result of which there is reasonable cause to believe that it is necessary for a SRO to be made.

(3) The Attorney General may make an application under subsection (1) only in respect of a person —

(a) who resides in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) whom the Attorney General believes is in the Falkland Islands or is intending to come to the Falkland Islands.

(4) On an application under subsection (1), the court may make a SRO if satisfied that the defendant has, whether before or after the commencement of this Part, done an act of a sexual nature as a result of which it is necessary to make such an order for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from harm from the defendant; or

(b) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

(5) A SRO —

(a) prohibits the defendant from doing anything described in the order;

(b) has effect for a fixed period (not less than 2 years) specified in the order or until further order.

(6) A SRO may specify different periods for different prohibitions.

(7) The only prohibitions that may be imposed are those necessary for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from harm from the defendant; or

(b) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

(8) If a court makes a SRO in relation to a person who is already subject to such an order (whether made by that court or another), the earlier order ceases to have effect.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

333. SROs: Prohibition on foreign travel

(1) A prohibition on foreign travel contained in a SRO must not be for a period of more than 5 years.

(2) A “prohibition on foreign travel” has the same meaning as in relation to a SHPO in section 324.

(3) Subsection (1) does not prevent a prohibition on foreign travel from being extended for a further period (of no more than 5 years each time) under section 334.

(4) Section 324(4) to (6) apply with necessary modifications in relation to a prohibition on foreign travel imposed as a condition of a SRO.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

334. SRO: Variation, renewal and discharge

(1) The defendant or the Attorney General may by complaint to the appropriate court apply for an order varying, renewing or discharging a SRO.

(2) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), on the application the court, after hearing the person making the application and (if he or she wishes to be heard) the other person mentioned in subsection (1), may make any order, varying, renewing or discharging the SRO, that the court considers appropriate.

(3) An SRO may be renewed, or varied so as to impose additional prohibitions on the defendant, only if it is necessary to do so for the purpose of —

(a) protecting the public or any particular members of the public from harm from the defendant; or

(b) protecting youths or vulnerable adults generally, or any particular youths or vulnerable adults, from harm from the defendant outside the Falkland Islands.

Any renewed or varied order may contain only such prohibitions as are necessary for this purpose and is subject to section 333(1).

(4) The court must not discharge an order before the end of 2 years beginning with the day on which the order was made, without the consent of the defendant and the Attorney General.

(5) In this section “the appropriate court” means the court that made the original order, except that if the Youth Court made the order and the defendant is aged 18 or over, it means the Magistrate’s Court (subject to section 342 and any rules made under it.)

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

335. Interim SROs

(1) This section applies if an application for a SRO (“the main application”) has not been determined.

(2) An application for an order under this section (“an interim sexual risk order”) —

(a) may be made by the complaint by which the main application is made; or

(b) if the main application has been made, may be made by the person who has made that application, by complaint to the court to which that application has been made.

(3) The court may, if it considers it just to do so, make an interim SRO, prohibiting the defendant from doing anything described in the order.

(4) An interim SRO —

(a) has effect only for a fixed period, specified in the order; and

(b) ceases to have effect, if it has not already done so, on the determination of the main application.

(5) The applicant or the defendant may by complaint apply to the court that made the interim RO for the order to be varied, renewed or discharged.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

336. SROs and interim SROs: Notification requirements

(1) A person in respect of whom a court makes —

(a) a SRO (other than one that replaces an interim SRO); or

(b) an interim SRO,

must, within the period of 3 days beginning with the date of service of the order, notify to the police the information set out in subsection (2) (unless the person is subject to the notification requirements of this Part on that date).

(2) The information is —

(a) the person's name and, if the person uses one or more other names, each of those names;

(b) the person's home address.

(3) A person who —

(a) is subject to a SRO or an interim SRO (but is not subject to other notification requirements of this Part); and

(b) uses a name which has not been notified under this section (or under any other provision of this Part), or changes his or her home address, must, within 3 days after the date of the use or change, notify to the police that name or (as the case may be) the new home address.

(4) Sections 302 (Method of notification) and 305 (Offences relating to notification) apply for the purposes of this section —

(a) with references to section 298(1) being read as references to subsection (1) above; and

(b) with references to section 299(1) being read as references to subsection (3) above.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

337. SROs and interim SROs: Appeals

(1) A defendant may appeal to the Supreme Court —

(a) against the making of a SRO;

(b) against the making of an interim SRO;

(c) against the refusal to vary or discharge a SRO.

(2) On any such appeal, the Supreme Court may make any order that is necessary to give effect to its determination of the appeal, and any incidental or consequential order that appears to the court to be just.

(3) Any order made by the Supreme Court on an appeal under subsection (1)(a) or (b) (other than an order directing that an application be reheard by the Magistrate's Court) is for the purposes of section 334 or 335(5) to be treated as if it were an order of the court from which the appeal was brought (and not an order of the Supreme Court).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

338. Offence: Breach of SRO or interim SRO, etc.

(1) A person who, without reasonable excuse, does anything that the person is prohibited from doing by —

- (a) a SRO;
- (b) an interim SRO;
- (c) a Risk of Sexual Harm Order (“RSHO”); or
- (d) an interim RSHO,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a requirement imposed under section 324(4) in relation to a SRO commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(3) If a person is convicted of an offence under this section, it is not open to the court by or before which the person is convicted to make, in respect of the offence, an order for conditional discharge.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

339. Effect of conviction, etc. of an offence under section 338

(1) This section applies to a person (“the defendant”) who is –

- (a) convicted of an offence under section 338 of this Ordinance, or section 128 of the Sexual offences Act 2003 as applied to the Falkland Islands;
- (b) found not guilty of such an offence by reason of mental disorder;
- (c) found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged against him or her in respect of such an offence; or
- (d) cautioned in respect of such an offence.

(2) If a defendant —

- (a) was a relevant offender immediately before this section applied to the defendant; and
- (b) would (apart from this subsection) cease to be subject to the notification requirements of this Part (other than those imposed by section 327 or section 336) while the relevant order (as renewed from time to time) has effect, the defendant remains subject to those notification requirements.

(3) If a defendant was not a relevant offender immediately before this section applied to the defendant —

(a) this section causes the defendant to become subject to the notification requirements of this Part (other than those imposed by section 327 or section 336) from the time the section first applies to the defendant until the relevant order (as renewed from time to time) ceases to have effect; and

(b) this Part applies to the defendant, except that the relevant date is the date on which this section first applies to the defendant.

(4) In this section “relevant order” means —

(a) if the conviction, finding or caution within subsection (1) is in respect of a breach of a SRO or a RSHO - that order;

(b) if the conviction, finding or caution within subsection (1) is in respect of a breach of an interim SRO or an interim RSHO - any SRO or RSHO made on the hearing of the application to which the interim order relates; or

(c) if no such order is made - the interim order.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

340. SROs and interim SROs: Guidance

(1) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, must issue guidance to police officers in relation to the exercise by them of their powers with regard to SROs and interim SROs.

(2) The Governor, after so consulting, may from time to time revise the guidance issued under subsection (1).

(3) The Governor must arrange for any guidance issued or revised under this section to be published in a manner the Governor considers appropriate.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

341. SROs and interim SROs: Supplementary

(1) The Youth Court may give permission for an application under section 333 against an adult to be made to the Youth Court if —

(a) an application to the Youth Court has been made, or is to be made, under that section against a youth; and

(b) the Youth Court thinks that it would be in the interests of justice for the applications to be heard together.

(2) The Chief Justice may by criminal procedure rules make provision in relation to a person attaining the age of 18 after proceedings against that person by virtue of section 332, 334 or 335 have begun —

(a) prescribe circumstances in which the proceedings may or must remain in the Youth Court;

(b) make provision for the transfer of the proceedings from the Youth Court to the Magistrate's Court sitting other than as the Youth Court (including provision applying section 335 with modifications).

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss.122A to 122K ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5]

Miscellaneous provisions

342. Power to amend Schedules 3 and 4

(1) The Governor in Council, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order amend Schedule 3 or Schedule 4.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), an amendment within subsection (4) does not apply to convictions, findings and cautions before the amendment takes effect.

(3) For the purposes of this Part, an amendment within subsection (4) applies to convictions, findings and cautions before as well as after the amendment takes effect.

(4) An amendment is within this subsection if it —

(a) adds an offence;

(b) removes a threshold relating to an offence; or

(c) changes a threshold in such a way as to cause an offence committed by or against a person of a particular age or in certain circumstances, or resulting in a particular disposal, to be within a Schedule when it would not otherwise be.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.130]

343. Schedules: Interpretation

(1) A reference in Schedule 3 or 4 to an offence includes a reference to —

(a) an attempt or conspiracy to commit that offence;

(b) encouraging the commission of that offence; and

(c) aiding and abetting the commission of that offence.

(2) A reference in either Schedule to a person's age is —

(a) a reference to the person's age at the time of the offence;

(b) in the case of an indecent photograph - a reference to the person's age when the photograph was taken;

(c) in any other case - a reference to the person's age at the time of the offence.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sched.3]

344. Schedules: Offences with thresholds

(1) This section applies to an offence which is listed in Schedule 3 or 4 subject to a condition relating to the way in which the defendant is dealt with in respect of the offence or (if a relevant finding has been made in respect of the defendant) in respect of the finding (a "sentencing condition").

(2) If an offence is listed subject to a sentencing condition or a condition of another description, this section applies only to the offence as listed subject to that condition.

(3) For the purposes of this Part (including in particular section 297(4)) —

(a) a person is to be regarded as convicted of an offence to which this section applies; or

(b) (as the case may be) a relevant finding in relation to such an offence is to be regarded as made, at the time when the sentencing condition is met.

(4) In the following subsections, references to a foreign offence are references to an act which—

(a) constituted an offence under the law in force in a place outside the Falkland Islands ("the relevant foreign law"); and

(b) would have constituted an offence to which this section applies if it had been done in the Falkland Islands.

(5) In relation to a foreign offence, references to the corresponding the Falkland Islands offence are references to the offence (or any offence) to which subsection (4)(b) applies in the case of that foreign offence.

(6) For the purposes of this Part, a person is to be regarded as convicted under the relevant foreign law of a foreign offence at the time when the person is, in respect of the offence, dealt with under that law in a way equivalent to that mentioned in Schedule 3 as it applies to the corresponding the Falkland Islands offence.

(7) If in the case of any person a court exercising jurisdiction under the relevant foreign law makes in respect of a foreign offence a finding equivalent to a relevant finding, the court's finding is, for the purposes of this Part, to be regarded as made at the time when the person is, in respect of the finding, dealt with under that law in a way equivalent to that mentioned in Schedule 3 as it applies to the corresponding the Falkland Islands offence.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.132]

345. Saving for orders, etc. under the Sexual Offences Ordinance

(1) Notwithstanding the repeal by this Ordinance of the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005, any notification given, and any order or direction made in respect of such notification, under Part 2 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 as applied to the Falkland Islands by the Schedule to that Ordinance continues in effect as if made under the equivalent provisions of this Part.

(2) If a court has before the commencement of this Part made in respect of a person a RSHO, a SOPO or a foreign travel order under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 as applied to the Falkland Islands by the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005, the order continues to have effect in accordance with its terms and that Act, notwithstanding the repeal of that Ordinance, but subject to subsection (3).

(3) If a court makes a SHPO or a SRO on a person in respect of whom a RSHO, SOPO or foreign travel order under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 is in force, the earlier order ceases to have effect unless the court orders otherwise.

[UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 s.136ZB ins. by Anti-social Behaviour, Crime & Policing Act 2014 s.113 and Schedule 5 adapted]

PART 12 - THEFT AND FRAUD

346. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“gain” and “loss” are to be construed as extending only to gain or loss in money or other property, but as extending to any such gain or loss whether temporary or permanent;

“gain” includes a gain by keeping what one has, as well as a gain by getting what one has not;

“goods”, unless the context otherwise requires, includes money and every other description of property except land, and includes things severed from the land by stealing;

“loss” includes a loss by not getting what one might get, as well as a loss by parting with what one has;

“trustee” means a trustee on an express trust created by a deed, will or instrument in writing and includes —

- (a) the heir or personal representative of any such trustee and any other person on or to whom the duty of such trust has devolved or come; and

(b) an executor and administrator and an official receiver, trustee, assignee, liquidator or similar officer acting under any written law relating to joint stock companies or bankruptcy;

(2) Sections 351(1) and 352(1) apply generally for the purposes of this Part as they apply for the purposes of section 348.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s. 34]

Offence of theft

347. Offence of theft

(1) A person who dishonestly appropriates property belonging to another with the intention of permanently depriving the other of it commits theft; and “thief” and “steal” are to be construed accordingly.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) It is immaterial whether the appropriation is made with a view to gain, or is made for the thief's own benefit.

(3) Sections 348 to 352 have effect as regards the interpretation and operation of this section (and, except as otherwise provided by this Part, apply only for purposes of this section).

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.1 and 7]

348. “Dishonestly”

(1) A person's appropriation of property belonging to another is not to be regarded as dishonest if the person who appropriates the property —

(a) believes that that person has in law the right to deprive the other of it, on behalf of the person who appropriates or of a third person;

(b) believes that that person would have the other's consent if the other knew of the appropriation and the circumstances of it; or

(c) (unless the property came to that person as trustee or personal representative) believes that the person to whom the property belongs cannot be discovered by taking reasonable steps.

(2) A person's appropriation of property belonging to another may be dishonest even if the person who appropriates is willing to pay for the property.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.2 to 6]

349. “Appropriates”

(1) Any assumption by a person of the rights of an owner amounts to an appropriation, and this includes, if the person has come by the property (innocently or not) without stealing it, any later assumption of a right to it by keeping or dealing with it as owner.

(2) If property or a right or interest in property is or purports to be transferred for value to a person acting in good faith, no later assumption by that person of rights which that person believed that person was acquiring amounts, by reason of any defect in the transferor's title, to theft of the property.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.2 to 6]

350. “Property”

(1) In this Part, “property” includes money and all other property, real or personal, including things in action and other intangible property.

(2) A person cannot steal land, or things forming part of land and severed from it by that person or by that person’s directions, except when that person —

(a) is a trustee or personal representative, or is authorised by power of attorney, or as liquidator of a company, or otherwise, to sell or dispose of land belonging to another, and appropriates the land or anything forming part of it by dealing with it in breach of the confidence reposed in that person; or

(b) is not in possession of the land and appropriates anything forming part of the land by severing it or causing it to be severed, or after it has been severed; or

(c) being in possession of the land under a tenancy, appropriates the whole or part of any fixture or structure let to be used with the land.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2) —

(a) “land” does not include incorporeal hereditaments;

(b) “tenancy” means a tenancy for years or any less period and includes an agreement for such a tenancy, but a person who after the end of a tenancy remains in possession as statutory tenant or otherwise is to be treated as having possession under the tenancy;

(c) “let” is to be construed accordingly.

(4) A person who picks mushrooms growing wild on any land, or who picks flowers, fruit or foliage from a plant growing wild on any land, does not (although not in possession of the land) steal what is picked, unless the person does it for reward or for sale or other commercial purpose.

(5) For purposes of subsection (4) “mushroom” includes any fungus, and “plant” includes any shrub or tree.

(6) Wild creatures, tamed or untamed, are to be regarded as property; but a person cannot steal a wild creature not tamed nor ordinarily kept in captivity, or the carcase of any such creature, unless either it has been reduced into possession by or on behalf of another person and possession of it has not since been lost or abandoned, or another person is in course of reducing it into possession.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.2 to 6]

351. “Belonging to another”

(1) Property is to be regarded as belonging to any person having possession or control of it, or having in it any proprietary right or interest (not being an equitable interest arising only from an agreement to transfer or grant an interest).

(2) If property is subject to a trust, the persons to whom it belongs are to be regarded as including any person having a right to enforce the trust, and an intention to defeat the trust is to be regarded accordingly as an intention to deprive of the property any person having that right.

(3) If a person receives property from or on account of another person, and is under an obligation to the other to retain and deal with that property or its proceeds in a particular way, the property or proceeds is to be regarded (as against that person) as belonging to the other.

(4) If a person gets property by another person’s mistake, and is under an obligation to make restoration (in whole or in part) of the property or its proceeds or of the value thereof, then to the extent of that obligation the property or proceeds are to be regarded (as against the person who gets the property) as belonging to the person entitled to restoration, and an intention not to make restoration is to be regarded accordingly as an intention to deprive that person of the property or proceeds.

(5) Property of a corporation sole is to be regarded as belonging to the corporation notwithstanding a vacancy in the corporation.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.2 to 6]

352. “With the intention of permanently depriving the other of it”

(1) If a person (‘A’) appropriates property belonging to another person (‘B’) without meaning B permanently to lose the thing itself —

(a) A is to be regarded as having the intention of permanently depriving B of it if A’s intention is to treat the thing as A’s own to dispose of regardless of B’s rights; and

(b) a borrowing or lending of it may amount to so treating it if, but only if, the borrowing or lending is for a period and in circumstances making it equivalent to an outright taking or disposal.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), if A, having possession or control (lawfully or not) of property belonging to B, parts with the property under a condition as to its return which A may not be able to perform, this (if done for purposes of A’s own and without B’s authority) amounts to treating the property as A’s own to dispose of regardless of B’s rights.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.2 to 6]

Robbery, burglary, etc.

353. Robbery

(1) A person who —

(a) steals; and

(b) immediately before or at the time of doing so, and in order to do so, uses force on any person or puts or seeks to put any person in fear of being then and there subjected to force, commits robbery.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 18 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who assaults another person with intent to rob that person commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 18 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.8 to 10]

354. Burglary

(1) A person who —

(a) enters any building or part of a building as a trespasser and with intent to commit an offence mentioned in subsection (2); or

(b) having entered any building or part of a building as a trespasser —

(i) steals or attempts to steal anything in the building or that part of it; or

(ii) inflicts or attempts to inflict on any person in the building any grievous bodily harm, commits burglary.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (4).

(2) The offences referred to in subsection (1)(a) are —

(a) stealing anything in the building or part of a building in question;

(b) inflicting on any person in the building any grievous bodily harm;

(c) doing unlawful damage to the building or anything in it.

(3) References in subsections (1) and (2) to a building, and the reference in subsection (3) to a building which is a dwelling, apply also to an inhabited vehicle or vessel, and apply to any such vehicle or vessel at times when the person having a habitation in it is not there as well as at times when the person is there.

(4) The maximum penalty on conviction for burglary is —

(a) imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both; or

(b) if the burglary was in a dwelling-house - imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.8 to 10]

355. Aggravated burglary

(1) A person who commits any burglary and has with him or her at the time any firearm or imitation firearm, any weapon of offence, or any explosive, commits aggravated burglary.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 18 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1) —

“firearm” includes an airgun or air pistol;

“imitation firearm” means anything which has the appearance of being a firearm, whether capable of being discharged or not;

“weapon of offence” means any article made or adapted for use for causing injury to or incapacitating a person, or intended by the person who has it with him or her for such use; and “explosive” means any article manufactured for the purpose of producing a practical effect by explosion, or intended by the person who has it with him or her for that purpose.

[UK Theft Act 1968 ss.8 to 10]

356. Going equipped for stealing etc.

(1) A person who, when not at his or her place of abode, has with him or her any article for use in the course of or in connection with any burglary or theft commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person is charged with an offence under this section, proof that the person had with him or her any article made or adapted for use in committing a burglary or theft is evidence that the person had it with him or her for such use.

(3) For purposes of this section an offence under section 362 of taking a conveyance is to be treated as theft.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.25 as am. by Fraud Act 2006]

357. Theft of or from mails outside the Falkland Islands, and robbery, etc. on such a theft

(1) If a person —

(a) steals or attempts to steal any mail bag or postal packet in the course of transmission to or from the Falkland Islands, or any of the contents of such a mail bag or postal packet; or

(b) in stealing or with intent to steal any such mail bag or postal packet or any of its contents, commits any robbery, attempted robbery or assault with intent to rob, then, even though the act is done outside the Falkland Islands, the person is guilty of committing or attempting to commit the offence against the relevant provision of this Part as if it were done in the Falkland Islands, and is liable to be prosecuted, tried and punished in the Falkland Islands without proof that the offence was committed there.

(2) For the purposes of this section a postal packet is deemed to be in course of transmission by post from the time of its being delivered to a post office to the time of its being delivered to the person to whom it is addressed.

(3) In this section —

“mail bag” includes any form of container or covering in which postal packets in the course of transmission by post are enclosed by a postal operator in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere for the purpose of conveyance by post;

“postal packet” means a letter, parcel, packet or other article transmissible by post.
[UK Theft Act 1968 s.14; Postal Services Act 2000 s.125]

Offences relating to stolen goods

358. Scope of offences relating to stolen goods

(1) The provisions of this Part relating to goods which have been stolen apply whether the stealing occurred in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere, if the stealing (not being an offence under this Part) amounted to an offence where the goods were stolen; and references to stolen goods are to be construed accordingly.

(2) For the purposes of those provisions, references to stolen goods include, in addition to the goods originally stolen and parts of them (whether in their original state or not) —

(a) any other goods which directly or indirectly represent or have at any time represented the stolen goods in the hands of the thief as being the proceeds of any disposal or realisation of the whole or part of the goods stolen or of goods so representing the stolen goods; and

(b) any other goods which directly or indirectly represent or have at any time represented the stolen goods in the hands of a handler of the stolen goods or any part of them as being the proceeds of any disposal or realisation of the whole or part of the stolen goods handled by the handler or of goods so representing them.

(3) No goods are to be regarded as having continued to be stolen goods after they have been restored to the person from whom they were stolen or to other lawful possession or custody, or after that person and any other person claiming through that person have otherwise ceased as regards those goods to have any right to restitution in respect of the theft.

(4) For purposes of the provisions of this Part relating to goods which have been stolen (including subsections (1) to (3) of this section), goods obtained in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere either by blackmail or, subject to subsection (5), by fraud (within the meaning of section 368) are to be regarded as stolen; and “steal”, “theft” and “thief” are to be construed accordingly.

(5) Subsection (1) applies in relation to goods obtained by fraud.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.24 as am. by Fraud Act 2006]

359. Handling stolen goods

A person who, otherwise than in the course of stealing, knowing or believing goods to be stolen—

(a) dishonestly receives the goods;

(b) dishonestly undertakes or assists in their retention, removal, disposal or realisation by or for the benefit of another person; or

(c) arranges to do (a) or (b), commits the offence of handling stolen goods.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.22 as am. by Fraud Act 2006]

360. Advertising rewards for return of goods stolen or lost

If any public advertisement of a reward for the return of any goods which have been stolen or lost uses any words to the effect that —

(a) no questions will be asked;

(b) the person producing the goods will be safe from arrest or inquiry; or

(c) money paid for the purchase of the goods or advanced by way of loan on them will be repaid, the person advertising the reward and any person who prints or publishes the advertisement each commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

[UK Theft Act 1978 s.23]

361. Search for stolen goods

(1) Subject to subsection (2), if it is made to appear by information on oath before a justice of the peace that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in the person’s custody or possession or on the person’s premises any stolen goods, the justice may grant a warrant to search for and seize the same.

(2) No warrant to search for stolen goods may be addressed to a person other than a police officer except under the authority of an enactment expressly so providing.

(3) A person who under this section is authorised to search premises for stolen goods may —

(a) enter and search the premises; and

(b) seize any goods the person believes to be stolen goods.

(4) This section is to be construed in accordance with section 358.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.26]

Offences similar to theft

362. Taking a conveyance without authority

(1) Subject to subsections (4) and (7), a person ('A') who, without having the consent of the owner or other lawful authority —

(a) takes a conveyance for the use of A or another person; or

(b) knowing that a conveyance has been taken without such authority, drives it or allows himself or herself to be carried in or on it,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) If on the trial for theft the court is not satisfied that the defendant committed theft, but is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the defendant committed an offence under subsection (1)—

(a) the court may convict the defendant of the offence under subsection (1); and

(b) the maximum penalty on conviction is as provided in subsection (1).

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply in relation to pedal cycles.

(4) Subject to subsection (7), a person ('A') who, without having the consent of the owner or other lawful authority —

(a) takes a pedal cycle for the use of A or another person; or

(b) rides a pedal cycle knowing it to have been taken without such authority,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

(5) A person does not commit an offence under this section if the person believes that he or she—

(a) has lawful authority to do the thing; or

(b) would have the owner's consent to do it if the owner knew of the person's doing it and the circumstances.

(6) The court, upon convicting a person of an offence under subsection (1), must order that the person's driver's licence be endorsed with particulars of the conviction and may disqualify the person from holding or obtaining a driver's licence for a period the court thinks fit.

(7) A police officer may arrest without warrant any person whom the officer reasonably suspects of having committed, being in the course of committing, having attempted or being in the course of attempting to commit an offence under this section.

(8) For purposes of this section —

“conveyance” —

(a) means any conveyance constructed or adapted for the carriage of a person or persons by land, water or air; but

(b) does not include a conveyance constructed or adapted for use only under the control of a person not carried in or on it;

“drive” is to be construed accordingly; and

“owner”, in relation to a conveyance which is the subject of a hiring agreement or hire-purchase agreement, means the person in possession of the conveyance under that agreement.

[Road Traffic Ordinance s.30, replacing UK Theft Act 1968 s.12]

363. Aggravated vehicle-taking

(1) Subject to subsection (3), a person ('A') commits aggravated taking of a vehicle if —

(a) A commits an offence under section 362 (in this section referred to as a “basic offence”) in relation to a mechanically propelled vehicle; and

(b) it is proved that, at any time after the vehicle was unlawfully taken (whether by A or another person) and before it was recovered, the vehicle was driven, or injury or damage was caused, in one or more of the circumstances set out in paragraphs (a) to (d) of subsection (2).

Penalty: As provided in subsection (4).

(2) The circumstances referred to in subsection (1)(b) are that —

(a) the vehicle was driven dangerously on a road or other public place;

(b) owing to the driving of the vehicle, an accident occurred by which injury was caused to any person;

(c) owing to the driving of the vehicle, an accident occurred by which damage was caused to any property, other than the vehicle;

(d) damage was caused to the vehicle.

(3) A is not guilty of an offence under this section if A proves that, as regards any proven driving, injury or damage as referred to in subsection (1)(b), either —

(a) the driving, accident or damage referred to in subsection (2) occurred before A committed the basic offence; or

(b) A was neither in nor on nor in the immediate vicinity of the vehicle when that driving, accident or damage occurred.

(4) The maximum penalty on conviction for an offence under this section is —

(a) imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both; or

(b) if it is proved that, in circumstances falling within subsection (2)(b), the accident caused the death of a person - imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(5) If a person who is charged with an offence under this section is found not guilty of that offence but it is proved that the person committed a basic offence, the person may be convicted of the basic offence.

(6) If by virtue of subsection (5) a person is convicted of a basic offence before the Supreme Court, the court has the same powers and duties as the Magistrate's Court or Summary Court would have on convicting the person of such an offence.

(7) For the purposes of this section a vehicle is driven dangerously if —

(a) it is driven in a way which falls far below what would be expected of a competent and careful driver; and

(b) it would be obvious to a competent and careful driver that driving the vehicle in that way would be dangerous.

(8) For the purposes of this section a vehicle is recovered when it is restored to its owner or to other lawful possession or custody.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.12A ins. by Aggravated Vehicle Taking Act 1992]

364. Removing articles from places open to the public

(1) Subject to subsections (2) to (4), if the public have access to a building in order to view the building or part of it, or a collection or part of a collection housed in it, any person who without lawful authority removes from the building or its grounds the whole or part of any article displayed or kept for display to the public in the building or that part of it or in its grounds commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1) —

(a) “collection” includes a collection got together for a temporary purpose; but

(b) references in this section to a collection do not apply to a collection made or exhibited for the purpose of effecting sales or other commercial dealings.

(3) For purposes of subsection (1) —

(a) it is immaterial that the public’s access to a building is limited to a particular period or particular occasion; but

(b) if anything removed from a building or its grounds is there otherwise than as forming part of, or being on loan for exhibition with, a collection intended for permanent exhibition to the public, the person removing it does not thereby commit an offence under this section unless the person removes it on a day when the public have access to the building as mentioned in that subsection.

(4) A person does not commit an offence under this section if the person believes that he or she—

(a) has lawful authority for the removal of the thing in question; or

(b) would have such authority if the person entitled to give it knew of the removal and the circumstances of it.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.11]

365. Making off without payment

(1) Subject to subsection (3), a person who, knowing that immediate payment for any goods supplied or service done is required or expected from the person, dishonestly makes off without having paid as required or expected and with intent to avoid payment of the amount due commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For purposes of this section “immediate payment” includes payment at the time of collecting goods on which work has been done or in respect of which service has been provided.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply in cases in which the supply of the goods or the doing of the service is contrary to law, or in which the service done is such that payment is not legally enforceable.

[UK Theft Act 1978 s.3]

366. Abstracting of electricity

A person who dishonestly —

- (a) uses without due authority; or
- (b) causes to be wasted or diverted,

any electricity, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.13]

Blackmail

367. Blackmail

(1) A person who —

- (a) with a view to gain for that person or another person; or
- (b) with intent to cause loss to another person, makes any unwarranted demand with menaces, commits the offence of blackmail.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of this section, a demand with menaces is unwarranted unless the person making it does so in the belief that —

- (a) the person has reasonable grounds for making the demand; and
- (b) the use of the menaces is a proper means of reinforcing the demand.

(3) The nature of the act or omission demanded is immaterial, and it is also immaterial whether the menaces relate to action to be taken by the person making the demand.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.21]

Fraud

368. Offence of fraud

A person who contravenes any of sections 369 to 372 (which provide for different ways of committing the offence) commits the offence of fraud.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 ss.1 to 4]

369. Fraud by false representation

(1) A person ('A') is in breach of this section if A —

- (a) dishonestly makes a false representation; and
- (b) intends, by making the representation to —
 - (i) make a gain for A or another person; or
 - (ii) cause loss to another person or to expose another person to a risk of loss.

(2) A representation is false if —

- (a) it is untrue or misleading; and
- (b) the person making it knows that it is, or might be, untrue or misleading.

(3) In this section, “representation” means any representation as to fact or law, including a representation as to the state of mind of —

- (a) the person making the representation; or
- (b) any other person.

(4) For the purposes of this section a representation may be —

- (a) express or implied;
- (b) regarded as made if it (or anything implying it) is submitted in any form to any system or device designed to receive, convey or respond to communications (with or without human intervention).

[UK Fraud Act 2006 ss.1 to 4]

370. Fraud by failing to disclose information

A person ('A') is in breach of this section if A —

- (a) dishonestly fails to disclose to another person information which A is under a legal duty to disclose; and
- (b) intends, by failing to disclose the information —
 - (i) to make a gain for A or another person; or
 - (ii) to cause loss to another person or to expose another person to a risk of loss.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 ss.1 to 4]

371. Fraud by abuse of position

(1) A person ('A') is in breach of this section if A —

- (a) occupies a position in which A is expected to safeguard, or not to act against, the financial interests of another person;
- (b) dishonestly abuses that position; and
- (c) intends, by means of the abuse of that position —
 - (i) to make a gain for A or another person; or
 - (ii) to cause loss to another person or to expose another person to a risk of loss.

(2) A may be regarded as having abused A's position even though A's conduct consisted of an omission rather than an act.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 ss.1 to 4]

372. Possession etc. of articles for use in frauds

A person ('A') who has in the possession or under the control of A any article for use in the course of or in connection with any fraud commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.6]

373. Making or supplying articles for use in frauds

A person who makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article —

- (a) knowing that it is designed or adapted for use in the course of or in connection with fraud; or
- (b) intending it to be used to commit, or assist in the commission of, fraud,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.6]

374. Participating in fraudulent business carried on by sole trader, etc.

(1) A person who is knowingly a party to the carrying on of a business to which this section applies commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This section applies to a business which is —

- (a) not governed by the UK Companies Act 1948 as applied to the Falkland Islands; and

(b) carried on with intent to defraud creditors of any person or for any other fraudulent purpose.

(3) This section is in addition to and does not derogate from any powers of investigation of fraudulent conduct under the UK Companies Act 1948 as applied to the Falkland Islands by section 2 of the Companies and Private Partnership Ordinance and by the Companies (Auditors) Ordinance.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.9 adapted]

375. Obtaining services dishonestly

(1) A person ('A') who obtains services for A or another person —

(a) by a dishonest act; and

(b) in breach of subsection (2),

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A obtains services in breach of this subsection if —

(a) they are made available on the basis that payment has been, is being or will be made for or in respect of them;

(b) A obtains them without any payment having been made for or in respect of them or without payment having been made in full; and

(c) when A obtains them, A knows that they —

(i) are being made available on the basis described in paragraph (a), or

(ii) might be so made available, but intends that payment will not be made, or will not be made in full.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.11]

376. Fraud: Definitions

(1) For the purposes of sections 368 to 371, "gain" and "loss" —

(a) extend only to gain or loss in money or other property;

(b) include any such gain or loss whether temporary or permanent;

and in this context, "property" means any property whether real or personal (including things in action and other intangible property).

(2) For the purposes of —

(a) sections 372 and 373; and

(b) the meaning of “prohibited articles” for the purposes of stop and search powers in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014, so far as they relate to articles for use in the course of or in connection with fraud, “article” includes any programme or data held in electronic form.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.8 adapted]

377. Fraud: Evidence

(1) A person (‘A’) is not to be excused from —

(a) answering any question put to A in proceedings relating to property; or

(b) complying with any order made in proceedings relating to property, on the ground that doing so may incriminate A or A’s spouse of an offence under any of sections 368 to 375 or a related offence.

(2) In proceedings against a person for an offence under any of sections 368 to 375 or a related offence, a statement or admission made by the person in —

(a) answering such a question; or

(b) complying with such an order, is not admissible in evidence against the person or (unless they married after the making of the statement or admission) the person’s spouse.

(3) In this section —

“proceedings relating to property” means any proceedings for —

(a) the recovery or administration of any property;

(b) the execution of a trust; or

(c) an account of any property or dealings with property,

“property” means money or other property whether real or personal (including things in action and other intangible property);

“related offence” means —

(a) conspiracy to defraud;

(b) any other offence involving any form of fraudulent conduct or purpose.

[UK Fraud Act 2006 s.13]

Offences similar to fraud

378. False accounting

(1) A person ('A') who dishonestly, with a view to gain for A or another person or with intent to cause loss to another person —

(a) destroys, defaces, conceals or falsifies any account or any record or document made or required for any accounting purpose; or

(b) in furnishing information for any purpose produces or makes use of any account, or any such record or document as aforesaid, which to A's knowledge is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For purposes of this section a person who —

(a) makes or concurs in making in an account or other document an entry which is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular; or

(b) omits or concurs in omitting a material particular from an account or other document, is to be treated as falsifying the account or document.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.17]

379. False statements by company directors, etc.

(1) An officer of a corporate body or unincorporated association (or person purporting to act as such) who, with intent to deceive members or creditors of the corporate body or association about its affairs, publishes or concurs in publishing a written statement or account which to the officer's knowledge is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this section a person who has entered into a security for the benefit of a corporate body or association is to be treated as a creditor of it.

(3) If the affairs of a corporate body or association are managed by its members, this section applies to any statement which a member publishes or concurs in publishing in connection with the member's or her functions of management as if the member were an officer of the corporate body or association.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.19]

380. Suppression etc. of documents

(1) A person ('A') who dishonestly, with a view to gain for A or another person, or with intent to cause loss to another person, destroys, defaces or conceals —

(a) any valuable security;

(b) any will or other testamentary document; or

(c) any original document of or belonging to, or filed or deposited in, any court of justice or any government department,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In this section, "valuable security" means any document —

(a) creating, transferring, surrendering or releasing any right to, in or over property;

(b) authorising the payment of money or delivery of any property; or

(c) evidencing the creation, transfer, surrender or release of any such right, or the payment of money or delivery of any property, or the satisfaction of any obligation.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.20]

381. Dishonestly retaining a wrongful credit

(1) A person commits an offence if —

(a) a wrongful credit has been made to an account kept by the person or in respect of which the person has any right or interest;

(b) the person knows or believes that the credit is wrongful; and

(c) the person dishonestly fails to take such steps as are reasonable in the circumstances to secure that the credit is cancelled.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A credit to an account is wrongful to the extent that it derives from —

(a) theft;

(b) blackmail;

(c) fraud (contrary to section 369); or

(d) stolen goods.

(3) In determining whether a credit to an account is wrongful, it is immaterial whether the account is overdrawn before or after the credit is made.

(4) In this section —

“account” means an account kept with —

(a) a bank;

(b) a person carrying on a business which falls within subsection (5); or

(c) an issuer of electronic money (as defined in Part 2 of the UK Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as applied to the Falkland Islands);

“credit” means a credit of an amount of money;

“stolen goods” include money which is dishonestly withdrawn from an account to which a wrongful credit has been made, but only to the extent that the money derives from the credit.

(5) A business falls within this subsection if —

(a) in the course of the business money received by way of deposit is lent to others; or

(b) any other activity of the business is financed, wholly or to any material extent, out of the capital of or the interest on money received by way of deposit.

(6) For the purpose of subsection (5) —

(a) references to a deposit must be read with Part 2 of the UK Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as applied to the Falkland Islands;

(b) any restriction on the meaning of “deposit” which arises from the identity of the person making it is to be disregarded;

(c) all the activities which a person carries on by way of business are to be regarded as a single business carried on by that person; and

(d) “money” includes money expressed in a currency other than sterling.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.24A inserted by Theft (Am.) Act 1996]

382. Cheating the public revenue

It is an offence for a person to —

- (a) make a false statement relating to tax, whether in writing or not, with intent to defraud the public revenue;
- (b) deliver or cause to be delivered a false document relating to tax, with similar intent;
- (c) fail to register for tax or to make the requisite returns and payments when due; or
- (d) otherwise engage in fraudulent conduct (whether similar to the conduct mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (c) or not) which diverts taxation money from the public revenue or deprives it of taxation money to which it is entitled.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[Common law]

Miscellaneous provisions

383. Prohibition on interception

(1) A person ('A') who intentionally intercepts a communication in the course of its transmission by post or by means of a public telecommunications system commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) It is a defence for A to prove —

(a) that at the time of the alleged offence A had reasonable grounds for believing that the person to whom, or the person by whom, the communication was sent has consented to the interception;

(b) the communication was intercepted for purposes connected with the provision of postal or public telecommunication services or with the enforcement of any enactment relating to the use of those services; or

(c) the communication was being transmitted by wireless telegraphy and was intercepted with lawful authority for purposes connected with the issue of licences under the Telecommunications Ordinance or detection of interference with wireless telegraphy.

(3) No proceedings for an offence under subsection (1) may be brought except by or with the consent of the Attorney General.

[Crimes Ord. s.30; UK Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, s.1]

384. Procedure and evidence on charge of theft or handling stolen goods

(1) Any number of persons may be charged in one indictment, with reference to the same theft, with having at different times or at the same time handled all or any of the stolen goods, and the persons so charged may be tried together.

(2) On the trial of 2 or more persons charged for jointly handling any stolen goods, the court may find any of the defendants guilty if the court is satisfied that the person handled all or any of the stolen goods, whether or not the person did so jointly with the other defendant or any of them.

(3) If a person is being proceeded against for handling stolen goods (but not for any offence other than handling stolen goods), then at any stage of the proceedings, if evidence has been given of that person's having or arranging to have in that person's possession the goods the subject of the charge, or of that person's undertaking or assisting in, or arranging to undertake or assist in, their retention, removal, disposal or realisation, the following evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving that the person knew or believed the goods to be stolen goods —

(a) evidence that the person has had in that person's possession, or has undertaken or assisted in the retention, removal, disposal or realisation of, stolen goods from any theft taking place not earlier than 12 months before the offence charged; and

(b) if 7 days' notice in writing has been given to the person of the intention to prove the conviction - evidence that the person has within the 5 years preceding the date of the offence charged been convicted of theft or of handling stolen goods.

(4) In any proceedings for the theft of anything in the course of transmission (whether by post or otherwise), or for handling stolen goods from such a theft, a statutory declaration made by any person that that person despatched or received or failed to receive any goods or postal packet, or that any goods or postal packet when despatched or received by that person were in a particular state or condition, is admissible as evidence of the facts stated in the declaration, subject to the following conditions —

(a) a statutory declaration is only admissible if and to the extent to which oral evidence to the like effect would have been admissible in the proceedings; and

(b) a statutory declaration is only admissible if at least 7 days before the hearing or trial a copy of it has been given to the person charged, and that person has not, at least 3 days before the hearing or trial or within any further time the court in special circumstances allows, given the prosecutor written notice requiring the attendance at the hearing or trial of the person making the declaration.

(5) This section is to be construed in accordance with section 358.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.27]

385. Effect on civil proceedings and rights

(1) A person is not to be excused from —

(a) answering any question put to the person in proceedings for the recovery or administration of any property, for the execution of any trust or for an account of any property or dealings with property; or

(b) complying with any order made in any such proceedings,

on the ground that do so may incriminate the person or the person's spouse or civil partner of an offence under this Part.

(2) No statement or admission made by a person in answering a question put or complying with an order made pursuant to subsection (1) is, in proceedings for an offence under this Part, admissible in evidence against the person or (unless they married or became civil partners after the making of the statement or admission) against the person's spouse or civil partner.

(3) Regardless of any enactment to the contrary, if property has been stolen or obtained by fraud or other wrongful means, the title to that or any other property is not affected by reason only of the conviction of the offender.

[UK Theft Act 1968 s.31]

PART 13 - FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING

386. Interpretation of Part

In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“currency note” means any note —

(a) which —

(i) has been issued by the relevant authority in the Falkland Islands or the United Kingdom;

(ii) is or has been customarily used as money in the Falkland Islands; and

(iii) is payable on demand; or

(b) which —

(i) has been issued by the relevant authority in some country other than the Falkland Islands; and

(ii) is customarily used as money in that or another country;

“protected coin” means any coin which —

(a) is customarily used as money in any country; or

(b) is specified in an order made by the relevant authority for the purposes of this Part;

“Register” means the register kept at the Central Registry pursuant to the Registration Ordinance;

“relevant authority”, in relation to a coin or a currency note of any particular description, means the authority empowered by law to issue those coins, or notes of that description, as the case may be;

“revenue stamp” means a stamp for denoting any duty or fee, whether an adhesive stamp or a stamp impressed by means of a die;

“share certificate” means an instrument entitling or evidencing the title of a person to a share or interest —

(a) in any public stock, annuity, fund or debt of any government or territory, including a territory which forms part of a state; or

(b) in any stock, fund or debt of a body (whether corporate or unincorporated) established in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 passim; Stamp Duties Act 1981 s.127]

Forgery and kindred offences

387. Meaning of “instrument”

(1) Subject to subsection (2), in this Part “instrument” means —

(a) any document, whether of a formal or informal character;

(b) any stamp issued or sold by a postal operator;

(c) any revenue stamp; and

(d) any disc, tape, sound track or other device on or in which information is recorded or stored by mechanical, electronic or other means.

(2) A currency note as defined in section 386 is not an instrument for the purposes of this Part.

(3) A mark denoting payment of postage which the postal operator authorises to be used instead of an adhesive stamp is to be treated for the purposes of this Part as if it were a stamp issued by the postal operator concerned.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.8 to 10]

388. Meaning of “false” and “making”

(1) An instrument is false for the purposes of this Part if it purports to have been —

(a) made in the form in which it is made by a person who did not in fact make it in that form;

(b) made in the form in which it is made on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise its making in that form;

(c) made in the terms in which it is made by a person who did not in fact make it in those terms;

(d) made in the terms in which it is made on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise its making in those terms;

(e) altered in any respect by a person who did not in fact alter it in that respect;

(f) altered in any respect on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise the alteration in that respect;

(g) made or altered on a date on which, or at a place at which, or otherwise in circumstances in which, it was not in fact made or altered; or

(h) made or altered by an existing person who did not in fact exist.

(2) A person is to be treated for the purposes of this Part as making a false instrument if the person alters an instrument so as to make it false in any respect (whether or not it is false in some other respect apart from that alteration).

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.8 to 10]

389. Meaning of “prejudice” and “induce”

(1) Subject to subsections (2) and (4), for the purposes of this Part an act or omission intended to be induced is to a person’s prejudice if, and only if, it is one which, if it occurs, will —

(a) result in the person —

(i) losing the property temporarily or permanently;

(ii) being deprived of an opportunity to earn remuneration or greater remuneration; or

(iii) being deprived of an opportunity to gain a financial advantage otherwise than by way of remuneration; or

(b) result in somebody being given an opportunity to —

(i) earn remuneration or greater remuneration from the person; or

(ii) gain a financial advantage from the person otherwise than by way of remuneration; or

(c) be the result of the person having accepted a false instrument as genuine, or a copy of a false instrument as a copy of a genuine one, in connection with the person’s performance of any duty.

(2) Doing something that a person has an enforceable duty to do and omitting to do something that a person is not entitled to do are to be disregarded for the purposes of this Part.

(3) In this Part references to inducing somebody to accept a false instrument as genuine, or a copy of a false instrument as a copy of a genuine one, include references to inducing a machine to respond to the instrument or copy as if it were a genuine instrument or, as the case may be, a copy of a genuine one.

(4) If subsection (3) applies, the act or omission intended to be induced by the machine responding to the instrument or copy is to be treated as an act or omission to a person's prejudice.

(5) In this section, "loss" includes not getting what one might get as well as parting with what one has.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.8 to 10]

390. Forgery

A person ('A') who makes a false instrument, with the intention that A or another person will use it to induce somebody ('B') to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B or any other person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.1 to 6]

391. Copying a false instrument

A person ('A') who makes a copy of an instrument which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a false instrument, with the intention that A or another will use it to induce somebody ('B') to accept it as a copy of a genuine instrument, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B or any other person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.1 to 6]

392. Using a false instrument

A person ('A') who uses an instrument which is, and which A knows or believes to be, false, with the intention of inducing somebody ('B') to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B or any other person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.1 to 6]

393. Using a copy of a false instrument

A person ('A') who uses a copy of an instrument which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a false instrument, with the intention of inducing somebody ('B') to accept it as a copy of a genuine instrument, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B any other person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.1 to 6]

394. Offences relating to money orders, share certificates, passports, etc.

(1) A person ('A') who has in A's custody or under A's control an instrument to which this section applies which is, and which A knows or believes to be, false, with the intention that A or another person will use it to induce somebody ('B') to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B or any other person, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who has in A's custody or under A's control, without lawful authority or excuse, an instrument to which this section applies which is, and which A knows or believes to be, false, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person ('A') who makes or has in A's custody or under A's control a machine or implement, or paper or any other material, which to A's knowledge is or has been specially designed or adapted for the making of an instrument to which this section applies, with the intention —

(a) that A or another person will make an instrument to which this section applies which is false; and

(b) that A or another person will use the instrument to induce somebody ('B') to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to the prejudice of B or any other person,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(4) A person ('A') who makes or has in A's custody or under A's control any machine, implement, paper or material as described in subsection (3), without lawful authority or excuse, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(5) The instruments to which this section applies are —

(a) money orders;

(b) postal orders;

(c) Falkland Islands postage stamps;

(d) revenue stamps;

(e) share certificates;

(f) passports and documents which can be used instead of passports;

- (g) cheques;
- (h) travellers' cheques;
- (i) cheque cards;
- (j) credit cards;
- (k) certified copies relating to an entry in the Register; and
- (l) certificates relating to entries in the Register.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.1 to 6]

395. Abolition of offence of forgery at common law

The offence of forgery at common law is abolished for all purposes except in relation to offences committed before the commencement of this Part.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 s.13]

Counterfeiting and kindred offences

396. Counterfeiting notes and coins

(1) A person ('A') who makes a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin, intending that A or another person will pass or tender it as genuine, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, without lawful authority or excuse, makes a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.14 to 17 and 22]

397. Passing, etc. counterfeit notes and coins

(1) A person ('A') who —

(a) passes or tenders as genuine anything which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin; or

(b) delivers to another anything which is, and which A knows or believes to be, such a counterfeit, intending that the person to whom it is delivered or another will pass or tender it as genuine,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who, without lawful authority or excuse, delivers to another person anything which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.
[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.14 to 17 and 22]

398. Custody or control of counterfeit notes and coins

(1) A person ('A') who has in A's custody or under A's control anything which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin, intending either to pass or tender it as genuine or to deliver it to another person ('B') with the intention that A or B will pass or tender it as genuine, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who, without lawful authority or excuse, has in A's custody or under A's control anything which is, and which A knows or believes to be, a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) It is immaterial for the purposes of subsections (1) and (2) that —

(a) that a coin or note is not in a fit state to be passed or tendered; or

(b) that the making or counterfeiting of a coin or note has not been finished or perfected.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.14 to 17 and 22]

399. Making, etc. of counterfeiting materials and implements

(1) A person ('A') who —

(a) makes; or

(b) has in A's custody or under A's control, anything which A intends to use, or to permit any other person to use, for the purpose of making a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin with the intention that it be passed or tendered as genuine, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who, without lawful authority or excuse —

(a) makes; or

(b) has in A's custody or under A's control,

anything which, to A's knowledge, is or has been specially designed or adapted for the making of a counterfeit of a currency note, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), a person ('A') who —

- (a) makes; or
- (b) has in A's custody or under A's control,

any implement which, to A's knowledge, is capable of imparting to anything a resemblance —

- (i) to the whole or part of either side of a protected coin; or
- (ii) to the whole or part of the reverse of the image on either side of a protected coin,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(4) It is a defence for a person ('A') charged with an offence under subsection (3) to show that A—

(a) made the implement or, as the case may be, had it in A's custody or under A's control, with the written consent of the relevant authority; or

(b) had lawful authority otherwise than by virtue of paragraph (a), or a lawful excuse, for making it or having it in A's custody or under A's control.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.14 to 17 and 22]

400. Meaning of "counterfeit"

(1) For the purposes of this Part a thing is a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin if —

(a) it is not a currency note or a protected coin but resembles a currency note or protected coin (whether on one side only or on both) to such an extent that it is reasonably capable of passing for a currency note or protected coin of that description; or

(b) it is a currency note or protected coin which has been so altered that it is reasonably capable of passing for a currency note or protected coin of some other description.

(2) For the purpose of this Part —

(a) a thing consisting of one side only of a currency note, with or without the addition of other material is a counterfeit of such a note;

(b) a thing consisting —

(i) of parts of 2 or more currency notes; or

(ii) of parts of a currency note, or of parts of 2 or more currency notes, with the addition of other material, is capable of being a counterfeit of a currency note.

(3) References in this Part to passing or tendering a counterfeit of a currency note or a protected coin are not to be construed as confined to passing or tendering it as legal tender.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 s.28]

401. Reproducing currency notes

(1) A person who reproduces any currency note or any part of a currency note, without the previous consent in writing of the relevant authority, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to reproduction on any substance whatsoever, and whether or not on the correct scale.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.18 and 22 adapted]

402. Making, etc. imitation protected coins

(1) A person ('A') who —

(a) makes an imitation protected coin in connection with a scheme intended to promote the sale of any product or the making of contracts for the supply of any service; or

(b) sells or distributes imitation protected coins in connection with any such scheme, or has imitation coins in A's custody or under A's control with a view to such sale or distribution, commits an offence, unless the relevant authority has previously consented in writing to the sale or distribution of such imitation coins in connection with that scheme.

Penalty: A fine.

(2) In this section "imitation protected coin" means anything which resembles a protected coin in shape, size and the substance of which it is made.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.19 and 22]

403. Prohibition of importation or exportation of counterfeit notes and coins

(1) A person who imports, lands, loads or unloads a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin without the consent of the relevant authority commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who exports a currency note or protected coin without the consent of the relevant authority commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) Without affecting subsection (1) or (2), the importation or exportation of a counterfeit of a currency note or of a protected coin without the consent of the relevant authority is prohibited as if such counterfeit were prohibited by an order of the Governor made under section 143 of the Customs Ordinance and the penalty were as specified in subsection (1) above.

[UK Forgery & Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss.20 to 22 adapted]

Identity documents offences

404. Possession of false identity documents, etc.

(1) It is an offence for a person ('A') with an improper intention to have in A's possession or under A's control —

- (a) an identity document that is false and that A knows or believes to be false;
 - (b) an identity document that was improperly obtained and that A knows or believes to have been improperly obtained; or
 - (c) an identity document that relates to another person.
- Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) Each of the following is an improper intention for the purpose of subsection (1) —

- (a) the intention of using the document for establishing personal information about A;
- (b) the intention of allowing or inducing another to use it for establishing, ascertaining or verifying personal information about A or anyone else.

(3) In subsection (2)(b) the reference to A or anyone else does not include, in the case of a document within subsection (1)(c), the individual to whom it relates.

[UK Identity Documents Act 2010 ss.4 to 6]

405. Apparatus for the making of false identity documents

(1) It is an offence for a person ('A') with the prohibited intention to make, or to have in A's possession or under A's control —

- (a) any apparatus which, to A's knowledge, is or has been specially designed or adapted for the making of false identity documents; or
- (b) any article or material which, to A's knowledge, is or has been specially designed or adapted to be used in the making of false identity documents.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The prohibited intention for the purpose of subsection (1) is the intention —

- (a) that A or another person will make a false identity document; and
- (b) that the document will be used by some person for establishing, ascertaining or verifying personal information about any person.

[UK Identity Documents Act 2010 ss.4 to 6]

406. Possession of false identity documents etc without reasonable excuse

It is an offence for a person ('A') to have in A's possession or under A's control, without reasonable excuse —

- (a) an identity document that is false;
- (b) an identity document that was improperly obtained;
- (c) an identity document that relates to another person;
- (d) any apparatus which, to A's knowledge, is or has been specially designed or adapted for the making of false identity documents or to be used in the making of such documents; or
- (e) any article or material which, to A's knowledge, is or has been specially designed or adapted to be used in the making of such documents.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Identity Documents Act 2010 ss.4 to 6]

407. False identity documents: Supplementary

(1) In sections 404 to 406 “identity document” means any document that is, or purports to be —

- (a) an immigration document;
- (b) a United Kingdom passport;
- (c) a passport issued by or on behalf of the authorities of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom or by or on behalf of an international organisation;
- (d) a document that can be used (in some or all circumstances) instead of a passport;
- (e) a Falkland Islands or United Kingdom driving licence; or
- (f) a driving licence issued by or on behalf of the authorities of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom.

(2) The Governor may by order amend the list of documents in subsection (1).

(3) In subsection (1), “immigration document” means —

- (a) a document used for confirming the right of a person in respect of entry or residence in the United Kingdom or the Falkland Islands;
- (b) a document that is given in exercise of immigration functions and records information about leave granted to a person to enter or to remain in the United Kingdom or the Falkland Islands.

(4) In subsection (1) “residential status” of a person means —

- (a) the person's nationality;
 - (b) the person's entitlement to remain in the Falkland Islands; and
 - (c) if that entitlement derives from a grant of leave to enter or remain in the Falkland Islands, the terms and conditions of that leave.
- (5) In sections 404 and 405, "personal information" in relation to a person means —
- (a) the person's full name;
 - (b) other names by which the person is or has previously been known;
 - (c) the person's gender;
 - (d) the person's date and place of birth;
 - (e) external characteristics of the person that are capable of being used for identifying the person;
 - (f) the address of the person's principal place of residence in the Falkland Islands;
 - (g) the address of every other place in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere where the person has a place of residence;
 - (h) where in the Falkland Islands and elsewhere the person has previously been resident;
 - (i) the times at which the person was resident at different places in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere;
 - (j) the person's current residential status;
 - (k) residential statuses previously held by the person;
 - (l) information about any numbers allocated to the person for identification purposes and about the documents (including stamps or labels) to which they relate.
- (6) For the purposes of sections 404 to 406 and this section —
- (a) the term "apparatus" includes any equipment, machinery or device and any wire or cable, together with any software used with it;
 - (b) an identity document is "false" only if it is false within the meaning of section 389;
 - (c) the term "false" information includes information containing any inaccuracy or omission that results in a tendency to mislead;

- (d) an identity document was “improperly obtained” if —
- (i) false information was provided in, or in connection with, the application for its issue to the person who issued it, or
 - (ii) false information was provided in, or in connection with, an application for its modification to a person entitled to modify it;
- (e) “information” includes documents (including stamps and labels) and records;
- (f) the “issue” of a document includes its renewal, replacement or re-issue (with or without modifications);
- (g) references to the making of a false identity document include the modification of an identity document so that it becomes false.

[UK Identity Documents Act 2010 ss.7 to 9]

PART 14 - COMPUTER MISUSE

408. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“act” includes a series of acts;

“computer data” means a representation of facts, information or concepts in a form suitable for processing in a computer system, including a program suitable to cause a computer system to perform a function;

“computer system” means a device or a group of interconnected or related devices, one or more of which, pursuant to a program, performs automatic processing of data;

“service provider” means —

- (a) any public or private entity that provides to users of its service the ability to communicate by means of a computer system, and
- (b) any other entity that processes or stores computer data on behalf of such communication service or users of such a service;

“traffic data” means any computer data relating to a communication by means of a computer system, generated by a computer system that formed a part in the chain of communication, indicating the communication’s origin, destination, route, time, date, size, duration, or type of underlying service.

(2) For the purposes of this Part, a person secures access to any program or data held in a computer if by causing a computer to perform any function the person —

(a) alters or erases the program or data;

(b) copies or moves it to any storage medium other than that in which it is held or to a different location in the storage medium in which it is held;

(c) uses it; or

(d) has it output from the computer in which it is held (whether by having it displayed or in any other manner), and references to access to a program or data (and to an intent to secure such access or to enable such access to be secured) are to be read accordingly.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2)(c) a person uses a program if the function the person causes the computer to perform —

(a) causes the program to be executed; or

(b) is itself a function of the program.

(4) For the purposes of subsection (2)(d) —

(a) a program is output if the instructions of which it consists are output; and

(b) the form in which any such instructions or any other data is output (and in particular whether or not it represents a form in which, in the case of instructions, they are capable of being executed or, in the case of data, it is capable of being processed by a computer) is immaterial.

(5) For purposes of this Part, but subject to subsection (7), access of any kind by any person to any program or data held in a computer is unauthorised if —

(a) the person is not himself or herself entitled to control access of the kind in question to the program or data; and

(b) the person does not have consent to access by him or her of the kind in question to the program or data from any person who is so entitled.

(6) In this Part —

(a) references to any program or data held in a computer include references to any program or data held in any removable storage medium which is for the time being in the computer; and a computer is to be regarded as containing any program or data held in any such medium.

(b) an act done in relation to a computer is unauthorised if the person doing the act (or causing it to be done) —

(i) is not himself or herself a person who has responsibility for the computer and who is entitled to determine whether the act may be done; and

(ii) does not have consent to the act from any such person;

(c) a reference to doing an act includes a reference to causing an act to be done;

(d) references to a program include references to part of a program.

(7) For the purposes of this Part, a person intercepts a communication in the course of its transmission by means of a telecommunication system only if the person —

(a) so modifies or interferes with the system, or its operation;

(b) so monitors transmissions made by means of the system; or

(c) so monitors transmissions made by wireless telegraphy to or from apparatus comprised in the system, as to make some or all of the contents of the communication available, while being transmitted, to a person other than the sender or intended recipient of the communication.

(8) For the purposes of this Part —

(a) the times while a communication is being transmitted by means of a telecommunication system are to be taken to include any time when the system by means of which the communication is being, or has been, transmitted is used for storing it in a manner that enables the intended recipient to collect it or otherwise to have access to it;

(b) the cases in which any contents of a communication are to be taken to be made available to a person while being transmitted include any case in which any of the contents of the communication, while being transmitted, are diverted or recorded so as to be available to a person subsequently.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.17 and EU Convention Art.1]

Computer misuse offences

409. Unauthorised access to computer material

(1) A person commits an offence if —

(a) the person causes a computer to perform any function with intent to secure access to any program or data held in any computer or to enable any such access to be secured;

(b) the access the person intends to secure or to enable to be secured is unauthorised; and

(c) the person knows at the time when he or she causes the computer to perform the function that that is the case.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The intent a person has to have to commit an offence under this section need not be directed at —

- (a) any particular program or data;
- (b) a program or data of any particular kind; or
- (c) a program or data held in any particular computer.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.1 am. by Police & Justice Act 2006 s.35]

410. Unauthorised access with intent to commit or facilitate commission of further offences

(1) A person commits an offence under this section if the person commits an offence under section 409 with intent to —

- (a) commit an offence to which this section applies (“the further offence”); or
- (b) facilitate the commission of such an offence (whether by himself or herself or any other person).

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This section applies to offences for which —

- (a) the sentence is fixed by law; or
- (b) a person of or over the age of 18 years may be sentenced to imprisonment for 5 years or more.

(3) It is immaterial for the purposes of this section whether the further offence is to be committed on the same occasion as the offence under section 409 or on any future occasion.

(4) A person may be guilty of an offence under this section even though the facts are such that the commission of the further offence is impossible.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.2]

411. Unauthorised acts with intent to impair, or with recklessness as to impairing, operation of computer, etc.

(1) A person commits an offence if —

- (a) the person does any unauthorised act in relation to a computer;
- (b) at the time when the person does the act he or she knows that it is unauthorised; and
- (c) either subsection (2) or (3) applies.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This subsection applies if the person intends by doing the act to —

- (a) impair the operation of any computer;
- (b) prevent or hinder access to any program or data held in any computer;
- (c) impair the operation of any such program;
- (d) impair the reliability of any such data or the authenticity of any such data resulting in it being considered or acted upon for legal purposes as authentic;
- (e) cause a loss of property to any other person or to derive an economic benefit for himself or herself or any other person; or
- (f) enable any of the things mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (e) to be done.

(3) This subsection applies if the person is reckless as to whether the act will do any of the things mentioned in subsection (2)(a) to (f).

(4) The intention referred to in subsection (2), or the recklessness referred to in subsection (3), need not relate to —

- (a) any particular computer;
- (b) any particular program or data; or
- (c) a program or data of any particular kind.

(5) In this section —

- (a) “impair” includes damaging a computer; deleting, deteriorating, altering or suppressing data; inputting data to cause damage, deterioration, alteration or suppression; and introducing contaminants to cause the cessation of a computer’s functions; and
- (b) a reference to impairing, preventing or hindering something includes a reference to doing so temporarily.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.3 replaced by Police & Justice Act 2006 s.36]

412. Unauthorised interception of computer service

(1) A person commits an offence if —

- (a) the person does any unauthorised act in relation to a computer;
- (b) at the time the person does the act he or she knows that it is unauthorised; and

(c) the person intends by doing the act to intercept or cause to be intercepted, directly or indirectly, any non-public electronic transmission or electro-magnetic emission of computer data to, from or within a computer, by any electro-magnetic, acoustic, mechanical or other technical means.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The intention referred to in subsection (1)(c) need not relate to —

(a) any particular computer;

(b) any particular transmission or emission;

(c) any particular data; or

(d) a transmission or emission of any particular kind.

[EU Convention Art 3]

413. Making, supplying or obtaining articles for use in relevant offences

(1) This section applies to an offence under any of sections 409, 411 or 412 (a “relevant offence”).

(2) A person commits an offence if the person makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article intending it to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, a relevant offence

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person commits an offence if the person supplies or offers to supply any article believing that it is likely to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, a relevant offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(4) A person commits an offence if the person obtains or possesses any article with a view to its being supplied for use to commit, or to assist in the commission of, a relevant offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(5) In this section “article” includes any program or data held in electronic form.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.3A ins. by Police & Justice Act 2006 s.37]

414. Unauthorised disclosure of access code

(1) A person commits an offence if the person, for any wrongful gain or unlawful purpose, and knowing that the access intended to be secured is unauthorised and is likely to cause wrongful loss to any other person —

(a) discloses any password, access code or any other means of gaining access to any program or data held in a computer; or

(b) possesses any password, access code or any other means of gaining access to any program or data in a computer with a view to its being used or supplied for use to commit, or to assist in the commission of an offence under any of sections 409, 411 or 412.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The intention referred to in subsection (1) need not relate to —

(a) any particular computer;

(b) any particular program or data; or

(c) a program or data of any particular kind.

[EU Convention Art 11]

Jurisdiction

415. Territorial scope of offences under this Part

(1) Except as provided in this section, it is immaterial for the purposes of an offence under any of sections 409 to 414 —

(a) whether any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence occurred in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) whether the defendant was in the Falkland Islands at the time of any such act or event.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), in the case of such an offence at least one significant link with the Falkland Islands must exist in the circumstances of the case for the offence to be committed.

(3) There is no need for any such link to exist for the commission of an offence under section 409 to be established in proof of an allegation to that effect in proceedings for an offence under section 410.

(4) Subject to section 417, if —

(a) any such link does in fact exist in the case of an offence under section 409; and

(b) commission of that offence is alleged in proceedings for an offence under section 410, section 410 applies as if anything the defendant intended to do or facilitate in any place outside the Falkland Islands which would be an offence to which section 410 applies if it took place in the Falkland Islands were the offence in question.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 ss.4 to 9]

416. Significant links with the Falkland Islands

(1) The following provisions of this section apply for the interpretation of section 415.

(2) In relation to an offence under section 409, either of the following is a significant link with the Falkland Islands —

(a) that the defendant was in the Falkland Islands at the time when he or she did the act which caused the computer to perform the function; or

(b) that any computer containing any program or data to which the defendant by doing that act secured or intended to secure unauthorised access, or enabled or intended to enable unauthorised access to be secured, was in the Falkland Islands at that time.

(3) In relation to an offence under section 411 or 412, either of the following is a significant link with the Falkland Islands —

(a) that the defendant was in the Falkland Islands at the time when he or she did the unauthorised act (or caused it to be done); or

(b) that the unauthorised act was done in relation to a computer in the Falkland Islands.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 ss.4 to 9]

417. Territorial scope of ancillary offences related to offences under this Part

(1) On a charge of conspiracy to commit an offence under this Part the following questions are immaterial to the defendant's guilt —

(a) where any person became a party to the conspiracy; and

(b) whether any act, omission or other event occurred in the Falkland Islands.

(2) On a charge of attempting to commit an offence under section 411 or 412, the following questions are immaterial to the defendant's guilt —

(a) where the attempt was made; and

(b) whether it had an effect in the Falkland Islands.

(3) On a charge of encouraging the commission of an offence under any of sections 409 to 414, the question where the encouraging took place is immaterial to the defendant's guilt.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 ss.4 to 9]

418. Relevance of external law

(1) A person commits an offence triable by virtue of section 415(4) only if what the person intended to do or facilitate would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place.

(2) A person commits an offence triable by virtue of section 416 only if what the person had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place.

(3) Conduct punishable under the criminal law in force in any place is an offence under that law for the purposes of this section, however it is described in that law.

(4) Subject to subsection (6), a condition specified in subsection (1) or (2) is to be taken as satisfied unless, not later than criminal procedure rules may provide, the defence serve on the prosecution a notice —

(a) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the relevant conduct, the condition is not in their opinion satisfied;

(b) showing their grounds for that opinion; and

(c) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied.

(5) In subsection (4) “the relevant conduct” means —

(a) if the condition in subsection (1) is in question - what the defendant intended to do or facilitate;

(b) if the condition in subsection (2) is in question - what the defendant had in view.

(6) The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of a notice under subsection (4).

(7) In the Supreme Court the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 ss.4 to 9]

Investigation of offences

419. Search warrants for offences under this Part

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath given by a police officer that there are reasonable grounds to suspect that —

(a) an offence under this Part has been or is about to be committed in any premises; and

(b) evidence that such an offence has been or is about to be committed is in those premises, the justice may issue a warrant authorising a police officer to enter and search the premises, using such reasonable force as is necessary.

(2) A warrant under this section —

(a) may authorise persons with appropriate technical knowledge and expertise to accompany and assist, as necessary, the police officer executing the warrant; and

(b) remains in force for as long as is reasonably necessary for the investigation of an offence.

(3) In executing a warrant issued under this section a police officer may seize an article if the officer reasonably believes that —

(a) it is evidence that an offence under this Part has been or is about to be committed; or

(b) the article has been acquired by a person as a result of an offence committed under this Part.

(4) In seizing any article referred to in subsection (3), a police officer must have due regard to the rights and interests of any person affected by such seizure to carry on that person's normal activities.

(5) A person who without lawful excuse obstructs the lawful exercise of the powers granted under this section commits an offence.

(6) In this section —

“article” includes a computer or part of a computer, a computer system or part of it, a computer data storage system and a document.

“premises” includes land, buildings, movable structures, vehicles, vessels, aircraft and hovercraft;

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.11]

420. Warrant for access to computer and data for investigation of offences

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath given by a police officer that there are reasonable grounds to suspect that —

(a) a computer is being or has been used in connection with an offence; and

(b) evidence that such an offence is being or has been committed is in that computer, the justice may issue a warrant authorising a police officer to do the things mentioned in subsection (2).

(2) A warrant under subsection (1) may authorise a police officer to enter any premises where the computer is kept, using such reasonable force as is necessary, and to —

(a) have access to and use the computer and examine the operation of that computer;

(b) search any data stored or available in the computer or in any computer data storage system forming part of the computer;

(c) have access to any password or access code or any other means of gaining access to the computer;

(d) have access to any program having the capability of retransforming or unscrambling encrypted data in the computer into readable and comprehensible format or into plain text;

(e) make and take any copies or take any samples of any data held in the computer; and

(f) require any person whom the police officer has reasonable cause to suspect is or has been using the computer, or any person having charge or control of or operating the computer, to provide the officer with any technical and other assistance that the officer reasonably requires for the purposes of carrying out the investigation authorised under this section.

(3) In taking any samples or copies of data or performing any of the actions referred to in subsection (2), a police officer must have due regard to the rights and interests of any person affected by such actions to carry on that person's normal activities.

(4) A warrant under this section —

(a) may authorise persons with appropriate technical knowledge and expertise to accompany and assist, as may be necessary, a police officer executing the warrant; and

(b) remains in force for as long as is reasonably necessary for the investigation of an offence.

(5) A person who without lawful excuse obstructs the lawful exercise of the powers under subsection (2)(a) to (e) or who fails to comply with a requirement under subsection (2)(f) commits an offence.

(6) An information given under subsection (1) may be combined with an information given for the purposes of section 368 and a warrant issued under this section may be combined with a warrant issued under that section.

(7) In this section “premises” has the meaning given by section 419(6).
[EU Convention Arts 15 & 19]

421. Record of seized articles, etc.

(1) If a computer, computer program or data has been removed following a search under section 419, the police officer who carried out the search must, at the time of the search or as soon as practicable after it —

(a) make an official record of the articles seized and removed, of the premises from where they were removed, and the date and time of seizure; and

(b) give a copy of the record to the owner, lessee or occupier of the premises if they are immovable property; to the master, captain or person in charge of a vehicle, vessel, aircraft or other movable structure; or to the person in charge or control of the articles seized and removed.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), if a computer has been used or its operation examined or a program or data has been accessed under section 420, the police officer who carried out the action may authorise a person who had charge or control of the computer to access and copy a program or data in the computer.

(3) The police officer may refuse to permit access to the computer under subsection (2) if the officer has reasonable grounds for believing that giving the access would lead to the commission of a criminal offence or would prejudice —

(a) the investigation in connection with which the search was carried out;

(b) another ongoing investigation; or

(c) any criminal proceedings which are pending or which may be brought in relation to any of those investigations.

[Gibraltar Crimes Act; SH Crimes Bill - Not in EU Convention]

422. Preservation of data

(1) If the Chief Police Officer is satisfied that —

(a) a program or data, including traffic data, stored in a computer is necessary for the purposes of a criminal investigation; and

(b) there is a risk that the program or data may be lost, destroyed or rendered inaccessible or modified,

the Chief Police Officer may by written notice given to a person in charge or in control of the computer require that person to ensure that the program or data specified in the notice be preserved for the period stated in the notice, which must not exceed 30 days.

(2) Before the period stated in the notice issued under subsection (1) has expired, a justice of the peace may, on the application of the Attorney General, order that the period stated in the notice be extended for a maximum of 90 days from the date of first issue.

(3) Traffic data may be ordered to be preserved under subsection (1) irrespective of how many service providers were involved in the transmission of the data.

(4) A person who without lawful excuse fails to comply with a requirement under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art. 16]

423. Interception of traffic data

(1) If traffic data associated with a specified communication or general traffic data is reasonably required for the purposes of a criminal investigation, a justice of the peace may, on the application of the Attorney General, issue an order requiring a person in charge or in control of such data or to an internet service provider to —

(a) collect and record traffic data associated with the communication for the period specified in the notice; or

(b) permit and assist any named person with appropriate technical knowledge and expertise to collect and record the data.

(2) A person who without lawful excuse fails to comply with a requirement under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art. 20]

424. Order for disclosure of stored traffic

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied on an application by the Attorney General that specified data stored in a computer is reasonably required for the purpose of a criminal investigation or criminal proceedings, the justice of the peace may issue an order requiring a person in charge or in control of the computer to preserve and disclose to a police officer an amount of traffic data about specified communication sufficient to identify —

(a) the internet service providers; and

(b) the path through which the communication was transmitted.

(2) A person who without lawful excuse fails to comply with a requirement under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art. 17]

425. Order for production of data

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied on an application by the Attorney General that a specified computer program, data, printout of that data or any other information, is reasonably required for the purpose of a criminal investigation or criminal proceedings, the justice of the peace may issue an order requiring —

(a) a person in charge or in control of a computer to produce to a police officer any computer program, data or printout of data specified in the order which is stored in the computer or in a computer data storage system in that person's possession or control; and

(b) an internet service provider with a place of business in the Falkland Islands to produce to a police officer any subscriber information specified in the order relating to a service provided by that service provider.

(2) In this section, “subscriber information” means any information in the form of computer data, or in any other form, which is held by a service provider, which relates to subscribers of its service other than traffic or content data, and by which can be established —

(a) the subscriber’s identity, telephone or access number, postal address and billing and payment information;

(b) the type of communication service used by the subscriber, the technical provisions relating to it and the period of service; and

(c) any other information on the site relating to the installation of communication equipment.

(3) A person who without lawful excuse fails to comply with a requirement under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art. 18]

426. Order for interception of electronic communication

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied on an application by the Attorney General that the contents of electronic communication or any other information connected with such communication are reasonably required for the purpose of a criminal investigation or criminal proceedings, the justice may issue an order requiring an internet service provider with a place of business in the Falkland Islands to —

(a) apply such technical means as are necessary to collect and record; or

(b) permit or assist any named person with appropriate technical knowledge and expertise to collect and record, content data associated with specified communications transmitted by means of a computer.

(2) A person who without lawful excuse fails to comply with a requirement under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art. 21]

Miscellaneous provisions

427. Rights and duties of internet service providers

(1) An internet service provider is not liable under civil or criminal law for the disclosure of any data or other information that the provider discloses under any of sections 424 to 426.

(2) An internet service provider who without lawful authority discloses —

(a) the fact that a notice has been given under section 422 or that an order has been issued under any of sections 423 to 426;

- (b) anything done under the notice or order; or
- (c) any data collected or recorded under the notice or order,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Arts. 20.3, 21.3]

428. Saving for certain law enforcement powers

(1) Nothing in this Part affects the operation of other provisions of this Ordinance, the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 or any other enactment relating to powers of inspection, search or seizure.

(2) Nothing designed to indicate a withholding of consent to access to any program or data from persons as enforcement officers makes access unauthorised for the purposes of section 410(1).

(3) In subsection (2) —

(a) “enforcement officer” means a police officer or other person charged with the duty of investigating offences; and

(b) withholding consent from a person “as” an enforcement officer of any description includes the operation, by the person entitled to control access, of rules whereby enforcement officers of that description are, as such, disqualified from membership of a class of persons who are authorised to have access.

[UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 s.10]

429. Offences by and for the benefit of corporate bodies

If an offence under any of sections 410 to 415 which was committed by any person is proved to have been committed for the benefit of a corporate body, irrespective of whether that person acted individually or as the holder of a position in or as the agent of the corporate body, the corporate body commits a similar offence.

Penalty: The statutory maximum fine.

[EU Convention Art.12]

430. Forfeiture

(1) A court before which a person is convicted of an offence under any of sections 410 to 413 may, in addition to imposing any other penalty, make an order for the forfeiture of any computer, computer program or data, computer data storage system, or other apparatus, article or thing which is the subject matter of the offence or which was used in connection with the commission of the offence.

(2) Section 90 of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance applies to the proceeds of any forfeiture under this Part.

[Gibraltar Crimes Bill - Not in EU Convention]

431. Compensation

(1) The court before which a person is convicted of an offence under any of sections 410 to 413 may order the person to pay a sum fixed by the court by way of compensation to any other person for damage caused to that person's computer, computer data storage system, program or data by the offence for which the person is convicted.

(2) A claim by a person for damage caused by an offence under any of sections 410 to 413 is deemed to have been satisfied to the extent of any amount ordered to be paid to the person by way of compensation under subsection (1), but the order does not affect any right to a civil remedy for the recovery of damages beyond the amount of such compensation.

(3) Compensation awarded by an order under subsection (1) is recoverable as a civil debt.
[Gibraltar Crimes Act; SH Crimes Bill - Not in EU Convention]

432. Breach of confidentiality

(1) Except for the purpose of a prosecution for an offence under this Part, for other purposes of this Part, or pursuant to an order of a court, a person who has had access to —

(a) any computer, computer data storage system, program or data during the course of an investigation under this Part;

(b) any record, book, register, correspondence, information, document or any other material during the course of an investigation under this Part;

(c) any confidential information which may have been received from the competent authorities of another place for the purpose of an investigation under this Part, must not disclose to any other person, or use for any purpose other than that for which the person obtained access or received information, the contents of the material mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (c).

(2) A person who contravenes subsection (1) commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 11 on the standard scale.

[EU Convention Art 28]

433. Codes of practice

(1) The Governor may issue one or more codes of practice relating to the exercise and performance of the powers and duties under this Part.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), a code of practice made under this section may make provision limiting —

(a) the class of criminal offences in respect of which warrants and orders under this Part may be applied for;

(b) the class of criminal offences in respect of which notices under this Part may be issued;

(c) the class of person in respect of whom a notice under section 422 or an order under any of sections 423 to 426 may be issued;

(d) the duration of notices under section 422 and of orders under any of sections 423 to 426;

(e) the number of persons to whom any of the material or data obtained by virtue of this Part may be disclosed or otherwise made available;

(f) the extent to which any of the material or data may be disclosed or otherwise made available;

(g) the extent to which any of the material or data may be copied;

(h) the number of copies that may be made; and

(i) the use that can be made of the material or data.

(3) The Governor may by order prescribe the circumstances under which and the time within which material or data obtained under this Part must be destroyed, and the penalties for failure to comply with the order.

(4) In issuing a code of practice or an order under this section the Governor must have due regard to the fundamental rights and freedoms under the Constitution of the Falkland Islands and in particular to the right of privacy and the requirement of proportionality in the investigation and prevention of crime.

(5) The Governor must lay before the Legislative Assembly every code of practice and order issued or amended under this section.

(6) A person exercising or performing any power or duty in relation to which provision may be made by a code of practice under this section must, in doing so, have regard to the provisions (so far as they are applicable) of every code of practice for the time being in force under this section.

(7) A failure on the part of any person to comply with any provision of a code of practice issued under this section does not of itself render the person liable to any criminal or civil proceedings but may be taken into account in deciding on the admissibility and weight of any evidence obtained in contravention of the provision.

(8) A code of practice issued under this section is admissible in evidence in any criminal or civil proceedings.

[Gibraltar Crimes Act; SH Crimes Bill – Not in EU Convention but required by FCO]

PART 15 - COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS

Auction sales

434. Auction bidding offences

(1) A dealer who —

- (a) agrees to give;
- (b) gives; or
- (c) offers,

any gift or consideration to any other person as an inducement or reward for abstaining, or for having abstained, from bidding at a sale by auction either generally or for any particular lot, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who —

- (a) agrees to accept;
- (b) accepts; or
- (c) attempts to obtain,

from any dealer any such gift or consideration as aforesaid, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) If it is proved that a dealer has —

- (a) previously to an auction entered into an agreement in writing with one or more persons to purchase goods at the auction in good faith on a joint account; and
- (b) has before the goods were purchased at the auction deposited a copy of the agreement with the auctioneer, such an agreement is not to be treated as an agreement made in contravention of this section.

(4) For the purposes of this Part, “dealer” means a person who in the normal course of reselling them.

(5) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Act 1927 s.1 amended]

435. Auction bidding offences: Prohibition orders

(1) On conviction of a person under section 434, the court may order that —

(a) the person so convicted; or

(b) that person and any person appointed to bid on behalf of that person, must not (without leave of the court) enter upon any premises where goods intended for sale by auction are on display or attend or participate in any way in any sale by auction.

(2) An order under subsection (1) must specify the period for which it lasts, which must be not more than 3 years from the date of the conviction.

(3) A person who contravenes an order under this section made in respect of the person commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(4) In proceedings against a person for contravention of an order under this section consisting in the entry upon premises where goods intended for sale by auction were on display, it is a defence for the person to prove that he or she did not know, and had no reason to suspect, that goods so intended were on display on the premises.

(5) In proceedings against a person for contravention of an order under this section consisting in the person having done something as the representative of another, it is a defence for the person to prove that he or she did not know, and had no reason to suspect, that that other person was the subject of such an order.

(6) A person does not commit an offence under this section only by selling property by auction or causing it to be so sold.

[Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Act 1969 s.2]

436. Rights of seller of goods by auction

(1) If —

(a) a person ('A') purchases goods at an auction and has entered into an agreement with another person ('B') or other persons that B or those others (or some of them) will abstain from bidding for the goods (not being an agreement to purchase the goods in good faith on a joint account); and

(b) A or B, or one of the other parties to the agreement is a dealer, the seller may avoid the contract under which the goods are purchased.

(2) If a contract is avoided by virtue of subsection (1), and if the purchaser has obtained possession of the goods and restitution of them is not made, the persons who were parties to the agreement that one or some of them should abstain from bidding for the goods the subject of the contract are jointly and severally liable to make good to the seller any loss the seller sustained by reason of the operation of the agreement.

[Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Act 1969 s.3]

437. Notices to be exhibited at sale

(1) Every auctioneer, before beginning any auction, must display a notice containing the auctioneer's full name and place of residence and a copy of sections 434 to 436 of this Ordinance—

(a) in large letters publicly visible and legible; and

(b) in some conspicuous part of the room or place where the auction is held,

so that all persons present may easily read it.

(2) An auctioneer who fails to keep a notice as described in subsection (1) displayed as there described during the whole time that the auction is held commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 1 on the standard scale for every day that the offence continues.

[UK Auctioneers Act 1845 s.7 applied by Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Acts 1927 and 1969]

438. Penalties for promoting or conducting mock auctions.

(1) A person who —

(a) promotes;

(b) conducts; or

(c) assists in the conduct of,

a mock auction at which one or more lots to which this Part applies are offered for sale commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this Part a sale of goods by way of competitive bidding is taken to be a mock auction if, but only if, during the course of the sale —

(a) any lot to which this Part applies is sold to a person bidding for it, and either it is sold to that person at a price lower than the amount of that person's highest bid for that lot, or part of the price at which it is sold to the person is repaid or credited to the person or is stated to be so repaid or credited;

(b) the right to bid for any lot to which this Part applies is restricted, or is stated to be restricted, to persons who have bought or agreed to buy one or more articles; or

(c) any articles are given away or offered as gifts.

(3) A sale of goods shall not be taken to be a mock auction by virtue of subsection (2)(a) if it is proved that the reduction in price, or the repayment or credit, as the case may be —

(a) was on account of a defect discovered after the highest bid in question had been made, being a defect of which the person conducting the sale was unaware when that bid was made; or

(b) was on account of damage sustained after that bid was made.

[UK Mock Auctions Act 1961 s.1]

439. Mock auctions: Interpretation

(1) In section 438 —

“sale of goods by way of competitive bidding” means any sale of goods at which the persons present, or some of them, are invited to buy articles by way of competitive bidding;

“competitive bidding” includes any mode of sale whereby prospective purchasers may be enabled to compete for the purchase of articles, whether by way of increasing bids or by the offer of articles to be bid for at successively decreasing prices or otherwise;

“lot to which this section applies” means a lot consisting of or including one or more prescribed articles;

“prescribed articles” means any plate, plated articles, linen, china, glass, books, pictures, prints, furniture, jewellery, articles of household or personal use or ornament or any musical or scientific instrument or apparatus;

“stated”, in relation to a sale of goods by way of competitive bidding, means stated by or on behalf of the person conducting the sale, by an announcement made to the persons for the time being present at the sale.

(2) For the purposes of section 438 and this section, any bid stated to have been made at a sale of goods by way of competitive bidding is conclusively presumed to have been made, and to have been a bid of the amount stated; and any reference in that section to the sale of a lot to a person who has made a bid for it includes a reference to a purported sale of it to a person stated to have bid for it, whether that person exists or not.

(3) For the purposes of section 438 and this section, anything done in or about the place where a sale of goods by way of competitive bidding is held, if done in connection with the sale, is taken to be done during the course of the sale, whether it is done at the time when any articles are being sold or offered for sale by way of competitive bidding or before or after any such time.

(4) Subject to section 6(6) of the Constitution (which relates to being tried twice for the same offence) nothing in this Part limits any right of action or other remedy (whether civil or criminal) in proceedings instituted otherwise than under this Part.

[UK Mock Auctions Act 1961 s.3]

Unsolicited goods

440. Demands and threats regarding payment

(1) A person ('A') who, not having reasonable cause to believe there is a right to payment, in the course of any trade or business —

- (a) makes a demand for payment; or
- (b) asserts a present or prospective right to payment, for what A knows are unsolicited goods sent to another person ('B') with a view to that B acquiring them for the purposes of B's trade or business, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) A person who, not having reasonable cause to believe there is a right to payment, in the course of any trade or business and with a view to obtaining any payment for what the person knows are unsolicited goods sent as aforesaid —

- (a) threatens to bring any legal proceedings; or
- (b) places or causes to be placed the name of any person on a list of defaulters or debtors or threatens to do so; or
- (c) invokes or causes to be invoked any other collection procedure or threatens to do so,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

(3) In this section and section 441, "unsolicited" means, in relation to goods sent to any person, that they are sent without any prior request made by the person or on the person's behalf.

[UK Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971 s.1]

441. Directory entries

(1) A purchaser ('P') is not liable to make any payment, and is entitled to recover any payment made by P, by way of charge for including or arranging for the inclusion in a directory of an entry relating to P or P's trade or business, unless —

- (a) there has been signed by P or on P's behalf an order complying with this section;
- (b) there has been signed by P or on P's behalf a note complying with this section of P's agreement to the charge and before the note was signed, a copy of it was supplied, for retention by P, to P or a person acting on P's behalf; or
- (c) there has been transmitted by P or a person acting on P's behalf an electronic communication which includes a statement that P agrees to the charge and the relevant condition is satisfied in relation to that communication.

(2) If, when a payment in respect of a charge would, in the absence of an order or note of agreement to the charge complying with this section and in the absence of an electronic communication in relation to which the relevant condition is satisfied, be recoverable from a person in accordance with subsection (1), a person ('A') demands payment, or asserts a present or prospective right to payment, of the charge or any part of it, without knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that —

- (a) the entry to which the charge relates was ordered in accordance with this section;
- (b) a proper note of the agreement has been duly signed; or
- (c) the requirement of subsection (1)(c) have been met,

A commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), an order for an entry in a directory must be made by means of an order form or other stationery belonging to P and bearing, in print, P's name and address (or one or more of P's addresses) and a note complying with subsection (4).

(4) The note required by subsections (1) and (3) is a note of P's agreement to the charge which—

- (a) states the amount of the charge immediately above the place for signature; and
- (b) identifies the directory or proposed directory, giving the following particulars of it —
 - (i) the proposed date of publication of the directory or of the issue in which the entry is to be included and the name and address of the person producing it;
 - (ii) if the directory or that issue is to be put on sale - the price at which it is to be offered for sale and the minimum number of copies which are to be available for sale;
 - (iii) if the directory or that issue is to be distributed free of charge (whether or not it is also to be put on sale) - the minimum number of copies which are to be so distributed; and
- (c) sets out or gives reasonable particulars of the entry in respect of which the charge would be payable.

(5) In relation to an electronic communication which includes a statement that P agrees to a charge for including or arranging the inclusion in a directory of any entry, the relevant condition is that —

- (a) before the electronic communication was transmitted the information referred to in subsection (6) was communicated to P; and

(b) the electronic communication can readily be produced and retained in a visible and legible form.

(6) The information to be communicated to P is —

(a) the following particulars —

- (i) the amount of the charge;
- (ii) the name of the directory or proposed directory;
- (iii) the name of the person producing the directory;
- (iv) the geographic address at which that person is established;
- (v) if the directory is or is to be available in printed form - the proposed date of publication of the directory or of the issue in which the entry is to be included;
- (vi) if the directory or the issue in which the entry is to be included is to be put on sale - the price at which it is to be offered for sale and the minimum number of copies which are to be available for sale;
- (vii) if the directory or the issue in which the entry is to be included is to be distributed free of charge (whether or not it is also to be put on sale) - the minimum number of copies which are to be so distributed;
- (viii) if the directory is or is to be available in a form other than in printed form - adequate details of how it may be accessed; and

(b) reasonable particulars of the entry in respect of which the charge would be payable.

(7) In this section “electronic communication” means a communication by electronic means.
[UK Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971 s.2]

CHAPTER 3 - CRIMES AGAINST THE GENERAL PUBLIC

PART 16 – TREASON

442. Treason

(1) A person who, owing allegiance to Her Majesty —

- (a) kills, wounds or causes bodily harm to Her Majesty;
- (b) imprisons or restrains Her Majesty;
- (c) forms an intention to do (a) or (b) and manifests such intention by an overt act;

- (d) levies war against Her Majesty in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere —
- (i) with the intent to depose Her Majesty from the style, honour and royal name of the Crown of the United Kingdom or of any other of Her Majesty's dominions;
 - (ii) in order by force or constraint to compel Her Majesty to change Her measures or counsels; or
 - (iii) in order to put any force or constraint upon, or to intimidate or overawe, the Legislative Assembly, the United Kingdom Parliament, or the legislature of any other British overseas territory or of a Crown dependency;
- (e) instigates any foreigner with force to invade the United Kingdom or the Falkland Islands or any other British overseas territory or a Crown dependency;
- (f) assists by any means whatever any public enemy at war with Her Majesty; or
- (g) conspires with any other person to do anything mentioned in paragraph (a), (b) or (d), commits the offence of treason.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3)

(2) A person who murders —

- (a) the Lord Chancellor;
- (b) the First Lord of the Treasury; or
- (c) any judge of the Crown Court, the Court of Appeal, or the Supreme Court, while any of them is performing the duties of the office, commits the offence of treason.

Penalty: As provided in subsection (3).

(3) A person convicted of the offence of treason must be sentenced to life imprisonment, but subject to section 728 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 if the person convicted is aged under 21.

(4) In subsection (1)(a), (b) and (c), “Her Majesty” means Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Her lawful heirs and successors, Her spouse, Her eldest son, the spouse of Her eldest son, and Her eldest daughter, if unmarried.

(5) An offence under this section is triable on indictment only.

[Treason Act 1351; Treason Act 1702, s.3]

443. Treasonable offences

(1) A person who forms an intention to —

(a) depose Her Majesty from the style, honour and royal name of the Crown of the United Kingdom or of any other of Her Majesty's dominions;

(b) levy war against Her Majesty within the United Kingdom or the Falkland Island or any other British overseas territory or any Crown dependency in order —

(i) by force or constraint to compel Her Majesty to change Her measures or counsels; or

(ii) to put any force or constraint upon, or to intimidate or overawe, the Legislative Assembly or the United Kingdom Parliament or the legislature of any other British overseas territory or of a Crown dependency; or

(c) instigate any foreigner with force to invade the United Kingdom or the Falkland Islands or any other British overseas territory or a Crown dependency, and manifests such intention by an overt act in the Falkland islands or elsewhere or by publishing any printing or writing, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(2) It is not a defence to a charge under this section that any act proved against the defendant amounts to treason under section 442; but a person convicted or acquitted of an offence under this section may not afterwards be prosecuted for treason under section 442 upon the same facts.

(3) An offence under subsection (1) is triable on indictment only.

[Treason Felony Act 1848, ss.3, 7]

444. Limitation and procedure

(1) A person may not be prosecuted for an offence under section 442 or 443 unless the prosecution is commenced within 3 years after the offence is committed.

(2) This section does not apply to cases in which the overt act alleged is the killing of Her Majesty, or a direct attempt to endanger the life of Her Majesty.

(3) The procedure on a trial for treason or any treasonable offence is the same as the procedure on a trial for murder.

[Treason Act 1695 ss.5, 6]

445. Assaults on the Queen

(1) A person who wilfully —

(a) produces or has near Her Majesty any arms or destructive or dangerous thing with intent to use the same to injure Her Majesty;

(b) with intent to alarm or to injure Her Majesty, or to provoke a breach of the peace or whereby a breach of the peace is likely to be caused —

- (i) discharges, or points, aims or presents any arms at or near Her Majesty;
- (ii) causes any explosive substance to explode near Her Majesty;
- (iii) assaults Her Majesty; or
- (iv) throws anything at or upon Her Majesty,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[Treason Act 1842 ss.2, 3]

PART 17 – SECURITY

The armed forces

446. Inciting disaffection

(1) A person who maliciously and wilfully endeavours to seduce any member of the armed forces of the Crown from his or her duty or allegiance to Her Majesty commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, with intent to commit or to aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of an offence under subsection (1), has in his or her possession or under his or her control a document of such a nature that the dissemination of copies of it among members of the armed forces of the Crown would constitute such an offence, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 ss.1 and 2 adapted]

447. Assisting, etc. desertion

It is an offence for a person who is not serving in the armed forces of the Crown —

(a) to assist or procure any person who is serving in the armed forces of the Crown to desert or improperly absent himself or herself from duty; or

(b) to conceal, employ or continue to employ any such person who is a deserter or so improperly absent from duty, knowing the person to be a deserter or so improperly absent.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Armed Forces Act 2006 ss.8 and 10 adapted]

448. Bringing contempt on uniform

It is an offence for a person who is not serving in the armed forces of the Crown —

(a) to wear without the permission of the Governor —

- (i) the uniform of any of those forces; or a

- (ii) any dress having the appearance or bearing any of the regimental or other distinctive marks of any such uniform, in such a manner or under such circumstances as to be likely to bring contempt upon that uniform; or

- (b) to employ any other person so to wear that uniform or dress.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Uniforms Act 1894 s.3]

449. Unlawful drilling

(1) Any meeting or assembly of persons for the purpose of —

- (a) training or drilling persons to the use of arms;
- (b) being trained or drilled to the use of arms; or
- (c) practising military exercises, movements, or evolutions, without the written authority of the Governor, or of a public officer authorised by the Governor for the purpose, is prohibited.

(2) A person present at a prohibited meeting or assembly for the purpose mentioned in subsection (1)(a) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person who at a prohibited meeting or assembly aids or assists a person for the purpose mentioned in subsection (1)(a) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years.

(4) A person present at a prohibited meeting for a purpose mentioned in subsection (1)(b) or (c) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(5) A police officer may disperse any prohibited meeting or assembly and arrest without warrant any person present at or aiding and abetting any such meeting or assembly.

(6) A prosecution for an offence under this section —

- (a) must be brought within 6 months after the date of the offence;
- (b) may not be brought except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(7) In this section, “prohibited meeting or assembly” has the meaning given to that term by subsection (1).

[UK Unlawful Drilling Act 1819 ss.1, 2 and 7]

The police

450. Causing disaffection among police officers

It is an offence for a person —

(a) to cause, or attempt to cause, or do any act calculated to cause, disaffection amongst members of the police force; or

(b) to induce or attempt to induce or do any act calculated to induce any police officer to withhold his or her services or to commit a breach of discipline.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[Crimes Ord. s.31; Police Ord. s.57; UK Police Act 1996 s.91]

451. Obstructing police officer in the performance of duty

A person who resists or wilfully obstructs —

(a) a police officer in the performance of the police officer's duty; or

(b) a person assisting the police officer in the performance of that duty,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

[Crimes Ord. s.34 modified; UK Police Act 1996 s.89]

452. Impersonating a police officer, etc.

(1) A person who, with intent to deceive —

(a) pretends to be a police officer, customs officer or immigration officer; or

(b) makes any statement or does any act calculated falsely to suggest that he or she is such an officer,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person who pretends to be a police officer, customs officer or immigration officer with a view to obtaining —

(a) admission to premises;

(b) information; or

(c) any other benefit,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) A person who, not being a police officer, customs officer or immigration officer, wears any article of police uniform in circumstances where the article gives the person an appearance so nearly resembling that of such an officer as to be likely to deceive commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(4) A person who, not being a police officer, customs officer or immigration officer, has in his or her possession any article of the uniform of any such officer commits an offence, unless the person can prove that he or she obtained possession of the article in question lawfully and that his or her possession of it is for a legal purpose.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(5) In this section —

“article of police uniform” means any article of uniform or any distinctive badge or mark or document of identification issued to police, customs or immigration officers or which has the appearance of any such article, badge, mark or document.

“customs officer” has the meaning given to that term by the Customs Ordinance;

“immigration officer means a person appointed as such under section 3 of the Immigration Ordinance.

[UK Police Act 1996 s.90; Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s.30]

453. Offences of escaping

(1) A person who is —

- (a) lawfully in the custody of a police officer or other public officer;
- (b) lawfully detained in any place; or
- (c) serving any sentence of imprisonment or other custodial sentence, and who escapes, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person is —

- (a) lawfully in the custody of a police officer or other public officer;
- (b) lawfully detained in any place; or
- (c) serving any sentence of imprisonment or other custodial sentence, any police officer or other public officer who negligently allows that person to escape commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) An offence under subsection (1) is committed —

(a) whether the escape was effected by artifice or as a result of the negligence of the person or persons who had custody of the escapee; and

(b) whether the escape was made from a place of lawful custody or prison or elsewhere.

[Crimes Ord. ss.35 and 36]

454. Escaping: Ancillary offences

(1) A person who —

(a) encourages;

(b) aids and abets; or

(c) assists,

an offence under section 453(1) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, with intent to facilitate the escape of any prisoner —

(a) conveys anything into a prison or to a prisoner; or

(b) places anything anywhere with a view to it coming into the possession of a prisoner, commits an offence, whether or not escape is effected.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both

(3) A person must not be —

(a) prosecuted for an offence under both subsection (1) and subsection (2) in respect of the same facts; nor

(b) prosecuted for an offence under subsection (1) and under Part 4 for an ancillary offence in relation to the same escape.

[Crimes Ord. s.38 modified]

455. Escaping: Supplementary

(1) If a person, in committing an offence under section 453(1) uses —

(a) violence, explosives or any offensive weapon; or

(b) a threat of the use of anything mentioned in paragraph (a),

to assist in effecting his or her own escape, the maximum penalty for the offence under that section is imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person, in committing an offence under section 454(1) uses —

- (a) violence, explosives or any offensive weapon; or
- (b) a threat of the use of anything mentioned in paragraph (a),

to encourage, aid and abet or assist the escape of another person, the maximum penalty for the offence under that section is imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(3) For the purposes of sections 453 and 454, a person is deemed to be lawfully in custody —

- (a) while confined in or being taken to or from any prison or place of lawful custody;
- (b) while for any other reason outside a prison or place of lawful custody, in the custody or under the control of a police officer;
- (c) while being taken to any place to which the person is required or authorised to be taken in custody; and
- (d) while kept in custody in pursuance of any lawful requirement or authorisation.

[Crimes Ord. ss.37 and 39 modified]

456. Harboursing

(1) This section applies in relation to a person ('A') who —

- (a) has escaped from a prison; or
- (b) having been sentenced to imprisonment or detention, is otherwise unlawfully at large.

(2) A person who knowingly harbours A, or gives to A any assistance, with intent to prevent, hinder or interfere with A's being taken into custody, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

[UK CJ Act 1961 s.22]

False alarms, etc.

457. False alarms, etc.

(1) A person who knowingly gives or causes to be given a false alarm of fire to the police force or to the fire service commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person ('A') who causes any wasteful employment of any police officer by knowingly making to any other person a false report —

- (a) likely to give rise to apprehension for the safety of any persons or property;
- (b) saying or implying that an offence has been committed; or
- (c) saying or implying that A has information material to any police inquiry,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) A person who, knowing that there is no sufficient reason to do so, summons or causes an ambulance or a medical practitioner to be summoned to attend at any place, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

[Crimes Ord.ss.42, 43, 44]

PART 18 - JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

458. Restriction on reports of divorce and similar proceedings

(1) It is an offence for a person to print or publish, or cause or procure to be printed or published in relation to any judicial proceedings for dissolution of marriage, for nullity of marriage or for judicial separation, any particulars other than —

- (a) the names and occupations of the parties and witnesses;
- (b) a concise statement of the charges, defences and countercharges in support of which evidence has been given
- (c) submissions on any point of law arising in the course of the proceedings, and the decision of the court on them;
- (d) the judgment of the court and observations made by the judge in giving judgment.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(3) Nothing in this section applies to —

- (a) the printing of any pleading, transcript of evidence or other document for use in connection with any judicial proceedings or the communication of them to persons concerned in the proceedings;
- (b) the printing or publishing of any notice or report in pursuance of the directions of a court; or
- (c) the printing or publishing of any matter —

(i) in a separate volume or part of a bona fide series of law reports which does not form part of any other publication and consists solely of reports of proceedings in courts of law; or

(ii) in a publication of a technical character bona fide intended for circulation among members of the legal or medical profession.

[UK CJ Act 1925 s.1 (repealed)]

459. Publication of information relating to proceedings in private

(1) Subject to subsection (3), the publication of information relating to proceedings before any court sitting in private is a contempt of court if —

(a) the proceedings —

(i) relate to the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the Supreme Court with respect to youths;

(ii) are brought under the Children Ordinance 2014; or

(iii) otherwise relate wholly or mainly to the maintenance or upbringing of a youth;

(b) the proceedings are brought in relation to the property of a person suffering from mental disorder;

(c) the court sits in private for reasons of national security during that part of the proceedings about which the information in question is published;

(d) the information relates to a secret process, discovery or invention which is in issue in the proceedings;

(e) the court (if it has power to do so) expressly prohibits the publication of all information relating to the proceedings or of information of the description which is published.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), the publication of the text or a summary of the whole or part of an order made by a court sitting in private is not of itself contempt of court unless the court (having power to do so) expressly prohibits the publication.

(3) The court may in its discretion give leave for the publication of any information the publication of which under subsection (1) would otherwise be a contempt of court.

(4) In this section references to a court include references to a judge and to a tribunal and to any person exercising the functions of a court, a judge or a tribunal; and references to a court sitting in private include references to a court sitting in camera or in chambers.

(5) Nothing in this section is to be construed as implying that any publication is punishable as contempt of court which would not be so punishable apart from this section.

[UK Administration of Justice Act 1960 s.12 adapted]

460. Restriction on reports of other judicial proceedings

(1) This Part is in addition to and does not limit the following provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 which restrict the reporting of publication of proceedings in criminal proceedings, namely —

- (a) sections 200 to 206 in relation to the reporting of sending proceedings;
- (b) section 251 to 253 in relation to preliminary rulings;
- (c) section 387 and 388 in relation to derogatory assertions;
- (d) sections 461 to 470 in relation to the reporting of judicial proceedings which involve vulnerable witnesses;
- (e) section 753 in relation to judicial proceedings which involve young offenders.

(2) An offence under any of the provisions mentioned in subsection (1) committed in the face of the court may, instead of being prosecuted under those provisions, be treated as a contempt of court under the provisions of this Part.

(3) This Part applies to a breach of the restriction on reporting in section 691 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (which relates to reporting of retrials) as provided by that section.

[UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s.8; UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 Sched. 3 expanded]

461. Taking photographs, etc. in court

(1) It is an offence for a person —

- (a) to take or attempt to take in any court any photograph of the proceedings of the court;
- (b) with a view to publication, to make or attempt to make in any court any portrait or sketch of the judge of the court, or a juror or witness in or a party to any proceedings before the court, whether civil or criminal; or
- (c) to publish any photograph, portrait, or sketch taken or made in contravention of paragraph (a) or (b), or any reproduction of such a photograph, portrait or sketch.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) For the purposes of this section —

- (a) “court” means any court of justice, including a coroner’s court;
- (b) “judge” includes the Registrar, a justice of the peace and the coroner;

(c) a photograph, portrait or sketch of a person is deemed to be taken or made in court if it is taken or made in the courtroom or in the building or in the precincts of the building in which the court is held, or if it is taken or made of the person while the person is entering or leaving the courtroom or any such building or precincts.

[UK CJ Act 1925 s.41 adapted]

Perverting the course of justice, etc.

462. Perverting the course of justice, etc.

(1) A person who, with intent to pervert the course of public justice, does an act or a series of acts which have a tendency to pervert the course of public justice commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person has committed an imprisonable offence, any other person who, knowing or believing that the offence or some other imprisonable offence has been committed, and that he or she has information which might be of material assistance in securing the prosecution or conviction of an offender for it, accepts or agrees to accept for not disclosing that information any consideration other than the making good of loss or injury, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) No proceedings may be commenced for an offence under this section except by or with the consent of the Attorney General.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1967 s.5 and common law]

463. Intimidation, etc. of witnesses, jurors and others

(1) A person commits an offence if the person —

(a) does an act which intimidates, and is intended to intimidate, another person (“the victim”);

(b) does the act knowing or believing that the victim is assisting in the investigation of an offence or is a witness or potential witness or a juror or potential juror in proceedings for an offence; and

(c) does it intending thereby to cause the investigation or the course of justice to be obstructed, perverted or interfered with.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person commits an offence if the person —

(a) does an act which harms, and is intended to harm, another person or, intending to cause another person to fear harm, threatens to do an act which would harm that other person;

(b) does or threatens to do the act knowing or believing that the person harmed or threatened to be harmed, or some other person, has assisted in an investigation into an offence or has given evidence or particular evidence in proceedings for an offence, or has acted as a juror or concurred in a particular verdict in proceedings for an offence; and

(c) does or threatens to do it because of that knowledge or belief.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(3) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (2) it is immaterial that the act is or would be done, or that the threat is made —

(a) otherwise than in the presence of the victim; or

(b) to a person other than the victim.

(4) The harm that may be done or threatened may be financial as well as physical (whether to the person or a person's property) and similarly as respects an intimidatory act which consists of threats.

(5) The intention required by subsection (1)(c) and the motive required by subsection (2)(c) need not be the only or the predominating intention or motive with which the act is done or, in the case of subsection (2), threatened.

(6) If, in proceedings against a person for an offence under subsection (1), it is proved that the person did an act falling within subsection (1)(a) with the knowledge or belief required by subsection (1)(b), the person is presumed, unless the contrary is proved, to have done the act with the intention required by subsection (1)(c).

(7) If, in proceedings against a person ('A') for an offence under subsection (2), it is proved that within the relevant period —

(a) A did an act which harmed, and was intended to harm, another person ('B'); or

(b) intending to cause B fear of harm, A threatened to do an act which would harm B, and that A did the act, or (as the case may be) threatened to do the act, with the knowledge or belief required by subsection (2)(b), A is presumed, unless the contrary is proved, to have done the act or (as the case may be) threatened to do the act with the motive required by subsection (2)(c).

(8) In this section —

“investigation into an offence” means such an investigation by the police or other person charged with the duty of investigating offences or charging offenders;

“offence” includes an alleged or suspected offence;

“potential”, in relation to a juror, means a person who has been summoned for jury service at the court at which proceedings for the offence are pending; and

“the relevant period” means —

(a) in relation to a witness or juror in any proceedings for an offence - the period beginning with the commencement of the proceedings and ending a year after the conclusion of the trial or, if there is an appeal, the conclusion of the appeal;

(b) in relation to a person who has, or is believed by the defendant to have, assisted in an investigation into an offence, but who was not also a witness in proceedings for an offence - the period of one year beginning with any act of the person, or any act believed by the defendant to be an act of the person, assisting in the investigation; and

(c) in relation to a person who both has, or is believed by the defendant to have, assisted in the investigation into an offence and was a witness in proceedings for the offence - the period beginning with any act of the person, or any act believed by the defendant to be an act of the person, assisting in the investigation and ending as stated in (a) above.

(9) For the purposes of the definition of the relevant period in subsection (8) —

(a) proceedings for an offence are commenced at the earliest of the following times —

(i) when a justice of the peace issues a summons or warrant under section 258 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Issue of summons or warrant for arrest) in respect of the offence;

(ii) when a person is charged with the offence after being taken into custody without a warrant;

(iii) when a bill of indictment is preferred by virtue of section 290 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Bills of indictment);

(b) proceedings at a trial of an offence are concluded with the discontinuance of the prosecution, the discharge of the jury without a finding, the acquittal of the defendant or the sentencing of or other dealing with the defendant for the offence of which the defendant was convicted; and

(c) proceedings on an appeal are concluded on the determination of the appeal or the abandonment of the appeal.

(10) This section is in addition to, and does not derogate from, any offence subsisting at common law relating to witnesses and jurors.

[Crimes Ord. s.50; UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.51]

Contempt of court

464. Contempt of the Supreme Court or Court of Appeal

(1) Conduct, whether in the face of the court or otherwise, which constituted contempt of the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court before the commencement of this Part —

(a) constitutes contempt of the respective court after that commencement, subject to section 469; and

(b) may be dealt with by the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court respectively by imprisonment or a fine or both, after hearing representations both as to liability and as to penalty from or on behalf of the defendant, and subject to section 469.

(2) Nothing in this Part —

(a) prejudices any defence available at common law to a charge of contempt of court under the strict liability rule;

(b) implies that any publication is punishable as contempt of court under that rule which would not be so punishable apart from those provisions;

(c) restricts liability for contempt of court in respect of conduct intended to impede or prejudice the administration of justice.

[Common law; UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 s.6]

465. Strict liability rule

(1) In this Part “the strict liability rule” means the rule of law whereby conduct may be treated as a contempt of court as tending to interfere with the course of justice in particular legal proceedings regardless of intent to do so.

(2) The strict liability rule applies —

(a) only in relation to publications, and for this purpose “publication” includes any speech, writing, programme included in a cable programme service or other communication in whatever form, which is addressed to the public at large or any section of the public;

(b) only to a publication which creates a substantial risk that the course of justice in the proceedings in question will be seriously impeded or prejudiced;

(c) to a publication only if the proceedings in question are active within the meaning of this section at the time of the publication.

(3) Section 470 applies for determining the times at which proceedings are to be treated as active within the meaning of this section.

(4) A person is not guilty of contempt of court under the strict liability rule as the publisher of any matter to which that rule applies if at the time of publication (having taken all reasonable care) the person does not know and has no reason to suspect that relevant proceedings are active.

(5) A person is not guilty of contempt of court under the strict liability rule as the distributor of a publication containing any such matter if at the time of distribution (having taken all reasonable care) the person does not know that it contains such matter and has no reason to suspect that it is likely to do so.

(6) The burden of proof of any fact tending to establish a defence afforded by this section to any person lies upon that person.

(7) Subject to this section a person is not guilty of contempt of court under the strict liability rule in respect of a fair and accurate report of legal proceedings held in public, published contemporaneously and in good faith.

(8) In any such proceedings the court may, if it appears to be necessary for avoiding a substantial risk of prejudice to the administration of justice in those proceedings, or in any other proceedings pending or imminent, order that the publication of any report of the proceedings, or any part of the proceedings, be postponed for a period the court thinks necessary for that purpose.

(9) For the purposes of subsection (7) a report of proceedings is to be treated as published contemporaneously —

(a) in the case of a report of which publication is postponed pursuant to an order under subsection (8) of this section - if published as soon as practicable after that order expires;

(b) in the case of a report of sending proceedings of which publication is permitted by virtue only of section 200 or 201 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (reporting of sending proceedings) - if published as soon as practicable after publication is so permitted.

(10) A publication made as or as part of a discussion in good faith of public affairs or other matters of general public interest is not to be treated as a contempt of court under the strict liability rule if the risk of impediment or prejudice to particular legal proceedings is merely incidental to the discussion.

[Contempt of Court Ord. Schedule; UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 ss.1 to 5]

466. Confidentiality of jury's deliberations

(1) Subject to subsection (2), it is a contempt of court to obtain, disclose or solicit any particulars of statements made, opinions expressed, arguments advanced or votes cast by members of a jury in the course of their deliberations in any legal proceedings.

(2) This section does not apply to any disclosure of any particulars —

(a) in the proceedings in question for the purpose of enabling the jury to arrive at their verdict, or in connection with the delivery of that verdict; or

(b) in evidence in any subsequent proceedings for an offence alleged to have been committed in relation to the jury in the first mentioned proceedings, or to the publication of any particulars so disclosed.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 s.8]

467. Use of tape recorders

(1) Subject to subsection (4), it is a contempt of court to —

(a) use in court, or bring into court for use, any tape recorder or other instrument for recording sound, except with the leave of the court;

(b) publish a recording of legal proceedings made by means of any such instrument, or any recording derived directly or indirectly from it, by playing it in the hearing of the public or any section of the public, or to dispose of it or any recording so derived, with a view to such publication;

(c) use any such recording in contravention of any conditions of leave granted under paragraph (a).

(2) Leave under subsection (1)(a) may be granted or refused at the discretion of the court, and if granted may be granted subject to conditions the court thinks proper with respect to the use of any recording made pursuant to the leave; and if leave has been granted the court may at the like discretion withdraw or amend it either generally or in relation to any particular part of the proceedings.

(3) Without affecting any other power to deal with an act of contempt under subsection (1)(a), the court may order the instrument, or any recording made with it, or both, to be forfeited; and any object so forfeited must (unless the court otherwise determines on application by a person appearing to it to be the owner) be sold or otherwise disposed of in the manner the court directs.

(4) This section does not apply to the making or use of sound recordings for purposes of official transcripts of proceedings.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 s.9]

468. Contempt of the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court

(1) The Magistrates' Court has jurisdiction under this section to treat as in contempt of court any person who wilfully —

(a) insults the Senior Magistrate or justices of the peace, any witness before or officer of the court or any legal practitioner having business in the court, during his or her or their sitting or attendance in court or in going to or returning from the court;

(b) interrupts the proceedings of the court or otherwise misbehaves in court;

(c) commits a contempt of court of the kind mentioned in section 466 or 467.

(d) commits an offence under any of the provisions mentioned in section 460(1) in the face of the court.

(2) In any such case the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court, as the case may be, may —

(a) order any officer of the court, or any police officer, to take the offender into custody and detain him or her until the rising of the court; and

(b) commit the offender to custody for a specified period not exceeding one month or impose on him or her a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) The Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court, as the case may be, may at any time revoke an order of committal made under subsection (2) and, if the offender is in custody, order his or her discharge.

(4) Provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 relating to fines, power to rectify mistakes and appeals to Supreme Court apply in relation to an order made by the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court under this section as they apply in relation to a sentence on conviction or finding of guilty of an offence by that court.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 s.12]

469. Penalties and procedure

(1) If a court has power to commit a person to prison for contempt of court and (apart from this provision) no limitation applies to the period of committal, the committal must —

(a) (without affecting the power of the court to order the person's earlier discharge) be for a fixed term;

(b) not on any one occasion exceed 2 years in the case of committal by the Supreme Court or Court of Appeal, or one month in the case of committal by the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court.

(2) In the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court a fine for contempt of court must not exceed level 4 on the standard scale and is subject to section 468(4).

(3) A court has the same power to make a hospital order under Part 34 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Mentally Disordered Offenders) in the case of a person suffering from mental disorder who could otherwise be committed to prison for contempt of court as it has under that Part in the case of a person convicted of an offence.

(4) No proceedings for a contempt of court under this Part may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General, or on the motion of a court having jurisdiction to deal with it.

(5) A fine imposed under this section or section 468 is, for the purposes of any enactment, deemed to be a sum adjudged to be paid by a conviction and may be enforced accordingly.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 ss.7, 14 and 16]

470. Times when proceedings are active

(1) Criminal, appellate and other proceedings are active for the purpose of section 469 at the times respectively prescribed by the following subsections; and in relation to proceedings in which more than one of the steps described in any of those subsections is taken, the reference in that subsection is a reference to the first of those steps.

(2) Subject to the following subsections, criminal proceedings are active from the relevant initial step specified in subsection (3) until concluded as described in subsection (4).

(3) The initial steps of criminal proceedings are —

- (a) arrest without warrant;
- (b) the issue of a warrant for arrest;
- (c) the issue of a summons to appear;
- (d) the service of an indictment or other document specifying the charge;
- (e) an oral charge.

(4) Criminal proceedings are concluded —

- (a) by acquittal or, as the case may be, by sentence;
- (b) by any other verdict, finding, order or decision which puts an end to the proceedings;
- (c) by discontinuance or by operation of law.

(5) The reference in subsection (4)(a) to sentence includes any order or decision consequent on conviction or finding of guilt which disposes of the case, either absolutely or subject to future events and a deferment of sentence under Part 23 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Sentencing: General Principles).

(6) Proceedings are discontinued within the meaning of subsection (4)(c) —

- (a) if the charge or summons is withdrawn or a nolle prosequi entered;

(b) in the case of proceedings commenced by arrest without warrant - if the person arrested is released, otherwise than on bail, without having been charged.

(7) Criminal proceedings cease to be active if an order is made for the charge to lie on the file, but become active again if leave is later given for the proceedings to continue.

(8) Without affecting subsection (4)(b), criminal proceedings against a person cease to be active if —

(a) the defendant is found to be under a disability such as to render him or her unfit to be tried or unfit to plead; or

(b) a hospital order is made in his or her case under [Part 34] of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Mentally Disordered Offenders), but become active again if they are later resumed.

(9) Criminal proceedings against a person which become active on the issue of a warrant for the person's arrest cease to be active 12 months after the date of the warrant unless the person has been arrested within that period, but become active again if the person is subsequently arrested.

(10) Proceedings other than criminal proceedings and appellate proceedings are active from the time when a date for the trial or hearing is fixed until the proceedings are disposed of or discontinued or withdrawn; and for the purposes of this subsection any motion or application made in or for the purposes of any proceedings is to be treated as a distinct proceeding.

(11) Appellate proceedings are active from the time when they are commenced by —

(a) application for leave to appeal or apply for review, or by notice of such an application;

(b) notice of appeal or of application for review; or

(c) other originating process, until disposed of or abandoned, discontinued or withdrawn.

(12) If, in appellate proceedings relating to criminal proceedings, the court —

(a) remits the case to the court below; or

(b) orders a new trial,

any further or new proceedings which result are to be treated as active from the conclusion of the appellate proceedings.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 Sched. 1]

471. Supplementary provisions

(1) No court may require a person to disclose, nor is any person guilty of contempt of court for refusing to disclose, the source of information contained in a publication for which the person is responsible, unless it is established to the satisfaction of the court that disclosure is necessary in the interests of justice or national security, or for the prevention of disorder or crime.

(2) If a court that has power to do so allows a name or other matter to be withheld from the public in proceedings before the court, the court may give any directions prohibiting the publication of that name or matter in connection with the proceedings that appear to the court to be necessary for the purpose for which it was so withheld.

(3) Nothing in this Part —

(a) prejudices any defence available at common law to a charge of contempt of court under the strict liability rule;

(b) implies that any publication is punishable as contempt of court under that rule which would not be so punishable apart from those provisions;

(c) restricts liability for contempt of court in respect of conduct intended to impede or prejudice the administration of justice.

[UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 ss. 10 and 11]

PART 19 – PERJURY, ETC.

472. Interpretation of Part

(1) For the purposes of this Part, the forms and ceremonies used in administering an oath are immaterial, if —

(a) the court or person before whom the oath is taken has power to administer an oath for the purpose of verifying the statement in question; and

(b) the oath has been administered in a form and with ceremonies which the person taking the oath has accepted without objection, or has declared to be binding on him or her.

(2) The expression “judicial proceedings” includes proceedings before the European Court or any court attached to it or any other court, tribunal or person having by law power to hear, receive, and examine evidence on oath.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.15]

Perjury

473. Perjury in judicial proceedings

(1) A person lawfully sworn as a witness or as an interpreter in any judicial proceedings who wilfully makes a statement material in the proceeding, which the person knows to be false or does not believe to be true, commits the offence of perjury.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a statement made for the purposes of any judicial proceedings is not made before the tribunal itself, but is made on oath before a person authorised by law to administer an oath to the person who makes the statement, and to record or authenticate the statement, it is, for the purposes of this section, to be treated as having been made in judicial proceedings.

(3) A statement made by a person lawfully sworn in the Falkland Islands for the purposes of any judicial proceedings in a place outside the Falkland Islands is, for the purposes of this section, to be treated as a statement made in judicial proceedings in the Falkland Islands.

(4) If, for the purposes of judicial proceedings in the Falkland Islands, a person is lawfully sworn under the authority of any enactment —

- (a) in any part of Her Majesty's dominions;
- (b) before a British officer in a foreign country; or
- (c) within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, a statement made by the person (unless the enactment under which it was made otherwise specifically provides) is to be treated for the purposes of this section as having been made in the judicial proceedings in the Falkland Islands for the purposes of which it was made.

(5) The question whether a statement in respect of which perjury is alleged was material is a question of law to be determined by the court of trial.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.1]

474. Perjury in the European Court, etc.

(1) A person who, in sworn evidence before the European Court or any court attached to it, makes any statement which the person knows to be false or does not believe to be true, commits an offence and may be proceeded against and punished as for an offence under section 473(1).

(2) For the purposes of this section, it is immaterial whether the defendant does or does not have Falkland Islands status.

[UK European Communities Act 1972 s.11(1) adapted]

475. Subornation of perjury

Every person who counsels, procures or suborns another person to commit an offence under this Part commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.7 adapted]

False statements

476. Penalty for giving false unsworn evidence

(1) This section applies when a person gives unsworn evidence in criminal proceedings pursuant to section 352 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Reception of unsworn evidence).

(2) A person who wilfully gives false evidence in such circumstances that, had the evidence been given on oath, the person would have been guilty of perjury, commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) in the case of an adult - imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both;

(ii) in the case of a youth – a fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

[UK Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s.57]

477. False written statements tendered in evidence

A person who in a written statement tendered in evidence in criminal proceedings by virtue of section 411 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (Proof by written statement) wilfully makes a statement material in those proceedings which the person knows to be false or does not believe to be true, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK CJ Act 1967 s.89]

478. False unsworn statements under the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975

A person who, in giving any evidence (either orally or in writing) otherwise than on oath, when required to do so by an order under section 2 of the UK Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975, makes a statement —

(a) which the person knows to be false in a material particular; or

(b) which is false in a material particular and which the person does not believe to be true, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.1A; Evidence (Proceedings in other Jurisdictions) Act 1975]

479. False statements on oath made otherwise than in judicial proceedings

A person who —

(a) being required or authorised by law to make any statement on oath for any purpose, and being lawfully sworn (otherwise than in judicial proceedings) wilfully makes a statement which is material for that purpose and which the person knows to be false or does not believe to be true; or

(b) wilfully uses any false affidavit for the purposes of the UK Bills of Sale Act 1878 as applied to the Falkland Islands, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.2]

480. False statements, etc. with reference to marriage

(1) A person who, for the purpose of procuring a marriage, or a certificate or licence for marriage, knowingly and wilfully makes a false oath, or makes or signs a false declaration, notice or certificate, required under any enactment for the time being in force relating to marriage, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who knowingly and wilfully makes, or knowingly and wilfully causes to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of marriage, a false statement as to any particular required by law to be known and registered relating to any marriage, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person who forbids any marriage or the issue of any certificate or licence for marriage by falsely representing himself or herself to be a person —

(a) whose consent to the marriage is required by law; or

(b) who is authorised to forbid the issue of such a certificate, knowing such representation to be false, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.3; CJ Act 1925 s.28]

481. False statements, etc. as to births or deaths

A person who knowingly and wilfully —

(a) makes a false answer to any question put by or on behalf of the Registrar General relating to the particulars required to be registered concerning any birth or death;

(b) gives to the Registrar General any false information concerning any birth or death or the cause of any death;

(c) makes any false certificate or declaration under or for the purposes of any enactment relating to the registration of births or deaths;

(d) knowing any such certificate or declaration to be false, uses it as true or gives or sends it as true to any person;

(e) makes, gives or uses, any false statement or declaration as to a child born alive as having been still-born, or as to the body of a deceased person or a still-born child in any coffin;

(f) falsely pretends that any child born alive was still-born; or

(g) makes any false statement with intent to have it inserted in any register of births or deaths,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.4; CJ Act 1925 s.28]

482. False statutory declarations and other false statements

A person who knowingly and wilfully makes (otherwise than on oath) a statement that is false in a material particular commits an offence if the statement is made —

(a) in a statutory declaration;

(b) in an abstract, account, balance sheet, book, certificate, declaration, entry, estimate, inventory, notice, report, return or other document which the person is authorised or required to make, attest or verify, by any enactment then in force in the Falkland Islands;

(c) in any written statement which the person is required to make or makes for the purposes of or in connection with any civil proceedings; or

(d) in any oral declaration or oral answer which the person is required to make by, under, or in pursuance of any enactment,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.5]

483. False declarations, etc. to obtain registration, etc. for carrying on a vocation

A person who —

(a) procures or attempts to procure himself or herself to be registered on any register or roll kept under or pursuant to any enactment in force in the Falkland Islands of persons qualified by law to practise any vocation or calling; or

(b) procures or attempts to procure a certificate of the registration of any person on any such register or roll, by wilfully making or producing or causing to be made or produced either verbally or in writing, any declaration, certificate or representation which the person knows to be false or fraudulent, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.6]

484. False statement to procure passport

A person who, for the purpose of procuring a passport for himself or herself for any other person, makes a statement which is to his or her knowledge untrue, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.
[UK CJ Act 1925 s.36]

485. Offences under the British Nationality Act 1981

(1) A person who, for the purpose of procuring anything to be done or not to be done under the UK British Nationality Act 1981 as applied to the Falkland Islands, makes a statement which the person knows to be false in a material particular, or recklessly makes a statement which is false in a material particular, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine a level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person who fails to comply with any requirement imposed on the person under the UK British Nationality Act 1981 with respect to the delivering up of certificates of naturalisation commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

[UK British Nationality Act 1981 s.46 (part)]

Miscellaneous provisions

486. Corroboration required

(1) A person is not liable to be convicted of any offence under this Part, or for any offence declared by any other enactment to be perjury or subornation of perjury, or to be punishable as perjury or subornation, solely upon the evidence of one witness as to the falsity of any statement alleged to be false.

(2) The requirement for corroboration in relation to certain offences contained in subsection (1) applies also to an attempt to commit any of those offences.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.13 adapted]

487. Proof of former trial

On a prosecution —

(a) for perjury alleged to have been committed on the trial of an indictment or criminal information; or

(b) for procuring or suborning the commission of perjury on any such trial, the fact of the former trial may be proved by the production of a certificate containing the substance and effect (omitting the formal parts) of the information or charge and trial purporting to be signed by the Registrar or clerk of the court, or other person having the custody of the records of the court where the indictment or information was tried, without proof of the signature or official character of the clerk or person appearing to have signed the certificate.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.14]

488. Form of indictment or charge

(1) In an information or charge for an offence under this Part, it is sufficient to state the substance of the offence charged, and before which court or person (if any) the offence was committed, without stating the proceedings or any part of the proceedings in the course of which the offence was committed, and without stating the authority of any court or person before whom the offence was committed.

(2) In an information or charge for aiding, abetting, counselling, suborning, or procuring any other person to commit an offence under this Part, or for conspiring with any other person to commit any such offence, it is sufficient —

(a) if that offence has been committed - to allege that offence, and then to allege that the defendant procured the commission of that offence;

(b) if that offence has not been committed - to state the substance of the offence charged against the defendant without stating any matter or thing which it is unnecessary to aver in the case of an indictment for a false statement or false representation that is an offence under this Part.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.12]

489. Saving for corrupt practice offence

If the making of a false statement by a person is not only an offence under this Part, but also by virtue of some other Part is a corrupt practice, the liability of the person under this Part is in addition to and not in substitution for the person's liability under that other Part.

[UK Perjury Act 1911 s.16(1)]

PART 20 – BRIBERY AND PUBLIC OFFICE OFFENCES

General bribery offences

490. Offences of bribing another person

(1) A person ('P') commits an offence in either of the following cases.

(2) Case 1 is where —

(a) P offers, promises or gives a financial or other advantage to another person; and

(b) P intends the advantage —

(i) to induce a person to perform improperly a relevant function or activity; or

(ii) to reward a person for the improper performance of such a function or activity.

(3) Case 2 is where —

(a) P offers, promises or gives a financial or other advantage to another person; and

(b) P knows or believes that the acceptance of the advantage would itself constitute the improper performance of a relevant function or activity.

(4) In Case 1 it does not matter whether the person to whom the advantage is offered, promised or given is the same person as the person who is to perform, or has performed, the function or activity concerned.

(5) In Cases 1 and 2 it is irrelevant whether the advantage is offered, promised or given by P directly or through a third party.

(6) The maximum penalty for an offence under this section is —

(a) if P is an individual - imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both;

(b) in any other case - a fine.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

491. Offences relating to being bribed

(1) A person ('R') commits an offence in any of the following cases.

(2) Case 3 is where R requests, agrees to receive or accepts a financial or other advantage intending that, in consequence, a relevant function or activity should be performed improperly.

(3) Case 4 is where —

(a) R requests, agrees to receive or accepts a financial or other advantage; and

(b) the request, agreement or acceptance itself constitutes the improper performance by R of a relevant function or activity.

(4) Case 5 is where R requests, agrees to receive or accepts a financial or other advantage as a reward for the improper performance (whether by R or another person) of a relevant function or activity.

(5) Case 6 is where, in anticipation or in consequence of R requesting, agreeing to receive or accepting a financial or other advantage, a relevant function or activity is performed improperly—

(a) by R; or

(b) by another person at R's request, or with R's assent or acquiescence.

(6) In Cases 3 to 6 it is irrelevant whether —

(a) R requests, agrees to receive or accepts (or is to request, agree to receive or accept) the advantage directly or through a third party; or

(b) the advantage is (or is to be) for the benefit of R or another person.

(7) In Cases 4 to 6 it is irrelevant whether R knows or believes that the performance of the function or activity is improper.

(8) In Case 6, where a person other than R is performing the function or activity, it is also irrelevant whether that person knows or believes that the performance of the function or activity is improper.

(9) The maximum penalty for an offence under this section is —

(a) if P is an individual - imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both;

(b) in any other case - a fine.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

492. Function or activity to which bribe relates

(1) For the purposes of this Part, a function or activity is a relevant function or activity if —

(a) it falls within subsection (2); and

(b) meets one or more of conditions A to C.

(2) The following functions and activities fall within this subsection —

(a) any function of a public nature;

(b) any activity connected with a business;

(c) any activity performed by or on behalf of a body of persons (whether incorporated or not).

(3) Condition A is that a person performing the function or activity is expected to perform it in good faith.

(4) Condition B is that a person performing the function or activity is expected to perform it impartially.

(5) Condition C is that a person performing the function or activity is in a position of trust by virtue of performing it.

(6) A function or activity is a relevant function or activity even if it —

(a) has no connection with the Falkland Islands; and

(b) is performed in a place outside the Falkland Islands.

(7) In this section, “business” includes trade or profession.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

493. Improper performance to which bribe relates

(1) For the purposes of this Part a relevant function or activity —

(a) is performed improperly if it is performed in breach of a relevant expectation; and

(b) is to be treated as being performed improperly if there is a failure to perform the function or activity and that failure is itself a breach of a relevant expectation.

(2) In subsection (1), “relevant expectation” —

(a) in relation a function or activity which meets condition A or B - means the expectation mentioned in the condition concerned; and

(b) in relation a function or activity which meets condition C - means any expectation as to the manner in which, or the reasons for which, the function or activity will be performed that arises from the position of trust mentioned in that condition.

(3) Anything that a person does (or omits to do) arising from or in connection with that person’s past performance of a relevant function or activity is to be treated for purposes of this Part as being done (or omitted) by that person in the performance of that function or activity.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

494. Expectation test

(1) For the purposes of sections 492 and 493, the test of what is expected is a test of what a reasonable person in the Falkland Islands would expect in relation to the performance of the type of function or activity concerned.

(2) In deciding what such a person would expect in relation to the performance of a function or activity where the performance is not subject to the law of the Falkland Islands, any local custom or practice is to be disregarded unless it is permitted or required by the written law of the place concerned.

(3) In subsection (2), “written law” means law contained in —

(a) any written constitution, or provision made by or under legislation, applicable to the place concerned; or

(b) any judicial decision which is so applicable and is evidenced in published written sources.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

Bribery of foreign public officials

495. Bribery of foreign public officials

(1) A person ('P') who bribes a foreign public official ('F') with intent to influence F in F's capacity as a foreign public official commits an offence if P's intention is to obtain or retain —

(a) business; or

(b) an advantage in the conduct of business.

Penalty: (i) If P is an individual - imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both;

(ii) in any other case - a fine.

(2) P bribes F if, and only if —

(a) directly or through a third party P offers, promises or gives any financial advantage —

(i) to F; or

(ii) to another person at F's request or with F's assent or acquiescence; and

(b) F is neither permitted nor required by the written law applicable to F to be influenced in F's capacity as a foreign public official by the promise, offer or gift.

(3) References in this section to influencing F in F's capacity as a foreign public official mean influencing F in the performance of F's functions as such an official, which includes —

(a) any omission to exercise those functions; and

(b) any use of F's position as such an official, even if not within F's authority.

(4) The term "foreign public official" means an individual who —

(a) holds a legislative, administrative or judicial position of any kind, whether appointed or elected, of a country or territory outside the Falkland Islands (or any subdivision of such a country or territory);

(b) exercises a public function —

(i) for or on behalf of a country or territory outside the Falkland Islands (or any subdivision of such a country or territory); or

(ii) for any public agency or public enterprise of that country or territory (or subdivision); or

(c) is an official or agent of a public international organisation.

(5) In this section, “public international organisation” means an organisation whose members are any of the following —

- (a) countries or territories;
- (b) governments of countries or territories;
- (c) other public international organisations;
- (d) a mixture of any of the above.

(6) For the purpose of section (3)(b), the written law applicable to F is —

- (a) if the performance of the functions of F which P intends to influence would be subject to the law of the Falkland Islands - that law;
- (b) if paragraph (a) does not apply and F is an official or agent of a public international organisation - the applicable written rules of that organisation;
- (c) if paragraphs (a) and (b) do not apply - the law of the country or territory in relation to which F is a foreign public official so far as that law is contained in —
 - (i) any written constitution, or provision made by or under legislation, applicable to the country or territory concerned; or
 - (ii) any judicial decision which is so applicable and is evidenced in published written sources.

(7) For the purposes of this section, a trade or profession is a business.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

Failure of commercial organisations to prevent bribery

496. Failure of commercial organisations to prevent bribery

(1) A relevant commercial organisation (‘C’) commits an offence under this section if a person (‘A’) associated with C bribes another person intending to —

- (a) obtain or retain business for C; or
- (b) obtain or retain an advantage in the conduct of business for C.

Penalty: A fine.

(2) It is a defence for C to show that C had in place adequate procedures designed to prevent persons associated with C from undertaking such conduct.

(3) For the purposes of this section, A bribed another person if, and only if, A —

(a) is, or would be, guilty of an offence under section 490 or 491 (whether or not A has been prosecuted for such an offence); or

(b) would be guilty of such an offence if section 503(1)(c) and (3) were omitted.

(4) Section 497 applies as regards the meaning of a person associated with C and section 498 applies as regards a duty on the Governor to publish guidance.

(5) In this section —

“partnership” means —

(a) a partnership within the meaning of the Companies and Private Partnership Ordinance; and

(b) a limited partnership registered under that Ordinance, or a firm or entity of a similar character formed under the law of a place outside the Falkland Islands;

“relevant commercial organisation” means —

(a) a body incorporated under the law of the Falkland Islands which carries on a business there or elsewhere;

(b) any other corporate body (wherever incorporated) which carries on business, or part of a business, in the Falkland Islands;

(c) a partnership formed under the law of the Falkland Islands which carries on a business (whether there or elsewhere); or

(d) any other partnership (wherever formed) which carries on a business, or part of a business, in the Falkland Islands, and for purposes of this section, a trade or profession is a business.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

497. Meaning of “associated person”

(1) For the purposes of section 496 a person (‘A’) is associated with C if (disregarding any bribe under consideration) A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C.

(2) The capacity in which A performs services for or on behalf of C is irrelevant, so that A may (for example) be C’s employee, agent or subsidiary.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), the question of whether A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C is to be determined by reference to all the relevant circumstances and not merely by reference to the nature of the relationship between A and C.

(4) In determining a question as mentioned in subsection (3), if A is an employee of C, it is to be presumed unless the contrary is shown that A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

498. Guidance about commercial organisations preventing bribery

(1) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order publish guidance about procedures that relevant commercial organisations can put in place to prevent persons associated with them from bribing as mentioned in section 496(1).

(2) The Governor, after consulting as aforesaid, may from time to time by order publish revisions to guidance published under this section, or to revised guidance.

(3) Expressions used in this section have the same meaning as in section 496.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.1 to 9 and 11]

Misconduct in judicial or public office

499. Misconduct in public office

A public officer who wilfully and without reasonable excuse or justification —

(a) neglects to perform his or her duty; or

(b) misconducts himself or herself to such a degree as to amount to an abuse of the public's trust in the office holder,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

[Common law]

Miscellaneous

500. Consent to prosecution

No proceedings under this Part may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.10]

501. Territorial application of this Part

(1) If —

(a) no act or omission which forms part of an offence under section 490, 491 or 495 takes place in the Falkland Islands;

(b) a person's acts or omissions done or made outside the Falkland Islands would form part of such an offence if done or made in the Falkland Islands; and

(c) that person has a close connection with the Falkland Islands, proceedings for the offence may be taken in the Falkland Islands.

(2) An offence is committed under section 496 irrespective of whether the acts or omissions which form part of the offence take place in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1), a person has a close connection with the Falkland Islands if the person was at the time when the acts or omissions were done or made, the person was —

(a) an individual who was ordinarily resident in the Falkland Islands; or

(b) a corporate body incorporated by or under the law of or carrying on business in the Falkland Islands.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

502. National security as a defence

(1) It is a defence for a person charged with a relevant bribery offence to prove that the person's conduct was necessary for the proper exercise of the functions of —

(a) the functions of the Crown in relation to national security; or

(b) the armed forces when engaged on active service.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a "relevant bribery offence" means —

(a) an offence under section 490 which would not also be an offence under section 495;

(b) an offence under section 491;

(c) an offence of attempting or conspiring to commit, the commission of an offence falling within paragraph (a) or (b);

(d) an offence committed by encouraging, or aiding and abetting, the commission of an offence falling within paragraph (a) or (b).

(3) In relation to the intelligence services operating in the Falkland Islands, the Governor must ensure that the service has in place arrangements designed to ensure that any conduct of a member of the service which would otherwise be a relevant bribery offence is necessary for a purpose falling within subsection (1)(a).

(4) In relation to the armed services operating in the Falkland Islands, the Governor must ensure that the forces have in place arrangements designed to ensure that any conduct of —

- (a) a member of the armed forces who is engaged on active service; or
- (b) a civilian subject to service discipline when working in support of any person falling within paragraph (a), which would otherwise be a relevant bribery offence, is necessary for a purpose falling within subsection (1)(b).

(5) In this section —

“active service” means service in —

- (a) an action or operation against an enemy;
- (b) an operation outside the British Islands for the protection of life or property; or
- (c) the military occupation of a foreign country or territory;

“civilian subject to service discipline” and “enemy” have the same meaning as in the Act of 2006.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

503. Bribery offences by corporate bodies

(1) This section applies if an offence under any of sections 490, 491 or 495 is committed by a corporate body.

(2) If the offence is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of —

- (a) a senior officer of the corporate body; or
- (b) a person purporting to act in such a capacity, the senior officer or person (as well as the corporate body) is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly.

(3) Subsection (2) does not apply, in the case of an offence committed under section 490, 491 or 495 by virtue of section 501(1), to a senior officer or person purporting to act in such a capacity unless the senior officer or person has a close connection with the Falkland Islands (within the meaning given by section 501(3)).

(4) In this section —

“director” means, in relation to a corporate body the affairs of which are managed by its members, a member of the body;

“senior officer” means, in relation to a corporate body, a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

504. Bribery offences by partnerships

(1) Proceedings for an offence under section 496 alleged to have been committed by a partnership must be brought in the name of the partnership (and not in that of any of the partners).

(2) For the purpose of such proceedings —

(a) statutory provisions relating to the service of documents have effect as if the partnership were a corporate body; and

(b) the provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 relating to proceedings against a corporate body apply as they apply in relation to such a body.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

505. Application to Crown

This Part applies to individuals in the public service of the Crown as it applies to other individuals.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

506. Abolition of common law offences

The common law offences of bribery and embracery are abolished.

[UK Bribery Act 2010 ss.12 to 17(1)]

PART 21 - PUBLIC ORDER

507. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“caravan” means any structure designed or adapted for human habitation which is capable of being moved from one place to another (whether by being towed, or by being transported on a motor vehicle or trailer) and any motor vehicle so designed or adapted;

“damage”, in relation to land, includes the deposit of any substance capable of polluting the land;

“distribute” means distribute to the public or a section of the public;

“exempt person”, in relation to land (or any gathering on land), means the occupier, any member of the occupier’s family, any employee or agent of the occupier and any person whose dwelling is situated on the land;

“land” means land in the open air and includes a place partly open to the air;

“meeting” means a meeting held for the purpose of the discussion of matters of public interest or for the purpose of the expression of views on such matters;

“music” includes sounds wholly or predominantly characterised by the emission of a succession of repetitive beats;

“night” means the interval between 9.0 p.m. and 6.0 a.m. on the next succeeding day;

“occupier” in relation to land means the person entitled to possession of the land by virtue of an estate or interest that person holds, and in relation to assemblies on land includes the person reasonably believed by the person applying for or making the order to be the occupier;

“owner”, in relation to land, means the person in whom the freehold estate is vested or who holds the land under a lease for a term of years or from year to year;

“premises” means any place and includes any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft;

“private land” means land other than Crown land in terms of the Land Ordinance;

“public” includes a section of the public;

“public meeting” includes any meeting in a public place and any meeting which the public or any section of it are permitted to attend, whether on payment or otherwise;

“publication” includes a publication in electronic form and, in the case of a publication which is, or may be, produced from electronic data, any medium on which the data are stored;

“sound equipment” means equipment designed or adapted for amplifying music and any equipment suitable for use in connection with such equipment.

“vehicle” includes any vehicle, whether or not it is in a fit state for use on roads, and includes any chassis or body, with or without wheels, appearing to have formed part of such a vehicle, and any load carried by, and anything attached to, such a vehicle, and a caravan;

“violence” means any violent conduct, so that —

(a) except in the context of affray - it includes violent conduct towards property as well as violent conduct towards persons; and

(b) it is not restricted to conduct causing or intended to cause injury or damage but includes any other violent conduct.

(2) For the purposes of this Part a person may be regarded as residing on any land even if the person has a home elsewhere.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 as am by Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994]

Riot, etc.

508. Riot

(1) If 12 or more persons who are present together use or threaten unlawful violence for a common purpose and the conduct of them (taken together) is such as would cause a person of reasonable firmness present at the scene to fear for his or her personal safety, each of the persons using unlawful violence for the common purpose commits the offence of riot.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) It is immaterial whether or not the 12 or more use or threaten unlawful violence simultaneously.

(3) The common purpose may be inferred from conduct.

(4) No person of reasonable firmness need actually be, or be likely to be, present at the scene.

(5) Riot may be committed in private as well as in public places.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.1 adapted]

509. Violent disorder

(1) If 3 or more persons who are present together use or threaten unlawful violence and the conduct of them (taken together) is such as would cause a person of reasonable firmness present at the scene to fear for his or her personal safety, each of the persons using or threatening unlawful violence commits the offence of violent disorder.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) It is immaterial whether or not the 3 or more use or threaten unlawful violence simultaneously.

(3) No person of reasonable firmness need actually be, or be likely to be, present at the scene.

(4) Violent disorder may be committed in private as well as in public places.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.2 adapted]

510. Affray

(1) If —

(a) a person ('A') uses or threatens unlawful violence towards another person; and

(b) A's conduct is such as would cause any person of reasonable firmness present at the scene to fear for his or her personal safety,

A commits the offence of affray.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If 2 or more persons use or threaten the unlawful violence, it is the conduct of them taken together that must be considered for the purposes of subsection (1).

(3) For the purposes of this section a threat cannot be made by the use of words alone.

(4) No person of reasonable firmness need actually be, or be likely to be, present at the scene.

(5) Affray may be committed in private as well as in public places.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.3 adapted]

511. Fear or provocation of violence

(1) A person ('A') commits an offence if A —

(a) uses towards another person ('B') threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour;
or

(b) distributes or displays to another person ('B') any writing, sign or other visible representation which is threatening, abusive or insulting, either —

(c) with intent —

(i) to cause ('B') to believe that immediate unlawful violence will be used against ('B') or another by any person; or

(ii) to provoke the immediate use of unlawful violence by ('B') or another; or

(d) whereby ('B') is likely to believe that such violence will be used or it is likely that such violence will be provoked.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) An offence under this section may be committed in a public or a private place, except that no offence is committed if the words or behaviour are used, or the writing, sign or other visible representation is distributed or displayed, by a person inside a dwelling and the other person is also inside that or another dwelling.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.4 adapted]

512. Intentionally abusive conduct

(1) A person ('A') who, with intent to cause another person ('B') harassment, alarm or distress—

(a) uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, or disorderly behaviour; or

(b) displays any writing, sign or other visible representation which is threatening, abusive or insulting, and thereby causes B or any other person harassment, alarm or distress, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) An offence under this section may be committed in a public or a private place, except that no offence is committed if the words or behaviour are used, or the writing, sign or other visible representation is displayed, by a person inside a dwelling and the person who is harassed, alarmed or distressed is also inside that or another dwelling.

(3) It is a defence for A to prove that —

(a) A was inside a dwelling and had no reason to believe that the words or behaviour used, or the writing, sign or other visible representation displayed, would be heard or seen by a person outside that or any other dwelling; or

(b) A's conduct was reasonable.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.4A, inserted by Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994]

513. Disorderly conduct

(1) A person who —

(a) uses threatening or abusive words or behaviour, or disorderly behaviour; or

(b) displays any writing, sign or other visible representation which is threatening or abusive, within the hearing or sight of a person likely to be caused harassment, alarm or distress by such words, behaviour or representation, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(2) An offence under this section may be committed in a public or a private place, except that no offence is committed if the words or behaviour are used, or the writing, sign or other visible representation is displayed, by a person inside a dwelling and the other person is also inside that or another dwelling.

(3) It is a defence for the defendant to prove that —

(a) the defendant had no reason to believe that there was any person within hearing or sight who was likely to be caused harassment, alarm or distress;

(b) the defendant was inside a dwelling and had no reason to believe that the words or behaviour used, or the writing, sign or other visible representation displayed, would be heard or seen by a person outside that or any other dwelling; or

(c) the defendant's conduct was reasonable.

(4) A police officer may arrest without warrant any person who —

(a) engages in offensive conduct which the police officer warns the person to stop; and

(b) engages in further offensive conduct immediately or shortly after the warning.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.5 am. by Crime & Courts Act 2013]

514. Riot, etc.: Mental element

(1) A person commits riot only if he or she intends to use violence or is aware that his or her conduct may be violent.

(2) A person commits violent disorder or affray only if he or she intends to use or threaten violence or is aware that his or her conduct may be violent or threaten violence.

(3) A person commits an offence under section 512 only if he or she intends his or her words or behaviour, or the writing, sign or other visible representation, to be threatening, abusive or insulting, or is aware that it may be threatening, abusive or insulting.

(4) A person commits an offence under section 513 only if the person —

(a) intends his or her words or behaviour, or the writing, sign or other visible representation, to be threatening or abusive;

(b) is aware that they might be threatening or abusive; or

(c) (if the offence is constituted by behaviour) intends his or her behaviour to be, or is aware that it might be, disorderly.

(5) For the purposes of this section a person whose awareness is impaired by intoxication is to be taken to be aware of that of which the person would be aware if not intoxicated, unless he or she shows either that the intoxication was not self-induced or that it was caused solely by the taking or administration of a substance in the course of medical treatment.

(6) In subsection (5) “intoxication” means any intoxication, whether caused by drink, drugs or other means, or by a combination of means.

(7) Subsections (1) and (2) do not affect the determination for the purposes of riot or violent disorder of the number of persons who use or threaten violence.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.6 am. by Crimes & Courts Act 2013]

515. Riot, etc.: Procedure

(1) No prosecution for an offence of riot or encouraging or assisting the offence of riot may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(2) For the purposes of the rules against charging more than one offence in the same count or information, each of sections 508 to 513 creates one offence.

(3) If on the trial of a person charged with violent disorder or affray the court finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, it may find the person guilty of an offence under section 511.
[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.7]

516. Common law offences of riot etc. abolished

(1) The common law offences of riot, rout, unlawful assembly and affray are abolished.

(2) In any enactment coming into force or instrument taking effect after the coming into force of this Part, a reference to “riot”, “rout”, “unlawful assembly” or “affray”, or their cognate expressions, is to be construed as a reference to the offences created by sections 508 to 510.

(3) Subject to subsection (2), and unless a different intention appears, nothing in this Part affects the meaning of “riot” or of any cognate expression in any enactment in force, or instrument taking effect, before the coming into force of this Part.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 ss.9 & 10]

Disguises

517. Authorisation relating to disguises

(1) If a police officer of the rank of inspector or above reasonably believes —

(a) that activities may take place in any locality in the Falkland Islands that are likely (if they take place) to involve the commission of offences; and

(b) that it is expedient, in order to prevent or control the activities, to give an authorisation under this subsection, the officer may authorise the power conferred by section 518 to be exercised in that locality for a specified period not exceeding 24 hours.

(2) If it appears to an officer of the rank of inspector or above that it is expedient to do so, having regard to offences which have, or are reasonably suspected to have, been committed in connection with any incident or activity in the locality, the officer may extend the authorisation for a further period not exceeding 24 hours.

(3) An authorisation or extension under this section must be in writing signed by the police officer who gives it, and must specify —

(a) the locality in which and the period during which the powers conferred by section 518 are exercisable;

(b) the grounds for the authorisation or extension.

(4) The police officer who gives an authorisation under subsection (1) or an extension under subsection (2) must as soon as practicable inform the Chief Police Officer.

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.60AA & 60A as am by 1997 c.21 and 2001 c.24]

518. Power to require removal of disguise

(1) An authorisation under section 517 confers on any police officer in uniform power in the locality and during the period specified in the authorisation —

(a) to require any person to remove any item which the officer reasonably believes the person is wearing wholly or mainly for the purpose of concealing his or her identity;

(b) to seize any item which the officer reasonably believes any person intends to wear wholly or mainly for that purpose.

(2) A person who fails to remove an item he or she is wearing when required to do so by a police officer in the exercise of the powers under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for one month or a fine at level 2 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) Anything seized by a police officer under subsection (1)(b) may be retained in accordance with regulations made by the Governor under the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014.

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.60AA & 60A as am by 1997 c.21 and 2001 c.24]

Causing public alarm or anxiety

519. Interference with goods with intention of causing public alarm or anxiety, etc.

(1) A person who, with the intention of causing —

(a) public alarm or anxiety;

(b) injury to members of the public consuming or using the goods;

(c) economic loss to any person by reason of the goods being shunned by members of the public; or

(d) economic loss to any person by reason of steps taken to avoid any such alarm or anxiety, injury or loss, does any of the following —

(i) contaminates or interferes with goods;

(ii) makes it appear that goods have been contaminated or interfered with;

(iii) places goods which have been contaminated or interfered with, or which appear to have been contaminated or interfered with, in a place where goods of that description are consumed, used, sold or otherwise supplied,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who, with any such intention as is mentioned in paragraph (a), (c) or (d) of subsection (1), threatens that that person or another will do, or claims that that person or another has done, any of the acts mentioned in sub-paragraph (i), (ii) or (iii) of that subsection, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person who is in possession of —

(a) materials to be used for contaminating or interfering with goods or making it appear that goods have been contaminated or interfered with; or

(b) goods which have been contaminated or interfered with, or which appear to have been contaminated or interfered with, with a view to the commission of an offence under subsection (1), commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 10 years or a fine, or both.

(4) In this section “goods” includes substances whether natural or manufactured and whether or not incorporated in or mixed with other goods.

(5) The reference in subsection (2) to a person claiming that certain acts have been committed does not include a person who in good faith reports or warns that such acts have been, or appear to have been, committed.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.38]

520. Bomb hoaxes

(1) A person who —

(a) places any article or substance in any place whatever; or

(b) dispatches any article or substance by post or any other means whatever of sending things from one place to another, with the intention (in either case) of inducing in some other person a belief that it is likely to explode or ignite and thereby cause personal injury or damage to property, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who communicates any information which he or she knows or believes to be false to another person with the intention of inducing in that or any other person a false belief that a bomb or other thing liable to explode or ignite is present in any place or location whatever commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 5 years or a fine, or both.

(3) For a person to commit an offence against subsection (1) or (2) it is not necessary for the person to have any other particular person in mind as the person in whom he or she intends to induce the belief mentioned in that subsection.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.51]

Quasi-military organisations, uniforms etc.

521. Quasi-military organisations

(1) If the members or adherents of any association of persons, whether incorporated or not, are—

(a) organised, trained or equipped for the purpose of enabling them to be employed in usurping the functions of the police or of the armed forces of the Crown; or

(b) organised and trained or organised and equipped either for the purpose of enabling them to be employed for the use or display of physical force in promoting any political object, or in such manner as to arouse reasonable apprehension that they are organized and either trained or equipped for that purpose, any person who takes part in the control or management of the association, or in organising or training any members or adherents of it as described above, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In any proceedings against a person under subsection (1) it is a defence for the defendant to show that he or she did not consent to or connive at the organisation, training, or equipment of members or adherents of the association in contravention of subsection (1).

(3) No proceedings for an offence against this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(4) If upon application by the Attorney General it appears to the court that any association is an association of which members or adherents are organised, trained, or equipped in contravention of subsection (1), the court may —

(a) make an order to prevent any disposition without the leave of the court of property held by or for the association;

(b) direct an inquiry and report to be made as to any such property and as to the affairs of the association;

(c) make such further orders as appear to the court to be just and equitable for the application of such property in or towards —

(i) the discharge of the liabilities of the association lawfully incurred before the date of the application, or since that date with the approval of the court;

(ii) the repayment of moneys to persons who became subscribers or contributors to the association in good faith and without knowledge of the contravention;

(iii) any costs incurred in connection with any inquiry and report directed under paragraph (b) or in winding-up or dissolving the association,

(d) order that any property which is not directed by the court to be so applied is forfeited to the Crown.

(5) In any criminal or civil proceedings under this section proof of things done or of words written, spoken or published (whether or not in the presence of any party to the proceedings) by any person taking part in the control or management of an association or in organizing, training or equipping members or adherents of it is admissible as evidence of the purposes for which, or the manner in which, the members or adherents (whether those persons or others) were organized, trained or equipped.

(6) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence under this section has been committed, and that evidence of the commission of it is to be found at any premises or place specified in the information, the justice may, on application by a police officer of the rank of inspector or above, grant a search warrant authorizing the officer, or another officer named in the warrant, together with any other persons named in the warrant and any other police officers to —

(a) enter the premises or place at any time within one month from the date of the warrant, if necessary by force;

(b) search the premises or place and every person found therein; and

(c) seize anything found on the premises or place or on any such person which the officer has reasonable ground for suspecting to be evidence of the commission of the offence.

(7) Nothing in this section prohibits —

(a) the employment of a reasonable number of persons as stewards to assist in the preservation of order at any public meeting held upon private premises;

(b) making of arrangements for that purpose;

(c) instructing persons to be employed in their lawful duties as stewards; or

(d) providing them with suitable badges or other appropriate distinguishing signs.

[UK Public Order Act 1936 s.2]

522. Prohibition of uniforms in connection with political objects

(1) Subject to subsection (2), a person who in any public place or at any public meeting wears a uniform signifying his or her association with —

- (a) any political organisation; or
- (b) the promotion of any political object,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) If the Chief Police Officer is satisfied that the wearing of the uniform on any ceremonial, anniversary or other special occasion is not likely to involve risk of public disorder, the Chief Police Officer may, with the written consent of the Governor, issue a permit for the wearing of such uniform on that occasion either absolutely or subject to conditions specified in the permit.

[UK Public Order Act 1936 s.1]

Breaches of the peace

523. Behaviour likely to cause a breach of the peace

A person who in any public place behaves in such a manner that a breach of the peace is likely to be caused by the behaviour commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) Binding over with a recognisance to keep the peace; or

- (ii) if the person refuses to be so bound over - imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Public Order Act s.40(4); Magistrates Courts Act 1980 s.115(3)]

524. Disorderly conduct in a place of lawful custody

A person who in any place of lawful custody behaves in a riotous, indecent, disorderly or insulting manner commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 1 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s.29]

525. Disorderly or indecent behaviour while intoxicated

(1) It is an offence for a person, while intoxicated —

- (a) to commit in any public place or police station any disorderly or indecent behaviour; or
- (b) to be in possession of a firearm.

Penalty: (i) On first conviction - imprisonment for 2 months or a fine at level 1 on the standard scale, or both;

- (ii) on a second or subsequent conviction - imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) In this section “intoxication” means physical or mental impairment, whether caused by the consumption of alcohol, drugs or other means, or by a combination of means, and “intoxicated” is to be construed accordingly.

[UK CJ Act 1967 s.91]

PART 22 – HATE CRIMES

526. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“distribute” means distribute to the public or a section of the public;

“hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation” means hatred against a group of persons defined by reference to sexual orientation (whether towards persons of the same sex, the opposite sex or both);

“racial hatred” means hatred against a group of persons defined by reference to colour, race, nationality (including citizenship) or ethnic or national origins;

“recording” means any record from which visual images or sounds may, by any means, be reproduced; and —

(a) references to the distribution, showing or playing of a recording are to its distribution, showing or playing of a recording to the public or a section of the public; and

(b) “play” and “show”, and related expressions, in relation to a recording, are to be construed accordingly;

“religious hatred” means hatred against a group of persons defined by reference to religious belief or lack of religious belief.

(2) References in this Part to the publication or distribution of written material are to its publication or distribution to the public or a section of the public.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 passim]

Stirring up racial hatred

527. Use of words or behaviour or display of written material: racial hatred

(1) A person who uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, or displays any written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting, commits an offence if —

(a) the person intends by doing so to stir up racial hatred; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by the person’s actions.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) An offence under this section may be committed in a public or a private place, except that no offence is committed if the words or behaviour are used, or the written material is displayed, by a person inside a dwelling and are not heard or seen except by other persons in that or another dwelling.

(3) In proceedings for an offence under this section it is a defence for the defendant to prove that he or she was inside a dwelling and had no reason to believe that the words or behaviour used, or the written material displayed, would be heard or seen by a person outside that or another dwelling.

(4) A person who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred does not commit an offence under subsection (1) if the person did not intend his or her words or behaviour, or the written material, to be, and was not aware that it might be, threatening, abusive or insulting.

(5) This section does not apply to words or behaviour used, or written material displayed, solely for the purpose of being included in a programme service.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.18 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

528. Publishing or distributing written material: racial hatred

(1) A person who publishes or distributes written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting commits an offence if —

(a) the person intends by doing so to stir up racial hatred; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by the person's actions.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In proceedings for an offence under subsection (1) it is a defence for a defendant who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred to prove that he or she was not aware of the content of the material and did not suspect, and had no reason to suspect, that it was threatening, abusive or insulting.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.19 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

529. Public performance of a play: racial hatred

(1) If a public performance of a play is given which involves the use of threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, any person who presents or directs the performance commits an offence if —

(a) the person intends by doing so to stir up racial hatred; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances, and taking the performance as a whole, racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by the person's actions.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) If a person presenting or directing the performance is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred, it is a defence for the person to prove that he or she did not know, and had no reason to suspect that —

(a) the performance would involve the use of the offending words or behaviour;

(b) the offending words or behaviour were threatening, abusive or insulting; or

(c) the circumstances in which the performance would be given would be such that racial hatred would be likely to be stirred up.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), this section does not apply to a performance given solely or primarily for one or more of the following purposes —

(a) rehearsal;

(b) making a recording of the performance; or

(c) enabling the performance to be included in a programme service.

(4) If it is proved that the performance was attended by persons other than those directly connected with the giving of the performance, or the doing in relation to it of the things mentioned in paragraph (b) or (c) of subsection (3), the performance is, unless the contrary is shown, to be taken not to have been given solely or primarily for the purposes mentioned in that subsection.

(5) For the purposes of this section a person —

(a) is not to be treated as presenting a performance of a play by reason only of taking part in it as a performer;

(b) if taking part as a performer in a performance directed by another person, is to be treated as directing the performance if without reasonable excuse he or she performs otherwise than in accordance with that other person's direction;

(c) is to be taken as directing a performance of a play given under his or her direction even if he or she is not present during the performance;

(d) is not to be treated as aiding or abetting the commission of an offence under this section by reason only of taking part in a performance as a performer.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.20 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

530. Distributing, showing or playing a recording: racial hatred

(1) A person who distributes, or shows or plays, a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening, abusive or insulting commits an offence if —

(a) the person intends by doing so to stir up racial hatred; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by the person's actions.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In proceedings for an offence under this section it is a defence for a defendant who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred to prove that he or she was not aware of the content of the recording and did not suspect, and had no reason to suspect, that it was threatening, abusive or insulting.

(3) This section does not apply to the showing or playing of a recording solely for the purpose of enabling the recording to be included in a programme service.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.21 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

531. Broadcasting or including a programme in a programme service: racial hatred

(1) If a programme involving threatening, abusive or insulting visual images or sounds is included in a programme service, each of the persons mentioned in subsection (2) commits an offence if —

(a) the person intends by that inclusion to stir up racial hatred; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances, racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by that inclusion.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The persons referred to in subsection (1) are —

(a) the person providing the programme service;

(b) any person by whom the programme is produced or directed; and

(c) any person by whom offending words or behaviour are used.

(3) If the person providing the programme, or a person by whom the programme was produced or directed, is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred, it is a defence for the person to prove that —

(a) the person did not know and had no reason to suspect that the programme would involve the offending material; and

(b) having regard to the circumstances in which the programme was included in a programme service it was not reasonably practicable for the person to secure the removal of the material.

(4) It is a defence for a person by whom the programme was produced or directed who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred to prove that the person did not know and had no reason to suspect that —

(a) the programme would be included in a programme service; or

(b) the circumstances in which the programme would be broadcast would be such that racial hatred would be likely to be stirred up.

(5) It is a defence for a person by whom offending words or behaviour were used and who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred to prove that the person did not know and had no reason to suspect that —

(a) a programme involving the use of the offending material would be included in a programme service; or

(b) the circumstances in which a programme involving the use of the offending material would be so included, or in which a programme so included would involve the use of the offending material, would be such that racial hatred would be likely to be stirred up.

(6) A person who is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred does not commit an offence under this section if the person did not know, and had no reason to suspect, that the offending material was threatening, abusive or insulting.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.22 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

532. Possession of racially inflammatory material

(1) A person ('A') who has in A's possession written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting, or a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening, abusive or insulting, with a view to its being displayed, shown, played, published, distributed or included in a programme service, whether by A or another person, commits an offence if —

(a) A intends racial hatred to be stirred up by any such action; or

(b) having regard to all the circumstances, racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by any such action.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1), regard must be had to such display, showing, playing, publication, distribution or inclusion as A has, or might reasonably be inferred to have, in view.

(3) In proceedings for an offence under subsection (1) it is a defence for A, if A is not shown to have intended to stir up racial hatred, to prove that A was not aware of the content of the written material or recording and did not suspect, and had no reason to suspect, that it was threatening, abusive or insulting.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.23 am. by Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006]

Stirring up religious hatred, or hatred on the ground of sexual orientation

533. Use of words or behaviour or display of written material: religious etc. hatred

(1) A person who uses threatening words or behaviour, or displays any written material which is threatening, and intends by doing so to stir up religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) An offence under this section may be committed in a public or a private place, except that no offence is committed if the words or behaviour are used, or the written material is displayed, by a person inside a dwelling and are not heard or seen except by other persons in that or another dwelling.

(3) In proceedings for an offence under this section it is a defence for the defendant to prove that he or she was inside a dwelling and had no reason to believe that the words or behaviour used, or the written material displayed, would be heard or seen by a person outside that or another dwelling.

(4) This section does not apply to words or behaviour used, or written material displayed, solely for the purpose of being included in a programme service.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.29B ins. by Schedule to the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and am. by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Schedule 16]

534. Publishing or distributing written material: religious etc. hatred

(1) A person who publishes or distributes written material which is threatening and who intends by doing so to stir up religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) References in this Part to the publication or distribution of written material are to its publication or distribution to the public or a section of the public.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.29C ins. by Schedule to the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and am. by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Schedule 16]

535. Public performance of a play: religious etc. hatred

(1) If a public performance of a play is given which involves the use of threatening words or behaviour, any person who presents or directs the performance and who intends by doing so to stir up religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) This section does not apply to a performance given solely or primarily for one or more of the following purposes —

(a) rehearsal;

(b) making a recording of the performance; or

(c) enabling the performance to be included in a programme service.

(3) If it is proved that the performance was attended by persons other than those directly connected with the giving of the performance or the doing in relation to it of the things mentioned in paragraph (b) or (c), the performance is, unless the contrary is shown, to be taken not to have been given solely or primarily for the purpose mentioned above.

(4) For the purposes of this section —

(a) a person is not to be treated as presenting a performance of a play by reason only of taking part in it as a performer;

(b) a person taking part as a performer in a performance directed by another is to be treated as a person who directed the performance if without reasonable excuse he or she performs otherwise than in accordance with that other person's direction; and

(c) a person is to be taken to have directed a performance of a play given under his or her direction even if he or she was not present during the performance;

(d) a person is not to be treated as aiding or abetting the commission of an offence under this section by reason only of taking part in a performance as a performer.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.29D ins. by Schedule to the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and am. by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Schedule 16]

536. Distributing, showing or playing a recording: religious etc. hatred

(1) A person who distributes, or shows or plays, a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening and who intends by doing so to stir up religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) In this Part “recording” means any record from which visual images or sounds may, by any means, be reproduced; and references to the distribution, showing or playing of a recording are to its distribution, showing or playing to the public or a section of the public.

(3) This section does not apply to the showing or playing of a recording solely for the purpose of enabling the recording to be included in a programme service.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.29E ins. by Schedule to the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and am. by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Schedule 16]

537. Broadcasting or including programme in a programme service: religious etc. hatred

(1) If a programme involving threatening visual images or sounds is included in a programme service, each of the persons mentioned in subsection (2) who intends by that inclusion to stir up religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) The persons are —

- (a) the person providing the programme service;
- (b) any person by whom the programme is produced or directed; and
- (c) any person by whom offending words or behaviour are used.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.29F ins. by Schedule to the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and am. by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Schedule 16]

538. Possession of inflammatory material: religious etc. hatred

(1) A person who has in his or her possession written material which is threatening, or a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening, with a view —

- (a) in the case of written material, to its being displayed, published, distributed, or included in a programme service whether by that person or another; or
- (b) in the case of a recording, to its being distributed, shown, played, or included in a programme service, whether by that person or another, and who intends religious hatred, or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation, to be stirred up by any of those actions, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1), regard must be had to such display, publication, distribution, showing, playing, or inclusion in a programme service as the person has, or it may reasonably be inferred that the person has, in view.

Hate crimes - Supplementary

539. Powers of entry and search

(1) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting, as regards any premises specified in the information, that a performance of a play is to be given at those premises, and that an offence under section 529 or 535 is likely to be committed in respect of that performance, the justice of the peace may issue a warrant under his or her hand empowering any police officer at any time within 7 days from the date of the warrant to enter the premises and to attend any performance of a play which may be given there.

(2) If a justice of the peace is satisfied by information on oath laid by a police officer that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person has possession of written material or a recording in contravention of section 532 or section 538, the justice of the peace may issue a warrant under his or her hand authorising any police officer to enter and search the premises where it is suspected the material or recording is situated.

(3) A police officer entering or searching premises in pursuance of a warrant issued under this section may use reasonable force if necessary.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 ss.24 and 29G; UK Theatres Act 1968 s.15]

540. Script as evidence of what was performed

(1) If a performance of a play was based on a script, then, in any proceedings for an offence under section 529 or section 535 alleged to have been committed in respect of that performance—

(a) an actual script on which that performance was based is admissible as evidence of what was performed and of the manner in which the performance or any part of it was given; and

(b) if such a script is given in evidence on behalf of any party to the proceedings then, except in so far as the contrary is shown, whether by evidence given on behalf of the same or any other party, the performance is to be taken to have been given in accordance with that script.

(2) In this section “script”, in relation to a performance of a play, means the text of the play (whether expressed in words or in musical or other notation) together with any stage or other directions for its performance, whether contained in a single document or not.

[UK Theatres Act 1968 s.9]

541. Power to make copies of scripts

(1) If a police officer of the rank of sergeant or above has reasonable grounds for suspecting —

(a) that an offence under section 529 or section 535 has been committed by any person in respect of a performance of a play; or

(b) that a performance of a play is to be given and that an offence under that section is likely to be committed by any person in respect of that performance, the officer may require the person suspected of committing the offence to produce a copy of any actual script on which the performance was or, as the case may be, will be based.

(2) A person who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with a requirement under subsection (1) commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(3) If, in the case of a performance of a play based on a script, a copy of an actual script on which that performance was based has been provided to a police officer, section 548 applies in relation to that copy as it applies in relation to an actual script on which the performance was based.

[UK Theatres Act 1968 s.10]

542. Power to order forfeiture

(1) A court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence —

(a) under section 527 or 533 relating to the display of written material; or

(b) under any of sections 528, 530, 532, 534, 536 or 538, must order to be forfeited any written material or recording produced to the court and shown to its satisfaction to be written material or a recording to which the offence relates.

(2) An order made under this section does not take effect until the expiry of the ordinary time within which an appeal may be instituted or, if an appeal is duly instituted, until it is finally decided or abandoned.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2) —

(a) an application for leave to appeal is to be treated as the institution of an appeal; and

(b) if a decision on appeal is subject to a further appeal, the appeal is not finally determined until the expiry of the ordinary time within which a further appeal may be instituted or, if a further appeal is duly instituted, until the further appeal is finally decided or abandoned.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 ss.25 and 29H]

543. Savings for reports of parliamentary or judicial proceedings

(1) Nothing in any of sections 527 to 538 applies to a fair and accurate report of proceedings in the Legislative Assembly.

(2) Nothing in any of sections 547 to 558 applies to a fair and accurate report of proceedings publicly heard before a court or tribunal exercising judicial authority, if the report is published contemporaneously with the proceedings or, if it is not reasonably practicable or would be unlawful to publish a report of them contemporaneously, as soon as publication is reasonably practicable and lawful.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 ss.26 and 29K]

544. Saving for freedom of expression

(1) Nothing in this Part is to be read or given effect in a way which prohibits or restricts freedom of religion or of expression to the extent reasonably justifiable in a democratic society.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), nothing in this Part is to be read or given effect in a way which prohibits or restricts —

(a) discussion, criticism or expressions of antipathy, dislike, ridicule, insult or abuse of particular religions or the beliefs or practices of their adherents or any other belief system or the beliefs or practices of its adherents; or

(b) proselytising or urging adherents of a different religion or belief system to cease practising their religion or belief system.

(3) In this Part, the discussion or criticism of sexual conduct or practices or the urging of persons to refrain from or modify such conduct or practices is not to be taken of itself to be threatening or intended to stir up hatred.

[UK Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 s.29J adapted]

545. Procedural

(1) No proceedings for an offence under any of sections 527 to 538 may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(2) For the purposes of the rules against charging more than one offence in the same count or information, each of sections 527 to 538 creates a separate offence.

[UK Public Order Act 1986 s.27 and 29L]

Racially or religiously aggravated offences

546. Meaning of “racially or religiously aggravated”

(1) An offence is racially or religiously aggravated for the purposes of this Part if —

(a) at the time of committing the basic offence, or immediately before or afterwards, the offender demonstrates towards the victim of the offence hostility based on the victim’s membership (or presumed membership) of a racial or religious group; or

(b) the offence is motivated (wholly or partly) by hostility towards members of a racial or religious group based on their membership of that group.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1) —

(a) “basic offence” means an offence mentioned in any of sections 547(1), 548(1), 549(1) and 550(1);

“membership”, in relation to a racial or religious group, includes association with members of that group;

“presumed” means presumed by the offender;

“racial group” means a group of persons defined by reference to race, colour, nationality (including citizenship) or ethnic or national origins;

“religious group” means a group of persons defined by reference to religious belief or lack of religious belief;

(b) it is immaterial the purposes of subsection (1) whether the offender’s hostility is also based to any extent on any other factor not mentioned in that paragraph

[UK Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s.28 am. by Anti-Terrorism Crime and Security Act 2001]

547. Racially or religiously aggravated assaults

A person who commits an offence under —

(a) section 64 (Wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm);

- (b) section 65 (Malicious wounding);
- (c) section 70 (Common assault); or
- (d) section 71 (Assault occasioning actual bodily harm), which is racially or religiously aggravated as defined in section 546 also commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: (i) For an offence under paragraph (a) – imprisonment for 16 years or a fine, or both;
(ii) for an offence under paragraph (b) – imprisonment for 9 years or a fine, or both;
(iii) for an offence under paragraph (c) – imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both;
(iv) for an offence under paragraph (d) – imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 s.29 am. by Anti-Terrorism, Crime & Security Act 2001]

548. Racially or religiously aggravated criminal damage

(1) A person who commits an offence under section 195(1) (Destroying or damaging property) or section 196(1) (Arson) which is racially or religiously aggravated as defined in section 546 also commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 14 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who commits an offence under section 195(2) (destroying or damaging property with intent to endanger life) or section 196(2) (arson with intent to endanger life) which is racially or religiously aggravated as defined in section 546 also commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: Imprisonment for life.

(3) An offence under subsection (2) is triable on indictment only.

(4) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (2), section 546(1)(a) has effect as if the person to whom the property belongs (or is treated as belonging under section 195 or section 196) were the victim of the offence.

[UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 s.30 adapted]

549. Racially or religiously aggravated public order offences

A person who commits an offence under —

- (a) section 511 (Fear or provocation of violence);
- (b) section 512 (Intentionally abusive conduct); or
- (c) section 513 (Disorderly conduct),

which is racially or religiously aggravated as defined in section 546 also commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: (i) For an offence under paragraph (a) or (b) - imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both; or

(ii) for an offence under paragraph (c) - a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.
[UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 s.31 adapted]

550. Racially or religiously aggravated harassment etc.

A person who commits an offence under —

- (a) section 143 (Offence of harassment);
- (b) section 144 (Offence of stalking);
- (c) section 145 (Putting people in fear of violence); or
- (d) section 146 (Stalking involving fear of violence or serious alarm or distress), which is racially or religiously aggravated as defined in section 546, also commits an offence under this section.

Penalty: (i) For an offence under paragraph (a) or (b) - imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both;
(ii) for an offence under paragraph (c) or (d) - imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

[UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 s.32 adapted]

551. Alternative verdicts

(1) If, on the trial of a person charged with an offence under a provision of subsection (1) of any of sections 547 to 550, the court finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, the court may find the person guilty of the basic offence to which the charge relates.

(2) If, on the trial of a person charged with an offence under section 550(c), the court finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, the court may find the person guilty of an offence under section 550(a).

(3) If, on the trial of a person charged with an offence under section 550(d), the court finds the person not guilty of the offence charged, the court may find the person guilty of an offence under section 550(b).

[UK Crime & Disorder Act 1998 ss.31(6) and 32(5) adapted]

PART 23 – PUBLIC NUISANCES

552. Noise nuisance

(1) Subject to section 553, it is an offence for a person, through the use of an instrument or by any other means, to —

- (a) make noise; or
- (b) cause noise to be made,

if the noise causes or is likely to cause —

(i) annoyance or distress to a reasonable person having regard to the time of day; or

(ii) a breach of the peace.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) In having regard to the time of day, the hours between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. are deemed to be quiet hours and a lower level of noise is to be considered tolerable by a reasonable person and subparagraph (i) of subsection (1) is to be construed accordingly.

(3) If the noise is emitted or caused by an animal, the owner and the person who is responsible for, or who has charge or control of the animal, are both liable as though each was making the noise himself or herself.

(4) In proceedings under subsection (1) it is immaterial whether the person making the noise is in a public place, a dwelling or elsewhere.

(5) If a person makes noise between the hours of 6 a.m. and 11 p.m. contrary to this section, a police officer may, instead of taking proceedings, request the person concerned to reduce the level of noise or to stop making it or take any steps required to reduce the level of noise or to stop the making of it.

(6) If a person makes noise between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. contrary to this section, a police officer may, instead of taking proceedings, request the person concerned to stop or take any steps required to stop the making of the noise.

(7) A person who fails to comply with a reasonable request by a police officer under subsection (5) or (6) commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(8) A person does not commit an offence under this section if the making of the noise is authorised under another enactment or is in accordance with the terms and conditions of a permit or licence issued under an enactment or under section 553.

[Gibraltar Crimes Act 2012; SH Crimes Bill]

553. Noise nuisance: Exemptions

(1) The Governor may issue a permit for the purposes of authorising a public performance, a fair or other event, to named persons, to make noise that is in breach of section 552, subject to any conditions the Governor considers necessary.

(2) In considering the application for a permit and the imposition of any conditions, the Governor must have regard to the interests of the persons whom the Governor foresees may be affected by the grant of the permit.

(3) A person who acts within the terms of a permit issued under subsection (1) is not liable to proceedings for an offence under section 552.

(4) If a condition of a permit is breached, the person to whom the permit is issued, as well as the person who commits the breach, may be proceeded with for an offence under section 552.

[Gibraltar Crimes Ord. and SH Crimes Bill]

554. Causing danger in a public place

It is an offence for a person —

(a) not sufficiently to fence any area, pit or sewer left open, or to leave such open area, pit or sewer without a sufficient light after sunset to warn and prevent persons from falling into it; or

(b) in any manner or from any place to throw or discharge any stone or other missile or thing whatsoever to the damage or danger of any person;

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

[Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s.60(8); UK Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s.28]

555. Obstruction and other nuisances in streets, etc.

(1) Subject to subsection (2), it is an offence for a person to —

(a) obstruct the free passage of persons along a highway or road without lawful authority or reasonable excuse;

(b) place, hang up or otherwise expose to sale any goods, wares, merchandise, matter or thing so that it projects into or over any footway or beyond the line of any house, shop or building at which it is exposed so as to obstruct or incommode the passage of any person over or along the footway;

(c) throw or lay in any public place any building or construction materials or similar articles, or any wares, unless they are placed or enclosed so as to prevent any mischief happening to passers-by;

(d) cause a nuisance by the deposit of excrement, urine, or faecal matter of any kind in any public place, or upon or against any house, building, doorstep, doorway, wall, fencing or paling;

(e) follow, jostle, or otherwise annoy any person passing in any public place; or

(f) ride or drive dangerously any horse or carriage, or drive dangerously any livestock.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

(2) If any rubbish, lead, iron, wood, goods, commodity or other article, matter or thing is placed or allowed to remain in any public place so that it causes obstruction, annoyance or danger to any person, a police officer may —

(a) remove the thing or cause it to be removed and taken to a place of safety;

(b) detain it at the risk of the owner until the expenses of removal and detention are paid; and

(c) if such expenses are not paid within 7 days - sell or dispose of the thing and apply the proceeds as directed by the Governor.

[UK Metropolitan Police Act 1839 ss.54(17) and 60(2); UK Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s.28]

556. Posting bills

(1) It is an offence for a person to affix any poster, bill or other paper against or upon any building, wall, fence, or pole without the express consent of the owner or occupier of the premises or property concerned.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

(2) It is an offence for a person to allow the person's goods, trade, business occupation, profession or other concern to be given publicity by or to benefit from the affixing of a poster, bill or other paper in breach of subsection (1), unless the person shows that the affixing of the bill by which the publicity was given occurred without the person's consent.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

[UK Metropolitan Police Act 1839 ss.54 and 60; UK Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s.28]

PART 24 – CRIMINAL TRESPASS

Criminal trespass

557. Interpretation of Part

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“access”, in relation to any premises, means any part of any site or building within which the premises are situated which constitutes an ordinary means of access to the premises (whether or not that is its sole or primary use);

“caravan” means any structure designed or adapted for human habitation which is capable of being moved from one place to another (whether by being towed, or by being transported on a motor vehicle or trailer) and any motor vehicle so designed or adapted;

“displaced residential occupier” has the meaning given by section 573;

“firearm” has the same meaning as in the Firearms Ordinance;

“intending residential occupier” has the meaning given by section 574;

“land” includes premises;

“offensive weapon” has the same meaning as in Part 7;

“premises” means any building, any part of a building under separate occupation, any land ancillary to a building and the site comprising any building or buildings together with any land ancillary thereto;

“residential premises” means premises that are or form part of premises used mainly for residential purposes, or intended by the owner to be used for those purposes, whether by the owner or some other person;

“site” means the whole or part of any building or buildings, or any land, or both;

“vehicle” includes any vehicle, whether or not it is in a fit state for use on roads, and includes any chassis or body, with or without wheels, appearing to have formed part of such a vehicle, and any load carried by, and anything attached to, such a vehicle, and a caravan.

(2) References to a building apply also to any structure other than a movable one, and to any movable structure, vehicle or vessel designed or adapted for use for residential purposes; and for this purpose —

(a) a part of a building is under separate occupation if anyone is in occupation or entitled to occupation of that part as distinct from the whole;

(b) land is ancillary to a building if it is adjacent to it and used (or intended for use) in connection with the occupation of that building or any part of it.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.12 (part)]

558. Failing to obey directions to leave land

(1) If a police officer of the rank of Inspector or above reasonably believes —

(a) that a person is trespassing on land with the purpose of residing there for any period;

(b) that reasonable steps have been taken by or on behalf of the occupier to ask the person to leave; and

(c) that —

(i) the person has caused damage to the land or to property on the land or used threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour towards the occupier, a member of the occupier’s family or an employee or agent of the occupier; or

(ii) the person has a vehicle on the land,

the officer may direct the person to leave the land and to remove any vehicles or other property the person has with him or her on the land.

(2) If the police officer reasonably believes that the person was not originally a trespasser but has become a trespasser, on the land, the officer must reasonably believe that the other conditions specified in subsection (1) are satisfied after the person became a trespasser before the officer can exercise the power conferred by subsection (1).

(3) A direction under subsection (1), if not communicated to the person referred to in that subsection by the police officer giving the direction, may be communicated to the person by any police officer at the scene.

(4) A person who, knowing that a direction under subsection (1) has been given which applies to the person —

(a) fails to leave the land as soon as reasonably practicable; or

(b) having left again enters the land as a trespasser within 3 months after the direction was given,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(5) If a direction has been given under subsection (1) and a police officer reasonably suspects that any person to whom the direction applies has, without reasonable excuse —

(a) failed to remove from the land a vehicle which appears to the officer to belong to the person or to be in the person's possession or under the person's control; or

(b) entered the land as a trespasser with a vehicle within 3 months after the direction was given, the officer may seize and remove the vehicle.

(6) In proceedings for an offence under this section it is a defence for the defendant to show -

(a) that the defendant was not trespassing on the land; or

(b) that the defendant had a reasonable excuse for failing to leave the land as soon as reasonably practicable or, as the case may be, for again entering the land as a trespasser.

(7) A person may be regarded for the purposes of this section as having a purpose of residing in a place even if the person has a home elsewhere.

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 ss.61 & 62 adapted]

559. Violence to secure entry

(1) Subject to the following subsections, any person ('A') who, without lawful authority, uses or threatens violence for the purpose of securing entry into any premises for A or for any other person if —

(a) there is someone present on those premises at the time who is opposed to the entry which the violence is intended to secure; and

(b) A knows that that is the case,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to a person who is a displaced residential occupier or a protected intending occupier of the premises in question or who is acting on behalf of such an occupier; and if the defendant adduces sufficient evidence that he or she was, or was acting on behalf of, such an occupier the defendant is presumed to have been, or to have been acting on behalf of, such an occupier unless the contrary is proved by the prosecution.

(3) Subject to subsection (2), the fact that A has any interest in or right to possession or occupation of any premises does not for the purposes of subsection (1) constitute lawful authority for the use or threat of violence by A or anyone else for the purpose of securing A's entry into those premises.

(4) It is immaterial for the purposes of this section —

(a) whether the violence in question is directed against the person or against property; or

(b) whether the entry which the violence is intended to secure is for the purpose of acquiring possession of the premises in question or for any other purpose.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.6]

560. Remaining in public premises

(1) A person who, having entered any public premises, persists without lawful excuse in remaining in the premises after being required to leave by a police officer acting on the request of a person in lawful occupation or control of the premises, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 2 on the standard scale.

(2) In this section, "public premises" means —

(a) any building or part of a building, any land ancillary to a building, and the site comprising any building or buildings together with any ancillary land, which belongs to or is occupied by the Government or any statutory public body; and

(b) any premises used for public worship or for education, and for the purposes of this definition land is ancillary to a building if it is adjacent to it and used (or intended for use) in connection with the occupation of that building or any part of it.

(3) In this section, “person in control” includes (without limiting the scope of that expression) the owner, tenant or licensee of premises, and any person in lawful occupation of them, and, in relation to premises belonging to or occupied by the Government, includes any Government or Crown servant; and any employee or agent of a person mentioned in this definition.

[Gibraltar Crimes Act; SH Crimes Bill]

561. Squatting in a residential building

(1) A person commits an offence if —

(a) the person is in a residential building as a trespasser having entered it as a trespasser;

(b) the person knows or ought to know that he or she is a trespasser; and

(c) the person is living in the building or intends to live there for any period.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale, or both

(2) The offence is not committed by a person holding over after the end of a lease or licence (even if the person leaves and re-enters the building).

(3) For the purposes of this section —

(a) “building” includes any structure or part of a structure (including a temporary or moveable structure); and

(b) a building is “residential” if it is designed or adapted, before the time of entry, for use as a place to live.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person derives title from a trespasser, or has the permission of a trespasser, does not prevent the person from being a trespasser.

(5) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a) it is irrelevant whether the person entered the building as a trespasser before or after the commencement of this section.

[UK LASPO Act 2012 s.144]

Aggravated trespass

562. Offence of aggravated trespass

(1) A person (‘A’) commits the offence of aggravated trespass if A trespasses on land in the open air and, in relation to any lawful activity which persons are engaging in or are about to engage in on that or adjoining land in the open air, does there anything which is intended by A to have the effect of —

(a) intimidating those persons or any of them so as to deter them or any of them from engaging in that activity;

(b) obstructing that activity, or

(c) disrupting that activity.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) Activity on any occasion on the part of a person or persons on land is lawful for the purposes of this section if the person or persons may engage in the activity on the land on that occasion without committing an offence or trespassing on the land.

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.68]

563. Power to remove persons committing or participating in aggravated trespass

(1) If the senior police officer present at the scene reasonably believes —

(a) that a person is committing, has committed or intends to commit the offence of aggravated trespass on land in the open air; or

(b) that 2 or more persons are trespassing on land in the open air and are present there with the common purpose of intimidating persons so as to deter them from engaging in a lawful activity or of obstructing or disrupting a lawful activity, the officer may direct that person or those persons, or any of them, to leave the land.

(2) A direction under subsection (1), if not communicated to the persons referred to in that subsection by the police officer giving the direction, may be communicated to them by any police officer at the scene.

(3) A person who, knowing that a direction under subsection (1) has been given which applies to the person —

(a) fails to leave the land as soon as practicable; or

(b) having left again enters the land as a trespasser within 3 months after the direction was given,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(4) In proceedings for an offence under subsection (2) it is a defence for the defendant to show—

(a) that the defendant was not trespassing on the land; or

(b) that the defendant had a reasonable excuse for failing to leave the land as soon as practicable or, as the case may be, for again entering the land as a trespasser.

(5) In this section “lawful activity” has the same meaning as in section 562(2).

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.69]

564. Trespassing with an offensive weapon

A person who is on any premises as a trespasser, after having entered as such, commits an offence if, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, the person has with him or her on the premises any offensive weapon or any firearm.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

[UK Criminal Law Act 1977 s.8]

Unauthorised camping

565. Camping without permission

(1) A person who camps on any land except with the permission, whether express or implied, of the occupier of the land commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 1 month or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) Nothing in this section applies to a police officer or other public officer when engaged in the execution of his or her duty.

[Gibraltar Criminal Offences Act s.165B to E]

Designated sites

566. Trespassing on a designated site

(1) A person who enters, or is on, any designated site as a trespasser, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A “designated site” means a site —

(a) specified or described (in any way) in an order made by the Governor; and

(b) designated for the purposes of this section by the order.

(3) The Governor may only designate a site for the purposes of this section if —

(a) it is comprised in Crown land; or

(b) it appears to the Governor that it is appropriate to designate the site in the interests of the security of the Falkland Islands.

(4) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under this section to prove that the defendant did not know, and had no reasonable cause to suspect, that the site in relation to which the offence is alleged to have been committed was a designated site.

(5) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(6) For the purposes of this section a person who is on any designated site as a trespasser does not cease to be a trespasser by virtue of being allowed time to leave the site.

PART 25 – OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS

567. Interpretation and general provisions

(1) In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires —

“article” means —

(a) any writing, drawing, print, painting, photograph, book, card, lithographic or other engraving, printed matter, picture, poster, emblem, cinematograph film or any description of article containing or embodying matter to be read or looked at or both;

(b) any sound record; and

(c) any film or other record of a picture or pictures, moving or otherwise;

“distribute” has the meaning given that term by section 569;

“film exhibition” means an exhibition of moving pictures produced otherwise than by the simultaneous reception and exhibition of programmes included in a programme service;

“import” in relation to a publication means to bring or cause to be brought into the Falkland Islands, wherever the publication is brought ashore, and whether or not there is an intention to bring the same ashore;

“indecent” has the same meaning as in Part 10;

“periodical publication” includes every publication issued periodically or in parts or numbers at intervals whether regular or irregular;

“plate” includes a block, mould, matrix and stencil;

“publication” has the meaning given that term by the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance.

(2) References in this Part to possession or distribution for gain —

(a) include possession or distribution by way of trade or for public exhibition;

(b) mean any such possession or distribution whether the gain is to accrue by way of consideration for the distribution or in any other way; and

(c) apply whether in fact any gain does accrue.

(3) This Part applies in relation to anything which is intended to be used, either alone or as one of a set, for the reproduction or manufacture from it of articles containing or embodying matter to be read, looked at or listened to, as if it were an article containing or embodying that matter so far as that matter is to be derived from it or from the set.

(4) No proceedings for an offence under this Part may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

(5) This Part is in addition to, and does not derogate from, the provisions of Part 10 relating to indecent photographs of youths, prohibited images of youths, or extreme pornographic images. [UK Children and Young Persons (Harmful Publications) Act 1955 ss.1 and 4 (part); Customs Consolidation Act 1876; Customs & Excise Management Act 1979]

Obscene publications

568. Test of obscenity

(1) For the purposes of this Part a publication or article is deemed to be obscene if its effect (or, if the publication or article comprises 2 or more distinct items, the effect of any one of the items) is, if taken as a whole, such as to tend to deprave and corrupt persons who are likely, having regard to all relevant circumstances, to read, see or hear the matter contained or embodied in it.

(2) In proceedings against a person for an offence under this Part, the question whether the publication or article is obscene is to be determined —

(a) by reference to such distribution as in the circumstances it may reasonably be inferred the person had in contemplation and to any further distribution that could reasonably be expected to follow from it, but not to any other publication or article;

(b) as if any reference to distribution of it were a reference to distribution of items reproduced from it;

(c) on the assumption that copies of it, and items reproduced or manufactured from it, would be distributed in any manner likely having regard to the circumstances in which it was found, but in no other manner.

[UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 s.1 am. by Criminal Law Act 1977 and Criminal Justice and Police Act 1994 adapted]

569. Meaning of ‘distribution’

(1) For the purposes of this Part a person distributes a publication or article who —

(a) circulates, sells, lets on hire, gives, or lends it, or who offers it for sale or for letting on hire; or

(b) in the case of a publication or article containing or embodying matter to be looked at or a record - shows, plays or projects it, or, if the matter is data stored electronically, transmits the data.

(2) A person also distributes a publication or article to the extent that any matter recorded on it is included by the person in a programme included in a programme service.

(3) If the inclusion of any matter in a programme included in a programme service would, if that matter were recorded matter, constitute the distribution of an obscene publication or article for the purposes of this Part by virtue of subsection (4), this Part has effect in relation to the inclusion of that matter in that programme as if it were recorded matter.

(4) A publication or article is deemed to be had or kept for distribution if it is had or kept for the reproduction or manufacture from it of items for distribution.

[UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 s.2 am. by Criminal Law Act 1977 and Criminal Justice and Police Act 1994 adapted]

570. Distribution or possession of obscene publication or article

(1) A person who for gain —

(a) distributes an obscene publication or article; or

(b) has in the person's possession an obscene publication or article for distribution,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purpose of proceedings for an offence under this section, a person is deemed to have in the person's possession a publication or article for distribution for gain if with a view to such distribution the person has the publication or article in the person's ownership, possession or control.

(3) A person may not be convicted of an offence under this section in respect of a publication or article if the person proves that the person had not examined the publication or article and had no reasonable cause to suspect that it was such that having it would make the person liable to be convicted of an offence against this section.

[UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 s.2 (part) as am. by Obscene Publications Act 1964 and Criminal Law Act 1977; Customs and Excise Management Act 1979]

571. Manufacture, etc. of obscene publication or article

(1) A person who for gain —

(a) manufactures or produces;

(b) imports or exports; or

(c) causes to be manufactured, produced, imported or exported, any obscene publication or article commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 7 years or a fine, or both.

(2) A person who advertises or makes known by any means, in order to assist in any of the acts mentioned in subsection (1), that another person is engaged in any of those acts commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(3) A person who advertises or makes known how or from whom any obscene publication or article can be procured, either directly or indirectly, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[SH Obscene Publications Ordinance s.2 modified; UK Customs and Excise Management Act 1979]

572. Common law offence abolished

(1) No proceedings may be brought against a person at common law for the possession, distribution, manufacture, importation, exportation, advertising or promotion of an obscene publication or article.

(2) Subsection (1) does not prevent the prosecution of a person for any offence in relation to the possession, distribution, importation, manufacture or advertising of any publication or article under any other enactment.

(3) Without limiting subsection (1), no proceedings may be brought against a person for an offence at common law —

(a) in respect of a film exhibition or anything said or done in the course of such an exhibition, if it is of the essence of the common law offence that the exhibition or, as the case may be, what was said or done was obscene, indecent, offensive, disgusting or injurious to morality; or

(b) in respect of an agreement to give a film exhibition or to cause anything to be said or done in the course of such an exhibition if the common law offence consists of conspiring to corrupt public morals or to do any act contrary to public morals or decency.

[UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 s.2 (part) as am. by Obscene Publications Act 1964 and Criminal Law Act 1977]

573. Arrest, search and seizure and forfeiture

(1) If a police officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person has committed an offence under section 570 or 571, the officer may require the person to give his or her name and address and, if the person refuses or fails to do so or gives a name and address which the officer reasonably suspects to be false, may arrest the person without warrant.

(2) The powers of search and seizure in Part 3 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 apply to a publication or article which is the subject of an offence under section 570 or 571, including —

(a) any copies of the publication or article; and

(b) any plate, film or other equipment prepared for the purpose of printing or producing copies of the publication or article.

(3) The power of search and seizure in relation to a suspected offence committed by a person under either of those sections extends to any premises, stall or vehicle used by the person for the purposes of trade or business and to the seizure and removal of any documents found in the premises or, as the case may be, on the stall or vehicle, which relate to a trade or business carried on at the premises or from the stall or vehicle.

(4) Subject to subsection (5), any article seized under subsection (2) or (3) must be brought before a justice of the peace, who may issue a summons to the occupier of the premises or, as the case may be, the user of the stall or vehicle, to appear on a day specified in the summons before the Magistrates' Court or the Summary Court to show cause why the publication or article should not be forfeited.

(5) If on a hearing under subsection (4) the court is satisfied, with respect to any publication or article, that at the time when it was seized it was obscene and kept for distribution for gain, the court must order the article to be forfeited.

(6) On the conviction of a person for an offence under this Part the provisions of section 617 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 apply to the publication or article which is the subject of the offence, including —

(a) any copies of the relevant publication or article; and

(b) any plate, film or other equipment prepared for the purpose of printing or producing copies of the publication or article, found in the possession of the person or under that person's control.

(7) Subsection (6) does not apply in relation to any article seized under subsection (3) which is returned to the occupier of the premises or, as the case may be, to the user of the stall or vehicle in or on which it was found.

(8) In addition to the person summoned under subsection (4) —

(a) the owner, author or maker of any publication or article brought before the court; and

(b) any other person through whose hands the publication or article had passed before being seized, is entitled to appear before the court on the day specified in the summons to show cause why the publication or article should not be forfeited.

(9) If an order is made under subsection (5) for the forfeiture of any publication or article, any person who appeared, or was entitled to appear, to show cause against the making of the order may appeal to the Supreme Court, and the order does not take effect until the expiration of the period within which notice of appeal to the Supreme Court may be given against the order.

(10) If as respects any article brought before it the court does not order forfeiture under subsection (5) —

(a) the court may order the person on whose information the warrant for the seizure of the article was issued to pay costs the court thinks reasonable to any person who has appeared before the court to show cause why the article should not be forfeited; and

(b) costs ordered to be paid under this subsection are enforceable as a civil debt.

574. Defence of public good

(1) Subject to subsection (2), a person must not be convicted of an offence under section 570 or 571 in relation to a publication or article, and the powers of forfeiture under section 573 do not apply, if it is proved that publication of the article in question is justified as being for the public good on the ground that it is in the interests of science, literature, the arts or learning, or of other objects of general public concern.

(2) The opinion of experts as to the scientific, literary, artistic, scientific, educational or other merits of a publication or article may be admitted in any proceedings under this Part either to establish or to negative the ground mentioned in subsection (1).

[UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 s.4 as am. by Criminal Law Act 1977]

575. Assisting the commission of an offence overseas

(1) It is an offence for a person in the Falkland Islands to —

(a) encourage, aid and abet, or assist the commission in any place outside the Falkland Islands of an offence punishable under the provisions of any law in force in that place corresponding to the provisions of section 570 or 571; or

(b) do any act preparatory to or in furtherance of any act which if committed in the Falkland Islands would constitute an offence under either of those sections.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 years or a fine, or both.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1) —

(a) “corresponding law” means any law stated in a certificate purporting to be issued by or on behalf of the authorities of any place outside the Falkland Islands to be a law providing for the suppression of the circulation of and traffic in obscene publications in accordance with the provisions of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Circulation of and Traffic in Obscene Publications 1923; and

(b) any statement in any such certificate as to the effect of the law mentioned in the certificate, or any statement in any such certificate that any facts constitute an offence against that law, is conclusive.

[SH Obscene Publications Ordinance s.3]

Unsolicited publications

576. Unsolicited publications

(1) A person who sends or causes to be sent to another person —

- (a) any book, magazine or leaflet; or
- (b) advertising material for any such publication, which the person knows or ought reasonably to know is unsolicited and which describes or illustrates human sexual techniques, commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) For a first offence – a fine at level 2 on the standard scale;

(ii) for a subsequent offence – a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

(2) In this section, “unsolicited” means, in relation to goods sent to any person, that they are sent without any prior request made by the person or on the person’s behalf.

(3) No proceedings for an offence under this section may be commenced except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General.

[UK Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971 s.5]

Indecent displays

577. Indecent displays: Offence

(1) If any indecent matter is publicly displayed, the person making the display and any person causing or permitting the display to be made each commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 2 years or a fine, or both.

(2) Any matter which is displayed in or so as to be visible from any public place is, for the purposes of this section, deemed to be publicly displayed.

(3) In subsection (2), “public place”, in relation to the display of any matter has the meaning given to that term by section 2(1).

(4) Nothing in this section applies in relation to any matter —

- (a) included by any person in a programme service;
- (b) included in the display of an art gallery or museum and visible only from within the gallery or museum;

(c) displayed by or with the authority of, and visible only from within a building occupied by, the Crown; or

(d) included in a performance of a play.

(5) In this section “matter” includes anything capable of being displayed, except that it does not include an actual human body or any part thereof; and in determining for the purpose of this section whether any displayed matter is indecent —

(a) any part of that matter which is not exposed to view is to be disregarded; and

(b) account may be taken of the effect of juxtaposing one thing with another.

[UK Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 ss.1 and 4]

CHAPTER 4 – SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

PART 26 – MISCELLANEOUS AND TRANSITIONAL

578. Service of documents

(1) Any notice or other document required or authorised by this Ordinance to be served on any person may be served by —

(a) delivering it to the person;

(b) leaving it at the person's usual or last known address (whether residential or otherwise);

(c) sending it to the person by post at that address; or

(d) sending it to the person by electronic means, if the person has facilities to receive such communications.

(2) Any notice or other document so required or authorised to be served on a corporate body is duly served on it if served on the secretary or clerk of the body.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the proper address of any person is, in the case of the secretary or clerk of a body corporate, that of the registered or principal office of that body, and in any other case the last address of the person to be served which is known to the Governor.

579. Criminal procedure rules and practice directions

(1) In addition to any other power in this Ordinance to make criminal procedure rules, the Chief Justice may make criminal procedure rules to implement this Ordinance.

(2) Rules made under this section or any other provision of this Ordinance —

(a) must be consistent with the Constitution and this Ordinance;

(b) must be made only after consulting the Criminal Justice Council;

(c) may create offences carrying a maximum penalty of 3 months' imprisonment or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both;

(d) may make different provision for different cases or circumstances and may contain such incidental, supplemental, saving or transitional provisions as the Chief Justice, after consulting as required by paragraph (b), thinks fit.

(3) The Chief Justice, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may issue practice directions as to the practice to be adopted in the Supreme Court, the Magistrate's Court and the Summary Court on specific aspects of criminal procedure and practice arising under this Ordinance.

580. Amendment of Schedules

(1) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order amend any Schedule to this Ordinance.

(2) An order under subsection (1) —

(a) may make such transitional and consequential provisions as appear to the Governor, after consulting as required by subsection (1), to be necessary or expedient;

(b) requires the approval of the Legislative Assembly.

581. Repeal and disapplication of laws – Schedule 5

(1) The Ordinances listed in Part 'A' of Schedule 5 (the "repealed Ordinances") are repealed.

(2) Consequently, the English Acts applied to the Falkland Islands by Schedule 1 to the Crimes Ordinance and by the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005 ("the repealed Acts") cease to have effect as part of the law of the Falkland Islands.

(3) The provisions of the Ordinances listed in Part 'B' of Schedule 5 are repealed, and are included in the term "repealed Ordinances".

(4) The imperial enactments listed in Part 'C' of Schedule 5 (the "disapplied Acts"), being English Acts that apply to the Falkland Islands by their own force or by virtue of Chapter X of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance, are disapplied in relation to the Falkland Islands.

(5) In this section, the term "disapply" has the same effect as an order by the Governor under section 79(2) of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance declaring that a UK enactment has never been enacted, except that the disapplication only has effect from the date of commencement of this section.

(6) After the commencement of this section, there are no common law offences in the Falkland Islands, that is to say, no person may be prosecuted for an offence unless it is one created by or under an enactment.

(7) In particular, but without limiting subsection (6), the following are not offences in the Falkland Islands —

- (a) sedition and seditious libel;
- (b) defamatory libel;
- (c) obscene libel;
- (d) blasphemy.

(8) There is no defence of marital coercion in the Falkland Islands.

582. Saving provisions

(1) Except as expressly provided in this Ordinance, nothing in this Ordinance affects —

- (a) the liability, trial or punishment of a person for an offence against any other law in force in the Falkland Islands other than this Ordinance;
- (b) any of the written laws for the time being in force for the government of the police force or of the armed forces of the Crown.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), all items of subsidiary legislation made under any of the repealed Ordinances or repealed or disappplied Acts continue in force as if made under the corresponding provision of this Ordinance until amended or replaced under this Ordinance.

(3) If there is no corresponding provision of this Ordinance under which an item of subsidiary legislation referred to in subsection (2) could be made, the item is repealed or disappplied, as the case may be, except that it continues to have effect in relation to proceedings that had commenced before the repeal or disapplication as provided by section 583.

(4) Any legislative instrument made by the Governor or Chief Justice under a repealed Ordinance or repealed or disappplied Act which could be made or issued by the Governor or Chief Justice under this Ordinance continues to have effect as if made or issued by the Governor or Chief Justice respectively under this Ordinance (irrespective of a requirement for consultation) until varied or revoked under this Ordinance.

(5) Any direction, exemption, notice or other non-legislative instrument made or issued by any person or body under any of the repealed Ordinances or repealed disappplied Acts which could be made or issued by an equivalent person or body under this Ordinance continues to have effect as if made or issued by that person or body under this Ordinance until varied or revoked under this Ordinance.

(6) Any delegation made, direction given or other action taken by a person under any of the repealed Ordinances or repealed or disappplied Acts which could be taken by an equivalent person under this Ordinance continues to have effect as if taken by that person under this Ordinance.

(7) This section is in addition to, and does not displace, section 345 as regards the effect of the repeal of the Sexual Offences Ordinance, 2005.

583. Transitional provisions

(1) Proceedings for an offence under any enactment or at common law that had commenced before the commencement of this Ordinance must be conducted as if this Ordinance had not been enacted.

(2) If proceedings for an offence committed under any of the repealed Ordinances or repealed or disappplied Acts have not been commenced at the commencement of this Ordinance —

(a) if there is an equivalent offence under this Ordinance - proceedings must be brought under this Ordinance;

(b) if there is no equivalent offence - proceedings cannot be brought.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) do not apply in relation to an offence of conspiracy if the agreement was entered into before the commencement of this Ordinance and the conspiracy continued to exist after that date.

(4) For the purposes of this section, an offence is committed wholly or partly before the commencement of this Ordinance if any of the conduct or events alleged to constitute the offence occurred before that commencement.

(5) The maximum sentence for an offence under a repealed Ordinance or repealed or disappplied Act that can be imposed for an offence under that Ordinance or Act committed before the commencement of this Ordinance is the maximum sentence for that offence under that Ordinance or Act.

(6) If an offence committed before the commencement of this Ordinance is by any enactment then in force made punishable only on summary conviction, it remains only so punishable.

(7) An appeal against conviction or sentence in respect of an offence committed before the commencement of this Ordinance must be conducted as if this Ordinance had not been enacted.

(8) All sentences of imprisonment (including suspended sentences), fines, conditional discharges, disqualifications and forfeitures imposed before the commencement of this Ordinance continue to have effect and can be varied or appealed from as if this Ordinance had not been enacted.

(9) For purposes of this section, proceedings for an offence commence on —

(a) arrest without warrant;

- (b) the issue of a warrant for arrest;
- (c) the issue of a summons to appear;
- (d) the service of an indictment or other document specifying the charge; or
- (e) an oral charge,

in respect of the offence.

[UK Criminal Justice & Public Order Act 1994 s.35]

584. Consequential amendments

(1) A reference in any other enactment to a repealed Ordinance or to a repealed or disappplied Act is, to the extent possible, to be read as a reference to the corresponding provision of this Ordinance.

(2) A reference in any other enactment to the Governor or Chief Justice exercising legislative functions in relation to criminal offences is, to the extent possible, to be read as a reference to the Governor or Chief Justice, as the case may be, exercising equivalent functions under this Ordinance after consulting the Criminal Justice Council.

(3) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, may by order make such modifications or adaptations of any enactment as the Governor considers necessary or expedient in consequence of the repeal of the repealed Ordinances, the repeal of the repealed Acts, and the disapplication of the disappplied enactments.

(4) An order under subsection (3) may make such transitional and consequential provisions as the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, considers necessary or expedient.

(5) Without affecting the powers in subsections (3) and (4), the Ordinance listed in Part D of Schedule 5 is amended in the manner set out in that Schedule.

585. Ordinance binds the Crown

This Ordinance is binding on the Crown.

SCHEDULES

Schedule 1- Forfeiture of indecent photographs of children

Schedule 2 - Sexual offences to which sections 289 and 290 apply

Schedule 3 - Sexual offences for purposes of Part 11

Schedule 4 - Other offences for purposes of Part 11

Schedule 5 - Repealed and disappplied laws

SCHEDULE 1

FORFEITURE OF INDECENT PHOTOGRAPHS OF CHILDREN

(section 251(3))

Application of Schedule

1. (1) This Schedule applies if —

- (a) property which has been lawfully seized in the Falkland Islands is in the custody of a police officer;
- (b) apart from this Schedule, there is no legitimate reason for the officer to retain custody of the property;
- (c) the officer is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the property is or is likely to be forfeitable property; and
- (d) apart from this Schedule, the officer is not aware of any person who has a legitimate reason for possessing the property or any readily separable part of it.

(2) The term “forfeitable property” means —

- (a) any indecent photograph or pseudo-photograph of a child;
- (b) any property which it is not reasonably practicable to separate from any property within sub-paragraph (a).

(3) For the purposes of this paragraph —

- (a) a part of any property is a “readily separable part” of the property if, in all the circumstances, it is reasonably practicable for it to be separated from the remainder of that property; and
- (b) it is reasonably practicable for a part of any property to be separated from the remainder if it is reasonably practicable to separate it without prejudicing the remainder of the property or another part of it.

(4) The circumstances mentioned in paragraph (3)(a) include the time and costs involved in separating the property.

Possession pending forfeiture

2. (1) The property must be retained in the custody of a police officer until it is returned or otherwise disposed of in accordance with this Schedule.

(2) The provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 relating to property seized in the investigation of an offence do not apply to property held under this Schedule.

The relevant officer

3. “The relevant officer”, in relation to any property, is the police officer who for the time being has custody of the property.

Notice of intended forfeiture

4. (1) The relevant officer must give notice of the intended forfeiture of the property (“notice of intended forfeiture”) to —

(a) every person whom he believes to have been the owner of the property, or one of its owners, at the time of the seizure of the property;

(b) if the property was seized from premises - every person whom he believes to have been an occupier of the premises at that time; and

(c) if the property was seized as a result of a search of any person - that person.

(2) The notice of intended forfeiture must set out —

(a) a description of the property; and

(b) how a person may give a notice of claim under this Schedule and the period within which such a notice must be given.

(3) Subject to paragraph (4), the notice of intended forfeiture may be given to a person only by—

(a) delivering it to the person personally;

(b) addressing it to the person and leaving it for the person at the appropriate address; or

(c) addressing it to the person and sending it to the person at that address by post.

(4) A notice given in accordance with paragraph (1)(b) may, if it is not practicable to give the notice in accordance with paragraph (3), be given by —

(a) addressing it to “the occupier” of those premises, without naming the person; and

(b) leaving it for the person at those premises or sending it to the person at those premises by post.

(5) Property may be treated or condemned as forfeited under this Schedule only if —

(a) the requirements of this paragraph have been complied with in the case of the property;
or

(b) it was not reasonably practicable for them to be complied with.

- (6) In this paragraph “the appropriate address”, in relation to a person, means —
- (a) in the case of a corporate body - its registered or principal office in the Falkland Islands;
 - (b) in the case of a firm - the principal office of the partnership;
 - (c) in the case of an unincorporated body or association - the principal office of the body or association;
 - (d) in any other case – the person’s usual or last known place of residence in the Falkland Islands or last known place of business in the Falkland Islands.
- (7) In the case of —
- (a) a company registered outside the Falkland Islands;
 - (b) a firm carrying on business outside the Falkland Islands; or
 - (c) an unincorporated body or association with offices outside the Falkland Islands, the references in this paragraph to its principal office include references to its principal office within the Falkland Islands (if any).

Notice of claim

5. (1) A person claiming to have a legitimate reason for possessing the property or a part of it may give notice of the claim to a police officer at any police station.

(2) Oral notice is not sufficient for this purpose.

Time and form of notice

6. (1) A notice of claim may not be given more than one month after —

- (a) the date of the giving of the notice of intended forfeiture; or
- (b) if no such notice has been given - the date on which the property began to be retained under this Schedule (see paragraph 2).

(2) A notice of claim must specify —

- (a) the name and address of the claimant;
- (b) a description of the property, or part of it, in respect of which the claim is made;
- (c) in the case of a claimant who is outside the Falkland Islands, the name and address of a person in the Falkland Islands who is authorised to accept service, and to act, on behalf of the claimant.

(3) Service upon a person so specified is to be taken to be service on the claimant for the purposes of any proceedings by virtue of this Schedule.

(4) In a case in which notice of intended forfeiture was given to different persons on different days, the reference in this paragraph to the day on which that notice was given is a reference in relation —

(a) to a person to whom notice of intended forfeiture was given - to the day on which that notice was given to that person; and

(b) to any other person - to the day on which notice of intended forfeiture was given to the last person to be given such a notice.

Automatic forfeiture if no claim is made

7. (1) If the property is unclaimed it is treated as forfeited.

(2) The property is “unclaimed” if, by the end of the period for the giving of a notice of claim —

(a) no such notice has been given in relation to it or any part of it; or

(b) the requirements of paragraphs 5 and 6 have not been complied with in relation to the only notice or notices of claim that have been given.

(3) Paragraph (1) applies in relation to a readily separable part of the property as it applies in relation to the property, and for this purpose paragraph (2) applies as if references to the property were to the part.

(4) In this paragraph “readily separable part” has the meaning given by paragraph 1.

Decision whether to take court proceedings to condemn property as forfeited

8. (1) If a notice of claim in respect of the property, or a part of it, is duly given in accordance with paragraphs 5 and 6, the relevant officer must decide whether to take proceedings to ask the court to condemn the property or a part of it as forfeited.

(2) The decision whether to take such proceedings must be made as soon as reasonably practicable after the giving of the notice of claim.

Return of property if no forfeiture proceedings

9. (1) This paragraph applies if, in a case in which a notice of claim has been given, the relevant officer decides not to take proceedings —

(a) for condemnation of the property; or

(b) for condemnation of a part of the property.

(2) The relevant officer must return the property or part to the person who appears to the officer to have a legitimate reason for possessing the property or, if there is more than one such person, to one of those persons.

(3) Any property required to be returned in accordance with sub-paragraph (2) must be returned as soon as reasonably practicable after the decision not to take proceedings for condemnation.

Forfeiture proceedings

10. (1) This paragraph applies if, in a case in which a notice of claim has been given, the relevant officer decides to take proceedings for condemnation of the property or a part of it (“the relevant property”).

(2) Subject to sub-paragraphs (5) and (7), the court must condemn the relevant property if it is satisfied that —

(a) the relevant property is forfeitable property; and

(b) no-one who has given a notice of claim has a legitimate reason for possessing the relevant property.

(3) If the court is not satisfied that the relevant property is forfeitable property, the court must order its return to the person who appears to the court to have a legitimate reason for possessing it or, if there is more than one such person, to one of those persons.

(4) If the court is satisfied that —

(a) the relevant property is forfeitable property; and

(b) a person who has given a notice of claim has a legitimate reason for possessing the relevant property, or that more than one such person has such a reason, the court must order the return of the relevant property to that person or, as the case may be, to one of those persons.

(5) If the court is satisfied that any part of the relevant property is a separable part, sub-paragraphs (2) to (4) apply separately in relation to each separable part of the relevant property as if references to the relevant property were references to the separable part.

(6) For this purpose a part of any property is a “separable part” of the property if —

(a) it can be separated from the remainder of that property; and

(b) if a person has a legitimate reason for possessing the remainder of that property or any part of it - the separation will not prejudice the remainder or part.

(7) If the court is satisfied that —

(a) a person who has given a notice of claim has a legitimate reason for possessing part of the relevant property; and

(b) although the part is not a separable part within the meaning given by sub-paragraph (6), it can be separated from the remainder of the relevant property, the court may order the return of that part to that person.

(8) Sub-paragraph (7) does not apply to any property required to be returned to a person under sub-paragraph (4).

Supplementary orders

11. (1) If the court condemns property under sub-paragraph 10(2), the court —

(a) may order the relevant officer to take such steps in relation to the property or any part of it as it thinks appropriate; and

(b) if it orders a step to be taken - may make that order conditional on specified costs relating to the taking of that step being paid by a specified person within a specified period.

(2) A court order under any of sub-paragraphs 10(3), (4), (5) or (7) requiring the return of a part of the relevant property to a person may be made conditional on specified costs relating to the separation of the part from the remainder of the relevant property being paid by that person within a specified period.

(3) If the court makes an order under sub-paragraph 10(7) for the return of a part of the relevant property, the court —

(a) may order the relevant officer to take such steps as it thinks appropriate in relation to any property which will be prejudiced by the separation of that part; and

(b) if it orders a step to be taken - may make that order conditional on specified costs relating to the taking of that step being paid by a specified person within a specified period.

(4) For the purposes of this paragraph, “specified” means specified in, or determined in accordance with, the court order.

Magistrate’s Court

12. Proceedings by virtue of this Schedule are civil proceedings and may be instituted in the Magistrate’s Court or in the Summary Court.

Appeals

13. (1) Either party may appeal against the decision of the Magistrate’s Court or the Summary Court to the Supreme Court.

(2) This paragraph does not affect any right to require the statement of a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court.

(3) If an appeal has been made (whether by case stated or otherwise) against the decision of the Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court in proceedings by virtue of this Schedule in relation to property, the property is to be left in the custody of a police officer pending the final determination of the matter.

Effect of forfeiture

14. If property is treated or condemned as forfeited under this Schedule the forfeiture is to be treated as having taken effect as from the time of the seizure.

Disposal of property which is not returned

15. (1) If —

(a) property is required to be returned to a person under this Schedule;

(b) the property is (without having been returned) still in the custody of the relevant officer after the end of the period of 12 months beginning with the day on which the requirement to return it arose; and

(c) it is not practicable to dispose of it by returning it immediately to the person to whom it is required to be returned, section 622 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 as to disposal of property applies.

(2) If property would be required to be returned to a person under this Schedule but for a failure to satisfy a condition imposed by virtue of paragraph 11(2) (return of property conditional on payment of costs within specified period), the relevant officer may dispose of the property in any manner the officer thinks fit.

Provisions as to proof

16. (1) In proceedings under this Schedule, the fact, form and manner of the seizure are to be taken, without further evidence and unless the contrary is shown, to have been as set forth in the process.

(2) In any proceedings, the condemnation by a court of property as forfeited under this Schedule may be proved by the production of either —

(a) the order of condemnation; or

(b) a certified copy of the order purporting to be signed by an officer of the court by which the order was made or granted.

Saving for owner's rights

17. Neither the imposition of a requirement by virtue of this Schedule to return property to a person nor the return of it to a person in accordance with such a requirement affects —

- (a) the rights in relation to that property, or any part of it, of any other person; or
- (b) the right of any other person to enforce his rights against the person to whom it is returned.

Interpretation

18. (1) In this Schedule —

“the court” is to be construed in accordance with paragraph 12;

“forfeitable property” is to be construed in accordance with paragraph 1(2);

“premises” has the same meaning as in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014; and

“the relevant officer” is to be construed in accordance with paragraph 3.

(2) For the purposes of this Schedule the circumstances in which a person (‘P’) has a legitimate reason for possessing an indecent photograph of a child (‘C’) include —

- (a) the photograph was of C aged 16 or over;
 - (b) one or both of the following apply —
 - (i) P and C are married or civil partners or are living together in an enduring family relationship;
 - (ii) P and C were married or civil partners or were so living together at the time P obtained the photograph;
 - (c) the photograph shows C alone or with P, but does not show any other person;
 - (d) C has consented to the photograph being in P’s possession (and that consent has not been withdrawn); and
 - (e) P owns the photograph, or is authorised (directly or indirectly) by the owner to possess it.

CRIMES ORDINANCE 2014

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

Background

Prior to the passing of this Ordinance criminal laws of the Falkland Islands were contained in a few local Ordinances and a large number of United Kingdom enactments that applied by their own force, by Order in Council, by virtue of Chapter X of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance or by virtue of the Crimes Ordinance. Section 3 of the previous Crimes Ordinance made offences at common law offences in the Falkland Islands and section 6 adopted as laws of the Falkland Islands the English Acts listed in Schedule 1 to that Ordinance

The local Ordinances were out of date in many respects and the UK enactments are often complex and difficult to apply in the Falkland Islands context. They are difficult to find and are phrased in archaic language. Some have been amended or repealed in the UK. There were also several recent criminal laws in the UK that did not apply to the Falkland Islands but needed to do so if the laws of the Falkland Islands were to keep abreast of modern criminal jurisprudence.

The Government therefore sought to codify and consolidate the majority of criminal offences by means of this Crimes Ordinance. It is a companion Ordinance to the larger Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance (CPEO) which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly at the same time (and is referred to in these Notes as the ‘CPEO 2014’.) For a full account of the background to and reasons for this legislative initiative, see the General Introduction to the CPEO 2014.

This Ordinance updates and consolidates legislation that creates criminal offences in the Falkland Islands. It re-states in modern language the provisions of relevant local ordinances, which will be repealed upon commencement. They are:

- Crimes Ordinance, including the UK enactments listed in Schedule 1
- Contempt of Court Ordinance
- Sexual Offences Ordinance (which incorporated into Falkland Islands law the UK Sexual Offences Act 2003)
- Some provisions of the Police Ordinance and Road Traffic Ordinance.

The Ordinance enacts as local law provisions of UK enactments that apply to the Falkland Islands by their own force or by virtue of Chapter X of the IGCO. It then disapplies those enactments.

A Destination Table shows where equivalent provisions are found in the Ordinance, if they have been replaced. The table also shows the disposal of the English laws listed in Schedule 1.

The origins of each section, whether a Falkland Islands law or a UK law, are listed in the Derivation Table. Subsidiary legislation made under the repealed Ordinances or the disapplied Acts, and which remains relevant, is saved by the savings and transitional provisions in Part 26.

Scope of the Ordinance

The Ordinance incorporates provisions of several recent UK enactments that did not apply to the Falkland Islands (because the application mechanism did not operate after 1 July 2004) but which are part of current criminal legislation in the UK. They include:

- Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004
- Fraud Act 2006
- Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006
- Serious Crime Act 2007
- Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007
- Coroners and Justice Act 2009
- Bribery Act 2010
- Crime & Security Act 2010
- Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014

These and other UK laws include recent amendments made by the Policing & Crime Act 2009, Protection of Freedoms Act 2012, Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012, Crimes and Courts Act 2013, etc., some of which are not yet fully in force in the UK. They also include adaptations and changes to make the provisions more applicable to the Falkland Island context. Where this occurs the Notes on Sections below highlight the changes. Where appropriate, the jurisprudence emanating from relevant courts is also reflected in this Ordinance. (Note: A reference to ‘UK’ is in fact to the law in England and Wales.)

The Ordinance consolidates all offences that apply in the Falkland Islands now by virtue of the previous Crimes Ordinance, if they were still law in the UK. It incorporates new UK laws including crimes against humanity and ‘hate crimes’. It includes Domestic Violence Protection Orders, Sexual Risk Orders and Forced Marriage Orders.

The Ordinance puts on a statutory footing common law offences that are still appropriate and repeals others; upon commencement there will not be any common law offences in the Falkland Islands.

The Ordinance does not include animal welfare legislation which is being prepared separately. It does not include drugs offences or firearms offences. Nor does it deal with regulatory offences, such as road traffic, environmental, shipping and aviation offences. The Ordinance does not include emergency powers provisions, or all the Orders in Council offences such as biological weapons and taking of hostages, nor Official Secrets Acts. These will be dealt with in a more general exercise to localise all UK laws that apply to the Falkland Islands.

The Ordinance will be supplemented by criminal procedure rules made by the Chief Justice after consulting the Criminal Justice Council. Framework rules have already been drafted for the consideration of the CJC.

Penalties

The Ordinance adopts the modern practice of placing the penalty at the foot of each offence. The penalty stated is the maximum (as provided in section 480(3) of the CPEO 2014.) There will be sentencing guidelines issued under section 482 of that Ordinance.

The maximum sentences reflect the seriousness of the offence, generally in line with penal policy in the UK. Some maxima are set as high as 18 years, because offences carrying a life sentence are treated as indictment-only, while others are summary; see Appendix 2 to the Explanatory Notes to the CPEO 2014 for a fuller discussion of this aspect of the Ordinances.

If an offence is indictment-only no mention is made of a fine (unless the defendant is a company in which case imprisonment is not an option.) This is because the Supreme Court has power to fine in addition to imposing a sentence of imprisonment, under section 480 of the CPEO 2014. However, if the offence is a summary one, the power to fine instead, or in addition, is generally stated, so as to give the lower courts this power. The level (i.e. on the standard scale of fines in Schedule 8 to the CPEO 2014) is specified where the sentence of imprisonment is up to 12 months. Above that limit no level is specified as the power to fine is unlimited for the Magistrate's Court and is limited to £5,000 in the Summary Court (section 589 of the CPEO 2014.) Both courts are limited in their fining power when sitting as a Youth Court; see section 733 of the CPEO 2014.

Role of the Governor

In accordance with s.66 of the Constitution, the Governor must consult the Executive Council before performing functions. This convention is confirmed by the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance which confirms that the term 'Governor' means the Governor after consulting Executive Council, therefore any reference in the Ordinance to 'the Governor' alone means the Governor after consulting Executive Council.

S66(2)(c) of the Constitution states that if the Governor is required to consult with any person or authority other than the Executive Council, the Governor's obligation to consult with the Executive Council is displaced:

'The Governor shall not be obliged to consult with the Executive Council.....when exercising any function conferred on the Governor by this Constitution or any other law where it is provided, either expressly or by necessary implication, that the Governor exercise such function in his or her discretion or in his or her judgement or in accordance with the advice of, or after consultation with, any person or authority other than the Executive Council'

Some provisions within the Ordinance require the Governor to consult some other person or body, such as the Criminal Justice Council, the Advisory Committee or the Chief Justice, and the requirement to consult Executive Council is therefore displaced, as per s66(2)(c) of the Constitution, above.

Having carefully considered the need in some instances for the Governor to have the benefit of advice both from the Judicial and Executive branches of Government, there are some provisions which require the Governor to consult both the Executive Council and some other person or body. This, in effect requires consensus of the two bodies unless the Governor chooses to disregard the advice in accordance with Article 67 of the Constitution. In order to preserve the role of Executive Council as a required consultee, the term ‘Governor in Council’ is used to ensure clarity that the obligation to consult with Executive Council has not been displaced but is in addition to the obligation to consult with the stated body.

The Governor must report to the Legislative Assembly any disagreement with the advice given, as provided by section 788. The obligation under section 67 of the Constitution to report to Secretary of State any disagreement with ExCo’s advice remains.

Other matters

Powers of arrest without warrant are in the police powers provisions of the CPEO 2014 so are not included in this Ordinance unless the offence is not imprisonable in which case the power is stated.

Powers of search and seizure are also included in the police powers provisions of the CPEO 2014 and are not repeated in this Ordinance unless they have special features which justify that.

Powers of forfeiture are included in this Ordinance although the CPEO 2014 empowers courts to make deprivation orders (see sections 617 on.). The UK laws (and Schedule 1 to this Ordinance) continue to include express forfeiture provisions and section 622 of the CPEO 2014 makes provision for the disposal of forfeited items (see section 622.)

The Ordinance is drafted in gender-neutral language and in what is known as a ‘Plain English’ style. This makes it more readily understood by ordinary readers and is the drafting style adopted in many Commonwealth countries nowadays, including the UK.

For a commentary on the UK laws, reference has been made to Archbold, Criminal Pleading, Evidence & Practice 2013 Edition and supplements to the end of 2013.

The Ordinance is divided into 4 Chapters and 26 Parts. The Chapters deal with preliminary and general principles; then with crimes against the individual; then with crimes against the general public; and supplementary provisions. There are also 5 Schedules, which are set out at the end of the whole Ordinance, in line with the usage in the UK.

The Ordinance begins with the Long Title which describes the purpose of the Ordinance, and the enacting formula.

CHAPTER 1 – PRELIMINARY

PART 1 – PRELIMINARY AND INTERPRETATION

Introduction

This Part has only two sections – the Title and commencement, and Interpretation. The Interpretation section contains definitions applicable to the whole Ordinance and is an important component of the legislative scheme.

The Part is preceded by the Long Title, which sets out the purpose of the Ordinance, and the enacting formula. The long title uses the term ‘consolidate’ as the Ordinance in effect consolidates the various UK enactments on criminal law that apply to the Falkland Islands. It uses ‘partially codify’ in relation to the common law.

Notes on sections

Section 1 states the short title of the Ordinance. Sub-section (2) empowers the Governor to set a date for the Ordinance to come into operation. Sub-section (3) is a power to prescribe different dates for different provisions.

Section 2 contains definitions of various terms that are used in the Ordinance. Individual Parts also have interpretation sections, and there are definitions in sections within Parts as well. This section therefore defines only those terms that are used in more than one Part, and that are not defined in the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance. To the extent appropriate, the same definitions have been used in both this Ordinance and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance to ensure consistency across the criminal legislation. Some of the terms, such as ‘child’, are defined differently in particular Parts in which case the phrase ‘unless the context otherwise requires’ comes into play.

An ‘adult’ means a person aged 18 years or more, a ‘young person’ is someone who has attained the age of 14 but is under 18 years of age, and a ‘child’ is someone under 14 years of age. A “youth” means a person aged below 18 years, whether a child or a young person.

The definition of ‘property’ is deliberately broad and will apply unless there is a definition for a particular purpose. The definition of ‘spouse’ includes ‘civil partner’ which is also defined. There is no legal provision for civil partnership in the Falkland Islands, but people coming to or living in the Falkland Islands might be in a civil partnership recognised by UK or other law.

The term ‘Falkland Islands status’ is defined by reference to the Constitution.

Sub-cause (2) provides that any terms defined in section 2 of the CPEO 2014 but not in this Ordinance have the same meaning in this Ordinance.

Sub-sections (3) to (6) are similar to subsections of section 2 of the CPEO 2014 but are repeated for ease of reference and to ensure consistency.

PART 2 - GENERAL PROVISIONS

Introduction

This Part sets out general principles about criminal liability, alternative verdicts, spouses, civil proceedings and corporate liability. The provisions bring together a number of statements of the rules in the existing Falkland Islands law and apply them to all offences.

The Part does not seek to codify common law rules on defences such as drunkenness or insanity, mistake of fact, duress or self-defence, all of which remain available defences under Falkland Islands law. See under section 5 for the defence of automatism.

Other general principles applicable to offences as well as procedure are included in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance. See for example section 780 on the use of force, section 781 on the criminal liability of corporations, and section 782 on service of documents. (For a separate statement of the rule about corporations see section 429 which relates to computer misuse offences committed by someone who is not an officer or member of the corporation.)

There are also some principles about criminal prosecutions in section 6 of the Constitution – see section 6(5) which is the rule against retrospective effect and section 6(6) which is the rule against double jeopardy (ne bis in idem). These provisions mean that sections 53 and 9 respectively of the Crimes Ordinance can be repealed.

The Part incorporates some provisions of the Crimes Ordinance, which in turn were based on UK provisions, as indicate under each section.

Some general principles about criminal prosecutions are contained in Chapter I of the Constitution; see in particular section 6 – Provisions to secure protection of law.

Notes on sections

Criminal liability

Section 3 states the age of criminal responsibility as being 10 years which is the current position in the Falkland Islands. This is the rule in the UK Children and Young Persons Act 1933 as amended in 1963. Sub-section (2) abolishes a rebuttable presumption about children aged 10 or over.

Section 4 is a rule about inferences as to criminal intent based on section 8 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1967. It is still the law in the UK.

Section 5 is a definition of automatism based on English case law (see Archbold paras. 17-85 on.) It was included in the Crimes Ordinance and is reproduced in this Part. However, the case law interpreting this definition continues to develop and no attempt has been made to refine it beyond the basic definition. Reference to the common law will still be necessary to assist in the application of the definition to fact-specific situations.

Note that there has been no attempt in this Part to codify the law on insanity, self-induced intoxication etc. or other defences, apart from self-defence which is in section 120. Marital coercion (both as a statutory and a common law defence) is no longer a defence in the Falkland Islands, in line with its abolition in the UK.

Offences outside the Falkland Islands

Section 6 states the common law rule about extraterritorial jurisdiction in respect of homicide offences.

Sections 7 to 13 make extended provisions about extraterritorial jurisdiction in relation to offences of dishonesty, conspiracy, incitement and attempts. They are based on sections 1 to 6 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1993. These provisions do not affect the operation of any specific rules about jurisdiction that apply to particular offences under any provision of the Ordinance.

The terms ‘Group A offence’ and ‘Group B offence’ are defined in section 2. The Group B offences involve more than one person so that different rules about jurisdiction might apply.

Section 7 updates the list of offences in Group A – the UK has not yet done so. The Governor is given power to add to the offences in each group.

Part 10 on Sexual Offences also has provisions on extraterritorial jurisdiction in relation to sexual offences – see sections 290 and 291.

Alternative verdicts

Section 14 is based on section 6 of the UK Criminal Law Act 1967. Sub-section (6) is the rule about alternative verdicts in murder cases, from section 6(2) of the 1967 Act.

Section 15 is the rule about convicting as an accessory from section 4(2) of the UK Criminal Law Act 1967, which unlike in the UK, is available for all trials in all courts. The power to return an alternative verdict is also given to all courts.

Miscellaneous

Section 16 uses the term ‘spouses’ rather than ‘husband and wife’ so as to be gender-neutral and simpler. The rule is based on the UK Theft Act 1968 but covers more than theft as it also applies to criminal damage. It is widened to apply to all offences under the Crimes Ordinance and includes civil partners.

Section 17 makes it clear that the Ordinance is capable of applying to corporate bodies, whatever they are called. It states that corporate liability applies to all offences capable of being committed by a corporate body, or by an individual officer on behalf of a body. The rule is stated in various ways in the UK Acts where it appears, and is of general application.

The rule is sometimes stated separately, as in section 431 which is about corporate bodies benefitting from an offence committed by someone who is not an officer or member. See also section 508 about bribery by corporate bodies.

Section 18 abrogates the common law requirement for corroboration in relation to the evidence of the complainant in a sexual offence case or the evidence of a child and it makes savings in relation to other warnings to the jury about other types of evidence. The section applies equally to summary trials. This rule is stated in section 49 of the previous Crimes Ordinance and is repeated here for the avoidance of doubt.

PART 3 – ANCILLARY OFFENCES

This Part deals with the topics of attempts, conspiracy, and accessories (aiding and abetting, etc.) It includes a new offence of encouraging offenders, which replaces the common law offence of incitement and is adapted from the UK Serious Crime Act 2007 which came into force on 1 October 2008.

These offences are sometimes called ‘inchoate offences’ as they are not complete in themselves. However, in the CPEO 2014 and in explanatory notes there are references to ‘ancillary offences’ by which is meant attempts etc., so it is appropriate to refer to them as such.’ Strictly, an inchoate offence is one where the substantive offence is not complete, so ancillary offences might relate to completed offences (e.g. accessory after the fact) or to an inchoate offence that is not in fact committed (e.g. encouragement.) However, an attempt to commit an ancillary offence is not itself an offence.

The previous Crimes Ordinance contained some provisions about attempts etc. which are incorporated in this Part and combined with provisions of the UK Criminal Attempts Act 1981. The scope of the offence has been broadened to include attempting to commit summary as well as indictment-only offences (because most offences are summary in the Falkland Islands). It does not extend to inchoate offences.

The conspiracy provisions are based on sections 1 to 5 of the UK Criminal Law Act 1977. The common law offence of conspiracy to defraud is abolished as it is not required as a separate offence; there will still be the offence of conspiracy to commit any of the fraud offences in Part 12 which are now broad enough to cover all behaviour previously covered in common law conspiracy to defraud.

The ‘encouragement’ provisions are adapted from the UK Serious Crime Act 2007 which introduced the offence of ‘encouraging or assisting’, but which has been criticised as noted below. In this Part, therefore, the new offence is one of ‘encouraging’ another offence, and there are separate offences of ‘aiding and abetting’ and ‘assisting’. There are several sections of Archbold which deal with these offences, but see in particular Part 33 paras. 33-1 to 146.

Notes on sections

Attempts

Section 19 combines and modifies provisions of section 10 of the previous Crimes Ordinance and of section 1 of the UK Criminal Attempts Act, 1981. It makes attempt a general offence and says that every substantive offence can be the subject of a charge of attempt, and can result in a conviction for attempt, even if not charged. This is a broad statement but appropriate in the Falkland Islands where even very serious offences are summary. It means that no other provisions need mention attempt as a separate or additional offence, although they might sometimes do so when listing offences.

Section 20 says that procedural and other provisions about substantive laws (time limits etc.) apply to attempts. See also section 45 for a general rule about forfeiture

Section 21 makes procedural rules about prosecuting attempts.

Section 22 abolishes the common law offence of attempt.

Conspiracy

Sections 23 to 30 are based on the UK Criminal Law Act 1977 as amended by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981, Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 and Criminal Justice

Act 1987. Conspiracy is triable only on indictment in England, but is triable according to the nature of the main offence in the Falkland Islands. So it is an indictment-only offence if the main offence is indictment-only – see section 181 Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance.

Section 23 creates the offence of conspiracy. The transitional provisions at (2) of the UK section are in Part 26 of the Ordinance.

Section 24 concerns conspiracies to commit offences outside the Falkland Islands. It is based on section 1A of the Criminal Law Act 1977 as added by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998. The extension of jurisdiction outside the UK is applied by analogy to conspiracies to commit offences outside the Falkland Islands. The term ‘agent’ in sub-clause (5) will have its ordinary meaning.

Sub-section (12) says it is immaterial whether a person has Falkland Islands status. That term is defined in section 2.

Section 25 provides general exemptions. Sub-section (2)(b) refers to a person under the age of criminal responsibility, which is stated in section 3 as age 10.

Section 26 specifies the maximum sentences for conspiracy, in relation to the relevant offence, whether it is indictment-only or summary.

Sections 27 to 29 are procedural provisions based on the UK Criminal Law Act 1977.

Section 30 is based on section 5 of the Criminal Law Act 1977. It abolishes common law conspiracy, including incitement. This will also abolish the offence of conspiracy to defraud (see Introduction above.) Note that section 12 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1987 did not create the offence but only regulated it.)

Encouraging offences

Sections 31 to 41 are adapted from Part 2 of the UK Serious Crime Act 2007 (sections 44 to 59 and Schedules 3 and 4.) This was based on a 2006 Law Commission Report on Inchoate Liability for Assisting and Encouraging Crime. It abolished the common law offence of incitement and in its place created new offences of intentionally encouraging or assisting crime and encouraging or assisting crime believing that an offence, or one or more offences, will be committed.

The UK law has been much criticised, for confusing the difference between completed and incomplete substantive offences, and for creating an offence which has inherent duplicity namely ‘encouraging’ or ‘assisting’. It also overlaps with other offences of assisting which replace the previous accessories offences. Various proposals for improvement have been made, including reverting to ‘incitement’ as the term, or using ‘facilitating’. None of these seems satisfactory, and the proposal for this Part is that the words ‘or assisting’ be removed, leaving the offence as one of ‘encouraging’ another offence. This would apply whether the other offence is actually committed or not.

Section 31 therefore creates 3 new offences –

- Sub-section (1) - intentionally encouraging an offence;
- Sub-section (3) - encouraging an offence believing it will be committed;
- Sub-section (4) - encouraging offences believing that one or more will be committed.

For a subsection (1) offence a person must do an act capable of encouraging the commission of an offence and intend to encourage its commission. Sub-section (2) makes it clear that foresight of consequences is not sufficient.

A subsection (3) offence is committed if a person does an act capable of encouraging an offence and believes both that the offence will be committed and that his act will encourage its commission.

For a subsection (4) offence a person must do an act capable of encouraging one or more offences believing that one or more offences will be committed and that his or her act will encourage one or more of them.

Section 32 sets out what needs to be proved to establish guilt for each of the offences in section 31. It includes a defence where the encouragement is considered to be reasonable in the circumstances and an exemption from liability where the offence encouraged was created in order to protect a category of people (and the person doing the encouraging falls into that category). None of the offences requires the anticipated offence (or ‘reference offence’, if more than one) to be committed in fact – see section 33(1).

Section 33 makes supplemental provisions.

Sub-section (1) provides that the offences can be committed whether or not any offence capable of being encouraged by the person’s act is committed.

Sub-section (2) provides that if a person’s act is capable of encouraging a number of criminal offences, and the person either intends or believes that each of those offences will happen, he or she can be prosecuted and convicted in relation to every offence that the person intends to encourage, or believes will be encouraged.

Sub-section (3) provides that a person may, in relation to the same act, commit an offence under more than one provision of section 31.

Sub-sections (4) and (5) provide that a person cannot be guilty of encouraging an offence under section 32(2) or (3) believing that an offence under that section or a similar offence of assisting etc. will happen. This means it will not be an offence to encourage another person believing that that person will commit the offence of encouraging another to commit an offence. This is in line with the principle that there is no offence of attempt to commit an ancillary offence.

Sub-section (6) provides that the requirement that a person believes that a criminal offence, or a number of criminal offences, be committed is satisfied if he or she believes that the criminal offence, or that one or more criminal offences, would be done if certain conditions are met.

Section 34 provides two defences.

Sub-section (1) provides that it will be a defence that the defendant acted reasonably, in the circumstances he was aware of, or in the circumstances he reasonably believed existed.

Sub-section (4) incorporates a common law exemption from liability relating to ‘protected’ persons. A person cannot be guilty of the offences in section 31 if, in relation to an offence that is a “protective” offence, the person who does the act capable of encouraging that offence falls within the category of persons that offence was designed to protect and would be considered as the victim.

Section 35 provides the rules that will govern jurisdiction over the offences in section 31. A person may be convicted of the offences in section 31, regardless of his or her own location, if the person knew or believed that the act which would amount to the commission of an offence would take place, at least in part, in the Falkland Islands. If it is not possible to establish the circumstances required for jurisdiction to arise under subsection (1), it may be possible to convict a person of an offence under section 31 if the facts of the case fall within section 36. The general jurisdictional rules for section 31 offences do not affect any specific jurisdictional rules which already exist for certain offences on the statute book.

Section 36 confers extended jurisdiction in certain cases. It is based on Schedule 4 to the UK Serious Crime Act 2007.

Sub-section (1) confers jurisdiction where a person does an act in the Falkland Islands, capable of encouraging an offence, and knows or believes that what the person anticipates might take place outside the Falkland Islands but the offence is one for which a perpetrator could be tried in the Falkland Islands if the anticipated offence were committed outside the Falkland Islands, or relevant conditions exist that would make it so triable.

Sub-section (3) confers jurisdiction where a person does an act in the Falkland Islands, capable of encouraging an offence, and knows or believes that what he or she anticipates might take place in a country outside the Falkland Islands but what he or she anticipates is also an offence under the law in force in that country.

Sub-section (8) confers jurisdiction where a person does an act outside the Falkland Islands, capable of encouraging an offence, and knows or believes that what the person anticipates might take place outside the Falkland Islands but the offence is one for which it would be possible to prosecute the person who provides encouragement in the Falkland Islands if he or she were to commit the offence as a principal in that place.

Note that this section uses ‘place outside the Falkland Islands’ rather than ‘country or territory’ (so as to include e.g. Hong Kong). This wording is also adopted elsewhere except where a national government is intended.

Section 37 governs the institution and conduct of proceedings.

Sub-section (1) provides that any ancillary powers that apply to a substantive offence will apply to an offence of encouraging that substantive offence e.g. consent to proceedings, forfeiture, etc. This duplicates what is said in section 45 about procedural rules applying, but does not contradict it.

Some provisions of s.54 of the UK Serious Crime Act give effect to an E-commerce Directive of the European Union which allows for derogation on the grounds of public policy. Those provisions are not included in this Part. A non-Falkland Islands internet service provider could therefore be prosecuted for an offence under section 31.

Section 38 provides that if an anticipated offence has been committed and it cannot be proved whether a person has either encouraged the offence on the one hand, or committed the offence as a principal on the other, the person can be convicted of an offence under section 31.

Section 39 specifies the offences in relation to which a person may be found guilty as an alternative where the person has been prosecuted for an offence under section 31. This is to produce the same effect as the rules in relation to alternative verdicts in relation to a trial for the offences encouraged or assisted. The section applies to summary proceedings as well as proceedings on indictment.

Sub-section (10) provides that a person may plead guilty to an offence which would be encompassed by the offence with which the person was charged.

Section 40 prescribes the penalties that will apply to the offences created in section 31. The maximum penalty for encouraging an offence of murder is imprisonment for life. The general rule is that the maximum penalty available for an offence under section 31 will be the same as the maximum available on conviction for the relevant anticipated or reference offence. If none of the offences is punishable by imprisonment then the maximum sentence will be a fine.

Section 41 abolishes the common law offence of incitement, as it is replaced by the provisions of sections 31 to 40. It also provides that a reference in any enactment to the offence of incitement is to be read as a reference to the offence of encouragement and the conduct which amounts to incitement can be prosecuted as encouragement.

Accessories

Section 42 is based on the Accessories and Abettors Act 1861, as amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977. It is combined with the provision of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1981 so as to cover both indictment-only and summary offences. It includes the word 'suborns' so that subornation of perjury under section 7 of the Perjury Act 1911 will continue to be an offence (see also section 449.)

This offence is equivalent to what used to be called 'accessory before the fact' and the offender can be prosecuted as a principal.

Section 43 is based on section 4(1) of the Criminal Law Act 1967, but omitting the words “or attempts” as an attempt is itself an offence. It is still an offence, separate from encouraging, etc. This offence is equivalent to what used to be called ‘accessory after the fact’.

Section 44 states the offence of concealing an offence and giving false information to the police which is in s.5 of the Criminal Law Act 1967.

Section 45 is derived from s.11 of the Crimes Ordinance and makes it clear that conviction of an ancillary offence (other than assisting or concealing) can lead to the same consequences as conviction of the substantive offence i.e. forfeiture, disqualification, etc.

Note that attempts, conspiracy and aiding and abetting are triable in the same manner as the main offence i.e. indictment-only or summary. See the definition of ‘indictment-only’ offence in section 181 of the CPEO 2014.

CHAPTER 2 – CRIMES AGAINST THE INDIVIDUAL

PART 4 – OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON

Introduction

This Part creates or perpetuates a number of offences against the person, ranging from murder to common assault, and including infanticide, wounding with intent, assault occasioning actual bodily harm, child abduction, torture, kidnapping, bigamy and genocide. Some of the offences are still common law offences in England and Wales (murder, manslaughter, kidnapping) but they are restated as written law in modern language by this Part.

Some of the offences carry life sentences (murder being a mandatory life sentence.) They are triable on indictment only. Others carry maximum sentences ranging from 18 years to a fine.

The Part incorporates some sections of the previous Crimes Ordinance but does not include sections 22 to 24 governing the penalty and procedure for murder as they are not correct statements of the UK law as applied to the Falkland Islands. Nor does it include section 25 on provocation as this has been abolished in the UK and replaced with the partial defence of ‘loss of self-control’. Section 26 on automatism is included as a general defence in Part 2.

The Part includes provisions of the UK Homicide Act 1957 (as amended by the Coroners and Justice Act 2009), the Infanticide Act 1938, Infant Life Preservation Act 1929, Suicide Act 1961, Children and Young Persons Act 1933, Abortion Act 1967, Criminal Justice Act 1988, Police Act 1996, Child Abduction Act 1984, Domestic Violence, and Crime and Victims Act 2004 as amended in 2012. It also includes offences under the Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 and the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004.

Several of the sections are based on provisions of the UK Offences against the Person Act 1861 that are still law in England and Wales and that apply to the Falkland Islands. Some minor offences in the 1861 Act are omitted, e.g. assaults on seamen and assaults to obstruct sale, as they are covered by the general law on assaults. The offence of failure to provide for apprentices in 26 of the OAPA is omitted as being obsolete and irrelevant in the Falkland Islands.

The Part includes the offence of assault on a police officer and section 55 of the Police Ordinance will accordingly be repealed.

The Part includes some provisions that are new to Falkland Islands law, namely –

- Trafficking people for labour: section 87
- Forced marriage offence: section 90
- Forced marriage protection orders: sections 92 to 101
- Slavery and servitude: section 117.

Some of these are recent additions to the UK statute book and arise out of international agreements. The Part also includes the offence of being drunk in charge of a child - section 81 - which has been on the statute book in the UK as section 2 of the Licensing Act 1902. It is commonly used, but does not appear to have been applied in the Falkland Islands, despite its clear child protection benefits.

The provisions in sections 87 to 101 are new to the Falkland Islands legislation. They reinforce international commitments to equal treatment and human rights and seek to provide a solution for some types of so-called ‘honour based’ crimes.

The Part includes the offence of torture, which was created for the Falkland Islands by the Criminal Justice (Torture) (Application to Overseas Territories) Order 1988, and the offences of genocide and crimes against humanity, created for the Falkland Islands by the International Criminal Court Act 2001 (Overseas Territories) Order 2009. It does not include other international offences applied to the Falkland Islands by Order in Council such as hijacking, aviation security and maritime security. These will continue to apply directly.

The Part includes the offence of bigamy as it is not included in the Marriage Ordinance and fits appropriately with offences against the person.

Note that the maximum penalties are reduced from life to 18 years in some cases and to 14 years in others. Note also that some offences are indictment-only.

There is a commentary on offences against the person in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 19-1 to 19-435.

Notes on sections

Sections 46 to 51 enact in the Falkland Islands the common law offences of murder and manslaughter as modified by the UK Homicide Act 1957 and the Murder (Abolition of Death Penalty) Act 1965.

Section 46 defines murder as causing death with intent to kill or to cause grievous bodily harm to any person by an unlawful act or omission. This avoids the use of the phrase ‘malice aforethought’. It includes the word ‘unlawful’, so that self-defence etc. remain as defences. (For self-defence, see section 120.) This formulation also includes transferred malice, which is still the law, though constructive malice is not.

The penalty for murder is the only one that is fixed by law, and is life imprisonment. Section 577 of the CPEO 2014 requires the court to recommend the minimum period a prisoner must serve before being eligible for release on licence. Release on licence is governed by section 581 of that Ordinance.

Sub-section (3) states the rule that there is no requirement that the death should occur within a year and a day after the infliction of injury.

Sections 47 and 48 incorporate the provisions of the UK Homicide Act 1957 as amended about constructive malice and diminished responsibility. Section 48 does not mention insanity as a defence to a charge of murder. In the UK the rules are stated in the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 but that Act is covered in Part 34 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance dealing with mentally disordered offenders.

Section 49 sets out the new provisions of the Coroners and Justice Act 2009 which replace the concept of provocation with that of loss of self-control.

Section 50 creates two statutory types of manslaughter - killing by an unlawful act likely to cause bodily harm (involuntary manslaughter) and killing by gross negligence. Voluntary manslaughter is constituted by diminished responsibility (section 48), loss of control (section 49), or a suicide pact (section 54.) The maximum penalty for any kind of manslaughter is life imprisonment – section 50(3). It applies also to manslaughter arising by virtue of any of sections 48(5), 49(7), 54(1) or 56(3).

Section 51 makes murder and manslaughter extraterritorial offences if committed by a person with Falkland Islands status.

Sections 52 and 53 are based on provisions of the OAP Act 1861 as amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977. Section 52 deals with soliciting for murder and section 53 deals with threats to kill.

Sub-section (3) of 52 is a protection against double jeopardy as the facts could amount to aiding and abetting which is an ancillary offence under Part 3.

Sections 54 and 55 are about suicide. They do not make suicide illegal but make it an offence to enter into a suicide pact or to encourage, aid or abet suicide. They are based respectively on section 4 of the UK Homicide Act 1957 and section 2 of the Suicide Act 1961.

Section 56 is based on section 1 of the UK Infanticide Act 1938 and creates the offence of infanticide. There is some doubt about the amendment made by the Coroners and Justice Act 2009 (see Archbold at para. 19-195) but the best view of the intended text seems to be as in the section.

Section 57 is based on section 1 of the UK Infant Life Preservation Act 1929, and creates the offence of child destruction. The defence of lawful termination of pregnancy is in section 60.

Sections 58 to 61 relate to termination of pregnancy and are based on the UK Abortion Act 1967 as amended and adapted. The term ‘medical practitioner’ is not defined as it is defined in the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance. Regulations made by the Secretary of State under the UK Act will have effect, rather than local regulations having to be made.

Section 62 makes it an offence to conceal the birth of a child.

Endangering life

Sections 63 to 69 relate to activities that could endanger life, such as wounding with intent, or simple wounding. They are mostly based on the 1861 Act and the Police Act 1996.

Section 64 is section 18 of the OAPA as amended by the CLA 1967.

In section 67 ‘serious offence’ will be defined in section 2 to mean an offence carrying a maximum sentence of at least 5 years imprisonment.

Section 69 is based on s.31 of the 1861 Act and makes it an offence to set spring guns, etc.

Assaults

Sections 70 to 76 deal with the various types of assault, including common assault and assault occasioning actual bodily harm, based on the 1861 Act.

Section 70 converts the common law offence of common assault into a statutory offence. The terms ‘assault’ and ‘battery’ are defined in sub-section (3), based respectively on the English cases of R v Burstow (1998) and R v Norman (1994).

There is a procedure for granting a certificate of dismissal in section 76. The use of ‘complaint’ implies that assault is only a civil action, which it is not; but it is sometimes brought by a private person so is hybrid in nature.

Endangering lives of children, etc.

Sections 77 to 83 relate to neglect or endangering the lives of children and vulnerable adults of various ages. Some are based on old UK law and are still useful protective provisions. Others are based on sections of the UK Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 as amended in 2012.

Section 77 creates the offence of causing or allowing the death of or serious harm to a child or vulnerable adult. If death results, it is an indictment-only offence. The prosecution does not have to prove which of the two possible alternatives applies. The defendant is equally liable to conviction whether he or she was the perpetrator of the act that actually caused the victim's death or serious physical harm or simply failed to protect the victim from a foreseeable risk of serious physical harm from another member of the household who had frequent contact with the victim. The dual basis for criminal liability was introduced in the UK to remedy one of the main difficulties with the law relating to other possible charges such as murder or manslaughter in a domestic context when both parents were potential perpetrators, but the degree of involvement of each parent in the acts or omissions was unclear. As a result this offence has a lower penalty than that for murder or manslaughter.

Section 78 says what inferences can be drawn from and verdicts delivered on the facts that would amount to such an offence in a murder or manslaughter case.

Section 79 says what inferences can be drawn from and verdicts delivered and verdicts delivered on the facts that would amount to such an offence in cases of serious physical harm to be drawn.

Section 80 is the offence of abandoning a child under the age of 5.

Section 81 is the offence of being drunk while in charge of a child under the age of 7 in a public place, section 2 of the UK Licensing Act 1902, which was disapplied in Falkland Islands but as a useful provision for child protection has now been reinstated in this legislation.

Section 82 incorporates at (1) to (3) the provisions of the UK Child Maltreatment Bill which has not yet been enacted but which reflects the latest thinking on child cruelty in the UK. The previous offence in the Falkland Islands was that of child neglect as set out in section 1 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 (CYPA). The CYPA provides that any person aged 16 or over who has responsibility for a child under that age commits an offence if the person wilfully assaults, ill-treats, neglects, abandons or exposes the child (or causes or procures the child to be so treated) in a manner likely to cause the child unnecessary suffering or injury to health.

In April 2012 the UK charity Action for Children launched a campaign calling for reform of the CYPA. It argued that the law needed to be modernised to align with society's current understanding of parenting, child protection and neglect as a form of child abuse, which has evolved in the 80 years since the 1933 Act was introduced. The CYPA seeks only to protect children's very basic physical needs and fails to reflect their emotional and developmental needs or the current recognition of children as individuals with rights. The issue has been debated several times in the House of Commons, and the government has now significantly shifted its position, from initially resisting any amendment. The Child Maltreatment Bill 2013-14, a Private Members' Bill sponsored by Mark Williams, was presented to Parliament through the ballot procedure on 19 June 2013 but was not moved for debate and the order to read the Bill a second time lapsed. However, in the Queen's Speech on 4 June 2014 the Government announced that a provision to introduce a change to the law, to include emotional abuse and developmental neglect, will be included in the Serious Crime Bill in the current Parliamentary session.

The wording of section 82 replicates the wording of the Child Maltreatment Bill. The offence is committed if a person with responsibility for a child intentionally or recklessly subjects the child, or allows the child to be subjected to maltreatment (whether by act or omission) and the child suffers, or is likely to suffer, significant harm. Maltreatment would include neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse, exploitation and emotional abuse. Harm would mean impairment of physical or mental health or physical, intellectual, emotional, social or behavioural development.

Section 83 is the offence of illegal tattooing of youths based on an extant UK law which applied to the Falkland Islands by virtue of Schedule 1 to the previous Crimes Ordinance.

Child abduction

Sections 84 to 86 are based on the UK Child Abduction Act 1984 but adapted to match with the Children Ordinance 2014.

Section 84 creates the offence of abduction of a child by parent or someone in a similar relationship and section 85 creates the offence of abduction of a child by persons other than parents. The penalty for the offence of abduction by persons other than parents has been increased to 10 years, as it was regarded by Legislative Assembly as being a more serious offence.

Section 86 explains key terms and removes the distinction between legitimate and illegitimate relationships in relation to child abduction. It also incorporates provisions that are in the Schedule to the 1984 Act and the definitions in section 1 of that Act.

Section 87 is about trafficking people for labour exploitation. It is based on the UK Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004 as amended by the Crimes and Courts Act 2013. The equivalent offence in relation to sex trafficking is at section 276.

Sections 88 and 89 are about female genital mutilation and are based on the UK Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 which already applies in the Falkland Islands under the provisions of s78 (1)b) of the IGCO.

Forced marriages

Sections 90 and 91 introduce into Falkland Islands law the offence of forced marriage.

Sections 92 to 101 provide for the making of forced marriage protection orders on the application of a person who fears being forced into a marriage, or of the Attorney General, or on the court's own initiative. The provisions are based on provisions in the UK Family Law Act 1996 as recently amended.

Domestic violence protection

Sections 102 to 108 are derived from provisions of the UK Crime and Security Act 2010 which were brought into force in March 2014. They enable a senior police officer to issue a domestic violence protection notice (DVPN), without any offence having been committed, if there is a risk of violence in a domestic context i.e. by one 'associated person' to another. The notice must be followed up by an application by the Attorney General to the court for a domestic violence protection order (DVPO), breach of which is treated as a contempt of court in the UK, but is made a criminal offence in section 107 with a similar penalty as for contempt. The court will normally be the Summary Court, but the Magistrate's Court will hear the application if the Summary Court is not sitting, as the procedure is meant to be an urgent one.

The procedure is similar to that for a forced marriage protection order under sections 92 to 101. It is also similar to the procedure for sexual risk orders (SROs) under Part 11. The availability of this procedure provides the victim of domestic violence short term protection while he or she is offered professional support and considers what action they wish to take e.g. to make a statement and support a prosecution, or to commence Family proceedings for non-molestation, etc. Such orders should help to reduce the risk of domestic violence, as application is not made by the victim, who is often reluctant or fearful of seeking a non-molestation order in the civil courts for various reasons.

The Governor is given power to issue guidance about the use of DVPNs, as in the case of forced marriage orders and SROs.

Human organ transplants

Sections 109 to 111 are based on the UK Human Organs Transplant Act 1989 which applies to the Falkland Islands. This Act was repealed in the UK by the Human Tissue Act 2004. The later Act is however much more detailed and wide-ranging than is necessary for the Falklands context, where medical facilities are limited. The earlier provisions have therefore been retained but the penalties updated and aligned to the equivalent provisions in the Human Tissue Act.

Section 109 prohibits commercial dealings in human organs.

Section 110 restricts transplants between persons not genetically related.

Section 111 makes supplementary provisions, and gives the Governor power by regulations to establish an authority to control human organ transplant activity and makes other supplementary provisions.

Crimes against humanity

Sections 112 and 113 relate to genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, as created for the Falkland Islands by the International Criminal Court Act 2001 (Overseas Territories) Order 2009 Schedule 2.

Section 112 creates the offences and section 113 makes supplementary provisions, including definitions by reference to the Rome Statute. Article 57 of Schedule 2 prescribes 30 years as the maximum penalty, but if murder is involved, the penalty is as for murder, i.e. mandatory life sentence.

Miscellaneous offences

Section 114 is the offence of piracy with intent to murder or involving life-threatening violence. It carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Section 115 creates as statutory offences the common law offences of kidnapping and false imprisonment. The kidnapping offence at (1) is based on the common law offence as in R v D [1984] AC 778. The false imprisonment offence at (2) is based on the common law offence as in R v Rahman 81 CR App R. The maximum penalty for kidnapping is stated as 18 years and for false imprisonment is 14 years. (In the UK there is no sentencing guideline at present, but the leading case, R v Spence and Thomas (1983) 5 Cr App R (S) 423 indicates a range between 5 and 15 years although there is no maximum penalty.)

Section 116 creates the offence of torture derived from sections 134 and 135 of the UK Criminal Justice Act 1988. It implements in the Falkland Islands the UN Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment of 1985.

Section 117 makes it an offence to keep someone in slavery, servitude or forced or compulsory labour, in line with the UK Coroners and Justice Act 2009.

Section 118 is the offence of bigamy, under s.57 of the 1861 Act.

Section 119 permits the use of reasonable force in making an arrest, etc. by cross-referring to section 782 of the CPEO 2014.

Section 120 is derived from section 76 of the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 as amended by the LASPO Act 2012 and regulates self-defence as a defence to a charge under this Part.

PART 5 - CORPORATE MANSLAUGHTER

Introduction

This Part derives from the UK Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007. (The offence is called corporate manslaughter in England and Wales; corporate homicide in Scotland.) It creates a statutory offence, not previously known to the English law. It covers cases where death is caused by the activities of a corporation, although prosecution under this Part does not preclude prosecution of individuals for gross negligence manslaughter as well, should the circumstance of the case dictate that this is appropriate.

The Part does not follow the sequence of sections of the 2007 Act. The Interpretation section is put first as with other Parts of this Ordinance and other sections are rearranged to make a more logical order.

The term ‘public authority’ is defined as in the UK Human Rights Act 1998. The term ‘employers association’ is not used in Falkland Islands law so the definition in the UK Trade Union Consolidation Act 1992 (which is used in the 2007 Act) is used, but in shorter form. The term ‘premises’ is defined in section 2.

For purposes of this Part, a corporation includes –

- (a) a government department or other body that is not exempted;
- (b) the police force;
- (c) a partnership;
- (d) a trade union; or
- (e) an employers’ association that is not a corporation.

Any statutory provision about criminal proceedings applies in relation to proceedings under this Part against a corporation as so defined.

As the term ‘corporation’ includes government departments, and as it is appropriate for activities of Her Majesty’s Government in the UK to come under Falkland Islands law in this regard, the Part uses the term ‘Crown’ which includes the UK and the Falkland Islands Governments. Conversely, section 125 (which excludes activities of the armed forces) is included because the Government of the Falkland Islands needs to protect HM forces from being prosecuted under this Act. (The term ‘armed forces’ is defined as in section 12 of the Act.)

The powers of the Governor under this Part will require consultation with ExCo, in accordance with the Constitution and the IGCO.

Notes on sections

Section 122 creates the offence and makes it indictment-only. The penalty is an unlimited fine. The application of the offence is limited to harm sustained in the Falkland Islands (including its territorial waters), on a Falkland’s registered ship or aircraft or offshore installation.

Sections 123 to 129 set out the relevant duty of care, breach of which gives rise to criminal liability. Sections 125 to 128 set out certain functions that are excluded from the scope of the Part. They include activities of the armed forces, emergency services and certain child protection functions.

In section 128(3) the term ‘supervision’ is used instead of ‘probation’.

Sections 130 to 132 state how the Part applies to public bodies, the police force and partnerships.

Sections 133 to 136 are about evidence and procedure.

Sections 133 and 134 give the court power to order a convicted corporation to take steps to remedy matters that gave rise to the death and to order that publicity is to be given to a corporation’s conviction for an offence.

Section 135 applies existing procedural rules, but says that an individual cannot be prosecuted as an accessory to corporate manslaughter.

Section 136 enables prosecutions to be brought under health and safety legislation as well as under this Part.

Section 137 says who becomes liable if there is a transfer of the functions of a corporation.

Section 138 abolishes the common law offence of manslaughter by a corporation.

Sections 139 and 140 enable the Governor to vary the application of sections 122 and 123 respectively.

PART 6 - PROTECTION FROM HARASSMENT

Introduction

This Part is mainly based on the UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997, as amended, and is intended to protect people from harassing behaviour in all its forms and from whatever source, including hate mail or even excessive adulation. It is possible for an offence of harassment to be racially or religiously aggravated, see section 550.

The Part includes amendments to the 1997 Act made by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005. It also includes the extended offence of stalking created by the Protection of Freedoms Act 2012.

The Part includes sections based on the operative provisions of the UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997.

It also includes 3 further offences that relate to harassment. They are –

- a) the offence under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 of harassing a person at the person's home, with a view to getting the person out (section 147);
- b) the offence under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 of sending letters intended to cause distress or anxiety (section 152);
- c) the offence under the Communications Act 2003 of improper use of an electronic communications network by sending offensive, indecent, obscene, threatening or false messages by phone, fax or over the internet (section 153).

(Other provisions of that Act are contained in Part 14 on computer misuse.)

Provisions of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 although akin to harassment are not included as they deal with landlord and tenant law and are not needed in the Falkland Islands.

The arrest without warrant powers in the UK Acts were repealed by the Serious and Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 with effect from 1 January 2006 and are not included as they are in the CPEO 2014.

There is a commentary on the relevant UK provisions in Archbold 2013 Ed paras. 19-19-337 to 19-357 (sections PH5 to 15).

Notes on sections

Section 141 defines terms used in the Part that are not defined in section 2 or elsewhere. It applies the interpretation section 7 of the UK 1997 Act to the whole Part and incorporates other definitions from the UK Acts. It does not define 'harassment', a term which has been the subject of much case law in the UK. The decision as to whether behaviour amounts to harassment is a matter for the court to decide on a case by case basis. There is general agreement that for conduct to constitute harassment it must be objectively judged as oppressive and unacceptable; that what is oppressive and unacceptable may depend upon the social or working context in which the conduct occurs; and that a line is to be drawn between conduct which is unattractive and unreasonable and conduct which amounts to ‘torment’ of the victim or is of a degree that should sustain criminal liability. See Dawson v Northumbria Police unreported 20.10.2010 QBD

Sections 142 to 146 create offences of harassment derived from the UK Protection from Harassment Act 1997 as amended.

Sections 142 and 143 create an offence of pursuing a course of conduct which amounts to harassment. The term ‘course of conduct’ means on at least 2 occasions – see the definition in section 141.

Section 144 creates the offence of stalking, which consists of harassment plus other elements, such as following, contacting, watching etc. the victim.

Section 145 creates a more serious offence of pursuing a course of conduct which puts people in fear of violence. It carries a maximum penalty of 5 years imprisonment.

Section 146 creates a more serious offence of stalking, involving fear of violence or serious alarm or distress

Section 147 is the offence of harassing a person at their home mentioned above.

Sections 148 to 150 are ancillary provisions relating to all these offences.

Section 148 provides for a civil penalty by way of damages for harassment of a single individual, and for an injunction. It is not strictly a criminal provision although there is a criminal penalty for breach of an injunction.

Section 149 empowers a court to grant an injunction for harassment of 2 or more persons.

Section 150 confers a power of entry in relation to offence of stalking. The power can only be exercised on a warrant issued by a justice of the peace. The term ‘premises’ is defined in section 2.

Section 151 is based on section 5 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 as amended. It empowers a court to impose a restraining order on a person convicted of ‘an offence’. The offence in question might be under other legislation e.g. drugs or firearms. There is UK case law that a restraining order can be imposed for any offence if the court considers it appropriate in order to protect the victim from harassment or fear of violence. It is a useful power in relation to domestic violence cases.

Section 152 empowers a court to impose a restraining order on a person acquitted of an offence. As the section is currently drafted this must be for an offence under the Ordinance rather than for any offence as in section 151. Unfortunately the anomaly between the two sections was not identified in sufficient time to lay an amendment before the Bill was passed. It was always the intention to replicate the provision of section 151 and an amendment to implement this is anticipated. The courts in UK can impose a RO if they find behaviour requiring restraint but not sufficient for a criminal conviction. The power is equivalent to a civil injunction without the victim having to make a separate application.

Section 153 creates the offence of sending letters intended to cause distress or anxiety which is a summary offence under the UK Malicious Communications Act 1988.

Section 154 is based on section 127 of the UK Communications Act 2003 and makes it an offence to send offensive, indecent, obscene, threatening or false messages by phone, fax or over the internet. The definition is from section 32 of the 2003 Act. The exemption in (3) is for a programme service as defined in section 2.

PART 7 - OFFENSIVE WEAPONS

Introduction

This Part groups together a number of UK legislative provisions on offensive weapons and combines them with related provisions of the previous Crimes Ordinance. The UK provisions include sections 139 to 141 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, as amended by the Offensive Weapons Act 1996; section 1 of the Prevention of Crime Act 1953 as amended by the 1996 Act; sections 60 and 60A of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994; provisions of the Knives Act 1997; and the Crossbows Act 1987. As the topic of knives and weapons is of considerable public concern, and is not just a public order issue, it is appropriate that these sections are gathered together into a separate Part on offensive weapons.

The Part places knives offences in one group and offensive weapons offences in another. The provision about manufacture of offensive weapons (which is about flick knives) therefore appears as section 160, and the provision of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 about sale of knives etc. to persons under 16 appears as section 161. However, some of the offensive weapons provisions apply also to knives, as they are within the category of offensive weapons, if used offensively. The more general provision about manufacture etc. based on the Criminal Justice Act 1988 therefore appears as section 174.

The Governor is given power to prescribe categories of knives that are exempt from some of the provisions (section 158(3)) and to amend the categories of weapons that are subject to stricter controls (section 174(3)). The Governor is required to consult the Criminal Justice Council, rather than ExCo, in the exercise of these powers.

Powers to stop and search and seize offensive weapons, including crossbows, are contained in the PACE provisions of the CPEO 2014. However, express powers to stop and search in anticipation of violence under this Part are included and are placed at the end of the Part as they are about weapons generally.

Notes on sections

Section 155 contains definitions which relate to the whole Part. The definitions of 'school' and 'school premises' are based on s.2 of the Education Ordinance and s.16A of the Crimes Ordinance, and are similar to the definition in s.4 of the UK Education Act 1996. There is no requirement that the school needs to be in session or that it be during term-time when the possession occurs.

The definition of ‘offensive weapon’ adopts the concept in UK law that anything can be an offensive weapon if intended to be used for offence. The definition does not mention firearms or crossbows or knives or bladed/pointed articles as these are controlled by specific provisions in this Part or the Firearms Ordinance. Section 160 relates specifically to flick knives. This offence is not in the UK legislation, but is in some other criminal codes (notably Gibraltar) and appears to be appropriate for the Falkland Islands.

The definition of ‘vehicle’ is needed because it is different from other definitions in the Ordinance.

Section 156 prohibits the marketing of knives in a way which encourages their use for combat.

Section 157 prohibits the publication of material that promotes knives for the purposes of combat.

Sections 158 and 159 provide for the exemption of certain trades and for other defences. Under section 158(3) the Governor may prescribe categories of knife that are exempt.

Section 160 relates specifically to flick knives. This offence is not in the UK legislation, but is in some other criminal codes, notably Gibraltar, and appears to be appropriate for the Falkland Islands.

Section 161 is based on section 141A of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 as added by the Offensive Weapons Act 1996.

Section 162 includes powers of entry and seizure and detention similar to those in Part 21 (Public Order). The word ‘implement’ is added to include items to which sections 160(2) and 162(2)(2) apply, such as axes.

Section 163 empowers a court to order forfeiture of articles. This and section 164 will attract the provisions of section 622 of the CPEO 2014.

Section 164 provides for applications for the return of forfeited articles.

Sections 165 to 168 are based on sections 17 to 20 of the previous Crimes Ordinance, which in turn were based on sections 1, 2, 3 and 6 of the UK Crossbows Act 1987. They prohibit sale to, hiring of or possession by person under 17 of crossbows. The offence in section 167 of prohibited use is not in the UK Act.

Section 169 prohibits the possession of articles with blades or points in a public place, with an exception for small folding pocket knives (with a blade not exceeding 3 inches) and subject to certain defences about use of the article, etc. The UK penalty has been increased to 2 years, rather than 12 months as in this section.

Section 170 prohibits the possession on school premises of an article to which section 169 applies and any other offensive weapon, with similar exceptions as in section 169. This aggravated form of the offence carries an enhanced penalty of 2 years.

Section 171 is the offence of threatening with an offensive weapon or an article with a blade or point on school premises. It was introduced by the UK LASPO Act 2012. The minimum sentence requirement has not been included but this provision carries a higher penalty than charges of simple possession on school premises, and, as it is doubly aggravated, is 4 years.

Section 172 confers a power of entry and search of school premises (which are not always a public place so express power has to be conferred.)

Section 173 is a general prohibition on carrying an offensive weapon in a public place. As even a small penknife or any other bladed/pointed article can be an offensive weapon if intended for offence, this, the oldest provision of the Part, based on the Prevention of Crime Act 1953, is still the most useful, particularly as it includes a reverse onus of proof provision.

Section 174 derives from the Criminal Justice Act 1988. It is wider than sections 160 and 161 about knives, etc. and makes it an offence to deal in the specified weapons (mostly exotic martial arts-type weapons.) The Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, can amend the list of weapons.

Section 175 empowers the Chief Police Officer to authorise a police officer to exercise powers to stop and search persons and vehicles if the officer considers that incidents involving serious violence may occur in any area of the Falkland Islands and that persons are carrying knives or offensive weapons there.

Section 176 sets out the powers that can be exercised by a police officer under an order made under section 175. Any exercise of the power must be notified to the Chief Police Officer.

PART 8 - EXPLOSIVE SUBSTANCES

Introduction

This Part incorporates UK provisions about explosive substances that are still extant, and provisions of the previous Crimes Ordinance about explosives endangering public safety. The UK criminal offences relating to explosive substances (other than manufacture and keeping) are comparatively few and rather ancient. There are some provisions relating to explosive substances in the UK Offences against the Person Act (sections 28, 29, 30 and 64.) There are also provisions in the UK Explosive Substances Act 1883 (sections 2 to 9), as amended by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975, which replaced sections 2 and 3 of the 1883 Act, and by the Criminal Law Act 1977. The 1883 Act is listed under Explosives in the Laws of Falkland Islands as applying to the Falkland Islands. It was noted that there was a degree of overlap in the various definitions and offences but with sentence disparity. These have been rationalised.

A few of the provisions of the UK Explosives Act 1875 relate to explosives generally and are included in this Part (sections 192 and 193 dealing with forfeiture etc.) The rest of the 1875 Act relates to the manufacture and keeping and conveyance of gunpowder and other explosives and will continue to apply to the Falkland Islands as imperial enactments.

The UK Explosives Act 1923 has 2 sections relating to occupiers and employers and will also continue to apply.

The offence of causing an explosive substance to explode near Her Majesty is included in the Part on Treason and Sedition.

The offence of being in possession of a noxious or dangerous thing with intent to commit an offence is included in Part 4.

Sections 181 to 185 have been placed in a sequence of descending gravity, and sections 183 and 184 have been modified to distinguish between manufacturing and possessing explosives.

Sections 187 to 190 are taken from the previous Crimes Ordinance ss. 12 to 15 and are a result of the military activity in 1982. They appear to be of local origin.

There is a commentary on the UK Acts at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.23-62 to 23-86

Notes on sections

Section 177 contains definitions derived from section 9 of the 1883 Act. It defines ‘explosive’ as in section 3 of the 1875 Act. It defines ‘explosive substance’ as in section 9 of the 1883 Act. There is a power to extend the definition of ‘explosive’ based on s.104 of the 1875 Act.

Sections 178 to 183 create offences based on sections 29 to 30 of the 1861 Act and sections 2 to 4 of the Explosive Substances Act 1883. These offences are still law in the UK and remain relevant to the Falkland Islands.

Section 178 creates an offence of causing bodily harm. Section 179 only requires an intention to harm, as sub-section (2) makes clear. The penalties in sections 178 and 179 are reduced from life imprisonment to 14 years, so that they are triable summarily.

Section 180 - causing an explosion likely to endanger life or property - does not include the UK provision about citizens of dependent territories outside the UK planning to do harm in the UK. The UK Act will still apply to Falkland Islanders intending harm in the UK. Attempts to commit any of these offences will be offences under the general law. The offence is an indictment-only offence, and attempts etc. will also be indictment-only under section 181 of the CPEO 2014.

Section 181 creates 2 offences - acting or conspiring to cause explosion, or making or keeping explosives with intent. They are both indictment only

Section 182 uses the phrase ‘building, ship or aircraft’, which widens the scope of the section from the UK rule. Sub-section (2) clarifies the rule about whether the explosion etc. takes place.

Section 183 adapts section 3 of the 1883 Act (omitting ‘machine’) and creates an offence of making explosives for an unlawful purpose. This would include making them for another person for such a purpose. The word ‘knowingly’ in the UK Act is omitted as knowledge must exist where a specific intention is required.

Section 184 is about possession of explosive substances and is based on section 64 of the UK Offences against the Person Act, 1861. The reverse onus rule in the UK text is replaced by a formulation which makes prosecution harder but is not open to human rights challenge. The phrase ‘under this Ordinance’ makes this a very wide-ranging offence.

Section 185 is about accessories. It includes sub-section (2) to enact the rule about aiding and abetting in R. v. McCarthy, 48 Cr. App. R. 111 and Mok Wei Tak v. R [1990] 2 A.C.333 PC. The section is not strictly necessary as there is a general offence of aiding and abetting in Part 3 of the Ordinance, but it is still in the UK law and identifies the elements of the offence in this context.

Section 186 enacts in local law section 8 of the 1883 Act. It is more concerned with the safety of ships than with explosives, and the term ‘dangerous goods’ is used instead. However, it is included for completeness as the rule it states about liability is an important protection for masters and owners of ships dealing with explosives.

Section 187 is derived from the previous Crimes Ordinance and relates to minefields of which there are still many in Falkland Islands.

Section 188 is also derived from the previous Crimes Ordinance and relates to unexploded ordnance.

Section 189 relates to the sale of explosives.

Section 190 prohibits the throwing of fireworks.

Section 191 enacts in local law section 7 of the 1883 Act except for section 7(3) which is an extraterritorial provision and is not appropriate for the Falkland Islands. Sub-section (2) refers to the Explosives Acts 1875 and 1923 as there are provisions about the manufacture etc. of explosives in those Acts, and in regulations made under them.

Sections 192 and 193 are based on sections 74 and 89 of the UK Explosives Act 1975 which are still law in the UK and which apply in the Falkland Islands. The powers in these sections are in addition to the powers of search and seizure and forfeiture in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance.

Section 192 provides for seizure and detention of explosive substances found on premises, vehicles, vessels and aircraft.

Section 193 provides for the forfeiture of all explosive substances. See section 622 of the CPEO 2014 for the disposal of forfeited property.

PART 9 - CRIMINAL DAMAGE

Introduction

This Part is based on the UK Criminal Damage Act 1971 which is still the latest UK law on the subject.

Section 194 in defining 'property' mentions damage to computers; the offence of misuse of computers is in Part 14.

Offences relating to explosive substances are in Part 8.

The penalties are stated in each section that creates an offence, rather than having them separately as in s.4 of the UK Act.

There is a commentary on the Criminal Damage Act at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras 23.1 to 23.55.

Notes on sections

Section 194 defines 'property', based on section 10 of the UK Act. The term 'damage' is not defined as it has been defined in UK case law; it means not only permanent or temporary physical harm, but also permanent or temporary impairment of value or usefulness.

Section 195 creates two groups of offences – the basic group of causing damage with intent to cause damage or being reckless as to whether damage is caused, and the aggravated group of causing damage or being reckless as to causing damage intending to endanger life or being reckless as to life being endangered. Offences in the first group are triable summarily but those in the second are not; the penalty is life imprisonment and they are triable on indictment only. The definition of 'damage' in sub-section (3) is based on dicta in R v Whiteley 93 CrAppR25.

Section 196 creates arson (criminal damage by fire) as a separate offence. In the UK Act it is merely stated that criminal damage by fire must be charged as arson, but it is a separate offence, is subject to a separate count on an indictment and therefore has been stated separately here. Arson may be simple or aggravated. Aggravated arson carries a sentence of life imprisonment and is triable on indictment only.

Section 197 creates the offence of threats to destroy or damage property and possessing anything with intent to destroy or damage property. They are derived from sections 2 and 3 of the UK Act.

Section 198 is the offence of possessing things with intent to destroy or damage property.

Section 199 is derived from section 5 of the UK Act. It provides a defence of lawful excuse for destruction of or damage to property (except for arson or threats of violence). The defence is available if the person genuinely thought the owner of the property consented to its destruction or damage, or that it was necessary to protect other property.

Section 200 gives a power of seizure of things intended for causing damage and is based on section 6 of the Criminal Damage Act. It is probably otiose as it has the same effect as the search and seizure provisions of the CPEO 2014 but it is included for good measure.

Section 201 displaces the rule against self-incrimination in relation to offences under this Part. It is based on s.9 of the Criminal Damage Act and is similar to section 378 relating to fraud.

PART 10 – SEXUAL OFFENCES

Introduction

The UK Sexual Offences Act 2003 replaced the Sexual Offences Act 1956 which applied to the Falkland Islands as an imperial enactment. Most of the 2003 Act was incorporated in Falkland Islands law with minor modifications by the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005 (“SOO”). Part 1 of the Act creates a large number of sexual offences. Part 2 deals with notification requirements and other orders that can be imposed on persons convicted of sexual offences.

This Part 10 incorporates into the Crimes Ordinance all the provisions of Part 1 of the 2003 Act, with some modifications, including those made in the Schedule to the SOO, in updated language. Part 11 on Sex Offence Orders incorporates the provisions of Part 2 of the SOO with similar modifications.

This Part also replaces section 4 of the SOO which incorporated into Falkland Islands law the UK Protection of Children Act 1978, which makes provision about indecent photographs of children.

The Part includes amendments made to the 2003 Act by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 and the Policing and Crime Act 2009. It includes an offence of possession of prohibited images based on sections 62 to 67 of the Coroners and Justice Act 2009 - see sections 253 to 256. It includes the concept of a ‘pseudo-photograph’ introduced by that Act, and extends the age of the victim for all such offences to 18, as in the SOO Schedule. The Part also includes the offences in the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 of possession of extreme pornographic images.

The Part includes a number of older provisions on related offences that are still law in the UK but which were not included in the SOO. They are –

Sections 259 to 263 (child pornography) based on sections 160 and 160A of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 and section 1 and other sections of the Protection of Children Act 1978;

Section 267 (loitering etc. for prostitution) based on s.1 of the Street Offences Act 1959;

Sections 270 to 273 (brothel-keeping) based on sections 33 to 36 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956; and Section 274 (allowing young persons to be in a brothel) based on section 3 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1993.

The offence under the 1956 Sexual Offences Act and the Offences against the Person Act 1861 of indecency between males was abolished by the 2003 Act. Homosexuality has therefore been decriminalised in Falkland Islands since 2004. There is a consequential provision in Part 29 on rehabilitation of offenders in the CPEO 2014. See also the provisions on ending of the requirement for notification of homosexual offences in Part 11 of this Ordinance.

The 2003 Act abolished the distinction between the sexes in the commission of sexual offences, and equalised the ages of consent for both heterosexual and homosexual activity. This Part is therefore drafted in gender-neutral language, except where the conduct is gender-specific in nature.

Age of consent, etc.

The Part follows the previous law and the UK Act in differentiating the offence of rape regarding the age of the complainant. It is a matter of fact for the court whether there is capacity to consent within the meaning of section 204. However, sexual relations with a child under certain ages are offences irrespective of consent. The policy incorporated in the Part, following that in the UK is–

- a) that sexual relations with a child under 13 is an offence irrespective of any apparent agreement by the child or belief in consent on the part of the defendant as a child under 13 has no capacity in law to consent;
- b) that if the child is 13 or over but is under 16 and consents, it is an offence if the accused did not reasonably believe the child was over 16. This means that in the case of a child of 14 or 15, the prosecution must prove either that there was no consent (which would be rape), or that there was consent but that the accused did not reasonably believe the child was over 16 (i.e. 16 years or over.)

Note that the age of the defendant is not relevant to his or her belief regarding the age of the child. There is also a distinction between offences against those under 16 and those under 13 as regards belief of age in relation to persons in positions of trust (sections 218 to 225). This is because the circumstances of the offences involving abuse of trust are specialised and do not apply to everyone.

Extraterritoriality

Sections 216 and 217 include an extraterritorial element in that they relate to an intention to commit a crime anywhere in the world. The intended activity must be one that, whether or not it is a crime in the local jurisdiction, would be a crime in the Falkland Islands. So an intention to engage in or arrange sexual activity with a child under 13 in another country would be caught, because the activity would be a crime in the Falkland Islands.

The converse is that a person who goes to another country to arrange sex tours to the Falkland Islands in relation to children between 13 and 16 would be committing an offence in the Falkland Islands (and could be prosecuted on their return) although the person might not be committing an offence in the other country if the age of consent there is lower. It would depend on the wording of the law of the other country as to the scope of the jurisdiction there.

Sections 275 to 278 create offences relating to sex trafficking into, within, and out of the Falkland Islands. They create extraterritorial jurisdiction in relation to sex trafficking which by its nature involves cross-border activity. The definition of 'relevant offence' in section 275 limits the prohibited conduct to that which would be an offence if committed in Falkland Islands; it does not include all conduct which is an offence in another country.

Sections 289 and 290 confer extraterritorial jurisdiction over certain sexual offences.

Section 289 provides that relevant conduct is an offence in Falkland Islands and can be tried there, wherever committed, if it would be an offence in Falkland Islands, even if it is not an offence in the other country. But conduct that might be an offence in another place is not triable in Falkland Islands if it is not an offence in Falkland Islands. The relevant offences are listed in Schedule 1. The term 'place' is used rather than 'country' or 'territory' to avoid problems of political identity

Penalties

The Part adopts the penalties prescribed in the SO Act 2003 as modified by the SOO Schedule. The statement of penalty is generally in the simplified version but it is spelled out in full if there are any variants e.g. whether penetration etc.

The maximum sentence for some offences varies, depending on the age of the victim. Following the 2003 Act and the SOO, the Part specifies a higher maximum penalty for certain offences if the victim is younger.

Under the procedure in the CPEO 2014, all the offences will be triable summarily except those that are indictment-only (as to which see section 181 Part of the CPEO 2014). All the sexual offences that carry a life sentence are indictment-only. They include rape, offences under sections 204, 206, 207 and 208, and aggravated offences under sections 231, 232, 235, 236, 239, 259 and 280.

There are some offences that only carry low penalties, such as e.g. loitering for prostitution (section 267).

The offences of 'inciting' a child or other person to engage in sexual acts is replaced by 'encouraging' as that is the term used in Part 3 as one of the ancillary offences. As the offence of 'inciting' is abolished by that Part it seems appropriate to be consistent in the use of terms across the Ordinance.

The word 'counsel' is not used, but term 'aid and abet' is used, as in Part 3 on ancillary offences. The terms 'encourage' and 'aid and abet' are defined in section 2.

There is a commentary on Part 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 20-1 to 20-257. There is a commentary on possession of indecent photos at paras. 31-115 to 119.

The offences of prostitution etc. as in sections 264 to 268 are summary only so do not appear in Archbold Criminal Pleading and Practice. They are however discussed in Archbold's Magistrates' Courts Criminal Practice at paras.14-40 to 43.

Notes on sections

Section 202 defines some terms used in the Part that are not defined elsewhere in the Ordinance or in the IGCO. It includes a definition of ‘indecent’ based on UK case law, such as R v Stamford 1972 2 QB 391; R v Court 1988 87 CrAppR 144; R v Neal 2011 EWCA Crim 461.

Sections 203 to 206 create the main sexual offences against person of any age. They include rape, assault by penetration, sexual assault and causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent.

Sections 207 to 210 create the offences of rape, assault etc. against a child under the age of 13, who is unable to give consent. It will be an offence to penetrate or have other sexual relations with a child under 13, irrespective of consent. The existing offence of unlawful sexual intercourse is therefore expanded to include boys and to include sexual activity short of penetration.

Sections 211 to 214 apply to people aged 18 or over. They create offences of engaging in sexual activity with a child of under 13, or a child of 13 but under 16 if the offender does not reasonably believe the child is over 16.

Section 215 provides that if young people aged 18 or under commit the offences in sections 203 to 214, lower penalties apply. However, a custodial sentence can still be imposed on a youth by virtue of section 729 of the CPEO 2014 relating to offences with a carrying a maximum sentence of 14 years or more.

Section 216 creates an offence of arranging or facilitating sexual activity by children under 16. The defence in (2) as amplified by (3) is to cover the situation where e.g. a health worker knows that someone intends to have sex with a child, and does not condone it but provides the person with a condom so that the sex will at least be protected.

Section 217 creates the offence of meeting a child following sexual grooming and has been amended from the UK wording. The Ordinance provides that the offence is committed after any contact. The UK wording of this offence has attracted much criticism since its implementation; for the offence to have been committed two previous contacts have to have occurred prior to the meeting or travelling to the meeting. This means that significant grooming may have taken place particularly via social media or SMS messaging which is discovered but may not be prosecuted even as an attempt, depending upon the circumstances. Proposals have been made in a recent parliamentary report that the number of contacts should be reduced to one and that a new offence of ‘sexualised contact’ be considered. However it is right to say that if parents report inappropriate internet contact to the police, the police can consider applying for a Sexual Risk Order to prevent such activity. Accordingly, when the issue was considered in Legislative Assembly, the Honourable Members considered it appropriate to pay heed to the criticism and amended the provision accordingly.

Sections 218 to 225 create offences by persons in a position of trust in who abuse the trust by engaging in sexual activity with a child etc. The categories of persons in a position of trust are adapted to Falkland Islands. Some terms, such as ‘independent clinic’ and ‘residential care home' are not defined, but have an established meaning. Strict liability is imposed on care workers in relation to children under 16, but in respect of young people aged 16 or 17, the prosecution needs to show that the accused did not reasonably believe that the person was 18 or over. The age of the defendant is irrelevant to this requirement, and there is a rebuttable presumption that the accused did not reasonably believe the person was 18 or over. The prosecution must also show in certain cases that the defendant knew or could reasonably be expected to know that he or she was in a position of trust.

Under section 222(10) the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, can declare additional positions to be positions of trust for purposes of these sections.

Sections 226 to 230 deal with child sex offences in the family context, including child incest. See section 282 for adult incest.

Sections 231 to 234 make it an offence for any person to engage in sexual activity with a person with a mental disability that impedes choice.

Sections 235 to 238 create various other offences in relation to persons with a mental disorder, including offering inducements etc. to procure sexual activity.

Sections 239 to 245 make it an offence for a care worker to engage in sexual activity with a person with a mental disorder and create other sexual offences by care workers in relation to persons in their care.

Sections 246 to 251 make it an offence to take or possess or publish indecent photographs of youths, i.e. a person under the age of 18. Section 250 gives powers of entry, search and seizure and Schedule 1 sets out a procedure for disposal of seized items. The term 'indecent' is not defined in UK statute law but is defined in section 202 on the basis of UK case law as mentioned above.

Sections 252 to 255 make it an offence to possess prohibited images of youths. There is exclusion for classified films and a defence of having a legitimate excuse for possession.

Section 252 implements Article 9 of the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime. See also Part 14 for other provisions implementing that Convention.

Sections 256 to 258 relate to the possession of extreme pornographic images. They are derived from sections 63 to 67 of the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008. It is an offence for a person to be in possession of an extreme pornographic image, moving or still. An 'extreme' image is defined by reference to specific acts. Defences are provided for extracts from classified movies, and for persons who are themselves portrayed in such images, who are not aware of the images, or who have a legitimate reason for possessing them, etc.

Section 257 omits the UK rules about classification of videos (which are no longer law in the UK) and section 258 omits the exception about providers of information services. But see Part 25 for offences relating to obscene publications generally.

Sections 259 to 263 create offences relating to the abuse of children through prostitution and pornography. Section 260 retains the distinction between children under 13 and those under 18 for sentencing purposes.

Section 259(1) is varied from the UK version to make it an offence to pay a child for sexual services not only for the payer but for another person on whose behalf payment has been made.

Sections 264 to 269 create various offences relating to prostitution, such as kerb-crawling and persistent soliciting. The offences can be committed by either sex and include men soliciting prostitutes, but do not include prostitution itself. The term 'street' is defined in the IGCO.

The power of arrest in section 267(4) is needed because the offence is not imprisonable so the general arrest power in Part 4 of the CPEO 2014 does not apply.

Sections 270 to 274 create offences relating to the keeping of a brothel and permitting premises to be used as a brothel. The offences are framed so as to cover people who are in the process of gender reassignment.

Section 275 creates a composite offence relating to sex trafficking into, within, and out of the Falkland Islands. The offence is made extraterritorial as noted above. Sections 276 and 277 empower courts to forfeit land vehicles, ships and aircraft used for sex trafficking and section 278 defines some terms.

Sections 279 to 281 create certain preparatory offences such as administering a substance with intent to stupefy.

Sections 282 and 283 create the offence of incest i.e. sexual relations with an adult relative. The list of prohibitions is limited to direct blood relationships, and is similar to the proscribed degrees of relationship for marriage. See sections 226 to 230 for sexual activity with children of the family.

Sections 284 to 288 create certain other sexual offences, including genital exposure (called simply 'exposure' in the UK Act), voyeurism, bestiality and sexual penetration of a corpse.

Section 286 varies from the UK version in that the penetration is prohibited of or by an animal, whether alive or dead. This parallels the offence in section 256 in relation to 'extreme images'.

Sections 289 confers extraterritorial jurisdiction in respect of certain sexual offences as listed in Schedule 2. It uses the term 'place outside Falkland Islands' to avoid any question about the country status of a jurisdiction.

Section 290 relates to encouraging, aiding and abetting the commission of certain sexual offences outside the Falkland Islands.

Section 291 provides certain exceptions to the rules about encouraging, aiding and abetting, in order to protect people who are advising children, etc. Sections 292 and 293 define ‘consent’, and section 294 lists the acts that are relevant for the purposes of that definition.

Schedule 1 sets out the procedure for dealing with indecent photographs etc. that are ordered to be forfeited.

Schedule 2 lists the sexual offences which attract the extraterritorial jurisdiction under sections 289 and 290.

PART 11 – SEX OFFENCE ORDERS

Introduction

This Part re-enacts as part of the Crimes Ordinance Part 2 of the UK Sexual Offences Act 2003, which was applied to the Falkland Islands by the Sexual Offences Ordinance 2005 (‘SOO’), with exceptions and modifications set out in a Schedule. It provides for the creation of what is commonly known as a ‘sex offenders’ register’, though that term is not used in the Part. It also provides various types of order that can be used to protect children, young persons and vulnerable adults from sexual predators.

The Part incorporates significant changes made to the sex offenders’ notification and orders regime by the Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014 s.113. This gave effect to Schedule 5 which repealed 3 of the previous orders – the sexual offences prevention order (SOPO), the risk of sexual harm order (RSHO) and the foreign travel order. It replaced them with 2 new orders – the sexual harm prevention order (SHPO) and the sexual risk order (SRO.) Each of these orders can include a prohibition on foreign travel.

The new orders have a lower risk requirement than the previous orders and allow both orders to be used to manage risk against adults and vulnerable adults abroad, as well as children. In addition, their remit is wider, enabling, for example, foreign travel restrictions to be applied under either order. These changes address matters raised in an independent review of the existing powers carried out in the UK by Hugh Davies QC, which was published in May 2013. The aim of streamlining the orders is to provide the police and practitioners with greater clarity and flexibility.

The notification regime in the UK remains the same as before and is set out in sections 296 to 320. They impose a notification requirement on all sex offenders i.e. people convicted of any of the offences listed in Schedule 3.

Sections 321 to 331 empower courts to impose SHPOs, and sections 332 to 341 empower courts to impose SROs.

Sections 342 to 345 are miscellaneous provisions as noted below.

The Part provides that offences committed outside the Falkland Islands and committed before the commencement of the Part are to be taken into account. In addition to sentences of fines or imprisonment, community service orders for 120 hours or more, conditional discharges and cautions are to be taken into account. Absolute discharges do not count as convictions, however.

The Part provides for orders to be made on the basis of convictions outside the Falkland Islands of offences equivalent to sexual offences in the Falkland Islands, if the offender comes to the Falkland Islands to live. See e.g. section 316.

The jurisdiction scheme is that the court that convicts a person of a sex offence can make an order when convicting, but that an order on separate application of the Attorney General can only be made by the Magistrate's Court. Only the Attorney General can apply to the court for the various orders (except on conviction) and for amendment or discharge of them. The Attorney General can also apply for a parental direction.

All orders made under this Part can be the subject of applications for variation, renewal or discharge, and there can be appeals from the making of them. The appeal would go to the court that hears appeals from verdicts and sentences in the normal way.

The Part does not include transitional provisions to cover older UK laws as in the Schedule to the SOO, but it does include a saving for orders made under the 2003 Act as applied by the SOO – see section 346. The Part also applies some provisions retrospectively to 10 June 2005 which was the date of commencement of the SOO.

As well as the 2014 amendment noted above, the Part includes other amendments to the UK legislation including the Sexual Offenders (Remedial) Order 2012 which provided for a review of indefinite notification requirements. This is to comply with an ECHR decision that is binding on the UK.

There is a commentary on Part 2 of the SO Act 2003 in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 20-263 to 20-345. There is no detailed commentary on notification orders etc. but the Part follows the latest UK text of the relevant legislation.

Notes on sections

Section 295 defines various terms used in the Part that are not defined elsewhere in the Ordinance or in the IGCO. Sub-sections (3) and (4) set out rules of equivalence as between detention for young offenders and other sentences. Sub-section (5) sets out rules of equivalence in relation to mentally disordered defendants.

Sexual harm is defined to mean physical or psychological harm resulting from an offence listed in Schedule 3.

Sub-section (2) provides that time-limits for making complaints to the Magistrate's court (e.g. under s.182 of the CPEO 2014 or s. 127 of the UK Magistrates' Courts Act 1980) do not apply to complaint under this Part.

Sections 296 to 306 impose notification requirements on offenders in respect of most sexual offences committed in the Falkland Islands. They set out the requirements for notification, and what the notification must include. Notification must be given to the police after a conviction, and every year for the duration of the requirement. Notification must also be given of certain changes, and of any proposed travel outside the Falkland Islands.

Section 296 specifies as persons who are subject to notification requirements those who have been convicted of an offence listed in Schedule 4. An absolute discharge does not count as a conviction. There is a retrospective provision to the date of commencement of the SOO.

Section 297 specifies by means of a Table the period for which the notification requirement continues. The last item in the Table - 'a person of any other description' – would include someone convicted but sentenced only to community service.

Note that the term 'detained in a hospital' is used instead of 'admitted' as the Mental Health Ordinance uses the term 'detained' in Part 3.

Sections 298 to 301 specify the details that are to be given in a notification. The terms 'home address' and 'passport' are defined in section 295. No regulations prescribing additional requirements are contemplated except under Section 301(5) relating to travel outside the Falkland Islands.

Section 302 enables notification to be given at a place of lawful custody (as defined in section 2) on a form to be approved by the Governor.

Sections 303 and 304 provide that in the case of young offenders, the notification must be given by a parent, who can also apply for a variation or discharge of the order.

Section 305 makes it an offence to fail to give notification when and as required.

Section 306 is about certification. It contemplates that when dealing with a Schedule 3 offence the presiding officer will, in addition to announcing the decision of the court in the usual way at the end of a case, state that the offence is a Schedule 3 offence.

Sections 307 to 309 impose an obligation to review indefinite periods of notification as required by the ECHR.

Sections 310 and 311 are a consequence of the decriminalisation of homosexuality by the 2003 Act. They enable the Governor to make a declaration about the nature of an earlier homosexual offence which results in it not being subject to notification. There are similar provisions about rehabilitation regarding homosexual offences in sections 639 to 645 of the CPEO 2014 Ordinance.

Sections 312 to 315 relate to the supply of information to and by the Governor and to other courts.

Sections 316 to 320 provide for the making of notification orders in respect of sexual offences committed outside the Falkland Islands if the offender is in or intends to come to the Falkland Islands. They specify the grounds on which a notification order can be sought, and its effect, and provide for interim notification orders and appeals.

Sections 321 to 331 empower a court to make a sexual harm prevention order (SHPO) if the person is convicted of an offence listed in Schedule 3 or 4 and the court is satisfied that it is necessary to make such an order for the purpose of protecting youths, vulnerable people or the public or any particular members of those groups from sexual harm from the person. The order prohibits the defendant from doing anything described in the order and has effect for not less than 5 years. The only prohibitions that may be included in the order are those necessary for the purpose of protecting the protected groups or any particular members of them from sexual harm from the defendant.

Section 324 enables a court to include in a SHPO a foreign travel prohibition, prohibiting the person from travelling outside the Falkland Islands in order to prevent sexual harm being caused by the defendant doing, outside the Falkland Islands, anything which would constitute a sexual offence if done in the Falkland Islands.

Section 325 enables either party to apply for a variation, renewal or discharge of a SHPO.

Section 326 provides for the making of interim SHPOs pending a final determination on the application. These are not time limited.

Sections 332 to 341 empower a court to make a sexual risk order (SRO). The court must be satisfied that it is necessary to make the order for the purpose of protecting people generally or any particular person from physical or psychological harm caused by the defendant doing the acts mentioned.

A SHPO is made on a conviction/special verdict/finding of fact by a court for a qualifying offence as per the schedules. A SRO has a lower test (behaviour of a sexual nature but falling short of offending) which covers much wider types of behaviour.

Like a SHPO, a SRO can include a foreign travel prohibition and can be the subject of an application to vary, renew or discharge. The court can make an interim SRO.

Both types of order can be the subject of an appeal, and the Governor can issue guidance in respect of the deployment of such orders.

A person on whom a SHPO or SRO is made becomes liable to the notification requirements of sections 296 to 306.

Section 342 empowers the Governor to amend Schedule 3 or 4 and section 344 contains interpretative rules for them. In the UK Act these rules are stated in additional Schedules, but as they are rules of general application they are stated in the body of the Part. There is a presumption in section 343(3) about the age of a child.

Section 344 sets out the rules for ascertaining the date of a conviction and other matters relevant under the Schedules.

Section 345 is a saving for orders etc. made under the Sexual Offences Ordinance, as that Ordinance will be repealed by this Ordinance when it is enacted.

Schedule 3 lists the sexual offences that attract the requirements for notification. They include offences under the UK Sexual Offences Act 1956 so that persons convicted of historic offences under that Act in the Falkland Islands (or elsewhere if the court so orders) will still come under the notification requirements.

Schedule 4 lists other offences that are relevant in the context of sections 321 and 322 to determine whether a person is a ‘qualifying offender’ for the making of a SHPO. Hijacking and other UK anti-terrorism laws that apply to the Falkland Islands are included as the Schedule seeks to include all offences which show a propensity for violence towards people, particularly women and children, and which might mean that a person convicted of them could pose a sexual danger to people in the Falkland Islands.

PART 10 -THEFT AND FRAUD

Introduction

This Part enacts in Falkland Islands law the current UK law on theft and fraud contained in the Theft Act 1968, the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996, and the Fraud Act 2006, with necessary adaptations and modifications for the circumstances of the Falkland Islands. It also includes some provisions of the common law that are not in the UK Acts.

The Part also restates in modern language some ancient offences that are still law in the UK, including poaching.

The language of the UK Acts has been modernised and made gender-neutral in the Part. However, if the perpetrator or victim of an offence of theft or fraud might be a body corporate, the term ‘he or she’ is not appropriate. To avoid repeated use of the word ‘person’, the letters ‘A’ and ‘B’ are used to describe the perpetrator and the victim in many of the offences. The phrase ‘another’ is expanded to ‘another person’ except in the basic definition of theft which is well established in the criminal law.

Mortgage fraud

Section 375 uses the word ‘services’ as in section 11 of the Fraud Act 2006. The UK Court of Appeal has held that that term is wide enough to embrace professional services, commercial services and financial services. The essential condition is that the service must confer a benefit and be rendered on the basis that it has been or will be paid for. By enacting the Fraud Act using the word ‘services’ and not defining it, the UK Parliament accepted the wide meaning of the word. In the circumstances, there is no need to define the word ‘services’, leaving the prosecution to argue for the wide meaning of the term.

Obtaining a money transfer by deception

This offence was only created in the UK in 1996, by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 which added sections 15A and 15B to the Theft Act 1968. Those sections are repealed by the Fraud Act 2006 as the new wider provisions of the Fraud Act covered the lacuna in the previous Theft Acts. The Fraud Act seeks to conceptualise and generalise the offence, rather than having a number of offences relating to different types of service and different monetary transactions. Obtaining a money transfer by deception is covered in this Part, either as fraud by a false representation (section 369) or obtaining services dishonestly (section 375). In this connection, it should be noted that Section 376 defines ‘property’ to mean money or other property whether real or personal, including things in action and other intangible property.

Transnational fraud

The UK Criminal Justice Act 1993 confers extraterritorial jurisdiction in respect of a long list of offences which are mostly deception or fraud offences. This issue is dealt with in Part 2 General Principles in sections 7 to 10.

Common law conspiracy to defraud is repealed. Statutory conspiracy to commit Fraud will continue under the provisions of Part 3 on ancillary offences.

The term ‘civil partner’ is used in various places in the UK laws. The term is adopted in this Part and is defined in section 2, although formal civil partnership status cannot be conferred in the Falkland Islands.

There is a commentary on theft and fraud laws in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 21-1 to 21-415.

Notes on sections

Section 346 defines various terms used in the Part but not defined elsewhere in the Ordinance or in the IGCO.

Section 347 creates the offence of theft, which it defines as “dishonestly appropriating property belonging to another with the intention of permanently depriving the other of it.” The maximum penalty is 7 years imprisonment.

Sections 348 to 352 then define the terms used in that definition of theft.

Sections 353 to 356 create various other offences involving theft, ranging from robbery and aggravated burglary which carry a maximum sentence of 18 years, to going equipped for stealing, which carries a sentence of 3 years.

Section 357 is about theft of or from mails outside the Falkland Islands. It includes some definitions based on the UK Postal Services Act 2000.

Sections 358 to 361 create offences relating to stolen goods, including handling (receiving) and advertising rewards.

Section 358 does not create an offence but has an extraterritorial element. It says that offences in the Falkland Islands relating to stolen goods are committed in the Falkland Islands wherever the goods were stolen, if the stealing amounted to a crime in the place where they were stolen.

Note that in Section 359 the maximum penalty, following the UK law, is 14 years which is double the maximum for theft. This reflects Parliament's desire to deter the professional 'fence' so that the market for stolen goods diminishes and the incidents of theft decrease: 'without handlers there would be fewer thieves'. It should also be borne in mind that handlers receive the proceeds of burglary as well as theft; and dwelling house burglary also carries a maximum sentence of 14 years.

Section 360 is required because taking a reward and doing nothing to earn it is covered by the definition of fraud, but taking a reward with a promise that no questions will be asked is not. This section makes it an offence to advertise a reward with no questions asked (as this effectively makes one an abettor to an offence). Sub-section (2) creates an offence of taking a reward in response to an unlawful advertisement.

The power of search in section 361 is retained as it is still in the UK Theft Act and is not inconsistent with the proposed search etc. provisions in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance.

Sections 362 to 366 restate in modern terms existing offences that are similar to theft but do not amount to theft. They include taking vehicles, making off without payment and abstracting electricity.

Section 362 on taking vehicles without authority is based on s.30 of the Road Traffic Ordinance, which replaced s.12 of the Theft Act and has been repealed. The section does not include the 3-year limitation that appears in the equivalent UK provision. The reason for it in the UK is the practical difficulty of tracing a vehicle ownership etc., and does not apply in the Falkland Islands. The section extends to the taking of pedal bicycles. On a charge of theft of a vehicle, the court can convict for taking the vehicle if they are not satisfied that there was an intention to permanently deprive the owner of the vehicle.

Section 363 is a new offence of aggravated vehicle-taking. It consists of taking a vehicle and driving it dangerously, or so as to cause injury to a person or damage to property or damage to the vehicle. In other words, more than just a 'joy ride', which is covered by section 362. The test under the provision is one of driving dangerously rather than recklessly, which has been the test in the UK since 1991. The offence of reckless driving remains unchanged in the Road Traffic Ordinance, but is likely to be subject to a review of that ordinance in due course under the wider reform programme. The test for dangerous driving is lower than that of reckless driving. To commit the offence of dangerous driving the person must drive in a way that falls far below what would be expected of a competent and careful driver and it would be obvious to a competent and careful driver that driving in that way would be dangerous. A person is also to be regarded as driving dangerously if it would be obvious to a competent and careful driver that driving the vehicle in its current state would be dangerous. This is what is known as an objective test. This is to be contrasted with the higher, subjective test of the state of mind necessary for reckless driving where it has to be proved that the driver was aware of the risk of driving in such a manner and that in the circumstances known to him or her at the time it was unreasonable to take that risk.

Section 364 is the offence of removing articles from public places. This would include a person removing an item from e.g. a public museum. Dishonesty but not an intention to permanently deprive must be proved; the offence is to 'remove' rather than to 'steal'. This offence also covers the difficulties with proving a burglary where a building or part of a building is open to the general public and the requisite act of trespass cannot necessarily be proved.

Section 365 is the offence of making off without payment. This covers a person who has a job done but refuses to pay for it, or orders goods and doesn't pay for them, neither of which is covered by the definition of theft. (See section 375 for the offence of obtaining services dishonestly.)

Section 366 is the offence of abstracting electricity and means that a person who uses electricity without authority, or dishonestly causes electricity to be wasted or diverted, commits an offence.

Section 367 restates the existing offence of blackmail based on s.21 of the Theft Act 1968. The offence is committed by a person who, with a view to gain or to cause loss to another, makes unwarranted demands with menaces relating to action by any person.

Fraud offences

Sections 368 to 377 deal with the offence of fraud and are based on the UK Fraud Act 2006. They set out the various ways in which fraud can be committed. All of them require the intention to make a gain or cause a loss.

The aim of these sections is to conceptualise and generalise the offence, rather than having a number of offences relating to different types of service and different monetary transactions as at present.

Section 369 says that fraud by misrepresentation requires a dishonest false representation of fact or law, express or implied.

Section 370 says that fraud by failing to disclose information requires a failure to disclose information the person has a duty to disclose.

Section 371 says that fraud by abuse of position requires dishonest abuse (by act or omission) of a position the person holds in which he or she is expected to safeguard the financial interests of another person.

Section 372 creates the offence of possession of articles for use in fraud.

Section 373 creates the offence of making or supplying articles for use in frauds.

Section 374 creates the offence of participating in a fraudulent business carried on by a sole trader, i.e. a company outside the scope of the Companies Acts. It is in addition to the powers of investigation of fraudulent conduct under the UK Companies Act 1948 as applied to the Falkland Islands. Note – the Companies Act 1948 has been replaced in UK by the Companies Act 2006.

Section 375 creates the offence of obtaining services dishonestly, i.e. without making payment and not intending to pay. (This differs from the offence of making off without payment in section 365). See notes above about mortgage fraud and obtaining by deception.

Section 376 defines the terms “gain”, “loss”, “property” and “article” as used in the preceding sections.

Section 377 is about evidence in proceedings relating to any of sections 369 to 376. A person is not excused from answering questions or complying with an order about property on the ground that to do so might incriminate him or his spouse; but a statement or admission made by the person is not admissible against him or his spouse in a prosecution for fraud.

Sections 378 to 381 create four offences that are similar to fraud – false accounting, false statements by company directors, suppression of documents and retaining a wrongful credit.

The definition of ‘wrongful credit’ in section 381 does not cover money credited to an account in error, because keeping money paid by mistake amounts to theft. The reason for this offence is that the ‘owner’ of the money cannot rightfully claim it. If there is a rightful owner, the money must be returned or the recipient dishonestly appropriates property belonging to another i.e. commits theft.

Section 382 puts into statutory form the common law offence of cheating the public revenue, which dates back to the reign of Edward III. For the English case law see Archbold para.25-409.

Section 383 restates an offence in the previous Crimes Ordinance about unlawful interception of communications, whether by post or wireless telegraphy. It originates from section 1 of the UK Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. See also section 412 for a similar offence in relation to computer services.

Sections 384 and 385 are miscellaneous provisions relating to procedure and evidence and the effect of a prosecution on civil proceedings.

PART 13 - FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING

Introduction

Forgery and counterfeiting (coinage offences) were formerly covered by separate UK enactments - the Forgery Act 1913 and the Coinage Offences Act 1931. Both those Acts were repealed and replaced by the UK Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 and this Part is based on that Act. The Part contains three groups of offences – forgery in sections 387 to 395, counterfeiting (including counterfeiting of currency notes) in sections 396 to 403, and offences in relation to identity documents, based on the UK Identity Documents Act 2010 – see sections 404 to 407.

Terms used in the sections creating the offences of forgery are defined before the offences are created. The definition of forgery does not extend to currency notes, as those come under the offence of counterfeiting. However, counterfeiting includes coinage offences. References to the Commissioners of Currency are replaced by the relevant authority empowered to issue notes or coins. This includes authorities in places other than the Falkland Islands. Euros are covered by para. (b) of the definition of ‘currency note’ as they are issued in countries outside the UK and the Falkland Islands and used as legal tender in those countries.

The penalties in relation to all 3 groups are set out in each section, unlike in the UK where they are grouped together in sections 6 and 22 of the 1981 Act.

The police powers provisions in the CPEO 2014 confer search and seizure powers in relation to offences under this Part. No powers of arrest without warrant are included as they are in the CPEO 2014. The deprivation provisions in section 617 of that Ordinance will also apply. The specific powers in the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 are not therefore required.

There is a commentary on the relevant UK law in Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 25-300 to 25-319.

Notes on sections

Section 386 contains definitions that apply to the whole Part, including ‘relevant authority’ and ‘postal operator’. The UK Act references to ‘British coin’ are replaced by ‘protected coin’. The references to ‘British currency note’ are replaced by ‘currency note.’ This includes pounds sterling and Falkland Islands notes issued under the Currency Ordinance. The definition of ‘share certificate’ includes bodies incorporated outside the Falkland Islands.

Sections 387 to 394 are the forgery offences.

Section 387 defines ‘instrument’. It includes ‘revenue stamp’ so as to include e.g. customs stamps. The term ‘document’ is not defined and remains ambiguous, as in the UK Act

Section 390 defines forgery as being committed by a person (‘A’) who makes a false instrument with the intention that he or another (‘B’) will use it to induce a further person (‘C’) to accept it as genuine and thus do something to the prejudice of C or someone else (‘D.’) This can involve 4 different persons, but is the best way to express the offence.

Sections 391 to 393 create offences relating to ‘instruments’. The instruments include money orders, postage stamps, passports, ID cards, cheques, credit and debit cards and entries in the register of births, marriages and deaths.

The offences are –

- having a false version of an instrument with the intention as in the offence of forgery;
- having a false instrument knowing it to be false (with no specific intention);
- making or having equipment intended for making a false instrument with the intention as in the offence of forgery;

- making or having equipment specially designed or adapted to make these type of instruments without lawful authority.

Section 395 abolishes the offence of forgery at common law. Arguably that is not needed as the 1981 Act (which applies to the Falkland Islands) has achieved that result already, but the section is included for the avoidance of doubt. The common law offence of cheating was abolished by the UK Theft Act 1978 except in relation to revenue offences; see section 383 for a statutory offence. The common law offence of personation is now limited to jurors and is sufficiently covered by section 338 of the CPEO 2014.

Sections 396 to 403 are the counterfeiting offences.

Section 396 creates 2 offences of making a counterfeit of a currency note or protected coin. The first offence is if a person intends that he or another will pass or tender it as genuine. The other, and lesser, offence consists of the making without any specific intention.

Section 397 also creates 2 offences – passing or tendering a counterfeit note or coin with the intention mentioned in section 396; and delivering a counterfeit note or coin to someone, intending that he will pass or tender it as genuine.

Section 398 creates 2 more offences – having custody or control of a counterfeit note or coin with the intention mentioned in section 396; and having such custody or control without that intention.

Section 399 creates 3 offences –

- making or having custody of a thing intended for making a counterfeit note or coin, with the intention of passing the note or coin as genuine;
- making or having such a thing without that intention;
- making or having custody of an implement capable of giving anything the appearance of a protected coin.

Making and having in possession are separate offences in each subsection. This puts the prosecution to its election as to which offence to charge but is more consistent than the UK text (section 17) which differs in each subsection.

Section 400 defines ‘counterfeit’ for the purpose of these offences. It means a false note or coin that resembles a genuine note or coin so that it is reasonably capable of passing as a genuine note or coin; or a note or coin altered to resemble another note or coin (e.g. of a higher denomination.)

Section 401 creates the offence of reproducing currency notes without authority. It is altered from the UK text to make it clear that the absence of consent is part of the offence, and that the offence applies to reproduction on any substance and whether or not on the right scale, as in an advertisement.

Section 402 creates 2 offences relating to imitation coins used in a scheme to promote the sale of a product or the supply of services. One offence is of making a coin; the other is of selling or distributing or having them in one's custody.

Section 403 combines and adapts two sections of the UK Act and creates the offences of importing or exporting counterfeit notes and coins without the consent of the relevant authority. The offences are punishable by 2 years' imprisonment, and the importation is prohibited. See section 143 of the Customs and Excise Ordinance enabling the Governor to make orders prohibiting the import of goods. See also the proclamations made under section 35 of the previous Customs Ordinance which were saved by s.163 (4) of the Customs and Excise Ordinance.

Sections 404 to 406 create 3 offences in relation to identity documents. They are based on the UK Identity Documents Act 2010 which replaced the Identity Cards Act 2006 when the government abandoned the policy to introduce identity cards for UK citizens. The offences in relation to identity documents remained essentially unchanged, but referring to 'personal information' rather than 'registrable details'.

Section 407 contains definitions and other supplementary provisions in relation to identity documents offences.

PART 14 - COMPUTER MISUSE

Introduction

This Part contains provisions designed to combat computer related crime or 'cybercrime'. It criminalises various forms of computer abuse, unauthorised access to computer data and other attacks against information systems. Some of the provisions are based on the UK Computer Misuse Act 1990 as amended by the Police and Justice Act 2006. The Part therefore incorporates sections 1 to 10 and 17 of the Computer Misuse Act 1990 with appropriate modifications. Other sections of the Act are not relevant to the Falkland Islands.

Other provisions are not in UK statute but are based on the Gibraltar and St Helena versions of this Part and are designed to implement the 2001 Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime (which applies to Gibraltar as an EU territory, but not to the Falkland Islands as the Convention has not yet been extended to British Overseas Territories.) The UK has not enacted legislation to fully implement the Convention, but provisions about interception evidence in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (which is not in force in the Falkland Islands) pre-date the Convention. The RIPA provisions are exceptionally complex, bureaucratic and not really suitable in the Falklands context. The FCO legal advisers have seen the Gibraltar version of this Part and, for human rights reasons, requested amendments, which have been incorporated.

An offence under this Part requires a person to act intentionally or knowingly or recklessly as to whether the unauthorised actions taken causes harm to another person. The offences under sections 409 to 414 can be committed anywhere, by any person, using any internet provider, subject to section 415 about territorial scope. The offence under section 409 involves direct interference with a computer based in the Falkland Islands, whereas the offences under sections 410 to 414 can involve indirect interference with or use of a computer or system wherever based.

Seizure of computerised information is also provided for in the CPEO 2014, but this Part gives more explicit powers of search and seizure of computer data.

There is a commentary on the 1990 Act at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras.23-97 to 23-101. That work does not deal with the requirements of the EU Convention.

Notes on sections

Section 408 defines certain terms used in the Part. It does not define ‘computer’ or ‘program’ in order to avoid the need for amendments as technology advances. Some of the defining provisions (limiting the scope of some of the offences) are from the RIPA.

Section 409 makes it an offence for a person knowingly to have unauthorised access to any program or data held in a computer.

Section 410 makes it an offence for a person to access a computer program or data with intent to commit or facilitate the commission of another offence which carries a life sentence or a sentence of at least 5 years imprisonment.

Section 411 makes it an offence for a person to do an act, whether temporary or permanent, which the person knows will cause an impairment of the operation of a computer or any program or data held in a computer or an impairment of the reliability or the authenticity of any such data.

Section 412 makes it an offence for a person knowingly to intercept any non-public transmission from a computer without authority. For a general offence of interception communications see section 384.

Section 413 makes it an offence for any person to produce, sell or procure for use any device, program or data which is designed or adapted with the intention that it should be used to commit any other offence under the Part.

Section 414 makes it an offence for any person, knowingly and without authority, to disclose any password or access code of a computer that is capable of being accessed, with the intention that it be used by any person for the purpose of committing an offence.

Sections 415 to 419 provide for the territorial scope of offences under the Part and ancillary offences related to such offences. It is irrelevant whether the offender has Falkland Islands status, provided the person or the computer was in the Falkland Islands at the material time. The word ‘criminal’ used in section 418(3) is not in the UK Act but makes it clear that civil penalties do not make the conduct an offence.

Section 418(4) contemplates criminal procedure rules being made as to service of notices.

Section 419 empowers a justice of the peace to issue a search warrant to a police officer, who, upon executing it, may seize any computer or computer program or data if the officer believes it is evidence that an offence has been committed or is about to be committed.

Section 420 empowers a justice of the peace to issue a warrant to a police officer to have access to any computer, or any program or data held in any computer, and to require any person concerned to assist the officer in the investigations. It is not limited to offences under this Part.

Section 421 requires the police officer to make and deliver to the person in charge of a computer a record of the seized articles. This duty is not in the UK Act or the EU Convention but is regarded as desirable.

Sections 422 enables the Chief Police Officer to issue a written order requiring the preservation of data if data stored in a computer is required for the purposes of a criminal investigation; and if there is a risk that the data may be destroyed or rendered inaccessible or modified.

Section 423 empowers a justice of the peace, on the application of the Attorney General, to issue an order requiring a person in charge or in control of data, or an internet service provider, to collect and record traffic data or permit and assist any named person with appropriate technical knowledge and expertise to collect and record the data.

Sections 424 to 426 empower a justice of the peace, on the application of the Attorney General, to order production of data required for the purpose of a criminal investigation or criminal proceedings; to authorise a police officer to collect or record traffic data associated with a specified communication during a specified period if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that traffic data is required for the purposes of a criminal investigation; and to order internet service providers to intercept electronic communications and data traffic where necessary for criminal investigations.

Section 427 makes it an offence for an internet provider to disclose the fact that the powers under sections 424 to 426 have been used, or any information given by the provider in response to a notice or order under those powers. An internet provider is not liable for the disclosure of any information given in response to such a notice or order.

Section 428 makes it clear that other powers of inspection, search and seizure are not displaced by this Part and that a withholding of consent device in a computer program does not operate to bar access to an enforcement officer.

Section 429 makes it an offence for a corporate body to benefit from the commission of an offence under sections 409 to 414, whether or not the person who committed the offence was acting as an agent of the body. This is wider than the normal rule stated in section 17 (i.e. if an offence is committed by a corporate body with the consent or connivance of a director, the director as well as the corporate body commits the offence.)

Section 430 empowers a court to order the forfeiture of a computer and other articles used in connection with an offence.

Section 431 enables a court to make an order for payment of compensation by the offender to any person for damage caused to that person's computer or any program or data held in the computer. This power is in addition to the general compensation provisions in the CPEO 2014.

Section 432 creates an offence of unauthorised disclosure of information obtained during the course of an investigation or of information received from the competent authorities of another country or territory” for the purposes of or to assist in the investigation of offences.

Section 433 enables the Governor to issue one or more codes of practice relating to the exercise and performance of the powers and duties under this Part. This is included to meet objections to the powers of interception that were raised by FCO legal advisors on human rights grounds in relation to the Gibraltar version of this Part. There is a similar power in s.71 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

PART 15 - COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS

Introduction

This Part re-enacts in local statute the provisions of some old ‘imperial enactments’ (UK laws) that apply to the Falkland Islands and are still law in the UK. The offences relate to illegal practices at or in relation to auctions, and unsolicited goods and services.

The auction offences are based on the Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Acts 1927 and 1969 and the Mock Auctions Act 1961. The other offences are based on the Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971.

Section 5 of the 1971 Act (unsolicited goods etc.) is included in Part 25 as it relates to publications containing sexual images. Section 8 is not included as it imposes unnecessarily complex rules about the format of invoices etc.

These offences are not dealt with in Archbold as they are only summary offences in the UK.

Notes on sections

Section 434 creates offences of ‘fixing’ prices at auction sales.

Section 435 enables a court to make an order prohibiting a person convicted of an offence of fixing prices from attending auctions.

Section 436 asserts the rights of seller in good faith of goods by auction

Section 437 says what notices are to be displayed in an auction room.

Section 438 makes it an offence to conduct a mock auction, i.e. where the bidding is not genuine.

Section 439 contains interpretative provisions about mock auctions.

Section 440 makes it an offence to demand payment for goods that have not been ordered.

Section 441 makes it an offence to demand payment for entries in a trade directory that have not been asked for.

CHAPTER 3 - CRIMES AGAINST THE GENERAL PUBLIC

PART 16 - TREASON

Introduction

This Part codifies the English statute law and common law on treason as applied to the Falkland Islands. The offences include treason itself, treasonable offences (formerly called treason felonies) and assaults on the Queen. They are all governed by ancient statutes dating back to the Treason Act of 1351. Note the inclusion of Crown dependencies in the list of entities protected by the legislation. They are also included in the definition of ‘national security’ in the CPEO 2014.

The extension of the offence of treason to include protection for the immediate family of the Queen and high officers of state is based on the Treason Act 1351 which is still on the UK statute book.

The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 abolished the death penalty for all Treason Acts offences but did not mention the 1351 Act which is slightly odd. It is reasonable to assume that Parliament’s intention was to provide for a mandatory life sentence for treason itself and that is reflected in section 442.

Notes on sections

Sections 442 and 443 create offences for which the penalty is life imprisonment. In the case of a section 442 offence the life sentence is mandatory but subject to the rules about imprisonment of youths in section 730 of the CPEO 2014 and the minimum tariff provisions in section 577 of that Ordinance. These offences are indictment-only.

Section 442 includes the immediate family of the Queen, as provided by the Treason Act 1351. It also includes the killing (i.e. murder) of high officers of state as provided in that Act. The equivalent of ‘Treasurer’ could be the First Lord of the Treasury, or the Chancellor of the Exchequer. It seems appropriate to protect the former, as being also the Prime Minister of the UK.

Section 444 imposes a time limit of 3 years for prosecutions for treason except for treason involving killing or endangering life.

Section 445 creates an offence of assault on the Queen for which the maximum penalty is 7 years imprisonment and which can be tried summarily.

PART 17 – SECURITY

Introduction

This Part combines various provisions about the armed forces and the police and other public services as they are few in number and relate to similar issues. Several of the offences are in the previous Crimes Ordinance, which is now repealed. Some are from the Police Ordinance and those sections are also be repealed. The offence of assault on the police is at section 72 in Part 4 where it comes next to assaults to resist arrest.

Note that under section 9 of the Police Ordinance reserve police officers are part of the police force so the provisions of this Part (as of other Parts of the Ordinance and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance) will apply to them.

Notes on sections

Sections 446 to 450 relate to the armed forces of the Crown and are based on various UK statutes.

Section 446 makes it an offence to incite disaffection among members of the armed forces.

Section 447 makes it an offence to assist the desertion of a member of the armed forces.

Section 448 prohibits wearing a Crown uniform in such a manner as to bring contempt on the uniform.

Section 449 re-enacts an old offence that is still law in the UK and applies to the Falkland Islands. It prohibits unlawful drilling i.e. training or being trained in the use of arms, doing military exercises, etc., without the authority of the Governor.

Sections 450 to 452 relate to the police force and reproduce provisions based on the UK Police Act 1996.

Section 450 makes it an offence to incite disaffection among police officers.

Section 451 makes it an offence to obstruct a police officer in the performance of his or her duty, or to obstruct anyone assisting the police.

Section 452 creates offences relating to impersonating a police, customs or immigration officer. The section heading is 'Impersonation' (as in the UK law) but the offence is of pretending to be any such officer. Sub-section (1) requires a general intent to deceive, while (2) requires a specific intent to obtain a benefit. The term 'likely' to deceive is used rather than 'calculated' as that begs the question of who is calculating. The reverse onus of proof is acceptable in this context.

Sections 453 to 456 re-enact provisions in the previous Crimes Ordinance relating to escapes from custody derived from the common law and the Prison Act 1952 but rationalised and aligned to UK law.

Section 453 creates the offence of escaping. Under the Crimes Ordinance the penalty for a prisoner escaping without using violence is 12 months whereas the penalty for a person assisting the prisoner to escape is 5 years. This seems anomalous and the penalty is therefore amended to 5 years for both.

Sub-section (2) deals with a custodian of a prisoner negligently permitting a prisoner to escape. The original wording from common law and the Crimes Ordinance is 'voluntarily or negligently allows' a person to escape. However to voluntarily allow requires a positive act and would come under the more serious provision of OS10 with the higher penalty. The word 'voluntarily' is therefore omitted, so only negligent acts and omissions are included in this section.

Section 454 creates the offence of encouraging, aiding and abetting or assisting escape. The penalties are higher than they would be for an ancillary offence under Part 3, but persons cannot be prosecuted both under this section and Part 3.

Section 455 defines the term 'legal custody' and says that if an offence is committed using violence, the penalty is double i.e. 10 years imprisonment.

Section 456 is the offence of harbouring, which is the most serious offence related to escapes, carrying 10 years imprisonment. It comes from the UK Criminal Justice Act 1961.

Section 457 combines 3 offences of raising a false fire alarm, wasting police time, and calling out an ambulance, etc. that were in the previous Crimes Ordinance.

PART 18 - JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Introduction

This Part deals with offences relating to the courts, including intimidation etc of witnesses, jurors and others and contempt of court. The topic overlaps to some extent with provisions in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance about reporting of court cases, vulnerable witnesses etc. but does not conflict with provisions of that Ordinance.

The contempt of court provisions are based on the common law and on the UK Contempt of Court Act 1981. That Act was expressly adopted by the Falkland Islands legislature by the Contempt of Court Ordinance of 1996. It was stated to be "To amend the law relating to contempt of court and related matters and in particular so as to bring the law of contempt into line with articles 6 and 10 of the Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, signed in Rome on 4th November 1950, and for that purpose to apply the provisions of the Contempt of Court Act 1981 to the Falkland Islands." This Part has the same effect, and the Ordinance will be repealed on commencement.

Other provisions are based on a variety of UK statutes. There is a provision about intimidation of jurors and witnesses in the previous Crimes Ordinance, section 50 which is now repealed.

The contempt of court provisions extend to the Court of Appeal, Supreme Court, Magistrate's Court and Summary Court, but not to the Coroner's Court which will be provided for in separate legislation.

The Part puts onto a statutory footing the common law offences of perverting the course of justice as well as concealment of evidence and intimidation of jurors.

For perjury and other offences in connection with judicial proceedings, see Part 19.

The term 'judicial proceeding' is defined in section 2.

Archbold's commentary on these offences is at Part 28. There are also offences of wasting police time etc. which can be included if desired.

Notes on sections

Section 458 imposes restrictions on the reporting of divorce and similar proceedings. The UK provision on which this is based, section 1 of the Criminal Justice Act 1925, was repealed in the UK in 1948 but in the local circumstances could still be appropriate in a modified form.

Section 459 prohibits the publication of information relating to proceedings before a court sitting in private if the proceedings relate to the welfare of children, the property of mental patients, national security (defined in section 2 to include the Falkland Islands, UK, other British Overseas Territories and the Crown dependencies) or a secret process, discovery or invention.

Section 460 is a saving for provisions of the CPEO 2014 relating to the reporting of sending proceedings, judicial proceedings which involve vulnerable witnesses and judicial proceedings which involve young offenders. It provides that an offence under any of those provisions committed in the face of the court may, instead of being prosecuted under those provisions, be treated as a contempt of court under this Part. The section also saves the contempt of court provision in section 691 of that Ordinance which relates to reporting of retrials.

Section 461 about taking of photographs etc. in court is still the law in the UK and is still appropriate in the Falkland Islands. The prohibition is only on photos etc. of people, not of the courtroom or precincts as such.

Section 462 sets out in statutory form the common law offence of perverting the course of justice. This is still a widely used offence in the UK. The offence is the doing of some act which has a tendency to and is intended to pervert the administration of public justice. The commonly used expression 'attempting to pervert' is a misnomer and is misleading as this is not an inchoate offence.

Section 463 on intimidation is based on section 51 of the UK Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. It is about jurors as well as witnesses. This offence was in the previous Crimes Ordinance at s.50 which specified a fine at level 10, but it is not necessary as the court has power to fine under section 589 of the CPEO 2014.

Sections 464 to 471 set out in statutory form the law on contempt of court, including (but not limited to) the provisions of the UK Contempt of Court Act 1981 mentioned above.

Section 464 makes the common law offence of contempt of the superior courts a statutory offence. It does not seek to define the offence, however, as there are many ways in which it can be committed and the UK case law will need to be relied on. The UK Act does not make contempt an offence, but this section does so.

Section 465 provides that the strict liability rule (that conduct may be treated as tending to interfere with the course of justice in particular legal proceedings regardless of intent to do so) only applies to publications.

Section 466 declares it a contempt of court to obtain, disclose or solicit any particulars of statements made, opinions expressed, arguments advanced or votes cast by members of a jury in the course of their deliberations in any legal proceedings.

Section 467 declares it a contempt of court to use in court, or bring into court for use, any tape recorder or other instrument for recording sound, except with the leave of the court.

Section 468 gives the lower courts jurisdiction to deal with some types of contempt, i.e. insulting the court, witnesses, officers or legal practitioners, interrupting the proceedings of the court or otherwise misbehaving in court. The lower courts can also deal with persons who are in breach of sections 466 and 467 or who publish reports of proceedings contrary to the provisions in the CPEO 2014 listed in section 460.

Section 469 sets the maximum penalty for contempt of court as 2 years imprisonment or a fine in the Supreme Court or Court of Appeal or one month's imprisonment or a fine at level 4 in the Magistrates' Court. It also contains procedural rules.

Section 470 describes the times during which proceedings are active for the purposes of contempt of court.

Section 471 contains supplementary provisions about sources of information, etc.

PART 19 – PERJURY, ETC.

Introduction

This Part is based on the UK Perjury Act 1911 but includes provisions from the Criminal Justice Act 1967. The Perjury Act has not been amended much since it was enacted but the context of its provisions has changed and so have some of the penalties, as reflected in this Part. The Part does not include the provisions of section 7 of the Perjury Act on aiders and abettors as they are dealt with in Part 3 (Ancillary Offences). However, the offence of subornation of perjury is included as section 475. The Part does not include section 8 of the Perjury Act on venue, which is not needed in the Falkland Islands.

The offences of perjury (section 473), making a false statement on oath (section 479) and false statements as to births and deaths (section 481) are triable summarily, unlike the UK where they are triable on indictment only. The penalties are the same as in the UK, however.

The time limit for a prosecution in s.4 of the Perjury Act is not included as the offences are imprisonable so there is no time limit under s.182 of the CPEO 2014.

Notes on sections

Section 472 defines various terms, but not terms defined in the IGCO such as 'oath'. The term 'judicial proceedings' is defined in section 2.

Section 473 creates the offence of perjury. It omits any mention of a 'British tribunal' but retains the reference to a British officer and the Admiralty court. The reference to 'Her Majesty's dominions' will include all countries of which Her Majesty is Head of State. (See section 443 in Part 16 (Treason Offences) for a similar usage.)

Section 474 is about perjury before the European Court. It is based on the UK European Communities Act 1972. It is needed because the European Treaties apply to the Falkland Islands, although it will probably rarely be needed.

Section 475 creates the offence of subornation of perjury in respect of the offences equivalent to sections 1 to 6 of the Perjury Act. The maximum penalty is set at 14 years imprisonment, making the offence a summary one, rather than being the same as for the substantive offence (as in the UK). Otherwise some subornation offences would be indictment-only and others would be summary.

Section 476, about giving false unsworn evidence, derives from section 57 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. It is appropriate in this Part as it deals with false statements rather than the protection of witnesses. Section 56 of the 1999 Act about unsworn testimony of a child witness is in section 352 of the CPEO 2014.

Section 477 is about false written statements tendered in evidence.

Section 478 creates an offence relating to unsworn statements made under the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975 (which applies to the Falkland Islands). It derives from section 1A of the Perjury Act which was added by the 1975 Act.

Section 479 creates an offence about false statements on oath but not in judicial proceedings. The Bills of Sale Act 1978 is still law for the Falkland Islands.

Section 480 creates an offence about false statements with reference to marriage.

Section 481 creates an offence about false statements relating to births and deaths. There is no time-limit for prosecuting this offence, as in the UK.

Section 482 is concerned with false statutory declarations and certain other statements, including statements made for the purposes of or in connection with civil proceedings. The term 'statutory declaration' is defined in the IGCO.

Section 483 expands the offence about false written statements to include statements made for the purpose of or in connection with (but not in) civil proceedings.

Section 484 about passports is not in the Perjury Act but is in the UK Criminal Justice Act 1925.

Section 485 about nationality declarations is not in the Perjury Act, but is in the British Nationality Act 1981.

Section 486 imposes a requirement for corroboration in respect of all offences under this Part. This is an extension of the rule in s.13 of the Perjury Act.

Section 487 provides that on a prosecution for perjury in relation to the trial of an indictment, the fact of the former trial may be proved by the production of a certificate containing the substance and effect of the indictment.

Section 488 relates to the form of an information or charge for perjury and is still in the Perjury Act. (There will not be indictments for these offences as they are triable summarily.)

Section 489 is a saving for corrupt practice offences. It is still in the Perjury Act and is currently the law in the Falkland Islands. The reference in the Perjury Act to forfeiture or disqualification is not included as it is outdated.

PART 20 - BRIBERY AND PUBLIC OFFICE OFFENCES

Introduction

This Part is based on the UK Bribery Act 2010 and on common law. It replaces the common law offence of bribery and creates a number of new offences of bribery. It replaces laws about corrupt practices, which are now limited to elections and are controlled by electoral law.

The Part replaces the offences under the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act 1889, the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 and the Prevention of Corruption Act 1916 with two general offences covering the offer, promise and giving of an advantage or the request, agreeing to receive or acceptance of an advantage. The formulation of these two offences abandons the agent/principal relationship in favour of a model based on an intention to induce improper conduct.

The Part also creates a discrete offence of bribery of a foreign public official and a new offence of negligent failure of commercial organisations to prevent bribery.

In the Part, the person offering a bribe is referred to as ‘P’ and the person receiving a bribe is referred to as ‘R’.

The maximum penalties are high – 10 years imprisonment for an individual and an unlimited fine for a corporation.

The Part abolishes embracery but puts on a statutory footing the common law offence of misconduct in public office.

The offence of bribery is dealt with in Archbold at Part 31. Misconduct in public office is at para.25-403.

Notes on sections

Section 490 creates the offence of bribing another person. The Bribery Act states the maximum penalty as 10 years imprisonment or a fine or both, but the fine does not need stating in Falkland Islands as section 589 of the CPEO 2014 gives power to fine in addition.

Section 491 creates the offence of being bribed.

Section 492 sets out the function or activity to which a bribe might relate.

Section 493 sets out the improper performance to which a bribe might relate.

Section 494 introduces an expectation test.

Section 495 creates the offence of bribery of foreign public officials as required by the EU Convention on Corruption and the OECD Convention on anti-bribery.

Section 496 creates the offence of failure of a commercial organisation to prevent bribery.

Section 497 defines “associated person”.

Section 498 empowers the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to issue guidance about commercial organisations and the prevention of bribery.

Section 499 puts on a statutory footing the common law offence of misconduct in public office. It would include e.g. sale of an office and failure to perform an office. The definition of ‘public officer’ in the IGCO is “any person holding an office or emolument under the Crown in right of the Government of the Falkland Islands, whether such office be permanent or temporary.” So the offence would extend to judicial officers.

As this was a common law offence the maximum penalty was not fixed, but in this section a maximum penalty of 14 years is specified. The offending behaviour can vary widely in complexity and seriousness and this penalty gives the court a full range of sentencing powers. The leading case on this offence in the UK is Attorney General’s Reference No. 30 of 2010 [2010] EWCA Crim 2261. The Court of Appeal ruled that the original sentence of 3 years imprisonment was unduly lenient and increased it to 6 years. The Court held that misconduct in public office can be committed in very varied circumstances. The gravity of the offence will vary enormously but offences involving serving public officials misusing access to confidential records; provision of long term intelligence to criminals; the receiving of any incentive; and impact on police operations will all be seriously aggravating features. The suggested maximum penalty will give the court wide discretion in dealing with such cases.

Section 500 requires the Attorney General’s consent for a prosecution under the Part.

Section 501 establishes limited extraterritorial scope for offences of bribery.

Section 502 creates a defence of legitimate purpose relating to the security services and the armed forces.

Sections 503 and 504 create special rules about offences committed by corporations and partnerships.

Section 505 applies the Part to servants of the Crown. This section is strictly speaking not needed as the Ordinance will be stated to bind the Crown, but it makes it clear that public servants are liable for bribery offences.

Section 506 abolishes the common law offences of bribery and embracery.

PART 21 - PUBLIC ORDER

Introduction

There is no separate Falkland Islands law on the subject of public order (except one section of the previous Crimes Ordinance), but there are various UK laws which apply to the Falkland Islands and which are intended to maintain public order and to prevent breaches of the peace. This Part brings those laws together.

The Falkland Islands Constitution provides for freedom of assembly (section 14), but the freedom can be made subject to restrictions in the interests of defence, internal security, public safety, public order, public morality or public health, to protect the rights and freedoms of other persons. This balance is achieved in the UK by the Public Order Act 1986, as amended, most of which applies to the Falkland Islands.

This Part incorporates provisions of the Public Order Act 1986, as amended, dealing with riot and violent disorder, affray, threatening and abusive behaviour and disorderly conduct. It also includes provisions on disguises, bomb hoaxes and military uniforms, and ends with a miscellaneous group of offences concerned with breaches of the peace, some of which are quite old but are still English law.

Section 45 of the previous Crimes Ordinance on disorderly behaviour is incorporated at section 525.

Sections 4A and 5 of the UK Public Order Act 1986, which refer to behaviour that can cause harassment, alarm or distress, are included in this Part rather than in Part 6 as they amount to disorderly conduct with harassment being one of three possible outcomes, rather than harassing behaviour itself.

Provisions relating to offensive weapons, explosive substances and criminal trespass are also dealt with separately in the Ordinance – see Parts 7, 8 and 24 respectively.

Racially or religiously aggravated public order offences as in sections 18 to 29 of the UK Public Order Act 1986 and the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 are dealt with in Part 22.

The Part does not include protection of animal research organisations (Archbold para. 29-72), as there is no such organisation in the Falkland Islands.

The Part does not include the common law offences of defamatory libel or blasphemous libel, as they are virtually extinct and are not appropriate in the Falkland Islands.

The Part does not include a power of arrest without warrant for public order offences. This power, reflecting the provisions of the UK Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, is contained in the CPEO 2014.

Provisions of the UK Acts which require the Secretary of State to approve e.g. a direction by the Chief Police Officer are replaced by a similar power for the Governor.

The Part contemplates that regulations will be made by the Governor under section 786 of the CPEO 2014 about disposal of seized vehicles etc. See also s.90 of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance on this point.

The Part does not affect the power of the Governor to make Emergency Regulations under the UK Emergency Powers Acts.

There is a commentary on the Public Order Act at Archbold 2013 Ed. paras. 29-1 to 29-71.

The summary offences are not covered by that work but are considered in Archbold: Magistrates' Courts Criminal Practice.

Notes on sections

Sections 508 to 513 re-enact the offences of riot, affray, etc. contained in sections 1 to 6 of the Public Order Act 1986. Section 516 abolishes common law riot, etc. as a consequence.

Section 512 (intentionally abusive behaviour) and section 513 (disorderly conduct) and are based on sections 4A and 5 of the UK POA 1986 as amended in 2013. The term 'insulting' was removed from section 5 of the POA 1986 by the UK Crime and Courts Act 2013.

Section 512 makes it an offence for a person, with intent to cause harassment, alarm or distress, to use threatening abusive or insulting words or behaviour or disorderly behaviour, or to display any writing or sign which is threatening abusive or insulting, where the conduct causes another person harassment, alarm or distress.

Section 513 creates a similar but less serious offence where no intent as to the effect upon the victim is required but still proscribes behaviour which is threatening or abusive even if its effect was unintentional. The word 'insulting' was removed from the UK version of this section by the Crime and Courts Act 2013 because of the lack of intent as to consequence required for the commission of the offence.

The defence of reasonableness applies to both the intentional and the basic offence.

Section 514 specifies the mental element involved in each of the offences.

Sections 517 and 518 regulate the wearing of disguises and the wearing of uniforms, as in the 1994 Act.

Section 519 enacts in Falkland Islands law the offence of contamination of or interference with goods which is in the 1986 Act.

Section 520 enacts the offence of causing public alarm or anxiety by bomb hoaxes which is in the Criminal Law Act 1977. The UK Criminal Justice Act 1991 amendment was disapplied so the penalties are as in the 1977 Act.

Sections 521 and 522 relate to quasi-military organisations and are based on provisions in the UK Public Order Act 1936 which are still law in England and Wales.

Section 523 prohibits conduct likely to cause a breach of the peace, and saves the common law offence.

Section 524 is derived from section 29 of the UK Town Police Clauses Act 1847 which was disapplied to the Falkland Islands. The offence of disorderly conduct in a police station (or “place of lawful custody” as defined in section 2) is a useful offence and, despite its age, is still used widely in the UK to deal with minor but disruptive behaviour committed by persons under arrest (or their supporters) whilst detained, but falling short of a full public order offence.

Section 525 prohibits disorderly or indecent behaviour while intoxicated and is based on section 91 of the Criminal Justice Act 1967. Other offences relating to drunkenness are in the Licensing Ordinance; see also section 81 about being drunk in charge of a child.

PART 22 – HATE CRIMES

Introductory

This Part creates a number of offences relating to the expression of hatred or hostility based upon a person’s perceived race, religion or sexual orientation. In the UK they are collectively referred to as Hate Crimes. They are similar to public order offences as the purpose of the legislation is to prevent public displays of discriminatory abuse which might lead to public disturbances. The legislation also marks public disapproval of such behaviour by an increase in the penalties for the commission of various types of offences motivated by such hatred.

There were already some offences in Falkland Islands law based on the pre-2004 UK law relating to racial hatred. Sections 527 to 538 restate and update those provisions and add offences based on religious hatred and hatred of sexual orientation which have been introduced in the UK since 2004. Sections 546 to 550 then deal with various offences – assaults, damage, public order and harassment – that are aggravated by hatred and as a result carry a higher maximum penalty than the basic offence.

The provisions of the Part are based mainly on sections 18 to 29 of the UK Public Order Act 1986 as amended by the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 and the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008; and on sections 28 to 32 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001.

One difference from the UK law is in section 544, based on section 29J of the UK Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006. It is modified by adding a reference to what is reasonably justifiable in a democratic society (as in sections 8 to 16 of the Falkland Islands Constitution.)

Notes on sections

Hate crimes

Sections 527 to 545 derive from:

- a) the provisions on race hatred in the UK Public Order Act 1986 that were amended by the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 to include religious hatred and then amended again to include hatred based upon sexual orientation in the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008;
- b) provisions of the UK Theatres Act 1968 in relation to stage performances that were incorporated by reference in the Public Order Act 1986;
- c) the saving for freedom of religious expression in section 29J of the 2006 Act (section 553).

It is notable that the two types of offences i.e. sections 527 to 532 and 533 to 538, differ in subtle but important ways. An offence of racial hatred – sections 527 to 532 - can be committed by using either threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour either with specific intent to stir up racial hatred or with the result that racial hatred is stirred up.

An offence of religious hatred or hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation – sections 533 to 538 - can only be committed if threatening words or behaviour are used with the specific intent of stirring up hatred.

The differences derive from the controversy caused by the proposed amendment to include religious hatred when it was first introduced in the UK after the 11 September 2001 bombing of the World Trade Center. The UK Government brought forward the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill, section 38 of which proposed an amendment to extend existing racial hatred provisions to cover religious hatred. When the Bill reached the House of Lords, an amendment to remove the section was passed by 240 votes to 141. The Commons reinstated the section, but the Lords again removed it. Finally, the Government had to accede to the Lords' insistence that the section be left out of the Bill, in order for it to pass.

The Government brought the proposal back before Parliament in the Serious Organised Crime and Police Bill in the spring of 2005. During the Lords debate on the relevant section of the Bill, on 5 April 2005 (the day on which the general election was called), the provision was removed. When the Bill returned to the Commons on 7 April, the Government announced that it was dropping the measure so as to secure the passage of the Bill as a whole before the dissolution of Parliament.

The amendment was then included in the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill later in 2005 after the General Election. Critics of the Bill in its unamended form asserted that as drafted, (mirroring the existing racial hatred provisions) it would make major religious works such as the Bible and the Qur'an illegal in their current form. Comedians and satirists also feared prosecution for their work and aired their objections vociferously in the media. Leaders of major religions and race groups, as well as non-religious groups, also expressed objections to the Bill. There was particular concern that the Bill would not be Human Rights Act compliant by limiting the rights of freedom of religion and expression.

The House of Lords passed amendments to the Bill which removed the abusive and insulting concepts, and required the intention — and not just the possibility — of stirring up religious hatred. The Government attempted to overturn these changes, but lost the House of Commons vote on 31 January 2006 and the Bill passed with the amendments as drafted here. A subsequent amendment to include hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation on the same basis as religious hatred was added in 2008.

Prior to the passing of this Ordinance only the racial hatred offences – sections 527 to 532 - were in force in the Falkland Islands, as the amendments came after the cut-off date for automatic updating. Legislative Assembly considered it appropriate to follow the UK provisions in sections 533 to 538 rather than include religious and sexual orientation hatred offences on the wider basis applicable to racial hatred offences.

Aggravated offences

Sections 546 to 551 are about racially and religiously aggravated offences and are derived from provisions of the UK Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as extended to religious aggravation by the Anti-Terrorism Crime and Security Act 2001.

These provisions appear at first sight to place defendants in double jeopardy for the same offence. However, as the penalties for the aggravated offence are higher than those for the basic offence in each case, the legislative scheme is that a person can be prosecuted for the 'basic' offence i.e. criminal damage, assault, public disorder or harassment, and for the aggravated offence but if the court does not find the aggravated offence proved, it has the option of convicting for the 'basic' offence under section 551.

Section 551 on alternative verdicts is adapted from the UK provisions to apply to all the offences in this group and to the Magistrate's Court as well as the Supreme Court. There is a more general provision relating to alternative verdicts in Part 2 of this Ordinance.

There is a general power of arrest without warrant in relation to all these offences in the CPEO 2014, based on the UK Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. There are entry and search provisions in section 539 which are in addition to the PACE provisions in the CPEO 2014.

PART 23 – PUBLIC NUISANCES

Introduction

This Part contains a few sections relating to nuisance offences which do not fit into other Parts. It is called 'Public Nuisances' to distinguish the offences from the civil wrong of nuisance.

Some of the provisions of this Part might seem rather archaic, but the English laws on which they are based are still law in England and Wales and therefore apply in the Falkland Islands by virtue of Chapter X of the IGCO. They include the Vagrancy Act 1824 (c.83), the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 (c.47), the Town Police Sections Act 1847 (c.89). Provisions that have been repealed in the UK are not included if there are equivalent provisions elsewhere in the Ordinance.

Offences under the UK Licensing Act 1872 (c. 94) and the Licensing Act 1902 (c.28) are contained in the Licensing Ordinance which is not replaced in this Ordinance.

The offence of noise nuisance is based on provisions in the Gibraltar Crimes Act and the St Helena Crimes Ordinance, which followed earlier precedents on the topics

Notes on sections

Sections 552 and 553 deal with noise nuisance and are based on the Gibraltar version of noise nuisance, designed for small communities. It makes it an offence to make noise, whether from musical instruments or singing or otherwise, if it causes offence or is likely to cause annoyance or distress to a reasonable person having regard to the time of day, or causes a breach of the peace. The hours between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. are deemed to be quiet hours and a lower level of noise is to be considered tolerable by a reasonable person. A police officer may, instead of taking proceedings, request the person concerned to reduce the level of noise or to stop making it or take any steps required to reduce the level of noise or to stop the making of it.

Section 553 empowers the Governor (i.e. in Council) to issue a permit for a public performance, a fair or other event, to named persons, to make noise that is in breach of section 552, subject to conditions.

Sections 554 and 555 relate to danger in public places and obstruction in the streets. They are based on provisions in the 1839 and 1847 Town Police Clauses Acts. The language and scope has been updated to apply to present-day Falkland Islands.

Section 556 is about bill-posting. If the owner of the premises consents, posters can be placed anywhere, subject to other laws about indecency, etc. Sub-sections (1) and (2) place the burden of proving absence of consent on the prosecution, in line with modern evidentiary principles.

PART 24 – CRIMINAL TRESPASS

Introduction

Trespass on land is not itself an offence, but trespass may be criminal in certain circumstances and this Part sets out those circumstances.

Currently under Falkland Islands legislation there are only two offences of criminal trespass. Under the Trout and Salmon Fishing Regulations it is an offence to enter private land to fish or capture trout and salmon without permission of the landowner; and under the Stanley Airport Regulations it is an offence to trespass on lawns and planted areas at the airport.

For the offence of entering a minefield, see section 187(1)(a). Trespassory assembly is an offence in the UK but is not included in Part 21. The offence of trespass with intent to commit a sexual offence is in Part 10 – see section 281. Entry as a trespasser is an element in burglary under section 354.

There are more general criminal trespass laws in the UK that apply to the Falkland Islands and this Part has rationalised and re-enacted them with appropriate modifications where there are overlaps and included some more recent provisions. The law in this Part is derived from the UK Criminal Law Act 1977, Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 and the Legal Aid Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012.

The 1977 Act set out the common law rules about criminal trespass. The 1994 Act introduced new offences of aggravated trespass and unauthorised camping. They were prompted by the need to prevent confrontations between owners of premises and squatters, including ‘travellers’ (gypsies). There are not the same problems in the Falkland Islands as led to the passing of these laws in the UK, but the 1994 Act applied by virtue of Part X of the IGCO and it was considered appropriate to include some of its trespass provisions in this Ordinance.

Criminal trespass is a summary offence in the UK so is not dealt with in Archbold’s Criminal Pleading, Evidence and Practice. However, reference can be made to Part 16 of Archbold’s Magistrates’ Courts Criminal Practice.

Notes on sections

Section 557 defines various terms used in the Part that are not defined elsewhere, such as ‘site’, or that have different meanings in this Part from other Parts of the Ordinance, such as ‘premises’. (In this Part, ‘land’ includes ‘premises’.)

Criminal trespass

Section 558 is based on sections 61 and 62 of the UK Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 which give police officers power to direct trespassers to leave land. The UK Act deals only with trespass by 2 or more persons with a common purpose where there are elements of violence or damage or vehicles are left on the land. The section is expanded to include trespass by a single person in similar circumstances. The power of direction is given to a police officer of the rank of inspector or above.

Section 559 is based on section 6 of the UK Criminal Law Act 1977. It relates only to premises, and does not require actual entry. It is particularly useful in the context of domestic violence cases.

Section 560 is based on offences contained in the Gibraltar Criminal Offences Act and repeated in the new Crimes Act. It creates an offence of remaining on public premises after being required to leave by a police officer acting on a request by the lawful occupier.

Section 561 is a recent addition to the UK statute book (LASPO Act 2012 s.144) and prohibits squatting in residential buildings. It improves upon the previous the criminal trespass provisions by not requiring a demand for repossession by a displaced or intending residential occupier.

Aggravated trespass

Sections 562 and 563 are based on sections 68 and 69 of the UK Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. They create the offence of aggravated trespass, when a person trespasses on land in a manner which intimidates the occupiers or obstructs or disrupts a lawful activity on the land.

Section 563 gives a senior police officer the power to direct persons who are committing aggravated trespass the power to direct them to leave. If they fail, an additional offence is committed.

Section 564 creates the offence of trespassing with a weapon of offence, as in section 8 of the UK Criminal Law Act 1977. The maximum penalty of 6 months is twice that in the UK, as 3 months is rather low for this offence in the modern context. The section includes the offence of trespassing with a firearm, as this is in section 20 of the UK Firearms Act 1968 but is not in the Firearms Ordinance.

Unauthorised camping

Section 565 creates an offence of camping on land without permission whether express or implied.

Designated sites

Section 566 derives from section 128 of the UK Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005. It enables the Governor to designate sites which must not be trespassed upon, and is concerned with protection of the environment and security. The designation can only be of Crown land, or in the public interest of private land. It is an offence to enter on designated land as a trespasser.

PART 25 – OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS

Introduction

This Part contains offences dealing with obscene publications. It also includes related offences about unsolicited sexual material and indecent displays based on UK laws that apply to the Falkland Islands. It is in addition to the provisions of Part 10 on pornography involving youths.

The Part incorporates provisions of the UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 as amended by the Courts Act 1971, the Criminal Law Act 1977 and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. It includes at sections 571 and 575 provisions from the St Helena Obscene Publications Ordinance which were considered useful in the Falkland Islands.

The Part includes amendments as to powers of arrest and penalties made by the UK Video Recordings Acts 1984 and 2010 (the VRA) and the Customs Consolidation Act 1876 as amended in 1979. The system of classification of video recordings was abolished in the UK, and film classification is dealt with under other legislation, but the power of arrest under the VRA is retained in section 573(1).

The term ‘publication’ as meaning an activity is defined in the UK laws, but it is confusing, and the term ‘distribution’ is used in this Part in preference. It is defined in section 569. The term ‘publication or article’ in this Part refers only to a thing, (a newspaper etc.) while ‘distribution’ is an activity.

The term ‘indecent’ is not defined in English law but is defined in Part 10 (Sexual Offences – see section 202).

The UK laws include forfeiture powers on a conviction, but they are no longer necessary in general as section 617 of the CPEO 2014 confers power to order deprivation of relevant items in all cases where there is a conviction. However, specific forfeiture powers are included at section 573 in relation to things found on premises that do not lead to a conviction. The more likely scenario, however, is that if no charge is brought in respect of seized material, either the items are not obscene and can be returned, or they are and the owner signs a disclaimer and they are destroyed.

Notes on sections

Section 567 contains definitions for the Part other than those in the IGCO or in section 2. The term ‘article’ includes moving images, so that video games will be covered by the term.

Sub-section (6) makes it clear that this Part does not affect the provisions of Part 10 (Sexual Offences) relating to indecent photographs of youths, prohibited images of youths, or extreme pornographic images.

Sections 568 to 575 relate to obscene publications. They are based on the UK Obscene Publications Act 1959 as amended by the Courts Act 1971, the Criminal Law Act 1977 and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. In the UK the search and seizure provisions have been amended by the PACE Act 1984, but the 1959 powers have not been repealed. The penalties have also been altered by the Criminal Justice Act 2003.

In the UK, the 1959 Act has been extended to broadcasts by the Broadcasting Act 1990. The Postal Services Act 2000 also has provisions about obscene articles and the Theatres Act 1968 has provisions about obscenity on the stage. These provisions are either covered by the definition of ‘article’ and ‘publication’ or are not required in the Falkland Islands.

The provisions in the UK Protection of Children Act 1978 about taking indecent photographs of children are included in Part 10 (Sexual Offences).

Section 568 provides the basic definition of obscenity, by reference to the circumstances in which a publication or article is likely to be seen. The UK case law has added the words ‘as a result of the publication’ to the words ‘read, see or hear’, but they not included as they are self-evident. The term ‘programme service’ is defined in section 2.

Section 569 defines the term ‘distribution’ in a similar way to the definition of ‘publication’ as an activity in the UK law.

Section 570 prohibits the distribution or possession for gain of obscene publications or articles.

Section 571 prohibits the manufacture, import or export of obscene publications or articles.

Section 572 abolishes the common law offence, but not the offence of conspiracy to corrupt public morals, as the agreement is the essence of that offence.

Section 573 confers a power of forfeiture of publications or articles on suspicion of them being obscene. This power is different from that in s. 617 of the CPEO 2014 as it is available on suspicion without a conviction following. It provides for the owner of a publication or article to apply for its return.

Section 574 provides a defence in relation to the publication of obscene matter based on the public good in the promotion of the arts etc. This is the ‘Lady Chatterley’ defence and makes prosecutions under this Part quite problematical, but it is needed to meet Human Rights requirements and was included in the UK law by the Criminal Law Act 1977. The UK makes separate provision for films but as they are within the definition of ‘article’ this section treats them in the same way.

Section 575 creates an offence of assisting the commission of an offence overseas. It is based on a provision in the St Helena law but is also necessary in the Falkland Islands as it implements an international agreement entered into by the UK in 1923 in respect of all its territories.

Other provisions

Section 576 makes it an offence to send unsolicited publications with a sexual content through the post. It is based on a provision in the UK Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971. Other provisions of that Act are in Part 15.

Section 577 prohibits the public display of indecent material, based on the UK Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981. The Act permits ‘sex shops’ to operate if they display signs indicating the nature of the display and prevent people under 18 from passing beyond the signs but that provision is not required in the Falkland Islands so there is no exception to the prohibitions. A deprivation order under section 617 of the CPEO 2014 can be made in respect of material the subject of a conviction under this section.

CHAPTER 4 – SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

PART 26 – MISCELLANEOUS AND TRANSITIONAL

Introduction

This Part contains miscellaneous provisions, including the repeal of the previous Crimes Ordinance and other criminal laws of the Falkland Islands, the disapplication of UK laws on the subject, and transitional and consequential provisions.

Notes on sections

Section 578 provides for the service of documents by various means, in addition to service by post which is governed by section 9 of the Interpretation & General Sections Ordinance (IGCO). It includes service by electronic means, if the recipient has facilities to receive such communications. Sub-section (2) governs service on corporations.

Section 579 enables the Chief Justice to make criminal procedure rules, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council as constituted by Part 35 of the CPEO 2014 and to issue practice directions after so consulting. Such directions usually supplement the rules but could be displaced by them if necessary. There are similar powers in section 785 of the CPEO 2014, but it is appropriate to have them in both Ordinances as the rules and directions may cover issues specific to one Ordinance or the other.

Section 580 enables the Governor, after consulting the Criminal Justice Council, to amend any of the Schedules. An order would need to be laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly and would be subject to section 36 of the IGCO.

Section 581 repeals the Ordinances listed in Part A of Schedule 5 and the individual sections listed in Part B. It also disapplies the UK enactments listed in Part C of that Schedule. The term ‘disapply’ is given a meaning for this purpose, by reference to the powers in Chapter X of the IGCO which enables the Governor to declare UK enactments never to have been adopted.

One of the repealed Ordinances is the previous Crimes Ordinance, which has in Schedule 1 a list of UK enactments on criminal law that apply to the Falkland Islands. The effect of section 580 is that Schedule 1 and all the UK Acts listed in it cease to have effect. The section also declares there to be no more common law offences in the Falkland Islands. This reverses the effect of section 3 of the previous Crimes Ordinance and is consistent with a codification of laws exercise.

Section 582 saves subsidiary legislation made under the repealed and disapplied laws that could be made under this Ordinance. It also saves directions, exemptions, notices and other non-legislative instruments made or issued by the Governor or any person or body under any of the repealed Ordinances.

Section 583 makes transitional provisions in respect of criminal cases and appeals that were in progress when the Ordinance came into force. They are the rules that normally apply when replacing criminal offence provisions. The term ‘proceedings’ is not defined in the Ordinance or in the CPEO 2014 (nor in UK law) but criminal proceedings before the Magistrate’s Court or the Summary Court are at present instituted by the laying of an information before a justice of the peace or by bringing before the court a person arrested without a warrant. Charging a person is not a step in proceedings, therefore, and a person may be charged under the repealed Ordinances but brought to court under the new Ordinance, if it comes into force overnight.

Section 584 makes consequential amendments to other enactments arising from the enactment of this Ordinance. It does this in broad terms by way of reference, and does not spell out the textual changes. These will be included in the ongoing revision of the Laws of the Falkland Islands.

Sub-section (3) enables the Governor in Council by order to declare any other consequential amendments that might be required.

Section 585 provides that the Ordinance is binding on Crown. This is needed to displace the opposite rule in section 66 of the IGCO. All Government officers will therefore be liable to prosecution for offences under the Ordinance.

Schedule 5 lists the Falkland Islands Ordinances and individual provisions that are repealed and the UK enactments that are disapplied as a result of their provisions being incorporated in this Ordinance. It does not list the UK Acts in Schedule 1 to the previous Crimes Ordinance, as these are repealed 'en bloc' by the repeal of that ordinance. UK statutes since the 'cut-off' date of 31 July 2004 are not included in the Schedule because they do not apply to the Falkland Islands. See the General Introduction to these Explanatory Notes for a list.

CRIMES ORDINANCE 2014
DESTINATION TABLE

Most of the criminal offence laws of the Falkland Islands are to be repealed or disappplied by the CPE Ordinance. This table shows where provisions equivalent to the repealed Ordinances and sections listed in Parts A and B of Schedule 5 can be found. Some are derived directly from the FI law, others are substantially modified.

A blank against a section means there is no equivalent in the Crimes Ordinance.

The destination of UK laws listed in Schedule 1 to the Crimes Ordinance is shown in a separate table at the end.

The destination of disappplied UK enactments listed in Part C of Schedule 5 can be identified by reference to the Derivation Table. If the enactment is not in that table, it has been allowed to lapse as being of no current relevance (or repealed in the UK.)

Register of Members' Interests

The information contained in this Register is provided by every member of the Legislative Assembly and the Attorney General in accordance with clause 22 of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly Standing Rules and Orders.

The information is current to 30 November 2016.

Information to be provided

Every member of the Legislative Assembly and the Attorney General is required to notify the Clerk of the Assembly of the following registrable interests.

1. Remunerated directorships, whether or not in companies incorporated in the Falkland Islands, including directorships which are unremunerated, but where remuneration is paid through another company in the same group.
2. Remunerated employment, office or profession.
3. Clients in respect of whom the Member holds a general retainer or in respect of whom he has in the last 12 months, or expects in the next 12 months, to provide services for payment where a member of the public might reasonably think that the Member's conduct in or in relation to the business of the Legislative Assembly might have been or might be influenced by the client's interests.
4. Sponsorships. Any form of sponsorship or financial or material support of a Member which involves any payment, benefit or advantage whether to the Member or any other person with whom the Member is closely connected.
5. Gifts, benefits and hospitality.
6. Overseas visits relating to or arising out of membership of the Legislative Assembly where the cost of any such visit has not been borne wholly by the Member or out of the Falkland Islands public funds.
7. Any gifts or material benefits or advantages received by the Member or the Member's spouse or partner from or on behalf of overseas Governments, organisations or persons.
8. Land or property of a substantial value or from which a substantial income is gained.
9. The names of companies or other bodies in which the Member, or his spouse or partner has, to his knowledge, either solely, or with or on behalf of his spouse, partner or children under the age of 18 years, a beneficial interest in shareholdings of a nominal value greater than one percent of the issued share capital, or if less than one percent of more than £25,000.
10. Any relevant interest not covered by one of the main categories which falls within the main purpose of the Register, which is to provide information on any pecuniary benefit which a Member receives and which might reasonably be thought by others to influence his or her actions, speeches or votes in the Legislative Assembly or actions taken in his or her capacity as a Member of the Legislative Assembly OR which the Member considers might be thought by others to influence his or her actions in a similar manner, (even though the Member receives no financial benefit).

Fisheries (Individual Transferable Quota Fees) (No 2) Regulations 2016

S. R. & O. No. 22 of 2016

Made: 24 November 2016

Published: 2 December 2016

Coming into force: see regulation 2

I make the following regulations under section 35 of the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance (No. 14 of 2005) on the advice of Executive Council.

1. Title

These regulations are the Fisheries (Individual Transferable Quota Fees) (No 2) Regulations 2016.

2. Commencement

These regulations come into force on 1 January 2017 and cease to have effect on 31 December 2017.

3. Interpretation

In these regulations —

“Director” means the Director of Fisheries; and “ITQ” means Individual Transferable Quota.

4. Fees and Payment Schedule

(1) The fees set out under Schedule 1 are the total fees payable in respect of the entire Individual Transferable Quota granted to any company for the specified fisheries.

(2) The fees payable by each company holding ITQ in an established fishery are calculated by reference to the proportion of the total ITQ held by that company.

(3) A company holding ITQ in an established fishery must pay the applicable fees annually in respect of the calendar year for which ITQ has been granted to that company.

(4) The fees must be paid on or before the dates specified under Schedule 2.

SCHEDULE 1
FISHERY FEES
(regulation 4(1))

Description of Fishery	Licence Code	Fees (£)
Finfish	A	1,129,012

Squid – Jig or Trawl	B	See B licence conditions
Squid (Summer)	C	30 June
Skate	F	Quarterly: 31 March, 30 June, 30 September, 17 December
Squid and Restricted Finfish	G	31 March and 30 June
Restricted Finfish - Pelagic	S	30 September and 17 December
Restricted Finfish	W	Quarterly: 31 March, 30 June, 30 September and 17 December
Toothfish – Longline	L	Monthly (beginning of each month)
Squid (Winter)	X	17 December

Made 24th November 2016

C. Roberts C.V.O.,
Governor.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

These Regulations are made under section 35 of the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance (No. 14 of 2005) which requires that sums (payable to the Crown) be prescribed for different companies in relation to the amount of ITQs held by those companies.

The fees for 2017 are set out under Schedule 1 and Schedule 2 (the payment Schedule) indicates dates when payments are due in respect of all the different fishery licences.

Regulation 2 provides for the period within which these fees remain valid – which is from 1 January to 31 December 2017, as the fees are set annually.

Regulation 4 sets out the fees and how they are calculated as well as the dates or times when those fees are payable. These are specified under Schedules 1 and 2.

SUBSIDIARY LEGISLATION

FISHERIES

Illex* Fishing Licences (Applications, Fees and Refunds) (No 2) Regulations 2016

S. R. & O. No. 23 of 2016

Made: 24 November 2016

Published: 2 December 2016

Coming into force: see regulation 2

I make the following regulations under section 41, section 223(2)(b) and (p) of the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance (No. 14 of 2005) on the advice of Executive Council.

1. Title

These regulations are the Illex Fishing Licences (Applications, Fees and Refunds) (No 2) Regulations 2016.

2. Commencement

Except where it is specifically provided for a particular provision to come into force at a later, specified date, these regulations come into force on 1 January 2017 and cease to have effect on 31 December 2017.

3. Interpretation

In these regulations —

“Director” means the Director of Fisheries;

“exploratory or scientific purposes” means purposes related to the assessment of the commercial or practical viability of fishing for fish generally or for a particular species of fish or to the assessment or quantification of stocks of any species of fish or fish of any age, stage of maturity or size of a species of fish or the location in which they or any species of fish or fish of any age, stage of maturity or size may be found;

“FIPASS” means the Falkland Interim Port and Storage System as defined under the Falkland Interim Port and Storage System Ordinance (Title 57.1);

“Illex fishing season” means the period between 15 February to 15 June in any given year;

“fishing waters” has the same meaning under the Ordinance;

“Licence Allocation Policy” means the policy relating to Illex fishing licences set by Executive Council from time to time;

“refund policy” means the policy approved by Executive Council from time to time as set out under Schedule 2; and

“the Ordinance” means the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance.

4. Illex fishing licences – applications and fees

(1) All applications for fishing licences must be made to the Director so as to reach the Director before 18 December 2016 or such earlier date as may be set by the Director and the Director is not bound to receive any application received after this date.

(2) The fees payable for an Illex fishing licence is determined by the formula set out under Part A of Schedule 1.

(3) The percentage of the fees and the period within which the fees are payable is specified under Part B of Schedule 1.

(4) When issuing fishing licences under these regulations the Director must take into account the Licence Allocation Policy.

5. Refund policy

(1) The Director in consultation with the Financial Secretary may, in any fishing season, implement the refund policy as set from time to time by Executive Council.

(2) In any assessment for a refund the Director may take into account the following —

- (a) the average catch in any fishing season;
- (b) the average catch value in any fishing season;
- (c) the full season catch taken by all licensed vessels;
- (d) the full high seas catches taken by all licensed vessels; or
- (e) any other factors as may be relevant.

(3) The refund policy for the 2017 fishing season is set out under Schedule 2.

6. Exploratory licences

(1) The Director may issue such number of exploratory licences as may be appropriate to verify the presence of Illex in any fishing waters.

(2) The Director must specify the expiry date for each exploratory licence issued.

(3) The Director must set the fees payable for exploratory licences.

7. Transshipment and export fees

(1) No transshipment fees are payable —

- (a) for any fishing vessel with a valid fishing license;
- (b) for any Falkland Islands fishing vessel; and
- (c) for any vessel transshipping at FIPASS where cargo is crossing the dock.

(2) The following must pay a transshipment fee of £1650 for the period January to December 2017 —

- (a) subject to subsection (1)(b), any fishing vessel that is transshipping outside the period of validity of the fishing licence;
- (b) a reefer vessel; or
- (c) any unlicensed vessel.

SCHEDULE 1 FISHERY FEES (regulation 4)

PART A Fee Formula

Jigging Vessels:

$$\text{Fee (£)} = \mathbf{£0.401 * (GT*(S+1.5D)) + 107250}$$

GT = Gross Tonnage

S = Number of Single Jigging Machines

D = Number of Double Jigging Machines

Trawling Vessels:

$$\text{Fee (£)} = \mathbf{(4.064*GT) + 116640}$$

GT = Gross Tonnage

PART B
Payment Periods and Proportion of Fee Payable

Payment Period	Proportion of Fee %
15 February – 15 March	5%
16 March – 15 May	80%
16 May – 15 June	15%
Total	100%

Explanatory Notes (for guidance only)

A minimum time period of 80% must be purchased.

A 10% deposit must be paid before 27 January 2017

Outstanding payments for each period must be paid (received by FIG's bank) at least 15 days in advance of the relevant fishing period.

Payments will be eligible for the ^early payment discounts set out below, providing the payment is made on time by the relevant date (for example in order to receive a 6% early payment discount on the full fee (100%), the entire fee would have to be received by FIG by 31 January 2017.

Letters of Credit must have an expiry date of 31 August 2017 no other date will be accepted.

^early payment discounts are as follows:

6% for payment by 31 January 2017

5% for payment by 31 May 2017 *

4% for payment by 30 June 2017 *

*Payments can be held until these dates but must be guaranteed by an Irrevocable Letter of Credit or equivalent.

Vessel History Discount:

A discount of 1% per year is available for any season fished by the vessel in the last 10 years.
The maximum discount which may be claimed is 10%.

SCHEDULE 2
2017 REFUND POLICY
(regulation 5(3))

(a) Licence Fee Refund Policy

In the event of a poor season the Falkland Islands government will take account of the average catch in assessing refunds. The refund policy will be based on catch as follows:

Catch (MT)	Column A Percentage Refund based on catch volume only. For use where average catch ≥ 1000 tonnes	Column B Percentage Refund using catch volume and value. For use where average catch < 1000 tonnes
> 1500	No refund	0%
1500 – 1250	No refund	10%
1249 – 1000	No refund	25%
999 – 750	40%	40%
749 – 500	50%	50%
499 – 250	70%	70%
< 250	90%	90%

Explanatory Notes (for guidance only)

Referring to the above table if the average catch is 1000 tonnes or exceeds that level there will not be any refund as set out in column A.

If the average catch is less than 1000 tonnes and taking account of catch value results in an ‘adjusted catch’ less than 1500 tonnes the refund levels set out in column B will apply.

An example of the adjusted catch value is set out in below –

(b) Licence Fee Refund Policy – Catch Value

The refund policy is intended to be linked to catch and catch value. The base price used to calculate the figures in the table at (a) above is $ 936 per tonne (whole Illex). If the 2017 Illex price is higher than the current base rate this will be factored into the refund calculation. In any case where the average Illex price is above $ 936 the calculation will be:

$$(Average Price $ / $ 936) * Average Catch = Revised average catch for refund.$$

For example if the 2017 Illex price is $ 3000 and the average catch is 400 tonnes the calculation will be:

$$($ 3000 / $ 936) = 3.2$$

*Average catch (400 tonnes) * 3.2 = 1280 tonnes (This is the adjusted catch figure used for the refund calculation in column B of the table above).*

The adjustment will only be made if the price is above $ 936. Price information will be collected from available sources.

(c) Refund Policy to take account of Full Season equivalent catch

The catch total used in the refund policy will take account of full season catches (15 February – 15 June). If the average catch of vessels fishing for 100% of the season exceeds 1000 tonnes there will be no refund for any vessels; including those which have fished for 80% of the season only and whose catches may be less than 1000 tonnes.

(d) Refund Policy to take account of High Seas Catches

The calculation of catch rates and totals in relation to the refund policy will take account of high seas catches taken by licensed vessels during 15 February – 15 June. Owners/operators of licensed vessels wishing to access the refund policy set out here in section 6 must provide catch reports for any days spent fishing on the high seas during the period of validity of their Falkland Islands fishing licence.

Owner/operators electing not to report high seas catches in accordance with the above may still be eligible for a refund but it is likely to be at a reduced rate compared to the refund policy calculation set out here (to be determined according to the relevant circumstances).

(e) Monitoring of Catch Levels

FIG will be the ultimate arbiter of catch levels and reserves the right to weight the assessment in favour of verified information. In order for this to work vessels may need to undergo additional inspections and give adequate notice of departure from the fishing zone etc.

This will be calculated on the basis of average vessel catch and not on an individual vessel basis.

The refund policy set out here in regulation 5 will only apply to vessels which comply with the requirements of catch monitoring. A number of these are covered by mandatory requirements which in any case are covered by the Fisheries Ordinance and regulations, such as:

- Full and reliable catch reporting
- Other fishery monitoring reports (Fishcom/end etc)
- Embarkation of an observer if required
- Sufficient notice of intention to leave fishing zones to allow for inspection

Additionally, the refund policy set out above will only apply to fishing vessels which report high seas catches during the fishing season (15 February – 15 June) and conduct transshipment operations in Falkland Island ports and harbours. Vessels not satisfying the criteria set out above will not ordinarily be eligible for a refund. If, in exceptional circumstances, it is determined that a vessel which has not complied should still receive a refund, that refund will be at a reduced rate (to be determined according to the relevant circumstances).

Made 24th November 2016

C. Roberts C.V.O.,
Governor.

EXPLANATORY NOTE
(not part of these regulations)

These regulations are made under sections 41 and 223 of the Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance (No. 14 of 2005).

Section 41(1) provides for applications and fees for a fishing licence. Regulations 1 and 2 provide for introductory matters while regulation 3 provides for interpretation of different words and phrases used within the regulations.

Regulation 4 provides for the application process including dates for making applications. It further provides for the fees and the formula; and this is set out under Schedule 1.

Section 223(2)(b) of the Ordinance provides that the Governor may make regulations for the refund of fees, charges or levies payable under any provision of the Ordinance. Regulation 5 provides for the manner of making refunds and this is set out under Schedule 2 and it is based on a refund policy approved by Executive Council.

Regulation 6 provides for exploratory licences which give effect to section 42 of the Ordinance which deals with licences that may be issued for research purposes.

Regulation 7 provides for transshipment and export fees and under subsection (2) sets the fee at £1650 for any unlicensed fishing vessel, any fishing vessel (not being a Falkland Island vessel) that transships outside the validity of a licence as well as any reefer vessel. A Falkland Islands fishing vessel is exempted from paying any transshipment fees as well as any vessel with a valid fishing licence. Fishing vessels transshipping through FIPASS are also excluded from paying any transshipment fees.

ANIMALS (WELFARE AND PROTECTION) ORDINANCE 2016

(No: 11 of 2016)

(assented to: 19 December 2016)
(commencement: in accordance with section 1)
(published: 23 December 2016)

AN ORDINANCE

To provide for the welfare and protection of animals and for connected matters.

ENACTED by the Legislature of the Falkland Islands —

PART 1 - PRELIMINARY

1. Title and commencement

- (1) This Ordinance may be cited as the Animals (Welfare and Protection) Ordinance 2016.
- (2) This Ordinance comes into operation on a day or days appointed by the Governor by notice in the Gazette.
- (3) Different dates may be appointed under subsection (2) for different provisions and for different purposes.

2. Interpretation

- (1) In this Ordinance, unless otherwise stated or the context otherwise requires —

“animal” has the meaning given to that term by section 4(1);

“bull” includes any cow, bullock, heifer, calf, steer or ox;

“cat” includes a kitten;

“damage” includes the death of, or injury to, any person;

“Director” means the person performing the functions of Director of Natural Resources;

“dog” includes any bitch or puppy;

“domestic animal” has the meaning given that term by section 5(3);

“exhibit” means exhibit at any entertainment to which the public are admitted, whether on payment of money or otherwise; and “exhibitor” has the corresponding meaning;

“fowl” includes any cock, hen, chicken, capon, turkey, goose, gander, duck, drake, guinea-fowl, peacock, peahen, swan, or pigeon;

“goat” includes a kid;

“horse” includes any mare, gelding, pony, foal, colt, filly, or stallion;

“humanely destroy”, in relation to an animal, means —

(a) to put to death by means of the administration of a lethal injection in such a way as not to be likely to cause unnecessary pain or suffering to the animal; or

(b) otherwise to put to death in a way not likely to cause unnecessary pain or suffering to the animal;

“inspector” includes a veterinary officer or any person appointed by the Governor to be an inspector for the purposes of this Ordinance;

“keeper” has the meaning given that term by section 3(3);

“licence” means a licence issued under regulations made under section 54;

“non-native animal” has the meaning given that term by section 31;

“owner”, in relation to an animal, means the person to whom the animal lawfully belongs and includes an agent of the owner;

“pig” includes any boar, hog, sow or piglet;

“post-conviction powers” means the powers in any of sections 40 to 47;

“premises” includes —

(a) any place;

(b) any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft;

(c) any tent or movable structure;

“Senior Veterinary Officer” means the person performing the duties of the senior veterinary officer of the Government;

“sheep” includes any lamb, ewe, or ram;

“suffering” means physical or mental suffering and related expressions are to be construed accordingly;

“train” means train for the purpose of exhibiting; and “trainer” has the corresponding meaning;

“unsuitable animal” means an animal specified as such by an order made under section 31;

“veterinary surgeon” means a person qualified in veterinary medicine and surgery and registered with a body established or recognised for that purpose under the laws of a country or territory.

(2) In this Ordinance —

(a) references to the occupier of premises, in relation to any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft, are to the person who appears to be in charge of the vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft, and “unoccupied premises” are to be construed accordingly;

(b) references to a part of premises which is used as a private dwelling include any yard, garden, garage or outhouse which is used for purposes in connection with it;

(c) references to responsibility, in relation to an animal, are to be read in accordance with section 3;

(d) references to the needs of an animal are to be read in accordance with section 7(2).

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.3; Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.7]

3. Responsibility for animals

(1) In this Ordinance —

(a) references to a person responsible for an animal are to a person responsible for an animal whether on a permanent or temporary basis;

(b) references to being responsible for an animal include being in charge of it.

(2) For the purposes of this Ordinance —

(a) the owner of an animal is to be regarded as responsible for it;

(b) a person (‘A’) is to be regarded as responsible for any animal for which a person under the age of 16 years of whom A has actual care and control is responsible.

(3) In this Ordinance —

(a) “keeper”, in relation to an animal, means a person, not being the owner of that animal, by whom that animal is for the time being ordinarily kept;

(b) a person is a keeper of an animal if the person has it in the person’s possession;

(c) if at any time an animal ceases to be in the possession of a person, any person who immediately before that time was a keeper of the animal by virtue of paragraph (a) or (b) continues to be a keeper of the animal until another person becomes its keeper by virtue of those provisions;

(d) if an animal is in the possession of any person only so that the person can —

(i) prevent it from causing damage;

(ii) restore it to its owner;

(iii) arrange for it to undergo veterinary treatment; or

(iv) transport it on behalf of another person, the person is not because of that possession to be treated for the purposes of this Ordinance as a keeper of the animal;

(e) expressions cognate with “keeper” must be construed in accordance with this subsection.

[Animals (Amendment) Ordinance; UK Protection of Animals Act 1911 s.15; Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.3 etc.]

4. Meaning of “animal”

(1) In this Ordinance, except subsections (4) and (5) of this section, “animal” means a vertebrate other than a human.

(2) Nothing in this Ordinance applies to an animal while it is in its foetal or embryonic form.

(3) The Governor may by order for all or any of the purposes of this Ordinance —

(a) extend the definition of “animal” so as to include invertebrates of any description;

(b) make provision in place of subsection (2) as respects any invertebrates included in the definition of “animal”; and

(c) amend subsection (2) to extend the application of this Ordinance to an animal from an earlier stage of its development specified in the regulations.

(4) The power under subsection (3)(a) or (c) may only be exercised if the Governor is satisfied, on the basis of scientific evidence, that animals of the kind concerned are capable of experiencing pain or suffering.

(5) In this section, “vertebrate” means any animal of the Sub-phylum Vertebrata of the Phylum Chordata and “invertebrate” means any animal not of that Sub-phylum.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 ss.1 and 59]

5. Application of the Ordinance

(1) This Ordinance applies to all animals, including animals of a kind that are commonly kept for slaughter, except that —

(a) provisions that are stated to apply to domestic animals apply only to the animals specified in subsection (3);

(b) if there is any conflict between the requirements of or under this Ordinance and the requirements of or under the Livestock and Meat Products Ordinance in relation to animals kept for slaughter, the latter requirements prevail.

(2) This Ordinance —

(a) does not apply in relation to anything which occurs in the normal course of fishing;

(b) does not displace or affect any of the written laws relating to fishing and fisheries;

(c) does not displace or affect any enactment relating to animals except as provided in Schedule 2.

(3) An animal is a “domestic animal” for the purposes of this Ordinance if it is —

(a) a horse, ass, mule, bull, sheep, pig, goat, dog, cat, or fowl;

(b) an animal of any other kind or species, whether a quadruped or not, which is tame or which has been or is being sufficiently tamed to serve some purpose for the use of man;

(c) under the control of man whether on a permanent or temporary basis; or

(d) not living in a wild state.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.2 adapted]

PART 2 – ANIMAL WELFARE

Unnecessary suffering - domestic animals

6. Unnecessary suffering

(1) A person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) an act of A, or a failure of A to act, causes an animal to suffer;

(b) A knew, or ought reasonably to have known, that the act, or failure to act, would have that effect or be likely to do so;

(c) the animal is a domestic animal; and

(d) the suffering is unnecessary.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

(a) A is responsible for an animal;

(b) an act, or failure to act, of another person ('B') causes the animal to suffer;

(c) A permitted that to happen or failed to take such steps (whether by way of supervising B or otherwise) as were reasonable in all the circumstances to prevent that happening; and

(d) the suffering is unnecessary.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) For the purposes of this Ordinance, any pain or suffering is unnecessary if, in all the circumstances of the case, it is reasonably avoidable or preventable.

(4) The considerations to which it is relevant to have regard when determining for the purposes of this section whether suffering is unnecessary include whether —

(a) the suffering could reasonably have been avoided or reduced;

(b) the conduct which caused the suffering was in compliance with this Ordinance, or any provisions of a licence or code of practice issued under this Ordinance;

(c) the conduct which caused the suffering was for a legitimate purpose, such as —

(i) the purpose of benefiting the animal; or

(ii) the purpose of protecting a person, property or another animal;

(d) the suffering was proportionate to the purpose of the conduct concerned;

(e) the conduct concerned was in all the circumstances that of a reasonably competent and humane person.

(5) Nothing in this section applies to the destruction of an animal in an appropriate and humane manner.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.4]

Promotion of welfare

7. Duty of person responsible for animal to ensure welfare

(1) A person who is responsible for any animal commits an offence if the person does not take such steps as are reasonable in all the circumstances to ensure that the needs of the animal are met to the extent required by good practice.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of this Part, an animal's needs are to be taken to include —

- (a) its need for a suitable environment;
- (b) its need for a suitable diet;
- (c) its need to be able to show normal behaviour patterns;
- (d) any need it has to be housed with, or apart from, other animals; and
- (e) its need to be protected from pain, suffering, injury and disease.

(3) The circumstances to which it is relevant to have regard when applying subsection (1) include, in particular —

- (a) any lawful purpose for which the animal is kept; and
- (b) any lawful activity undertaken in relation to the animal.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to the destruction of an animal in an appropriate and humane manner.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.9]

8. Improvement notices

(1) If an inspector is of the opinion that a person is failing to comply with section 7(1), the inspector may serve on the person a notice which —

- (a) states that the inspector is of that opinion;
- (b) specifies the respects in which he or she considers the person is failing to comply with that provision;
- (c) specifies the steps he or she considers need to be taken in order to comply with the provision;
- (d) specifies a period for the taking of those steps (“the compliance period”); and
- (e) explains the effect of subsections (3) and (4).

(2) An improvement notice may —

(a) be in the form of a letter;

(b) specify a compliance period according to the severity of the harm and the nature of the conditions.

(3) If a notice under subsection (1) (“an improvement notice”) is served, no proceedings for an offence under section 7(1) may be instituted before the end of the compliance period in respect of —

(a) the non-compliance which gave rise to the notice; or

(b) any continuation of that non-compliance.

(4) If the steps specified in an improvement notice are taken at any time before the end of the compliance period, no proceedings for an offence under section 7(1) may be instituted in respect of —

(a) the non-compliance which gave rise to the notice; or

(b) any continuation of that non-compliance prior to the taking of the steps specified in the notice.

(5) An inspector may extend, or further extend, the compliance period specified in an improvement notice.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.10]

9. Transfer of animals by way of sale or prize to persons under 16

(1) A person who sells an animal to a person under the age of 16 years commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), selling an animal includes transferring, or agreeing to transfer, ownership of the animal in consideration of entry by the transferee into another transaction.

(3) Subject to subsections (4) to (6), a person (‘A’) who enters into an arrangement with a person (‘B’) under which B has the chance to win an animal as a prize commits an offence if B is under the age of 16 years.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(4) A does not commit an offence under subsection (3) if —

(a) A enters into the arrangement in the presence of the person with whom the arrangement is made; and

(b) A has reasonable cause to believe that the person with whom the arrangement is made is accompanied by a person who is not under the age of 16 years.

(5) A does not commit an offence under subsection (3) if —

(a) A enters into the arrangement otherwise than in the presence of the person with whom the arrangement is made; and

(a) A has reasonable cause to believe that a person who has actual care and control of the person with whom the arrangement is made has consented to the arrangement.

(6) A does not commit an offence under subsection (3) if A enters into the arrangement with A's own child or grandchild (including by adoption), cousin, nephew, niece or sibling.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.11 expanded]

10. Regulations to promote welfare

(1) The Governor may by regulations under section 54 make any provision the Governor thinks fit for the purpose of promoting the welfare of animals for which a person is responsible, or the offspring of such animals.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), regulations made for the purpose mentioned in that subsection may include provision —

(a) imposing specific requirements for the purpose of securing that the needs of animals are met;

(b) to facilitate or improve co-ordination in relation to the carrying out by different persons of functions relating to the welfare of animals;

(c) either —

(i) conferring on a department of the government functions relating to advice about the welfare of animals; or

(ii) for the establishment of a statutory body with those functions.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.12]

11. Licensing of activities involving animals

(1) A person must not carry on an activity to which this section applies except under the authority of a licence issued under regulations made under section 54.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to an activity which —

(a) involves animals for which a person is responsible; and

(b) is specified for the purposes of the subsection by regulations.

(3) A person who contravenes subsection (1) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.13]

Domestic animals in distress

12. Powers in relation to animals in distress

(1) If —

(a) an inspector or a police officer (within Stanley) reasonably believes that a domestic animal is suffering; or

(b) any person outside of Stanley reasonably believes that a domestic animal is suffering, the inspector, officer or the person may take, or arrange for the taking of, such steps as appear to him or her to be immediately necessary to alleviate the animal's suffering.

(2) Subsection (1)(a) does not authorise destruction of an animal but a person under subsection (1)(b) may destroy an animal where the animal is under severe distress and the person is able to carry out the destruction.

(3) If the Senior Veterinary Officer certifies that the condition of a domestic animal is such that it should in its own interests be destroyed, an inspector or a police officer may —

(a) destroy the animal where it is or take it to another place and destroy it there; or

(b) arrange for the doing of any of the things mentioned in paragraph (a).

(4) An inspector or a police officer may act under subsection (3) without the certificate of the Senior Veterinary Officer if it appears to the inspector or officer that —

(a) the condition of the animal is such that there is no reasonable alternative to destroying it; and

(b) the need for action is such that it is not reasonably practicable to wait for the Senior Veterinary Officer.

(5) An inspector or a police officer may take a domestic animal into possession if the Senior Veterinary Officer certifies that it is —

(a) suffering; or

(b) likely to suffer if its circumstances do not change.

(6) An inspector or a police officer may act under subsection (5) without the certificate of the Senior Veterinary Officer if it appears to the inspector or officer that —

(a) the animal is suffering or that it is likely to do so if its circumstances do not change; and

(b) the need for action is such that it is not reasonably practicable to wait for the Senior Veterinary Officer.

(7) The power conferred by subsection (5) includes power to take into possession dependent offspring of an animal taken into possession under that subsection.

(8) If an animal is taken into possession under subsection (5), an inspector or a police officer may —

(a) remove it, or arrange for it to be removed, to a place of safety;

(b) care for it, or arrange for it to be cared for —

(i) on the premises where it was being kept when the decision was made that it should be taken into possession; or

(ii) at any other place the inspector or officer thinks fit;

(c) mark it, or arrange for it to be marked, for identification purposes.

(9) A person acting under subsection (8)(b)(i), or under an arrangement under that provision, may make use of any equipment on the premises.

(10) The Senior Veterinary Officer may examine and take samples from an animal for the purpose of determining whether to issue a certificate under subsection (3) or (5) with respect to the animal.

(11) If a person ('A') exercises a power under this section otherwise than with the knowledge of a person ('B') who is responsible for the animal concerned, A must, as soon as reasonably practicable after exercising the power, take such steps as are reasonable in the circumstances to bring the exercise of the power to the notice of B.

(12) A person who intentionally obstructs another person in the exercise of a power conferred by this section commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(13) The Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court may, on application by a person who incurs expenses in acting under this section, order that the person be reimbursed by such other person as the court thinks fit.

(14) A person affected by a decision under subsection (13) may appeal against the decision to the Supreme Court.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.18]

13. Power of entry for section 12 purposes

(1) An inspector or a police officer may enter premises for the purpose of searching for a domestic animal and of exercising any power under section 12 in relation to it if the inspector or officer reasonably believes that —

(a) there is a domestic animal on the premises; and

(b) the animal is suffering or, if the circumstances of the animal do not change, it is likely to suffer.

(2) Subsection (1) does not authorise entry to any part of premises which is used as a private dwelling.

(3) An inspector or a police officer may enter any premises for the purpose of this section with the consent of the owner or occupier or on the authority of a warrant issued under section 38.

(4) An inspector or a police officer may (if necessary) use reasonable force in exercising the power conferred by subsection (1), if it appears to the inspector or officer that entry is being refused and is required before a warrant under section 38 can be obtained and executed.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.19]

14. Orders in relation to animals taken under section 12(5)

(1) The Magistrate's Court or the Summary Court may order in relation to an animal taken into possession under section 12(5) that —

(a) specified treatment be administered to the animal;

(b) possession of the animal be given up to a specified person;

(c) the animal be sold;

(d) the animal be disposed of otherwise than by way of sale; or

(e) the animal be destroyed.

(2) If an animal is taken into possession under section 12(5) when it is pregnant, the power conferred by subsection (1) is also exercisable in relation to any offspring that results from the pregnancy.

(3) The power conferred by subsection (1) is exercisable on application by —

(a) the owner of the animal; or

(b) any other person appearing to the court to have a sufficient interest in the animal.

(4) A court must not make an order under subsection (1) unless it —

(a) has given the owner of the animal an opportunity to be heard; or

(b) is satisfied that it is not reasonably practicable to communicate with the owner.

(5) If a court makes an order under subsection (1), it may —

(a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out, of the order;

(b) give directions with respect to the carrying out of the order;

(c) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where the animal is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the order;

(d) order a person to reimburse the expenses of carrying out the order.

(6) In determining how to exercise its powers under this section, the court must have regard, amongst other things, to the desirability of protecting the animal's value and avoiding increasing any expenses which a person might be ordered to reimburse.

(7) A person who intentionally obstructs a person in the exercise of any power conferred by virtue of this section commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale, or both.

(8) If the owner of the animal is subject to a liability by virtue of section 12(13) or subsection (5)(d) above, any amount to which the owner is entitled as a result of sale of the animal may be reduced by an amount equal to that liability.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.20]

15. Orders under section 14: Appeals

(1) If a court makes an order under section 14(1), the owner of the animal to which the order relates may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court.

(2) Nothing may be done under an order under section 14(1) unless —

(a) the period for giving notice of appeal against the order has expired; and

(b) if the order is the subject of an appeal, the appeal has been determined or withdrawn.

(3) If the effect of an order is suspended under subsection (2) —

(a) no directions given in connection with the order have effect; but

(b) the court may give directions about how any animal to which the order applies is to be dealt with during the suspension.

(4) Directions under subsection (3)(b) may, in particular —

- (a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out, of the directions;
- (b) require any person who has possession of the animal to deliver it up for the purposes of the directions;
- (c) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where the animal is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the directions;
- (d) provide for the recovery of any expenses which are reasonably incurred in carrying out the directions.

(5) If a court decides on an application under section 14(3) not to exercise the power conferred by subsection (1) of that section, the applicant may appeal against the decision to the Supreme Court.

(6) If a court makes an order under section 14(5)(d), the person against whom the order is made may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.21]

PART 3 - PROTECTION OF ANIMALS

Poison, etc.

16. Poisoning, etc. of domestic animals

(1) A person who, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse —

- (a) administers any poisonous or injurious drug or substance to a domestic animal, knowing it to be poisonous or injurious; or
- (b) causes any poisonous or injurious drug or substance to be taken by a domestic animal, knowing it to be poisonous or injurious,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person ('A') commits an offence if —

- (a) A is responsible for an animal;
- (b) without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, another person ('B') administers a poisonous or injurious drug or substance to the animal or causes the animal to take such a drug or substance; and
- (c) A permitted that to happen or, knowing the drug or substance to be poisonous or injurious, failed to take such steps (whether by way of supervising B or otherwise) as were reasonable in all the circumstances to prevent that happening.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) In this section, references to a poisonous or injurious drug or substance include a drug or substance which, by virtue of the quantity or manner in which it is administered or taken, has the effect of a poisonous or injurious drug or substance.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.7]

17. Other offences in connection with poisons

(1) A person who —

- (a) sells, or offers or exposes for sale, or gives away;
- (b) causes or procures any person to sell or offer or expose for sale or give away; or
- (c) knowingly is a party to the sale or offering or exposing for sale or giving away, of any grain or seed which has been rendered poisonous, except for genuine use in agriculture, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(2) A person who —

- (a) knowingly puts or places;
- (b) causes or procures any person to put or place; or
- (c) knowingly is a party to the putting or placing,

in or upon any land or building, of any poison, or any fluid or edible matter (not being sown seed or grain) which has been rendered poisonous, commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

(3) In any proceedings under subsection (2), it is a defence that the poison was placed by the defendant for the purpose of destroying insects and other invertebrates, rats, mice, or other small ground vermin, if that is reasonably necessary —

- (a) in the interests of public health, agriculture, or the preservation of other animals, domestic or wild and that the defendant took all reasonable precautions to prevent injury from the poison or other matter to dogs, cats, fowls, or other domestic animals and wild birds; or
- (b) for the purpose of conservation or restoration of habitats as provided for under guidance issued by the Environmental and Planning Department.

(4) Subject to section 18, a person is not guilty of an offence under this section by reason only that the person uses poisonous gas in a rabbit hole, or places in a rabbit hole a substance which, by evaporation or in contact with moisture generates poisonous gas.

[UK Protection of Animals Act 1911 s.8; Prevention of Damage by Rabbits Act 1939 ss.1 and 5]

18. Prohibited or restricted use of poisons

(1) If the use of any poison for the purpose of destroying any animal has been prohibited or restricted by regulations under section 54, the fact that the poison was used as mentioned in section 17(4) is not a defence in proceedings under that section if the poison was used in contravention of the regulations.

(2) If the use of any poison for the purpose of destroying any animal has been prohibited or restricted by regulations made under section 54, any person convicted in such proceedings of an offence committed by or in connection with the use of the poison in contravention of the regulations commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 1 on the standard scale.

[UK Animals (Cruel Poisons) Act 1962 ss.1 and 2]

Traps

19. Inspection of traps

(1) Any person who sets, or causes or procures to be set, any spring trap for the purpose of catching any animal, or which is so placed as to be likely to catch any animal, must inspect, or cause some competent person to inspect, the trap at reasonable intervals of time and at least once every day between sunrise and sunset.

(2) A person as mentioned in subsection (1) who fails to comply with that subsection commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 1 on the standard scale.

[UK Protection of Animals Act 1911 s.10]

20. Restriction on type of trap

(1) Subject to this section, a person who —

(a) for the purpose of killing or taking animals, uses, or knowingly permits the use of, any trap other than a humane spring cage trap;

(b) sells, or exposes or offers for sale, any trap other than a humane spring cage trap;
or

(c) has in possession any animal trap other than a humane spring cage trap,

commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) A fine at level 3 on the standard scale: or

(ii) for a second or subsequent offence under this section or section 21, a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to traps of any description adapted solely for the destruction of rats, mice or other small ground vermin.

[UK Pests Act 1954 s.8 adapted]

21. Open trapping of hares and rabbits

Subject to this section, a person who, for the purpose of killing or taking hares or rabbits, uses, or knowingly permits the use of, a spring trap elsewhere than in a hare form or rabbit hole, commits an offence.

Penalty: (i) A fine at level 3 on the standard scale: or

(ii) for a second or subsequent offence under this section or section 20, a fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

[UK Pests Act 1954 s.9]

Performing animals

22. Prohibition of exhibiting and training performing animals

(1) No person may exhibit or train any performing animal in the Falkland Islands.

(2) Any inspector and any police officer may enter at all reasonable times and inspect any premises in which the inspector or police officer reasonably suspects that animals are being trained or exhibited, or kept for training or exhibition, and any such animals found on the premises.

(3) A person who —

(a) exhibits or trains any performing animal;

(b) obstructs or wilfully delays any inspector or police officer in the execution of powers under subsection (2) as to entry or inspection;

(c) conceals any animal with a view to avoiding such inspection,

commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 3 on the standard scale.

(4) This section does not apply to the training of animals for genuine military, police, agricultural or sporting purposes, or the exhibition of any animals so trained.

[UK Performing Animals (Regulation) Act 1925 ss.3 to 5]

Films

23. Prohibition of films involving cruelty to domestic animals

(1) It is an offence for a person ('A') to exhibit to the public, or supply to any other person for public exhibition (whether by A or by another person), any cinematograph film (whether produced in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere) if in connection with the production of the film any scene represented in the film was organised or directed in such a way as to involve—

(a) the cruel infliction of pain or terror on any domestic animal; or

(b) the cruel goading of any such animal to fury.

(2) In any proceedings under this section in respect of any film —

(a) the court may (without prejudice to any other mode of proof) infer from the film as exhibited to the public or supplied for public exhibition, as the case may be, that a scene represented in the film as so exhibited or supplied was organised or directed in such a way as to involve the cruel infliction of pain or terror on an animal or the cruel goading of an animal to fury; but

(b) (whether the court draws such an inference or not) it is a defence for A to prove that A believed, and had reasonable cause to believe, that no scene so represented was so organised or directed.

(3) A person who contravenes this section commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 3 months or a fine at level 3 on the standard scale, or both.

24. Section 23: Supplementary

(1) In section 23, “film” means any medium on which moving images are recorded so that they can be replayed.

(2) For the purposes of section 23, a cinematograph film is deemed to be exhibited to the public when, it is exhibited in a place to which for the time being members of the general public as such have access, whether on payment of money or otherwise, and the expression “public exhibition” is to be construed accordingly.

(3) Nothing in section 23 applies to a film of a steer-riding competition in the Falkland Islands.
[UK Cinematograph Films (Animals) Act 1937 s.1]

Mutilation of domestic animals

25. Mutilation

(1) Subject to subsection (3), a person other than a veterinary surgeon who —

(a) carries out a surgical procedure on a domestic animal; or

(b) causes such a procedure to be carried out on a domestic animal,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), a person (‘A’) commits an offence if —

(a) A is responsible for a domestic animal;

(b) another person (‘B’), not being a veterinary surgeon, carries out a surgical procedure on the animal; and

(c) A permitted that to happen or failed to take such steps (whether by way of supervising B or otherwise) as were reasonable in all the circumstances to prevent that happening.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) If—

(a) the animal is livestock; and

(b) the surgical procedure is carried out in conformity with a relevant code of practice, the procedure may be carried out by a person other than a veterinary surgeon.

(4) A veterinary surgeon may carry out a surgical procedure on an animal other than in conformity with a relevant code of practice if the procedure is —

(a) necessary for the purpose of the medical treatment of the animal; and

(b) carried out under appropriate anaesthesia.

(5) For the purpose of this section —

(a) a “surgical procedure” on an animal is a procedure which involves interference with the sensitive tissues or bone structure of the animal;

(b) a “relevant code of practice” is a code of practice for the welfare of livestock issued under section 55, or under the Livestock and Meat Products Ordinance.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 ss.5 and 6 (part) adapted]

26. Docking of dogs’ tails

(1) A veterinary surgeon may only remove the whole or part of a dog’s tail under appropriate anaesthesia.

(2) Contravention of subsection (1) is an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) A person commits an offence if the person –

(a) shows a dog at an event to which members of the public are admitted on payment of a fee;

(b) the dog’s tail has been wholly or partly removed (in the Falkland Islands or elsewhere) in contravention of this section; and

(c) removal took place on or after the commencement of this section.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.6 (part) adapted]

Animals fighting

27. Fighting, etc.

(1) It is an offence for a person to —

- (a) cause an animal fight to take place, or attempt to do so;
- (b) knowingly receive money for admission to an animal fight;
- (c) knowingly publicise a proposed animal fight;
- (d) provide information about an animal fight to another with the intention of enabling or encouraging attendance at the fight;
- (e) make or accept a bet on the outcome of an animal fight or on the likelihood of anything occurring or not occurring in the course of an animal fight;
- (f) take part in an animal fight;
- (g) have in the possession of the person anything designed or adapted for use in connection with an animal fight with the intention of its being so used;
- (h) keep or train an animal for use for or in connection with an animal fight; or
- (i) keep any premises for use for an animal fight.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(2) A person who, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, is present at an animal fight commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(3) A person who, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse —

- (a) knowingly supplies a digital recording of an animal fight;
- (b) knowingly publishes a digital recording of an animal fight;
- (c) knowingly shows a digital recording of an animal fight to another; or
- (d) possesses a digital recording of an animal fight, knowing it to be such a recording, with the intention of supplying it,

commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 7 on the standard scale, or both.

(4) Subsection (3) does not apply if the digital recording is of an animal fight that took place —

(a) outside the Falkland Islands; or

(b) before the commencement of this section.

(5) Subsection (3) does not apply —

(a) in the case of paragraph (a), to the supply of a digital recording for inclusion in a programme service;

(b) in the case of paragraph (b) or (c), to the publication or showing of a video recording by means of its inclusion in a programme service;

(c) in the case of paragraph (d), by virtue of intention to supply for inclusion in a programme service.

(6) In this section —

“animal fight” means an occasion on which a domestic animal is placed with an animal, or with a human, for the purpose of fighting, wrestling or baiting;

“programme service” has the same meaning as in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014;

“digital recording” means a recording, in any form, from which a moving image may by any means be reproduced and includes data stored on a computer disc or by other electronic means which is capable of conversion into a moving image.

(7) In this section —

(a) references to supplying or publishing a digital recording are to supplying or publishing a digital recording in any manner, including, in relation to a digital recording in the form of data stored electronically, by means of transmitting such data;

(b) references to showing a digital recording are to showing a moving image reproduced from any device capable of digital recording.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.8]

28. Seizure of animals involved in fighting offences

(1) An inspector or a police officer may seize an animal if it appears to the inspector or officer that it is one in relation to which an offence under section 27(1) or (2) has been committed.

(2) An inspector or a police officer may enter and search premises for the purpose of exercising the power under subsection (1) if the inspector or officer reasonably believes that—

(a) there is an animal on the premises; and

(b) the animal is one in relation to which the power under subsection (1) is exercisable.

(3) Subsection (2) does not authorise entry to any part of premises which is used as a private dwelling.

(4) An inspector or a police officer may enter any premises for the purpose of this section with the consent of the owner or occupier or on the authority of a warrant issued under section 38.

(5) In this section, references to an animal in relation to which an offence under section 31(1) or (2) has been committed include an animal which took part in an animal fight in relation to which such an offence was committed.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.22]

29. Reimbursement of expenses relating to animals involved in fighting offences

(1) The court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence under section 27(1) or (2) may order the offender or another person to reimburse any expenses incurred by the Crown in connection with the keeping of an animal in relation to which the offence was committed.

(2) In subsection (1), the reference to an animal in relation to which the offence was committed includes an animal which took part in a fight in relation to which the offence was committed.

(3) If an order is made under this section for reimbursement of expenses incurred by the Crown—

(a) the expenses are recoverable summarily as a civil debt;

(b) the person against whom the order is made may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.39]

30. Destruction of animals involved in fighting offences

(1) The court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence under section 27(1) or (2) may order the destruction of an animal in relation to which the offence was committed on grounds other than the interests of the animal.

(2) A court may not make an order under subsection (1) unless —

(a) it has given the owner of the animal an opportunity to be heard; or

(b) it is satisfied that it is not reasonably practicable to communicate with the owner.

(3) If a court makes an order under subsection (1), it may —

(a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out of, the order;

(b) require a person who has possession of the animal to deliver it up to enable the order to be carried out;

(c) give directions with respect to the carrying out of the order (including directions about how the animal is to be dealt with until it is destroyed);

(d) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where the animal is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the order;

(e) order the offender or another person to reimburse the expenses of carrying out the order.

(4) If a court makes an order under subsection (1) in relation to an animal which is owned by a person other than the offender, that person may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court.

(5) In subsection (1), the reference to an animal in relation to which the offence was committed includes an animal which took part in an animal fight in relation to which the offence was committed.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.38]

Non-native and unsuitable animals

31. Prohibition of importing or keeping unsuitable animals

(1) It is an offence for a person to import, for the purpose of keeping, selling or transferring any non-native or unsuitable animal without a licence from the Department of Natural Resources.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 6 on the standard scale.

[UK Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.1 adapted]

(2) In this section —

(a) “non-native animal” means any animal which is not indigenous or native to the Falkland Islands;

(b) “unsuitable animal” means an animal prescribed by the Director by order as unsuitable for keeping in the Falkland Islands.

(3) The Director may include in an order under subsection (2)(b) any animal of a species that is invasive and could become predatory in the Falkland Islands, and any animal of any other species that could represent a danger to wildlife or people.

32. Inspection of premises

(1) An inspector or a police officer may inspect any premises where the inspector or officer reasonably suspects that an unsuitable animal is held.

(2) An inspector or a police officer may enter and search premises for the purpose of exercising the power under subsection (1) if the inspector or officer reasonably believes that—

(a) there is an animal on the premises; and

(b) the animal is one in relation to which the power under subsection (1) is exercisable.

(3) Subsection (2) does not authorise entry to any part of premises which is used as a private dwelling.

(4) An inspector or a police officer may enter premises with the consent of the owner or occupier or on the authority of a warrant issued under section 38.

(5) A person who wilfully obstructs or delays any person in the exercise of a power of entry or inspection under this section commits an offence.

Penalty: A fine at level 5 on the standard scale.

[UK Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.3]

33. Power to seize and to dispose of animals without compensation

(1) If an unsuitable animal is being kept in any place, an inspector or a police officer may seize the animal and deal with it in any manner the Governor directs, including the destruction of the animal, and neither the Crown, the Governor nor any public officer is, subject to the provisions of the Constitution, liable to pay any compensation to any person in respect of the exercise of powers under this subsection.

(2) Any expenditure incurred in the exercise of powers under subsection (1) is recoverable by the Crown as a civil debt from the person who was at the time of the seizure a keeper of the animal concerned.

[UK Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.4 adapted]

Dogs and cats

34. Identification of dogs and cats

(1) The Governor may by order require any or any specified class or breed of dog or cat to have implanted in it an approved identification device.

(2) A veterinary surgeon may, at the request of the owner or keeper of a dog or cat, whether for compliance with an order under subsection (1) or otherwise, implant in the dog or cat an approved identification device and may for that service charge a fee approved by the Director.

(3) The Director must maintain a register and enter in it particulars —

(a) of every dog and cat in which an approved identification device has been implanted under subsection (1) or (2), whether before or after the commencement of this section;

(b) of the owner and keeper (if any) of the animal; and

(c) of any changes in the owner or keeper of the animal notified to the Director.

(4) The register may, if the Director so determines, be kept in electronic form.

(5) In this section, “approved identification device” means —

(a) a microchip, enabling the animal in which it is implanted to be identified by being electronically scanned by a suitable scanning device; and

(b) any other device, approved by the Director, implanted in an animal, whereby the animal may readily be identified by the use of suitable equipment.

[Animals (Amendment) Ordinance ss.2 (part) and 3]

35. Seizure and destruction of stray dogs and cats

(1) The Director and any inspector or police officer may seize any dog or cat which is a stray, that is to say, and dog or cat —

(a) that is found by any person wandering abroad and not apparently under the control of any other person; and

(b) that the Director or inspector or police officer reasonably believes to have been abandoned or neglected by its owner or keeper or to be feral, i.e. existing in a wild state, and take it to a place authorised by the Director for its detention.

(2) A stray may be detained in an authorised place until —

(a) it is claimed by a person who shows himself or herself to be the animal's owner or keeper; or

(b) it is —

(i) allocated to a new keeper; or

(ii) humanely destroyed in accordance with subsection (8), (9) or (10).

(3) As soon as possible after it has been seized, a stray must be examined by the person seizing it to ascertain whether its owner or keeper can be identified, whether by means of an approved identification device, collar or tag that it bears or otherwise.

(4) If as a result of the examination of a stray in accordance with subsection (3) the owner or keeper of the stray is identified, the person examining the stray must notify, or ensure that some other public officer notifies, the owner or keeper of the detention of the stray.

(5) Notification under subsection (4) must be done by the quickest means which is both practicable and reasonable at any place in the Falkland Islands where the owner or keeper of the stray is known to be likely to be found and otherwise at that person's last known address in the Falkland Islands.

(6) If the stray is a dog the owner or keeper of which is not identified on examination under subsection (3), the person examining the dog must cause, or ensure that some other public officer causes, notification of the seizure of the dog to be made through any appropriate media.

(7) A notification under subsection (6) must include —

- (a) a description of the dog;
- (b) a statement of the place where and time at which it was seized; and
- (c) a statement as to where and how, and the time within which, the dog may be claimed.

(8) A dog may be —

- (a) allocated a new keeper; or
- (b) humanely destroyed by a veterinary surgeon or by a person authorised by a veterinary surgeon, if its owner or keeper does not claim it within 72 hours of the notification under subsection (4) or (6), whichever in the circumstances of the case is appropriate.

(9) A cat —

- (a) the owner or keeper of which is not identified on examination of the cat in accordance with subsection (3); or
- (b) which is not claimed by its owner or keeper or his or her agent within 72 hours of notification under subsection (4), may be humanely destroyed by a veterinary surgeon or by a person authorised by a veterinary surgeon.

(10) Notwithstanding the previous subsections, a stray may be humanely destroyed at once by or on the authority of a veterinary surgeon if the veterinary surgeon reasonably believes that the stray is, or may be, suffering from —

- (a) rabies; or
- (b) any other disease that is —
 - (i) communicable to human beings;
 - (ii) if so communicated, may be fatal; and
 - (iii) has been specified for the purposes of this subsection by an order under subsection (11).

(11) The Governor may, by order under this section, extend the application of subsection (10) so that the power to humanely destroy a stray at once in circumstances specified in that subsection in relation to rabies extends also to any disease specified in the order; but an order under this section may only specify a disease which the Governor believes may be fatal to a human being if communicated to him or her.

(12) A person claiming a dog or cat which has been seized as a stray may be required by the Director to pay to the Crown a sum that represents the reasonable cost of seizure of the animal and of detaining it and the sum so required is recoverable by the Crown as a civil debt due to the Crown.

[Animals (Amendment) Ordinance ss.4 and 6]

36. Dogs and cats: Inspection powers

(1) An inspector may at any reasonable time on 48 hours' notice to the occupier of any premises in which the inspector reasonably believes that any dog or cat is in need of treatment or is being caused unnecessary suffering —

(a) enter and inspect the premises;

(b) cause any dog or cat kept on the premises to be produced to the inspector;

(c) on the premises treat any such animal if the inspector considers it to be in need of treatment;

(d) take away any such animal if the inspector considers that, in the circumstances of the case, it ought sensibly to be treated elsewhere; and

(e) humanely destroy any such animal on those premises which the inspector reasonably believes has any disease or affliction which —

(i) cannot practicably be treated; and

(ii) is causing the animal substantial pain or suffering.

(2) An inspector may enter premises with the consent of the owner or occupier or on the authority of a warrant issued under section 38.

[Animals (Amendment) Ordinance s.5 adapted]

PART 4 – ENFORCEMENT POWERS

Inspection

37. Inspection powers generally

(1) An inspector may require the holder of a licence issued under this Ordinance to produce for inspection any records which the holder is required to keep as a condition of the licence.

(2) If records which a person is required to keep are stored in electronic form, the power under subsection (1) includes power to require the records to be made available for inspection in —

(a) a visible and legible form; or

- (b) a form from which they can readily be produced in a visible and legible form.
- (3) An inspector may inspect and take copies of any records produced for inspection pursuant to a requirement under this section.
- (4) An inspector may carry out an inspection in order to check compliance with —
 - (a) the conditions subject to which a licence is granted;
 - (b) provision made by or under this Ordinance which is relevant to the carrying on of an activity to which a licence relates.
- (5) An inspector may, for the purpose of carrying out an inspection under subsection (4), enter —
 - (a) premises specified in a licence as premises on which the carrying on of an activity is authorised;
 - (b) premises on which the inspector reasonably believes an activity to which a licence relates is being carried on.
- (6) Subsection (5) does not authorise entry to any part of premises which is used as a private dwelling unless 24 hours' notice of the intended entry is given to the occupier.
- (7) An inspector may carry out an inspection in order to —
 - (a) check compliance with regulations which relate to animals bred or kept for farming purposes;
 - (b) ascertain whether any offence under or by virtue of this Ordinance has been or is being committed in relation to such animals.
- (8) An inspector may enter premises which he or she reasonably believes to be premises on which animals are bred or kept for farming purposes in order to carry out an inspection under subsection (7).
- (9) Subsection (8) does not authorise entry to any part of premises which is used as a private dwelling.
- (10) An inspector or police officer may enter any premises for the purpose of this section with the consent of the owner or occupier or on the authority of a warrant issued under section 38.
[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 ss.25, 26 and 28]

38. Entry and search under warrant in connection with offences

- (1) Subject to subsection (2), a justice of the peace may, on the application of an inspector or a police officer, issue a warrant authorising an inspector or a police officer to enter premises, at any reasonable hour, accompanied by any person or persons authorised by the warrant, and if necessary using reasonable force, in order to search for evidence of the commission of an offence under this Ordinance.

(2) The power to issue a warrant under subsection (1) is exercisable only if the justice of the peace is satisfied that —

(a) there are reasonable grounds for believing that —

(i) an offence under this Ordinance has been committed on the premises; or

(ii) evidence of the commission of an offence under this Ordinance is to be found on the premises; and

(b) section 39 is satisfied in relation to the premises.

(3) Section 22 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014 (power of police officer to enter and search premises for purpose of arresting a person) applies to an offence under this Ordinance as if this Ordinance were expressly added to the list of provisions in that section.

(4) A person who wilfully hinders or obstructs the lawful execution of a warrant issued under subsection (1) by an inspector or police officer or any person authorised by that warrant to accompany the inspector or police officer, commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 ss.23 and 24 adapted]

39. Conditions for issue of warrant

(1) This section is satisfied in relation to premises if any of the following 4 conditions is met.

(2) The first condition is that the whole of the premises is used as a private dwelling and the occupier has been informed of the decision to apply for a warrant.

(3) The second condition is that any part of the premises is not used as a private dwelling and that the occupier of the premises has —

(a) been informed of the decision to seek entry to the premises and of the reasons for that decision;

(b) failed to allow entry to the premises on being requested to do so by an inspector or a police officer; and

(c) been informed of the decision to apply for a warrant.

(4) The third condition is that —

(a) the premises are unoccupied or the occupier is absent; and

(b) notice of intention to apply for a warrant has been left in a conspicuous place on the premises.

(5) The fourth condition is that it is inappropriate to inform the occupier of the decision to apply for a warrant because —

(a) it would defeat the object of entering the premises; or

(b) entry is required as a matter of urgency.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.52]

Disqualification and deprivation

40. Orders with respect to licences

(1) If a person is convicted of an offence under this Ordinance, the court by or before which the person is convicted may, instead of or in addition to dealing with the person in any other way, make an order —

(a) cancelling any licence held by the person;

(b) disqualifying the person, for a period it thinks fit, from holding a licence.

(2) The court by which an order under subsection (1)(b) is made may —

(a) specify a period during which the offender may not make an application under section 42(1) for termination of the order;

(b) suspend the operation of the order pending an appeal.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.42; Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.6]

41. Disqualification generally

(1) If a person is convicted of an offence under this Ordinance, the court by or before which the person is convicted may, instead of or in addition to dealing with the person in any other way, make an order disqualifying the person for a period the court thinks fit.

(2) Disqualification may be imposed on a person from taking part in one or more, or all, of the following (as specified in the order) —

(a) owning animals;

(b) keeping animals;

(c) participating in the keeping of animals;

(d) being party to an arrangement under which the person is entitled to control or influence the way in which animals are kept;

- (e) dealing in animals;
- (f) transporting animals; or
- (g) arranging for the transport of animals.

(3) Disqualification under subsection (1) may be imposed in relation to animals generally, or in relation to animals of one or more kinds.

(4) The court by which an order under subsection (1) is made may specify a period during which the offender may not make an application under section 42 (1) for termination of the order.

(5) The court by which an order under subsection (1) is made may —

- (a) suspend the operation of the order pending an appeal; or
- (b) if it appears to the court that the offender owns or keeps an animal to which the order applies - suspend the operation of the order for such period as it thinks necessary for enabling alternative arrangements to be made in respect of the animal.

(6) If a court decides not to make an order under subsection (1) in relation to an offender, it must—

- (a) give its reasons for the decision in open court; and
- (b) cause them to be entered in the register of its proceedings.

(7) A person who breaches a disqualification imposed by an order under subsection (1) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 12 months or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.34 adapted]

42. Termination of disqualification under section 40 or 41

(1) A person who is disqualified by virtue of an order under section 40 or 41 may apply to the appropriate court for the termination of the order.

(2) No application under subsection (1) may be made —

- (a) within a year of the order being made;
- (b) if a previous application under that subsection has been made in relation to the same order - within a year of the previous application being decided.
- (c) before the end of any period specified under subsection (5) in relation to the order.

(3) On an application under subsection (1), the court may —

- (a) terminate the disqualification;
- (b) vary the disqualification so as to make it less onerous; or
- (c) refuse the application.

(4) When deciding an application under subsection (1), the court must have regard to the character of the applicant, the applicant's conduct since the imposition of the disqualification and any other circumstances of the case.

(5) If the court refuses an application under subsection (1), it may specify a period during which the applicant may not make a further application under that subsection in relation to the order concerned.

(6) The court may order an applicant under subsection (1) to pay all or part of the costs of the application.

(7) In subsection (1), the reference to the appropriate court is to —

- (a) the court which made the order under section 40 or 41; or

- (b) in the case of an order made by the Magistrate's Court – that court or the Summary Court.
[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.43 adapted]

43. Seizure of animals in connection with disqualification

(1) If —

- (a) a court makes an order under section 41(1); and

- (b) it appears to the court that the person to whom the order applies owns or keeps any animal contrary to the disqualification imposed by the order, the court may order that all animals the person owns or keeps contrary to the disqualification be taken into possession.

(2) If a person is convicted of an offence under section 41(7) because of owning or keeping an animal in breach of disqualification under section 41(1), the court by or before which the person is convicted may order that all animals the person owns or keeps in breach of the disqualification be taken into possession.

(3) An order under subsection (1) or (2), so far as relating to any animal owned by the person subject to disqualification, has effect as an order for the disposal of the animal.

(4) Any animal taken into possession pursuant to an order under subsection (1) or (2) that is not owned by the person subject to disqualification must be dealt with in the manner the appropriate court may order.

(5) A court may not make an order for disposal under subsection (4) unless it —

- (a) has given the owner of the animal an opportunity to be heard; or
- (b) is satisfied that it is not reasonably practicable to communicate with the owner.

(6) If a court makes an order under subsection (4) for the disposal of an animal, the owner may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court.

(7) In subsection (4), the reference to the appropriate court is to —

- (a) the court which made the order under subsection (1) or (2); or
- (b) in the case of an order made by the Magistrate's Court – that court or the Summary Court.

(8) In this section, references to disposing of an animal include destroying it.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.35]

44. Deprivation orders

(1) If the person convicted of an offence under this Ordinance is the owner of an animal in relation to which the offence was committed, the court by or before which the person is convicted may, instead of or in addition to dealing with the person in any other way, make an order depriving the person of ownership of the animal and for its disposal.

(2) If the animal in respect of which an order under subsection (1) is made has any dependent offspring, the order may include provision depriving the person to whom it relates of ownership of the offspring and for its disposal.

(3) If a court makes an order under subsection (1) or (2), it may —

- (a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out of, the order;
- (b) require any person who has possession of an animal to which the order applies to deliver it up to enable the order to be carried out;
- (c) give directions with respect to the carrying out of the order;
- (d) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where an animal to which the order applies is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the order;
- (e) order the offender to reimburse the expenses of carrying out the order.

(4) Directions under subsection (3)(c) may —

- (a) specify the manner in which an animal is to be disposed of; or

(b) delegate the decision about the manner in which an animal is to be disposed of to a person appointed under subsection (3)(a).

(5) If a court decides not to make an order under subsection (1) or (2) in relation to an offender, it must —

(a) give its reasons for the decision in open court; and

(b) cause them to be entered in the register of its proceedings.

(6) In subsection (1), the reference to an animal in relation to which an offence was committed includes, in the case of an offence under section 27, an animal which took part in an animal fight in relation to which the offence was committed.

(7) In this section, references to disposing of an animal include destroying it.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.33]

45. Destruction in the interests of the animal

(1) The court by or before which a person is convicted of any offence under this Ordinance may order the destruction of an animal in relation to which the offence was committed if it is satisfied, on the basis of evidence given by the Senior Veterinary Officer, that it is appropriate to do so in the interests of the animal.

(2) A court may not make an order under subsection (1) unless it —

(a) has given the owner of the animal an opportunity to be heard; or

(b) is satisfied that it is not reasonably practicable to communicate with the owner.

(3) If a court makes an order under subsection (1), it may —

(a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out of, the order;

(b) require a person who has possession of the animal to deliver it up to enable the order to be carried out;

(c) give directions with respect to the carrying out of the order (including directions about how the animal is to be dealt with until it is destroyed);

(d) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where the animal is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the order;

(e) order the offender or another person to reimburse the expenses of carrying out the order.

(4) If a court makes an order under subsection (1), the offender and, if different, the owner of the animal may appeal against the order to the Supreme Court;

(5) Subsection (4) does not apply if the court by which the order is made directs that it is appropriate in the interests of the animal that the carrying out of the order should not be delayed.

(6) In subsection (1), the reference to an animal in relation to which an offence was committed includes, in the case of an offence under section 27(1) or (2) (fighting), an animal which took part in an animal fight in relation to which the offence was committed.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.37]

46. Sections 43 to 45: Supplementary provisions

(1) The court by which an order under any of sections 43 to 45 is made may —

(a) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out of, the order;

(b) require any person who has possession of an animal to which the order applies to deliver it up to enable the order to be carried out;

(c) give directions with respect to the carrying out of the order;

(d) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where an animal to which the order applies is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the order;

(e) order the person subject to disqualification, or another person, to reimburse the expenses of carrying out the order.

(2) Directions under subsection (1)(c) may —

(a) specify the manner in which an animal is to be disposed of; or

(b) delegate the decision about the manner in which an animal is to be disposed of to a person appointed under subsection (1)(a).

(3) In deciding how to exercise its powers under sections 43 to 45 and this section, the court must have regard, amongst other things, to —

(a) the desirability of protecting the value of any animal to which the order applies; and

(b) the desirability of avoiding increasing any expenses which a person may be ordered to reimburse.

(4) In deciding how to exercise a power delegated under subsection (2)(b), a person must have regard, amongst other things, to the things mentioned in subsection (3)(a) and (b).

(5) If the owner of an animal ordered to be disposed of under section 43, 44 or 45 is subject to a liability by virtue of subsection (1)(e), any amount to which the person is entitled as a result of sale of the animal may be reduced by an amount equal to that liability.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.36]

47. Forfeiture of equipment used in offences

(1) If a person is convicted of an offence under this Ordinance, the court by or before which the person is convicted may order any qualifying item which is shown to the satisfaction of the court to relate to the offence to be —

- (a) forfeited; and
- (b) destroyed or dealt with in a manner specified in the order.

(2) The reference in subsection (1) to a qualifying item is —

- (a) in the case of a conviction for an offence under section 6 - to anything designed or adapted for causing suffering to an animal;
- (b) in the case of a conviction for an offence under any of sections 16 to 18 - to anything designed or adapted for administering any poison or drug or substance to an animal;
- (c) in the case of a conviction for an offence under section 25 - to anything designed or adapted for carrying out a surgical procedure on an animal;
- (d) in the case of a conviction for an offence under section 26 in relation to a dog's tail - to anything designed or adapted for removing the whole or any part of a dog's tail;
- (e) in the case of a conviction for an offence under section 27(1) or (2) - to anything designed or adapted for use in connection with an animal fight;
- (f) in the case of a conviction for an offence under section 27(3) - to a video recording of an animal fight, including anything on or in which the recording is kept.

(3) The court must not order anything to be forfeited under subsection (1) if a person claiming to be the owner of it or otherwise interested in it applies to be heard by the court, unless the person has been given an opportunity to show cause why the order should not be made.

(4) An expression used in any of paragraphs (a) to (f) of subsection (2) has the same meaning as in the provision referred to in that paragraph.

(5) This section does not limit the power of a court to make a deprivation order under section 44 of this Ordinance or under section 617 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014. [UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.40]

48. Orders under sections 43 to 47: Pending appeals

(1) Nothing may be done under an order under any of sections 43 to 47 with respect to an animal, unless —

- (a) any period for giving notice of appeal against the order has expired;

(b) the period for giving notice of appeal against the conviction on which the order was made has expired; and

(c) if the order or conviction is the subject of an appeal - the appeal has been determined or withdrawn.

(2) If the effect of an order is suspended under subsection (1) —

(a) no requirement imposed or directions given in connection with the order has effect; but

(b) the court may give directions about how any animal to which the order applies is to be dealt with during the suspension.

(3) Directions under subsection (3)(b) may, in particular —

(a) authorise the animal to be taken into possession;

(b) authorise the removal of the animal to a place of safety;

(c) authorise the animal to be cared for either on the premises where it was being kept when it was taken into possession or at some other place;

(d) appoint a person to carry out, or arrange for the carrying out, of the directions;

(e) require any person who has possession of the animal to deliver it up for the purposes of the directions;

(f) confer additional powers (including power to enter premises where the animal is being kept) for the purpose of, or in connection with, the carrying out of the directions;

(g) provide for the recovery of any expenses in relation to removal or care of the animal which are incurred in carrying out the directions.

(5) Any expenses a person is directed to pay under subsection (4)(g) are recoverable summarily as a civil debt.

(6) If the effect of an order under section 44 (Deprivation) is suspended under subsection (1) the person to whom the order relates may not sell or part with any animal to which the order applies.

(7) A person who fails to comply with subsection (6) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.41]

Enforcement generally

49. Time limits for prosecutions

A prosecution for an offence under this Ordinance must be brought —

(a) within 3 years after the commission of the offence; and

(b) within 6 months after the date on which evidence which the prosecution thinks is sufficient to justify the proceedings comes to the knowledge of the prosecution.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.31; Game Act 1831 s.41]

50. Power to stop and detain vehicles

(1) A police officer in uniform or, if accompanied by such a police officer, an inspector may stop and detain a vehicle for the purpose of entering and searching it in the exercise of a power conferred in relation to premises —

(a) by section 13(1); or

(b) by a warrant under section 48.

(2) A police officer in uniform may stop and detain a vehicle for the purpose of entering and searching it in the exercise of a power conferred by —

(a) section 28(1); or

(b) a warrant under section 38.

(3) If accompanied by a police officer in uniform, an inspector may stop and detain a vehicle for the purpose of entering it and carrying out an inspection in the exercise of a power conferred by—

(a) section 37; or

(b) a warrant under section 38.

(4) A vehicle may be detained for as long as is reasonably required to permit a search or inspection to be carried out (including the exercise of any related power under this Ordinance either at the place where the vehicle was first detained or nearby).

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.54]

51. Power to detain vessels and aircraft

(1) If an inspector or a police officer certifies in writing that he or she is satisfied that an offence under this Ordinance is being or has been committed on board a vessel in port or a landed aircraft, the vessel or aircraft may be detained.

(2) A certificate under subsection (1) must —

(a) specify each offence to which it relates; and

(b) set out the inspector's or officer's reasons for being satisfied that each offence to which it relates is being or has been committed.

(3) An officer who detains a vessel or aircraft in reliance on a certificate under subsection (1) must as soon as reasonably practicable give a copy of it to the master or person in charge of the vessel or aircraft.

(4) A vessel or aircraft may be detained under subsection (1) until the Governor otherwise directs.

(5) The Governor may by regulations make such other provision for the detention of vessels or aircraft in relation to offences under or by virtue of this Ordinance as the Governor thinks fit.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.55 adapted]

52. Obtaining of documents in connection with carrying out orders, etc.

(1) If —

(a) an order is made or directions are given under this Ordinance for the deprivation, taking into possession, seizure or destruction of an animal is in effect; and

(b) documents which are relevant to the carrying out of the order or directions are in the possession or under the control of the owner of the animal, the owner must, if so required by a person authorised to carry out the order, deliver the documents to that person as soon as practicable and in any event within 10 days after the owner is notified of the requirement.

(2) A person who fails without reasonable excuse to comply with subsection (1) commits an offence.

Penalty: Imprisonment for 6 months or a fine at level 4 on the standard scale.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.56 adapted]

PART 5 – MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

53. Service of documents

(1) Any notice or other document required or authorised by this Ordinance to be served on any person may be served by —

(a) delivering it to the person;

(b) leaving it at the person's usual or last known address (whether residential or otherwise);

(c) sending it to the person by post at that address; or

(d) sending it to the person by electronic means, if the person has facilities to receive such communications.

(2) Any notice or other document so required or authorised to be served on a corporate body is duly served on it if served on the secretary or clerk of the body.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the proper address of any person is, in the case of the secretary or clerk of a body corporate, that of the registered or principal office of that body, and in any other case the last address of the person to be served which is known to the Governor.

(4) This section does not affect section 9 of the Interpretation and General Clauses Ordinance relating to service by post.

54. Regulations

(1) The Governor may by regulations make further provision about any matter provided for in this Ordinance.

(2) The regulations may include, but are not limited to, provisions regulating —

- (a) the functions and powers of inspectors;
- (b) the use of poisons to destroy animals;
- (c) the need for and issuing of licences for prescribed purposes.

(3) If the regulations include provisions relating to licences, they may include provisions —

- (a) to require persons to hold a licence for specified activities in relation to animals;
- (b) to prescribe —
 - (i) the form of an application for a licence;
 - (ii) the particulars to be provided in an application for a licence;
 - (iii) the fees payable for the issue of licences; or
 - (iv) the conditions that may be attached to a licence; or
- (c) that breach of a condition of a licence or of the regulations is an offence.

(4) Power to make regulations under this section includes power —

- (a) to provide that breach of a regulation is an offence carrying a maximum penalty of 6 months imprisonment or a fine at level 5 on the standard scale, or both;
- (b) to apply relevant post-conviction powers in relation to convictions for an offence under the regulations;
- (c) to make provision for fees or other charges in relation to the carrying out of functions under the regulations;
- (d) to make different provision for different cases or areas;

(e) to provide for exemptions from a provision of the regulations, either subject to specified conditions or without conditions;

(f) to provide for any other matter needed to give effect to this Ordinance;

(g) to make incidental, supplementary, consequential or transitional provision or savings.

(5) Before making regulations under this section, the Governor must publish a draft of the regulations for public consultation.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 ss.6 and 12 (part)]

55. Codes of practice

(1) The Director may issue, and from time to time revise, one or more codes of practice for the purpose of providing practical guidance in respect of any provision made by this Ordinance or by regulations made under it.

(2) The Director must —

(a) keep the codes of practice under review; and

(b) issue new or revised codes when necessary.

(3) If the Director proposes to issue (or revise) a code of practice, the Director must publish a draft of the code for public consultation, specifying —

(a) whether it is a new code or a replacement for an existing one; and

(b) the date on which the code comes into force.

(4) If after consulting as required by subsection (3) the Director decides to proceed with a draft (either in its original form or with any modifications as the Director thinks fit), the Governor must lay a copy of it before the Legislative Assembly.

(5) A code (or revised code) —

(a) comes into force on a day the Director by order appoints; and

(b) may be published in any manner the Director considers appropriate.

(6) A person's failure to comply with a provision of a code of practice issued under this section does not of itself render the person liable to proceedings of any kind, but in any proceedings against a person for an offence under this Ordinance —

(a) failure to comply with a relevant provision of a code of practice issued under this section may be relied upon as tending to establish liability; and

(b) compliance with a relevant provision of such a code of practice may be relied upon as tending to negative liability.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.14 and reg. 4 of the Livestock & Meat Products (Welfare of Livestock) Regulations]

56. Amendment of Schedule

(1) The Governor may by order amend the Schedule to this Ordinance.

(2) An order under subsection (1) —

(a) may make such transitional and consequential provision as appears to the Governor to be necessary or expedient; and

(b) requires the approval of the Legislative Assembly.

[UK Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 s.8]

57. Repeal of laws

The Animals (Amendment) Ordinance (“the repealed Ordinance”) is repealed.

58. Savings

(1) Subject to subsection (4), all items of subsidiary legislation made under the repealed Ordinance continue in force as if made under the corresponding provision of this Ordinance until amended or replaced under this Ordinance.

(2) If there is no corresponding provision of this Ordinance under which an item of subsidiary legislation referred to in subsection (1) could be made or the item is repealed, as the case may be, except that it continues to have effect in relation to proceedings that had commenced before the repeal provided by section 59.

(3) Any legislative instrument made by a person under the repealed Ordinance which could be made or issued by an equivalent person under this Ordinance continues to have effect as if made or issued by that person under this Ordinance until varied or revoked under this Ordinance.

(4) Any delegation, direction, exemption, notice or other non-legislative instrument made or issued by any person under the repealed Ordinance which could be made or issued by an equivalent person under this Ordinance continues to have effect as if made or issued by that person under this Ordinance until varied or revoked under this Ordinance.

59. Transitional provisions

(1) A disqualification of a person convicted of cruelty to animals imposed under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 as amended, and as applied to the Falkland Islands before the commencement of this Part, is deemed to be a disqualification imposed under section 41 of this Ordinance and section 42 applies to such a disqualification.

(2) Any criminal or civil proceedings under the repealed Ordinance that were in progress at the date of commencement of this Part must continue as if this Part had not been enacted.

(3) The Governor may by order make such other transitional provision or savings as the Governor considers necessary or expedient in connection with the coming into force of any provision of this Ordinance.

(4) The power under subsection (1) includes power to make different provision for different cases.

[UK Animal Welfare Act 2006 s.58 adapted]

60. Consequential amendments – Schedule

(1) The Ordinance listed in column 1 of the Schedule is amended in the manner set out in column 2 of the Schedule.

(2) A reference in any other enactment to the repealed Ordinance is, to the extent possible, to be read as a reference to the corresponding provision of this Ordinance.

61. Crown application

(1) Subject to the provisions of this section, this Ordinance binds the Crown.

(2) No contravention by the Crown of any provision of or under this Ordinance makes the Crown criminally liable; but the Supreme Court may declare unlawful any act or omission of the Crown which constitutes such a contravention.

(3) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the provisions of this Ordinance apply to persons in the service of the Crown as they apply to other persons.

(4) If the Governor certifies that it appears to him or her appropriate in the interests of national security that powers of entry conferred by or under this Ordinance should not be exercisable in relation to premises held or used by or on behalf of the Crown and specified in the certificate, those powers are not exercisable in relation to those premises.

(5) In this section, “national security” has the meaning given to that term in section 2 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Ordinance 2014;

CODE OF PRACTICE FOR THE WELFARE OF ANIMALS KEPT AS PETS

The Animals (Welfare and Protection) Ordinance 2016 states that the Director of Natural Resources may from time to time revise or issue Codes of Practice to give practical guidance for the keeping of animals.

Codes exist for the welfare of dogs, sheep, cattle, horses, pigs and for animals during transport. This code intends to give guidance for the general keeping of small pet animals, including back yard poultry.

1. Food and Water

1.1 Food

Animals should have daily access to a diet which is nutritionally adequate to maintain health and meet the appropriate physiological requirements for the species and life stage at which it is in.

Owners should be aware of any specific dietary requirements of the species that they keep as a pet. Some basic feeding guidelines for some species are below:

SPECIES	FEEDING GUIDELINE
Cats	Commercial cat food and raw meat (do not feed kittens exclusively raw meat). Must not be fed a vegetarian or only fish diet as they require taurine which is found in red meat and is added to commercial food.
Guinea pigs	Ad lib access to good quality hay or grass is essential. Supplement diet with commercial guinea pig pellets, leafy greens, green and red pepper, broccoli, tomatoes and oranges. Need a dietary source of vitamin C and although commercial food is supplemented the vitamin C may not remain active in the food for more than 90 days so a supply of fresh food is important. Do not change food types suddenly as they are fastidious in their choice of food.
Rabbits	Ad lib access to good quality hay or grass is essential. Supplement diet with a measured amounts of commercial pellets and/or vegetables (greens, carrots, cabbage and salad crops).
Hamsters	Commercial feed blocks or pellets are better than seed mixes as rodents will select the high fat, low calcium seeds such as sunflower seeds and only eat them which can lead to obesity and osteoporosis. Seeds, grains fruit and green vegetables should be offered as a supplement rather than the main diet.
Caged birds Eg budgies	Commercial diets specific to breed. Need a varied diet but if allowed may just select specific seeds or one type of food so supplements to a commercial diet should be included greens (eg lettuce, watercress, chickweed, parsley), sprouted seeds, vegetables such as carrots, turnip, beetroot and fruit (oranges, apples, plums, grapes). You can make a mash with some of these items with added protein such as cooked egg, cheese or milk.
Poultry	Commercial food suitable for the stage of the bird's life is recommended. Feeding of large amounts of kitchen waste/scraps may attract rodents and adversely affect the hygiene of the area.

1.2 Water

Animals must have ad lib access to water. Daily assessment should be made of the quality and quantity of the water supply.

Mechanical equipment controlling the delivery of water should be inspected regularly, and frequently in hot weather, and be maintained in good working order. It is also essential that a water supply is maintained in freezing weather when pipes, bowls or drinks bottles are liable to freeze up.

The quality of water provided should be adequate to maintain animal health.

2. Protection from Climatic Extremes

All pet animals must have adequate housing that minimises the effects of weather that produces cold or heat stress. Shelter from rain and direct sunlight is necessary.

3. Supervision

Pet animals must have adequate supervision relative to their specific requirements at all times.

4. Housing

4.1 General

All sheds, pens, hutches, kennels, runs and beds should be constructed and maintained so as to minimise stress and injury to the animals.

Objects such as water and feed bowls, doors and gate hinges and latches should be designed and located so as to avoid injury. Sharp projections must be avoided. Rabbits and rodents especially may chew hutches and cages rendering them unsafe.

Housing should be designed to minimise stress or injury and to allow animals space to display normal behaviour specific to their species. Cats must not be confined to cages unless for a medical reason and under the instruction of a veterinary surgeon (or for temporary kennelling). Cats that are kept as indoor cats must have several resource stations and a variety of toys and activities to meet their behavioural needs.

Housing and outside spaces for animals must be maintained in a state of cleanliness and provide an area of dry ground for sitting or lying on.

SPECIES	HOUSING AND SPACE REQUIREMENTS (if caged)
Guinea Pigs	Guinea pigs can tolerate a wide range of temperatures if acclimatised (12-20°C). Unless hutches are on stilts and very well insulated it is advisable to move hutches indoors or into a shed during colder winter months. A mobile run that can be moved around the lawn in better weather is most ideal for access to fresh grass. Minimum space requirements are 0.2m ² per guinea pig. Bedding can be wood shavings, straw or hay or shredded paper.
Hamsters	Must have an enclosed nesting area containing hay, shredded paper, wood shavings or commercial wadding. Do not use cotton wool. Keep at 19-23°C. Avoid brightly lit and noisy areas. Due to fighting it is preferable to house hamsters singly. Supervise pairs closely if breeding and then remove the male. Cages should be easy to clean and cleaned every 1-2 weeks depending on number of animals and amount of soiling. Exercise wheels and toys and tunnels for activity must be provided.
Rabbits	Minimum floor space is 0.2m ² per rabbit but for rabbits over 2kg an extra 0.1-0.2m ² per kg body weight should be provided. Rabbits should be able to lie at full stretch and the hutch or cage should be tall enough for them to stand up tall on their hind legs. Hutches should be checked daily to see if they require cleaning out.
Poultry	For hens permanently enclosed in a hutch or coop there must be at least 600cm² usable floor space per bird and perching space of at least 15cm per bird. There must be an indoor nesting/roosting area. One nest box per 7 birds is the minimum, more is recommended. For more information for larger flocks DEFRA (UK) have recommendations for laying hens.
Caged birds	The bigger the better. An aviary is always better than a cage. No cage should be so small that a bird cannot fully stretch its wings and its tail should not touch the floor when perched. For most birds the cage should be well off the floor and only have mesh on 1-2 sides so the bird does not feel vulnerable. A variety of non-slip perches and toys should be provided.

4.2 Handling and Restraint

Animals should be handled in a manner appropriate for their species.

All pet owners should make themselves familiar with specific handling and restraint methods for any pet animals they own.

No animal should be handled, treated or restrained in a way that causes unnecessary pain, distress or suffering.

5. Management Practices

5.1 Mating

Animals should be mated only when they have reached a sufficient size and maturity.

Pet owners must familiarise themselves with the specific husbandry requirements of a pet having a litter and must be prepared to care adequately for the dam and her offspring.

6. Husbandry Procedures - Surgical

6.1 General

All surgical procedures, must be carried out by a Veterinary Surgeon or under the direct supervision of a Veterinary Surgeon apart from non-invasive procedures such as trimming of nails and grooming practices.

6.2 Identification

It is good practice to have dogs and cats identified with a microchip.

7. Health

Sick, injured or diseased pet animals should receive prompt attention by an experienced person or veterinary surgeon.

8. Euthanasia

Pet animals must be destroyed humanely by a veterinary surgeon or an experienced operator with a free bullet gun.

TAXATION

Taxes and Duties (Defence Contractors' Employees Exemption) Order 2016

S. R. & O. No.: 24 of 2016

Made: 21 December 2016

Published: 23 December 2016

Coming into force: on publication

I make this order under section 9A of the Taxes and Duties (Special Exemptions) Ordinance (Title 69.2) on the advice of the Standing Finance Committee, as required by section 9A(1) of the Ordinance.

1. Title

This order is the Taxes and Duties (Defence Contractors' Employees Exemption) Order 2016.

2. Commencement

This order comes into force on publication in the Gazette.

3. Interpretation

In this order —

“designated employer” means an employer listed in the Schedule;

“qualifying employee” means a person who —

- (a) satisfies the requirements of section 9A of the Ordinance; and
- (b) is employed by a designated employer;

“relevant employment” means —

- (a) employment only for the purpose of providing services in the Falkland Islands to either —
 - (i) Her Majesty's regular armed forces; or
 - (ii) the Ministry of Defence of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom; or

(b) employment only for the purposes of providing services to persons who are themselves in relevant employment by virtue of paragraph (a) of this definition or by virtue of this paragraph of this definition;

“relevant income” means income from relevant employment; and “retirement pension contributions” means contributions that an employee is required to pay under the Retirement Pensions Ordinance (No. 20 of 1996).

4. Application

(1) Subject to article 5, a qualifying employee is exempt from liability under any law of the Falkland Islands to pay —

(a) income tax on relevant income from a designated employer; and

(b) retirement pension contributions in respect of that employment.

(2) The exemption applies whether the liability arises before or after this order comes into force.

5. Duration

Nothing in this order confers any exemption to pay either —

(a) income tax in relation to earnings after 31 December 2017; or

(b) retirement pension contributions in respect of employment after that date.

6. Condition: returns

(1) A designated employer must complete a return relating to the relevant income of qualifying employees.

(2) A return under this article must —

(a) include such particulars as the Commissioner may require;

(b) be lodged with the Commissioner of Taxes within 60 days from the 31st December 2017.

(3) The particulars referred to under sub-article (2)(a) may include the accounts of the designated employer for the period when the relevant income was earned.

7 Revocation

The Taxes and Duties (Defence Contractors’ Employees Exemption) Order 2015 (No. 17 of 2015) is revoked.

EXPLANATORY NOTE
(not part of the order)

Section 9A of the Taxes and Duties (Special Exemptions) Ordinance (Title 69.2) gives the Governor power to make orders granting exemptions from income tax and retirement pension contributions to certain individuals engaged in defence-based employment.

This order means that employees who work for one of the employers listed in the Schedule are exempt from income tax and retirement pension contributions until the end of 2017, provided that they are engaged in relevant employment (as defined) and the other requirements set out in section 9A of the Ordinance are met.

The effect of section 21(1)(e) of the Medical Services Tax Ordinance (No 13 of 2010) provides that the earnings and benefits in kind that are exempt from income tax under this order are also exempt from Medical Services Tax.

The effects of this order (which replaces a previous order) are:

- (a) to extend the life of the exemption (which was due to expire on 31 December 2016) for another year; and
- (b) to add VolkerStevin Services Limited to the list of designated employers

Under section 9A, orders have to be made on the advice of the Standing Finance Committee subject to lawful conditions. The Standing Finance Committee has advised that an obligation be imposed for companies to complete an employer's return so article 6 provides for that.
