JOHNSON'S HARBOUR OR BERKELEY SOUND FARM, COW BAY, CAPE CARYSFORT, EAGLE POINT AND VOLUNTEER POINT STATIONS

NB: Various spellings of names are as written in the records

Johnson’s Harbour was named after John JOHNSON, a seaman from Copenhagen known locally as Pirate Johnson and purported to be the sole survivor of a party who buried treasure in Berkeley Sound. In the 1842 census he is recorded as being 23 and from Copenhagen, a seaman on board the sealing schooner Montgomery. Berkeley Sound and Cape Carysfort (sic Carysford) were named by Commodore John BYRON of HMS Dolphin in 1765, after the Earl of Berkeley and Baron Carysford, lords of the Admiralty. Eagle Point was named by the French after the frigate Aigle which arrived in 1764. Volunteer Point was named after the Volunteer which visited Port Louis in 1815.

On 14 February 1820 the French corvette l’Uranie under Captain Louis de FREYCINET struck a rock about ¾ of a mile North-East by East of the Volunteer Rocks. The ship was turned around and got off but was leaking fast so they made for land and ran her on shore at Long Island where she fell over on the starboard side. The 160 crew and passengers were rescued by an American vessel the Mercury. The rock now bears the name Uranie Rock. The 3,161 ton Norwegian steamship Guvernoren with a cargo of coal and whaling gear was bound for the South Shetlands via Stanley. On Tuesday 29 November 1921 at 10.55pm in a high sea from the north the ship struck near Cow Bay off Cape Carysfort. Shortly after she struck the No1 hold filled with water and as the ship was shaking so much the crew were ordered to the lifeboats and the accompanying whalers were signalled to come and save the crew. At about 2am everyone had been transhipped to the whalers by four lifeboats. The officers and crew, 88 in total, were able to convey themselves and a few of their personal belongings to the three attendant catchers and reached Stanley the next day. Seventy of the crew were shipped home, departing on the Orcoma 1 December 1921. The Guvernoren was abandoned to the underwriters by the owners and Captain John E BERGGREEN, first mate Amandus HANSEN, H SYVERTSEN, chief engineer Louis SKARRE, E BERGER, A WAARDAHL and able seaman Hans BERTELSEN departed 18 January 1922 on board the Orita which was bound for Liverpool. The three catchers, Odd, Odd I and Odd III, were given permission to proceed to the South Shetlands and work in connection with the floating factories Ronald, Pythia and Falk and departed 22 December 1921. A number of items were salvaged from the wreck including a motor boat, open boat, lifeboat, wireless plant, furniture and harpoons.
