Top scores for star scholars

STUDENT Emily Hancox (22) is celebrating a first class BSc Honours Degree from Lancaster University, and, happily for the Falklands, is just one of many good news stories about Islands' scholars' achievements overseas

There are currently 37 students in further education and 14 graduating from university this year.

The first results are trickling through and appear to be reflecting admirable efforts.

Emily Hancox is top of the class with a 1st in Environmental Biology (BSc Hons). Although she obtained her degree from Lancaster University in the UK she also spent a year in America studying at Oregon State University's Hatfield Science Centre.

Proving you can both work hard and party hard, she said the experience was amazing: "Studying abroad was immense, teaching people to benny bop in bars is clearly a good way to impress the locals

"I'm also really pleased that all the hard work paid off, hours in the library contrasting with the social side of student life made it three of the best years of my life."

Emily is planning three months of backpacking in South America before she hits the job market and should be safe in the knowledge her achievements and experiences have given her the best possible advantage.

Nadia Smith (21) is another success story, achieving a 2:1 in History (BA Hons) at Manchester Metropolitan University.

Nadia and Emily both made the journey to the Isle of Wight last week to celebrate their success by joining Falklands supporters at the NatWest Island Games.

Mark Plunkett (21) is a satisfied student collecting an HND with merit and a 2:1 Honours Degree over his three year study of Information and Communications Technology.

Mark's inspiration for choosing his courses was, "mostly centered around my desire to be more involved with the web and computing as a whole.

"During my first year I decided I wanted to focus more on the web element and less on the computing and start doing more modules focused on website development," he said.

Not surprisingly it wasn't all studying for Mark, who, following completion of his second year was invited to interview for SOZO Designs where he worked as a Junior Web Developer in his third year.

Now graduated, Mark is working full time at SOZO Designs as a Web and Social Media Developer, "encompassing a variety of roles."

Helen Davies (21) achieved a marvellous 2:1 in Contemporary Art (BA). She was a whisker away from a first class degree by only four marks, but said she was still happy with her result.

Helen is gearing up to begin her PGCE Secondary Art and Design in Northumbria with hopes of becoming an art teacher. She plans to exhibit works from her degree show in the Vymer Street Gallery in London, scheduled for August 1-0

There are still a number of students awaiting their results, including Sean Moffatt (24) who has completed his PGCE, and is confident that when he receives his results next week he will be qualified to teach Secondary Education Design and Technology.

Adam Howe (21) will receive his results on July 15, but has already been offered a conditional PGCE course at Northbrook Art College with an aim to becoming a fully qualified teacher by this time next year.

North south link explored but Miami unconfirmed

GOVERNMENT has stated it is exploring a north south airlink but would not confirm reports that the link would be out of Miami.

Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek told Penguin News, "As you probably know the Tourism Strategy recently approved by Executive Council and the Tourist Board includes a proposal for a north south flight.

"We are currently exploring some options but cannot make a decision to progress beyond that until we have a clear idea of how the potential costs and logistics stack up. In the meantime it would be premature to comment further."

Responding to a rumour that the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) Chief Executive Tim Thorogood and General Manager Development Corporation David Waugh, were setting up private company to deliver an airlink out of Miami to the Falklands, funded either completely or in part by FIG, Mr Thorogood said, "I am very amused by this rumour but happy to confirm that neither I nor David Waugh have set up a private company overseas to deliver an air-link to/from Miami."

Commercially viable oil flow

ROCKHOPPER Exploration plc reported a successful flow test last week with oil flowing, "at commercially viable rates."

Further appraisal drilling will be progressed over the next few months on the Sea Lion resource.

Sam Moody, Chief Executive of Rockhopper said, "This very positive well test result is another key milestone in establishing Sea Lion commerciality."

Penguin News

WHAT a week! And I mean that in a good way.

Always one to get a bit of lump in my throat when the university results start coming in, this week has been no exception, and on top of that the hype of our young sports people setting personal bests at the Island Games and year 11 taking their final bow at FICS before heading out into the big bad world, well it's all been just a bit too much for

While we often curse the lack of anonymity in a place this size, on these occasions we can delight in the fact we've known many of these young people since they were toddlers, growing up into hoody-clad youths slouching their way along St Mary's Walk, returning to the Islands as trend setting students during college years until finally they are clutching degrees and hopefully eyeing up some of those super head positions in government

Maybe the first Falkland Islands Government Chief Executive is in this batch of graduates or maybe she or he is already working quietly away on a lowly rung of the corporate ladder we are assured has been put in place. There again, they may end up disillusioned with the government system and after years of faithful service despair at being constantly overlooked when promotions come along and set up their own business or go overseas as we have seen many do in the last year

Meanwhile in the Isle of Wight our young people (and some not quite so youthful) have also been flying the flag, promoting the Falklands and making lots of new friends

That's the fun bit. From my experience at previous games, when your name is announced over the tannov and everyone in a two mile radius is informed you are representing the Falkland Islands, it's no exaggeration to say your legs turn to jelly and the golf club you are clutching suddenly feels like the most alien and useless lump of metal you'll ever have the misfortune to pick up.

Suddenly it's not just about playing a game, it's a weighty responsibility and the inner battle with nerves and the knowledge your every action will be attributed to your country is one of the toughest matches

It takes guts just to get out there, but with the improved media coverage we've enjoyed over the last week, competitors can rest assured we've been right behind them every step of the way.

Sleep comfortably with strong Islands defence in place pable of mounting a military action against the Falklands; we have four Typhoons, a Type 42 destroyer, HMS Clyde and forces on the ground. We are a lot much better defended that we were in 1982 and I believe that defence is pretty secure," Assembly Member Dick Sawle said on British television on Wednesday.

Interviewed on the live BBC Daily Polities program next to British MPs, Nick Herbert (Tory) and Hilary Benn (Labour), MLA Sawle said he didn't think there was any likelihood of any military action against the Falklands from Argentina despite, "the bellicose rhetoric we get from Argentina on a fairly constant ba-

He added: "I think we all sleep comfortably in our beds knowing we have a very strong defence of the Falklands.

Asked if international opinion was turning against the Falklands. MLA Sawle was most enthusiastic about the Falklands policy in the international stage. "I think it's the opposite, the international tide is actually turning in our fayour, we are going out into the international forums; we are speaking more vocally about our own position and our wishes, which is the most important thing.

The United States recently signed a declaration calling on the UK and Argentina to begin sovereignty discussions over the Falklands, but MLA Sawle said the message from the USA had not changed since 1940; "It's very much the same message they have been putting out in the OAS for many, many years.

Before arriving in London MLA Sawle completed a round of political contacts in Washington, "to a man, I can say all political contacts were extremely supportive," he said.

MP Hilary Benn was equally assertive about the UK's commitment to the Falklands and self determination, and MP Nick Herbert ratified PM David Cameron's statement that the Falklands sovereignty is "not negotiable" but also the government's "clarity of purposes.

The UK coalition government has a firm, consistent approach to the Falklands' issue which has been made absolutely clear to the international stage and to Argentina, but, "of course, we want to engage with Argentina on all sort of other issues," said MP Herbert

On the USA issue MP Herbert said it ought to be remembered. "there was actually a great deal of help given by the US when we sought to reclaim the Falkland Islands, and they remain very important allies for us.

Free unlimited MBs

FREE and unlimited megabyte (MB) useage between midnight and 6am will be introduced as part of a three month Cable and Wireless night time user scheme trial on August 1, 2011.

Cable and Wireless Chief Executive Justin McPhee said: "We have seen a significant change in internet use, particularly in the number and size of software upgrades. Customers have more and more applications on their PC which regularly require updates.

"Whilst customers want to keep their PCs up to date, most people don't want to use their valuable MBs on this type of use, so, in response, we have come up with an exciting new scheme which gives every customer, residential or business packages, free night time use between midnight and 6am. We anticipate that customers will want to make use of this time to allow their PCs to receive software updates leaving their purchased MBs for everyday use. We are running this as a trial for the next three months in order to assess its impact on customers and on our network performance. Due to ongoing discussions with FIG on a range of telecommunications issues, we are unable to commit to this as a permanent package enhancement. We will review the situation towards the end of the trial period and advise customers of its future beyond 31 October 2011.

Mr McPhee added some words of caution: "We are delighted to offer this enhanced service to customers, however, customers must manage their account carefully to ensure that MBs do not accidentally flow outside of their free window. As this is a free service we cannot offer a quality of service guarantee during this trial pe-

Welsh SAMA windfall for sleepy Caris

A BEMUSED Caris Stevens was awoken from a sound sleep last week by an overseas telephone call informing her she had just won £300 in a raffle.

While initially believing herself to be the victim of a scam, Caris was eventually convinced otherwise and found herself thanking a representative of SAMA (Wales).

"While I was chatting to him I remembered it was a random party at the FIDF hall ages ago and SAMA Wales were selling raffle tickets so I bought a bunch for a fiver.

"I have never won anything good from a raffle. I'm just so thankful they called to tell me or I'd probably never have known" she said.

The first Islander ever to win the SAMA82 Anniversary National Raffle. Caris was blissfully unaware her name had been called at Armed Forces Day in Cardiff on June 24.

The top prize will be going towards a well earned holiday on the sunny island of Crete to visit family.

Sometimes it seems like the Falkland Islands in the sun

PENGUIN News John Fowler reports from the NatWest Island Games in the Isle of Wight. Turn to page 9 for images of our competitors. Mr Fowler's presence was sponsored by the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association.

There are a number of significant differences between the Isle of Wight and the Falklands: the Isle of Wight has a history of settlement going back to the time of the druids, so there are ancient monuments, historic houses and winding roads better suited to horses and carts than the cars belonging to the hordes of holiday makers who go there each summer

With numerous ferries, including hovercraft, arriving each day, the Isle of Wight is much better connected to the mainland than the Falklands, and the mainland is much more friendly than our nearest neighbour.

There are trees too, lots of trees, and rural pubs and more beautifully manicured cricket pitches and golf courses than seem strictly necessary.

Despite all these differences, there have been times during the last week when the Isle of Wight has seemed like the Falkland Islands in the sun.

When Ailie Biggs and I arrived on the island last Friday to help with FIOGA's media efforts, we were obviously expecting to spend a lot of time with the official team of over sixty competitors and officials - the biggest we have ever sent anywhere.

Not only do we see them in action each day, but we live in the same holiday caravan park with most of them. The big surprise, however, has been the sheer number of other Falkland Islanders or people with Falkland Islands connections who have been drawn magnetically to this island to cheer on our team.

Maybe it's something to do with the proximity of Southampton, but Falkland Islanders seem to pop out of the woodwork everywhere we go here and sometimes the memory has to strain to fit names to faces. For example, while trying to get a good shot of the opening parade on Saturday afternoon, I bumped into my Stanley next door neighbours, Carl Stroud and his family, who I had assumed were still in the South Atlantic. Recovering from this pleasant shock, I was suddenly hailed by Shirley Hirtle, who told me that one of the policemen I had just passed was Falkland Islander Gavin McMillan, who I last saw in 1974.

So frequently have these kinds of encounters been that sometimes I have wondered who exactly is left in the Falklands to listen to Ailie's radio reports, or who exactly is 'minding the store' with the Governor here and two of our eight MLAs.

Former MLA Glenn Ross is also here and as a golfer had a record-breaking first day on Tuesday.

One result of all this Falklands presence is that our teams have had loud vocal support at every event in which they have appeared. This has been boosted by hugely enthusiastic support from many others as well; I have heard the phrase, "you've got to support the Falkland Islanders" from many lips this week and when the Falkland Islands team entered the arena for the opening ceremony, the cheering was the loudest heard

There has been plenty to cheer about too. The policy of including as many young competitors as possible has been well justified and hopefully will act as a spur to the efforts of other youngsters in the future.

Far from being over-awed and intimidated, teenagers Ross Stewart, Sorrel Pompert Robertson, Sonia Arkipkhina and Dominic Jaffray have exceeded all expectations and in some cases already enjoyed success against much older competition.

It is of course marvellous when our experienced competitors, like Doug Clark or Saul Pitaluga have the success their long-term dedication to their respective sports deserve, but when success comes to the youngsters named above or to shooting first-timer, Mat Vincent, there is the added satisfaction of knowing that the future of sport in the Falklands is thereby more assured.

Success for a tiny country like the Falklands has to be seen in context, especially in the face of results like 6-0, 5-0 and 6-1 for the Falkland Islands football

Having seen all three games played so far, I would argue that their determination to play hard to the final whistle against teams which in some cases have included professional players from large leagues, has given them a different kind of success and has won them much support and respect.

I'm not going to use the classic excuse 'we was robbed' but it is fair to say that the scores do not always fairly reflect the run of play or the numerous fluke bounces and deflections from which our team suffered.

Such bad luck was most clearly illustrated on Tuesday, when shots at goal unavoidably hit Daniel Biggs, who has been the team's lynch pin, and were deflected past goalie Ben Hoyle.

Common report

A PRELIMINARY report on managing Stanley Common has been produced following consultation with Common users, however, the content was to be assessed before going public said EO Nick Rendell. Environmental Committee member Richard McKee said designating relevant areas of Cape Pembroke as a National Park would help address access issues and offer additional management tools to prevent further damage by mud-tracking. After a full consultation had been completed the management of Cape Pembroke and the rest of Stanley Common should be reviewed with appropriate designations considered, including the potential for making part of the Common a National Park, said

Minefield praise

ENVIRONMENTAL Committee member Sally Poncet has congratulated Falklands Conservation on the minefield restoration work carried out with tussac and grass planting. Environmental Officer Nick Rendell said the areas at Surf Bay are to be monitored for a further year while and it was suggested that the information regarding blue-grass replanting could be shared with farmers as there had been very few trials conducted in the Islands.

Shipping news

THERE were only four ships in Stanley Harbour this week. Byron Marine's platform supply ship Toisa Invincible left June 27 and its AHTS UOS Endeavour left June 23 while the UOS Navigator was still in port on Wednesday. The only other visitor was Sulivan Shipping's longliner CFL Gambler which left on June 22.

BFBS new man

PORTSMOUTH radio station announced this week that its award winning Drive Time presenter Jason Webster is joining the BFBS team in the Falklands for a year.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

SOME information to correct a couple of inaccuracies picked up from statements in candidates' speeches in the lead up to the recent by-election.

FIRST the figure quoted as if it represented the recruitment costs for a chief medical officer, was in fact the cost of all recruitment up to the date that figure was given to PN some time ago. However, that figure did not include the cost of flights and accommodation for interviewers which I believe should be apportioned between the various tasks undertaken by officers when they are overseas.

SECONDLY Government salary scales are published annually in the approved estimates, usually available from the Treasury early July each year. Each department's budget includes a list of posts and their grades. Overseas contract post terms include annual flights for the officers and their families and a gratuity instead of pension contributions.

THERE was also much discussion of absences from the Islands, but the only officer who appears to have been given a 'commuting contract a few years ago recently left. The notion that we should be able to dictate where officers' partners and families live is archaic and fanciful. Partners may have their own careers or family commitments that make residence here impossible. While ideally some like to work here, it is often not possible for all to find employment here that matches their qualifications. The news for the dinosaurs out there who think we should insist on posts being 'accompanied' is that women are no longer regarded as chattels following their men. Not to be sexist, I'm sure the same applies to partners of either gender.

IT was a pleasure to attend the Year 11 prize giving last Thursday and see the group of students about to launch into the next stage of their lives. Many different students received a whole variety of different prizes and commendations for their many talents. The other highlight was an address by Mrs Veronica Fowler who is finally retiring after many years of distinguished service to education in the Falklands. I hope the students enjoyed and took note of her excellent advice.

MPC wind farm should have been privatised

FALKLAND Islands Government involvement in the development of the Mount Pleasant Complex (MPC) wind farm has drawn criticism from parts of the private sector who believe the project should have been offered to a local business.

At a public meeting on Tuesday evening a number of individuals including former Financial Secretary Derek. Howatt challenged the decision to retain it as a government project.

Members of Legislative Assembly responded saying the decision was a reaction to a request by the military, who would pay for the energy and the government "will make money."

MLA Jan Cheek said the project had been in the pipeline for around three or four years and was well underway by the time the current government was elected.

She said on principle everyone was very much in favour of privatisation "but to be fair the person appointed to lead privatisation was sidetracked on other things requested of him... but there is no lack of will to go ahead with it."

MLA Emma Edwards added that the spin off from the wind farm at MPC might be power for potential Camp businesses in that area

MLA Cheek confirmed that the Falkland Islands Government expected to recoup capital expenditure in the use of the wind farm.

Responding to further questioning MLAs said there was no suggestion the wind farm would link into the Stanley energy grid and this had never been intended.

Gobsmacked by quarry charges

A STANLEY businessman was "appalled" and "gobsmacked" that Pony's Pass quarry charges had increased by 30% in twelve months.

Members of the Legislative Assembly defended the challenge from Lewis Clifton (Byron McKay Ltd) at Tuesday's public meeting, saying the last 20% increase was decided upon instead of the intended 10% increase, because cost of maintenance increased when output "started bumping up." (Rock from the quarry was used in the resurfacing of Mount Pleasant Runway).

Financial Secretary Keith Padget said even with the increases the quarry was still making a loss.

People expect more and more says FIG

'WHAT influences us' was the keynote of a presentation to the public on the subject of the budget on Tuesday night, by Financial Secretary Keith Padgett.

At a reasonably well attended meeting Mr Padgett explained that when setting the budget he had to take into account such additional costs as increasing expenditure, inflation and new services.

Referring to the latter he said people "expect more and more" and new services cost money.

He added that revenue increases were not keeping pace with government expenditure, primarily because some income sources were volatile such as sale of fishing licenses and the investment market value. He noted the Islands had a limited tax base and a number of historically free services.

This he said was "unsustainable for the future" unless something changed.

Non Falkland Islands Government influences also exist, said Mr Padgett. The FTSE is recovering to a degree but money markets continue to fluctuate. Banks are also restoring credibility but interest rates are extremely low: "Confidence in banks is patchy."

Mr Padgett spoke of the additional funding from tax revenue of oil companies as well as money from customs, berthing and the sale of water to the same companies. However, he noted that fuel prices were extremely high and goods were higher priced due to the unreliability of shipping: "Both of these affect the Falkland Islands Government."

Extra income from sources such as oil licensing meant funding approved for other projects.

Explaining how the government was responding to the challenge he referred to the five year medium term plan leading to a balanced budget for the long term that reduced reliance on volatile incomes as well as making funding available to diversify.

Mr Padgett showed figures that noted the £102k surplus for 2011/12 budget but predicted a small but significant deficit for the next five years (around £317k reducing to approximately £73k).

He also noted that it is FIG's intention to maintain two and a half times the operating budget in the consolidated fund.

Outlining additional income (the different between what FIG originally budgeted for this year and what they have now budgeted) for the current budget Mr Padgett said £248k had been received from oil acreage rental, £1562k from tax receipts, £517k from FIG investments, £496k from Customs, £486k from MST and £270k from fishing.

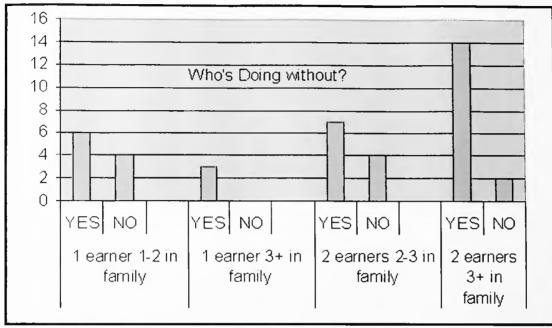

Intended significant areas of investment as a result of the additional income would be the abattoir, MPA wind farm, the museum moved to the Dockyard area, the fisheries building and relocation of PWD, increased succession planning and staff development, the 30th anniversary of the liberation celebrations, public relations, health and education, the three strategies (Economic, Tourism and RDS), telecommunications regulation, government housing and building plots.

He outlined recently released revenue measures before giving a general explanation of the primary areas of Falkland Islands Government income and expenditure.

In conclusion Mr Padgett said "We still have a way to go" and future deficits were evident. He noted that while oil prospects were uncertain it would still be unwise to make major policy reductions. He said the future would involve "difficult choices."

Cash strapped citizens forgo holidays and turn down the thermostat

AN increase in fuel prices, costlier electricity and pricey groceries all add up to Falkland Islanders tightening their belts and cutting back on luxuries according to a Penguin News poll conducted last week.

Taking advantage of the steady flow of voters into the Court and Council Chambers on June 23, Penguin News staff asked forty members of the public "In these more challenging economic times have you found that you have to do without certain items that you were able to afford in the past?"

We also invited them to give examples, and enquired how many people made up their household including how many of those were earners.

Not surprisingly, large families appear to be making the most sacrifices. In the category of two earners in the family and a household of three or more (in fact a large proportion of those had four to seven in the family) sixteen responded and fourteen of those replied yes they did go without certain items that they might have been able to afford some years

Holidays, home improvements and eating out were all sacrifices being made, however, cutting back on fuel for driving and heating were also high on the list, and almost all respondents commented that the high price of fresh food items was a concern.

Only three of the people approached came under the 'l earner 3+ in family' category but all of those indicated they too were doing without. One of those no longer bought fresh vegetables but frozen, and were now embarking on growing their own. They too said holidays were out of the question. Another person (one earner and seven members in the household) said they were cutting back in all areas. Holidays were no longer an option for that family and vehicles had been abandoned in favour of walking everywhere. The respondent also noted "we could never afford to eat at a restaurant or cafe."

Islanders say fresh fruit is now "just a treat" not a staple

While there was a lesser divide between responses in the smaller families categories a relatively large proportion still count themselves as increasingly financially challenged. In the category '2 earners 2-3 in family' seven replied yes, and four replied no they did not have to do without; however, a number of the latter commented that they had always shopped economically anyway.

The small families with only one earner category comprised six people saying life was more difficult financially, while four replied in the negative. However three of those 'comfortable' four were in fact single people living on their own.

Overall the response was very much the case that life had become more stressful in financial terms. One person from a large family said he felt panicked when he thought about clothing his children and had been reduced to buying the cheapest possible cleaning products. Another person said she ordered all tinned food from overseas as this still worked out cheaper than buying it locally and that fresh fruit and vegetables were "a treat". The biggest concern, however, was the price of fuel with one person saying "we've started going to bed much earlier, that way we can switch the heating off."

Despite this, few expressed anger at the situation; most seemed resigned and expressed hope that things would improve in the future.

At a public meeting on the subject of the Falkland Islands Government budget on Tuesday evening, Financial Secretary Keith Padget acknowledged increased fuel prices, and the budget revenue measures that had increased the cost of electricity, health, government property rents and metered water. He also noted that food prices had been affected by disrupted shipping as a result of the Argentine problem.

Despite an increase in Falkland Islands Government revenue at the last budget as a result of taxation of oil exploration companies, Mr Padgett still predicted future deficits noting, "oil exploration is ongoing but the prospects are uncertain. It would be imprudent to make any assumptions about future income from oil..."

Pets and hobbies need paying for HORSES grazing on the Common are pets. Pets need feeding. £89 for 122 days on Cape Pembroke seems to me a pretty good deal. £0.73 day. Not bad to feed a horse especially when you compare it to feeding a cat or dog. Cat dog food (tins) at the Chandlery £0.85±. Maybe cat and dog owners should be allowed to run a small feed flock on the Common. Ah. maybe not, didn't Mrs Stephenson get into trouble when some of her sheep were caught outside of her fence. Stealing horse food Lguess

People seem quite happy to spend 60-70p for a confectionery bar, packet of crisps, stupid prices for bottled water and sandwiches.

The horse owners lobby seems to have a bee in its bonnet about model aeroplanes, how much room do they take up, an acre maybe, which needs to be fenced to stop horses from destroying their runway. There was a protest over the noise which might scare the horses but on occasions when I have been watching the planes Sharon's horses from Ten Acres came to the fence to also watch the action. Relieved the boredom

It could be said that the off roaders have already fed their mechanical horses at Stanley Services and hence remove nothing from the Common, careless damage aside which I totally disagree with No idea why the Golf Club managed to swing a rent free deal. more powerful friends maybe. I'm sure they could make some payment.

Do horse owners have public liability insurance? Park your car in the Cape Pembroke area and it's not uncommon to be mobbed by a bunch of pan-handling horses threatening damage to your vehicle, attacking door mirrors and the like. Is access to the Common to be restricted to horse free zones?

If debris on the Common is a problem then organise a clean up if you care for your animals. Maybe a deal could be cut with the Ag. Department over grazing fees verses the amount of rubbish gathered. However, it's more likely that the problem will automagically go away when a bit of bending down is required.

Simple fact is we all pay for our hobbies to a greater or lesser extent, why should horse ownership be any different.

A civil fee-asco

IT would appear that double standards are being applied vicevis Golf Course fees. There is also no logic to the fees, no fees apply to motor cyclists, or quad bikes users or for that matter drivers of 4x4's. All of whom have the potential to rip up grazing area's.

Penguin News: Missing Links

Penguin News received many calls on this one and it was a combined effort from Myriam Booth, Sharon Middleton, Sally Blake and Howie Peck that identified the wedding as that of Derek Fasseau to Lyn Fasseau in May 1960.

The picture was probably taken somewhere on James Street in Stanley where the couple are

On the other hand horse owners are improving grazing areas, and provide gardeners with an end product!

The title Common as in (Stanley Common) means belonging to the Community. So the charge therefore could well be an encroachment upon your civil liberty

Equality for Common ground

I READ with interest your article in Penguin News regarding the Common fees, Cape Pembroke and the areas in and around Stanley.

I too believe that the fees charged for Cape Pembroke are way above what would be reasonable. The prices for the lease of government land in and around Stanley are now only for the rich and famous. The Common summer fees could be considered acceptable, but bearing in mind the Golf Club (60 acres £35 per acre £2100) and others are free, then I believe that the grazing of horses should also be free and the moneys paid for Cape Pembroke this year refunded.

It is my understanding with the Yacht Club at the Canache, those on the south side pay high fees whilst those on the north side, which is a part of Cape Pembroke, pay nothing.

It is my belief that all outdoor recreational activities leasing government land should be treated in the same way. Horses had the use of the land long before any of these other activities were even thought of in the Falklands.

I was always taught that when you take something out you have to put something back. Horses do that, but in the case of Cape Pembroke what the horses put back is taken out FREE by Stanley gardeners. Perhaps some of the grazing fee money could purchase some fertiliser to keep the land useable.

I not only think that the Lands Committee is questionable but also the MLAs - they must make the final decision.

Cape Pembroke is quietly being fenced here and there and perhaps the mass of land that is spoken about is not so massive when you take the fencing, clay and rock, etc into account

I remember that when the fence was erected across Gypsy Cove that it was only supposed to be until the land recovered and the horses would graze it again. How many years ago was that?

The recent fence took the shelter away from the easterly direction and on two occasions this year horses have been hanging to get to the south coast with the result that the horses which normally graze the Lighthouse area have left and are now up the west

A number of people in our community are spending a lot of money to try and keep the Stanley Sports going. It's almost a hundred years old and a Falklands tradition. Horses have played a part in many of our traditions many of which have long gone, at least save some.

We hear so often about honesty, fairness and openness. Come on MLAs treat all the recreational outdoor activities with the same

Eco plans get the green light

FUNDING was approved last week for a wide range of projects from the Environmental Studies Budget (ESB) following considerable debate among members of the Environmental Committee chaired by Assembly Member Emma Edwards

Falkland Conservation's Chief Executive Craig Dockrill said he did not think ESB funds should be awarded for use outside of the Islands at the loss of locally-run research projects, a principle which was supported by the committee

Ten applications for funding were received with all but two approved and it was widely agreed the ESB needed to be increased to meet demand.

The projects awarded ESB funding were: Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP) coordination and development of a focal point; Beaver Island Landcare (BILC) First Passage Island Rat Eradication; FC Falkland Islands Protected Areas Strategy: Cooperative Management of Biological Diversity; BILC Choiseul Sound Islands Rat Eradications and Baseline Surveys; Shallow Marine Survey Group (SMSG) Contribution to full-time position of Project Officer in the SMSG: Infant and Junior School Year 2 Environmental education trips to Kidney Island; Chris May Speedwell Island Group coastal and inland erosion control and restoration: and Mike Morrison Surveys of Nationally Threatened plants of the Falkland Islands

Funding for three long-term biodiversity monitoring projects was also approved: New Island Conservation Trusts' long-term study of population dynamics of Black browed Albatrosses on New Island; FC population monitoring and demographic study of Black-browed albatross at Steeple Jason and the FC Falkland Islands Biodiversity Monitoring Programme.

Members were keen to award funding to the SMSG proposal bearing in mind that the biodiversity strategy workshop had identified research into the marine environment as a key priority, and this was the only marine-related application. However, it was recognised that in order to do this, funding that had been proposed as allocated to other projects would have to be cut.

Funding for FC's 'Building Local Capacity for Plants Conservation Project, was re-allocated to the SMSG application.

Nip racism in the Students bud says Acting Chief of Police couple of years a small, but rising amount of racial aggravation has creeping into certain offences investigated by the Royal Falkland Islands Police. Acting Chief Police Of-Inspector ficer Len McGill has appealed to the public to nip it in the bud

The Falkland Islands are and have been throughout their history, a very racially diverse community. Our hospitality and acceptance of others is well known. Everyone should be able to live here without discrimination," said Inspector McGill, adding that it was simply a case of being tolerant of others and "considering the consequences of your behaviour.

He said. "I'm not saying you have to love everyone, but if you dislike or have an issue with someone or they have committed an offence against you, then see the person inside, not the colour of their skin (ethnic or national origin), their religious beliefs. gender, political views or sexual preference."

While some of the offences are predictably of the "after the pub" variety, said Inspector McGill, a disturbing amount were being perpetrated by young adults and even children.

He warned that while all cases have to pass the Evidential and Public Interest stages of the Code for Crown Prosecutors, offences motivated by any form of discrimination against the victim's ethnic or national origin, sex, religious beliefs, political views or sexual preference are public interest factors in favour of prosecution. "It's an element that ups the anti, and pushes the case towards the courts and prosecution.

Licensing fees go up

AS from today vehicle and firearm licences have been increased by three per cent, in line with budget decisions. Vehicle licences can, however, now be obtained for shorter periods than previously.

Acting Chief Police Officer, Inspector Len McGill said, "making vehicle licenses available for one to four month periods as well as six month and a year will assist vehicle owners, especially those that may be overseas on leave for several months of the year, when their vehicles are off the road; it also provides the option to spread the cost of a vehicle licence throughout the year.

"Paying a vehicle licence for a period of less than a year attracts a slightly enhanced fee which is designed to meet the extra ficence discs and administration costs involved." The annual fee for a motorcycle will now cost £49.25, light vehicles and tractors £113.50, HGVs and vehicles over 3.400kg £174.75. Trailers drawn by vehicles over 3,400kg attract a fee of £41.50 but small trailers remain free. Fees for change of ownership and obtaining a drivers licence have also increased by three per cent and a new fee of £5 has been introduced for the driver's road code written test.

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

The Falkland Islands Government Public Works Department is seeking expressions of interest from suitably qualified contractors interested in an erecting a new 34m x 46m steel frame office and worksnop building at Megabid. Those interested will be required to confirm their availability to prepare the area and install a 200mm thick concrete slab starting mid-November 2011. The erection of the shed will need to begin in early February 2012 and be completed by early April 2012. All materials for the new building will be provided by PWD, including all ducting to be laid underneath the slab. Plant and labour will be the responsibility of the contractor, as will be all materials for the preparation and installation of the concrete base, including provision and installation of shuttering for the concrete. workshop building at Megabid. Those interested will be required to provision and installation of shuttering for the concrete. Expressions of interest are to be submitted to PWD Design Engineer by Friday, 21st July 2011. For further information and an opportunity to see the preliminary designs of the building please contact Chris McLean in the Design Office on 27187 or 27188.

awarded for media efforts

COMMUNITY School representatives received a highly commended award at the Shine 2011 ceremony held in the historic sur-roundings of Stationers' Hall in the City of London on Monday.

The event was attended by former FICS pupil Katie Vickery and her mum Nicci who are now living in the UK.

Pupils Damaris D'Avino and Louise Williams had planned to travel from the Falklands for the event, however the uncertainty with flights over the last few weeks had prevented this from taking place

Shine 2011 is a new school media awards initiative, offering a rigorous and credible platform from which to recognise and reward the achievements of senior secondary school pupils in England and Wales.

When FICS became aware of the project they applied to enter, were accepted and with a dedicated team of 14 students guided by teacher Pam Beggs, went ahead with producing a newspaper called The Shorn Sheep

The competition aimed to encourage pupils to work together and, with different school departments, create something new. Although the school team was guided by a teacher, the ideas, content, design and strategy of projects entered into the competition must be pupil-led.

Mrs Vickery said she and Katie couldn't have been treated any better if they were famous. "We were the only school introduced to all the dignitaries that attended, and we were the first school up for the tour of the building. Everyone was very impressed that we had travelled so far for the ceremony."

The FICS was one of only three schools at the award ceremony that was not either a grammar school or a private school, and one of only four schools that was not from either the London area or surrounding counties. 122 schools entered into the project and FICS was in the last 16 which really was a 'massive achievement," said Mrs

As well as the teams from the finalist schools the audience included many of those from the media industry who had judged all the entries. Students were complimented on the standard of publications, both in print and online, and for the dedication and effort shown in their work

St Paul's Girls' School, London won the gold award with their magazine The Marble.

Armed forces and veterans

A MOMENT of silence was held at the Falklands Memorial Garden in Princes Street Gardens. Edinburgh as members of the South Atlantic Medal Association laid a wreath, followed by a reading of the Falklands Prayer on Armed Forces Day, Friday June 24. Parades were held up and down the country to celebrate the third annual UK Armed Forces Day. In the Falkland Islands former members of the British Forces now resident in the Islands, along with family and friends, were invited to a reception at Government House on Friday in recognition of Armed Forces Day, however, here the Falkland Islands Government retains the title of Veterans Day. as it was formerly known in the UK. The reception was hosted by Acting Governor Mr Ric Nye.

Live firing

BRITISH Forces South Atlantic Islands (BFSAI) will undertaking a routine live firing exercise between the July 4 and 6 in the areas of Choisel Sound, Arrow Harbour and Victoria Harbour A British Forces spokesperson said. "This exercise is a part of the normal training cycle during which basic military skills will be practiced. There will be an increase in military activity and troops during this period in the locations stated above. Participating military personnel will be wearing protective clothing and carrying weapons as part of the routine training. Small arms live ammunition will be used during this exercise, some of which may be outwith daylight hours. Members of the public are requested to avoid the areas on the above dates between the hours of 0830 and 1930 daily."

Endurance cost

RESPONDING to Labour MP Madeleine Moon. Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Peter Luff said the amounts spent by the Ministry of Defence in maintaining or repairing HMS Endurance during the last five years were as follows: 2006-07 - £3.2 million: 2007-08 - £2.3 million: 2008-09 £2.1 million: 2009-10 - £0.5 million and 2010-11 - £0.

Quick reaction

"A SINGLE Typhoon has been launched in every quick reaction alert activation over the last 12 months," (in the Falkland Islands) Minister of State for the Armed Forces told Labour MP Jim Murphy MP for East Renfrewshire, who asked "in how many quick reaction alert activations which have taken place on the Falkland Islands since May 2010 did (a) only one aircraft and (b) no aircraft became airborne?

Antarctic glacier sliding into sea at alarming rate

RESEARCH in West Antarctica has revealed that not only is a glacier melting 50 per cent faster than 15 years ago, sliding into the sea at a rate of four kilometres (2.5 miles) per year, its ice shelf is melting at about 80 cubic kilometres a year.

New results from an investigation into a large glacier in Antarctica and its impact on global sea level rise were published this week in the journal Nature Geo-

An international team of scientists from Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory and British Antarctic Survey made the discovery saying it was due to an increased volume of warm water reaching the cavity beneath Pine Island Glacier in West Antarctica.

More warm water from the deep ocean is entering the cavity beneath the ice shelf, and it is warmest where the ice is thickest, said lead author, Stan Jacobs, an oceanographer at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory.

Although regional ocean temperatures had also warmed slightly, by around 0.2 degrees C, that was not considered enough to account for the jump.

The local geology offered one explanation. On the same cruise, a group led by Adrian Jenkins, a glaciologist at British Antarctic Survey (BAS) and study co-author, sent an automated submarine called Autosub3 under the ice shelf, which revealed an underwater ridge (mountain) on the sea floor. The team concluded that the ridge had once slowed the glacier like a giant retaining wall. When the receding glacier detached from the ridge, some time before the 1970s, the warm deep water gained access to deeper parts of the glacier. Over time, the inner cavity grew, more warm deep water flowed in, more melt water flowed out, and the ice thinned.

With less friction between the ice shelf and seafloor, the land-bound glacier behind it accelerated into the sea. Other glaciers in the Amundsen region have also thinned or widened, including Thwaites Glacier and the much larger Getz lee Shelf.

Dr Adrian Jenkins from the British Antarctic Survey said, "Our research shows that the glacier melt rate has increased significantly because more warm water is circulating beneath it. It appears that the thinning of the ice shelf that has resulted from the higher melt rates is what has allowed the circulation to strengthen. Its evidence of a complex feedback between glacier dynamics, seabed topography and, ocean circulation that we need to understand if we are to say how Pine Island Glacier will evolve in the future."

He added "The glaciers from the Amundsen Sea region are contributing more to sea level rise than any other part of Antarctica, so it's imperative we understand the processes involved."

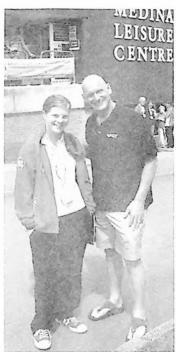

The study received funding from the US National Science Foundation and the UK National Environment Research Council.

Eastleigh offer tough warm-up to Falklands Island Games team

THE Falklands football team warmed up last Friday (June 24) for the Natwest Island Games with a very stern test against a strong Eastleigh side consisting mainly of 2nd team but some with 1st team experience and other players on trial and looking to impress the large contingency of Eastleigh coaches and club management observing, in the hope of being signed up by the Blue Square Bet South club

The match had already been deferred by 48 hours due to flight delays, so it did not help the Falklands team that three members of the squad were also still in Spain awaiting a connection flight to the UK.

With a tough schedule of matches ahead, the team could be forgiven if they had more of an eye on the Island Games. As a warm up game all that could be expected was a stretch of the legs after a long protracted journey and acclimatisation to the warm weather, especially as the UK weather forecast for the start of the Island Games was a mini heat wave with temperatures estimated to be between 25-30 degrees.

However, the Falklands started the early exchanges arguably the stronger of the two teams and played some nice spells of football not allowing the hosts to settle. As time went on though, the Eastleigh team began to establish itself and show the strength in depth available to their large squad, making a number of rolling substitute changes.

Although the Falklands defended ardently, with goalkeeper Ben Hoyles making a number of gallant saves which brought applause from the estimated crowd of 150, the hosts finished the first half two nil up.

The second half continued much as the first, ending with Eastleigh maintaining the pressure on their southern hemisphere guests. The Falklands continued to battle and at times nearly broke through the well drilled Eastleigh defence and were unlucky not be rewarded with any real clear cut chances.

Unfortunately the Falklands were dealt a very cruel blow when an innocuous clearance by Ian Betts resulted in him sustaining a knee injury which required the game to be paused for approximately 15 minutes whilst an emergency ambulance attended to him and transported him to Southampton General Hospital.

Losing any squad member to injury so close to the games must have been the main concern for the Manager prior to kick off.

Understandably the team never fully recovered after the incident, but continued to contend and compete boldly until the final whistle by which time some slick movement and quality finishing had made the score six nil to the

For those unfamiliar with the English leagues. Conference South (currently billed as Blue Square Bet South for sponsorship reasons) is one of the second divisions of the Football Conference in England, taking its place immediately below the Conference National (currently named the Blue Square Bet Premier) which is the top division of the Football Conference. Therefore the Blue Square South is the sixth level of football (with the English Premiership being the first).

The team should be proud of the way they conducted themselves and will now look forward to the Island games with gained confidence and unrivalled experience, especially for the younger members of the squad. Paul Riddell

Coronation chicken fuelled Jay takes Welsh Enduro 4th

THE Welsh countryside resembled a scene from a swamped Glastonbury, after almost 600 off road motorcycles battled with the elements to compete in the 2011 Welsh International Two Day Enduro.

In its 60th year, safe to say that this year's event went down in history as one of those legendary wet ones.

Jay Moffatt, representing the Falkland Islands, was just a little bit apprehensive as he rode into the unknown not helped by tales of the mythical Ifron Forest with deep river crossings, unbelievable hill climbs, slippery tree roots, thick glutinous clay and ruts deep enough to swallow any unsuspecting rider, whole. These thoughts were amongst those that Jay could not forget as he approached the first special test at Cross Gates. As he ploughed into the mud, his first thought was that no one had exaggerated.

This set the scene for the next two days of intense physical bike riding, giving a whole new meaning to the word 'endurance'. Jay tore through the Welsh countryside, ripping past riders buried deep in clay and swamped machinery of all makes and colours sat steaming by the riverside. He relentlessly pushed on, fuelled by Powerade and coronation chicken sandwiches, arriving at the checkpoints exhausted but, thankfully, unhurt.

After the first day, Jay had lost twelve minutes overall, with the majority of competitors also losing minutes, including professional riders such as Tom Sagar and Paul Edmondson (both in the Championship Class).

By close of day one, Jay was comfortable in fourth position in the very competitive E1 Clubman Class. Feeling completely drained, Jay completed the maintenance schedule before taking his bike to the pare fermé in preparation for the next day's racing.

Rested and more confident after a credible finish on the first day, Jay set off for the final day of racing. The weather? Dry with rain forecast for late afternoon. Conditions had slightly improved, making two of the special tests fast and sticky. However, Cross Gates (the last special test of the day), being located in a forest, had not dried out. By the time Jay came through the course, the heavens opened up and the rain had started lashing down, again.

After two days of riding in mud, clay and tree roots, a little more extreme weather would seem a doddle as he kept the throttle wide open to finish his second Welsh 2 Day Enduro.

Jay's final results spoke volumes in the E1 Clubman Class. His KTM 250exc-f helped give him the fastest times in three out of six special tests and second in the others, achieving best overall rider in his class in the special tests. Jay completed the event in fourth position, having lost out to third place by just five seconds.

Special thanks go again to ET James for their first class help and support in the lead up to and throughout the event, which is so crucial to the success of all Falklands' Enduro riders, past and present. Cheers Ché.

BAS director Nick Owens and Dave Peck with his award

Long service award for young BAS man

ISLANDER Dave Peck, this week became the youngest person to ever receive a Long Service Award from the British Antarctic Survey (BAS).

Mr Peck who joined BAS on October 5, 1986 was presented with his award by Professor Nick Owens, the Director of BAS.

Beginning his career as a deck boy on the RRS Bransfield, Mr Peck has since worked his way up to Bosun and currently serves on the RRS James Clark Ross.

Mr Peck who lives in Stanley with his partner Ali Robson and their young family is likely to retain the record of being the youngest recipient of the award due the way employment is now carried out, said communications officer Mike Gloistein.

Transition to work and study

TRANSITION week is held after the year 11 students have completed their final exams. Many speakers and activities were organised to help students with the change from school to college or the work force. The topics included first aid, road safety, banking and money management, mental health, applying for jobs and interview techniques. Teamwork activities included Project Runway (designing and making an outfit in a day) and competitive games with the Hillside PT instructors.

The Community School would like to thank the following people for their time and expertise during the year 11 transition week:

Jock Elliot from the training centre, Councillor Sharon Halford, Glenn Ross, Dick Sawle, Jan Cheek, Karen Rimicans from Team Tranquil, Jodie Poole from Standard Chartered Bank and Jane Rowlands who spoke as a past pupil.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland,
Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

182 MHz HF 2.182 MH2 HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report June 23, 2011 By Tony Mills, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands

The rise and rise of the Australian wool market has continued with the EMI lifting a further 5 cents from the previous week to 1436 AU c/kg (938 GB p/kg). The general market outlook remains positive with competition remaining quite lively even though offerings are still attracting strong interest. Key market analysts again report that those wools of better quality are still attracting strong interest. This fact was evident in the easing of values in the mid micron range which have suffered from a tailing off in quality. Indian buyers for the second week have competed strongly with Chinese buyers. Australian Wool Innovation report that there is evidence that the downtrend in wool production is easing on the back of good seasons and lambings in the eastern wool producing regions. This will be one of my last wool reports before I depart the Falkland Islands in August. This duty will shift to our new advisors who last week took the opportunity to meet with key buyers at Modiano From all reports the buyers rate Falkland wools highly and also see some opportunities for further improvement. I am sure we can look forward to an expanded view once Warren and Helen arrive

FIVE teams of year 11 students swapped books for needle and thread to compete in this year's Project Runway.

Organised by Veronica Fowler and hosted by Simon Isaacs, each team presented their efforts to the school in a runway show on Thursday afternoon after spending all day designing and sewing an outfit together. Simon, the Home Economics teacher at FICS, said it was a notable achievement as most of the students had not used a sewing machine in years and in some cases at all.

Each team elected a model to catwalk each outfit down the school street to their choice of music to be judged by the rest of the school's students and teachers

Team three Kyle Hobman, Rebecca Lowe, Adam Minto, Roisin Stewart-Reid and Travis McGill came out on top with the popular vote from the spectators. Kyle raised an instant smile from the crowd. He certainly stood out with eyecatching colours and a jangling display of bling and belts that would be any airport security guard's nightmare.

The prize for best team work went to group five: Ryan Poole, Remelia Ped, Anthony Philips, Paige Mitchell, Roger Shill-toe and Ellis Smith, agreed by teachers to be the hardest working of all the groups but all models and designers did exceptionally well.

Desert island Cubs sleepover party with fun and games

THE Cubs held their annual Winter Wake Over at the Scout Hut on the weekend with a theme this year of desert islands. All Cubs and Leaders dressed up as either ship wrecked sailors or native tropical islanders.

Cubs voted Africa Shepherd and Derryn Robson as the best dressed, and Africa's mascot which was dressed as a mini Africa also won a prize

The Cubs took part in various games and activities, including the game ship wrecked, a Hoola Hula relay where in teams they had to race to dress in grass skirts and lais- spin the hoola hoop three times around their body and then run to the sand and sift for bugs.

Ciaran proved to be rubber boned and won the limbo dancing competition

After supper everyone took part in Desert Island Discs where they had to choose a tool, food, music, book and a luxury item that they would take with them to a desert island. Rachel chose a five star hotel as her luxury item, while Thomas thought a book containing 1000 ways to survive on a desert island, would be a good idea

More games followed, finishing with the ever popular slug racing in sleeping bags. Kelly proved to be the fastest girl and Ciaran the fastest boy.

Cubs managed to go to bed just in time for a midnight feast, and after lots of noise silence finally fell at 3.15am.

The Conservation Watch Group and supporters arrive at Surf Bay

WALK for Wildlife has become a permanent fixture associated with the midwinter swim carried out by members of the Standard Chartered Bank sponsored Conservation Watch Group their friends and families.

The group walk from the Jetty Centre Car Park to Surf Bay. No mean feat if you have small legs, or are dressed up in a penguin suit!

The focus of the fund raising in recent years has been on raising money for local conservation projects and this year by collecting sponsorship, members have raised to date £333.88 for the Oiled Penguin Rehabilitation fund.

"It was a terrific effort by everyone and a huge thank you to all who took part," said Watch Group Coordinator Maggie

Group Coordinal Battersby.

Diesel and diggers costliest imports

DIESEL is our largest import in cost terms according to statistics released by the Falkland Islands Government Customs and Immigration Service.

The fuel makes up a massive 10.84% of all imports to the Islands with a total value of £2.955,099 in 2010.

Over the past six years only 2008 surpassed this with a value closer to £4 million.

Next in line is industrial machinery and other vehicles, both tallying 4.93% of the total value of 2010 imports. The former has reduced over the past five years but the latter has increased since 2009 from £983,204 to £1.342,376.

Kerosene and paraffin came to a value of £1,251,230 at 4.9 per cent while kit houses comprise 2.97 per cent of imports in value terms.

Televisions make up 3.12 per cent, pharmaceuticals 2.75 per-cent and beer and lager 1.77 per cent, far more than that spent on spirits. Cigarettes came to 0.34 per cent of the value of imports, on a par with structures and bridges, as well as paper products and baths and basins.

It seems Falkland Islanders have no great interest in precious stones (husbands and boyfriends should take note), umbrellas (perhaps the Falklands is too windy) and raw hides, skins and leather, yarns and wool (coals to Newcastle).

Products for house creation are of some value, however, once added together and including plumbing, cement, panels and plaster, wood sheets and plywood, chimney pots, cladding materials, doors and windows it totals 2.68 per cent.

Books, newspapers, school requisites and magazines are popular at 1.12 per cent, but not as valuable in import terms as clothing at 1.41%.

Thanks to Customs and Immigration for the release of statistics.

CPA celebrated with toast to Her Majesty

THE Commonwealth Parliamentry Association is to be celebrated in a £2 stamp to be released on August 8, 2011.

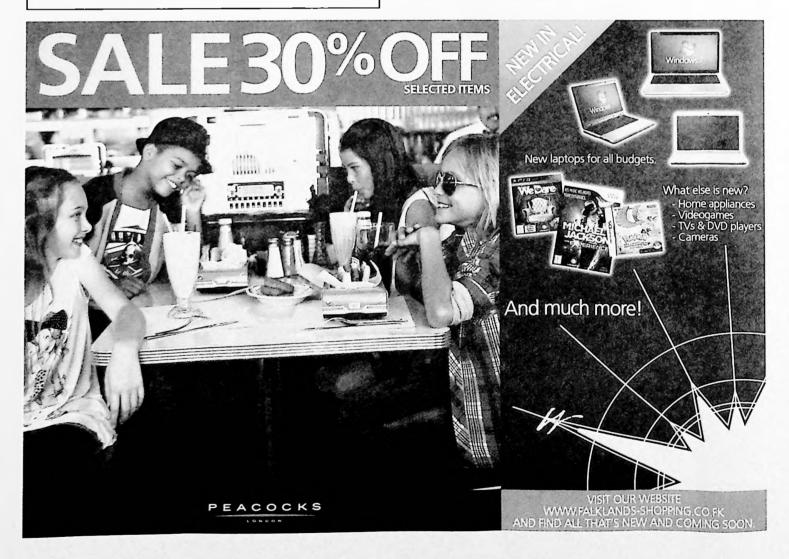

The Falkland Islands joined the CPA in 1975 and Tim Blake, on behalf of the Falkland Islands Legislative Council, attended the CPA conference in India that year.

According to a spokesperson for the CPA Secretariat, "The CPA gave members of the Falklands legislature their first forum in which to argue the right of self-determination and the freedom to choose their own form of government."

Members of the Legislative Assembly continue to attend both the Regional and Annual Plenary Conferences around the Commonwealth. The Falkland Islands Branch will be hosting the Regional Conference in February 2013.

The Association's mission is to promote the advancement of parliamentary democracy by enhancing knowledge and understanding of democratic governance

A blast from the past

Fifteen years ago...

Oil hype was building in the international press and hope building within the Falklands Government and would be investors in the run-up to the opening of bidding in the first oil licensing round.

Typical of the hype was an article in the Daily Mail which spoke of a £5 billion oil jackpot for the Falklands which would transform us from a bleak sheep farming and fishing community into an oil-rich state of the South

In Executive Council the Chief Executive assured the ongoing issue of the removal of the oil from Albermarle was being studied by the Director of Public. The CE said if movement on the matter was not forthcoming then he would take it upon himself to deal with it.

Sand Bay was the preferred site for the abattoir, it was decided, although at the previous meeting it had been decided to build it at Moody Brook.

The housing shortage raised its head again and it was reccomended ten new houses be planned for construction as the first part of East Stanley, and be designated for contract staff being recruited. The recommendation was endorsed, but all agreed that believe the tendent of the standard of the s that balance in the community was desired and an ex-patriate ghetto should be avoided

A 10 per cent increase in stu-

A 10 per cent increase in student grants was agreed.

After a 10,000 feet practice jump at Mount Pleasant the residents of Goose Green were treated to the unsual sight of the 1st Battalion The Parachute Regiment flag being guided into the settlement from 3,500 feet by Sgt Dougie Major Young.

An interesting twist came to light when Sgt Major Young produced a Falkland Islands £1 note duced a Falkland Islands £1 note which he had been given by Islander Kevin Browning, who had travelled to the UK to train for the parachute regiment. A Goose Green resident in 1982, Kevin had given Dougie the souvenir £1 in appreciation of all the help he had given him during his training. Dougle had treasured the note and went on to present it to John Smith, the curator of the Stanley Museum.

The Aerovias Dap return airfare to Santiago cost £390 and for just £525 including the flight you could enjoy six nights accomodation, transfers and city tours.

Ten years ago...

HR Holdings Ltd, shareholders in Stanley Services Ltd (SSL) went into receivership, interrupting freight delivery to the Islands, according to the administrative receivers because of the "overcapacity and intense competition in the UK marketplace, combined with the strength of the pound and the impact of foot and mouth disease on exports" making trading conditions difficult.

A ten man team of Defence Force shooters lay claim to two silver medals as well as five individual bronze medals at a Skills at Arms shooting competition held at Pirbright and Bisley ranges in the UK. FIGAS fares to and from Fox Bay were reduced from £84 to £75.60 for a 12 month trial period in an attempt to provide an incentive for passengers to drive to a "hub strip" thereby increasing passenger density. Areas of land owned by FIG at Hill Cove, Mount Adam, Mount Robinson and Rat Castle were designated as National Parks. More than 100 competitors head-off to the Island Games in the Isle of Man.

Beccy Edwards and Zoe Luxton qualified in their chosen fields of medicine - Zoe as a veterinarian and Beccy as a doctor.

Gracing the back page on Penguin News was Critta Lee who once bravely declared that if Beccy ever became a doctor, then he was a ballerina. Even if he couldn't find his tutu, his efforts to stand by his words obviously made an impact as the two are now happily married with three children and living at Port Howard.

Falklands Conservation Conservation

Deadline for applications: 22nd July 2011

Officer

The Conservation Officer is responsible for developing implementing our biodiversity monitoring, conservation and research programmes, and ensuring that results are communicated locally and internationally. The post is responsible for managing a range of projects focussed on seabirds, invertebrates, marine mammals and invasive species. The successful applicant will also supervise a team of field staff and volunteers. The ability to set priorities, develop research programmes, and work in remote field environments is essential. The ideal candidate will have at least 3 years professional experience, a Ph.D. in marine biology or ecology, and a proven record of scientific publications.

Inquiries should in the first instance be through:

Craig Dockrill Chief Executive Officer Falklands Conservation Stanley, Falkland Islands

Tel 22247: E-mail: craig.dockrill@conservation.org.fk

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE: VACANCY

An opportunity has arisen for a member of the community to become involved in helping to ensure that FIG is delivering value-for-money to the residents of the Falkland Islands. Expressions of interest are sought from members of the public wishing to become a member of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC).

Under the Falkland Islands Constitution, the PAC comprises:

(a) a chairman and two other members appointed by the Governor; and

(b) two members of the Legislative Assembly.

The PAC currently has a vacancy for an "other member" under (a) above. The role involves six (or so) meetings per year, each lasting two hours, with an estimated time commitment of four hours per month for background reading and preparation. The role is unpaid but expenses are reimbursed. The appointment period will be until 31 January 2012 (in order to tie in with the appointment periods of the other, existing members).

appointment periods of the other, existing members). The PAC has an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies. The PAC's task is to ensure that public funds have been expended properly, for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. Hence the role is varied, complex and fascinating. Individuals appointed to the PAC make a significant contribution to the community, in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falkland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of governance in the Faikland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands.

Applications should be submitted to the Governor by 30 July, setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job.

Blackhawks continue their table topping form in the League

THE first game of Sunday afternoon was a tense match between Blackhawks and Penguins who were top and bottom of the table respectively.

Robin Cooper opened the Blackhawks account, closely followed by Frank O'Sullivan. However Martyn Barlow pulled a goal back for Penguins before the break

In the second period, Craig Dockrill hit the back of the net for Hawks, only to see the deficit reduced when Duane Evans scored for Penguins. Cooper claimed his second before Penguin's Key Ross finally scored, after hitting the posts and bar several times during the game.

Penguins played a new pool player, Antony Phillips, who appeared to really enjoy his debut.

final score, Blackhawks 4 - Penguins 3.

The second fixture saw Sharks take on Oilers, who stepped in to swap with Panthers, who were unable to field a team through injury and work commitments.

Ricky Leyton scored two very quick goals for Sharks and it was some time before Ian France managed to pull one back for Oilers.

After the break Gordon Lennie equalised for Oilers only to see Dan Fowler put Sharks back into the lead. Again Oilers equalised, this time through an acrobatic performance from Grant Budd. Another goal each for France and Budd made it a two goal lead before Fowler scored a great one for Sharks in the last four seconds of the game; unfortunately too late to catch Oilers who came out winners by 5 goals to 4.

In the first match of Tuesday Panthers took on Buffalos.

Buffalos stormed ahead into a 5-0 lead, goals came from a Chris McLean hat-trick and two from Nick Rendell.

Panthers dug deep and by half time had pulled two back through Nick Francis and Karl Nightingale scored another four goals, whilst Rendell completed his hat-trick for Buffalos. Andrew Miller also scored twice and Pepe' Pavez also found the net.

The match ended Buffalos 9 Panthers 6.

The second game saw Blackhawks play Oilers who were fielding two pool players in Callum Middleton and a great first game for Sarah Shepherd. Robin Cooper scored first for Blackhawks. Oiler's Grant Budd equalised, be-fore Craig Dockrill gave Hawks the lead again.

The first period finished 2-1 to Blackhawks. In the second period Gordon Lennie equalised for Oilers. This was followed by a second for Cooper and one apiece for Antione Daille and Frank O'Sullivan securing Blackhawks the victory by 5 goals to 2.

FINISHING the same day as the NatWest Island Games started our Half Marathon entries had a 13 mile slog in the Isle of Wight sunshine on Sunday.

Martin Collins was the first of the Falklands team past the finish to take 23rd place overall with a time of 1 hour 26 minutes and 31 seconds. Rex Eagle was also running in his one hundreth half marathon on the day. He came in 28th in a time of 1.32.48. Zoran in his first games hoisted a valiant effort with 1.42.06.

Rex and Martin also entered as a team for the half marathon and collectively came in 10th.

Swimmer Sorrell Pompert-Robertson knocked four seconds off of her personal best in the 50 metresbreast stroke, finishing second in her heat.

Unfortunately at the time of going to print we were unable to publish the full results for Martin, who still has 10,000 metres to run or Sorrell who has three of her five events to compete in still. Full results of these events as well as our successes in badminton, golf, football and shooting can be found on the NatWest Island Games website www.natwestiowresults2011.com or the FIOGA website www.fioga.co.fk.

Ag Department are all ears at Farmers Week

FARMERS were lightheartedly reminded of the importance of double tagging their stock, by Agricultural Department staff sporting tagged cow ears at the Rural Business Association (RBA) Farmers Week Expo on Monday.

Vet Zoe Luxton said it was to remind cattle producers that double tagging cattle with a farm code and unique number was not only good practice for herd management. but was also a mandatory requirement if we wished to have a beef export market.

If we want to export beef to international markets we must meet Talking about Farmers Week RBA Secretary Sarah Clement of SeAled PR said, "There was a good turn-out to all of the sessions this week, particularly from Tuesday onwards.'

Sessions included the implications of hydatid trial results, beef supply and demand, wool and meat enterprise gross margins and presentations from the Training Unit, FIDC, and the Tourist Board. Turn to page 5 for Farmers Week FIODA Variety Show re-

Argos confident

ARGOS Resources Limited has reported the presence of a major delta system (at licence PL001) the same age as the organic rich oil source rock, the presence of which, they said, can be mapped with improved confidence across the licence area. The processing results have been so encouraging that the company has commissioned similar fast track projects on the south eastern quarter and western half of its licence, with results due for interpretation in July and August respectively. Argos hopes to drill in late 2011/2012 in order to have the option to contract the Ocean Guardian drilling rig which is currently operating in the area.

64,000 visitors this year predicts Tourist Board

VISITOR arrivals in 2011 including inbound overnight tourists, cruise passengers and domestic tourists are expected to total almost 64,000, spending £6.85 million, according to the Falkland Islands Tourist Board forecast for the first quarter of 2011

Further cheering news is that 50% of cruise ship visitors last season said they had visited the Islands before and almost one quarter (24%) stated that the Falkland Islands were an "essential" or "very important" factor in their cruise itinerary decision. Over one quarter said they would like to return to the Islands on a land-based tour.

Speaking of the Falklands fore-east statistics Tourist Board General Manager Paul Trowell noted cautiously that tourism was affeeted by a wide range of external events such as conflict and security, health issues, environmental legislation and economic climate, and while some of these can be predicted, others cannot.

He said, "The current oil exploration programmes in the Falkland Islands provide a good example of this, and their success (or otherwise) will have a significant impact on future tourist demand (leisure, business and other) in the Islands.

Mr Trowell said the Islands receive a relatively small number of international visitors and consequently small changes in demand generate large year-on-year percentage increases or decreases.

While bearing that in mind, the outlook appears cheerful. Tourist arrivals to the Falklands are expected to increase by 16 per cent in 2011 with an increase of three per cent in the number of leisure visitors. Over 7,000 overnight tourists are expected to visit the Islands, spending over £4.1 million. Cruise passenger arrivals are expected to total around 43,000 during the 2011/12 season, an increase of six per cent compared to the 2010/11 season.

Domestic tourism is forecast to grow in 2011, albeit at a moderately low rate of two per cent, and will generate over 13,800 trips and £1.19 million in expenditure.

Cruise season

Looking back over the 2010/11 cruise season the report notes the cruise season closed with a total of 40,542 passenger arrivals.

Compared to the 2009/10 season, the number of cancellations was few (only four vessels with a total of 2,659 passengers), however the numbers were still down compared to 2009/10 when 48,359 passengers arrived in the Islands. Almost £1.4 million was spent in the Islands by cruise passengers, with 43% of that being spent on tours, 38% on shopping and 16% on food and drink.

Penguin News

A 26-year-old Egyptian woman worried about the state of her country wrote on Facebook. "People, I am going to Tahrir Square." The message was soon to snowball into a movement to oust Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

I wondered then on Monday night, having noted Mark Short's photo on Facebook of four vine tomatoes costing nearly £5 in FIC, whether his inflammatory act might lead to an anarchic gathering of vitamin C deprived Islanders demonstrating in Gilbert House car park

Probably not - after all it's far too cold, we've all got jobs to do, and it's not as though anyone could afford to allow fruit to go rotten in order that we might throw it at our leaders. Quite the contrary, in fact, were we invited to examine options for rotten tomatoes, far more likely than pelt it at a politician, we would scoop out the middles and knock up a quick batch of chutney.

And after all it's not as though it's their fault that the healthiest of foodstuffs are only readily available to those with an income as chunky and blooming as their fresh-fruit-and-vegetable-vitamin-and-mineral enhanced, muscular and skeletal systems.

Am I magnifying the problem?

Well, perhaps a little, but not as much as one might think, and not according to a number of the parents of larger families that Penguin News questioned last week while conducting our 'Who's doing without' survey; one man even described himself as "panicked" by prices when he shopped for his family.

And the sad thing is it's only going to get worse. World food prices have rocketed as demand begins to inch ahead of production and, added to that, here at home we have an uncomfortable political situation impacting on shipping and in turn on food prices.

But what can our government do? Probably not an awful lot about the price of our tomatoes but they might consider that certainly the lower paid of the population could have done without their tax free personal allowance being victously abbreviated by two thousand pounds just when they're going to need it most.

It's not that Islanders don't understand the government must be cautious in order to maintain vital services such as health care and education, but surely (and bearing in mind, the small government budget surplus and healthy consolidated fund) it now appears to have been prudence to the point of neurosis to have adopted a measure that will have the greatest impact on the poorer paid.

IT was heartening to see the emphasis on the localisation of posts within the FIG in the ExCo summary this week. Government has for many years talked the talk, but to draw up plan and allocate fundi might suggest they're really and truly walking the walk.

Funding available to train Islanders

POSITIVE action is being taken to help Islanders gain the necessary qualifications to snap up professional posts within government.

In addition to the normal training budgets that are allocated to departments, a separate central provision of £200,000 per annum was approved last year which will be allocated to departments as individual training plans are approved

At last week's Executive Council a list of disciplines most needed within government in the medium to long term was approved along with a set of recommendations about how the funds for training should be spent.

MLA Gavin Short said professions such as teachers, nurses, engineers (civil, mechanical and electrical in particular) vets and agricultural specialists, lawyers, accountants, fisheries scientists/researchers, social workers and aviation engineering specialists, to name only a few, would be given priority when training funds were allocated.

"The list of posts that have been identified is quite extensive and it must be recognised that the training/studying is going to cost a fair bit and also that we probably won't get people interested in all the positions listed in one go. So it was agreed that if there isn't a complete uptake of people wishing to train in the most critical areas then positions that are deemed to be the next critical such as project and quality managers, tourism specialists, CAD specialists etc will get preference when it comes to the funding of training and so on, thus establishing a pecking order," said MLA Short.

He urged anyone interested in gaining qualifications in their chosen field to make enquiries regardless of whether it was in the priority list.

The paper considered by ExCo also recommended that preference be given to people not already eligible for the existing higher education funding programme, i.e. those over 25 years of age and those who do not already have a substantial qualification which would make them currently eligible for a post within government.

MLA Short said it was recognised that to make this scheme fair a mechanism had to be put in place to allow people outside of government to participate in studying to gain the qualifications that would put them in a good position one day to apply to take over a post currently filled by a person on contract.

It was agreed that matched funding be sought from people applying from outside of the FIG to ensure that there is a firm commitment on their part. While there was a considerable amount of money available to fund training it was "not a bottomless pit," said MLA Short, adding, "We must make it go as far and benefit as many people as we can,"

Before being sent on courses, however, people will need to get the entry requirements for the course(s) or, depending on the nature of the training, be able to demonstrate skills and commit-

"There is a genuine desire by us to eventually see all posts in the hands of Islanders, or those that have chosen to make this country their home; it is only right and proper that this be the case. I would urge people to get themselves a copy of this Executive Council paper or go and see the Human Resources/Education Departments to see just what is needed and how you can best avail yourself of funding to help you study to one day be in a position to make a better contribution to the Falklands," he said.

Sea Cadet's CPO Ken Newton presented Seamen's Mission managers Luis and Betty Romo with a cheque for £435 on Wednesday, half of the proceeds raised from this year's Midwinter Swim. The other half of the proceeds go into Sea Cadet funds.

Krill fertilising with iron

A NEW discovery has revealed that the shrimp-like creature at the heart of the Antarctic food chain could play a key role in fertilising the Southern Ocean with iron - stimulating the growth of phytoplankton (microscopic plant-like organisms). This process enhances the ocean's capacity for natural storage of carbon dioxide

Antarctic krill is harvested by commercial fisheries for human consumption Dr Katrin Schmidt of the British Antarctic Survey said the discovery was exciting because textbooks state that krill live mainly in surface waters

We knew they made occasional visits to the sea floor but these were always thought as exceptional. What surprises us is how common these visits are - up to 20 per cent of the population can be migrating up and down the water column at any one time." This finding has implications for managing commercial krill fisheries and will lead to a better understanding of the natural carbon cycle in the Southern

STANLEY man, Patrick Minto was banned from driving and received a conditional discharge on Wednesday, after he pleaded guilty to driving while unfit through drink or drugs.

On May 27, Mr Minto was driving a DAF tipper truck near Sapper Hill when he was stopped by police after they received a report he had been driving erratically. A roadside breath test gave a result of 96 micrograms per 100 millitres of breath. 35 mgs is the legal limit

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis gave Mr Minto maximum credit for his early guilty plea, but said the aggravating factors in the case; that he was driving a heavy goods vehicle, road conditions were hazardous, the level of alcohol high and he was driving in the course of his employment duties.

Mr Trevaskis banned Mr Minto from driving for two years, set a conditional discharge for two years and ordered him to pay £85 court costs.

Minefield lessons

STANLEY students were reminded of the dangers of the surrounding minefields this week when JSEOD visited the Infant and Junior School and the Community School.

Two members of the bomb disposal unit now based at Mount Pleasant carried out mine awareness training on Wednesday. Sgt Hemmingway and Chief Tech Gauci provided the students with general mine field information, mine recognition and some basic "dos and don'ts" should they find themselves in difficulty.

Following this they explained their roles and what assistance they provided in the event of being called out to assist people, or remove suspected mines.

Head Teacher of the Senior School, Helen Bell said it was important to maintain the close link with JSEOD despite their recent move. "Even though they have moved to MPC it is good to see that their services are still fully available to the local community," she added.

Tourist Board predictions

There were 6,000 tourist arrivals in 2010, up 43 per cent from 4,200 in 2009, however this growth was driven by oil 'transit' arrivals. Average spend per arrival increased by 20 per cent (or £100) to £595 in 2010.

World wide

International tourist arrivals grew by close to five per cent during the first months of 2011, consolidating the seven per cent rebound registered in 2010, said the report.

UNWTO. According to growth was positive in all world regions during January and February 2011, with the exception of the Middle East, and North Africa. South America and South Asia led growth (both at 15 per cent plus) followed by Sub-Saharan Africa and Central and Eastern Europe.

Worldwide, international tourist arrivals surpassed 124 million in the first two months of 2011, up from 119 million in the same period of 2010, with emerging economies continuing to grow at a faster pace than advanced Outbound travel from the UK has declined significantly over the past three years.

There are as yet no signs of a robust rebound but figures for the first three months of 2011 reveal that Brits took 11,000 more outbound trips than during the same period of last year, suggesting some degree of stability.

This year in the United States baby boomers will celebrate their 65th birthdays at a rate of 10,000 people a day. They also have a deep thirst for experience, said the report, and that holds true across all income levels.

Boomers will value the expertise of travel consultants who can help them craft the fantastic experiences they want.

Resorts in far-flung places and higher spending are among trends in luxury travel for 2011. After a couple of poor years, recent research shows that spending on travel is up again especially in the luxury market.

Loligo: hopes for a better season

AS Falklands loligo vessels make their way back to the Islands following lay-up, repairs and surveys. Fortuna owner Stuart Wallace said industry stakeholders were hoping for a good second season. The usual pre-season loligo survey is currently taking place using the fishing vessel Igueldo. "The first loligo season was not as good as we all would have liked, not the poorest but we could do with a good season this second half," said Mr Wallace.

Motorbike ride

A TWO day off road motorbike ride for all resident enthusiasts will take place this month. It will all take place on Camp tracks and will go from Goose Green to North Arm on Saturday July 16 and back again the next day. The aim is to raise funds for the Falkland Islands Motorcycle Association and entry will cost each rider £20. You can search for 2 Day Motorbike Ride on Facebook. All abilities are welcome to take part in the ride. If you are planning to go or require more information, contact Robert Ferguson on

Referendum

THE referendum (single constituency Bill) will be placed before the Legislative Assembly in August. Executive Council has approved a budget for the referendum but has instructed that funding for it should be found from within the Registry's existing budget. The Bill lays out the mechanism for the referendum, including the question to be asked, voting arrangements, counting and counting staff

Census year
THE census is to be held between October and December this year. MLA Gavin Short confirmed the questions would stay the same as those in the 2006 census. The greatest change this time, which was in fact "quite groovy," said, was the option of answering the census questions online.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

LAST week was busy with the regular monthly meetings which have been reported elsewhere Apart from the regular meetings with the Chief Executive and Governor this week we have Planning and Building, Lands and Health and Medical Services Committees and a question and answer session with the RBA While we understand that the RBA organize events in Farmers week several of us believe that the MLA session should be open to all farmers and offered to hire the hall that morning. Unfortunately it was too late to reorganize this year, but we hope it may be in the future as this is probably the time when the largest number of farmers are in town.

THIS week we have seen an amusing, if irritating, example of tabloid journalism. As I predicted to colleagues, the Mail on Sunday piece was the usual mix of fiction, distortion and misquotes. The reporter made a valiant attempt to persuade some MLAs to say that we did not want oil exploration oil workers here and failed, we said on the contrary they were very welcome. She then found an oil worker, possibly inebriated, to provide the basis for another quote, the one she wanted. I get the impression that many journalists arrive with their story pretty much written and just try to add a bit of local colour to prove that they have actually been here. It often seems a total waste of time to talk to them about important local and international issues in which they clearly have no interest. At least four people had misquotes attributed to them, many pure invention to match a sensational headline.

THE FIRS and FITV coverage of the Island Games has been excellent and gave us a real sense of the atmosphere on the Isle of Wight. It was wonderful to see and hear so many of the competitors. Given the lack of regular practice in competitions at that level I think they did extraordinarily well to achieve so much. Congratulations to every one of them and to those who brought us some of the vicarious excitement of the events.

Wriggly roads for Sapper Hill project

Hill housing project is to be progressed over the next two years following approval from Executive Council.

The works in the first phase aim to provide 34 housing plots and offsite services to support a total of 120 housing units

MLA Gavin Short said this meant approval had been given for works which would comprise a feeder road from the Sapper Hill road up to the second estate road junction together with the off site services (for example sewerage) to support the housing development at Sapper Hill together with the first phase of plots.

The overall layout is largely the result of working with, as opposed to against the topography and existing features of the ground, as it was more cost effective.

"I am afraid to say that the proposed layout will mean wriggly roads as opposed to the old Stanley grid system, as to adopt the grid system would have pushed the price up to a level where the scheme would not have been affordable," said MLA Short.

The scheme is designed so the main access will be from the Sapper Hill road and will push westwards thus reducing the amount of main road that is needed to be built to get the first housing plots into use

The main road would be a significant part of the cost of the first phase, said MLA Short

It is envisaged that the plot sizes would typically be about 800 square metres, but range from about 680 to 1,600 square metres which would cater for a variety of differing needs, he said.

MLA lock-in to brainstorm pound stretching for roads

THE total funding for the 944 kilometres of unsealed roads on both east and west roads for the financial year is £850,000, and in an attempt to figure out how to make such a small amount stretch so far, Assembly Members are planning an away day to brainstorm the issue.

MLA Gavin Short said during a discussion in Executive Council it was suggested the roads should be recapped at intervals of between six to eight years which would equate to about 157 kilometres a year, however at present levels of expenditure and effort, only about 26 kilometres a year is being achieved so the end result is inevitable.

"At the present time we are only fire fighting," he said.

"We are basically paying the price of building a lot of the road network fast and light in order to get roads to all people as quick as we could," he said, adding that it should also be remembered the roads are now being used in way and for weights that some of them were never designed for.

This was due in part to the way the Camp economy had transformed over the years with greater amounts of livestock being trucked into the abattoir.

"If all goes as planned these loads will steadily increase over the years putting even greater pressure on the road system,"

In view of the importance of the situation it was agreed that MLAs plus relevant officials would hold an away day, possibly in August when all are present, "where we will lock ourselves in and have a session on roads and transport to see what can be achieved," said MLA Short.

Raptor shooting licence more flexible

THE policy for the shooting of raptors has been altered by Executive Council to reflect the concerns of farmers whose livestock are preyed upon by the Turkey Vulture and the Southern Striated Caracara.

This means the allocation of licences will be more flexible.

It was agreed the total number of birds that are allowed to be destroyed remain the same, but the policy be changed so that licences can be issued for the destruction of the birds prior to them causing damage to animals where ongoing problems have been proven.

Licences can be issued following a verbal request in circumstances where an ongoing problem has been demonstrated and a formal application had been approved previously.

In 2005 the Environmental Planning Officer was asked to examine applications to shoot Turkey Vultures and an advisory group to consider applications from farmers experiencing damage to livestock from this species was formed. Their remit was expanded to also consider the shooting of the Southern Crested Caracara in 2010.

MLA Short said: "In 2010 licences were issued for the destruction of 100 Turkey Vultures which is in line with the total allowable licences over the last five years. In addition licences were also issued for the shooting of 17 caracaras. Two further studies were also undertaken and have been noted, that of Brandon Breen into the human/wildlife conflict which covered Turkey Vultures and the other was by Conservation into farmer/raptor interactions."

Song and laughter top the variety show bill

"WE need to do this more often," was my lingering thought as I left the Town Hall on Tuesday night with The Pushers' music still ringing in my ears and the infectious enthusiasm of the audience putting a spring in my step.

Old favourite Garry Tyrrell strung the show together, albeit "feeling a bit full after a seven course meal" – a hot dog and a six pack – and counting the minutes until 9pm so he could relax his jokes and bust some moves to the music along with the lively crowd at the front of the hall.

But the real show stopper was Stanley House kid Natasya Rickman (12), a little girl with a big voice who delivered her song with confidence, a beautifully mature voice and the biggest smile.

Also back on stage with his usual composure was one of my personal favourites, Daniel Clarke who performed a sketch as a police officer loath to leave his comfy chair to deal with a dodgy shell found on Surf Bay. To his relief a child despatched it to sea where it blew a fishing boat up and became the Fisheries Department's responsibility - problem solved.

Raising the roof with their take on our Assembly Members in a Big Brother house were Jo Lazo (Emma), Tim Stenning (Gavin). Paula Fowmes (Jan), Kathryn (Sharon). McGeachie Steve Fowmes (Dick) and Fraser Wallace (Roger). In the diary room Emma bemoaned Jan's superior attitude, and had told her where to stick her apostrophes, Dick was tired of Bill's snoring, not from sharing a room with him but from being at the same meetings, and Roger wondered why Sharon was still wearing her posh hat long after the Royal wedding. Gav didn't think it was at all groovy going outside for his ciggie and when Jan drew herself up in her chair and slowly reiterated how this had come about the laughter reached fever point.

Paula also tried her hand/at comedy with a sketch called Better Parenting and the Victoria Wood classic Just Do It.

The Infant and Junior School choir charmed the audience as did the Bow Belles who made their first appearance last year, and the boot scooting posse from Stanley House had the audience stomping and clapping along to Cotton Eye Joe.

Codey Bishop-Newman made his first appearance with his bass guitar and David Ashbridge demonstrated his guitar and vocal skills while the Trough house band The Pushers were tuning up.

And then the old Town Hall really started thumping as Tara Hewitt belted out firm favourites with the audience while old Garry risked putting his back out trying to keep up with the bopping youngsters near the stage.

Thanks to FIODA's efforts a packed hall of all ages had a great night out, and I in already looking forward to next year's show.

Let's keep what's important free

IN response to the comments of Mike Harris in last week's paper.

I take his point that a horse is a pet, but does his cat have to eat in excess of 25kg of feed in a week at a cost of over £15.00 per bag? This is the average amount of feed it takes to keep a pet horse while it is 'grazing' on the common.

The feed quality on the common is extremely poor. Perhaps also, his cat encourages him to exercise in the open air regularly, apparently healthy activity can justify rent free use. A cat is allowed to roam anywhere in Stanley without restriction.

Perhaps the Lands Committe have a plan to apply a fee to all pets that use public land as a toi-let. The 'grazing' fee currently seems to cover just that.

Horse owners cannot just let their pets run around the roads of Stanley doing what they will. where they must. And so they are required to be confined to common ground. Horse owners pay for the privilege of having their horses put wherever someone else wants them while the fast increasing number of gardeners in Stanley benefit from the free manure!

Not that the horses or the owners mind of course, but exactly what does the golf club put back? Except for all those lost balls that contribute to the litter problem. Perhaps the cats and dogs that

Mike knows also help him grow vegetables. In my experience not so much. In fact most pets contribute little outside of being affectionate company. Horses can do all that and so much more and if it's scary out there on the common with the horses then why drive on the bit the horses are in? Car owners have the choice. horses are moved at the whim of the DoA

As for clearing the common of rubbish most horse owners and riders are constantly collecting wire and other rubbish. They seem to be the only ones who do it, but the peat banks with half buried 40 gallon drums and left over war materials cannot be moved by individuals by hand.

I always felt that we were a community that prided ourselves on having children and young people that get out and about doing healthy outdoor pursuits. When I was growing up here that meant fishing, walking and running all over the Darwin area. I was not fortunate enough to have horses to ride regularly but, whenever I got the chance.

It seems to me that we should be supporting all outdoor activities that involve the young and if that means free rental for golf then it follows that it should be free rental for horses.

Let's not compete with the rest of the world on child obesity figures and keep what's important

Why do only horse owners pay?

KEEPING horses is one of my hobbies and in turn they help with my other hobby - gardening. They supply all the fertiliser I need and in doing so they also mow the lawns, (and thanks to all my friends who let my horses mow their lawns in return for the fertiliser.)

I do not think any of the horses owners are moaning about having to pay to keep their horses (as Mr. Harris said, if you have a hobby you have to pay) what we are saying is why is it only the horse owners who have to pay to use the Common?

In the last few years the motor bikes and 4 x 4s have done more damage than any of the horses and they don't pay, some of the young people don't even have a driving license

As for bending down, the horses owner have done more than a lot of other people when it comes to cleaning up the Common to make it safer for all, not just the horses. Take the area down around the Lady Elizabeth: the grass was long and full of rubbish. With the help of the horses and their owners you can now walk along there and it has worked for tourism as well; some tourists even walk along there.

Some of you may not know but the Common is made up of five areas which are grazed on a rotational basis so there are four areas that are horse free at any one time, so the people who don't want the pan-handling horses around their cars can always park in one of these areas and go for their walk.

What we are talking about is the cost and we have less land as a new fence was put up towards the end of last year which I never saw planning permission for.

The last time the minefield fences were renewed they took 1.5 metres in some places. If it was safe to put the fence up before, why move it out and waste more land?

Donations mean thousands for Kidney research charity inspired by Nick Chater

FURTHER to my letter a couple of months ago, my fundraising web-site for Kidney Research UK closed last week, and the charity have now received a total of £7,938.62 through the generous donations received both on and off-line following my sponsored marathon in March.

I would like to thank everyone who donated to such a great cause inspired by Nick Chater.

inspired by Nick Chater.

I visited Nick and his family in Cornwall last month, and although it remains incredibly difficult for the family to be dealing with his illness so far from home, Nick's parents Jane and Tom (and Granny Annie) are doing all they can to give Nick, and his big brother Ben, a normal life whilst Nick waits for a kidney.

The charity carries out research to help others like him, and which will hopefully benefit Nick in years to come.

Young Islanders learn to farm Falklands style

IN A bid to encourage young people to live and work in the Camp the Training Centre is now offering an Agriculture Apprenticeship following much research and planning that started in early 2010.

Two farms have offered to help youngsters learn the skills required to work on and manage a Falklands farm and the interest in available places had been good said Apprenticeship Scheme Coordinator Marcus Morrison. "Unfortunately we can only take on as many as we have places for." he added.

The Training Centre is currently recruiting employers for 2012 with all apprenticeship bids closing on September 23, so if you think you have skills that could be passed on, and you need an extra pair of hands around the farm, Mr Morrison would like to hear from

He explained that an employer could benefit greatly with the Falkland Islands Government funding 50% of the apprentice's agreed wage which starts at £5 per hour for the first year, although the employer could pay more if he thought it was deserved. A tool allowance is also made available in the first year and apprentices' health and safety equipment and training is also funded throughout the apprenticeshin.

Any overseas training is also funded by the Government which includes flights, accommodation and courses costs and all aspects of farming are covered within the apprenticeship from preparing and cultivating sites for crops to livestock management and machinery maintenance.

Mr Morrison told Penguin News that Camp life was vitally important to Falkland Islands heritage and he hoped the Apprenticeship Scheme would lead the way in giving youngsters and employers a great opportunity to increase skills in Camp.

Looking further ahead, he said the Training Centre was also researching the possibility of the Apprenticeship Scheme offering the Agriculture Apprenticeship to 14-16 year olds, also known as Young Apprentices.

"At the moment it is in its early stages, but hopefully it will be up and running in 2012," he said.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE: VACANCY

An opportunity has arisen for a member of the community to become involved in helping to ensure that FIG is delivering value-for-money to the residents of the Falkland Islands. Expressions of interest are sought from members of the public wishing to become a member of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC).

Under the Falkland Islands Constitution, the PAC comprises:

(a) a chairman and two other members appointed by the Governor; and

(b) two members of the Legislative Assembly.

The PAC currently has a vacancy for an "other member" under (a) above. The role involves six (or so) meetings per year, each lasting two hours, with an estimated time commitment of four hours per month for background reading and preparation. The role is unpaid but expenses are reimbursed. The appointment period will be until 31 January 2012 (in order to tie in with the appointment periods of the other existing members).

The PAC nas an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies. The PAC's task is to ensure that public funds have been expended properly, for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. Hence the role is varied, complex and fascinating. Individuals appointed to the PAC make a significant contribution to the community, in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falkland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands.

members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands.

Applications should be submitted to the Governor by 30 July, setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job.

Weather for June 2011

June 2011 could best be described as average. Maximum and minimum temperatures, and sunshine were very slightly higher than average, but rainfall was below average.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 5.1 Celsius compared with the long term average for June of 4.5 Celsius. The highest temperature recorded was 9.5 Celsius on the 22nd, and the lowest maximum was 0.1 Celsius on the 7th.

The mean minimum temperature was 0.9 Celsius, marginally milder than the normal 0.5 Celsius average for June. The lowest minimum was -3.5 Celsius on the 7th and the highest minimum was 5.1 Celsius recorded on the 19th.

. Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 45.4 mm, somewhat drier than the June average of 56.5 mm. The wettest day was on the 29th with a total of 12.9 mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 14 days, and 1.0 mm or more fell on 10 days.

Sunshine

There were 64.6 hours of sunshine, compared with the monthly average of 60.5 hours. The highest daily total was 5.6 hours on the 21st.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog
There were 10 days with sleet or snow, of which 9 days saw snow lying at 0900 local time.

There were four days of hail, no days of thunder, and seven days of fog.

Wind/Gales

The monthly mean wind speed was 13.1 knots, which is almost exactly average for June. The highest hourly mean speed of 37 knots occurred on the 18th, the highest gust of 53 knots being recorded on the same day. Gales occurred on just one day, and there were 15 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

2.182 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Junior League is showing ICC promise

WINTER chill affects most sports and both the junior and senior cricketers of Stanley are moving practice into the Stanley Leisure Centre Gym.

Cricket Development Officer David Hewitt believes this isn't a hinderance to the progression of the sport in the Islands. The bowling machine particularly invaluable for players to clock up some fast paced indoor practice sessions and basic skills are still being honed in the more temperate indoors.

The Under 17 squad of Senior School students make up the Falklands Junior Cricket League and are just starting two weeks of winter training in wicket keeping, fielding and classroom sessions to learn the rules, tactics and etiquette surrounding the sport.

Four teams of four kids played at lunchtimes in a two week 15 overs a side competition showcasing their skill. David assured the standard of cricket was good from the young players: "All of the games were played to a decent standard of cricket and we hope that next year the League can develop and be played throughout the cricket season," he said.

The Falklands Islands Cricket Association is always looking for new members and the FICA Senior competition league starts its season on July 24. Teams need to be registered by July 18 to compete with registration forms and rules attainable from the Cricket Development Officer by phone on 53505 or email hewitt_david@hotmail.com.

Having played in Mexico and Costa Rica in the past there are currently no overseas tournaments planned but they are likely for the future. David explained the aim is to form a junior team who would hopefully be able to compete in International Cricket Council events. In the mean time both seniors and juniors are looking forward to outdoor training and matches again this summer.

Falklands shearer steps up with world champ Fagan

Another famous Kiwi shearer, Roland Smith, took first place

Lee and young Islander Stefen Clarke, had only a few days previously picked up a praiseworthy third place in the International Team Shear at the Lakeland Shears International Sheep Shearing Competition in Cockermouth, Cumbria. One hundred and forty-five male and female shearers took part in the annual show. Stefen competed in the senior competition, and in an amazing effort claimed sixth place overall. Lee Molkenbuhr clipped into thirteenth place in the top prize Open David Gillett, treasurer of the Lakeland Shears, said: "The standard of shearing this year has been very good and is improving every year.

Shearing gang boss Lee is a keen advocate of shearing as a credible sport in the Falklands, rather than solely as a livelihood, and his supportive approach has encouraged a number of young Islanders into the Picture M Brown

Golden hole waits for ship to come in LEGISLATIVE Assembly Member Emma Edwards believes with hindsight, "which is always 20-20," government might not have funded the container park that cost more than £1million.

The £1,086,300 container park just south of FIPASS that has been the subject of much debate since its construction last summer, was up for discussion again at the Legislative Assembly meeting on Thursday after Penguin News had asked Members what the short term plans for it were.

Known locally as the "golden hole" during construction, the 54x100 metre area was dug out to a depth of more than two metres in places and then refilled with crushed rock before being topped with 1,232 cubic metres of 220 mm thick concrete.

There was no private sector contribution to the construction cost, but machinery and other items needed to operate the park were purchased by South American Atlantic Services (SAAS).

MLA Edwards said when members agreed to the project it was a very different situation to what the Islands have now: "We were told that the only way SAAS could retain a container contract was to get a secure container park, that where the old containers were kept was insecure and that sometimes the reefer containers had their plugs pulled out.'

This meant the fishing industry didn't have the confidence to ship with SAAS, said MLA Edwards, but a secure container park would change that.

Even with hindsight however,

MLA Edwards said she believed a secure container park was essential and hoped the fishing industry would have the confidence to use it once a shipping link was established.

The Government currently charge SAAS a peppercorn rent for the container park which is only used for containers in tran-

Charges range from £23 per month for a 20 foot container to £45 for a 40 foot container.

Asked if they would continue to manage the park or if there were any plans in place for the short term SAAS director Stuart Wallace said they did not have anything to say at this stage.

A government spokesperson said arrangements would, "depend on future shipping provision.

Wrapped in red tape?

GOVERNMENT wages for the majority of unfilled FIG posts do not meet the level on offer in the wider market place, stated MLA Roger Edwards yesterday (Thursday).

This made it difficult to encourage suitable applicants to give up more attractive salary packages to work for FIG rates, he added, responding to a question from MLA Gavin Short on the subject of unfilled vacancies

MLA Short said he had asked the question to, "try and highlight that we are getting ourselves into

He said: "We seem to be getting more and more posts we cannot fill or if we do, we can't hang on to staff. Why is this?"

While there was a myriad of reasons why people move on, he suspected that with tradespeople, "our good all-rounders which every organisation needs." it came down to money.

On a visit to a department he was told, "goodwill doesn't put food on the kids' plates.

He said he couldn't blame people for going for better positions and salaries.

Referring to the Power Station he said the inability to obtain electricians had been known about for two years, and every time he asked what was happening he was told it was to do with HR. "It beggars belief that in over two years they have been incapable of finding a solution," he said.

"If this was the private sector I'm sure a solution would have been found. Just what is going on? Have we become so wrapped in bureaucracy and red tape that we can no longer function?

'Let's get it sorted and if it can't be sorted at the appropriate level, let's put things back to the departments and let them sort it out," said MLA Short, adding, "I suspect we would probably see mechanics and electricians if departmental heads were let sort staffing issues out with a competitive salary offered."

THERE seems to have been some monkey business going on within the Development Corporation, or maybe it's just a bit of bully beef.

Heading to the next board meeting (August 9) of the Corporation is a paper seeking the go ahead for a series of uses for Beckside farm - from where Stanley Dairy was operated - the opportunities stemming from which will then be offered to the public, but not until after Executive Council approval, of course.

At last things are starting to move and those who have been interested in utilising the extensive facilities at Beckside will be able to start making plans again. Eggs, veg or maybe even fresh milk could soon be flowing our way again, but don't get rid of those back yard chooks and vegetable patches too soon.

Since the dairy closed in July 2009, a number of people enquired about using the paddocks as grass was evidently going to waste, but they were told the land was being "rested" and when it was considered ready for grazing, it would be put out to the public. If it was put out to the public it got right past me, which is a tad strange given my line of work.

However, anyone with a pair of eyes would have noticed there have been at least 60 cattle beasts down there for the last month or more, and could be forgiven for thinking that plans were already in place to get the old farm up and running again.

And then, even more confusingly, MLA Gavin Short confirmed this week the owners of the cattle had been asked to move their animals, "in preparation for the board to make whatever decisions they deemed correct with regard to Beckside," which left me wondering how permission had been gained for them to be there in the first place when the board were apparently unaware any activity had been going on at

It all seems rather fishy and it is exactly this sort of situation that creates antagonism within the community - it stems from contempt of our intelligence, to assume such underhand actions can take place without being questioned.

Perhaps a change from an "if the face fits" operation to a bona-fide development organisation could be included in the final stages of Tim Thorogood's review, or at the very least an assurance that procedural rules will be followed, rather than shutting the paddock gate after the cattle have been put out, as it were. Actually, I feel a bit sorry for the cattle and the owners who have been chucked from pillar to post but, on the bright side, at least they didn't go hungry.

Allowance mooted for FIDB Chair

EXECUTIVE Council will be invited to consider the option of paying an allowance to the chair of the Falkland Islands Development Board, FIG Chief Executive Tim Thorogood told Penguin News this week.

He will also recommend the chair is not a government official or Assembly Member, but would be appointed by Government.

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation is currently nearing the completion of its review and in that time Mr Thorogood has noted that while few countries have a body such as the Development Corporation (FIDC) after much research, he had decided there was a need for one in the Falklands to bridge the cultural gap between the public and private sector.

The role, or even the need for a body such as FIDC had in recent years been questioned, which prompted Mr Thorogood to conduct a review, however, due to staff issues and changes over the last few years it is only just nearing completion.

There had been unhappiness with the relationship between

FIDC and the government (FIG), with some feeling that FIG interfered too much at times and further criticism of late that FIDC had undertaken tasks at FIG's instruction with little public knowledge.

The question was how to strike the right balance, Mr Thorogood said last week. The aim for the future would be that FIDC put forward an agreed business plan to FIG and set out a budget and then let them get on with it, he said.

However with the rapid world changes there needed to be a mechanism between the two (FIDC and FIG) that allowed some flexibility if the threshold was exceeded, he said, adding that he had proposed a budget of £100,000, but thought it may be considered too low.

He assured however there would always be checks and balances around the use of public money: "That's not going to change," he said...

The next meeting of the Development Board is scheduled for August 9 and will include a paper on future uses for the FIDC owned Beckside Farm from where Stanley Dairy was operated.

Sent to jail to await pre-sentence report

STANLEY man Ryan Lawrence Shillitoe (20) has been sent to prison for two weeks while a presentence report is prepared after he pleaded guilty to drink driving, driving while disqualified, without insurance and without a vehicle licence on Wednesday.

Relating the facts of the case Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said at 12.30am on June 25 a police patrol had seen Mr Shillitoe, who was banned from driving for two years in September, pushing his motorbike near Stanley House. He was unsteady on his feet, had blood on his nose, was slurring and said he was pushing his bike home because he was selling it.

At the Police Station a breathalyser test gave a lower reading of 95mg per 100 ml of breath and a large graze was discovered on his back. In police interview Mr Shillitoe admitted he had driven the bike and fallen off and referred to his behaviour as "idiotic."

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said the only sentence appropriate for at least two of the offences was immediate custody for the two weeks it would take for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Mr Shillitoe will reappear in court for sentencing on July 26.

Soldier steals from hostess

RESIDENT Infantry Company Private Sam Terry McGinty Murphy (23) from Mount Pleasant pleaded guilty to theft in the Magistrates Court on July 6.

In what the Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis described as an act of goodwill a Stanley woman had offered Pt Murphy and his colleague a place to sleep on June 20, when they were unable to travel back to Mount Pleasant after drinking in Stanley.

Ms Inglis said Mr Murphy took household goods and clothing to the sum of £495 from the premises and that although a majority of the items were returned, the crime had left the woman "wary of inviting people into her home."

Mr Murphy apologised for

Mr Murphy apologised for wasting the court's time, for letting the Army down and to the victim.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis ordered Mr Murphy to pay £350 in total: £200 fine, £85 in prosecution costs with an additional £65 payable to the victim for goods not returned.

Bird and mammal observer Criminal record with every rig says Edwards birds and marine mammals should be present during every flaring on the oil rig, stated MLA Emma Edwards, responding this week to an invaluable report by observer Grant Munro.

Mr Munro was engaged by Rockhopper Exploration to observe seabirds and marine mammals near the Ocean Guardian rig in late June, and his findings were considered reassuring by the MLAs and others present at this week's meeting of the Mineral Resources Committee

In the report former Conservation Officer Mr Munro said he had observed no direct negative interaction between the drilling rig and seabirds.

There was also no oil pollution incident, no evidence of hydrocarbon drop-out from the flare, no direct flare attraction or collisions with the flare and no collision or bird-strike with the drilling rig super-structure or support vessel.

He added, however, "it should be noted that observations were generally made from a distance of more than 500 meters which limited the accuracy of observations in the direct vicinity of the drilling rig.

The report said birds tended to flock to the leeward side of the rig when macerated galley waste was released from the structure. It was suggested that it be recommended discharge be released in the late afternoon or early evening instead, which may partly reduce the problem.

Birds also tended to be around the rig in greater numbers in the lighting used at night. Greater numbers of seabirds were also recorded closer to the rig while the support vessel was on close

A paper from the Environmental Planning Officer reporting to the Mineral Resources Committee explained, "In summary, whilst a level of seabird association to the drilling rig was observed, the short durations of well test flaring, low seabird density during winter months, and the seasonal absence of the most vulnerable species would seem to cause a low risk of negative seabird interaction, and none was observed during the current testing."

His note of caution concluded, "It is not possible to make categorical statements or to extend findings to other conditions or seasonal periods when varying seabird species assemblages may be present and associated.

Flaring is used to eliminate waste gas which is otherwise not feasible to use or transport.

could debar working for FIG

A CRIMINAl record could debar a person from being employed by the Falkland Islands Government (FIG), where the nature, frequency or timing of the conviction "would suggest a significant risk to safe delivery of FIG's operational services and the wider community," said MLA Roger Edwards at this week's meeting of Legislative Council. He was responding to a question from MLA Gavin Short that asked what FIG policy was in respect of employing people with criminal records. MLA Edwards gave a detailed answer including information from FIG policy "It aims to ensure that through effective application of the policy the Government maintains its duty of care to service users and employees, whilst not unfairly and unreasonably discriminating against people with a criminal record." He said in accordance with this premise, "the Government will consider ex-offenders for employment on their individual merits, however, it will, as a matter of course, take into consideration whether the job being applied for should or should not be considered as exempt from

Shipping news

THERE were 11 ships in Stanley Harbour over the last week. The AHTS ship UOS Endeavour left on July 7 and the platform supply vessel Toisa Invincible departed on July 12, both are licensed by Byron Marine. Sulivan Shipping's longliner San Aspiring left on July 10 while Workboat Services' ferry and coastal shipping vessel Concordia Bay was still in port on July 13. Seven trawlers visited this week. FIC's trawlers Venturer and Hermanos Touza left Stanley mid week. Castelo was in port on Thursday and Kalatxori left on July 12; both are licensed to Red Back Consultants. In port on Wednesday were Sulivan Shipping's Argos Vigo and Seaview's New Polar and Sil.

Wind vibrations

WIND induced vibrations have caused problems with street lighting in East Stanley. The Power and Electrical staff have designed a modification to a fitting, which resulted in longer bulb life, confirmed MLA Short at yesterday's meeting of Legislative Council. He was responding to a question on the procedure for members of the public to report street lights that are not working. Initial pro-cedure is to call the Power and Electrical Section on 27149 or alternatively 27193 where a message can be taken. Alternatively an email can be sent to bgilbert. power@pwd.gov.fk.

Court news: Two men banned for drink driving progress AN oil and gas development istrates group, with representation from Wednesday. the private sector, FIG, FIDC and the oil industry is now meeting monthly, "in order to make recommendations where necessary to add value to current activities, confirmed Director of Mineral Resources Phyllis Rendell this week

The creation of the group was an Economic Development Strategy recommendation tasked with ensuring that the Islands' economy can gain maximum benefit from oil and gas exploration activities

Speaking of the Offshore Hydrocarbon Environmental Forum Mrs Rendell said further to the work carried out by the Mineral Resources Department, the Environmental Planning Department had taken the forum forward by consulting stake-holders on the appointment of a chairperson.

Names will be considered this week, said Mrs Rendell.

TWO men were banned from driving and fined in the Mag-Criminal Court on Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court that on July 10 a police patrol had seen a Land Rover 90 heading east on Davis Street faster than the 25 mph speed limit. At the Davis St/ Snake Hill junction the vehicle swerved. The patrol decided it was unsafe to block the vehicle and as it passed, recognised the driver as Claudio Andres Segovia Flores (29).

They followed him to his home at 2 Fitzroy Road where Mr Segovia provided a positive breathalyser test and was taken to the Police Station where a lower reading of 73mg per 100 ml of breath was recorded (35mg is the legal limit)

Mr Segovia, who has worked in the Islands for two years, said he had always tried to be a respectful driver and apologised

Magistrate Trevaskis disqualified Mr Segovia from driving for one year, fined him £400 and ordered him to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Oscar Alexis Zamora Pimentel (45) was also banned from driving for a year and fined £400 after he admitted drink driving.

Ms Inglis said a police patrol had spotted Mr Zamora driving west on Ross Road near the Malvina House Hotel on July 8, with only one head light working. Police followed him onto St Mary's Walk where he failed to stop at the Barrack St junction and continued along John St. Alerted by the emergency beacon on the police vehicle he stopped and admitted he had had a couple of drinks with his meal.

A lower reading at the Police Station recorded 82mg per 100ml of breath. Mr Zamora was also ordered to pay £85 court

Pumas boost Ocean Guardian morale

THE use of new airframes to support the oil rig, has boosted morale, said Director of Mineral Resources Phyllis Rendell this

She said: "The logistics of moving crew was a morale issue and the crew have said how much they appreciate the larger airframes linking in with the charter aircraft."

CHC recently took over the contract to move offshore crew to and from the rig using two Super Puma aircraft.

Mrs Rendell said: "British International Helicopters have done an excellent job since the Ocean Guardian arrived here in February 2010 and CHC are equally welcome as an operating company."

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

HORSE owners and other users of Stanley Common can take heart with the area of common ground due to increase over the next 6-12 months. Firstly an area that was on long term lease has recently reverted to being part of the common. In addition if the planned land release programme next summer goes ahead as currently envisaged, another substantial area could be restored for public use. Whilst there is, I believe, broad recognition that common land could be better managed, there is also a strong view that no more should be hived off for the exclusive use of special interest groups

FARMERS' week seemed to flash by, but on the few opportunities I was able to take up invitations to some of the events I found the mood buoyant. The myth of ancient farmers with no new blood coming through was comprehensively erased by the relative youthfulness of most of the participants. The good season at the abattoir has given a welcome boost to the farmers who were able to take up the challenge to produce well finished quality animals. I know the season was a good one in farming terms but the success has also owed a lot to sheer hard work by farmers and to the very professional operation at Sand Bay.

A GOOD week was rounded off by the news of excellent results achieved by our students in a diverse range of degree subjects. They all deserve congratulation for seizing the great opportunities they have been given. It is good to see many years of investment in our young people now consistently paying off.

USEFUL comment is still coming in on the subject of summer time all year round, it will be interesting to see how it all balances at the end of the trial. A third option suggested by a member of the public, which could be a useful compromise, would be to change to winter time, but for a much shorter period. In the meantime heaven help those parents whose offspring wake with the light. 3am in summer is going to be very tough!

Rufff justice for Ian FALKLAND Islands Company (FIC) Garage Foreman Ian Ashworth bravely allowed himself to be hunted down by a formidable member of the JSPSU Dog Section on Victory Green in Stanley last week.

The FIC purchased the opportunity to 'bite your boss' when they paid £240 to the British Forces Big Salute charity. Somehow, however, it was not the boss, but Ian, whose idea it all was, who ended up in the jaws of Rex along with a number of his colleagues.

THE managing and maintaining of government housing cost nearly £600,000 last financial year confirmed Financial Secretary Keith Padget.

Mr Padget stated that the visible cost of managing and maintaining the housing stock in 2009/10 and the revenue received was, £593,869 in expenditure (this includes depreciation but excludes any central administration costs and costs of capital) and in revenue £872,758.

In addition to this, capital expenditure of £35,720 was made on constructing new housing and capital funded works and assets for existing housing.

He commented, "The total cost of capital investment in the Government's housing stock at June 30, 2010 was £14.3million, with a current value of £9.1million. Housing related capital spend projected for 2010/11 and 2011/12 totals £859 350."

Nineteen applications passed

THIS month's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee involved what is probably the biggest number of new applications for planning permission with twenty-one submissions considered. All but two were granted conditional approval with one rejected and the other deferred for more discussions with the applicant.

Chair of the meeting was Councillor Sharon Halford who was supported by Councillor Jan Cheek with three lay members attending: Brian Summers, Jackie Cotter and the writer of this article. Four government officers gave technical support to the committee.

Giving details first of those applications which received conditional planning permission:

* Retrospective application for siting of container for storage of building materials (for 10 Mink Park) at 17 Mink Park for Zaza and Natasha Elbakidze.

* Demolition of "Freezer Warehouse" and creation of car park at Crozier Place for the FIC Ltd.

 Erection of solar tunnel (9m x 4.2m) at 1 Pioneer Row for Nigel Dodd.

 Installation of 2.4m satellite dish at their Earth Station on Darwin Road for Cable & Wireless Ltd.

 Relocation of two flag poles and erection of additional pole at their Complex on Ross Road for \ Cable & Wireless.

* Demolition of existing shed and replacement with new larger shed for Darren Christie at 2 Philomel Place.

• Development of land for up to 120 fully serviced housing plots and associated infrastructure at Sapper Hill for FIG.

 Erection of dwelling at 8 Mink Park for Kerri Ross.

• Erection of single-storey dwelling for Gerald Dixon on land north part of garden at 1 Allardyce Street.

• Erection of two-storey extension to bar and single-storey extension to restaurant and erection of metal fire-escape on south side of Malvina House Hotel, Ross Road for Stanley Services Ltd.

• Change of use of part of domestic garage to commercial pilot micro-brewery a at 9a Philomel Street for Jeffrey Halliday.

 Erection of conservatory at 15 Brandon Road for Gary McGill.

• Construction of reinforced silo pads and erection of silos, brine plants and ancillary fittings to support offshore drilling programme at 9 – 13 Boxer Bridge Road for Byron Holdings Ltd.

• Erection of polytunnel (3.5m x 9.2m) at 6 Drury Street for Harry Ford.

• Change of use from bunkhouse to tourist accommodation at The Bunkhouse at Fitzroy, East Falkland for Iain Thom and Pauline Sackett.

 Extension to dwelling at 19 Biggs Road for Evan Jones.

 Re-siting of container and erection of garage at 1 Sulivan Street for Karl Nightingale and Sian Ferguson.

• Siting and operation of mobile catering unit at the Jetty Centre on Philomel Street for Christine

• Use of firing range for missilefiring exercises for two-week periods in July 2011, and June 2012 for Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands.

The one application which was refused consent was for the crection of a one-and-a-half-storey dwelling at 5 Racecourse Road East for Anya Harris.

The deferred proposal was for the replacement of a porch with garage extension at 33a Davis Street for Tony Smith.

Members then reviewed details of eight applications submitted for building permits and noted progress being made by the Building Adviser.

Next on the agenda was an appeal against conditions imposed on a planning permission for food preparation area (for home delivery) at 98 Davis Street for Sue Goss and before discussions took place Councillor Halford left the meeting, handing the Chair to Councillor Cheek.

The appellant's statement was reviewed and then the statement in response by the Environmental Planning Officer, both documents being referred to Executive Council who will decide the appeal.

Details of a second appeal were then reviewed. This appeal was against a condition imposed on an outline planning permission for the erection of a single-storey dwelling at the area within Bennett's Paddock on Moody Brook Road and was made by Mr and Mrs Stuart Wallace.

Similarly, both the appellant's statement and the EPO's response were reviewed with both documents being referred to Executive Council.

The next meeting is scheduled for August 4 at 8.30am in the Liberation Room of the Secretariat.

Best before date best deals or just retailers' worst nightmare?

SELL by date, best before date, expiration date, use by date, shelf life; not only are the terms confusing for the shopper, but for the Falklands retailers they're a great big pain in the butt, exacerbated. by the amount of time it takes for products to actually get here

But from the shopper's point of view, can we eat something past its best before date? And if we can, should we give the retailers a little leeway bearing in mind shipping difficulties to the Islands? Should we expect a great big discount, or should the items be removed from the shelf entirely?

Penguin News asked the three main food retailers, the Falkland Islands Company (FIC) West Store, Kelper Stores and the Seafish Chandlery how they dealt with the situation, and were they giving shoppers the deals they deserved?

FIC Retail Director Paul Lewis explained best before dates saying they were "dates that it is perfectly legal and safe to sell the products past, in fact in the UK there are a number of companies that only sell out of date products.

It seems the best before date should not be mistaken for the sell by date, and the former is in fact more about quality than safety (except for eggs). When the date runs out it does not mean the food will be harmful, but it might begin to lose its flavour and texture.

Mr Lewis added, "We are constantly code checking products within our stores. What we do have on our wholesale section of our website is a section just for short coded products (referred to as specials on the site) this is where you can pick up a bargain; it is a very busy part of our wholesale website for the few people that are aware of it and get the

"There are also strong indicators that best before dates will be removed from all products going forward in the UK as they are seen as unnecessary.

"One thing we are very clear about though is that any products that have a sell by or use by date on, should not exceed the date indicated; these products are disposed of.'

Manager of West Store Tara Francis said, "Our policy is to be proactive, to reduce prices of food before they reach their best before date. However, with over 11,000 products to monitor we do have products which slip through the net."

Chandlery staff check produce

Out of date goods reduced

She said once those products were identified management took immediate action - the price was reduced and most products are moved to the 'Whoops' shelf.

Manager of Kelper Stores Mhari Ashworth said although Kelper Stores sell products past their best before date they usually reduce the price and indicate why: "There are a couple of areas where we don't reduce prices on products past their best before date immediately, such as some crisps and some chilled cakes, where the product can arrive with one week's date life left on it, as it has such as short shelf life.

"Customers generally know these products have a short shelf life and check before they buy if they feel the best before date is an issue. Some products such as baby food or medicines are not knowingly sold when the best before date is past."

Asked if Kelper Stores work with their wholesalers to get the longest shelf-life dates Ms Ashworth said: "Yes, all of our suppliers know that an order can take up to eight weeks before it reaches us. If they can, they will notify us if a product has a short life on it, and would not reach us in time. We also pre-order some products in bulk to make sure we get a better date life on it.'

Neville Hayward, Manager of Scafish Chandlery answered the same question: "Yes, always, but sometimes this is an impossible situation with certain products having shorter shelf-life.

'Crisps are a perfect example; they often arrive out of date. Butter and fats again seem to have had the life shortened over the years so to enable us to offer the best quality we have these products frozen but we do make that clear to the customer.

Mr Hayward noted there was now only one shipping route available to retailers, the Ministry of Defence (MoD), and this had increased shipping transport times by nearly two weeks due to the MoD's cargo delivery policy, so this in turn reduced shelf life.

Like the other retailers the Chandlery uses a stock rotation system so that products with the shortest life would be made available first and so that staff can keep track of best before, and sell by, dates.

Asked if management kept upto-date with health issues that might arise if products are sold past stated dates Mr Hayward said, "Yes, of course, and we are always informed of important risks from the KEMH, and we monitor the Foods Standard Agency website.

However he added, "Sell by dates and best before dates are always a pain in the ass issue and seem to be typical of society's over-sanitised attitude towards food, and is also the cause of tons of food waste each year. These have always been my personal views and not just of a retailer.

"The UK government's plan (which as you are aware we seem to follow) to look again at the best before labelling on packaged food is a welcome move, and which will hopefully lead to the removal of a system that encourages unprecedented levels of waste. Marks & Spencer I think were the culprits who introduced the sell by dates in the 70's and these dates have become shorter over the years.

We seem to have become too reliant on labels dictating what we eat and when."

Despite this Mr Hayward says the Chandlery also has a policy of reducing all out of date goods.

All three retailers said they welcomed customers' feedback on out of date produce that may have been missed.

Freight on fresh but shop local for a good price

FRESH produce prices are once again in the local news. Vine tomatoes are a luxury optional purchase now available in winter thanks to the reasonable freight rates and space given to importers on their flights by the oil operators. Standard tomatoes are cheaper, and cheaper again if from Chile, albeit at a lower quality as its midwinter there and midsummer in Europe.

Airfreight = Weight = Price Tag. Nearly £4 a kg door to door from the UK, so heavy larger items are more expensive.

Airfreight from Chile is cheaper but on some products quality is lower due to season.

Fresh food prices are always topical and we have made some price comparisons with them and wages of 10 years ago (see below). At the same time remember FIG wages (and many others) have risen 27 per cent in the same time.

These are the retail prices in the shops Stanley Growers supplied then and still do now. At least one shop sources elsewhere so its prices may differ.

Eggs have shot up following the loss of the Chilean shipping link 18 months ago - they come airfreight only now (or two months plus old if by sea from UK) so that is a direct result of the Argentine interference in shipping. Other imported prices reflect worldwide food price increases, due to climate changes, also increases in freight charges from fuel prices. Other than eggs, no basic products have been affected much by Argentine interference we purchased large stocks in May and these are in our cold store. But if no 40ft container service is re-established by spring it will hurt prices. Potatoes cost 250 per cent more per ton to freight in a 20ft container on MOD than in a 40ft container on SAAS from UK; MOD cannot handle 40ft reefers.

Exchange rates also affect prices here; in 2001 in Chile £1 got you 1100 pesos, today the pound has collapsed and it only gets you 740 - 35 per cent more we have to pay.

Happy to say that our local produce prices have increased the least. Potatoes are actually cheaner in terms of percentage of your pay-packet than 10 years ago. Lettuce is virtually unchanged and the increases in tomatoes and cucumbers reflect water, electricity, heating fuel and wages. They are 90 per cent plus water content and our water charges from FIG have gone up a lot in 10 years as has electricity. Large savings are now made in heating costs by recycling waste oils, but this has meant a substantial capital investment in the kit and its maintenance, and I hope folks agree that also our staff deserve a bit more in their pockets than in 2001

Colourful coverage but disappointing

I AM writing to express my mild disappointment at the lack of any Island Games news in the last edition of the paper (8 July), despite the fact that I believe Penguin News had their own reporter on the Isle of Wight and that he was partly funded by the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association.

The absence of a Games 'roundup' meant that the winning of the 'Small Islands Cup' by the Falklands football team, following their 3-0 victory over Alderney, with goals by Claudio Ross, Wayne Clement and Josh Peck, was not conveyed to your readers.

Similarly the excellent achievements of the golf team with the men recording a record-breaking aggregate of 983 and a Silver Certificate in the Team event, while Troyd Bowles picked up a Silver Certificate and Glenn Ross a Bronze Certificate in the Individual are also worthy of mention, I believe

Let us also not forget the superb four rounds of golf played by newcomer Sarah Bowles and an aggregate of 343 which broke the Falklands record and gave her an excellent final position of 17th from a field of 50 lady golfers.

I enjoyed John Fowler's colourful report and photographs in the I July edition but felt that a short resume of the last two days of competition would have been of interest.

I know that you pointed readers in the direction of the FIOGA website to obtain results, but as I am sure you are aware there are many people in the Islands, including quite a number of old folks, who do not own a computer and accordingly cannot access the internet, and rely totally on Penguin News for their information.

Patrick J. Watts. Chairman of FIOGA 1993-2009

ED - The Games were covered so enjoyably and thoroughly by those mediums able to report immediately that we were of the opinion that further coverage in a later paper would appear old news; however, we entirely take Patrick's point regarding the certificates and are grateful to him for providing the information, and of course, for the superb commentaries we were all able to enjoy via the radio and tv.

Summers signs up

AGRICULTURE, Fox Bay and the Falkland Islands Meat Company are all portfolios MLA Mike Summers has aquired on his remtroduction to the Legislative Assembly following his election on June 23.

MLA Summers formally pronounced the Oath of Due Execution of Office and the Executive Council Oath of Secrecy at a brief ceremony held at Government House on Monday, July 11 hosted by Acting Governor Ric Nye and attended by other members of Legislative Assembly, members of the Falkland Islands Government and the press.

On taking the oath MLA Summers described returning to government as, "a pleasure and a responsibility" and stated he looks forward to working with all members productively.

Cheese straws at dawn. MLA Summers and Acting Governor Rik Nye.

MLA Summers who had served on the Legislative Assembly for 13 years lost his seat in 2009 along with a number of his colleagues at the time, At the by-election last month he took the seat vacated by Glenn Ross.

MLA Summers also takes a deputising portoflio role in Education, Further and Higher Education, Training, Leisure Services and Rural Development.

Rockschool drummer Noam will head south with Shackleton fund

TALENTED drummer Noam Lederman, who has worked with the likes of Corrinne Bailey Rae and Trevor Horn is one of three individuals to be awarded funding to visit the Falklands under the Quality of Life Scholar classification of the Shackleton Scholarship Fund.

Speaking for the Shackleton Scholarship Fund, Sally Ellis said, "Noam Lederman is an extremely talented drummer and composer as well as author, teacher and examiner. He is the author of the new Rockschool (set up in 1991 to bring pop and rock into mainstream education) drums syllabus and assisted on the bass and guitar syllabus."

Noam's visit will permit his sponsor, local musician Pete King, to have his teaching methods quality assured. Noam will also undertake workshops and perform publically with local music students and musicians.

Cynthia Williams has also been awarded funding under the Quality of Life scholarship. She currently works as the lead horticulturalist at Stanley Nurseries in the Falkland Islands and will visit the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew to receive further specialist training in the development and maintenance of a native plant collection. The visit will enable her to broaden the range of species held, propagation and management of these species some of which have never been grown in cultivation. Training will also cover invasive species issues. The application was sponsored jointly by Falklands Conservation and local business Stanley Growers: "a great collaboration between an NGO and the private sector," said Mrs Ellis.

Third scholar Anthony Smith is a British sculptor, photographer and naturalist from Cambridge, who recently sailed around the world, re-tracing Darwin's Voyage of the Beagle. In a busy programme, supported by teachers at FICS, Anthony will teach sculpture classes both within the school and to the public, give talks on the process of creating bronze sculptures, and redraw the scenes that were sketched by the Beagle artist when the ship was in the Falklands.

This year's academic Shackleton Scholars are an historian, Max Hull, a biologist, Teresa Darbyshire and a geologist Dominik Weiss.

Max Hull is studying for a doctorate (incidentally supervised by a former Shackleton Scholar, Professor Klaus Dodds) and has as his subject the Falkland Islands from 1965 up to the 1982 Conflict. He visited the Islands in 1984 as a student and worked for a few months at the Post Office in Stanley.

Teresa Darbyshire works with the Department of Biodiversity and Systematic Biology at the National Museum Wales in Cardiff and is an expert on Polychaeta – marine bristleworms that make up a large proportion of species on and in the sea-bed. A qualified diver, Teresa has undertaken numerous surveys in the Irish Sea and will work with the Shallow Marine Surveys Group in the Islands.

Dr Dominik Weiss is a scientist from Basle in Switzerland who is senior lecturer for environmental geochemistry at Imperial College London. He plans to use peat cores from the Falklands to trace and date deposits of natural mineral dust, volcanic material and other dust of possible human origin embedded in the peat.

Mrs Ellis explained: "The Shackleton Scholarship Fund is a pragmatic, flexible way of commemorating the Shackletons' (Sir Earnest and Lord) achievements, stimulating human endeavour, initiative and research."

Protector to arrive in November

HMS Protector, the ship that will fulfill HMS Endurance's role as an Antarctic patrol vessel will begin her task in November. Formerly the ice-breaker MV Polarbjorn, the ship has been leased on a three year contract from Norwegian company GC Rieber Shipping and has just completed an intensive refit in Denmark. Protector is fitted with two main deck cranes and three internal holds and can position to within a radius of 70 centimeters in winds of up to 40 knots. She also has a state-of-the-art survey motor boat, two Pacific 22 rigid inflatable boats to be replaced next year by a landing craft vehicle, three all-terrain vehicles and three quad bikes complete with trailers. The long term future of the Endurance is still being considered.

Five longliners in South Georgia FIVE longline vessels continue to fish for toothfish in South Gcorgia waters. Some vessels sailed to Stanley to make a mid-season transhipment and to have their catch verified before resuming fishing. Mid-season allocations of quota were offered by the Director of Fisheries to all five longliners following the early departure from the fishery of a sixth licensed vessel. Two trawlers were inspected and licensed to fish for krill in June (early catches were good.) A reefer vessel made two visits to Cumberland Bay to receive transhipments from a krill trawler and to give bunkers to a longliner.

Old Shackleton

FORMER research vessel Shackleton, sadly slipped into the breakers yard at New Holland, Hull, earlier this year under her current name Sea Profiler. Built by Solvesborg of Solvesborg in 1955 as a passenger cargo vessel Arendall she was converted to research vessel Shackleton owned by the British Antarctic Survey and worked in the South Atlantic until 1983 when she became the Geotek Beta for a year. Gardine of Great Yarmouth purchased her in 1984 an she was renamed Profiler. In 1992 she became Sea Profiler and in 2007 she worked on seismic survey work off the north-west coast of the UK on the development of the Tristan NW well.

Cost of Clyde

ANNUAL leasing costs for the last four years for the HMS Clyde, the patrol vessel in the Falklands, were around £3.5 million, Defence Minister Peter Luff has reported. Three other vessels are leased to the Royal Navy at a cost of £7.3 milllion per year.

Shiver me timbers

IT was a rum do for the Infant and Junior School on Thursday, when Camp Education's scurved scally-wags put on a production of 'Thirteen Pirates' for fellow students and parents.

Across the IJS gym hall the pirates bellowed their sea shanties that told tales of serving under their Captain Logan, who narrated the tale to the crowd between songs.

The rest of the crazy crew were Kia, Adam, Tatiana, Tyler, Talia and Olivia, whilst elder student Matthew gave an excellent performance that tested his musical and coordination skills in providing the many sound effects as well as the musical accompaniment to the tale.

The well rehearsed students enthralled their audience with their enthusiastic movements and startling confidence despite the packed hall.

Camp Education teachers Claire Cockwell and Wendy Reynolds had worked with the children to put on the show including choreographing the dancing and drama.

Farmers' week provided a rare opportunity for the children to interact with their town classmates as well as with each other as well as with each other.

"It's the only time of year the students all get to meet up so we plan plenty of fun for them," said Claire.

After seven years teaching with Camp Education this was to be Ms Reynolds last performance with the youngsters, as she is retiring this year, but said with a smile: "This should be my last performance but no doubt I'll probably get roped in to help in the future."

Party time

Una McKay, Stephen Jennings and Priscilla Grant.

TAKING advantage of the host of Islanders in the northern hemisphere for the Island Games, Pauline Davis nee Berntsen and her family organised a Falklands reunion party on July 2.

Penguin News' Fran Biggs reported that it was a 'brilliant get-together', adding that she was able to meet up with old pals such as Dempsey and May Peck, Bernard Shorey and Pat and Mally Lee.

Grand slam for Lisa as Len lifts Governor's Cup

ONCE again it was a Ford/Jaffray victory in the second big darts tournament of the season. While Lisa Jaffray held the Rose Bowl aloft for the first time to complete her grand slam, it was Len Ford who raised the Governor's Cup in celebration.

The Governor's Cup darts tournament was held in the Town Hall on Saturday. Eight boards were in play and thanks to good stage management they were kept in steady use throughout the evening Sixty-six men entered the competition and it was pleasing to see entries from some non-league players, Campers, MPA, and oil workers in addition to regular league players. As always there were some major clashes in the first round including the departure of Roy Shepherd to Richard Bonner and Jonny Ford to Chris Lloyd. The last 16 saw some old, some not so old, and some new faces. The biggest cheer was undoubtedly when Michael Goss ended Colin Smith's hope of winning the cup 30 years on from his first win. Michael then faced defending champion Toot Ford in the last eight. Joining them were David Ashbridge v Chris Lloyd, Andy Pollard v Rodney Ford, and Len Ford v Teddy Summers.

It was David Ashbridge and Rodney Ford who progressed to the first semi final and Toot Ford and Len Ford to the second. This may have been the first time three brothers have made it into the last four (Turpin's absence from the last 4 was noted ... it was rumoured he was given a rosette, courtesy of the West Falkland Sports Association, for his enthusiastic participation). One thing was certain, there would be a Ford in the final; the question was would it be Toot and would he be able to achieve the magic three in a row that has not yet been achieved by anyone else. The answer was NO when Len beat Toot 3-1 to take his place against first time finalist David Ashbridge. It was a good final to watch with both players hitting some excellent scores but Len's previous experience, a couple of maximum 180s, and his ability to finish saw him take the match 4-1.

Forty-four ladies entered the Rose Bowl competition and the draw produced some tough matches. Making it through to the last eight were Lisa Jaffray v Julie Ford. Cherry Robson v Kimmi Buckett, Maggie Goss v Leann Ford, and Lynda Buckland v Hazel Collins. The first semi was Lisa and Kimmi, the second between Leann (making a come back after a couple of years absence) and Hazel. It was Lisa and Leann who won through to the final and guaranteed a new winner; both had previously been in Rose Bowl finals but neither had won. In the event it was Lisa who won the match, claimed the trophy and completed her grand slam. She is the current holder of the Globe 16, Victory Bar/ Bonners Haulage Cup, FIC Cup and the Rose Bowl being a Rosella obviously agrees with her! Thanks, as always, to the Darts Club for their organisation of the tournament, and to Acting Governor Ric Nye for presenting the prizes.

Towering volcanoes under the southern seas

SCIENTISTS from British Antarctic Survey (BAS) have British discovered previously unknown volcanoes in the ocean waters around the remote South Sandwich Islands

Using ship-borne sea-floor mapping technology during research cruises onboard the RRS James Clark Ross, the scientists found 12 volcanoes beneath the sea surface - some up to 3km high. They found 5km diameter craters left by collapsing volcanoes and seven active volcanoes of islands their potential creating serious hazards such as tsunamis. Also this sub-sea landscape, with its waters warmed by volcanic activity creates a rich habitat for many species of wildlife and adds valuable new insight about life on earth Speaking at the International-

Symposium on Antarctic Earth Sciences in Edinburgh Dr Phil Leat from British Antaretic Survey said, "There is so much that we don't understand about volcan now use from ships not only give us an opportunity to piece together the story of the evolution of our earth, but they also help shed new light on the devel-

Rare sea findings for two families

TWO Falklands families, the Pole-Evans of Saunders and the Delignières of Dunbar made discoveries of rare cetacean remains late last summer.

The Falkland Islands is a bit of a hot spot for dolphins and whales both coastal cetaceans and offshore species if you're lucky enough (or perhaps unlucky enough) to get out that far from land

Some like Commerson's dolphin and Peale's dolphin are always seen from the seashore and observers on fishing boats and patrol vessels regularly report seeing pilot whales, sperm whales and hourglass dolphins

But some cetaceans are rare less than 10 live sightings known worldwide or 20 skulls scattered across national museums - so recent finds made by Falklands families of two such rare species are of some value to scientific records.

Helen Otley, who worked on environmental projects in the Falklands for a number of years, including cetacean strandings, and now living in New Zealand explains: "My interest in strandings started when I was ageing stranded pilot whales using their teeth at the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department. I thought if pilot whales stranded, what else was out there? So during 2005 -2009 I collated as many records as I could from people and publications.'

Not surprisingly Helen soon hooked up with John Smith who has had a life long passion for stranded dolphins and whales, particularly the rare beaked whales:

"John and I together, with an Australian whale genetist Dr Merel Dalebout, are about to publish a scientific paper on the beaked whales found in the Falkland Islands and South Georgia. The paper describes how the Falklands is one of the world's key sites for these very rare whales."

'I was alerted to Suzan's photos and I sent the photos to some Chilean and Argentine scientists to confirm the suspected identifi-

But too late to be included in the scientific publication was Theo Delignières's recent finding at Hope Harbour of a freshly birdpicked complete skeleton of a 310 cm long Hector's beaked whale.

"Upon finding the skeleton, the Falklands stranding network kicked in, with photos and xrays of the skull, organised by John Smith at KEMH, circulated within and outside of the Falklands. The experts decided it was a Hector's beaked whale (Mesoplodon hectori). It's a species known from only 25 strandings recorded in southern parts of South America. South Africa and New Zealand. So Theo's specimen is number (see image top right).

Three other Hector's beaked whales have been found in the Falkland Islands.

The Pole-Evans on Saunders reported the other very exciting find of summer 2010/2011. Using cation" said Helen.

"A facebook friend of Suzan's suggested it was a spectacled porpoise, another species found arctic zone. I knew that the cetacean scientists working in Tierra del Fuego would be able to tell us what it was.'

The strange dolphin was indeed a male spectacled porpoise (Phoeoena dioptrica). It has been found in the Falkland Islands before, with skulls found in 1939 and 1952, a live sighting by an observer on a seismic survey vessel in 2007 and a third skull found by Theo's sister Marilou at Dunbar Farm in 2008

"Spectacled porpoises like deep waters and they aren't commonly sighted anywhere but there must be a few out there in the waters around the Falklands" says Helen. "If Marilou and Suzan hadn't found their specimens, then maybe we'd have thought that spectacled porpoises didn't live here but I think a few do or at least pass through.'

Hawks win Cable and Wireless Russell Smith memorial trophy

PANTHERS played Penguins in Sundays first match. In only his second game Aiden Morris was first on the scoreboard for Penguins. Karl Nightingale responded with a goal for Panthers, the game picked up pace with Simon Reid netting another and in a scramble for the goal Stacey Budd flicked in one more leaving it 3 – 1 to Panthers at the break.

Somehow the second half was played with more fury than the first and after some incredible saves on both sides, Penguins Duane Evans found the back of the net. Nick Francis responded quickly to get a shot for Panthers but soon after another Penguins guest, Andrew Miller, scored with a long shot. Nick came back with another but the game was not over; Duane scored again and followed it with another moments later in an energetic attack securing a hat-trick. With two minutes of play left the game ended a draw, 5 - 5 a piece, but Panthers gained enough points to remain second in the league.

The next fixture of the afternoon was Blackhawks versus Sharks. Stuey Duncan stepping up as guest goalie to complete the unstoppable ensemble Blackhawks. The game started good pace and the Hawks were first to score through Sam Cockwell. Canadian hockey machine Craig Dockrill got the second and third goals before Sam and Antoine Daille

Despite good chances Sharks couldn't seem to find the net until Ricky Leyton broke the shut out but Craig was quick to respond completing his hat-trick. Sam Cockwell and Paola Munoz were both sent off in the game, Sam for grabbing the puck from the air and travelling with it and Paola for high-sticking. Final score 6—1 to Blackhawks—champions upped the score to make it a five of the Cable and Wireless

With the top two places in the league secured by Black-hawks and Panthers Tuesday's matches saw the remaining four teams battle for position.

Penguins took on Oilers in the first meet and they were quick to score with Duane Evans putting two past the Oilers goalie Clayton March in the first ten minutes. Kevin Ross stretched the lead soon after with another goal for Penguins. One of the best chances for Oilers came when Penguins Goalie Marcus Morrison secured the puck with his glove outside of the goal zone gaining a penalty shot taken by Ian France that saw no points scored. Oilers frustration was clearly building; Lucy O'Sullivan was sent off for two minutes for kicking the puck. The resiliant Penguins got another from Boy Miranda to leave the score 4 - 0 at half time.

The second half was fast paced and furious with some outstanding shots and saves on both sides but the only one that found it to the net was from Oilers Grant Budd, the final score 4 – 1 to Penguins.

In the next gameBuffalos played Sharks with Stuey Duncan standing in Sharks' goal. Pepe Pavez-Villaroel was on top formscoring the first goal. Shortly after Nick Stephens took a hit to the ankle that secured him out of play for the rest of the match; Sharks a man down, found it hard to get their rhythm. Andrew Miller scored a second for the Buffalos leaving it 2-0 at half-time.

Working past Buff's defence Sam Miller brought the score-board alive for Sharks followed by team captain Dan Fowler to draw the teams level. Pepe refused Sharks chances to lead with another stunning shot and then a third finishing the game 4 – 2 to Buffalos.

These games marked the end of the 2011 Russell Smith Memorial Trophy, sponsored by Cable and Wireless, and admirably won by Blackhawks with an 11 point lead and only one defeat in the entire competition.

Training sessions will continue for teams until the Stanley Cup starts in August and if you're a pool player check the board at the Leisure Centre to see which sessions you have been allocated.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE: VACANCY

An opportunity has arisen for a member of the community to become involved in helping to ensure that FIG is delivering value-for-money to the residents of the Falkland Islands. Expressions of interest are sought from members of the public wishing to become a member of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC)

Under the Falkland Islands Constitution, the PAC comprises:

- (a) a chairman and two other members appointed by the Governor; and
 - (b) two members of the Legislative Assembly.

The PAC currently has a vacancy for an "other member" under (a) above. The role involves six (or so) meetings per year, each lasting two hours, with an estimated time commitment of four hours per month for background reading and preparation. The role is unpaid but expenses are reimbursed. The appointment period will be until 31 January 2012 (in order to tie in with the appointment periods of the other, existing members)

The PAC has an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies. The PAC's task is to ensure that public funds have been expended properly, for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. Hence the role is varied, complex and fascinating. Individuals appointed to the PAC make a significant contribution to the community, in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falkland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands.

Applications should be submitted to the Governor by 30 July, setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job.

VACANCIES/NOTICES

TJ's are seeking to employ stevedores for the season. Applicants must be physically fit and willing to work shift patterns day and night, inclusive of weekends, at FIPASS and also on vessels in Port William/Berkeley Sound. For more information please telephone 31119 or 41012

From time to time British International have full and part-time vacancies for: Pilots, Loadmasters, Engineers and Operations Officers in the Falkland Islands

All applicants should be licensed and have experience on the $61. In addition.

Operations Officers should hold an ATC FISO licence.

Interested and qualified parties send CV with covering letter to:

The Base Manager, British International, Mount Pleasant Complex on email fkl manager.brit-int@horizons.co.fk

Standard Chartered Bank, Stanley invites applications to fill a temporary position, from mid September 2011 to

Bin the burgers two in five obese

FORTY ONE per cent of Falklands residents are obese according to figures disclosed by the hospital.

The frightening figure was confirmed by King Edward Memorial Hospital (KEMH) Manager Michael Poole who explained the hospital has body mass index figures on 1,471 of the 2,796 patients they currently have on their records.

Of the 1,471 patients 41 per cent are deemed obese compared to 23 per cent in the UK.

Six per cent of the 41 per cent that are obese in the Falkland Islands are deemed morbidly obese, compared to a figure of 3-4 per cent in the UK (depending on the source of the latter figure.)

The figures were given when Penguin News asked why overseas referrals for patients had increased by around 18 per cent in only one year.

Mr Poole said it was difficult to say, but the elements included it being an unusual year (there were many people with medical issues all around the same time) an increasing population and an mereasingly elderly population, as well as growing expectations of medical treatment by patients. He said: "We also have numbers showing that our smoking and obesity rates are higher than UK averages, which inevitably leads to health issues."

Obesity rates in the UK are the highest in Europe and have increased dramatically over the past few years. In Birmingham, more than 25 per cent of the population is obese - the third highest rate in the UK, but still a lot less than in the Falkland Islands.

Islands' residents might be avoiding the uncomforable truth, but the message being sent to the younger generation is clear.

Infant and Junior School teacher Jackie Cooper explained healthy eating is very much encouraged in their charges.

Youngest pupils pay into a health snack scheme which provides them with water, milk, cheese, fruit, dried fruit, seeds and crackers.

Ms Cooper said, "They have this twice a day and it forms part of their daily routine. They eat together, giving them the chance to socialise for a few minutes and it encourages the children to make healthy choices for the future."

Slightly older chidren have a healthy tuck shop system. "Parents choose whether or not they want their children to take part; most do. They pay for five snack tokens per week. Each token provides the children with any combination of milk, water, fruit juice, cereal bars, fruit, cheese and biscuits."

The Falkland Islands Company generously provide the snacks at cost price said Ms Cooper.

Pupils are also encouraged to take part in a variety of sports clubs she said.

Community School pupils are also encouraged to eat healthily.

FICS exam papers lost in the post

THE Falkland Islands Community School learned on Thursday morning that not all the exam papers dispatched had arrived with the Examination Board in the UK. All the papers were posted as registered mail, Assistant Director of Education Richard Fogerty told Penguin News. and were apparently in the same mail bag. He said the school had copies of some of the coursework and this could be faxed. In the event that any of the examination papers fail to turn up, the Examination Board is likely to take into account predicted grades and the marks given for papers already received and all students will receive a grade. "When the situation is clearer the school will contact any students who may be affected," said Mr Fogerty, adding that the Education Department did not recall a similar situation in the past and would be considering options to ensure it did not happen in the future.

SAMA credits

WITH the winding up of the Holiday Credit Scheme at the end of June, after much calculating the Treasury has revealed that £3,794.55 was donated to SAMA FI. This was as a result of benefactors being able to donate 100 per cent of their accrued credits to the charity which helps bring British veterans of the 1982 War to the Falklands.

Five new JPs

FIVE Stanley residents have been sworn in as new Justices of the Peace. Lecann Harris, Keith Padgett, Anton Livermore, Justin McPhee and Paul Faria have joined the ranks of the judiciary. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis thanked them for offering their assistance in the administration of justice.

Penguin News

A RICH diet of coconut and mutton flaps left poor King Tupou IV of Tonga so obese in his later life that he carned a place in the Guinness Book of Records as the world's fattest monarch. Luckily for him he was eventually inspired to lead his traditionally portly people in a national diet and managed to slim down from a substantial 33 stone to

20 stone 6lb

Now, quite apart from the fact that the term mutton flaps left me sniggering immaturely (much to the consternation of a New Zealand born friend, who with great patience explained it's a popular product in the Pacific region) the tale itself struck me in the light of recently obtained information that obesity in the Falklands is above the UK average. All the more shocking bearing in mind that obesity in the UK is the highest in Europe

It was also interesting considering that in London this week Members of the House of Lords mooted a more extreme approach to the nations' health than the current 'nudge theory' (getting people to change their behaviour without necessarily banning activities) suggesting that the British government's pursuit of the non-regulatory was flawed, and the nudge approach did not work in isolation.

While I'm rather cynical of the aristocracy dictating good behaviour to the masses, in this case they may have a point. It's all very well tactfully and gently promoting healthy eating and exercise, but if behind closed doors Mum and Dad insist on stuffing mountains of fast food down their poor little bulging brats, or view wandering around the back of the sofa in search of the remote control as a physical pursuit, then some concerned soul somewhere probably should be coming up with rather more robust policies.

Happily. Falklands schools have a responsible approach to encouraging healthy eating and the joining in with sporting activities but unfortunately, the message doesn't appear to be quite getting through to all - which is pretty horrifying considering we, a tiny population, couldn't be more of a captive audience if we tried.

So exactly why aren't we binning our chips and walking more? After all it's not rocket science. Are we really so blithely unaware of the consequences, that our own government might eventually be reduced to consider big brother legislation not only to reduce health and medical costs but just to keep us alive? MST might be a great big sneaky, son-of-gun, pain in the backside, but its the one area where getting our money's worth sometimes has unhappy connotations.

A POTENTIALLY more cheerful statistic, might be to know how many people have given up smoking as a result of the ban or the increase in the price of cigarrettes. If either has given you the motivation to kick the habit then let us know at Penguin News. Lisa Watson

Acting Head Teacher Helen Bell said, "Students are encouraged to have a healthy lifestyle. We offer three sessions of active PE per week There are after school and lunchtime clubs. Within PSHE we have a healthy lifestyles module for each year group.

KS3 uses healthier recipes and students are encouraged to adopt a healthier diet using the Plate of Good Health and the Five a Day campaigns.

The school now offers a daily breakfast service after it was discovered a number of students were arriving without eating

Mrs Bell added, "Our tuck shop sells water, fruit juices, freshly baked rolls and offers a variety of snacks including lighter crisps which are priced the same as full fat crisps to help students make a healthier choice if cost is a factor. Last year we trialled the provision of fruit but students did not take this up in large numbers

Whilst we do sell small chocolate biscuits, we are mindful that some 'healthy' bars do contain larger amounts of sugar and are much more expensive. We have sold these in the past with diffi-

She said students often do not go home for a cooked lunch but tend to purchase food of varying types in Stanley. Students who stay in school for lunchtime clubs are beginning to use a sandwich drinks are not allowed within school, although students can buy them in their own time from the Leisure Centre.

Mrs Bell said, "It is difficult to control young peoples' eating habits, especially as we do not offer a lunchtime service, but we certainly always try to encourage them to make sensible choices whenever possible.

Although obesity can be tackled through increased exercise and a better diet, for those who are already obese the health consequences are severe. On average, being obese decreases life expectancy by nearly 10 years. In addition, it is associated with dramatically increased risks of developing type 2 diabetes, hypertension, coronary artery disease and hyperlipidaemia. It has also been suggested that in the not too distant future, obesity could not only become the leading cause of liver failure, but also the leading cause of cancer worldwide.

Smoking

Around 27 per cent of Islanders smoke compared to 21 per cent in the UK. The hospital has records on 43 per cent of patients regarding whether they smoke or not.

Mr Poole said, "For preventative measures we make available advice on how to quit, support through the practice nurse and pharmaceutical support free of

Grant awarded commendation

GRANT Munro a former Falklands Conservation boss, has been awarded the Dean's Commendation for outstanding achievement on a MSc Conservation & Biodiversity programme. Grant was awarded Master of Science in Conservation and Biodiversity with Distinction at Exeter University for his Falklands based project on the occurrence of Peale's dolphin in Port William and Commerson's dolphin at Port Howard, as well as individual distinctions for each of the additional five modules he sat. Grant who arrived in the Islands in 1991 for a couple of months 'before he continued on his travels," has only just learned of this additional commendation, but will not be travelling to the graduation reception being held in the UK on Monday.

Shipping links raised in House

LABOUR Member of Parliament Lindsay Roy asked the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, "when he last met his Argentinian counterpart to discuss shipping links between the Falklands and South America?" The Minister replied,"There are no direct shipping links between Argentina and the Falkland Islands. The Government have not discussed with Argentina the shipping links that exist between the Falkland Islands and other South American ports.

"In early 2010, Argentina introduced a presidential decree that aimed to restrict maritime movements to and from the Falkland Islands through Argentine waters. The Government have firmly protested and rejected the decree as not compliant with international law.

Nigel Blyth

IT is with regret we learn that Nigel Blyth died from pancreatic cancer in Newcastle, Australia, on July 7 at the age of 61. Nigel, with his parents, Henry and Marion, and sisters, Sylda and Natalie, emigrated to Australia in March 1960. His youngest sister, Stephanie, was born in Australia. Nigel is survived by his mother and sisters, his wife, Christine, and sons, Cheyne and Jason.

Brasserie closes

FALKLANDS Brasserie Ltd. closed its doors for the final time on Saturday January 15. Owner Alex Olmedo said, "We would like to thank customers for their patronage for the past eleven years and would like to apologise for any inconvenience this may have caused." He said part of the problem appeared to be a result of the economic downturn with the population having less disposable income.

Whale death unavoidable says Fisheries Department

The CFL Gambler while operating in 1,400m of water to the southeast of Stanley accidently caught what is thought to be a Minkey whale (Balaenoptera bonaerensis) during fishing operations on July 15

Dr Paul Brickle of the Fisheries Department said it was an unfortunate incident and it was likely the whale drowned after it became entangled in fishing gear either as the line in question was being set or as it was being hauled.

This is the first incident of a whale mortality due to longlining since the fishery began in 1994, even though whales are commonly observed around longline vessels. The whale was about six metres long and the situation was too dangerous for the observer to collect a tissue sample for genetics to confirm identification, so the line was cut in order to avoid endangering the crew.

Joost Pompert of the Fisheries Department said: "This regrettable and unavoidable incident has saddened the crew as they have had an unblemished record of zero bird mortalities over the last four years and have never had a whale mortality as a result of longline fishing.

Rockhopper spud third well

ROCKHOPPER Exploration has spudded its third well in licence PL032 which is 100 per cent owned and operated by the company.

The North Falkland basin oil and gas exploration company announced that the well was spudded on July 15 and is the third appraisal well to be drilled on the Sea Lion feature since their oil discovery in May 2010.

The well is located some 4.1 km to the west of the 14/10-2 discovery and is designed to investigate reservoir and hydrocarbon presence outside what the company considers the minimum case area.

Drilling operations are expected to take approximately 38 days and a further announcement will be made once drilling is completed in the area.

Recruitment round for CMO

A SECOND recruitment round for a Chief Medical Officer has just begun, with interviews scheduled in London in early September. The arrangement that was being finalised has fallen through, it was confirmed at the Health and Medical Services Committee on July 7. Interim cover has been organised until early 2012.

Recruitment is also being finalised for a Community Psychiatric Nurse, and the Social Worker post is also shortly to be advertised. The Falkland Islands Government public relations firm in UK are assisting with an article in a prominent social work magazine to try and increase interest in the post. A new team leader for Social Services is due to arrive in post in early September. Five candidates were interviewed in London on Monday July 11 for the Senior Dental Officer. Carol Thorsen is the new Finance Clerk and an appointment has been made for a Logistics (MTO) Clerk, however, they are not yet in post. Cover is currently being undertaken by Imogen Didlick.

A new Pharmacist should be in place by October 2011. Locum cover has been sourced for the intervening period between the current post-holder leaving at the end of July and the new person arriving. One vacant GP post remains and continues to be filled with short term contracts.

Medicine errors

MEDICINES incidents at the King Edward Memorial Hospital (KEMH) in Stanley, which have increased substantially since last year, are primarily, "issues that are internal to KEMH and are caught before they reach a patient," said Hospital Manager Michael Poole this week. He explained that a medicines incident is an incident whereby an error of some sort has been made in the decision to buy a drug, ordering, supplying, prescribing, dispensing or administering of a medication. These can range from the inconsequential to very serious.

He said, "The Health Services are spending time working on a medicines management policy and have therefore been very active at finding incidents in order to prioritise the work needed to complete a medicines management policy. "We also believe the increase in incidents this year compared to last is at least in part attributable to a simpler and more robust reporting system that has encouraged staff to log more incidents than perhaps they used to.

There has been an increase in the number of accidents/incidents reported this year compared to last. In 2010 there were 78. however, from January 1 to May 31, 2011, there was a total of 45

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

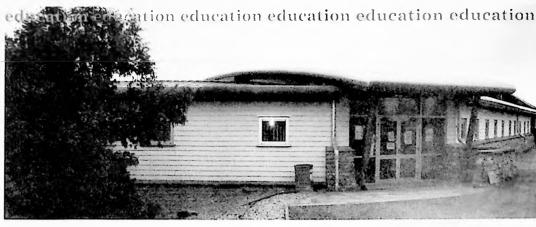

EDUCATION Board last week looked at a number of items. The good news for further and higher education students is that we have high hopes that their grants can be paid by electronic transfer starting in the new academic year. Overcoming the glitches that had delayed this process has been very time consuming, so thanks are due to the Treasury for finally making it happen.

NOT good news is that the new tuition fees that will come into effect for universities for the 2012/13 academic year will revert to higher rates near to those we paid up until about five years ago. The implications for the budget are serious and later this year careful thought will be given to our funding policy. Some of the ideas being floated include loans and or targeted funding including full funding for courses deemed most useful. Another possibility is that loans could be written off provided individuals worked for a previously agreed number of years in the Islands. I hope that many would want to return to contribute to their community in recognition of the opportunities received. Not everyone feels this moral obligation but I know many Falkland Islanders do.

ONE danger that we should be working hard to avoid is recreating a two tier salary system. While we have to address the fact that overseas recruitment is becoming increasingly difficult for some posts, it should not be done at the expense of attracting back our own young professionals. Alarm bells sounded for me when I heard mention of 'enhanced' gratuities to help fill certain posts. If the practice became customary it could disadvantage home grown candidates.

A GROUP looking at various aspects of PR has this week considered bids for the production of a DVD aimed at giving accurate information for arrivals in the Falklands. Many other activities are underway or planned, as will become apparent in the months ahead.

GAVIN has kindly volunteered to do the next four weeks diary. While I'm away I will check my e-mail addresses and the office will have my mobile number should anyone need to contact

Vertical success says Department of Education

ing introduced to the Falkland Islands Community School is proving positive, claim the Education Department

In the past, tutor groups (a group of students gathering for registration and announcements) comprised students of the same age, but now individuals are selected from every year group so that the tutor group is compiled of each age range in the school.

Vertical tutoring has been implemented successfully, with only a minor teething problem, since its introduction on June 27, it was reported at the July 15 meeting of the Education Board.

Acting Head Teacher Helen Bell, explained the purpose of the "shake-up" was to improve relationships and encourage mentorship between the different age groups of the school.

Mrs Bell said: "It's nice for the youngest to see the older students progress and what to expect when they reach that age.

The system also provides students, who are making crucial choices such as options choices in Year 9, to receive more fo-cussed attention: "A teacher who has only a few students who are about to make crucial choices can deliver more focussed advice than a tutor who has a whole class of them to deal with," Helen Bell told the Committee.

The first test of the system came on Saturday when the tutor groups each ran their own table at the FICS School Fete.

Vertical tutoring has received a mixed reaction in the United Kingdom since it was introduced to many schools; some teachers view it as just another fad while others believe it can improve relationships and prepare youngsters for the working world.

cessful visits in the past Psychologist visits schools

CHILD psychologist Troy Tranah from Maudsley/ Bethlem Hospital visited the Islands last week in order to identify students who require help, and what is needed to assist them. It is hoped that follow-up treatment can be improved with video conferencing to monitor progress and work with the children. This would be as an alternative to the old system which comprised students being attended to only once a year as part of their follow-up treatment.

STUDENTS who do not turn up for exams and who do not have a valid excuse will be expected to reimburse fees. At the Education Board on Friday, it was reported there has been a recent rise in the number of Falkland Islands Community School students absent from exams. Parents are always informed when this occurs.

MATURE Falklands students on a course of higher education should be entitled to return flights on the airbridge at student rates, Executive Council has agreed.

Recruitment problems

THE Falkland Islands Community School has been experiencing difficulties in obtaining a teacher of ICT/Business and another for English.

Education Department Assistant Director, Richard Fogerty said, "These issues are related to the recruitment and immigration processes and are causing a few headaches as we get closer to the end of this school year and the beginning of the next."

Staffing and administration changes noted at the Education Board meeting included the appointment of Justin McPhee to the Vocational Education Board (VEB) as a private sector representative who has employed apprentices or shown an interest in vocational education.

It was also reported that the advertisement for the post of Headteacher/Assistant Director of Education has been placed locally and in the UK.

Tom Hill, who is to take up the post of Headteacher, IJS/Camp recently undertook a course at the National College of School Lead-

Mr Fogerty said, "This was his own initiative but is part of our own plans for succession and staff development.

Jackie Cooper and Anna Stenning have managed the Infant Junior School for the last six months. Mr Fogerty commended their efforts: "They have done an excellent job, sometimes under trying circumstances, and the Department is extremely grateful for everything they have done."

Steve Dent has been confirmed as the newest member of the Education Board as a primary school parent member. He will serve for a term of two years.

Cubs bid old farewell and welcome the new

THREE Cub Scouts have received the Chief Scouts Silver Award which is the highest possible honour and has only been awarded twice before in the Falklands.

His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood presented proud recipients James Tyrrell, Jessica Cooper and Max Rowlands with their certificates at the Scout meet on Tuesday evening

This was the last meeting for the three cubs who are now leaving the troop alongside Kieran Nye, Derryn Robson, Michael Goodwin and Africa Shepherd.

"The seven Cub Scouts will be missed," said Cub Scout Leader Jan Miller, however on a cheerier note the evening also included the joining of the pack by four more members. Sean Sackett, Chico Thomas-Hayes, Kelly Harris and Thomas Ford pronounced their Cub Scout Promise and were welcomed by their peers.

Badges were awarded in Creative Challenge, Nights Away Stage 1 and Stage 2, Hikes Away Stage 1, and Outdoor Plus Challenge on Tumbledown and in Home Safety.

Also on the awards list was Leader Tim Miller who received his 15 years of service award from the Governor.

The Cubs learn a great many life enriching skills including how to pitch a tent, fitness, charity work, community aid and both verses of the national anthem something Jan knows they can do, and do loudly, as they once began singing it at 2am on a sleepover night: "They knew I couldn't tell them to be quiet," she said. His Excellency the Governor

His Excellency the Governor said he was aware of the important contribution the Cubs provide to the community, especially when out on parade.

"I feel even more assured knowing there is one of you designated to catch my hat should the wind blow it off my head," he said, but added with sincerity "You do so much for the community, it's tremendous.

"Your many badges are well deserved."

Jan Miller also praised the parents and business people who give their time assisting the Cubs, and thanked the Governor for presenting the awards.

Oil rigs should carry observers

AFTER reading your report (bird and mammal observer with every rig says Edwards) in Penguin News last week I find it unbelievable that there has not been independent bird and manimal observers on the oil rig and or support vessels from the start of the latest drilling campaign.

This appears to be the first impact assessment carried out so far between the oil drilling rig and wildlife. I believe that all seismic vessels carry observers as standard practice so why not the drilling rig and its support vessels?

The rig has been here now for over a year. Why have FIG not requested that there be independent observers on the rig or support vessels before now? This must surely be a great missed opportunity for year round data collection. It is my understanding that there is little data on which to assess impacts between the oil industry and wildlife in and around the Falkland Islands, so surely this makes the environmental impact assessments produced by oil operators incomplete and lacking any real data.

It is encouraging that Rockhopper and FIG seem to be setting an industry standard in the practice of allowing independent observers to be present during flaring operations. FIG surely has a responsibility to ensure that such opportunities are not missed, and

FIG's profitable housing account

THE article in last week's paper entitled "FIG housing manage-ment costs confirmed" illustrates that FIG makes a healthy surplus from renting houses: £279,000 in 2009/10 which is equivalent to a 3% return on investment on the current value of its housing stock.

It was revealed that the cost of depreciation is included on an asset type that appears in reality to be continuing to appreciate in value. It was also disclosed that the cost of capital and central administration costs are excluded but this is an outcome of FIG's accounting policy across all cost centres. FIG's tenants should get some comfort from the knowledge that they are making a contribution to the Consolidated Fund beyond visible cost recovery when compared like for like with other user pay charges. For example, the pricing of electricity and water is intended to recover no more than the visible cost of production (break-even) and only a small percentage of the cost of integrated public transport is recovered in its pricing structures.

It would be interesting to learn how the return from the lease of FIG housing to domestic users compares with the return from the lease of public funded nondomestic premises, including the abattoir and meat processing plant and the secure container park investments, to commercial users.

Bikers' winter weekend rally

WELL, after a lot of years away from the motorbike scene what a pleasant surprise I had this weekend when I was talked into joining in with the bike rally.

It turned out to be great fun for all who took part and also those who came along as support vehicles and carriers of food and supplies. At this stage I would just like to applaud the ground work that must have taken place by Robert Ferguson and his team of helpers, although I am told he did most of the organisation work and it all went very smoothly.

Starting off from Stanley on Saturday morning around 6am seemed like a good idea the night before, and on reaching Goose Green there were bikes being unloaded from all manner of vehicles. It was very cold so it was into the Galley Cafe for an all day breakfast. What a great start, and the Lees were also singing Robert's praises in his organisation of

Anyway, I looked about and was pleasantly surprised to see so many youngsters there, some of whom made the whole journey. Well done to you all who took this

We had a steady start for the first two hours until the tracks thawed as some people found this part quite difficult and probably only the very best managed to stay on their bikes. Then some eventful river crossings took place before it was onwards to North Arm.

Lunch breaks were well organised with Land Rovers meeting us with fuel and sausage rolls a plenty.

We arrived in North Arm around 4.30pm where there were three houses booked and all warmed up ready for our arrival. There was a superb barbecue in the shearing shed organised with Heather and Snoozer Smith helping out with the cooking. Then it was on to the club for some riders apparently, but some of us older ones (and I hope younger ones) retired for the night because at 9am the next morning we were away again heading back to Goose Green.

Something that struck me was how well the expert riders constantly dropped back to ensure the young and old were managing to keep up and follow the route. Parents have no fear, your young bikers were being very well looked after. At some of the passes we saw 6'6" riders on tiny little bikes wading through whilst the youngster enjoyed the crossing on the back of a quad or something else.

If your son or daughter has a yearning for this sport then I would suggest these guys will take very good care of them. I also hear there are plans to start a maintenance club to teach the young how to look after their machines.

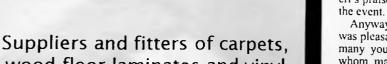

I know what it is like to organise something like this and I must say again well done to all involved and on a personal note I would like to add my thanks to the farm managers for their hospitality and also Peter Morrison and Nigel Leach.

Sailing in the Falklands and South Georgia: A Talk by the FIYC

The FIYC would like to invite you to a talk next Thursday evening, 28th July at 5:30 pm at the Chamber of Commerce.

The talk, to be given by Sally Poncet, is about the coastal trading voyages undertaken by local yachts such as Damien II and Golden Fleece in Falklands and South Georgia waters. Come along and hear about life on board these vessels as they voyage for business and pleasure amongst the wildlife and offshore islands of the Southern Ocean. See how modern technology has taken the tradition of working Falklands cutters and schooners into a new century, and enjoy the stunning wildlife images and seascapes that accompany each voyage.

Following the talk which finishes at 6:15 pm, there will be an opportunity to converse with members of the FIYC. Copies of the booklet Southern Ocean Cruising will also be available for purchase: all proceeds to go to the FIYC and a local charity.

We look forward to your company next Thursday.

Asked about shoddy maintenance of FIPASS, The FIC's Chief Executive Brian McGreal say the government's rules on maintenance were stringent and that FIG's Marine Officer, John Clark, was on the dock to, "look over our shoulder" and ensure the expensive facility was adequately maintained. The specific reason for his visit to the Islands, he said, was to look at the progress of FIC's latest project, the electronic point of sale which had been installed in the Gallery, the warehouse and the back office of the West Store.

Responding to readers' concerns that councillors would interfere with the Hay Management proposal, Cllr John Birmingham said, "the least the final proposal is messed about with the better, or it will all become meaningless." He said a review was needed to sort out anomalies within the civil service and he felt the new pension scheme would be a vast improvement on what was in place. "People should not be so negative," he said.

"I wouldn't like to face that lot again," he guipped. At Goose Green when the farm changed hands from the FIC to Falkland Landholdings, Tony said the FIC were "far the best to work for. Thank you for the penguins say Duke and Duchess

THE Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have thanked Falkland Islanders for their wedding gift. A letter to the Falkland Islands Government Representive in London, Sukey Cameron, from the couple's private secretary said the Duke and Duchess were delighted to become the adoptive parents of two King Penguins. The letter adds. "Their Royal Highnesses have also asked me to say how touched they were that you thought to send such a generous donation in support of Service Personnel and their Families, which is among the charities chosen to benefit from their Gift Fund. It was so kind of you to think of them in this way. The Duke and Duchess would have me send you, the government and people of the Falkland Islands, their warmest thanks and very best wishes.

UK artist Mike seeks history of coastel

AN artist based in the UK, Mike Ricketts, is seeking information relating to the coastel Safe Esperia that was based in the Falklands after the war as troop accommodation. If you have memories of the coastel (Islands' school children often visited for swimming lessons at the small onboard pool) then email rickettsmike@yahoo.co.uk or call 07890 769 421. Mike is also interested in photographs of the Safe Esperia in the Falklands. The accommodation barge went on to be used as a prison ship in New York and in Portland Harbour in Dorset. She is now located off the coast of Nigeria. Mike's project relating to the barge is likely to take the form of a short film.

Chamber meeting

TOURISM strategy, localisation at MPC, the Falkland Islands Development Corporation Review and shipping and airlinks were subjects discussed at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Council with Members of the Legislative Assembly on July 12. Quarry pricing and 'getting the Falklands message across' were also issues raised at the meeting.

All the best from the Pushers

BACK by popular demand the Pushers took to the Trough on Friday, adding one more performance to their run of final shows.

It was a Friday night that offered up the last last night in town for the pushy musicians Juan Suarez. Pete King, Rawle Staunton and Noel Igao. The band opened the night with vocalist Tara Hewitt singing crowd favourites, which were also available to purchase on the night on a personalised signed CD.

Joining them later was a surprise guest appearance from Paul Howes who injected some fresh covers of new-age classics that kept the crowd swaving until the smallest hours

The band's Facebook page was able to give their loyal fans a grateful although misty eyed review the following morning, "we are lost for words... so many people to thank, so many happy faces seen, so many dancing moves, so many choruses sang along, so much FUN."

Bassist Rawle left the Islands last week and the band wished him well with a weighty baggageload of memories. Next to depart from the Islands will be guitarist Juan at the end of the month.

Noel Igao, Pete King and Tara Hewitt have not yet talked about the possibility of continuing to play gigs or about looking to replace their missed members, but have said they are each keen to keep playing with each other if possible.

The Trough will go into into hibernation for a while with inhouse band the Fighting Pigs unlikely to take to the stage any time soon. The last Piggy gig was back in February but problems preventing a re-form include ensuring everyone is in the Islands and available to play.

Pete, the drumming Pusher and Pig, is hopeful they will be able to continue to play but says nothing is certain.

Bikers steam up a frosty Lafonia deterrent for hardy bikers on the weekend as 42 riders met up Goose Green on Saturday morning to embark on a two day ride to North Arm

What began last year as a way to raise funds for the Falkland Islands Motorcycle Association has now turned into a chance for bike enthusiasts (of both the two and four wheeled variety) to test their camp riding skills is becoming a firm faourite in everyone's calendar.

The first job on Saturday morning (after a welcome breakfast at the Galley Cafe) was to thaw the bikes out after a hard frost the night before. A few people had made the trip out on Saturday morning and when everyone was mounted up, it was time to go!

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

National Water on the following trequencies.

VIF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area 146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800 (Chapped 14.65 trades 150)

156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF

2.182 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 14th July, 2011

by Helen Thoday, Department of Agriculture

. The EMI drop has tightened slightly this week with only a 2 cents drop to 1361 AU c/kg (913 GB p/kg). Although there was a large offering of wool there was interest from China which kept prices up with a clearance rate of

· Although the market has steadied since the mid June peaks the market remains buoyant and the Australian Wool Innovation's forecasting committee places production next season at 345 million kilos, a rise of 1% from 2010/11. In addition some well-placed sources suggest that this estimate may yet prove conservative. China's luxury market is now growing more quickly than any other, rising by 30% last year with the number of millionaires up by 12% last year, all positive signs for many industries including wool.

• I have been travelling around the West this week and have seen many excellent shearing sheds and gained lots of information on Falkland Island wool production. There are a range of breeds, types and shearing options as with many regions across the globe. I look forward to seeing it in action as the season gets underway later in the year.

West say bye to brilliant Wendy'

WEST School children combined a concert with a farewell party for their teacher Wendy Reynolds in the Old School at Hill Cove last Tuesday.

Matthew Hansen, Hobman and Thomas and Grace McGhie performed to an audience of 25 friends and relatives from the area.

Tyler opened the concert with a performance on the recorder; Thomas followed with his recorder and then Grace sang two solo songs.

After a lively display of 'The Thirteen Pirates' the grand finale comprised Matthew showing off his considerable talent on both descant and treble recorders and the flute.

Teachers Clare Cockwell and Jim Woodward also provided musical accompani-

The event concluded with a party to say goodbye to Wendy, who is retiring after seven years of teaching on the

Speaking to Penguin News

Susie Hansen, mother of Matthew, said, "Wendy has become a valued member of the Hill Cove community and her cheerful presence will be missed by all.

"She has been a brilliant Camp teacher and parents and children are all very sad to see her leave. She's an excellent teacher and all her students have done extremely well under her influence. She made their education so much fun.

She inspired them with confidence and all her pupils were able to stand up and perform in front of an audience. I am sure she will be missed as much in Camp Education as she will be by her pupils in camp and the Hill Cove community.

"A massive thanks and happy retirement Wendy from all your pupils past and present and their families.

Lee updates shearing tallies

FOLLOWING up last week's front page story on Lee Molkenbuhr and Stefen Clarke's shearing successes, further details have been provided by Lee.

At the Cumbrian 'Lakeland Shears' he shore five sheep in the heats and made it through to the semi-finals shearing eight sheep and was placed 13th. There were 33 open shearers competing in the competition who travelled from New Zealand. Scotland, Wales and Ireland, said Lee.

Stefen shore four sheep in the sentor heats and qualified to go through to the semi-finals where he shore six sheep and was placed sixth just missing out on a place in the finals, as only four went through Together they competed in the International Relay where they had 14 sheep to shear. Final results were 5th England, 4th Scotland, 3rd Falklands, 2nd New Zealand and 1st Wales.

At the Great Yorkshire Show Lee shore six sheep in the heats

The next competition and made it through to the semifinals where he shore ten sheep in seven minutes and 43 seconds to take a place in the final.

Final results were 6th John Lamb, 5th Anthony Rooke, 4th Lee Molkebuhr, 3rd David Fagan, 2nd Gareth Daniel and 1st Rowland Smith.

The Falklands will also have a team in the Cherific Corwen Shears competition on July 22. Lee will be shearing along with Stefen and they hope to find another team member to make it three.

Troyd tees off at the Games

GOLFERS and married couple Troyd and Sarah Bowles had a very successful Island Games this year. Troyd finished 38th in the individual men's and Sarah in an impressive 17th in the ladies, but they also left the Isle of Wight with the best four round score of any Falkland golfers ever to play at the Island Games.

Troyd's total of 319 is now three shots clear of previous holder Glenn Ross and Sarah takes top spot for the first time with a score of 343 from Sharon Jaffray's 395 which held top place in the ladies individual for ten years.

Patrick Watts kindly supplied the records shown opposite with the results of our male and female golfers at the Island Games since participation began in 1993.

Glenn Ross and Kevin Clapp secured third & fourth with their efforts this year, just shy of Glenn's score from Guernsey 2003.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE: VACANCY

An opportunity has arisen for a member of the community to become involved in helping to ensure that FIG is delivering value-for-money to the residents of the Falkland Islands. Expressions of interest are sought from members of the public wishing to become a member of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC)

Under the Falkland Islands Constitution, the PAC comprises:

(a) a chairman and two other members appointed by the Governor; and

(b) two members of the Legislative Assembly.

The PAC currently has a vacancy for an "other member" under (a) above. The role involves six (or so) meetings per year, each lasting two hours, with an estimated time commitment of four hours per month for background reading and preparation. The role is unpaid but expenses are reimbursed. The appointment period will be until 31 January 2012 (in order to tie in with the appointment periods of the other, existing members).

The PAC has an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies. The PAC's task is to ensure that public funds have been expended properly, for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. Hence the role is varied, complex and fascinating. Individuals appointed to the PAC make a significant contribution to the community, in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falkland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands.

Applications should be submitted to the Governor by 30 July, setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job.

VACANCIES/NOTICES

TJ's are seeking to employ stevedores for the season. Applicants must be physically fit and willing to work shift patterns day and night, inclusive of weekends, at FIPASS and also on vessels in Port William/Berkeley Sound. For more information please telephone 31119 or 41012.

Mobile data and coverage for parts of Camp

CHECKING your emails while walking the dog, doing the shopping or even lounging in the garden will be an option for Stanley residents, and some Campers by Christmas

A spokesperson for Cable & Wireless told Penguin News that by Christmas 2011 they will have launched a data enabled mobile network, and expanded the existing coverage into parts of Camp, with the installation of six new base stations including Fox Bay and Port Howard.

Chief Executive of Cable & Wireless Justin McPhee said: "Lots of customers have been as ing for a data enabled network and for wider mobile coverage, so I am very pleased that we are now in a position to increase the footprint of our existing network and introduce data services at the same time."

"There is a lot of work to be done by the team to implement this, as it means lots of new equipment and changes to the network. That said, we are confident we can complete the project by Christmas. This enhancement will mean that customers will be able to receive e-mails whilst on the move, surf the internet from their phone and send and receive picture and video messages.

"Our network will be extended to cover parts of East Falklands, Fox Bay, Port Howard, San Carlos, Marc Harbour and Newhaven plus there will be improved coverage around Stanley.

"Our communications and marketing team will provide more information to customers nearer the time, so look out for our literature to see how you can access the service" access the service."

Justin added, "If customers want to use our data service they will need a SMART mobile phone. Customers can pop into our shop or call our Customer Services Team on freephone 131 for more details."

£2 million profit for FLH's three farms

FALKLANDS Landholdings (FLH) have reported a lucrative season for all three of their farms, Goose Green. North Arm and Fitzroy, with a combined gross meome of £428,774 on meat and close to £1.5 million on wool, according to draft figures released this week.

General Manager Owen Summers said: "The provision of livestock to the abattoir has gone well again this year with 21,024 sheep and lambs being supplied, compared to 20,560 last year. Since then a further 136 sheep and 10 beef have been supplied for the local market."

Mr Summers said, "We've had good wool prices and meat prices, but it's not just about the increase in prices for meat; it's not that we've put more animals through the abattoir, but we've changed what we are doing, in that we are putting many more lambs through, both new and old season as opposed to older sheep."

Fitzroy achieved an average of £27.13 per head for old season lamb and £22.54 for lamb while Goose Green obtained an average of £24.19 per head for old season lamb. In comparison, during the 2008/09 season the highest average for old season lamb was £21.07 by Fitzroy, with lower prices achieved by Goose Green and North Arm.

FLH sent 15,000 lambs to slaughter this season, 2,500 from Goose Green, 4,300 from North Arm and 3,900 from Fitzroy, confirmed Mr Summers.

Wool sales for the 2010/11 season are also now complete with the majority of payments received, he said. "It is expected that the remaining payments for wools shipped on the last voyage of the Scout will be received by the end July/early August thus completing another successful season for FLH."

Not allowing for shearing and wool freight, FLH made £1,334,835 on wool sales. North Goose Green made a gross income on wool of £742,831, North Arm £490,108, and Fitzroy £101,896.

Horticulture also made a come back. Last year Fitzroy only achieved a gross income of £9,852 but this season it increased to £31,959. Mr Summers said, "Last season was dire; that's the problem, if you get a bad season you get a bad season but your costs stay the same, but this season was far better."

The overall potato crop is expected to total approximately forty tonnes, which includes a few that are still in the ground but are being dug as conditions suit, said Mr Summers.

According to the draft balance sheet, North Arm's overall net profit as at June 30, 2011 was £191,845, Goose Green's £370,865 and Fitzroy's £97,368.

The farms that make up FLH were originally owned by the Falkland Islands Company but sold in 1991 to the Falkland Islands Government, and ownership of the farms was transferred to a new company called Falklands Landholdings Limited.

In 2000 a new statutory corporation was incorporated and the ownership was transferred to Falklands Landholdings Corpora-

DESPITE any politically correct protestations to the contrary, single parents, and in particular, single mothers the world over are judged and often judged harshly. Because of this, who could feel anything less than a sneaking admiration, if not a whole lot more, for the four young women who put forward their case at the public meeting on Tuesday night. After all, whether you agree, disagree, or maintain complete indifference to the issues they raised (see page 4), who can deny that it takes immense courage to throw oneself at the mercy of the appraising and often critical general public?

As it happens I was buoyed by the often highly supportive and attentive attitude of not only the Members but the audience. There appeared no evidence of narrow minded and outdated attitudes towards the women in question, and in fact there grew almost an air of approval, even pride, that a number of the arguably vulnerable members of our society had had the confidence to air their difficulties so publicly. and to assume they would be listened to.

I hope their courage is rewarded, after all they were not begging for money, but simply asking that thought be given to assisting them in moving forward with their lives so that they can provide a decent quality of life for their children and themselves.

Invariably there will be some members of our society spewing out censorious generalisations and other claptrap about the situation of single parents, but before they do. I hope they will examine the comfort of their own situation and ask why another should not be helped to aspire to something comparable.

IF that wasn't interesting enough, the highly philosophical (and spontaneous) human rights debate at the same meeting very nearly left me with a case of Wimbledon watcher's neck as the subject volleyed between an impassioned Reverend Richard Hines and a slightly indignant Lewis Clifton, of whom Richard demanded he go home and read his Constitution. The Reverend was explaining that because our rights are enshrined in that document, there was no need for the additional legislation so abhorred by Mr Clifton. The latter had enthusiastically condemned the visit of the FCO human rights group, believing as he did, that it would do no greater good than lead to further lawmaking and administration.

Close analysis of their exchange would have revealed that both Reverend Hines and Mr Clifton were on exactly the same side, however, the latter's sensitivity to anything that might even suggest potential additions to the Falklands tottering legislation pile, means that, happily for his audiences, he's ready to leap into the fray with lively conviction. And while Reverend Hines was entirely correct we still have to give the thumbs up to anyone aiming kicks at the paper mountain.

Suspended prison sentence for drink driving repeat

A YOUNG man who was remanded in custody for 13 days while a presentence report was prepared was given a further sentence suspended for two years on Tuesday.

Ryan Lawrence Shillitoe (20) who was already banned from driving had earlier pleaded guilty to four driving offences committed on June 25

His legal representative David Lang said Mr Shillitoe accepted the offences had been aggravated by taking place within nine months of being banned for drink driving, and the time spent in prison had afforded a period of reflection. He said his client intended to sell both his motorcyles, regardless of the sentencing, and if that had been done after the first offence, the more recent ones might not have occurred.

Senior Magistrate Trevaskis reminded Mr Shillitoe that when he was sentenced in September he had been almost twice the legal limit and had been warned if he drove during the ban he would be sent to prison.

On June 25 when he was arrested he had been two and a half times over the legal limit and had not only let down his obviously loving and concerned family, but also risked his employment, said Mr Trevaskis.

For drink driving he disqualified Mr Shillitoe from driving for three years and sentenced him to 12 weeks in a young offenders institution with all but the 13 days already served, suspended for two

For driving while disqualified he imposed a further 12 week suspended sentence to run concurrently; for driving without insurance or vehicle tax, no further penalty was imposed although his licence was appropriately endorsed and he was ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Mr Trevaskis said: "I have passed what I consider to be the correct sentences in this case; if, as it is suggested, there are deficiencies in the law regarding the sentencing of young offenders which have the effect of prejudicing them as compared with adult offenders, I urge those responsible for legislative review to address these issues urgently."

£675 finish for stealing from the Darts Club

STANLEY man William Harvey (38) admitted two counts of theft from the Stanley Darts Club be-tween May 16 and June 10 in the Magistrates Court on Tuesday.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court Mr Harvey had at the time been re-elected as the chairman of the Club's committee and had also assumed the vacant post of treasurer, making him the receiver of the Club's invoices while as chairman he was signatory to the Club's account with the Falkland Islands Company Ltd (FIC).

He charged to the Club's FIC account £190 worth of internet access cards and one mobile phone worth £479.99 for his own personal use.

Magistrate Senior Trevaskis noted that this was an "unsophisticated theft" but it had breached the trust of elected members of the Stanley Darts Club.

He said he hoped that as a consequence of this theft, all local clubs would look harder at how they manage their affairs.

Mr Harvey was fined £200 for each theft ordered to pay £190 compensation and prosecution costs of £85 totally £675.

The HTC Desire mobile phone is to be returned to the Club to be auctioned off as a raffle prize in AN Islander aircraft costs close to £1,000 for every hour in the air, confirmed Falkland Islands Government Air Service (FIGAS) Manager Morgan Goss.

He added that despite stories to the contrary, "There is no minimum number for passengers or destinations for FIGAS to operate. FIGAS operates with a large subsidy and it is my duty as General Manager, to ensure that the subsidy is reduced to an acceptable level."

He said, as such, it was his decision whether a flight was made or not. "Flight scheduling involves the consideration of many variables and our operations controllers work hard at balancing operational and technical requirements against the social needs of the community."

Should FIGAS choose not to fly is based entirely on economics, he explained. If a customer had a pressing need to travel from one destination to another on a non-flying day then they had the option of chartering the aircraft.

Commercial charter is one of the few tools that helps FIGAS offset its deficit, he explained.

Regarding the cost of flying Mr Goss said current fixed and variable costs for FIGAS equate to an hourly rate of £943 per flying hour

In order to explain the difficulties faced by FIGAS staff "as they consider passenger demands against operational and economic constraints," he gave an example of a flying day, in this case July 8, to illustrate.

"On this particular date seven passengers and one dog were booked to fly with FIGAS. The passengers had widespread destinations so it was impracticable (Camp airstrips have varying load limits and surface conditions) to place all passengers on one flight.

"Our operations controllers accounted for all possible variables to ensure the flights were to be operated as economically as possible, however, it was determined that two flights would be needed to ensure all passengers reached their destinations. In an ideal world all the passengers would have been carried on a single flight, unfortunately, the world is far from ideal and FIGAS strive to make the best use of our resources to hand.

"For example, the second flight of the day was routed Stanley - Fox Bay - Speedwell Island - North Arm - Stanley. Onboard was one OAP, one adult passenger and one child resulting in a revenue of £128.75. Flight time for the entire flight was one hour fifty two minutes which equates to an expenditure of £1760.26. You will note that the deficit for this flight is a staggering £1631.51."

Mr Goss said he was aware of arguments that by not flying Fl-GAS only saved the cost of fuel: but explained this argument did not appreciate the high cost of aviation gasoline (Avgas).

"Avgas is £1.29 per litre; an Is-"Avgas is £1.29 per litre; an Islander aircraft burns approximately 111 litres per hour which relates to a fuel cost of £143.19 per hour thus the total cost of fuel for the flight amounted to £267.28 which resulted in a loss of £138.53. On Friday July 8, we chose to fly despite the knowledge that both flights would be operated more uneconomically than usual.

"We are mindful that we not only play a transport role within the Islands but a vital social role as well."

In January 2010 the FIGAS strategic review board was set up and during this process key stakeholders were consulted and a public survey was also conducted.

The strategic review board concluded the recovery plan should be replaced by the current system which came into effect from July 1, 2010.

The financial position of FIGAS has declined over the years with an ultimate 41 per cent increase to the deficit over five years, and costs rising from double the income to nearly triple the income.

"Remedial action was clearly needed," said Mr Goss, thus the FIGAS recovery plan of July 2008 introduced measures to improve income and reduce costs.

"These measures proved unpopular with our customer base, hence the strategic review and reversion to a more flexible programme.

"Whether FIGAS accounts demonstrate improvements under the recovery plan is not clear cut, however, revenue showed definite improvement despite fewer passengers flying, but the gain from the new revenue sources were less than the ambitious targets originally set, and the full potential for additional income was not realised due to removal of the recovery plan."

Support services

ANY business interested in providing support services to the oil and gas industry, or developing their business to secure additional growth, can attend a lunchtime workshop at midday on August 2 at the Chamber of Commerce The session will look at services currently available to the oil and gas sector, future services that might be required, any concerns about offering services to the setor and real or perceived barriers that restrict or deny private sector participation. The meeting has been called in order to begin cataloguing current and future services that might be offered by the oil and gas industry, and to determine the role of the private sector in creating new business lines from on-going exploration, and possible exploitation. If you wish to reserve a place call the Chamber of Commerce.

Trawler netted

FISHERY patrol vessel Protegat yesterday escorted a trawler into Port William. The In Sung Ho, a Korean trawler licensed to In Sung Corporation has been brought in from Sector 8, north of the Falklands for what the captain described to their agents Sulivan Shipping as "re-education." Operations Manager Migs Cofre said the vessel was being investigated, because the fishery patrol was unhappy with the condition of the pilot ladder and how the tori lines were used.

WANDERLUST magazine has put the Falkland Islands as number 87 of its top 100 travel experiences. "This is a prestigious list to be voted into. A huge vote of confidence for this office that we are getting things right," said General Manager of the Tourist Board Paul Trowell.

Fuel ban pushes Antarctic cruise prices up

THE cost of cruising to Antarctica is set to rise next month with the introduction of new fuel regulations, but the knock on effect to the Falklands is still unknown, according to Sulivan Shipping.

Sulivan's Tourism Coordinator Sammy Marsh, said visits to the Falklands may decrease, but as only a handful of bookings are currently, in place for the 2012/13 season it is still too early to predict.

The bannning of heavy fuel oil being burned or carried in the Antarctic region which comes into effect on August 1, has been in the pipeline for sometime and the industry has been preparing for it, but using marine gas oil will make Antarctic cruising much more expensive, she said.

The change, which could cost large-scale tour operators several million pounds a season, has prompted some cruise lines to withdraw from the region, and visitor numbers are expected to fall to their lowest in almost a decade

Steve Wellmeier, executive director of the International Association of Antarctica Tour Operators, said the ban would reduce the number of voyages available next season aboard larger cruise-only ships (those carrying more than 500 passengers), with no opportunities to go ashore in Antarctica. He confirmed that Holland America and Azamara Cruises would continue to offer cruise-only sailings, but Crystal, Princess, Regent Seven Seas and Oceania have dropped cruising Antarctica from their brochures.

The average cost of a two-week Antarctic cruise has already risen from £3,500 per person in 2009 to about £5,500 next season, and the reduction in capacity is likely to drive prices higher.

Stringent controls on the emissions of sulphur oxides and nitrogen oxides by ships in North America are also due to come into force in 2012 with further price increases, and destinations likely to be dropped, expected.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

WITH Jan now back there in the old country, I have found myself, having said I would carry on with the column in her absence, almost forgetting the deadline.

ONE of the first issues that it is worth airing is that of the FIG website. Plans are now well afoot to give it a complete overhaul which it is hoped will make it more user friendly and also draw together pages that individual departments already have under one roof, thus helping not only us to give the world a better understanding of who we are and what we stand for but also make it easier for those who are curious about us in general or want more detailed information of activities undertaken by departments etc to find what they are looking for. Cherie and Claudette would be very interested in hearing from anyone who may have suggestions about what they might like to see included in the new website, just give Gilbert House a shout or drop them an e mail.

ONE idea is to have a "positions vacant" section which will allow anyone interested to see at a glance what is available and also to extend this to a list of vacancies that will be coming up in the future including posts that we want to localise if we can. Also it is intended to have the application forms on line and with return e mail addresses etc. This will of course also mean that the immigration section will also have to be bang up to date and all forms available in a suitable format in case someone may be interested in applying from overseas and wants to emigrate down here. It is hoped that this will also help cut down on recruitment costs.

WE will also be linking to other Falklands sites such as tourism. The net is a powerful tool (just ask a certain ex UK newspaper - if you could) and one which we must master, to be used in conjunction with other methods, if we are to combat the flood of half truths and outright disinformation being regularly disseminated from across the water. So remember it could be a case of "Facebook, blog or tweet for victory

Help us back to work plead single mothers

A GROUP of single mothers have challenged a system that they saydoes little to help them back into work

At a public meeting on Tuesday night four single mothers who said they were representing others who could not attend due to work or childcare commitments, explained the social welfare benefits system for single parents did not take into account the cost of childcare.

Kristy Buckland, who is a mother of two children age two and four, said the next day, "If you are not working and are on welfare at least you can afford food but if you go back to work any remaining money has to go towards childcare."

A mother with only one child in childcare full time will pay close to £400 a month. Under the current social welfare system, child allowance (£60 per month) is not seen as an income thus it can be put towards childcare confirmed Social Services.

Member of Legislative Assembly Sharon Halford said at the meeting that the new social welfare system did encourage people back to work and that is why she supported it, however, Ms Buckland told Penguin News she could not see how this was the case.

A married mother who spoke to Penguin News the following day, and who asked to remain anonymous, expressed her sympathy for the single mothers adding "Currently I work because one of my children is now at school fulltime; if they were both babies I couldn't afford to work and we have two incomes. I'm not sure how single parents manage at all if they are paying childcare."

She added, "The irony is you can economise more when you don't work because you have time to cook and can cut down on snacks as you have more time and can have meals ready."

Ms Buckland also raised the problem of persons living in government housing, not being allowed to cultivate a vegetable garden or keep chickens. MLAs agreed this was unacceptable and will be examined.

Speaking from Social Services Mrs Betty Turner explained the new benefits system is more "equitable" than the old.

In the past the individual would submit an expenditure, that would be taken off their income and Social Welface would pay the individual up to an applicable

The new system is similar but applies an amount to the individual depending on the persons household, for example a single parent might receive a different allowance to a couple.

Mrs Turner could not confirm, however, that a person would necessarily be better off under the new system.

At the meeting Social Services Team Leader Sharon Kelly noted that they had limited funds and last year were £10,000 over budget.

Mrs Kelly also said she would set up meeting between the Senior Magistrate and individuals or a group of single mothers on the subject of obtaining maintenance from absent parents and whether a court order in the Falklands was enforceable in the UK.

Ms Buckland said she had been reassured by the MLAs reaction to the issues at the meeting, apart from the attitude of MLA Halford.

Quarry price'morally wrong'

"MORALLY wrong" was how a member of the public described the variance between what the public and private sector are charged in terms of quarry product prices.

The private sector recently faced a 20 per cent price rise while it was confirmed at the meeting that the price for the Falkland Islands Government had only been raised by 10 per cent.

Mr Lewis Clifton of Byron McKay Ltd thought it unacceptable that the private sector was "shouldering" the increase in quarry costs.

quarry costs.

Mr Clifton was reacting to a response by government to a question from Mr Roger Spink on reasoning and calculations relating to the quarry.

MLA Gavin Short presented the response saying, "A policy was set in 2008-2009 budget session and agreed that aggregate costs would increase 10 per cent year on year until 2012/13 financial year.

"The last two years production was unusually high due to the production of aggregates for Project Shackleton and for the oil laydown areas and the FIPASS container park.

"Average annual production of aggregates is normally 30,000 tonnes. For 2009/10, 115,000 tonnes were produced; for 2010/11, over 108,000 tonnes were produced and for the 2011/12 budget session, production estimates are back down to 30,000 tonnes.

"In 2007/2008, a deficit of £127,000 was incurred In 2008/2009, a deficit of £82,000 was incurred. In 2009/2010, increased sales resulted in a surplus of £900,000. In 2010/2011, increased sales should result in a surplus of £182,000.

"Based on the 2011/12 budget estimates, a deficit of £30,000 was forecast if the 10 per cent increase was maintained.

"It was proposed by the Director of Public Works that if private sales rates were raised 20 per cent instead of 10 per cent for 2011/12 and no raise in 2012/13, it would eliminate the proposed deficit for the Quarry section."

He said the Budget Select Committee had agreed to raise the private sector rates based on those figures, adding, "The actual costs for aggregates would be much higher, if plant hire and vehicle maintenance were applied to the Quarry section, which is currently not the case. This would raise the actual cost of stone production by up to £3 per tonne, based on figures tracked for the project Shackleton Sales."

MLA Short said over a 16 month period, the Plant & Vehicle Manager tracked and calculated maintenance costs on the vehicles used for the delivery of the stone as £144,000, not applied to the stone costs.

He said, "Plant hire charges in the Quarry to produce the materials over a similar time frame was calculated as being approximately £168,881, again not applied to the stone costs.

"This also does not factor in increased costs of fuel, explosives and shipping costs."

Mr Clifton said he was dissatisfied with the answer and condemned the decision to raise the prices in the face of the 10 per cent only promise.

Top Guns and Seals teach safety on rig

REPRESENTATIVES of an American company made up of US Top Gun pilots, Navy Seals and astronauts recently visited the Falkland Islands to advise on safety issues on the off-shore oil iig Ocean Guardian owned and operated by Diamond Offshore Drilling, Inc.

Jerry "Leekster" and Ross Leckey Migs Roberts of Check-6 recently spent two days on the Ocean Guardian rig, but also found time to check out some the local haunts in Stanley

Their first stop was the Penguin News office, not because the local paper is the main reading material of such high flying chaps, but because our Deputy Editor, Sharon Jaffray had driven Jerry's parents to Volunteer Point during their visit in the summer and his mum had said to call in and say "hi"

Leekster's father is a retired American Airline pilot who regularly flew between Miami and Santiago and while Jerry is an F-14 fighter pilot with combat experience in Iraq, Bosnia and Somalia he is also a strike flight instructor and a 767 pilot for American Airlines.

Leekster said he and his father had flown many trips together to Santiago and other places before he retired. "That was some of the most rewarding flying of my life. My father and I sharing work we both love.

Despite Leekster's life in the fast lane he was still appreciative of what the Falklands had to offer. "Stanley was an amazing town. The people have a wonderful sense of community and made us feel welcome wherever we went. There is a profound feeling of optimism that is contagious throughout Stanley.

He said he and Migs were grateful for the warm welcome and social interaction they experienced during their visit.

Falklands way of life had also been fasci-

"Ali from the Victory Bar patiently spent time answering all my questions about the ins and outs of how the peat was divided and harvested by families for generations and is still used in some places. The fact you have 300,000 sheep and 3000 people is amazing.

"You know, you are experiencing a town on the edge of the frontier and it seems oil is the next level of exploration for the Islanders.

Gary "Craze" Mace and John "JD" Dixon from Check 6 are currently in the Islands and carrying out further work for Diamond Offshore Drilling.

So, how can fighter pilots, Navy Seals and astronauts make a difference in the oil industry? A former Topgun Navy Fighter Pilot, geologist and company founder Brian Brurud, recognised the similarity between drilling rigs and aircraft carrier operations. Both are high-risk and dangerous environments that demand a high-reliability outcome. Using lessons learned from combat military strike missions, commercial aviation and NASA Space Shuttle mission experience, the Check-6 Performance Excellence Rig, Leadership and Safety Training Program evolved.

Check-6 is recognized as the industry leader in team development for dangerous operations desiring high reliability with a predictable outcome, saving clients time, money and lives.

JUAN'S first time in the Falklands was in March 2008 as a locum pharmacist; after a few stints down here he decided to come back for a two year contract which ended on Thursday. He has been charmed by the Falklands but believes it's time to be close to family and old friends back in Spain. He enjoys any form of sport and about 10 months ago embarked on this crazy musical project called "The Pushers." He would love to see Islanders taking more responsibility for their health and a better quality of life.

West First Response annual refresher

THE annual re-fresher training for the West Falklands First Response Team is planned to take place this year from August 15 - 19 on West Falklands with sessions possibly being planned at both Fox Bay and Hill Cove.

The FIG supported and trained team is made up of West Falklandresidents with emergency equipment based at both Fox Bay and Port Howard.

Steve Dent, Recreation Manager, joint group co-ordinator and First Aid Instructor for the group said the team was an excellent example of community spirit at work and had proved itself on many occasions often under ex-tremely stressful circumstances.

"The team is prepared for almost any eventuality and if nothing else can act as a co-ordination point for emergency medical service responding from either Stanley or MPC. I encourage as many people to get involved in the team as possible, across the length and breadth of the West Falklands to ensure we have the coverage where and when we need it, equally I encourage all residents to keep the team in mind in an emergency situation to ensure that we can respond in a timely manner."

Helen Marsh, joint co-ordina-tor said at least 25 West residents had already attended. "Whether you have never participated in training before, or have skills which need refreshing the training provided will be suitable for

"Our aim is that if we find ourselves in a difficult situation and professional assistance is not immediately available we will do our utmost, with the knowledge and equipment we have, to provide First Aid.'

Government grazing fees are only greed

RECENT reading in Penguin News about horses grazing on Stanley Common has fascinated me, particularly all the hoo-haa about grazing charges.

Stanley Common from Moody Valley to Cape Pembroke used to be grazed by horses in vast numbers. During winter months over 100 animals were wintered on East Island. I understand there were a small amount of breeding ewes grazed on Ordinance Point area, supplying Christmas lamb for Stanley residents. All those animals fertilised the land, they were all in excellent condition, government never charged for their fertiliser.

Why now, when there are only possibly 40-60 animals involved, is a levy of £75 per annum being quoted amounting to £3-4,000 pa? That figure is "a pea on an elephant's back." What is all the fuss about?

In our present world if more finance were retained within the Islands such an enormous charge would not be necessary? So come on horse owners its just another form of greed.

Animals and nature live together in a natural environments why not let it remain that way.

Thoughts for Norway

I WAS shocked to here about the tragedy in Norway.

This morning I wrote this poem.

I hoped this poem would help and comfort those affected and to offer my deep condolences for their terrible loss.

Why the 22nd of July

So many killed for no purpose What a tragic waste of life Their bright starry eyes Looking towards future paths That are bright no more Why we ask why How could someone do this? What could possess them? A tranquil place for fun and peace Turned into a place of fear and death.

What would their futures have held

Doctors, Lawyers, Prime Ministers

Who's to say It's been snatched away In the prime of life A mad man with a morbid agenda Extinguished their flames Their lights will burn bright no more

May they rest in peace. As stars forever in the Norwegian night sky.

IJS should talk to parents first

LAST week I received a phone call from the Social Services Department information from a member of the IJS staff relating to my son being naughty at school and saying inappropriate things, and they were reporting this to Social Services - what is going on?

After speaking with Social Services, my partner and I discussed the incident with the Acting IJS Head Teacher and an apology was finally obtained from that person, but only after pressure from us, and because we were not responsible for anything that might have been said, which the child allegedly repeated in school, plus a chat with the child would have identified where the comment had originated.

It is fine to apologise, but the damage was done and I was upset and angry that the Social Services had been contacted first rather than them speaking to me directly, and the apology had to be coerced which at the end of the day is not really an apology.

I am a mother who loves and cares deeply for her child, and rest assured, he is properly cared for.

In a small community it is essential that the respect and trust between parents and the school is maintained. This incident has made me lose some faith, especially after speaking with his other carer from the Nursery, where the manager is fantastic with him. She said he is a "good as gold child" and has never been a problem.

This incident might have been avoided if we had a local person as the Acting Head Teacher, because I believe a local person would have called me first and dealt with it professionally because that person would have known most people in the community, and the act would go a long way towards stopping us being made to feel like criminals.

Reporting to Social Services in this instance was all too rushed and if they had spoken with the child's parents they would have got to the bottom of the situation. The way they did it made us feel somehow marked and tainted.

These Islands are our home and it saddens me how some are so quick to judge others and jump to unnecessary conclusions.

Finally, I would just say that in being at school our children are under 'locoparentis' and I don't have a problem with that. I am happy with a duty of care by the

However, I believe that authority has been exceeded in this case and it does not feel good at all.

I wonder how many other parents have had this happen to them?

Lack of food causes obesity

SURELY the worryingly high levels of obesity are something to do with the fact that it is very difficult to buy any low fat or health food products on the Island?

We have really struggled to get such things as low fat cheese, low fat hummus, low calorie drinks etc.

None of the restaurants or snack bars seem to offer healthy alternatives.

Also, the high cost and poor quality of fresh fruit, vegetables and white meat and low costs of alcohol and red meat do little to encourage residents to eat healthily.

Despite exercising regularly and attempting to eat healthily, I find that I have put on a considerable amount of weight since arriving here. My husband, who is a sponsored athlete, is having a similar problem.

Surely a way of tackling the obesity problem would be to improve the availability of good quality healthy food?

Dream-mailing

I NEVER cease to be amazed at the generosity of people, businesses etc.

The latest is Cable and Useless, sorry, Wireless with their great offer of FREE night time broadband between midnight and 6am.

They must know that is the time I do all of my correspondence, (only in my dreams). But, to take up this great offer I will have to sleep by day, prop my eyes open with match-sticks and stare at the screen at night and hope someone will contact me.

C&U/W you're the greatest (I wont say what).

LOCAL construction company White Rock are locked in a dispute with PWD over money they say is due to them for road construction carried out during 1996 on the West roads

Robin Lee, a director of White Rock said he believes PWD may be applying double standards by withholding payment because parts of the road did not have a five degree camber as stated in the contract. He questioned whether other roads, particularly the Sussex mountain road which has been paid for in full, were completed to the same high standard as the Port Howard to Fox Bay road saying another example of double standards is the Fox Bay jetty. It had, he said, taken as long to build as the road from Little Chartres to Fox bay with the cost ballooning from £70,000 to £111,000 so far.

Making headlines twice in Penguin News, Robin Lee picks up the reins of Seafish (Falklands) Limited at their Portakabin office on Fitzroy Road. Following eight years of fluctuating fortunes the Falklands' first public company has plans to increase activity in licence broking, the first steps to establishing a joint venture company with a Spanish company have been taken; they are keen to get into vessel management and to make further attempts to obtain long-term licences. "The Seafish story is just beginning," says Mr

With the future of the Falklands now apparently irrevocably linked with oil, Councillor Eric Goss took time-out during a recent visit to the UK to visit the Shetland Isles to see for himself how the small island community copes with the changes the North Sea oil fields has brought. Cllr Goss says a support services and a refinery base would be of tremendous value to the Falklands economy, rather than allowing the financial and other benefits to go to a South American country.

A blest from the past Make a will and extend your life your health, in fact the peace of mind from making one may even extend your life, was just one of many useful pieces of advice offered to the Falklands Womans Association at Monday's meeting to which Penguin News was kindly invited

Senior Magistrate Trevaskis talked to the ladies about the importance of making a will and also considered some of the issues people find daunting when faced with the task

First and foremost a will needs to be dated and signed before witnesses two who are not beneficiaries, and it is possible to write a will without a solicitor's help as long as you have all the formal requirements and your circumstances are fairly simple. Mr Trevaskis said however, it was generally not advised as there are various legal formalities that need to be followed to ensure your will is valid.

It's particularly important to make a will if you are in a relationship but not married, because the law does not automatically recognise cohabitants as having the same rights as husbands, wives and civil partners.

But even once your will is in place there is a need to update it as your personal circumstances change financially or otherwise. For example divorce makes your will invalid, however, if you are separated but not divorced it remains valid and the estranged spouse still stands to benefit from the will.

The Falklands has a registry for wills, which Mr Trevaskis said was an advantage over most countries and something the Islands should be applauded for.

He said it was common for wills to be misplaced; lodging your will at the registry was a good way to avoid this and he assured, there was no loss of confidentiality.

If you are aged 60 or more, separated from your spouse or contemplating commencing matrimonial proceedings, don't have a will and are concerned about the possible costs involved in setting one up you may be cligible for legal aid and should contact a solicitor or enquire at the Court and Council Chambers.

Making a will not only protects what happens to your property after you die, it also shows your family you have given some thought to what happens to your estate. Without a will the law directs who inherits, so your friends, favourite charities and relatives may get nothing.

For more information on why you should have a valid will Google, Telegraph write your will before its too late, or check out http://www.advicequide.org.uk

O WHO holds the post of ombudsman for the Government? How many cases have been put before him and how many are outstanding?

Attorney General Mark Lewis provided the following response...

AS you will know under our Constitution the Governor may from time to time appoint a Complaints Commissioner to investigate complaints of maladministration in the government of the Falkland Islands and other matters that may be prescribed in Complaints Commissioner Ordinance (section 95).

Section 96 of the Constitution says that a Complaints Commissioner shall have such functions, powers and jurisdiction as may be prescribed by the Ordinance.

In 2010 a Complaints Commissioners Ordinance was passed which set out the functions of the Complaints Commissioner and how you can complain and what happens to such a complaint.

Ken Greenland is the current Complaints Commissioner - he was appointed in October 2010 for a year. The Complaints Commissioner can consider complaints about maladministration.

I am informed that to date the Complaints Commissioner has not received any complaints and therefore there are none outstand-

Doctorate for Nicky

Torrance (formerly Reive), daughter of Dierdree Jennings and the late Terry Reive has been awarded a Doctorate in Professional Studies of Educational Development by Middlesex University, London Nicky left the Falklands in 1976 having completed her secondary school education at The British School, Montevideo, funded by FIG.

Nicky qualified as a State Registered Nurse at the Prince of Wales in North London in 1980 and then as a Registered Sick Children's Nurse from The Hospitals for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street London. She practiced as a nurse and went onto become a Paediatric Ward Sister at St. Ann's Hospital before returning to Great Ormond Street in 1994.

Two years later Nicky made the move into education, completing a Diploma in Nursing Education at South Bank Polytechnic. She taught first at the Charles West School of Nursing, Great Ormond Street before returning to what has become her home territory of north London, taking up post as Paediatric Nurse Teacher at Enfield and Haringey School of Nursing. In 1992, as schools of nursing transferred into Universities, Nicky became Programme Leader of Child at Health at Middlesex University, in 1994 and was promoted to Curriculum Leader and Principal Lecturer for Pre Registration Nursing.

In 2000, she became Head of Learning Development in the School of Health and Social Sciences and was awarded a Teaching Fellowship by the University. In 2005, she became Director of the Centre of Excellence for Teaching and Learning in Mental Health & Social Work, a Higher Education Funding Council for England project.

In September 2010, Nicky took up her present post as Director of Learning and Teaching for Middlesex University. Between jobs, Nicky met and married Alastair. They live in Nazeing, Essex and have two daughters, Shauna and Isla.

Former BAS man James is new face of conservation

British Antarctic Survey employce will take up the role of Chief Executive Officer of Falklands Conservation from Craig Dock-

In 1973 Mr Fenton worked as a botanist with the British Antarctic Survey (BAS) and made several visits to the Falklands. His speciality at that time was the distribution and growth rates of Antarctic peat. He has retained a keen interest in peatlands, of which there is no lack in the Falklands (tussac peat being of particular interest) although his interest and experience has since widened considerably said Mr Dockrill

After leaving BAS he taught ecology for five years at a field centre in the English Lake District, before returning to his native Scotland to set up as one of the first ecological consultants. During that period, in 1987, he launched and published the monthly news digest Scenes - Scottish Environment News - which is still in print although James is no longer the editor. This aimed to aid communication between the various sectoral interests that, at the time, were fighting 'conservation battles' in the Scottish countryside.

Thereafter he joined the National Trust for Scotland as their first ecologist, where he remained for 14 years. This involved both primary ecological survey work and the provision of nature conservation advice and projects across the organisation's whole landholding. "from lowland farmland to high mountains, from remote islands to small reserves and from moorland grazing issues to marine conservation," said Mr Dockrill.

Mr Fenton has moved away

from ecology and nature conservation over the past five years to the arguably more difficult topic of landscape conservation. He has been working for Scottish Natural Heritage in Inverness on strategic landscape policy, in particular the coordination of work on Scotland's 40 National Scenic Areas. He managed a small team that identified the special qualities of every National Scenic Area and of both Scotland's National Parks.

James has been involved in nature conservation for his whole career, both professionally and in a voluntary capacity, and has written extensively on the subject.

He also has a special interest in the environment of high latitudes, having led expeditions to the Arctic and worked on many expedition cruise ships as a naturalist and guide. This has included a whole summer season in Antarctica with Lindblad Expeditions (with many visits to the islands around the Falklands) and numerous visits to the Arctic.

Mr Dockrill said, "In fact, in June he was in the Arctic with Oceanwide and so will have traversed the length of the planet within a month.

His publications include the book Svalbard - Portrait of an Arctic Summer (an introduction to the natural environment of Spitsbergen) and last year he published his Field Guide to Ice, designed to help visitors to the polar regions understand the different types of sea and land ice.

His wife, Sue, is planning to join him at a later date, and his daughter, Mairi, has just graduated from Glasgow University and is now working as a marine biologist in Singapore and Thailand. They have both been to the Falklands Islands before.

Mr Dockrill said Mr Fenton "is particularly looking forward to working in the Falklands and meeting everyone - although he has difficulty getting his head around the fact that there are now roads.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area 146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

158.890. (Chapped 16 (Stanley 1882))

Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.
It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Off loading equipment at New Island

Work gets underway carting clay fill to the air strip

Runway at New Island extended by 131 metres

COMMENCING in mid May, a small team from the PWD armed with some impressive machinery, were landed from the MV Concordia Bay at the south end of the island to extend the airstrip, a project not possible before due to the lack of suitable machinery and its transport to the island.

The movement of the plant, composing two six-wheeler Volvo dump trucks, each with a capacity of twenty ton, a four-ton roller, a D6 bulldozer, two excavators, including a JCB 210 and all the auxiliary support equipment, the landing and moving of this machinery to the work site on the island was itself a somewhat daunting exercise.

Blessed with calm sea conditions, landing the machinery, which took up all the deck space of the MV Concordia Bay, presented few problems, although ironically the calm weather was to develop fog and poor visibility, which delayed some of the work force flying by helicopter into New Island.

With preliminary work carried out by the PWD Highways, Design and surveyors' offices, the plan was to extend the existing airstrip at both ends. This was to involve a considerable amount of earth moving. Earlier surveys had estimated this would involve the moving of some 2,500 tonnes of fill. Finding this amount of fill of the right type, ideally some form of clay, close enough to the extension sites was one issue. The second, but just as important, were environmental considerations.

Having spent years correcting erosion caused by overgrazing, the creation of erosion from forming a "borrow" pit had to be avoided. The solution to this was to extract fill from a coastal bank of clay and mudstone, which was already being subjected to natural erosion from the sea. With this site only a two- to three-minute drive for a loaded Volvo dumper to the extension areas, a great deal of time was saved and reduced track damage on the surrounding environment to a minimum.

With a need to cover the subsoil fill with topsoil, the same issues experienced with finding suitable clay fill arose. To solve this, the plan had been to remove a layer of silt from a pond close to the airstrip. Rich in nutrients and seeds this was seen as not only a source of topsoil, but also a way of re-vegetating the airstrip extensions naturally. However, in the process of stripping the extension areas of existing topsoils, much deeper depths of soil were found. This was stockpiled and on completion of the clay and mudstone fill being laid, was put back as the original topsoil.

To make use of the limited daylight hours, site work commenced at first light and with midday sandwiches usually taken at the "wheel", the gang continued until last light each day. With reasonable weather prevailing and perseverance from the workforce, the job was completed in just fourteen days, much shorter than the estimated three to four weeks.

What of the site statistics of this project: the New Island airstrip has now been extended by 131 metres to a total of 420 metres. A clay and mudstone fill, to a depth of 1.1m was laid on the main extension area to make level with the existing strip. In order to do this 1,100 cubic metres of subsoil fill (over 2,000 tonnes) was excavated from the coastal borrow pit. This required some 100 loads being moved by the Volvo dumper trucks. Additionally an estimated 500 tonnes of topsoil was moved from the extension areas and then subsequently replaced on the sublayers.

With stage one complete, stage two, the laying of suitable netting on the extensions, will follow at some point in the future.

Stanley Cup sets a furious pace

THE first match of the (not quite the) Stanley Cup was played on Tuesday between Blackhawks and Buffalos.

The game set a fast pace from the start but it was Robin Cooper who was first on the scoreboard with a goal for Hawks. Pepe Pavez-Villaroel retaliated with a goal for Buffalos but Craig Dockrill scored the second for Blackhawks soon after. Frank O'Sullivan netted the third for Hawks, closely followed with another from Craig. Buffalos fought on through Andrew Miller netting another in the closing minute to leave it 4—2 to Blackhawks at the break.

Craig was fast to open the scoring again in the second half and notch up a hat-trick in the process, but it was Robin securing the attention with his head becoming a magnet for the hockey puck.

Buffalos just couldn't get past Hawks' defence and it was Sam Cockwell who sealed the deal putting two more on the board; final score 7 – 2 to Blackhawks.

The second match was played between Sharks and Panthers. The short notice of the game meant only two of the Sharks team turned up but determined to play they dragged Ricardo Leyton from his newborn and persuaded pool player Kyran Evans and Buffalos Goalie Ever Perelta to step into the breach against the big cats.

The game was played at a furious pace and Karl Nightingale was first to score for Panthers. Ricardo was quick to respond with a goal for Sharks but Simon Reid found another for Panthers. Goalie Stuey Duncan was on top form but couldn't keep up with Kyran who notched up another for Sharks, leaving the score an exhausting 2 – 2 at the break.

The second half saw many skilled attempts from both sides and Karl finally broke through Sharks defence again. Each point in the match was well earned by both teams but with only twelve seconds of play left Ricardo netted another, leaving the final score Panthers three Sharks three.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE: VACANCY

An opportunity has arisen for a member of the community to become involved in helping to ensure that FIG is delivering value-for-money to the residents of the Falkland Islands. Expressions of interest are sought from members of the public wishing to become a member of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC)

Under the Falkland Islands Constitution, the PAC comprises:

(a) a chairman and two other members appointed by the Governor; and

(b) two members of the Legislative Assembly.

The PAC currently has a vacancy for an "other member" under (a) above. The role involves six (or so) meetings per year, each lasting two hours, with an estimated time commitment of four hours per month for background reading and preparation. The role is unpaid but expenses are reimbursed. The appointment period will be until 31 January 2012 (in order to tie in with the appointment periods of the other, existing members).

The PAC has an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies. The PAC's task is to ensure that public funds have been expended properly, for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. Hence the role is varied, complex and fascinating. Individuals appointed to the PAC make a significant contribution to the community, in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falkland Islands. This calls for PAC members themselves to have the highest standards of personal integrity, discretion and commitment to the good governance of the Islands. Applications should be submitted to the Governor by 30 July, setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job.

VACANCIES/NOTICES

Invasion predicts Thompson but Governor says Falklands is well defended

Julian Thompson

IN a sensational statement to British Forces News on Wednesday night Major General (Retrd.) Julian Thompson said he believes Argentina is planning to invade the Falkland Islands within three years.

Maj Gen Thompson was a land commander in 1982 and is the author of the Falklands War book No Pienie.

Speaking to Penguin News yesterday His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood said however, "I realise that Julian Thompson has the interests of the Islands at heart, and everyone here has a lot of reasons to be grateful to him for his outstanding leadership in 1982.

"But politics and military capabilities have moved on since then. I have no doubt - and I know this point is echoed by MLAs - that the Islands are well-defended against any potential aggression.

"I also note the often-stated commitment of the Argentine government to pursue their Falklands policies through peaceful means. I can only say what I have often said since arriving here. I believe it would be a mistake to spend our lives following an agenda set by "The Islands have an outstanding future - and I can see from the two school prize-givings that I have been to this week that that future is in good hands. That is what we need to focus on "

Thompson was responding in an interview that examined the state of Briush naval power, which is at a historic low due to budget cuts and the strain of the last decade's combat operations. It also looked at Argentina's intention to build a nuclear submarine

In an interview with the Daily Telegraph Eric Wertheim, author and editor of the US Naval Institute's Combat Fleets of the World guide, said: "Certainly, this is a symbol that Argentina has not forgotten. They don't want to be seen as a second rate power. I think the way that Britain would be able to protect the Falklands would be purely defensive before an attack happened. The ability to take the Falklands back once it is taken is decreasing monthly.

"It seemed insurmountable in 1982 but it seems a lot more insurmountable today."

Three months ago Admiral Sir John 'Sandy' Woodward, the head of Britain's Naval task force in 1982, claimed defence cuts had left Britain able to do "precisely nothing" in the event of another investion.

ExCo secrecy

EXECUTIVE Council (ExCo) or the Chair of ExCo appears to be unnecessarily withholding Government policy decisions from the public, claimed recently appointed Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers this week.

MLA Gavin Short, who serves on ExCo said, however, "to my knowledge nothing is unnecessarily held back."

MLA Summers wrote to the Governor and the Attorney General's Chambers asking why a paper that makes recommendations on amendments to the Access to Information Ordinance was not made public, asking: "Surely government policies on access to information cannot be a secret?"

MLA Summers added, "you might be interested to know that in the period 2006-2009 47 per cent of all ExCo papers were made public; in the period 2010-2011 to date only 23 per cent of papers have been made public.

ANY worries about the health of the nation were laid firmly to rest on the weekend as many who would normally spend their down-time glued to the settee with the only adrenaline-flow inspired by a PS3 took to the hills with a low-tech piece of plastic for unrivalled enter-

There are few things that can bridge the generation gap as effectively as a good covering of crisp snow and the urge to hurtle down a hill at breakneck speed with nothing but a millimetre of plastic between your backside and the road.

In my young day, when we got a lot more snow than we do nowadays, our sledges were treated with the same reverence as the latest

SMART phone is today.

Carefully stored in the summer and the alkathene runners lovingly waxed in the winter, the wooden version of the current slivers of plastic was quite often hand crafted in wood work class under the watchful eye of Jim Lellman or Jem Bayliss.

Mine however, was an absolute flyer designed and built by Les Biggs and Willie Bowles and capable of taking a huge leap at the bottom of McGill's Hill (King Street to you youngsters) into the Malvina paddock. In those days we could safely remove a sheet of tin and build a ramp without being done for vandalism or trespassing and more often than not there would be a friendly bobby at the bottom of the hill keeping an eye on the traffic and cadging the odd ride on our sleighs.

The youngsters don't have that luxury now and will probably never know the sheer joy of flinging themselves onto their sledge at the very top of Philomel Hill and passing the junctions without fear of traffic, to screech to a halt on a salted or sanded Public Jetty.

There was one chap, however, who realised he was going too fast to stop on the jetty so he bailed off his sleigh only to find his leather jacket worked like greased lightning on the icy surface and he ended up over the sea wall anyway. The good old days.

If we are blessed with another few days of snow suitable for winter sports I wonder if it would be too much to ask that a couple of hills are especially allocated for sledging so parents are not living in fear of their kids being run over as they reach a junction. It affects so few days of the year that for the sake of a few diversion signs and a couple of police dotted about to nab the complete idiots who insist on driving up icy hills regardless of signage, so many could have peace of mind and join in the fun.

OK kids. I've done my bit as promised, now can I have a go on your sleigh.....?

IT IS with great sadness we report the death of Mirabel 'Tim' Simpson on Monday night. As I wrote of bridging generation gaps above, this remarkable lady sprung to mind as somebody who effortlessly and with incredible modesty did exactly that throughout her life. As an art teacher Mrs Simpson inspired many pupils, while as a person her down to earth attitude and common sense advice earned the respect of all who had the privilege of knowing her.

Teachers must follow procedures immediate risk of significant harm to a child a school teacher is advised to speak to the parent first, confirmed Social Services Team Leader Sharon Kelly.

Following a letter to the Editor last week from a parent complaining about a teacher making a report to the Social Services, Penguin News enquired what the circumstances were under which teachers should bring a concern to social services.

Mrs Kelly said, "Where there are concerns for the welfare of a child a teacher has a duty to report those concerns to the designated teacher responsible for safeguarding children within the school.

The school has a duty to share these concerns with social services. Where the child is believed to be at immediate risk of harm and/or the concerns involves a clear allegation of abuse by the child these will be reported immediately.

"Careful consideration will be made whether to share these concerns with the parents at this stage.

"When the concern does not involve immediate risk of significant harm the designated teacher is advised to discuss these concerns with the parent if the child safety allows.

She said the overriding principle which governs all areas of work with children and families is that the child's welfare is para-

Parent Karen Steen said, "I think it is important to remember that schools have child protection procedures in place for simply that reason, to protect children. Clear procedures remove the subjectivity from the decision whether or not to refer to Social Services.

"It is the obligation of every member of a school's staff to pass on any information they become aware of that suggests a child may be in harm's way, no matter how insignificant it may seem, it could be a small but vital part of a much bigger picture.

In fact, it is the obligation of every member of our community to pass on such information. The potential consequence of not doing so is unthinkable. In a small community this is especially important. As much as it is terrible to say, our community is not immune to child abuse. But because everyone knows everyone - there is the potential to believe someone is not capable of harming a child. That's why there are procedures

Ms Steen said as a parent (although also a teacher she has been on maternity leave for five months) she was reassured that the Acting Head Teacher followed procedures, despite potential backlash: "If, as suggested by the author of the letter, it had been a local person in the role, exactly the same procedures should have been followed. It is not the role of a school's staff to question or weigh up the likelihood of the information being right or wrong, but simply to pass it on.

All hands to the airstrip

COMMUNITY spirit is still alive and well in the North West Falklands, Shelley Nightingale of West Lagoons Farm, told Penguin News.

She explained, "FIGAS has requested a lot of work to be done on the Hill Cove airstrip, so the strip users from surrounding areas have been working together over last few days to improve it to the standard needed.

"All this is being done on slave labour, we're not being paid, but we've had good fun and blown away the winter cobwebs and fat reserves," joked Shelley.

Along with Hill Cove residents, Dunbar, Port North, Sheffield, Westley and Teal River helpers have been working on the project.

The work primarily consists of gorse cutting, filling in of hollows in the strip, and the creation of a new access track to the strip.

Brazil supports Argentine claim

THE President of Brazil has reiterated her support for Argentina in the British and Argentine sovereignty dispute over the Falkland Islands. The announcement was made in a joint communique after a meeting of presidents Cristina Kirchner and Dilma Rousseff in Brasilia last week.

The communique stated: "This position stands on the long tradition of Brazilian diplomacy in support for the Argentine claim and which is based on the deep rooted historic event of 1833 when through an act of force Argentina was expulsed from the Malvinas territory."

Theft charges

TWO people appeared in court on Wednesday in connection to charges of theft.

Jessy Ann Hutt faced two charges of theft but did not enter pleas that morning. Her case was adjourned until next week when she is expected to enter pleas. Fernando Cordero also appeared regarding a charge of theft and pleaded not guilty.

Mr Cordero was released on unconditional bail until Wednesday August 10 when the Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis intends to fix a date for the trial.

Ten years on Richard thanks Uruguayan hospital staff

NURSES from the British Hospital in Uruguay were delighted to receive a visit, after a ten year gap, from a very grateful Richard Stevens of Port Sussex Farm, who said he owes his life to the hospital

In 2001 Mr Stevens was flown to Uruguay in a medical emergency and treated for a life-threatening flesh-eating disease.

During a recent holiday he went back to thank the doctors and nurses who took such good care of him at that time. Much to everyone's delight, Richard and his wife Toni discovered nurses Beatriz Valiente and Graciela Desevo still working at the British Hospital.

Speaking to The British Society in Uruguay Newsletter a spokesperson said: "The visit was extremely happy and emotional. The nurses never expected such a visit and I think all of them were almost in tears. It is very comforting to see that he recovered and that he is sincerely grateful toward the Hospital and its staff."

Darts champ sights set on Falklands

WORLD darts champion Adrian Lewis has his sights on an anniversary pilgrimage to the Falkland Islands according to the Daily Mirror.

'Jackpot' Lewis also hopes to mark the 30 years since the War with a delivery of boards and arrows for the British troops stationed here.

Lewis (26) who once dreamed of joining the Paras, unveiled his plans during a gala exhibition at the Army's Headley Court rehabilitation centre near Epsom, Surrey.

Lewis who had hoped also to visit Afghanistan said, "It would be an honour to go out there and pay tribute to the troops who made the ultimate sacrifice."

He has already been busy packing boxes of arrows for units stationed in Afghanistan.

ExCo secrecy

MLA Summers added, "This is clear evidence if any were required that a set of Terms of Reference for the conduct of Executive Council are required with some urgency."

MLA Short explained if a paper contained personal or financial information it remained confidential but the decision was normally made on the recommendation of the Attorney General

He said: "An anlaysis of what is actually in those papers would be interesting as percentages alone don't work. We need to know what is behind them."

Crown Counsel Ros Cheek said: "Whilst considerable progress has been made by FIG in this area in recent years, we should strive to continually improve. Our practice is to advise officers to consider whether there are good reasons to withhold information, rather than whether there is a reason to provide information, so I do not share the view that the Attorney General's Chambers is overly cautious in its advice.

"In relation to ExCo, there is no right of access to papers, but the policy of ExCo remains that papers will be disclosed wherever possible. However, the nature of the business of ExCo does mean that it is often not possible to publish for a wide variety of good reasons.

"I have no cause for concern in relation to current decision making by ExCo as to the publication of its papers, and I note that papers, such as the one mentioned, often cover a wide range of issues; not just policy issues which might properly be open to public scrutiny."

Ms Cheek confirmed that the Attorney General's Chambers is working on draft legislation to amend the Committees (Access to Information) Ordinance: "After the draft is considered by Executive Council, any Bill which is to be submitted to the Legislative Assembly will be published in advance in the usual way."

The Bill is currently scheduled to be considered by the Assembly in October and there will be opportunity for public scrutiny of the policy as reflected in the draft legislation."

Ms Cheek said the question of whether there should be a more detailed public consultation exercise on the policy and legislation would be one for ExCo.

Ms Cheek concluded: "I would suggest that perhaps the wider debate on access to information should encourage the carrying out of detailed public consultations in relation to policy and legislative change, which is a more accessible way of providing information, inviting public scrutiny and generating debate than the simple publication of Executive Council papers (which are not written for that purpose)."

Legislative Assembly Diary

Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

IT'S been quite a varied week, with GPC, ExCo and Standing Finance Committee plus also one of the liveliest and most interesting public meetings that I have attended in quite a while. It was good to see new people, as well as our regular attendees, presenting their points of view. We really do need everyone to keep us in touch with how they feel and what their concerns are and what they would like to see

Our old friend across the way has been up to her tricks again. holding forth on how nasty those wicked pirates in the Falklands are at a meeting she had with the Brazilian president. A closer look at the wording used in the joint statement reveals that it is the same as the last one made, the Brazilians carefully stating that whatever they do would be in keeping with both international and local Brazilian law, something which the "Kirtchneristas" pay absolutely no attention to. Although in the course of a normal week you grapple with the "heavier" items such as shipping and the like there are always a myriad of smaller but no less important projects bubbling along.

One such for me is some tentative work to see if we can introduce a credit card type driving licence which could compliment the paper version when hiring cars overseas but would also be easier to carry around. I believe we probably have the technology to produce such a beast locally. Certainly I am approaching this from the, lets see what we can do angle rather than looking for reasons not to, as they are always too easy to find. If we go for it then it would fit in nicely with the Road Traffic Bill rather than having to amend legislation later. I would be interested in hearing from people if they think that it would be a good thing to have. It probably isn't going to happen overnight but I am hopeful that we will get there this time.

Finally, I attended my first ever status ceremony - I am normally always working so Dick has always stood in for me. I am not sure who was the most nervous, me or the recipients. It actually turned out to be a really nice gathering and I would like to once again welcome Rosemund and Gordon aboard the good ship Falklands.

The waters we are steaming through at the moment may be a little choppy but I hope you will enjoy the calmer seas when we eventually reach them.

Fishing refund policy catches companies out

SOME fishing companies are feeling "a bit hard done by" having been caught out by a change in the Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Department refunds policy implemented for 2011, said Director of Fisheries John Barton.

An Executive Council report confirmed this week that a refund request had been received in respect of the 2011 Illex season, "and after much consideration and debate members decided to refuse the refund request on the basis that the refund policy was clear, and fishing effort was fully allocated taking account of the fishing periods requested."

Mr Barton explained that prior to 2011 the liability or likelihood of a refund was calculated on the volume of catch, but the additional factor of 'value of catch' had been introduced, and this year prices for catch had been high.

He said it was possible to apply for three periods within the Illex season which is divided up from mid February to mid March, mid March to mid May and mid May until mid June: "The last period accounts for 15 per cent, the middle 80 per cent and the first 5 per cent."

Companies must apply for the middle period said Mr Barton, "and if they want any of the others that's up to them."

Some applied for the full season and some for the period up to mid May, thus while some had to pay 100 per cent of the fees, others only had to pay 85 per cent, and while the fishery went well, said Mr Barton, "it was all over in fishing terms before the middle of May so inevitably with hindsight some didn't want last period and asked for a refund."

Last year Illex catches were poor with only a total of 12,000 tonnes caught. This year, however, although not, "rip-roaringly abundant," said Mr Barton, they had been moderate at 80,000 tonnes in total. Some years Illex catches have totalled more than 100,000 tonnes.

Mortgagees Register

Executive Council also gave approval for a Mortgagees Register, criteria and application, under the Fisheries Ordinance (the latter providing a process by which prospective mortgagees can apply to become approved and entered in the register.)

The Fisheries Ordinance regulates the manner in which Individual Transferable Quota (ITQ) may be mortgaged. Any mortgage of ITQ can only be concluded by a mortgagee whose name appears on the Approved Mortgagees Register.

The report put to Executive Council explains: "The Fisheries Ordinance is highly prescriptive about who is eligible to hold or own ITQ. As such there might be some concern as to whether a mortgage might conflict with the ownership aspect or what happens in the event of a default on the part of the mortgagor."The ordinance provides safeguards in this regard. The mortgage cannot be constructed, so that in the event of default on the part of the mortgagor, the ITQ transfers to the mortgagee. The remedy available to the mortgagee in such circumstances is the power to force the sale of the ITQ, and the sale would have to be to a company eligible to hold ITQ.

The ITQ system was introduced in the Falklands in 2005 in order to stimulate the modernisation of the fishing industry and the promotion of economic growth.

Convention on sharks signed

THE Falkland Islands is to sign up to the Convention on Migratory Species Memorandum of Understanding on Sharks. The list covers seven sharks but only one of these, the Porbeagle Shark, is found in the waters around the Falklands.

The objective of the MoU is to achieve and maintain a favourable conservation status for migratory sharks based on the best available scientific information, taking into account the socioeconomic and other values of the species. At the core of the MoU is the recognition that successful shark conservation and management requires international cooperation.

According to a report from Executive Council, in giving their approval MLAs said they would only do so on the same basis as Australia who made it very clear they would not change their fisheries management relating to the shark species covered by the Memorandum of Understanding in their waters.

Beauchene trips

PROTECTED Beauchene Island will receive two visits later this year as approved by Executive Council.

The first visit will be by Falklands Conservation in October to retrieve satellite trackers from Rockhopper penguins and the second in November by the Max Planck Institute, led by Dr Juan Masello in order to conduct genetic studies into Fairy Prions.

Executive Council have asked that government is sent copies of any reports written as a result of the visits

Brown trout

THE Sale of Brown Trout was considered by Executive Council on July 28. Having been debated extensively the paper was referred back to the Environmental Planning Officer, "for him to revisit the subject and see how best he could balance the need for restaurants to be able to have this fish on their menus whilst also taking into consideration conservation concerns," said MLA Halford.

Legislation

THE Legislative Drafting Priorities paper was approved with minor amendments at the Executive Council meeting. Approval was given for the Electoral (Amendment) Bill to be published in the Gazette before going to the August sitting of the Legislative Assembly.

Approval was also given for the Draft Livestock and Meat Products (Welfare of Livestock) Regulations, Draft Codes of Practice on Animal Welfare.

Not all mums take handouts

AFTER last week's commotion regarding the issue of single parents struggling to make ends meet. I am left feeling angered. I am a single parent of two children. My children have almost grown up now, and I and many other single parents did, and do, cope without help. You just have to get on with it, swallow your pride and do the best job you can for yourselves and your children.

To some of the women who have raised this issue, have they thought about cutting back in other areas such as an internet package, smoking and drinking. Social Welfare is for the basics.

It was hard when my children were younger also. I could not afford to go out to pubs but still had a great social life with friends, family and my children. Because of this, and no lies between me and my children, they are both strong and hard workers and I could not have been more proud of them.

What about mutton and spuds? A whole mutton bought from local farms is valued at £15.

A medium bag of potatoes from Fitzroy is £10, so there you go. £25 spent on more than a week's worth of food. It is not everybody's choice, but it has always been a staple Falkland Island diet.

I do not agree with some of their arguments, we just had to get off our backsides and help ourselves and our children.

There is no shame in asking for help, but the tax payer cannot be expected to pay for everything. It is also common knowledge that if you earn over a certain amount you are not entitled to a rent rebate and other benefits.

If these single parents are genuine and do want to do an honest days work then what would help is if FIG/Welfare were to help with nursery fees, or were to even introduce a nursery for working single parents which would help them enormously. There is a perfectly good Day Centre.

Child allowance was a great help to many, now it is a joke. Why can't FIG just take the tax off before they give it each month?

I propose introducing the so called 'chain gang' again: the training centre should offer courses to single parents to help better themselves for jobs and maybe also help them gain their drivers licence for a better chance of gaining work.

Once in a job, either full or parttime. Social Welfare should also be checking with employers to ensure that individuals are making an effort to secure employment, and giving it all they can.

There are not enough jobs to go around, we all know that.

This is where a minimum wage should be sorted out, and become a priority for council. And at the same time take control of immigration. There are some jobs that many local single parents and upcoming educated locals are more than capable of taking up, but are currently filled by individuals on contract - I hope this will change.

The word now seems to be that single mothers/parents are deemed as all the same, a welfare case.

This is not true and I do not want to be labelled as that. I worked part time when my children were younger and now in a full time job for 2/3 years and love every minute.

I do still struggle, who doesn't? I am not a welfare case and never intend to become one. I hold my head high and am proud of where I am today as I have done it all by myself, for myself and my children, and without handouts from FIG/Welfare.

Cheers from the Defence Force

I WOULD like to thank local farm owners for giving us access onto their land and for their hospitality, and thanks also to employers for allowing members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force to take part in Exercise Dagger Thrust on the weekend of 24th July.

The FIDF was called out on Friday morning and undertook a training exercise until Sunday morning. It is important for all FIDF members to train regularly and these exercises enhance core skills and test our operational capability. A big thank you to all members of the FIDF who participated in the exercise, it was a good turn out and you more than held your own against the RMR enemy who were very impressed with your skills throughout. Good effort to all who took part.

Stop whingeing or go home

AS a Falkland Islander I hate to see someone coming here from overseas and starting to whinge.

I am referring to the letter included last week. First of all the Argies are to blame for costly fruit and vegetables, you can buy low fat cheese and if you so wish low calorie drinks. You would have to be very hard-up not to be able to afford chicken or fish.

The Falklands is a lovely safe place to bring up children and most people appreciate this. If people don't appreciate the Falklands they don't have to live here.

Winter Ball keeps out the cold

LAST Saturday may have been a frosty night but inside the FIDF Hall a large gathering and traditional dancing made sure everyone was kept warm.

This was the Winter Ball 2011 and the falling snow only added to the atmosphere of the evening and did not stop anyone from having a good time.

DJ Robert Rowlands played all of the old favourites like the Palais Glide and March of the Mods which were popular along with the less traditional dances of the Hokey Cokey and YMCA, ensuring the dance floor was packed at all times.

The hall was decorated beautifully in metallic shades of blues and silver and the tables featured a centre piece of local sand grass with butterflies in and a copy of the words of Andi Neate's song 'Gone but not forgotten' aka Helen's Waltz which Andi wrote last year in memory of Helen McKay.

The first Winter Ball was the brainchild of Helen to give people another chance to wear their May Ball dresses and is now held annually to remember Helen and to continue what she started.

All night people were voting for Belle of the Ball which was won by Phoebe Smith who looked stunning in a light pink, full length ball gown with white detailing, whilst Gareth McGhie was chosen as Best Dressed Man of the night which proved a popular choice with many cheers heard as his name was announced.

Money raised from the night is going to buy special musical equipment to help Alex McGhie at Port North, a fantastic use of the money.

Great music and dancing, a delicious buffet and of course old friends made the evening a success, which we can thank Helen for, and her mum Jeannie, her family and many friends who each year put on a spectacular event enjoyed by all.

Ed- Bernice Hewitt was invited to write the report above by Jeannie, however, it just missed our deadline for thecentre pages, going to print, thus its inclusion on this page.

Coping and paying taxes

THERE are many single mothers out there who seem to be coping just fine. OK we don't live in a palace or wear Prada but we get by.

The children are well fed and watered at all times and we still manage the odd treat or two.

Life is never as hard as some people make it out to be, life is what you make it! So why not try that little bit harder?

Things can't be so bad as we have noticed nothing stops people going out and having a good time on what cash they do have left.

Some people do have it harder than others but the list is not that long.

The need to feed and clothe my children gives me enough inspiration to work at two jobs and pay my taxes.

Gyfer's all at sea with round the world race

FORMER Penguin News journalist Sue Gyford has found herself part of a crew for the first leg of Clipper Round the World Yacht Race

Sue, who also worked for the FIRS news team, and who is now an Edinburgh Evening News journalist, has set sail with the crew of the Edinburgh Inspiring Capital, the Scottish capital's entry in the race. She joins them on the first leg of the race from Southampton to Madeira.

The yacht was one of ten that left from Southampton on July 31. The Royal Navy's helicopter carrier. HMS Illustrious, and a fleet of hundreds of spectator boats gave a spectacular send off to the amateur crews on board the yachts.

The event, 'raced by people like you,' is the world's longest ocean race at 40,000 miles. Sue is undertaking a blog for the Edinburgh Evening News and can be followed at edinburghnews.scotsman.com/news/Sue-Gyford39s-Clipper-blog.6808317.jp

Sue initially suffered a degree of seasiekness but was able to quickly recover after a becalming on the second day.

There are ten yachts in the race including vessels from Australia, Irelend and the USA. The race itself can be followed at clipperroundtheworld.com

Brushing up on ewe scanning

VET Peter Ebbett from Hawks Bay, New Zealand, has been building and upgrading the skills of six Department of Agriculture staff in the use of an ultrasound to establish the pregnancy status of ewes. The staff took the opportunity to practice the skill at North Arm last week where 9,000 ewes were to be scanned.

Agricultural Adviser for the Department of Agriculture Tony Mills explained, "A sector probe is applied to the offside flank of the ewe. From a screen a diagnosis can be made whether the ewe is pregnant, not pregnant or carrying twins."

Mr Ebbett scans around 100,000 ewes a year.

To garden or not to garden FIG properties

MLA Emma Edwards has been investigating whether tenants can keep a garden and chickens on rented government properties.

At a meeting of the General Purposes Committee (GPC) on July 27, she noted that (contrary to commonly held belief) it might be possible, but she was still pursuing the matter, in order to find out if this was actually stated in tenancy agreements.

According to a report from GPC by MLA Gavin Short, this was followed by a general discussion sparked by requests from individuals who claim they have no space for a garden, and thus requested allotments in order that they be able to grow their own vegetables and help in a small way to keep their household bills under control.

He said members were generally receptive to the idea and asked if land could be found for allotments: "This also ties in very nicely with the drive towards import substitution and greater self sufficiency," he said.

Complaints came mainly from those living in the caravan park and other properties with very little land attached.

MLAs on TV? Public to decide

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly will consult with public meeting attendees on the matter of whether Falkland Islands Television should be allowed to film during those meetings.

MLA Gavin Short said the Assembly had received another request from FITV to film at Legislative Assembly and public

"We have replied to their letter basically restating that the majority of members are not minded to allow cameras into Legislative Assembly sessions and will be consulting with the people. We will be guided by the wishes of the public," he said.

June 4 holiday

JUNE 4, 2012 is to be made a public holiday in order to celebrate the diamond jubilee of the Queen's coronation.

MLA Short said: "The actual coronation took place on June 2, which falls on a Saturday so the fourth will be a day in lieu. It is also the day that has been chosen for the lighting of beacons across the UK and the world to celebrate the Jubilee, which we here in the Falklands will be participating in."

The idea was suggested by MLA Short in the any other business section of the meeting.

Beware of tourists New couple join Seamen's bearing gifts

WE'RE just back from two weeks holiday in Greece.

We had been accused of taking unnecessary risks by choosing to holiday among the volatile "Might as well go to Mogadishu," said one friend.

Fresponded that it was our duty as good Europeans to stimulate the Greek economy. Far be it from us to abandon the Greeks in their hour of need. And anyway, all that retsina and kleftico would surely be very much cheaper during such

It occurred to me, though, that they might have a point. Would the Greek airports even be open?

It also crossed my mind that it was a good thing that we had generously placed the Elgin Marbles in safe storage in the British Museum back in the 19th century

But surprise, surprise. We flew into the southern Ionian islands to be greeted by Greeks who seemed as sleepily content as they ever have been.

I suppose it may have been different in Athens, but here life seemed to be very comfortable. Life for everyone, that is, except the notoriously neglected street

But - the horror - one's Euros bought no more here than they did in Paris, Brussels or Rome; possibly less. One just had to get on and enjoy it, so we did. It was only the cats that really threatened the success of the holiday

The scrawny moggies begged us for food every time we sat down in a cafe. One evening, ensconced at a lovely cafe in Kefalonia, where the water lapped gently, just a few feet away beyond the sea wall, we cracked.

I went off to a buy one particularly poor little creature some tinned cat food. The initial response from the animal was positive, but evidently it thought we had been about to offer quality food from our own plates.

It backed off from the open tin of scraggy flesh as if it had been kicked, and plunged over the sea wall into a few metres of sea.

The waiters, whom we had always assumed did not care for cats, rounded on us as if we were criminals. "What for you throw kittens into seas?" shouted one. "This never happens before. You must leaves now. Cats killers'

The cat did not drown, but had hit the bottom and shot back out of the water, landing again among its skinny friends.

They all scarpered squealing loudly, and only stopped about 20 metres away, where they felt safe from the psychopaths. They exploited maximum sympathy and watched, smugly I thought, as not only the waiters but the other diners too, turned on us. "Get back to Benidorm," shouted one Brit.

A German yelled something like "schweinhund", which, from my education in comics of the 60s, I know to be rude. We threw some money on the table and scuttled off. Looking back briefly I could see the cat being dried on a waiter's apron and projecting an expression of sheer hatred in our direction.

From then on, I was more inclined to look for signs of extravagance among the cash strapped

I soon found evidence of Greek profligacy. Almost every day we were over-flown by four or five Greek Air Force jet fighters. They looked like Phantoms, planes well remembered for service in the Falklands. But they are old gas guzzlers, and I could not figure out why the Greeks felt the need to literally burn up hundreds of thousands of Euros roaring around the skies.

Here was a country on the bones of its backside playing with grotesquely expensive military

I still use this example of profligacy as much as possible, but it doesn't work. No one can hate the Greeks for long.

Their food is too good, their islands are too beautiful and their demeanour is too friendly. Unless, of course, you try to drown their cats. Do that, and you might as well book an early flight home.

Dig for victory

I have been following two themes in Falklands news with increasing concern. The first is the truly horrifying rates of obesity (as reported in PN two weeks ago), which is around twice that of the UK. The second theme is the increasingly aggressive Argentine attempts to blockade and isolate the Islands

I was shocked by PN's front page splash, but quite prepared to believe it. Every time I come home, it strikes me that there are more corpulent people, and that they are younger.

We were never a skinny lot, but in the old days the chubbier ones were generally older.

I assume that the health experts and councillors are addressing this issue, and they will soon produce a strategy to combat obesity. But it has to be down to one of two reasons, or a combination of both; Islanders are eating too much highly calorific and imported processed food, or are not getting enough exercise.

So, here's a big idea to address both the issues of growing girth and the blockade.

Get people back to growing their own vegetables. Many veggies grow perfectly well in the Islands, and just a few decades ago, almost every householder would work long hours in the summer, cultivating the food that would take them through the cold months. Hardly any vegetables were imported.

If the community gets back to this, they'll benefit from the exercise and the goodness of the veggies produced.

The obesity rate will tumble, and the Islands will not need to rely so heavily on imports from South America

Here in the UK, vegetable gardening is almost a religion. Councils set aside large tracts of land as allotments and rent them to local people.

There are always waiting lists for allotments. These days, of course, not all houses in the Falklands have gardens and digging up virgin Camp is very hard work.

Perhaps the government could supply the funds to create allot-ments, build poly tunnels, and subsidise fertiliser.

I predict that the queue to rent allotments and enjoy selfsufficient would snake out of the secretariat and down Ross Road, well past the West Store where so much of that processed and imported food is bought.

mission

HUSBAND and wife team Steve Gill and Edmonde Openshaw (Gill) arrive in Stanley shortly to take up their new role as the next permanent managers of the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre. Steve recently completed work as a Special Needs teacher in Derbyshire.

During his twenty-three years in the RAF he served as manager of several communication centres and spent four months in the Falkland Islands.

Edmonde was ordained in 1985 and until two weeks ago served as the minister of an Independent Chapel in Derbyshire.

She is also qualified and experienced as a caterer.

Together with their family. Steve and Edmonde have travelled widely and lived in various locations, including the Outer Hebrides and the Netherlands.

This year two of their three children completed their university studies in UK.

On behalf of the trustees of the Stanley Seamen's Mission, chairman Richard Hines commented:

"As trustees we're very pleased to welcome Steve and Edmonde to the Falkland Islands and hope they will quickly feel at home.

"We are indebted to Luis and Betty Romo, interim managers at the Scamen's Centre for 10 months, who have set new standards of hospitality and care for seafarers: they were the perfect couple to build on what Maurice and Debbie Lake achieved in recent times.

'Now it's over to Steve and Edmonde. They will have our full and warm support from day one as they strive to ensure the needs of seafarers continue as our number one priority."

Notes from exile

THE novel Notes from Exile by T M Spooner is set in Mexico and deals with four expatriates, one of whom is a Falklands War veteran. The author as a veteran of the US Army trained with some Falklands War veterans in the mid 1980s in North Carolina and the character in the book is modelled after the men he knew during that time. The novel includes some of his flashbacks to the Falklands Warm and is available on Amazon.

AFTER several days of hard frost followed by a perfect covering of snow on Saturday, the young and young at heart took to the hills, ponds and wide open spaces for some winter sporting activity.

Children scampered up the steep hills of Stanley to zoom to the bottom again on their sledges for hours on end while on a flat grassy expanse on the outskirts of town the slightly more adventurous pitted their wits and hanging on skills against an old tyre attached to a vehicle.

Meanwhile on a frozen pond near Surf Bay with the winter grey South Atlantic as a backdrop, Grant Budd relived his professional ice hockey days with son Malachi as they passed the puck.

It was almost as if Stanley had been transformed into a wonderful winter playground and it was great fun to observe as well as take part.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VIET 2 matrix Royal

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area 146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.
It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Antoine Daille at the Aquaculture project near Moody Brook

Aquaculture: sea cages vital for development

AQUACULTURE is important to the people of the Falklands and is an amazing business opportunity for someone in the Islands, says the man who is single-handedly caring for the hundreds of Brown Trout thriving at the Moody Brook site.

Antoine Daille has been working at the Development Corporation owned Aquaculture Project for more than five years and has seen it develop from a somewhat muddly converted market garden area into what is now an efficient and amazingly simple fish farming operation.

As around 26,000 eggs extracted from the adult fish nestle on the trays near hatching, Antoine keeps a close eye on the water temperature. The eggs are more vulnerable to drops in temperature in their synthetic environment and a four degree drop could mean a 30 per cent loss in the hatch rate.

It takes 62 days for the eggs to hatch and each batch is monitored carefully through its growth stages to see how quickly the fish mature and are ready for growing on in the salt water.

The Brown Trout were introduced to Falklands' rivers in the 1950s from Scotland and Antoine's home land of Chile. The fish that spend all their life in fresh water remain brown, but those that venture out into the sea become silver with a hint of colour and have been confused with Rainbow Trout

In 18 large water tanks Antoine watches 500 plump and healthy two-year old Brown Trout grow. but what the future holds for them is uncertain.

Antoine would like to know they will be moved to a sea cage to grow on to a harvestable size and although there is no infrastructure in place for this to happen he has experimental salt water tanks which he moves the fish into at different stages to monitor when they best adjust.

Three sites - two on the East and one on West Falkland - have been selected as suitable for sea cages for farming the trout, but whether the cages are ever put in place depends on the decisions made at the August and October Development Board meeting, said

But he is convinced that as a business sea trout farming could make a valuable contribution to the Islands economy. "Aquaculture could create new jobs in Stanley and in the Camp and stustudying marine biology would have work in their field.

Antoine said there are not many sea trout farms in the world and as well as providing a healthy contribution to Islanders' diet there is the possibility of exporting.

In the UK frozen sea trout fillets retail at around £21 per kilo and smoked sea trout is such a delicacy you can expect to pay £75 per kilo.

Antoine said he would like to thank all the people who have helped out with the Project, particularly members of the farming community.

If you would like to find out more about the Aquaculture Project or arrange a visit to the site, contact Antoine on email antoinedaille@fidc.co.tk.

2011 Census Preparation

The last Falkland Islands Census was done in 2006, work is now underway to carry out the 2011 Census.

In preparation for the Census, we have been asking people their views. Some people said that they didn't know why so many questions were asked, and what was done with all that information. There are a number of uses for the information, the two most notable are:

The ability to plan the Islands future effectively. Government and other decision makers use the data to make key decisions. For example a census might show that there are more people being born suggesting we need a bigger maternity suite in the future, or that there are more people over 65 signifying the need for a bigger blue bus.

The Census data is also a snapshot of the Islands in any given year; it is a record for the future. How many of us are interested in genealogy, and with that how many of us enjoy looking at documents which show us how our ancestors used to live? It's important to keep our history alive, and we do this with the Census.

Following the 2006 Census a report was produce, called "Comparative Census Statistics 1986 – 2006" this report includes the results of the data from 1986. If you would like a copy of this report, please contact the Policy Unit and we will get one out to you.

RDS PROJECT CO-ORDINATOR - FIDC

The public and private sectors have worked in partnership to produce the Rural Development Strategy (RDS) with the principal objective of maintaining Camp in order to encourage a well-populated, economically and socially sustainable community integrated within the national economy.

FIDC has a significant role to play in taking forward the delivery of the RDS and is now seeking an RDS Project Co-ordinator to manage the continuing development and delivery of the Strategy - working with FIDC, FIĞ and the private sector.

This is an exciting role of national significance and FIDC is seeking applications from individuals interested in contracting for this challenging position.

Candidates must have a good standard of literacy and numeracy equivalent to 'A' level and experience in working with the public and private sectors. Candidates must be competent, reliable, able to work under pressure and have a professional attitude with good communication and computer skills.

Preference will be given to candidates with knowledge and experience of economic and/or rural development and issues facing Camp and the development thereof.

The office location of the RDS Co-ordinator can be either in Stanley or in Camp.

For a full job description contact Michelle Trowell, on pa.admin@ fidc.co.fk or telephone 27211. Applications, including a full CV and covering letter, should be submitted to the General Manager, FIDC, no later than 1600 on Monday 15th August 2011. Interviews will take place within 72 hours of the closing date so applicants must be able to attend at short notice. to attend at short notice.

A blast from the past

Sixteen years ago...

Governor Ronnie Sampson confirms there will be an enquiry into the deaths on Lively Island of large numbers of ram hoggetts from the National Stud Flock.

Representatives of the Agricultural Department had reported that 45 dead sheep had been found and another 30 were still missing. Of the survivors 78 were described as being in poor condition and a further 40 in very poor condition.

Mr Sampson describes the situation as a "disaster" saying the form of the enquiry would be a matter for Executive Council to decide Colin Smith of DS &Co says a shipment of 88 bales shipped in six containers on board the Anne Boye is ruined, "All the bales are damaged and wet, some mildewed, mud stained. smelling of rotting wool and ammonia with a chemical reaction destroying the wool fibre." Roger Spink of the FIC however says there was only 2-3 kilos difference between farm and shipping weights which suggests they could not have absorbed much moisture. All parties await an insurance assessors report with interest.

Roderick Newell is sentenced to two life sentences in jail after bludgeoning his parents to death in Jersey in 1988. The 29 year old yachtsman who spent a considerable time around the Islands admitted the murders before Jersey's Royal Court.

The newest members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force throw their caps into the air and proudly replace them with bereis bearing their new badges. Patsy McNally, Colin Browning, Simon Betts, David Roberts, Quentin Fairfield and Douglas Clark are praised by Major Brian Summers for their hard work during six months training.

Argentina agrees the sinking of the General Belgrano during the Falklands War was legal. The attack by the submarine Conqueror outside the British-imposed exclusion zone has been at the centre of demands for a war crimes trial for some time, but an Argentine defence ministry report has said the action - which resulted in 323 deaths - was a legitimate

During the cold snap ice piles up above the Malo River and the EOD are called in to help. Two weeks ago after a day long struggle to clear the road through to Estancia, during which all the PWD Land Rovers become stuck in the snow, Bob Hancox discovered the ice and it was feared when a thaw began, the culverts would be carried away. The first attempt to blow the ice into smaller bits failed, however the following day EOD returned with larger charges and following an impressive explosion the ice was loosened sufficiently to be shifted.

Eight years ago....

AS the school year draws to a close, headteachers have stated that pupils have not been disadvantaged by the shortened year. This year the school year was truncated by one term to move the Falkland Islands school year in Councillors are examining the possibility of government purchasing a house on Jersey Road to used as a "safe, afford childcare facility. Cllr John Birmingham said however he felt "officialdom" needed to be balanced with the thoughts of the parents and current nursery proprietors before any further development could take place A meeting is held and a group is formed made up of parents and nursery business owners.

Director of Health Norman McGregor Edwards, Director of Eduction Sylvia Cole and FIBS station manager Steve Johnston all shut up for three and a half hours in aid of the Speech and Language Therapy Unit at the KEMH. The trio's efforts raise £200 for the cause.

At four meetings around the Islands 47 farms are represented and the overall conclusion is that the Meat Company should remain in the export market, develop the local market, improve and develop existing operation and consider all viable export opportunities including a joint venture operation. Responding to concerns about costs Cllr Mike Summers said he would be happy to see it subsidised for ten years, after which he would expect it to be making a contribution to the economy.

Ross House wins the Falkland Islands Community School Swimming Gala with Jonathon Hardcastle earning the best boy position with 32 points and Samantha Dodd best girl with 28 line with that of the UK, running from September until August.

THE Livestock and Meat Products Ordinance became law in late 2010 and was the first step in an action plan to bring Falkland Islands law into line with European requirements.

This also ensures meat from the FIMCo abattoir at Sand Bay can keep being exported to Europe and elsewherea and Executive Council approved further animal welfare reccomendations

According to a paper compiled by Director of Natural Resources, Senior Veterinary Officer (SVO) and the Legislative Drafter the process is intended to update the legislation, not just to satisfy European requirements but because a review on welfare codes had already been started.

A set of welfare codes was already in place for sheep, cattle, pigs, horses, dogs and animal transportation with updated versions of the codes prepared and consulted on in 2009.

Cases of cruelty and neglect to any animal (not just livestock) can already be dealt with under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 and will still apply

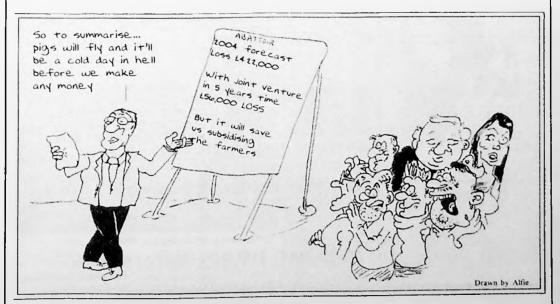

The original paper (121/11) was considered by Executive Council on April 28, 2011 and it was decided there should be consultation with the farming community before the new regulations and updated welfare codes were introduced.

Farmers were given another opportunity to comment on the new proposals during a Farmers' Week "open forum" session held in the Town Hall on July 7 The SVO and Legislative Drafter gave a short presentation about the proposed new regulations and the updated animal welfare codes and their implications and no adverse comments were forthcoming from the assembled audience, Executive Council were told.

The general requirements deal with the following areas of livestock management: staffing; inspection; sick and injured livestock; record keeping; freedom of movement; buildings and accommodation; livestock not kept in buildings; automated or mechanical equipment; feed and water; other substances; breeding procedures; and the effect of keeping livestock.

The main point to bear in mind, said the paper, is that you would only be expected to take all reasonable steps to comply with the requirements

There are lots of different ways of keeping livestock and not all of the general requirements will apply to your livestock and the way you keep it," the paper advised.

Hawks and Penguins top the board with injuries and dramatic scores

SHARKS were exposed as an easy target in Sunday's first game against Penguins. Goalie Rodrigo Vasquez was unavailable and regrettably they played without him. Regardless of the advantage Penguins decided to guest a pool player to strengthen their already full outfield. Sharks played ferociously but conceded six goals in the first half to Kyran Evans, Duane Evans and Kevin Ross.

The second half started and ten minutes in Bono McKay bravely stepped up to the Sharks' aid and for his goalie debut. Just as their luck was changing Teslyn's knee cap refused to cooperate; one leg twist and scream later she was assisted off court having dislocated her knee. The Sharks fought on: if anything they are tenacious and finally secured a goal through Dan Fowler to deny Penguin's goalie Marcus Morrison a 'shut-out'. Marcus' skills have to be commended, the attacking Penguin players may have had a field day, but he struck some amazing saves on their behalf. The final score was an unglorious nine to Penguins, one to Sharks.

Oilers and Buffalos played the next fixture (apologies 1 missed it for favour of seeking ice packs and Ibuprofen). Ian France and Gordon Lennie each scored two with Grant Budd and Gareth Goodwin adding one a-piece to the tally. Jose Pavez-Villaroel scored one back for the Buffalos but the game was won by Oilers, showing their form with a six — one victory.

The first match of Tuesday evening saw Blackhawks, with new goalie Bono, take on Oilers. First on the scoreboard was Craig Dockrill for the Blackhawks followed minutes later by Antoine Daille with a spectacular long-shot. Grant Budd was having none of it and quickly shot one into the Hawks' net. After many tickles of the Oilers' post from the Blackhawks it was Craig who finally secured a goal to leave it three - one at the break.

In the first minute of the second half Craig had secured his second and final hat-trick of the cup. Ian France got one past for Oilers but moments later a tackle caused a scream of de-ja-vu as Frank O'Sullivan was assisted off after dislocating his knee cap. Lucy O'Sullivan capitalised on the shaken Hawks to close the gap even further. Oilers were breathing down Blackhawks neck and another shot from Grant drew them level. In the last minutes Blackhawks showed their vigour with a shot from Robin Cooper and another from Antoine to leave the score Blackhawks six Oilers

In a tense second game; Duane Evans opened the scoring for Penguins in the first minute but Nick Francis was quick to claw one back for Panthers. After an 11 minute stalemate it was Bethan Halliday who broke the tension with an opportunistic shot (applause) but Karl Nightingale equalised soon after. Nick was then sent off for two minutes for throwing his stick and Duane struck back with a goal to leave it Penguins three, Panthers two at the half.

In a mirror of the first half it was Stacey Budd who scored in the first minute for Panthers to be followed by Kevin Ross for Penguins. The stalemate started again, but this time broken by a Panthers own goal awarded to Duane for being the closest Penguin to it. The drama of the last three minutes then unfolded – Stacey Budd took a stick to the head and a frustrated Stuey Duncan ran out from his goalie box to throw himself into guest Kyran Evans, resulting in a penalty taken by Luis Quinto to keep the goalie in the game. The whistle blew with the score Penguins five, Panthers three.

Farewell and good luck to Craig Dockrill; he contributed a lot of Falklands Dek Hockey in training new players and raising the bar in skill for the rest to chase. He leaves the Falklands on Saturday and his effortless skill, and those shots you just can't see, will be missed by the spectators if not by the teams that caught bruises from them.

Salary will depend upon ability and experience. An appropriate Ascension allowance will be paid and accommodation provided.

4 X Construction, Civil & Grounds Maintenance Operatives

The project will also require flexible and enthusiastic individuals who are seeking a new challenge and who can work well as part of a team. Due to the phased nature of the works and the project peaks and troughs, successful candidates will be required to carry out other duties in the building, civils and operatives teams to suit the project plan. As such, additional skills other than roads construction will be an advantage.

The successful candidates must have prior experience in some of the duties set out above. They must also have a working knowledge of Health & Safety at

Work and good communication skills

Salary will depend upon ability and experience. An appropriate Ascension allowance will be paid and accommodation provided.

Please note that stevedore duties will be a core function for all of the above

The project is being funded by the EU for a two year period but for local purposes the two year contracts will be standard AlG ones, and are offered on household or single status terms. The successful candidates might also be expected to share a house (two persons) as a part of the accommodation arrangements. For further details concerning the above posts, please contact Rob Forbes Consultant Engineer, on Tel: (247) 6138 or Email: rob.forbes@ascension

getown, Ascension Island

The veterinary service recently conducted a trial which involved the collection of facces samples from all dogs in the Islands. The results revealed that 8 dogs were infected with the hydatid tapeworm (E. granulosus). Based on these results, the veterinary service has decided to increase the frequency of dog dosing from the current 6 weekly interval to a 4 weekly interval (28 days). The rationale behind this change is to make absolutely certain that the frequency of dog dosing is killing the adult tapeworm in the dog's intestine before it reaches sexual maturity and is able to deposit infective eggs into the environment via the dog's facces. The scientific information available indicates that dosing at 6 weekly intervals should achieve this objective but, in case the tapeworm is behaving differently in the Falkland Islands, a decision has been taken to shorten the periods between dog dosings for at least the remainder of 2011. the periods between dog dosings for at least the remainder of 2011. The new dates for dog dosing are as follows:

Drug Wednesday 17th August 2011 Droncit Wednesday 14th September 2011 Wednesday 12th October 2011 Wednesday 9th November 2011 Wednesday 7th December 2011 Wednesday 4th January 2012 The only other change to the do Droncit Droncit Droneit Droncit Drontal

The only other change to the dosing regime is that on the Wednesday 17th August dosing day, all Stanley dog owners will be given a supply of worming tablets for the remainder of the year. Owners will then be responsible for dosing their dogs at home, and must telephone/fax/email in to the Veterinary service to confirm that this has been done. This is already the case for MPA/ amp dog owners

If anyone would like further information on this subject then please do not hesitate to contact the veterinary section of the DoA on 27366 or email show-

Rocky shares rise rapidly

ROCKHOPPER Exploration shares leaped back through the £2 barrier after rising more than 6 per cent on Thursday.

At its peak the shares in Rockhopper reached 510p but then dropped back sharply and earlier in the month were trading at 141p.

The rise was due to a positive press release from Rockhopper noting that results of the most recent well, "are at the upper end of expectations for the Sea Lion main fan complex," according to Chief Executive Sam Moody.

Seismic interpretation and the implications of the well will follow later and upon completion of operations the company intends to drill an exploration well 3.3km to the North West of the discovery well 14/10-2, outside of the Sea Lion Discovery Area.

Call for fishing cooperation as Argentina destroys species

ARGENTINA is directly responsible for the destruction of the species Southern Blue Whiting (image right) in the South West Atlantic according to Fisheries Department scientists and fishing company executives.

Fisheries Biologist/ Marine Ecologist Dr Paul Brickle of the Fisheries Department said yesterday: "It's a sad demise to a rather lucrative fishery due to poor management and lack of a regional fisheries management authority."

The species that spawns around the Falklands Islands in the Cape Meredith area was once an item high on the agenda of the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission (SAFC) an authority where the Falkland Islands and Argentina were able to share stock assessment information and agree Total Allowable Catch (TAC) of South West Atlantic Stocks.

In 2005 Argentin walked out of the Commission and since then have refused to cooperate or share any data with the Falklands.

Director of Fortuna Ltd Stuart Wallace explained that when the SAFC was in existence a TAC for Southern Blue Whiting was set at 50,000 tonnes, divided between the Falklands and Argentina, "although even then Argentina would go on to fish around 60,000 tonnes."

Since 2005 Argentina under the two Kirchner presidents has gone on to fish for a great deal more than that amount on a yearly basis.

The country pronounced a 60,000 tonne TAC in 2010 but only 11,000 tonnes of that was actually achieved; and scientific research points to a maximum of around 21 per cent (potentially as low as 13 per cent) of the virgin spawning stock biomass remaining.

"Argentina has fished it out to the point where levels are no longer commercial," said Mr Wallace.

In the Vessel Units Allowable Effort and Allowable Catch 2012 created by Falkland Islands Fisheries Department scientists it notes: "This declining trend and lack of regional data highlights the need for a resurrection of the SAFC, or at least have some agreement on data sharing and management.

"This decline has almost definitely impacted the ecosystem. The large numbers of Southern Blue Whiting removed from the system have likely played a part in the increasing abundance of Rock Cod...

"Due to this pessimistic outlook there is no reason to change the S licence TAC from 6,000 tonnes. We also recommend that the temporal closure of the Southern Blue Whiting spawning grounds in September remained closed for 2012 and for the foreseeable future."

On a more optimistic note, it states: "Although this paints a pretty grim picture it looks like the spawning area closure last year has resulted in a better recruitment the first half of 2011."

At the meeting of the Fisheries Committee on Wednesday Mr Wallace summed it up saying "It's a pretty desperate situation"

Penguin News

IT was with a pure heart and a bounce in my step that I bounded (or perhaps rebounded) through the doors of Penguin News two months ago; older, enlightened, re-enthused, choc full of ideals, a pocket full of whims and all topped off with a shot of nostalgia.

Unwise? Well invariably. But despite the reality that comprises trawling through unintelligble government documents, grovelling for advertising, sweating over looming deadlines and suffering the merciless teasing of agricultural types, my optimism has barely diminished. bouyed as it is by the seeming greatly increased willingness by readers to alert the paper to actual news stories.

Because I swear on my new Helly Hansen boilersuit, eight years ago it wasn't unusual to encounter the gleeful comment "well you missed that didn't you," in reference to a particular story. On suggesting that if someone had mentioned it to Penguin News, we could have written about it, we were then admonished "oh no its your job to find out" To this day I've never really mastered the art of explaining precisely just how lacking in psychic endowments I really am. So from the bottom of my heart. I thank you for now recognising this damnable flaw

Not that I'm suggesting the enquiring minds of PN staff shouldn't also be hounding organisations, companies, departments and pet gossips on a daily basis, and one yow I did make on my return was to never send an edition to print that did not include the main economic sectors, fishing, tourism, oil and agriculture.

A worthy promise but one that did not take into account the need to relearn the wealth of acronyms that accompany those industries. This week it was the turn of the fishery with its ITQ, TAC and GRT, not to mention the CPUE, the ASPM the CU and the EEZ. On the other hand it was reassuring to see two of our MLAs viewing some of them with equal puzzlement at the Fisheries Meeting on Wednesday.

Equally reassuring was the air of cooperation between a group of people who, to some degree, have quite different agendas; not least the Director of Fisheries himself, who while working for a government that enjoys income from both fishing licences and fishing company tax, must weigh this against responsible conservation management which in the short term can impact on the profitiability of companies, and on the sale of those licences. It's a delicate balance and happily, the (not particularly unreasonable) protestations against certain conservation measure decisions that were placed in front of the committee, appeared to be met with an erring on the side of the environment

It is nothing new to say the Falklands has a responsible attitude to towards fisheries management, after all our MLAs peddle the message around interational fora with nary a thought (no offence meant) but what was pleasant was to be left with the impression that the hype might actually be true Lisa Watson

Max Levene the inspirational fighter

FRIENDS of the Levene family will be pleased to hear that almost two years since 17 year-old Max broke his neek during a rugby match, and although confined to a wheel chair, he has plans to travel and is facing exciting new challenges on a daily basis

Nicknamed 'the fighter' Max turned 19 last month and bid an emotional goodbye to Truro School where he returned 11 months after his accident to complete his A-levels

He has battled infections and adjusted to life in a wheelchair as well as pursuing his ambition to work in business.

Max's strong will and desire to a school trust, which so far has raised £110,000 towards his longterm care

With support from the Rugby Union Injured Players' Foundation and the trust fund, he now has a new computerised wheelchair and a specialist electronic bike, worth £13,000, that uses electrical pulses to work his muscles and keep his heart and lungs in good

Max's next challenge is a year out in Ethiopia, where Guy is based, before returning to resume his studies at Warwick or Cardiff depending on his A-level results, due next week.

Both sides of the fence

IT was with a degree of disbelief that Penguin News recently received a phone call from land owner Adrian Lowe describing Public Works Department's latest contribution to rural signage

Approaching the Murrell Farm causeway gate on a trip to Stanley Mr Lowe said he was puzzled to observe it had been clearly labelled 'GATE', and even more so to see the otherside of the gate labelled similarly.

Being relatively well informed with regard to what signifies a gate, Mr Lowe decided to submit a question via PN asking the PWD: "Would it not have made more sense to put signs in the area that point out settlements or land features like Murrell Farm or Moody Valley, rather than clarifying what a gate is?

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenlyside was on leave when the question was submitted but Roads Engineer Simon Catton provided an answer that said: "Gate signs are there to warn people of an approaching hazard across a road that inexperienced drivers or those unfamiliar with the road may not know are there.

He added that the Public Works Department aim to have warning signs on all gates across roads to prevent accidents: "Whether they are blank triangles or have the word 'gate' in them is a matter of what's in stock at the time."

Trevor Browning's damaged Land Rover

Prink driving damage

AMOUNT Pleasant man narrowly escaped a prison sentence on Wednesday, after he damaged a Land Rover 110 and a yard fence while driving under the influence of alcohol.

Daren Anthony Yon (28) admitted the offences which took place on the night of July 26 after he left Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said police had received a call from Andrew Miller at 11.15 pm to say a vehicle had crashed into the fence at the rear of his home on Davis Street.

Police attended the scene where Mr Yon's Toyota Surf was discovered with extensive damage to it as well as severe damage to Trevor Browning's Land Rover which was parked on Villiers Street.

Mr Yon was unsteady on his feet and a breathalyser test at the Police Station gave a lower read-

£846 in fines for damage to property

JASON Edward Dickson (19) was ordered to pay a total of £846 after he admitted three charges of criminal damage.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court that Mr Dickson who rents a room from his sister had been drunk, loud and abusive at the family home on the night of July 10. Mr Dickson and his friend were asked to leave the house after they were discovered in his 16 year-old nephew's room.

The next morning Ms McRae and her partner discovered a broken fence batten, the back window of a vehicle smashed and damage to an XBox in her son's room.

John Magistrate Trevaskis described the offences as "mean spirited" particularly as the victims were family mem-

For the fence damage Mr Dickson was fined £50 plus £15 compensation, for the car window £100 plus £246 compensation and for the Xbox £100 plus £250 compensation plus court fees of £85.

ing of 105 mg of alcohol per 100 mì of breath.

He told police he had seen the Land Rover, but misjudged the distance. Both airbags had activated in the Surf when he hit the Land Rover, but he had still been able to see out, he said.

When asked why he didn't stop he said he didn't know, that he must have been in shock

The Crown said £236.96 had been quoted for repairs to the fence. In response to a request for quotes for repairs to the Land Rover, Turbo Tim's Motor Service had said it was "beyond reasonable cost to repair" while FIC Spares Section had quoted £10,741

Mrs Inglis said however, that compensation orders are only made if the driver is not insured and confirmed that insurance does cover when a driver is under the influence of alcohol.

Mr Yon apologised to the court saying he could not believe what he had done. "That's not the Daren I know I am," he said.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis told Mr Yon that when he had seen the charge sheet and the level of alcohol he had seriously considered sending him straight into custody and that was why a police officer was in court.

He said he hoped Mr Yon understood how close he had come to being imprisoned and also how close he had come to killing himself. If Mr Yon had made it on to the MPA road, "I believe it would have ended badly for you," said Mr Trevaskis.

He banned Mr Yon from driving for two years and fined him £700 plus £85 court costs which he said was a priority liability and must be paid before anything else.

bleats to UN

Timerman

THE Falkland Islands was discussed by Argentine Foreign Affairs Minister Hector Timerman and President of the United Nations General Assembly, Joseph Deiss on Wednesday.

Timerman told Deiss that Argentina and the UK must sit and negotiate the dispute for which, "the UN for many years has been calling on both sides to begin that dialogue."

"Unfortunately the UK refuses," said Timerman, who claimed Argentina has always called for a peaceful solution to the conflict through the United Nations.

Lonely Planet

THE Falklands is to feature in the October issue of the Lonely Planet as a result of a visit to the Islands last season. The guide has a circulation of some 45,000 and the feature will be up to 14 pages long. Tourism manager Paul Trowell said this is a fantastic opportunity for Tourist Board members to advertise in conjunction with the feature.

Fired and fined for theft

WOMAN was fined for stealing from her employers in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Jessy Ann Hutt Calisto (47) admitted two charges of theft from the Falkland Islands Company Ltd West Store where she worked on the till on July 8.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court how Mrs Hutt Calisto did not take money from her sister for a box of Tampax, but produced a receipt. This was observed by another member of staff and reported to a supervisor. When questioned she said she had every intention of paying for the Tampax herself but had not had the opportunity to go and get the money.

Later that day while still operating the till and before being questioned by management Mrs Hutt Calisto was observed by another member of staff serving another West Store employee, Fernando Cordero Hernandez who approached the till with a pizza and a case of Budweiser. A check of the till receipts showed purchase of the pizza but no evidence of the Budweiser. Mr Cordero insisted he had paid for both items, however, Mrs Hutt Calisto said she remembered the pizza but that was all he had bought.

Mrs Inglis said that in a later interview with the police Mrs Hutt Calisto said Mr Cordero Hernandez had asked if he could only pay for the pizza and that no arrangement had been made to pay for the Budweiser.

Mrs Hutt Calisto was immediately dismissed in accordance with company policy.

Senior Magistrate Trevaskis said the offence while unsophisticated and of no direct financial benefit to herself, was a breach of employers trust.

For the theft of the Tampax Mrs Hutt Calisto was fined £150, for the theft of the Budweiser £200 plus court costs of £85.

Not guilty plea MR Fernando Cordero Hernandez (28) has entered a not guilty plea to one charge of theft and will appear in court on August 23 for a pre-trial review with trial provisionally scheduled for August 25.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

WELL, what a week. It has certainly had a bit of everything thrown in.

Globalisation, problems in the rest of the world can and do impact on us here in the Falklands in one way or another. The stock market crash of a few days ago will undoubtedly have sent shivers through the crew in the treasury as a prolonged collapse would have an effect on our investment earnings. Mercifully markets do seem to be bouncing back but it underlines just how vulnerable we are to world jitters.

The riots in London also affected the Islands, with our London office having to close early on one occasion and staff sent home, after being informed by the police that they were expecting trouble in the are where the office was situated. Mercifully both the staff and office are, as far as I know, still in one piece.

Happier news is that the power station now has all generators back up and running, including the big one which tried to self destruct a while back. I would like to extend my thanks to all up at the power station who moved heaven and earth to make sure the lights stayed on and all generators were back up as quickly as possible. Now starts the process of thinking about a new unit and just where it should be sited. Expensive? Undoubtedly, quick? No. 1 believe there is about a two year lead in time for generator sets of the size we would need.

Even happier news emanated from Rockhopper with the results of their appraisal well. Still a long way to go but it's looking good.

My blood boiled then ran cold after reading the remarks made by the Argentine Defence Minister. He said that the Argentine Government are "inclined to respect the culture. lifestyle and language of the Islands population" now. just where have I heard that before? Ah yes, it was just about 30 years ago. "We won't change your lifestyle" was the assurances given in 1982. Not much they didn't. From the moment they imposed themselves upon us they ruined our lives. Is that really the best they can do. regurgitating 30 year old lies? This Falkland Islander doesn't believe a word of what is being spouted and will never give an inch. Here I am, here I stay. It's my home, my country and my right to live as I please under the government of my choosing. Get used to it.

London calli cal youths roaming her

I FEEL like a little bit of a fraud talking about the London riots to be honest. I saw the violence in the same way as many at home in the Islands, sitting in front of my TV and feeling outraged and disgusted at what was happening. Unlike other members of the FIGO staff I don't live in an area which was amount of time I've worked there I obviously have a real fondness for London.

I don't really want to talk too much about the politics or some of the suggested reasons behind the riots. I would just say that in my opinion this certainly wasn't a blow struck against the government, the police or capitalism, all of which I've heard suggested as targets. I saw a heart breaking photo of a 79 year old man surveying the damage in his hair salon in Manchester and it really struck me that no 'fat cat banker' or business giant was hurt by this wanton vandalism. It just seemed, for want of a better word, spiteful. On the whole the people rioting are attacking establishments in their own communities. One thing which really sticks in my mind is a video clip of an elderly West Indian lady with a walking stick loudly berating gangs of lo-

The thing I'd really like to focus on is the spirit and character I've seen in the people of London, and the other communities afaffected by the violence or takes a look at fected. I heard an inter-tion. Her courage and profanity laden fury

in the face of what she was seeing seemed ut-destruction but given the recent events in view with a man whose carpet shop, which had been in his family for five generations, was razed to the ground. He was clearly devastated by what had happened but he spoke with a clarity and eloquence which amazed me. He wasn't terrified of the future or cursing his misfortune, he was already talking about what he needed to do to get his business started again. As the interview came to a close he said to the correspondent back in the studio "And guess what? Now it's started raining" and laughed. In that moment I realised that he, and London as a whole isn't 'broken' or 'shattered' or any of the other buzz words I've read re-

The clean up operations in London have now started in earnest. Just before I wrote this I watched footage of a crowd of Londoners standing together with brooms and brushes in their hands patiently waiting for firefighters to finish their work among the smouldering ruins of a small business, so they could get to work cleaning up their community in a very literal sense. I think it's important to point out that when I say a crowd of 'Londoners', I mean exactly that, I don't mean a crowd of solely English or British people, they were members of a community from all over the world coming together to deal with their problems as one

We don't know what the coming days will bring of course. We at FIGO were advised by the police this afternoon to close our office and leave the area as soon as we could in order to avoid being caught up in trouble they were predicting. Of course the nature of these disturbances is that it's difficult to predict what's going to happen in even the next few hours, let alone further into the future than that.

Given our location, FIGO has been caught up in more than a few demonstrations and interesting challenges over the years and as ever we shall continue to operate at the highest level we possibly can regardless of what happens. As the old slogan advises, we shall be 'Keeping Calm and Carrying On'. It strikes me that that's what an angry West Indian lady would want us to do, although she'd probably call me something rude for even insinuating there was an alternative.

Neil McKay Ltd Oil and Gas Industry Job Opportunities

Applications are invited from suitably qualified and competent Oil & Gas supply base personnel with a proven track record of relevant experience, who are fully trained and certificated in all aspects of their duties within the following specialist work fields:

> Logistics Supervisor Crane Operators Truck and Forklift Operators Slinging and Rigging Operators Dangerous Goods Handling Operators

Applicants shall be certificated in emergency first aid. Applicants must be familiar with the standards of EN12079 and DNV2.7-1 for lifting equipment. A steady stream of the smaller expedition ships is expected through to mid November when the Veendam with the capacity to carry 1,350 passengers makes her first visit.

At the moment the schedule is well spread out, although there is still the possibility more ships will be added to it. Currently there are only two days when Stanley's population is boosted dramati-

On January 28, Star Princess and Amsterdam with capacity for 2,500 and 1,350 respectively are in Stanley, while on February 25 Star Princess is back again accompanied this time by Adonia which carries up to 710 passengers.

Conservation 'severe' impact on profitability

FALKLAND Islands Government conservation measures affecting the finfish fishery, generated an objection that this "impacted severely" on the profitability of that fishery

At a meeting of the Fisheries Committee on August 10. Fortuna Director Stuart Wallace claimed the 20 per cent reduction in effort was a problem, bearing in mind that the finfish fishery was only "marginal" in terms of profitability anyway.

Mr Wallace said he hoped for "more consistency going forward"

The target effort for 2012 is 65,000 tonnes, and the reason for the reduction (in this case with regard to allowable fishing days) said Director of Fisheries John Barton, was due to very high catches of Rock Cod in 2011 that resulted in a total finfish catch of 76,434 tonnes compared to the recommended 60,000 tonnes target.

Mr Barton said Rock Cod catch was becoming the delimiting species in the finfish fishery. He added the Rock Cod fishery for 2008 to 2010 had in fact been stable but the sudden jump the following year, despite the same sized fleet, brought about the decision to reduce effort.

The total allowable catch and total allowable effort (TAC/TAE) for Loligo, Skate, Toothfish and restricted finfish fisheries remain stable, confirmed Mr Barton.

Grenadier plan draws protest

A DECISION to recommend a change to the exploratory status of the grenadier fishery to a non Individual Transferable Quota (ITQ) licensed fishery, rather than move it forward to full ITQ status has drawn formal protest from the local industry.

Mr Barton explained that to run the fishery as a licensed exploratory fishery for up to three years as an alternative to immediate entry into the ITQ system might enable "the fishery to be better defined prior to taking the major step of granting fishing rights in the fishery.

It would also give time to resolve some of the issues on the stock assessment. Any trends in catches or catch rates might become apparent over that period."

In the meantime the fishery would operate similarly to the non-ITQ Illex fishery and a TAC and licence fee would be set.

A member of the fishing industry, who had hoped to be involved in the grenadier fishery, sent representations to the Fisheries Committee held on August 10 objecting to the recommendation.

Illex: one good season does not a future make

DESPITE a relatively buoyant 2011 Illex fishing season and "some optimism for the future," one jigging company went out of business and others had problems finding the funds to pay licence fees said Director of Fisheries John Barton.

He indicated the lesson was that one good season did not transform an industry and this was one reason why it was decided to keep licence fees the same as last year.

The 2011 fishery was reasonable, added Mr Barton, with almost 80,000 tonnes of Illex being taken.

He said, "License uptake was good with some 92 jiggers involved from Korea and Taiwan. It is believed that the access conditions and the clear refund policy played a part in the strong interest in licences."

As reported in Penguin News last week, while catches did not reach the threshold catch level which would dictate no refund, adjusting for the value of the catch ruled out any refund.

Illex is one of the few fisheries yet to enter the ITQ* system. At present the Islands Plan indicates that there should be consultation on options for introducing Illex to the ITQ system in 2012/13, with further work being done in 2013/14 and the fishery ideally converting to ITO in 2014/15.

There are no immediate plans to change that timetable at present, said Mr Barton, however, at the Fisheries Committee meeting on August 10 there was some discussion with regard to "beginning a dialogue" on the subject.

Stuart Wallace, Director of Fortuna Ltd said: "It is a complicated matter but we could be discussing it - we could talk it through - it may be too difficult, but we won't know that without trying."

Mr Barton noted that Illex seasons were very unpredictable and a bad season could often be predicted early, as a result sometimes there was no real competition for licences.

He said this might cause complications, adding that a system would also be required for refunds in poor seasons. Whatever was decided upon would have to be attractive to all Mr Barton emphasised.

He added, however, that he would be willing to accept proposals on the matter.

*The Individual Transferable Quota (ITQ) system allows local companies to buy long term rights to fishing quota. The system was introduced to encourage confidence to invest in the industry.

Who's who in government

ACCORDING to the most recent Falkland Islands Government Gazette, FIGAS Pilot Derek Clarke was promoted from Line Pilot to Training Captain in June, while in the Royal Falkland Islands Police, Paul McDade is to be congratulated on his move from Police Constable to Sergeant, in July.

The Department of Agriculture recently welcomed Warren Landles and Helen Thoday as Agricultural Advisors and Ruwan Aruna Shantha Peramunu Gamage took up the post of Maintenance Estates Officer at the Health and Social Services Department last month

At the Fisheries Department contracts were completed by Scientific Fisheries Observers Deborah Davidson and Aristoteles Stavrinaky Suarez, and at the hospital by senior nursing staff Jacqueline Susan Bailey and Paul Wilson, and Pharmacist Juan Suarez. Deborah Davidson and Jacqueline Bailey have since had their contracts renewed.

Robert Bryson resigned as a Police Constable from the Royal Falkland Islands Police and Electrician Wayne Clement resigned from the Public Works Department in July.

Also in July General Assistant Linda Phillips retired from the Health and Social Services Department.

Colleen Reid has transferred from General Assistant to Cook in the Health and Social Services Department and Mark Ashton, from Roads Engineer to Contracts Engineer at the Public Works Department.

Carol Margaret Thorsen has also transferred from Clerk, Human Resources Department to Finance Clerk, Health and Social Services Department.

Hurt to be called a 'freeloader'

AS a single parent I have been saddened to see the backlash and unpleasant comments that have been circulating since recent discussion of single parents and their financial situation.

In the Falklands we pride ourselves on being a close-knit community, but I have been hurt by the presumption that we single parents are 'freeloaders' who brought our situation on ourselves and spend all our money on alcohol and cigarettes.

Every community has its share of parents who put their own priorities before their children but it is unfair to tar all single parents with the same brush.

Like many other single parents I make every effort to support myself and my son, but it isn't easy. I work six days a week, every week but my income barely covers the household bills at the end of the month.

I don't think cash handouts would be the right solution for one would never again feel able to go to the cinema or out to meet with friends - but childcare vouchers for single parents and low income families would make a big difference.

It would also help if people didn't dismiss us so easily in print. My son is too young to read but there are plenty of children who Imogen Didlick

A shameful label to give those in need

REGARDING a letter in last week's paper I am also left angered as a single mother to two children. I am shamed to hear other people think that I am on a handout, quite frankly that is in-

I need this help and believe me it took a lot of courage to ask for it. I tried everything possible before having to go down the welfare road. I don't blow my benefits either.

As for you telling us to get off our backsides, I am willing to work, and believe me looking after two young boys you can rest assured I am not sat on my backside. This is my full time job for the time being until my children are old enough to go to school.

I hope I am not labelled with the same brush as you put it. I am grateful for all the help I receive so don't judge me as someone accepting, as you put it, handouts.

Joint funding for NI airstrip

YOUR readers will have seen the recent interesting article in your paper about the very welcome extension of the airstrip on New Island.

What they may not know is that this challenging project is being jointly-funded by the New Island Conservation Trust (which took over full ownership of the island in 2006) and the Falkland Island Government.

Agreement to do this extension was reached in March following somewhat long and complex negotiations and so our trustees are delighted that it has already got off to such a good start.

We are particularly grateful to Manfred Keenleyside, Simon Catton and all the PWD people who have been so helpful and professional in the planning and execution of this task, and thanks also go to the mas-ter and crew of MV Concordia Bay for their part in the project.

Hopefully stage two - the laying of suitable netting on the extensions - will follow later this year and the New Island airstrip will again come into full service once cleared by FIGAS. This would then make it so much easier for the Trust to continue to undertake its world-class research and conservation work, as well as develop plans to open up the island to many more local visitors than hitherto.

David Crwys-Williams Chairman, New Island Conservation

Patients feet before doors

IN case you are not aware, the hospital is without the services of a chiropodist.

Richard Morrison was very good at his job and was well liked by his patients, but was replaced by Mrs Jean Diggle. Yes she was quite good at her job, but then after a time had to follow her husband, back to UK.

The buck was tossed in the direction of Social Services, but they declined as they do not have the training for such a sensitive

I have been in contact with Dr Paver, who was partially interested in helping until she saw the thickness of my two big toe, ingrowing nails.

Now we hear that they are renewing the main entrance at the hospital to make it more modern.

What rubbish: there is nothing wrong with the entrance.

It is as good, if not better, than some hospitals in UK

It is just another waste of the money that FIG are apparently so short of. Stop this unnecessary rubbish and expenditure, and get the hospital the staff they most

Planning and Building Committee 4th August 2011

CHAIR of this month's meeting. Councillor Sharon Halford, was supported on this occasion by Councillor Roger Edwards with two lay members attending.

Following the usual preliminaries, which included reference to two appeals to be heard by Executive Council, fourteen applications for planning permission were considered and all approved conditionally.

One of the fourteen was concerned with a building listed as of historical and architectural importance and in consequence two members of the Historic Buildings Committee attended: Gerald Cheek and Joost Pom-

This was for a proposal to change the use of 40 Ross Road to residential and offices use, internal alterations and the demolition and removal of sheds and erection of a single-storey building at 41 Ross Road for Falklands Conservation.

Members resolved to grant conditional planning permission for these works and new use.

The other applications receiving conditional consent are as fol-

- Replace porch with garage extension at 33A Davis Street for Tony Smith.
- Renewal of planning permission for change of use of Wyseplan from storage to accommodation at 1 Hebe Street for Alex and Carol Reid.
- Change of use of Portakabin from storage to residential for family member at 8 Fieldhouse Close for Julie Fisher-Smith.
- Creation of storage yard west of the service station on Airport Road for Stanley Services Ltd.
- New offices to house Fisheries Department east of the Department of Agriculture on Bypass Road for FIG.
 - Extension to the Tax Office at Malvina House Gardens for FIG.

- Erection of shed and the replacement of an existing shed for offices and storage at Megabid on Airport Road for FIG.
- Change of use from dwelling to Bed and Breakfast establishment at 112A Davis Street for Roger Howells.
- An extension to the NGN building at their premises on Ross Road for Cable and Wireless.
- Erection of a 9m x 3m solar tunnel at 16 Ross Road West for Norman and June Besley-Clark.
- Erection of a one-and-a-half storey dwelling at 16 Mink Park for Russell and Angela Morrison.
- Extension to dwelling at 6 Felton Court for Christopher and Debbi Ford.
 - The erection of a flagpole at 7

Pitaluga Place for Michael Floyd and Celia Short.

Members then reviewed the list of thirteen applications for a building permit and Building Adviser Nick Stephens updated this with one, the proposed change of use from bunkhouse to tourist accommodation at Fitzroy, having to be rejected as the further information requested had not been received.

He then went on to mention there would be publicity shortly on consultations on the proposed revisions to the Falkland Islands Building Regulations, with the closing date for comments being 2nd September 2011.

The Committee then took note of one application that had been received to fill the currently vacant post of Lay Member which is to be referred to ExCo.

The next meeting is scheduled to be held on Thursday 1st September at 8.30am in the Liberation Room at the Secretariat.

Callum top apprentice

CALLUM Middleton (20) was presented with the Apprentice of the Year Award at a ceremony held at Government House for more than 30 candidates receiving certificates.

Callum recently very successfully completed courses in Electrotechnical Technology at Chichester College.

Following an introduction by Trainer Eileen Davis, His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood presented certificates.

Kirsty Barkman and Kerri-Anne Ross received NVQ - Supporting Teaching and Learning in Schools Level 3 certificates, while Corey Bagley, who also won the Apprentice Achievement Award, received his certificate for NVQ in Timber Vocations Level I and Core Skills in Construction. Rhys Clifford and Tom Elsby were presented with their NVQ certificates (Hospitality and Timber Vocations respectively) while Christian Minto achieved Level 2 Plant Maintenance and Working Safely IOSH.

The remainder were presented with European Computer Driving Licence certificates and Tom Whistler, Ian Sharp (MPA) and Peter Betts received IOSH Managing Safely certificates.

Honour for ladies

TWO dedicated Stanley ladies Vivienne Perkins and Jan Miller will recieve the the Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour from His Excellency the Governor.

Miss Perkins wil be honoured for her work with the very successful charity shop, 'Bargains Galore', support for Christ Church Cathedral and Lighthouse Seamen's Mission, involvement with the Stanley Darts Club and the assistance provided to pensioners in the local community.

Mrs Miller will receive the award for her work with the Scout Group, help in organising events, wreath-making and support given to visiting veterans and their families.

The Queen's Certificate and accompanying Badge of Honour is a local honour, approved by Her Majesty the Queen in 2010, to allow the Falkland Island Government to recognise those having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands.

Container park costs

A PENGUIN News article and increasing comment from members of the public led MLA Roger Edwards to obtain 'complete and detailed breakdown of costs of the Container Park recently built close to FIPASS.'

Falkland Islands Government Chief Executive said the spend to date on the container park totals £1,283,000 which is within the approved funding and in addition to this FIDC spent £49,000 on the temporary container yard known as Area A.

He provided the following breakdown:

FIG costs totalling £468,000 as follows:

Labour costs	£ 71,000
Plant Hire costs	£106,000
Fuel costs	£ 22,000
Plant Maintenance costs	£ 17,000
Aggregates	£226,000
Asphalt	£ 26,000

Costs incurred directly from Morrison of £441,000 as follows:

Labour & management costs	£214,000
Private sector plant hire	£ 30,000
Materials costs	£100,000
Shipping costs	£ 61,000
MFL 10% fee	£ 36,000

Other costs, including sub-contractors fees, were incurred as follows:

£ 122,000
£ 110,000
£ 38,000
£ 24,000
£ 21,000
£ 59,000

Top of the rocks

WILDLIFE remains the biggest draw for visitors considering a trip to the Falklands. That's according to new results revealed by a poll conducted by the Falkland Islands Tourist Board.

The survey results crowned the Rockhopper as the most loved penguin out of the five penguin species on the Islands with almost half of voters choosing these feisty birds to be their favourite followed by the majestic King penguin (30%), with just 16 per cent voting for the Gentoo penguin.

It's no surprise then that the travellers most likely to be drawn to the Falkland Islands are birdwatchers and nature enthusiasts (63%), followed by photographers (24%).

Paul Trowell, General Manager of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board says: "Wildlife clearly is high on people's travel agenda and visitors to the Falklands are guaranteed a personal, one-on-one experience with wildlife, and at times be surrounded by more penguins than people! It's really encouraging that respondents used phrases like 'natural paradise' and 'wildlife haven' to describe this remarkable destination."

When quizzed on their favourite travel spots in the Falklands - respondents nominated Pebble. Saunders and Sea Lion Islands as their favourite Outer Islands.

The results followed a social media initiative by the Falkland Islands Tourist Board inviting its Facebook fans to share their views and perceptions on the destination. Questions were posted over a two week period received a total of 1,467 votes from around the globe and generated 22,377 page impressions.

Beaver next contender in inter island strip-off

LEIV Poncet from (fondly known as the Republic of) Beaver Island follows up the story of the New Island airstrip extension with a description of their 'amateur' but equally successful, and infinitely more sarcastic, extension to the Beaver Island strip.

JUST across the water from New Island, another airstrip extension has been underway for the past year. No heavy plant for us, just the farm's ex-quarry JCB 3CX, a 3-ton dump truck from the Public Works Department and the Government Air Service's water-filled tow-behind roller.

Various pieces of wood and chain completed this amateur array of machinery, along with two spades, one with a broken handle.

The operators were equally unsuited to the job comprising a yachty burn (Leiv's brother Dion-Ed) and electrician Steve Brown.

The JCB's injector pump shaft snapped one day into the works and by the time a replacement had been sourced, flown to Port Stephens and collected by boat. Steve had to return to Stanley. So a second yachty bum (me) was put in charge of the dump truck. Ten days behind schedule, we didn't even have the luxury of eating our sandwiches at the wheel as the New Island gang did. Besides, the dumper's all fresco steering position in late August did not encourage it.

After digging away rocks, sand grass, dunes and sticky black tussac peat with all the structural properties of ground coffee, we dug a big hole and everything that came out of it went onto the extension. Someone has since explained to me terms like 'borrow pit', 'fill material' and 'topsoil', but as we didn't have a single engineering brain cell between us we simply did what we thought looked good ("Ooh-arr, that there clay moight be good if we puts it over 'ere, loike this").

Snow makes a good fill material

Laying the mesh

Some parts of the extension only needed a thin layer of clay over the bedrock, but where the ground sloped off at the far end a couple of feet of fill went in to reduce the slope. The clay was spread with a large wooden beam towed behind the dumper, then rolled.

Not wanting the new section of strip to end up like the West roads, we laid a capping of mussel shells and beach sand over the top to consolidate everything. Then rolled it all some more, basically creating a clay patch. No great feat: farmers have been doing that for generations, but ours has mussel shells for decoration.

This is where our strip will differ from New Island's. Firm, green turf is harder to create and maintain than a clay patch, especially here where rainfall is much less than in town. Our clay patches, on the other hand, have hung around for years with absolutely no maintenance.

In February of this year, about 3000m2 of turf reinforcement mesh was delivered on the Concordia Bay, enough to cover the new section of strip.

So far we have laid about a third of this over the areas that are at risk of becoming soft. One year on, the bare surface is not yet a treacherous swamp, waiting to swallow FIGAS aircraft whole.

Other work on the strip includes a drain to dry out a soft, damp section. New markers now need to be placed and the invading diddledee put back in its place with a flail mower.

I have no idea how many tons of material we moved, or how many trips were made in the dumper. The time needed to lay the mesh (about 10 metres of strip covered per day) is also pretty significant. It had better be worth it. The final length of the strip depends on many factors but will be about 470 metres. long enough to prevent the Islander bursting into flames as it passes the threshold markers of the strip on takeoff.

Darts, dancing and lots of laughs at Goose Green

Despite foul weather and treacherous roads there were plenty of people crowded into the cosy warmth of the Goose Green Club on Friday night.

By late evening the crowd had spilled out into the hall and the dancing got underway, with good music provided by Mel Lloyd and some pretty impressive footlooseesque moves from some of the Saturday dawned on a stillfrozen settlement and while some nursed hangovers or indulged in some of hair-of-the-dog, the kids (some not so young) were out on the settlement green enjoying thrilling rides on an old chair strapped to a vehicle bonnet being towed around behind a 4-wheeler!

In the afternoon a doubles darts competition was organised and despite the draw being random, fellow competitors were horrified to see Lisa "grand slam" Jaffray and Andy Pollard come out of the hat as partners

Predictably they won with Lisa now laying claim to four majors with Colin Shepard and Steph Middleton chasing them into second place.

Now we have all had a go at horse and penguin racing over the years, but just for a change the Goose Green kids had camel racing. Based on the same format, the young two-nighter attendees raced their camels around the track, but rather than placing a bet the winner then raced to the bar to claim a free drink and sweets.

For the more inclined to gamble age group, John Birmingham, Louise Taylor and Trish Henry ran a tote on a horse racing DVD with 20 per cent of the takings donated to charity. £100 was raised for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund and was topped up to £140 with Lisa and Andy's darts winnings.

After such energetic frivolities the bar was closed for a couple of hours so people could go home, get fed, get the gladrags on and be ready to go again by eight o'clock

There were a few extra people in the bar that night due to mistaken ferry timings and the LAN flight not coming in but it was definitely a case of the more the merrier.

The many volunteer bar staff kept the drinks flowing and the bar full and good music again provided by Mel kept the dance floor buzzing all night and into the next morning.

Goose Green manager Keith Alazia thanked everyone who made the journey and contributed to the fun weekend. "There were not that many because of the weather, but it was a very sociable crowd," he said.

giving up smoking. Good time for a change of lifestyle. I thought I may share a little of it

Port Edgar Farm is on West Falkland (also known locally as the sunshine Island). It is a beautiful spot of that there is no doubt. My responsibilities start and stop at dogs cats and hens, oh and two pet sheep called Suzuki and Honda. They do not look like motorbikes or make mechanical noises, they do want sheep nuts regularly though and they are semi nocturnal (more on that later).

After an impromptu sleep-over at Goose Green courtesy of Keith and Glynis we arrived at the Farm via the ferry Port Howard and Fox Bay. On the top of the hill above the settlement whilst admiring the fantastic scenery the ginger cat casually strolled up to meet me.

His face appeared to be questioning my timing and enquiring as to when supper would be available with a good handful of expletives

Three hours later dogs were fed and watered, sheep plied with nuts, hens observed on the perches and all three cats treated to a little fresh meat and biscuits. Kids were fed and watered and watching telly as was the missus.

I snuck off to trap one with a copy of Tractor Monthly and settled down for a well carned con-stitutional, all was well. Then click, the lights go out. Its dark, very dark. Thave to postpone the business at hand and head outside (freezing cold) and walk to the generator shed and change from clean and green to fossil fuel power.

Electricity restored I glance up at the work bench in the darkness and my head torch illuminates the aforementioned ginger cat, eyes two inches from mine, in the nano second before my muscles contracted and propelled me backwards into the darkness of the shed, I am sure he smiled.

n idyllic wintery evening greeted the wedding of Roxanne Crowie And Rochell Anthony Regalado at the Tabernacle last Saturday. The bride's gown, made to measure in China, was embroidered with blue flowers. Bridesmaids Kirsty Barkman and Remelia Ped were accompanied by flower girl Bragnae Wallace-Nannig with three page boys Liam Williams, Pio Ped and Roxanne's son Daniel Wilson. The couple left their pasts behind during a blessing performed by Lisa Phillips before they entered the FIDF hall for the reception where they cemented their union with a celebration. Roxanne confirmed she was the lucky one, "I've married my best friend."

I slander Chris Eynon married his Scottish fiancee Gill Callman on a beautiful sunny day on the West Coast of Scotland on Saturday August 6. A host of Falkland Islanders attended the Glasgow wedding, having especially travelled over for the occasion, including the groom's parents Dave and Carol Eynon and his sister Leeann and his neices and nephews. Chris said, "We had a wonderful day down on the west coast where the sun was kind enough to shine all day, followed by a brilliant evening with plenty of dancing to both the band and a mix from Myriam to get the Scots joining in for a few foxtrots and Circassian Circles.

Buffalos break Blackhawks

OILERS took on Blackhawks in the only match on Sunday. Hawks had two guest pool players in Anthony Philips and Sarah Shepherd to help fill the gaps but Oilers were looking slick Early in the game Gareth Goodwin took Anthony's stick to the face in an accident sending him off temporarily from injury but Orlers struck back with Lucy O'Sullivan first on the board and followed closely by Ian France. Robin Cooper came to the rescue for Blackhawks moments later but the score stayed in Oilers favour 2 – 1 at the break.

With marking rivalries well established the second half started ferociously but both teams defended well. Gordon Lennie netted Oilers third, retaliated quickly by another from Robin. Lucy responded sharply with a fourth for Oilers and the deal was pretty much sealed by lan bringing the fifth with only a few minutes left of play. Antoine Daille pulled one back for Hawks in the last ten seconds then the whistle blew to end Blackhawks reign; Oilers five Blackhawks three.

A more dramatic fall for Blackhawks was on Tuesday. Missing four of their original team line up. they took on a Buffalos. The game started ferociously with shots from either side slamming across the hall but the skilful match was to be overlooked for all the scoring. It was Izzy Ceballos who found the first for Buffalos, then Andrew Miller, then Jose Pavez-Villaroel and then it was a rebounding puck from Paul Trowell off Antoine's stick that was next to find the Hawks' net. With 13 seconds left in the half Andrew scored a fifth leaving the Blackhawk's a worrying nothing to five at the break.

With ten seconds played Jose made it clear Buffs were not done with another goal. Chris McLean scored with an assist from Nick Rendell and then the pair did the same two minutes later. Paul scored another and then Nick cracked one in from the floor after a fight for the puck. Andrew sealed a hat-trick and the game was over, winning a well earned shut out for Buffs' goalie Ever Perelta, Buffalos 11 Blackhawks nil.

In the second fixture of the evening Penguins met Panthers with guests Lucy O'Sullivan and Callum Middleton. Callum opened the scoring but Nick Francis was quick to respond for Panthers and followed it with another minutes later to put Panthers in the lead. Kevin Ross drew the teams level and Boy Miranda took Penguins into the lead, three goals to two just before the break.

Proving his worth as a guest Callum opened the scoring in the second half too and the lead was stretched again by Roy Shepherd moments later. Three goals down the Panthers turned up their game to vicious, with some hard tackling and loud shots.

Karl Nightingale broke into the Penguins goal and Simon Reid netted another for Panthers but there wasn't enough time to do much more. Final score Penguins five Panthers four.

RDS PROJECT CO-ORDINATOR - FIDC

The public and private sectors have worked in partnership to produce the Rural Development Strategy (RDS) with the principal objective of maintaining Camp in order to encourage a well-populated, economically and socially sustainable community integrated within the national economy.

FIDC has a significant role to play in taking forward the delivery of the RDS and is now seeking an RDS Project Co-ordinator to manage the continuing development and delivery of the Strategy - working with FIDC, FIG and the private sector.

This is an exciting role of national significance and FIDC is seeking applications from individuals interested in contracting for this challenging position.

Candidates must have a good standard of literacy and numeracy equivalent to 'A' level and experience in working with the public and private sectors. Candidates must be competent, reliable, able to work under pressure and have a professional attitude with good communication and computer skills.

Preference will be given to candidates with knowledge and experience of economic and/or rural development and issues facing Camp and the development thereof. The office location of the RDS Co-ordinator can be either in Stanley or in Camp.

For a full job description contact Michelle Trowell, on pa.admin@ fidc.co.fk or telephone 27211. Applications, including a full CV and covering letter, should be submitted to the General Manager, FIDC, no later than 1600 on Monday 15th August 2011. Interviews will take place within 72 hours of the closing date so applicants must be able to attend at short notice.

Shipping link is reinstated

CAMP residents gathered at Goose Green for a public meeting with Assembly Members on Wednesday were the very first to hear that a containerised shipping link run by South American Atlantic Services Ltd (SAAS) was to be reinstated.

Making the welcome announcement, MLA Sharon Halford said the three year deal with Consolidated Fisheries Ltd (CFL) would "ensure that the financial support is available to enable SAAS to plan for the longer term and ensure customers can also plan to use the service with a high degree of confidence. Both CFL and FIG will cooperate to enable the company to provide competitive freight rates over the next three years, even if freight volumes continue to be low."

CFL continues to make a significant contribution of both money and resources into SAAS. Without it the cost to the tax payer is likely to have been many millions of pounds more.

The Government had already taken steps to ensure that the MV Scout would be available to SAAS if a deal was done and the Scout will be on charter to SAAS from September 1.

MLA Halford said SAAS had ensured it had a number of options available for shipping routes which plug in to the world wide container network and could provide an efficient service through to final destination for customers.

The SAAS Board will determine which of these is to be utilised when the service starts.

As one of the first to hear the news, Paul Phillips from Hope Cottage said he considered any Government investment in the project, "money well spent." He said the containerised link would enable him to achieve better prices for his wool and was also, "a big plus for the Meat Company."

SAAS now have to recruit a general manager and other staff, however, MLA Halford assured the service should start by November at the latest.

The Meat Company's general manager John Ferguson, was de-ing, he said.

"We need containers to leave the Falklands and deliver directly to the customer and that is what SAAS can do."

"It opens up the market with the Far East and North Africa, he said, adding that it is not just the export for FIMCo but also the importation of all the packaging and equipment for the season would be made easier.

SAAS will contact its customers directly in due course to advise them of how they can obtain details of freight timings and costs.

Rodney Lee speaking from the Falklands Wool Cooperative was greatly relieved: "We have yet to find out just which port, but wherever, it has to be a vast improvement on Southampton as our alternative. It would have been a huge backward step not to have this link for some of the markets the Woolco has developed since it has been in operation, so we are extremely grateful for all the effort that has gone on behind the scenes to get it up and running again."

Falkland Islands Company Director Roger Spink said: "Whilst the Chamber of Commerce is not privy to the full details of the South American Atlantic Service Ltd (SAAS) service, the resumption of better international freight services is welcomed.

"The EDS strategic plan suggests a joint approach between FIG, the service sector and the fishing industry to realise potential benefits of containerization in the Falklands. The collaboration between Consolidated Fisheries and FIG demonstrates the importance of developing local businesses that are capable of contributing towards the high cost of supporting the key infrastructure on which we all depend.

on which we all depend.

"The development opportunities are based on maximising the services industry offering and value obtained from the existing port infrastructure, and the benefits to the fishing and agricultural export industries.

"There may also be benefits for many types of imports. Greater choice and competition should assist the consumer and ease the rate of inflation."

A spokesperson for Seafish Chandlery said, "This is great news, and I am sure all our customers look forward to enjoying the benefits that the resumption of the service will bring."

Aircraft fuel contamination

TWO British International helicopters are still grounded following a serious fuel contamination incident at Mount Pleasant.

On August 5, BFSAI was informed by the Defence Fuels Group that a quantity of aviation fuel had been contaminated with an airfield anti-ieing agent.

Flying was temporarily stopped until safety checks had been conducted confirmed Command Secretary Simon Cole

He explained that with the exception of the two British International helicopters all BFSAI aircraft have returned to normal flying.

Although a substantial amount of aviation fuel had been contaminated it is said to be a small proportion.

Chief of Statf, Group Captain Jim Klein said "Whilst the contamination of a stock of aviation fuel is unfortunate, it is only a fraction of the aviation fuel held at Mount Pleasant and BFSAI remains fully capable of delivering its operational output."

In addition to the contamination of aviation fuel, a fuel additive was also inadvertently used as a de-icing agent on the runway; however checks have shown that the runway has not been damaged.

Extra prospects for Rockhopper

ROCKHOPPER Exploration has identified additional prospects in the vicinity of its Sea Lion discovery after seismic data indicated an extension of the play.

The company now estimates resource potential at the Sea Lion main complex at between 608 million barrels in the low-case scenario and nearly 1.3 billion barrels in the high case, having proven commercial volumes with appraisals earlier this year.

AS a person who can be reduced to a state of near incandescent rage at the mere sight of processed cheese slices I can hardly lay claim to any awards for tolerance. And in fact this lack of said attribute was underlined earlier in the week during a sociable visit to my former employer and good friend. Chatting over coffee she commented on the joy and convenience of downloading electronic books to her newest gadget. With an encouraging 'let's share' smile she enquired whether I had done similar with my own gadget of choice. A lump formed in my throat and my hands trembled as I attempted to control a wave of quite uncontrollable ire and shame at being forced to admit that the Elders at Apple had not yet created an equivalent application for what I had rather too often described as my superior technology.

Her open-mouthed-horror, gasping, and violent hair whipping (as she spun around on her imposing faux-leather swivel chair) very kindly and satisfyingly mirrored my own emotions, but almost simultaneously a small sneering voice in the back of my brain demanded of me 'THIS is what makes you angry?'

Happily, the very fact that I still maintain a small sneering voice, muted as it is by a weakness for techno/cosmetic and fashion-consumerism, bolstered a belief that deep down I do still get angry about things that actually matter.

And what matters to me this week is tolerance.

Not the facile wide tolerance that is based on a complete lack of thought ("look at me I'm sooo broadminded") or even the tolerance that is insisted upon by law, but the tolerance that is based on truths.

To give an example, this week someone asked me 'why do we have all of these people here from other countries taking our jobs?' (The individual was referring to foreign employees in the services sectors.)

The answer is we really don't.

In fact we have a work permit system that most employers condemn as restrictive. And while that might be arguable, surely it doesn't take a genius to see the majority of non-residents employed in the Islands are an absolute necessity; the Falklands simply does not have the human resources to fill the gaps. Take a look around next time you're shopping or eating out; now try to imagine who might take the place of those employees if they left.

And if by chance suddenly there are residents in need of work, whether as a result of a large contingent of school leavers, or students returning, do employers suddenly expel their non-resident employees mid contract? (In case you're wondering the answer's no).

Like the rest of the world there are those here who might accurately be judged narrowly intolerant - the racists, the sexists and the homophobes for example - but luckily there are laws that hopefully keep them in check.

As for the rest of us, whether we judge a situation with reasonable tolerance or even reasonable intolerance, remember it's only valid if it's based on truth.

Commonwealth Scholarships 2011

The Commonwealth Scholarship Committee has extended an invitation from students wishing to secure funding for postgraduate studies to Masters or PhD level. (Exceptionally awards for undergraduate studies are available.)

Students seeking an award for studies at Masters or PhD should have gained a first degree, of at least upper second class honours level, by July 2011.

The Scholarships are offered on a competitive basis and the Falkland Islands are offered one such scholarship.

The closing date for applications to be with the Education Department is October 31st 2010.

Application forms can be found at: http://bit.ly.cscuk-apply or for further details please telephone or call at the Education Office, Cable Cottage, Stanley. Tel 27289

FCO funding for farmers market

THE Rural Development Strategy will benefit from £5,000 worth of funding from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office confirmed Nuala Knight earlier this week.

A proportion of the funding will contribute towards the costs of setting up a farmers market website that will aim to profile the range of products available from Camp, to bring suppliers and producers together and to promote the farmers markets, "making them a regular and well supported event," she said.

The money will also go towards a project aimed at improving communication between the Camp population and decision makers as well as helping towards the costs of producing a 'map of Camp' aimed at "boosting the contribution tourism makes to the Camp economy."

Speaking from Government House, Staff Officer Ralph Jones said: "Although FCO programme budgets have been reduced throughout the world we are pleased that the Falklands will still be able to benefit, especially in the areas of rural development. These small projects will certainly make a difference and I am particularly looking forward to seeing the Illustrated Guide to Camp being produced.

"We also hope to announce some more small projects in the near future."

This week in Court

THE trial of William Harvey (38) for the charge of sexual activity with a child and sexual grooming of a child will take place on October 5. The defendent's bail has been extended until that date and the trial is expected to take at least two days.

Mrs Inglis asked if the date might be brought forward to reduce stress on young witnesses and the victim. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis replied: "A number of facts need to be considered and I have attached due weight to them. It is regrettable that the wait from complaint to trial is long, but time is needed to ensure a fair trial for both victim and accused."

Stanley man Robert Short (48) made an appeal to the Magistrate's Court on Wednesday to remove his three year disqualification from driving.

Defence counsel Keith Watson explained a driving licence was necessary for Mr Short to take up employment opportunities in Stanley and Camp. 27 months of Mr Short's three year driving ban had already been completed and Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis was assured that the purpose of the disqualification had been achieved. He removed the ban with immediate effect saying it would be "burdensome to continue."

Local business discuss services to oil industry

FORTY-live different businesses attended a workshop on August 12 to discuss services that might be offered to the oil industry in the future.

As part of the Oil and Gas Development Group aims, Karen Lee of Wilkins Kennedy Ltd and Lewis Clifton of the Byron Group hosted the meeting at the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs Lee said the purpose of the meeting was, "to see what people are willing to offer and ascertain mainly percieved barriers as to why they are not currently offering more services."

She said hopefully in the future the chamber will act to enable, "lines of communications between the oil industry and private sector."

Mrs Lee said a wide range of services were suggested. "everything from tour guiding to regulated waste disposal."

A survey of oil company service providers has also been conducted to ascertain what services the industry requires. This information is now being reviewed by the Oil and Gas Development Group.

Executive visits

ROCKHOPPER Exploration consultants are expected to visit Stanley in the week of August 29 the Director of Mineral Resources will confirm at a meeting of the committee on Monday August 22.

In the closed part of the meeting she will also discuss her UK meetings with all operators during the week of August 8.

FIG's consultants, Dr Phil Richards and Tom Dodd from British Geological Survey will hold meetings with the Falkland Islands Government during the week of September 4.

Falklands Oil and Gas Ltd (FOGL) representative Mike Thomas and environmental consultant Olga Shtepenko from RPS visited the Islands in late July to discuss preparation of their environmental documentation.

FOGL plan to submit an environmental statement to FIG in September.

Camp turnout for public meeting

MLA Emma Edwards

takes a look at the

Tourism Strategy

MORE than 30 Camp residents gathered at the Goose Green Social Club on Wednesday for the August public meeting with Assembly Members

MLAs Sharon Halford (Chair). Emma and Roger Edwards, Mike Summers and Dick Sawle were in attendance, accompanied by the Chief Executive Tim Thorogood, Financial Secretary Keith Padgett, Head of Finance Nicola Granger as well as FIMCo General Manager John Ferguson and Highways Engineer Simon Catton.

Keith Padgett gave an overview of the 2011/12 budget assisted by Nicola Granger, followed by an update on the meat company's operations and new prices to farmers for forthcoming season (see page 5).

Giving an overview of the new Tourism Strategy, MLA Emma Edwards said the work to date was "just the start, not the be all and end all," for the industry.

"We need everyone in the Islands interested and on board to find out what they can do to improve tourism in the Islands," she said.

Looking at the strategy put together by Tourist Board Manager Paul Trowell, Jenny Forrest of International Tours and Travel, FIDC's general manager David Waugh and MLA Edwards herself, she said the majority of both land and sea based tourists came from the USA, the UK and Northern Europe. The aim was to retain the large cruise ships and increase the spending onshore from the current £54 per day per person.

There was a need to retain passenger numbers at 47,000 and increase the activities available to them, said MLA Edwards.

One way of doing this was a possible joint venture with South Georgia: "We could say if you want to go to South Georgia you have to go to the Falklands," she said. Track improvements to places such as Volunteer Point, the relocation of the museum and an upgrade to the current landing facilities in Stanley would also assist this aim. "The end of the Public Jetty is about to drop off, it could be this year or next, and the pontoons have been lifted and a lot of money spent on them this year," she said.

There was also a need to increase the number of beds available to visitors and improve the facilities to attract the high end of the market with the possible introduction of a grading system for accommodation around the Islands.

News from Highways Engineer Simon Catton, that all of the West Roads would be graded this season but only a limited amount of East roads was met with little enthusaism by the rural residents. Transport Advisory Committe member Ted Jones stressed that the difficulties experienced by rural road users was not confined to West Falklands. "They just tend to beat their drum a bit louder," he said.

MLA Roger Edwards said he was aware some Camp roads were now almost impassable, with some areas "downright dangerous, but even in a good year for funding only 40 kms of the 1,000 km road network could be upgraded."

Goose Green farm manager Keith Alazia reminded everyone that the 36 mile stretch from Stanley to Mount Pleasant, exactly fitted the category, "downright dangerous."

St Helena death

ST HELENA Governor Andrew Gurr announced with regret on Monday, the sudden death in London of Sharon Wainwright, He said she was there working for St Helena and was due to catch a flight to Johannesburg on Sunday in connection with airport negotiations. He described Ms Wainwright as hard working, highly competent and a much loved member of senior management who would be sorely missed. He offered heartfelt condolences to her family and friends and asked that flags be flown at half mast for ten days as a mark of respect.

Import subs

IN a paper to go before next week's Executive Council it is recommended that anyone who would like to lease a piece of land at Beckside Farm for horticultural purposes can apply to do so, said MLA Roger Edwards. He stressed that this was completely separate to the Import Substitution project which aims to reduce vegetable imports into the Islands. The Import Substitution project has been allocated £250,000 by FIG and will be administered by FIDC pending approval at Executive Council.

New grading

A NEW piece of equipment coming on line at the Sand Bay Abattoir is a Hennessy Probe for grading carcasses. General Manager John Ferguson said the results from using a Hennessy Probe were very close to those achieved with the manual system. however, it was easier to train employees for the Hennessy system than visual grading.

MPA wind farm

AS a capital investment the Falkland Islands Government is to fund the building of a windfarm at Mount Pleasant, although Financial Secretary Keith Padgett said on Wednesday it was still in the planning stage. FIG would build and run the wind farm and charge the Ministry of Defence for the electricity to recoup the investment, he said.

Farmers Market

A FARMERS market will be held this Saturday at the Leisure Centre between and 10am and midday. Jams and chutney's knitwear, woodwork, breads and dairy products will be available for purchase on the day.

September start

STEPHEN Luxton, who will take over as Director of Mineral Resources in early January 2012 is to be appointed Deputy Director from early September 2011.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

AS I sit here writing this week's column for Jan. I find myself the only MLA left in Stanley as those who are in the Islands are all on the road to Goose Green for the first of the public meetings and then onwards to the West.

Unfortunately due to my work commitments I can't be with them. When we initially set the date I actually provisionally booked leave but when the date for the visit was changed it was too late for me to be able to get time off. It's one of the "joys" facing a councillor who also has a day job.

Although some may see the away days as a bit of a jolly. I do think that it is important that we take the time to get out and see people and give them a chance to question us face to face rather than over the phone or by email.

Also, very importantly this time it lets us see certain problems for ourselves such as the roads on the West and I know that especially Dick and Sharon are more than keen to try and drive around as much as they can.

To actually see for yourself what is happening is worth more than any explanation. Also it sends the clear message that Stanley isn't the Falklands and that Camp is vitally important.

These visits are something that might become even more important depending on the results of the single constituency referendum later this year.

BY the time this column appears in print I hope that the statement on shipping will have been issued and the company who will be operating the service will be working at full steam to start the ball rolling.

FINALLY I was extremely pleased that the FIDF held an open day last weekend to allow the public to see some of what they had, demonstrations of capability and speak to the guys and girls who make up the force. I hope this will have inspired some of you to sign up. It isn't easy getting the cherished FIDF beret but by God it is worth it. Ask not what your country can do for you but what YOU can do for YOUR country. Alas, not my words but it sums things up nicely.

First responders ready for action

WEST Falkland residents updated their first aid skills this week as Recreation Manager Steve Dent held courses at both Hill Cove and Fox Bay.

The team, which Mr Dent describes as, "an excellent example of community spirit at work," is supported by both FIG funding and training provided by FIG personnel, and is based throughout the West with emergency equipment at both Fox Bay and Port Howard to provide a first response to any accidents.

The group was formed in 2006 and the training programme instigated at the request of West Falkland residents following a road traffic accident earlier that year, close to Fox Bay. During the incident, local residents, with no specific training, had to provide first aid to an individual for an extended period. Bad weather delayed the arrival of the Search and Rescue helicopter and for some time there was concern that the helicopter would not reach them for 24 hours or more.

The team is now trained in basic first aid along with some advanced first aid skills such as spinal extraction and recognition of major illnesses.

The team has responded to a number of incidents during its time and while prepared primarily for trauma based incidents, the team are trained and prepared to respond to other emergency medical incidents

The first responder concept is not specifically limited to the West Falklands. Mr Dent said other groups could be formed in their areas and limited equipment supplied if there was sufficient interest.

South Georgia fishery update

FIVE longliners fished in the South Georgia toothlish fishery during July along with five trawlers which have operated within the krill fishery for most of the month.

Two of the vessels joining the fishery were inspected, and while one passed and was licensed, the other failed inspection because it did not have sufficient life raft capacity.

The vessel consequently sailed to Montevideo to fit more life rafts and update its ship's sanitation certificate and on its return passed inspection, was licensed and joined the fishery.

Catches have remained very good so the trawlers have been making regular transhipments to reefer vessels anchored in Cumberland Bay. Three reefers have made five visits to Cumberland Bay for transhipping operations during July.

One longliner however, suffered a serious mechanical breakdown leading to a total loss of propulsion. Fortunately weather conditions were reasonably calm and a trawler took the vessel under tow into Cumberland Bay where the observer disembarked. The trawler then towed the stricken vessel towards the Falkland Islands where it was met en route by a tug which took on the tow, allowing the trawler returned to the fishery.

Your questions answered

Qls it an illegal practice to knowingly allow animals to graze in a clearly marked minefield?

A Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek provided the following answer...

No, but it is an offence to intentionally drive an animal into a minefield. It is also an offence to intentionally cut or remove any part of a minefield fence (without lawful authority)

The maximum penalty on conviction for both offences is; 12 months imprisonment, a £2,000 fine, or both (see section 12 of the Crimes Ordinance, title 23.1 of the Revised Laws of the Falkland Islands).

Best year for abattoir top prices to farmers

IN a strategy aimed at consolidating the growing success of the meat industry in the Falklands. FIMCo pricing schedules mailed to farmers earlier this week revealed a 20 per cent increase in payments for livestock.

A happy Falkland Islands Meat Company (FIMCo) General Manager. John Ferguson, who explained the company had achieved "slightly better than break even.... five years earlier than expected." added. "the industry now needs to catch up and they can only do that if they get the best possible prices."

He said the Board of FIMCo is very appreciative of the foresight by MLAs over the years in supporting the introduction of an export meat industry to the Falkland Islands, despite the difficulties involved along the way: "There is still much to do, but at last there is a light at the end of the tunnel."

Following a Board Meeting on August 11 it was decided the next step would be to "make it viable for the farmer to put in finishing systems," for their livestock, as well as be able to afford to make other changes to the advantage of the quality of their animals.

For the farmer this means a new season lamb at the average carcase weight of 12kg will increase from £21.60 to £25.80. A yearling lamb at the average carcass weight of 15kg (Grade 3L) will increase from £23.25 to £28.50.

A sheep at the average carcass weight of 19.5kg (Grade 3L) will increase from £12.67 to £15.21.

Speaking of FIMCo itself, Mr Ferguson said a £2.7million turnover was achieved last financial year, with 82 per cent of that coming from exports: "We used to lose heavily on exports but now it's this that has brought us to break even."

He said this was primarily due to strong international sales prices, greater sales of salted skins to the Far East, an increase in the volume of lambs, better quality of livestock and increased productivity at the plant.

£950,000 was paid to farmers and £500,000 to local businesses (not including payments to government): "We expected a £320,000 operational subsidy from government but we don't' require it," said Mr Ferguson.

The company has a whole list of aims for the coming year including being more productive (helped by the new cold store that came on line in March); they will extend the carcass chiller space by double, while an increase in lairage space for livestock will mean, in turn, more space to hold skins.

"We want to improve the slaughter line so it will be more efficient and cost effective," he said.

But what does this mean for the consumer?

"Meat to the customer has been subsidised," admitted Mr Ferguson, "we are keen to keep prices down but more pay to the famer will mean a period of adjustment."

He said increased fuel and electricity prices have also added to costs going up.

"We are mindful to keep the price to the consumer as low as possible," he added explaining, "the more animals processed and sold in Stanley and the more efficient we become, means overheads drop and we can keep prices lower."

The track less travelled to Long Island

BONO McKay emerged as the top off-roader on a weekend jaunt to Long Island which involved a total of 42 boggings on the five hour run.

Having obtained permission from local landowners, the 10 vehicle convoy of 4x4s left Wireless Ridge at 9.30 am to traverse some of the softest camp on East Falkland.

While often accused of trying to get bogged as much as possible on this occasion the young drivers were testing their camp driving skills for a valued prize - whoever got bogged the most had to pay for the beers on return to Stanley. The end result:

Asking for help not a handout

IN response to the name and address withheld letters published in the PN the week before last I wish to state that they obviously took no heed of the matter that the single mums raised with MLAs.

They were not asking for handouts. What they were asking for were alterations to the current system that does not allow how much is paid in childcare to be considered when assessing rent rebates etc.

Two of the mothers are in work and one does two jobs in order to make ends meet. As someone who was a single mum 20 years ago in the Islands. I know that the only person who suffered from me working two jobs was my child.

Of course in those days wages were not that much different, but rent and fuel were a lot cheaper.

As a community we need to decide what is most important, the upbringing and health of a child, or having everyone working 80 hours a week.

I dont know where the first withheld writer is able to buy a whole sheep for £15 or sack of potatoes for £10, but please share this information with the rest of us. We would all like to buy at those prices.

I am always sceptical when I see the names withheld on letters to the PN, it makes me wonder what the writer is trying to hide.

I personally admire those that can stand up and be counted even if I disagree with what they are saving

As for those who have thrown criticism at my daughter for going out once a week, it is me and not the tax payer who pays for any nights out that my daughter has, as I believe that having a little bit of time out away from her girls makes her a happier mother, which is good for my grand-children.

All she wants to do is work and hold her head up, but that won't work if by the time she has paid the rent and the childcare they cannot afford to eat.

It is not just the single parents that are struggling in the Islands now, many young couples with children and two wages coming in, are in the same position.

It's time those of us that can still make ends meet realise that not everyone is wealthy or doing as well as we are told they are.

Don't judge too quickly

IN reference to the article 'teachers must follow procedures', I agree if a child is in immediate risk of harm that the school contacts Social Services straight away. In this case the facts are that what the child said was from a previous relationship two years ago.

That was the past, we live in the

In which case as the Social Services state in their letter last week, "When a concern does not involve immediate risk of significant harm to a child a school teacher is advised to speak to the parents first." But in this case the school failed by not contacting me

The school should be aware of the children's history. I believe in this case, the school was not.

Thank you all for thoughts

I WOULD like to thank everyone who sent me congratulations on the news of my award.

I was taken by complete surprise when I was informed of this, but am absolutely overjoyed and delighted.

The e-mails and telephone calls have been coming in from as far away as New Zealand, Canada, Australia and from England as well; together with a lovely card on Sunday (Falklands Day) signed by members of the congregation at the Cathedral.

Thank you all.

Let's employ the Beaver boys

PLEASE could we employ the Beaver Boys, and Steve, as our East and West road engineers?

Their down to earth, rock and sand approach, together with small amounts of equipment, liberal amounts of humour and just a tad of sarcasm should get the Mount Pleasant Airport road under control before they head off for all points west.

I expect they do pretty drawings too and the final reports would make for entertaining reading.

Darts missing goodwill trophy

AS an appreciation of Stanley Darts Club's generosity in assisting my visit to attend the 50th anniversary of the Governor's Cup Darts Competition (GCDC), being the proud winner in its first year of competition 1959, 1 presented Stanley Darts Club (SDC) with a trophy, five medals and ribbons, suitably engraved for five years to be competed for in conjunction with GCDC 2009/13.

Thereafter the SDC could then decide how they would be competed for; or not at all. In 2009 Ms Cathy Jacobsen was the lucky winner, to whom I personally presented trophy, miniature, medal and ribbon, at the end of the prize giving in Stanley Town Hall. The trophy medals and ribbons were then to be competed for during the next four years.

On reading the 2010 report in Penguin News, there was no mention of the Stan Smith Trophy winner?

During my visit at Christmas 2010 1 tried to obtain some information as to why it had not been competed for. I initially asked who the SDC Chairman was, to be told, "you won't get him he works at Mount Pleasant". I then asked a club member; again 1 was told to contact Richard Bonner, "he will sort things out," I then invited him along to 8 Barrack Street where I was residing, to discuss the issue. He assured me he would follow it up, as it should have been included in the 2010 GCDC.

Following on, I wrote an aerogramme letter to Mr Bonner as a reminder, so that it would be included in the AGM agenda prior to commencement of all dart competitions.

On conclusion of my initial presentation to the then Chairman James Bates (thus bringing them into the care of SDC) I sensed that they were not appreciated. Again in 2011 GCDC gave no mention, so that confirmed my belief.

There was quite a sum of money involved in my goodwill gesture, so, please would a member of SDC kindly give me an explanation as to why they have not been competed for. I can be contacted by telephone 01630 – 656072 or letter.

There is a trophy to be held for one year plus four medals and ribbons.

I look forward to a positive outcome. Thank you.

Meanwhile back on the Farm...

Andrew Newman trades business suit for trader suit and welltes as he takes instrumily to Port Edgan or a spot of farm sitting...

We have completed a week, with neither a vet or a doctor required.

However, the Sunshine Island has shown its true colours. Most of them black, grey and every shade in between and we were blessed with 40 knots of wind and driving rain. Fine to observe from a cosy house, hellish to be outside in. Forget all that tosh about, "no bad weather just bad clothes."

All three cats spent the entire day indoors. My ginger-furred feline pal just looked at me from the armchair, indicating that any interruption of his plans would result in his visiting much violence upon me. Feeding the sheep and the hens in the morning was OK, however completing evening chores was something else. The cats had to be encouraged outside for a comfort break.

While making bread, yogurt and ice cream (self sufficiency) we noticed the cooking gas cylinder was empty. Cue heaving a full cylinder uphill to the house, search for spanner and plumbers tape. Skinned knuckles and much rain down the back of the neck later, we are cooking on gas

The good news: the wind velocity meant the clean and green is operating like the Duracell bunny on speed. Batteries at 96 per cent at the end of the day is good news, only slightly marred by my cheery but sodden frame exiting the generator shed through a door that is 5' 6" high with my (5' 10") head held high thinking all is well in the world, or at least that was my last conscious thought before the searing pain of the cranial impact blurred my vision. I observed ginger cat slyly slipping under the shed – yep that smile was on his bloody face, again.

Mid week we drove to the Port Edgar airstrip — due to the rainfall this 5 km trip took 45 minutes and then we must allow 10 mins to check the airstrip and hook up to the fire appliance etc. This was also a dry (wet?) run for a plane expected on Monday bringing two more children.

Friday was an early start -5.30am to get all and sundry organised to go to Fox Bay, an hour and 15 minutes drive with roads not being in their best condition, to help work the Concordia Bay. Most folk from both sides of Fox Bay, Port Stephens and Hill Cove, were on hand to help handle all of the cargo on and off the boat. The day had an element of excitement of new goods arriving - something I could remember from my childhood visits to the farm store after the boat had been.

This time it was the eagerly awaited arrival of fresh fruit via Southern Imports. Ali Marsh flew in to conduct operations and it was well worth the long day. Also eldest daughter has her quad.

Must go now, I have apples to eat and 700 episodes of McLeods Daughters to watch, think I could adapt to this farm management malarky.

Next week... advice on the outcome of dog dosing day. Andrew is nervous, Ben the old dog has been eyeing up his fingers all week. Phoning the vet to confirm all dogs are pliced may require the use of a pen hald between his tabilit.

Meeting the weather head-on ten minutes after doing exactly the same thing with the generator door frame

A blast from the past

Eighteen years ago...

A rgentina's plan to buy out the Falklands by giving £475,000 each to all the Islanders is treated with complete derision in both the Camp and Stanley.

In around 30 telephone calls and street interviews Penguin News fails to find a single taker for the offer to stay in the Islands. "He [President Carlos Menem] can stick his half million, or as many million as he likes, up his waistcoat," said Ailsa Heathman.

Bill Luxton is prompted to stand for election when the Argentine press gives him the nickname of "Public Enemy Number One," and prophesise he will suffer a humiliating defeat at the election in October. Bill who had not made up his mind whether to stand or not says he now has no alternative and the Argentines have only themselves to blame if the Islander they hate most remains as part of the Government.

MV Tamar suffers damage when a large wave breaks over the bow and smashes the porthole of the cooks cabin as they approach the Straits of Magellan.

Hurricane force winds batter the Islands with gusts at Sea Lion Island reaching 68 knots (more than 70 miles per hour) meanwhile Argentina continues its assault with Foreign Minister Guido di Tella saying Britain will "pay a very high price" for introducing the new fishing licence scheme off South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands. However he fails to say what the price will be or how they propose to exact it.

A decision by the Board of Falkland Landholdings to sell all their wool to DS&Co is to be reviewed next year, says manager Robin Lee. The Landholdings decision to sell the entire season's wool (almost 3,000 bales representing 27 per cent of the Islands total wool clip) is made despite the fact Peter Mariott of Falklands Wool Marketing offered higher prices last season than those of Colin Smith of DS&Co.

In its second half yearly report to ExCo, the Development Corporation reported it expected to be some £500,000 below budget and provided information on all the projects it had been involved in.

ExCo also agree that a monument commemorating Naval Party 8901 should be built at Moody Brook and that Fitzroy and Green Patch airstrips be closed to FIGAS operations. Cllr Ron Binnie drew attention to the fact the closing of airstrips should give special consideration to the roads serving those places.

Ted and Ben the local butcher men are selling full mutton for £13 and a hind quarter of beef for £45 and a fore quarter for £40.

Eight years ago...

A visit to the Falklands by the Argentine President could benefit the Islands believes Foreign and Commonwealth official Paul Davies, after Nestor Kirchner tells press he, "looks forward to attending the unveiling ceremony" of the Argentine Memorial at Darwin when it is completed, but councillors are less enthusiastic.

The Fisheries Committee prepares to discuss the need for proper controls to help avoid accidents at FIPASS following a collision between a fishing vessel and the floating port. As it was leaving FI-PASS the John Cheek owned by Fortuna Ltd lost power and was pushed by the wind against the port, damaging the framing and plating of the northwest comer of the warehouse.

Director of Education Sylvia Cole says there were some excellent outcomes recorded for local students with their university results as Peter Diggle graduates with a 1st Class Honours BSc degree in air transport while Anna Luxton gains a 1st Class Honours in physiotherapy.

The Quest for Frank Wild

A BOOK unravelling the truth about the final years of Frank Wild called 'The Quest for Frank Wild' has been written by Angie Butler and will be launched on August 1st.

Frank Wild was one of the greatest British polar explorers who took part in five major expeditions to Antarctica in the heroic era of polar exploration in the early 1900's.

Some histories record Frank Wild in his later years as unable to come to terms with Shackleton's death and living in penury in the mining town of Klerksdorp near Johannesburg.

Angie Butler claims, "The little that was known of Frank Wild's later life in South Africa has been maligned by hearsay and sensational journalism...", she decided to research his later life and unrayel the truth.

She spent seven years researching her subject to uncover the untold story and claims that by doing so she not only fulfils Wild's wish to have his memoirs published, but ultimately makes an astonishing discovery.

The book, published by Jackleberry Press, costs £25.00 plus P+P and can be ordered on line at http://www.questforfrankwild.com

Brecon yomp for memorial

Daniel Beddoes

NEARLY 60 individuals braved the elements walking up Pen Y Fan in the Brecon Beacons last weekend to raise money for the Falklands Memorial at the National Arboretum. HMS Herald veteran Terry Beddoes said his sixteen year old Daniel carried the Falkland Islands Flag on a 3 metre pole attached to his rucksack, in a similar fashion to the iconic photo of the Royal Marine in 1982.

Cumbrian Church and Falklands flags for party pair Molkenbuhrs

THE Falklands flag was flown with pride at the wedding of shearing gang boss Lee Molkenbuhr to his fiancee Martha Brown at St Catherine's Church in Eskdale on Saturday.

Around 85 people from England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales and the Falklands attended the wedding, including family Martha hadn't seen for years.

Martha, who wore an elegant white off the shoulder gown was attended by flower girls Sarah Fox and Ruby Brown. Mark Fox stood as Lee's best man and Martha's nephew Joe Brown held the rings. Adam Fox took the role of page boy. Martha was given away by her father John.

Martha told Penguin News, "We had a hog roast at the Woolpack pub and then a party at Mark and Gillian Fox's. There were plenty of benny bops going on and we had a brilliant time."

The couple are having a party for Falklands friends in Stanley on September 10, but in the mean time they have jetted off to Kenya for a two week honeymoon for a two week honeymoon.

According to Martha the pair started their married life as they mean to go on with Lee passing out rather early while his wife carried on to dance until 4am.

Oil policy FIG'S

THE Minister of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office was asked by a Member of the House of Lords last week, whether the British Government was in negotiations with Argentina over Falklands oil deposits. He replied saying, no, the policy was primarily a matter for the Falkland Islands Government. He said Argentina had introduced legislation aimed to prevent investment in Falklands' hydrocarbons, however, "we remain keen to foster a constructive relationship with Argentina in the South Atlantic, and both we and FIG have offered to co-operate with Argentina on mutually beneficial South Atlantic issues.

Good progress

GOOD progress is being made on the sheltered housing upgrades, it was confimed at a meeting of the Health and Medical Service Committee recently. A Tender Board has also met to discuss the refurbishment of the KEMH entrance and reception area. A preferred supplier has been selected and work is scheduled to begin later in the year.

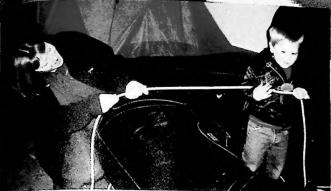

Anniversary celebrations for Julie and Jonathan

JULIE and Jonathan Ford celebrated their 16th wedding anniversary on the weekend with a get together at their home on Pitaluga Place in Stanley with family and close friends. "It's just too expensive for us all to go out," said Julie. Recalling their wedding day, Julie said at least 16 years on they were blessed with better weather than the snow storm that swirled around their Christchurch Cathedral ceremony.

IT was a good turnout from the community for the Falkland Islands Defence Force's Open Day on Saturday. The lighthearted afternoon offered the public a great insight into what the soldiers train with, and what they do. The guided tours and static displays explained the vital role and capabilities of the FIDF as a search and rescue team and as a mobile defence force.

There was a demonstration of how a section would break contact if fired on from an enemy position with plenty of smoke and blank firing but it was the Unarmed Combat Display Team that stole the show. Rob Granger, Zoran Zuvic, Ryan Elstow and Ben Hoyles comprised the display team, and despite only learning most of the moves in the past two weeks, shocked and awed the crowd with their quick, acrobatic and some comical moves. They demonstrated beautiful to the control of the con moves. They demonstrated how to remove a weapon from an attacker, skills in bare hand combat and how to

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland,
Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

2.182 MH2 HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

After the Australian winter recess the Wool Report is back and the EMI has dropped significantly by 58 cents 1,302. AU c/kg (826GB p/kg). Next week a smaller lot is being offered for sale in Australia which may maintain price. New Zealand has continued to sell over the last few weeks and offered higher volumes than normal at this time of year weakening the prices. Over the last 2 weeks over around 20,000 bales have been offered with clearings of around 75%. South Africa commence their wool season on August 17th with a wool sale of 14,000 bales and with a new deal with China to overcome some disease import protocols, raw wool can be shipped direct to China again. Merino fleece prices have fallen which is dragging the finer end of the market down but mainly due to lack of competition from Europe due to the summer holiday season when trading in general is down. This was shown in practice in Bradford this week when only 59% of over 1 million kilos of Scottish wool were sold.

slander Marcus Porter has reason to celebrate this week with a 2:1 BA (Hons) Degree in Professional Musicianship and his album "Home from Home" becoming available on iTunes.

However while we can now listen to Marcus's music on line he has no plans to treat us to a live performance in the near future.

"My plan at the moment is to stay around Brighton and set myself up as a session musician, playing at weddings and func-tions, and hopefully on cruise ships in the near future," he told Penguin News this week.

Private teaching was also a ossibility he said, adding that he also wanted to concentrate on his band 'Whistleblower', as well as some new projects he nas started up since finishing nas star university. Recently, as part of his dis-Marcus recorded a sertation, Marcus recorded and released his own album, which he says he is "very happy" with. Home from Home is available online from various web sites and on Facebook (Marcus Porter Music) and features a track with fellow Falklands musicians Andy Felton and Saul Zuvic.

Marcus said he will also be getting some CDs made over the next couple of months to sell in the Falklands.

Oilers lead the Stanley Cup

BUFFALOS needed to beat Oilers with a four goal lead this Sunday for a chance to meet Penguins in the finals of (not quite the) Stanley Cup. Oilers' Lucy O'Sullivan was first on the board followed by Callum Middleton who snuck in a third moment later. Buffalos struck some powerful shots but not one could get past Stuey Duncan, leaving the score three to nothing at the half.

Ian France netted first in the second half and after a long chasing game Gordon Lennie sealed the win securing Stuey a shut-out and Oilers through to the Tuesday's final, five to nothing.

A few players short through injury, Sharks were strengthened by Panthers Stuey Duncan, pool player Aiden Morris and Blackhawk Frank O'Sullivan while pool player Kyran Evans supported the birds. Sharks Ricardo Leyton was first to score and minutes later Penguins' captain Roy Shepherd brought them level but Ricardo scored again, with what I'm assured was an 'Olympic standard' double assist from Aiden. Dan Fowler increased the lead just before the break to leave the score Sharks three Penguins one, at half time.

Boy Miranda sought to close the gap with a goal in the fourteenth minute but a handful of seconds later Frank set Dan up for a shot. The game ended Penguins winning streak two to four but they had already assured their place in the final.

Tuesday's matches saw the runner up of group B decided. With an even number of points either Panthers or Sharks needed to secure a win to compete against the Blackhawks in the play-offs. Sharks were assisted by goalie Ever Perelta, Andrew Miller and pool player Anthony Phillips while Panthers squad was boosted by Frank O'Sullivan and goalie Stuey Duncan.

Ricardo Leyton was first on the scoreboard again, and deservedly so after a few near misses trying to inch over the line. After some relentless attacking it was Nick Francis who brought the score level for Panthers' and it stuck one all at the break.

The second half started and Sharks were on the attack. Andrew scored followed by Captain Dan Fowler, who impressed again with a blinding shot from across the hall past the bewildered Panthers. Paula Munoz took advantage and flicked in an impressive goal seconds later. With the score five to one the last glory went to Anthony as he sliced past Stuey leaving the final score Sharks six Panthers one.

In what started as a mild game top seeds Oilers and Penguins met each other in the first of three finals. Clearly just sussing each other out the rivals each other out the rivals soon turned the match into a series of fights. Oilers' lan France scored the first followed by a skilful attack from Lucy O'Sullivan. Kevin Ross struck one back for Penguins but they were not matching Oilers game play. Grant Budd netted a dramatic third for Oilers leaving it three to one at the break.

The frustration was showing between the two top teams and the game had to be calmed by the referee when Ian France took on Kyran Evans. Roy Shepherd was first to score after a few attempts and the Penguins could taste victory again but it was short lived after another shot from Grant and then Lucy scoring her second of the match. Martyn Barlow slammed one in the closing minutes but the game finished Penguins three Oilers five and, thankfully, with no blood on the walls.

They play again Tuesday evening.

Optimistic business sector anticipates future growth

GROWTH is the overall expectation of local businesses according to statistics released in a business climate survey undertaken by the Falkland Islands Development Corporation

Survey returns were relatively low, however, sectors that did reply forecast a level of growth over the next two years with around one third anticipating their business would stay the same.

The opinion of businessman Jimmy Moffatt of retail outlet Lifestyles Ltd supported the findings. He told Penguin News: "We are experiencing a period of growth; the extra oil related companies are having a small but increasing impact on our turnover.

"The fact that government isreleasing plots again has made a significant impact on sales."

Clive Wilkinson of small business Powersense was also optimistic about the future, and put this down to good service. "There's been a good steady flow of work over the last year. I've been busy with turbine servicing, upgrades to systems and replacement batteries. Batteries have given up to 15 years reliable service and on average the wind turbine systems Powersense has installed over the past 20 years have provided 80 per cent of the electricity used by customers. We have several new projects in the pipeline, so the future looks promising.

Some of those who responded to the survey, however, were a little cautious about the coming two years anticipating their profit margins would be impacted by increased import costs which they attributed to international political pressure. Since then, as reported in Penguin News last week, the containerised shipping service has been reinstated and this may relieve some of those concerns.

The survey also looked at the future of businesses in terms of diversification and impediments.

Jimmy Moffatt and Andy Brownlee of Lifestyles Ltd

It asked what (if anything) is stopping you from diversifying? 64 per cent of those who had, or have, considered diversifying were largely deterred. This they said, was due to lack of time and access to finance, while a few were further restricted by not being able to access the land required for expansion, and a minority by their location.

Invited to comment on the responses, Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Gavin Short told Penguin News yesterday: "Finance has certainly been a problem in the past and does to a certain extent still seem to be a spectre that looms over the business community.

"I believe Standard Chartered may at long last be starting to become slightly more, less risk averse and if this is the case then it is to be welcomed. The Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC) will of course act where they can, especially in the rural sector where probably loans are deemed to have too high a risk for a main stream lender (it is interesting to note that the cases of default within the rural sector are extremely minimal).

"It may seem strange to say this but land is a problem, not just for the private sector but the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) as well and will probably become more so as time goes on, especially in 'old Stanley' where the majority of retail want to be.

"There is healthy interest in the Gordon Lines area for the more industrial type uses, especially after the rent versus freehold or long term lease was finally put to bed. Sapper Hill should also have areas for retail that, whilst not allowing an established business to expand as it wishes on its present site, should allow them to certainly expand via new build thus initiating or extending a chain of businesses."

MLA Short said it was also interesting to note that the private sector, "may well have part of the solution to land within its own grasp, as I believe that some very good tracts of land in the Stanley area are actually in private sector hands so perhaps they could be selling off parcels for development purposes."

The FIG role in the economy was also examined with both businesses and government department's invited to comment. This was split 50/50 between FIG being 'about right' and 'slightly too big'. Fisheries and trades and services were more likely to find FIG 'far too big' a feeling shared by the majority of the retail and construction companies.

MLA Short said, "I believe only 21 per cent felt it was far too big whilst 27 per cent felt it was only slightly too big while 30 per cent thought it was about right. Certainly as far as FIDC goes FIG has been actively canvassing views on the structure and it will probably end up with the central government having a much reduced role in that body.

"I am not a great supporter of privatisation for privatisation's sake. I can't see why we should privatise bits of FIG just to pay the same or more for the same service whilst in all probability the employee's wages and conditions would be very much worse.

"It is also probably the curse of living in such a small country that central government's role in providing services may seem disproportionately large; mind you, looking at other countries, I am not too sure whether the privatisation model is working that well for them. That said there are probably bits that can be privatised without causing prices to rise and wages to drop."

"We should also be aware that with the move towards localisation at Mount Pleasant Airport, FIG will take a very important and lead role in making some of it happen, and I suspect that where FIG involvement is to the benefit of businesses we would be criticised were we not to get involved. Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THE term 'road rage' has a completely different meaning in the Falklands. It's not the urge to abuse a fellow road user because they lingered at the lights or cut you up on the roundabout, here it's a gnawing, overwhelming, bang your head against a brick wall, howl at the moon, pent up frustration which as the winter draws on can take over your entire life.

At the Goose Green public meeting the other day, I heard MLAs consolingly, possibly even condescendingly, calm a possible outburst of Benny road rage with the old line about the 'lack of available funds' to keep the roads in reasonable order, and I was surprised at how accepting the rural gathering was. But in their defence, it is difficult to work up any real anger when you've just been told the shipping link is to be restored, prices for livestock to the abattoir are increasing and the pantry is well stocked on the back of two year's good wool prices.

One could be forgiven for thinking the timing of the meeting was an incredible feat of engineering.

We are regularly told how there is not enough funding to maintain the roads and if the budget is to be increased, there'll have to be cuts elsewhere and I among many have had a gut full of it.

Now, while I run a risk of going down in history as old "anti-container park" Jaffray, when there is a will, funds can be found, about £1.3 million overnight to be exact. I appreciate the 'containerless' park is vital to the shipping operation which in turn benefits everyone in the Islands and truly hope to see it a hub of activity in the future, especially during the Meat Company's export season... well, provided the farmers can get their sheep to the abattoir of course.

The road problem is not going to fade away with the winter. Although it will seem less of a problem during the summer months, it'll be back two-fold next winter with so much of the network not receiving any maintenance at all this season. The problem is here to stay and is the result of long-term. Island wide transport decisions made by our illustrious leaders, both past and present.

This time it's the MLA's expectations that are too great, not ours. They're expecting all weather tracks to do the job of a high spec motorway, a bit like the tea boy doing the Financial Secretary's job, and surely no one in their right mind would expect that to have a successful outcome.

It's no longer possible to treat the road network like an optional extra with a limited budget, it's just as crucial to the economic development of these Islands as the shipping link and needs to be given the same consideration.

When solving problems, dig at the roots instead of just hacking at the leaves. Anthony J D'Angelo

Jenny Luxton, Manager of Sea Lion Lodge would like to thank all those involved in getting Maurice and herself out to Sea Lion Island last Wednesday 17 August. In particular Lt Commander Katherine Jordan of HMS Clyde and everyone on board for heaving our luggage around and getting us safely to the beach! The RIC Patrol for helping out - particularly with the peeling of vegetables and washing up, but most importantly cleaning sand out of the Hide for our tourists' benefit. Great bunch of guys!

Still to thank of course is Sparky at British International and all those who man-handled our new plumbing equipment around and finally Wing Commander Rob Barrett of the Air Sea Rescue who kindly allowed it to be brought down here whilst picking up the RIC Patrol from their delayed stay.

Last but not least of course, must be Major Ceri John at Mount Pleasant who arranged it all - our sincere thanks all round. We look forward to seeing all those who helped in any way on Sea

"I certainly hope that both FIG and FIDC will work towards facilitating the growth of local business both established and new."

FIDC's performance rating was also examined in their survey. This time it revealed that they have lost some respect from users in terms of staff quality and responsiveness. The main users of FIDC, farmers, were the least happy with the corporation's performance, however FIDC's overall performance was rated higher than it had been in any survey since 2005.

Compared to the survey two years ago there has been an increase in the amount of responding businesses employing full time workers as opposed to parttime or seasonal, this was most notable in the tourism and construction sectors. Farming still remains one of the largest employers of contractors which has been influenced by the Farm Improvement Programme and shearing.

Similar to the 2009 survey status holders still remain the largest group employed per sector however the margins have narrowed. FIG now employ equal amounts of PRP, status holders and contractors, while the retail sector has increased the amount of status holders they employ in comparison to PRP holders.

Nearly all sectors experienced problems with a lack of applicants when asked what problems they faced in employing the required skills. The survey suggests this could in part be due to the lack of an available workforce.

Those that employ PRP and status holders such as the construction industry had no difficulty in obtaining work permits as it was a moot point, but lacked applicants, as did trades and services whose seasonal and contract employment was below 10 per cent, however the biggest employers of contract workers outside FIG, farming and technology all experienced problems.

This was the fifth time the biennial Business Climate Survey had been undertaken. Its primary function is to measure the opinions of the public and private sectors, regarding the current and future business climate of the Falkland Islands economy. The survey received a low response rate of only 24 per cent, possibly due to it being sent electronically as opposed to as hard copy mailed.

GCSE results in for Yr 11

IT is thought that 14 students have achieved sufficient grades and points to be funded for further education. The majority of the GCSE examination results were received early on Thursday morning.

A total of 30 students in Year 11 had undertaken a total of 265 examinations. 99 per cent of the examinations were passed with 74 per cent at grades A-D and 41.2 per cent at grades A-C.

On an individual basis 33 per cent of students achieved five, or more, A-C grades and 27 per cent achieved five, or more A-C grades including mathematics and English.

Assistant Director Richard Fogerty said that once again girls have outperformed the boys.

"It is a highly stressful time for students and staff with satisfaction and disappointment in equal measure but many of our students can be pleased with their achievements," said Mr Fogerty.

The next step for the Department and staff is to look in greater detail at the results and see where new initiatives might help more students to realise their potential, he said.

West Store employee cleared of theft charge

WEST Store Foodhall employee Fernando Cordero Hernandez (28) had his name cleared following a day long trial on Wednesday, and after five weeks of having a charge of theft hanging over him.

Mr Cordero who was charged with stealing a case of Budweiser from his employers the Falkland Islands Company Ltd, said it had been a really "hard time" and he was relieved it was all over. "I've never been in trouble before and I was embarassed to be in that situation," he told Penguin News.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis told Mr Cordero he was not satisfied the prosecution had proved the case to the required standard and that accordingly, he was discharged.

Giving the facts of the alleged offence, Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said that on July 8, Mr Cordero had been served at a till operated by Jessy Ann Calisto Hutt.

Mrs Hutt had admitted stealing from her employers on August 10, when she had not charged her sister for a box of Tampax and for the case of Budweiser, for which she was fined a total of £350.

At the time Mrs Hutt had

Fernando Cordero come to the Islands to learn better English to further his career in engineering and marine transport claimed she had no recollection of the Budweiser, then later changed her story to say she had not scanned it because Mr Cordero had asked that he only pay for the pizza and had passed over £10 for which she had given change.

On Wednesday under oath Mrs Hutt again changed her story, saying Mr Cordero had handed her £10 and said, "stuff the FIC because they haven't given me any part time work." She said when she saw it was a Chilean person she "didn't know what to do" so did not scan the Budweiser.

West Store supervisors had checked the receipts on the till and there was no record of any Budweiser being sold during the time Mrs Hutt was logged in to till number four.

Mr Cordero claimed, however, in both his statements to the police and while giving evidence during the trail that he had paid for both items, handing over a £20 and a £5 note and receiving £3 or £4 in change.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said there were two possible scenarios; that Mrs Hutt accepted the £25 and kept the value of the beer (£15.56) or £10 had been tendered.

But, he said, Mrs Hutt's evidence had been "all over the place from start to finish," while Mr Cordero had been steadfast in his evidence throughout.

It was one person's word against another and there was no doubt who was the most creditable witness, he told the court.

Mr Cordero thanked the people of the Islands for their support and good wishes over the weeks leading up to the trial.

Sea Lion well

ROCKHOPPER Exploration has spudded a new exploration well in the vicinity of its flagship Sea Lion discovery off the Falkland Islands

The latest probe was spudded on Monday August 22 at a location about 3.3 kilometres north-west of the original discovery well.

It is intended to test the presence of hydrocarbons at the northern extent of the Sea Lion main complex, though the reservoir is expected to be thinner than in the original discovery well. Drilling is expected to take about 32 days.

Rockhopper has raised reserve estimates for Sea Lion following successful appraisals of the discovery, further boosting its commercial potential.

The company said it has increased its low-case estimate of oil in place to 608 million barrels, up from 516 million, following fresh seismic.

Based on a 30 per cent recovery factor, Sea Lion would hold a low-case 325 million barrels of recoverable oil, Rockhopper said.

New members

TIM Miller now represents the Chamber of Commerce on the Development Corporation Board, replacing Mike Forrest who tendered his resignation in June. Tony Blake has been re-appointed as the Rural Business Association representative while Hamish Wylie has been nominated by the Falkland Islands Fishing Company Association (FIFCA) to join the board.

Falklands app

THE Falkland Islands Tourist Board plan to launch a new 'Falklands application' for SMART phones and similar technology. Visitors to the Islands will be able to download the app and obtain up-to-the minute information when they arrive.

Regarding the £260,000 of public money used to establish the Wool Company: given improved wool prices, is it not time the Wool Company started repaying FIG/FIDC the £260,000? If not why not?

Wool Company Manager Rodney Lee replied...

The Wool Company did receive substantial grants/ subsidies of public money approved by Executive Council and the Falkland Islands Development Corporation to assist with "establishment costs". In line with similar grants/subsidies paid to many organisations or individuals over past years there was no expectation or proviso that repayments would be required.

State of roads hot topic at abridged West meeting

WEST residents were disappointed when government representatives disappeared early from a rare West Falklands public meeting on August 18.

Bad weather conditions led to a ferry cancellation and the majority of the group flew back to Stanley part way into the meeting.

Prior to that the meeting chaired by Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Roger Edwards began with a budget round up by Financial Secretary Keith Padgett, including reference to monies allocated to the Rural Development Strategy, the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Improvement Programme, import substitution and the Government Air Service. This was followed by a presentation on the Falkland Islands Meat Company by Manager John Ferguson, who presented information relating to the increased prices to be paid to farmers for livestock.

Road Engineer Simon Catton explained works to be carried out on West roads by private contract in the coming season including the capping of five kilometres of road south of Saddle farm plus a short stretch at Carew Harbour. Mr Catton said if there was time and funding remaining the Wall Stream area would also be considered for work. Other areas were discussed but MLAs noted there was a lack of funding and man power to deal with this in the short term.

International shipping was talked about in brief detail and MLA Emma Edwards gave a presentation on tourism, and was also asked about mobile phone coverage in the Port Howard and Fox Bay areas. It was suggested coverage would be of two to three miles Leicester Creek Farmer Justin Knight said, "It was good to see MLAs holding a public meeting, hopefully there will be more in the future and MLA Summers' interest in agriculture was also welcomed.

"It was disappointing that most Members and officials had to leave early as it meant we did not have an adequately full discussion on Camp matters. Also we anticipated a discussion on the FIDC review and this did not happen at all. It was certainly frustrating because there wasn't time for questions to be directed at those with responsibility for a number of areas relating to the West Falklands."

Myles Lee from Port Howard was also present at the meeting and was particularly unhappy with the outcome, "there really seemed to be too little discussion," he said.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

BEFORE my recent holiday I used a day in London for a meeting in the FCO, took part in a background briefing for a journalist from the Economist and had a meeting with a representative from Edelman with the Chief Executive

WHILE in London I was amused to be asked frequently for directions and surprised that I was often able to give them. I'm not sure if white haired older woman equals unthreatening person to approach; or if I actually look as if I know my way around. Possibly the fact that I have learned my way around on buses to avoid the horrors of others' sweaty armpits in the underground has enabled me to navigate by landmarks.

THANKS to Gavin for covering my absence and good luck with the credit card type driving licence. This is something we looked at in detail, possibly eight or nine years ago. If I remember correctly the problem then was the high cost of the machine to produce them. With advances in technology it may now be more reasonable.

I FOLLOWED the debate that took place recently regarding the difficulties experienced by single parents who need affordable childcare in order to work. One essential factor seemed to be missed and that is the responsibility of the absent parent to contribute to the well being of his or her offspring. The fact that parents are not together should not mean that one can evade providing fair financial support. Perhaps it is also time to revisit the suggestion I made years ago for the provision of nursery vouchers. At the time I was shouted down by some who attributed children's bad behaviour to the fact that their parents both worked.

FOLLOWING the ExCo decision last month to request a further paper on allowing the sale of sea trout, I suspect that people will be less willing to take time and trouble to respond to consultation documents if majority responses are ignored by decision makers. Of course Assembly Members are representatives not delegates, but consultation is pointless if members are going to ignore the

Loans available for local business

THE take-up on loans from the Development Corporation (FIDC) has been so low that capital repayments on existing loans have exceeded the value of new ones.

Despite £400,000 in the budget in the last financial year, only £97,000 was allocated to successful applicants, while the balance of the loan portfolio earned a total of £129,000 in interest.

Financial Controller Steve Manders reported to the board of FIDC on Tuesday that the £129,000 in interest was however slightly lower than budgeted, which reflected the fact FIDC's loan portfolio had reduced in size over the same period.

General Manager David Waugh said there was a need to advertise the loan resources available to both local and rural businesses and if Executive Council approved a paper FIDC were putting forward there would be up to half a million available. "We need to advertise to embryonic and small businesses that opportunities are available," he said.

Throughout the year the corporation realised a profit on disposal of assets of £108,000, which, said Mr Manders, was a disappointing result at £101,000 below budget due to several asset disposals taking far longer to conclude than expected. These were still in the pipeline so the benefit would be received in the next financial year instead, he said.

Looking at project expenditure Mr Manders reported an underspend of £51,000 on the Aquaculture project. There was an element of surprise among the board to learn that the operating costs of the site at Moody Brook were less than £3,000 per month.

The Rural Development Strategy (RDS), however, "really stuck out," said Mr Manders, with only 16,000 of the £155,000 nudget being spent in projects. He said 137,000 had been spent in administration of the RDS from the West and his made the project top leavy.

"The significant point tere is that the adminstration cost for the RDS project being the cost of the staffing of a satellite office in Fox bay, equated to over six times the actual RDS project expenditure," said Mr Manders.

He said the level of available funding had already been reduced from the original budget figure of £175,000 as funds were diverted into other projects outside of the core RDS. "If this had not been the case and the full amount of £175,000 had been made available as per the budget, then the actual £6,000 spend would represent three per cent achievement against budget.

The operating expenditure for the Development Corporation for the year was £422,000 against a budget for the year of £476,000 and the under spend in this area could be directly attributed to true cost savings made during the year, reported Mr Manders.

It is likely FIDC will now have in the region of £500,000 cash reserves at the end of June 2012 provided the budget for 2011/12 materialises as intended, said Mr Manders, adding however that FIG subvention funding would still need to resume from 2012/13 in any event.

Stop wrecking York Pond

RARE plant species and a wide variety of wildlife are in danger from individuals who insist on driving through York Pond in the Cape Pembroke area said members of the Environmental Meeting last Tuesday.

Despite rocks being placed around the pond to prevent access by vehicles, which is home to Gaudichaud's orchid, the Spider plant and the protected Dusen's Moonwart as well as Chiloe Widgeon and Yellow Billed Teal duck, the large boulders have been moved and the vandalism has continued.

Conservation CEO James Fenton said this week, "The pond is important botanically and has the largest population in the Falklands of the protected Pale Yellow orchid

"It is a bit sad that a minority feel the need to go to that area when there is so much other space."

The area cannot be fenced off as horses grazed in the area use the pond for drinking water.

Chair of the meeting Member of Legislative Assembly Emma Edwards said, "We have got to persuade people not to go through it."

Environmental Planning Officer Anthony Edwards confimed the area would be looked at in the overall management plan for Cape Pembroke.

Members of the meeting were reluctant to recommend legislation affecting the area but felt if things did not improve then they might have to consider it.

BAS daughter 'chip off block'

JAMES Fenton, the new Chief Executive Officer of Falklands Conservation, has just heard that his daughter Mairi has been offered a job with the British Antarctic Survey as a marine biologist. He is looking forward to meeting her, both in October when she goes to South Georgia, and in November when she passes through again on the way to Rothera, where she will over-winter. In James' day BAS had a men-only policy, but he is pleased that times have changed so that his daughter can follow in his footsteps.

MLAs seek answers today

AT a meeting of the Legislative Assembly this morning (Friday) MLA Sharon Halford will put two questions to her colleagues.

The first, will involve the cost of recently purchased fire engines. The question what work is required to bring them up to full working order and when is it anticipated that the capability test will be carried out; and the cost of a standard Dennis equivalent for both, and the life expectancy of such applianees, will be answered by MLA Gavin Short.

MLA Halford will also ask MLA Jan Check whether or not the Education Department has or is going to consider the possibility of changing the way children are funded in further education overseas, and if they could perhaps look to fully fund those training for skills needed in the Islands which are currently being filled by migrant workers and giving less funding for skills not currently needed in the Islands.

She will also ask whether any thought has been given to treating some of that funding as a loan which could be written off against time spent working in their chosen field in the Islands after qualification

MLA Roger Edwards will ask for an update on Camp radio: And if all relevant agreements are in place; such as use of Cable & Wireless masts, approved funding, a preferred contractor and use of SSVC frequencies?

He will also enquire when work can be expected on the new service in order for it to be completed and go online.

MLA Dick Sawle will respond to the questions on the subject of radio broadcast.

Five new ships for fresh cruise season

FIVE ships will make their inaugural visits to the Falklands during the coming cruise ship season.

The luxurious Seabourn Sojourn (450 passenger capacity) will be among these, along with Island Sky (118 pax) mega yacht L'Austral (264 pax) MS Artania (1200 pax) and Adonia (710 pax).

Tourism Coordinator Sulivan Shipping Ltd Samantha Marsh said. "The amount of ships coming to the Falklands for the 2011/2012 is roughly the same as last season."

Twenty-nine different vessels visited then, while 30 are scheduled to visit the Falklands this season.

Miss Marsh said, "The big decrease has been for the outer islands, we are seeing less and less of the small expedition vessels.

"Last year there were over 90 calls to Camp, this year we presently have just over 60 booked. This will have a big effect on them."

Sulivan Shipping will be operating four passenger exchanges this coming season, "which is fantastic news," she said.

"We are working really, really hard to keep the ships coming back, and trying to get vessels to stay longer in terms of the passenger exchanges.

"We've been pushing this at Cruise Shipping Miami, the International Association of Antarctic Operators (IAATO) and Sea Trade South America in Sao Paulo.

"South America is a very expensive region and this has had an affect on the traffic in this region in general," she cautioned.

"Sulivan Shipping has several new tours on offer in the upcoming season and the three top tours last year were Bluff Cove Lagoon, followed closely by Stanley Highlights and Sparrow Cove Penguin

Sam Davies speaking on behalf of Penguin Travel (Falkland Islands Company) confirmed the ships for which they are agents will make a total of 23 visits to the Islands, "with a total capacity of almost 20,000 passengers."

Miss Davies said, "We hope the increases in number this year will continue in the future."

They will also be offering new tours to the visitors and have also expanded their fleet of coaches and minibuses.

She said: "We are working on providing the best possible service to clients," and with regard to those interested in working in the industry as drivers or guides, "we advertise, but people are welcome to contact us."

Penguin Travel declined to discuss their planned new tours, but also confirmed that Bluff Cove Lagoon was still the favourite tour with their clients.

New Tours

Two new tours for cruise ship passengers on offer from SeAled PR, in conjunction with Sulivan Shipping, are a combined town and country walk, and a bird watching tour.

The first involves a stroll through central Stanley, viewing the main attractions, before clients are transferred to a trek in the countryside to look at native flora and fauna.

For the truly fanatical country lovers and twitchers the 'Bird Watching in the Falklands' tour offers, "an exclusive opportunity" to get really close to birds and plants, with portable hides used at various points throughout the tour.

SeAled PR Managing Director Sarah Clement said, "Being part of a small group gives this tour the flexibility to cater for the true enthusiast."

Market Garden news from Stanley Grower's Tim Miller

SPRING is underway early at Stanley Growers thanks to a good supply of waste oils from the offshore oil industry.

We have been able to start the heated crops a month earlier and first cucumbers will be ready for harvest in first week of September, along with green beans. Tomatoes are now flowering and we should see first pick starting in the first days of October.

Outside, work is well underway on the construction of two new large polytunnels- one the largest single span tunnel in the Falklands at 30ft wide and 168ft long (51metres).

This unit should be ready for planting mid September with cabbage, cauliflower and broccoli plants sown last autumn and over-wintered inside. These will hopefully be ready for harvest in December before the first outdoor crops appear from January onwards, and thus fill a current gap in local supply.

Midsummer the tunnel will then be replanted with leeks and parsnips for autumn/winter supply.

The second slightly smaller tunnel will also come into production this summer with a range of fresh berry fruits for local supply, ahead of outdoor crops, as well as an identified cruiseship market.

Replacement cladding has arrived for the lettuce greenhouse; the original has UV degraded being 17 years old, and once reroofed this will enable us to get back into all year round lettuce production - which had to cease two years ago due to inadequate light levels inside in winter.

The pinnacle of lunacy?

GATE? This must be the pinnacle of lunacy. Perhaps coming from the city and never seeing the countryside, Mr 'Gate' Catton has never seen one. That being so, it must be a great hazard to him.

He says gate signs are there to warn people of approaching hazards. But isn't that a bit late when it smacks you on the nose. Maybe, being a road engineer. Mr Catton is not conversant with the highways practice of exhibiting warning signs before a hazard.

What future comic relief de-

What future comic relief delights has Mr Catton in store for us? FENCE, either side of the GATE? ROAD in big letters at regular intervals along the MPA road? Now you must agree, that is one big hazard.

Or again, POST on all of the signs stuck up along the bypass road, to warn (I am told) pedestrians of the ditch.

I'm sure everyone in the Falklands knows of these killer dykes along the roads.

Has Mr Catton got a DOOR notice on his office door?

Now the gentleman is planning to operate on the West. Look out Westers, he's heading your way, remove your gates before you have a GATE notice slapped on them.

Thank you for best two weeks

I JUST want to say thank you to my amazing Mum Anna Punter, fab Step-Dad Jamie Punter and my cheeky little brother Cordell for the best two weeks in the Falklands.

I have had lots of fun seeing some of the sights and meeting all the wonderful people in the town; everyone is very kind and welcoming here.

I enjoyed going to church, looking in the shops, going to Jelly Tots and of course swimming with Cordell.

Thank you again, I will be back in the summer time so look forward to seeing you all when I come back. I will miss you lots.

Stefan Heijtz

THE Falkland Islands Philatelic Study Group (FIPSG) has launched a research fund called The Stefan Heijtz Research Fund made possible by a donation of £1,000 by Stefan Heijtz, Research Co-ordinator for the group

The Fund aims to encourage research within Falkland Islands and former dependencies philately with the goal of publishing the information in the group's journal, 'Upland Goose.'

A spokesperson for the group explained the money will be used to pay for the publication of the research and will be awarded to projects rather than to people Any one project can be awarded an amount up to a maximum of £200 confirmed the Group (although the maximum amount may be changed by a unanimous committee decision.) The committee has to be unanimous to award funds to a project and there is no minimum or maximum number of projects that could receive funds within a year. Some years could have none, others several.

The spokesperson said, "Anyone may donate cash to the Fund, but it is also possible to donate stamps, covers, post-cards or any other items with a Falklands connection, which will be sold through an auction and proceeds from these sales will be added to the Fund.

"The money in the Fund will be handled by the FIPSG Treasurer as a separate fund in the FIPSG accounts."

Rules are subject to ratification at the next FIPSG Executive Committee meeting, "but the fund is very much in being, and everybody is encouraged to support the initiative - gifts in kind are just as welcome as gifts of cash. The beneficiaries are ultimately the whole FIPSG membership as well as anybody interested in Falkland Islands stamps and philately."

There will be a committe off three comprising the Chair of the group, the Editor of the Upland Goose, and the FIPSG Research Co-ordinator. Awards from the fund will be administered by the FIPSG Chairman, the Editor of the FIPSG journal the Upland Goose, and the FIPSG Research Co-ordinator.

Since the launch in March, a number of people have donated £100 each. For more information, please check the FIPSG website: www.fipsg.org.uk

he third week on the ranch has I flown by, we've had more excitement, and as you read we are just completing week four.

On Monday (22nd) we increased the farm population by 50 per cent with the arrival of two more children (not from Mrs. Farmer you understand) from the big smoke on the East.

This meant the kids were fully occupied leaving me to get on with a few jobs such as quad maintenance - the quad is the modern day horse and our horse had a flat battery. We also washed several pounds of road off vehicles and potted tomato plants. There is also work to do in the vegetable garden and poly tunnel but we are currently enjoying fresh spuds, carrots, parsnips, leeks, turnips and swedes, so some folk will understand that I get distracted and just take a feed home instead of digging and raking etc

Mid-week I travelled to Fox Bay to attend the first aid training with the West Falkland response team. This was very interesting and a good refresher for my retained fireman role. I was also very impressed with the skills, knowledge and equipment that they have put in place, they fully recognise that despite best efforts, serious accidents and incidents will have to be taken care of for up to two hours before professional help arrives. It is a reality that living on the outer islands, the West and some parts of the East you really are on your own. Which brings me nicely to my most recent experience. Communications.

Not wearing my business suit at all but as a customer who is somewhat out on his own. Returning from Fox Bay on Monday afternoon we have no phones or internet. So we wait a couple of hours, switch stuff off and on but nothing. The 2 meter brought no joy and having cleaned the road off the vehicle I set off for the nearest civilisation on the quad. 30 cold minutes of ruts later I arrive at Stoney Ridge Farm. James and Jennifer give me a crash course on boxes; house, mast, grey and black. I also phone the provider who confirm that yes the signal stopped at 1.55 on Sunday - so how long before anything is done? It appears that in the most part folk have learned how to manage the failures themselves. A colder journey home and I go through the procedure at the mast on hill just as light fades, same at the house and hey presto we are up and running

Now you may be wondering how the dog pilling went (read up on hydatid in the Falklands), ob-

So in the early morning darkness using trusty head torch I prepare the bait. Ben is first, I let him out and nervously dangle the loaded kidney from the very tips of my fingers, he opens his mouth stretches his neck, I drop, he swallows - sweet. With great relief I repeat this with Jess then Mist. When returning from the other side of the cages with Mist I notice in the periphery of my head light my ginger pal Kiki. He jumps on the meat table and surveys the action (I would love to know what was on his mind). I repeat the process with Pip and go get Tammy. Arriving at the table with the kidney stash I notice there is only one left and I need two? I'm sure I carefully prepared the correct amount and that ginger feline is now nowhere to be seen. St, I've pilled the cat! I quickly get a chunk of meat and slip the second pill in for

I then leave for Fox Bay and fear slowly turns into pride as I realise that it's now Ginger 2 Newman 1. It did not leave my mind all day.

On my return I let the dogs out and give them a proper feed and do another search around the bench for the 'lost' kidney - nothing. But wait.. there under the bench among some sheep st is something gleaming white in the darkness - the pill! I go into the house. Cats are all curled up asleep. Ginger 3 Newman 0

Pro-action and refocus plans for environmental projects

A REVAMP of projects is on the cards for the Environmental Studies Budget (ESB) and with a move away from the current 'application driven' approach to project choices.

Approval was sought for the refocus' at this week's meeting of the Environmental Committee

Environmental Planning Officer Anthony Payne explained the most effective way for the ESB to help deliver new priorities set out in the Biodiversity Strategy Review would be for it to become more pro-active.

In the past it had been largely reactive, and the 'wait and see what projects are submitted' policy had led to difficulties in justifying funding, "as it became difficult to see what projects would not go ahead without funding because at the time the budget is prepared very few projects would have been worked up in sufficient detail to include costs." he said.

The proactive approach would involve the government actively seeking academic and research partners to undertake the work required to deliver the Strategy. A list of subjects and project areas would be agreed and a tendering/ commissioning process undertaken.

The main area for support through the ESB includes protecting the environment and addressing the lack of information relating to coastal and marine species and ecosystems and the impacts of introduced plants and animals. The paper proposed the two are worked up as projects for ESB funding.

The ESB also looks at seabird monitoring programmes, research projects, on the ground projects (fencing to support tussac replanting) and educational support.

The paper supports an increase in funding for bird monitoring as this is in danger of not continuing due to lack of funds which could lead to the breaking of counts that go back up to 25 years.

ESB funding may be withdrawn from some 'on the ground' projects as well as educational support as these are already supported through either (or both) Falklands Conservation and the Agriculture Department.

The current budget for 2011-12 is £85,000 however this was as high as £191,000 thirteen years

Although current funding is the same as six years ago, inflation has eaten away at its value, confirmed Mr Payne.

ALTHOUGH Brown cannot be sold, it can be included on restaurant menus, courtesy of a decision by Executive Council it was confirmed at this week's meeting of the Environmental Committee.

The decision was criticised by MLA Jan Cheek at the commented, meeting, who essentially ignoring ...so the recommendation of this committee.

Planning Environmental Officer Anthony Payne said as a result this would need detailed discussion with the Attorney General's Office in terms of, "how it would work."

Brown trout cannot be sold, but if gifted to a restaurant by a licensed angler it can be sold to the customer as part of the menu.

Mr Payne said catching the species would be affected by the normal angling limitations (minimum weight, maximum number), the restaurant would likely have to keep a recording of the transaction and they would probably have to report back to the committee, "as with the raptor licences and egging licences.

Artist Adam graduates with 2:1 to teach

NEWS of great results from our University students keeps on coming in.

Adam Howe (21) achieved a First Division 2:1 BA Honors in Photography from Southampton Solent University.

This year Adam travelled to South Georgia as part of the Shackleton Fund and exhibited his works at Studio 52 in Stanley.

"My course helped me to grow as a person" he said.

Asked what the highlights were he said. "I enjoyed every part of it; it allowed me to travel and create work I was proud of with the right support from tutors and peers.

Most recently he exhibited works in Southampton as part of his degree show and is excited to shortly begin a new challenge at NorthBrook College of Art in West Sussex. His conditional place to study to be a teacher was confirmed with his 2:1 and he promptly enrolled last week to start his PGCE in Art & Design this September. In the mean time he's enjoying the break and is planning to celebrate in his own way "by doing another drawing on an may and naving a cheeky drawk"

FIFTY Murrell Farm penguins will soon be sporting state of the art solar-powered GPS logging device:

Dr Klemens Puetz, of the Antarctic Research Trust, who has been a frequent Falklands visitor over the years, has received a licence from the Environmental Committee to investigate the foraging behaviour of penguins while simultaneously testing the super lightweight devices.

Rockhopper, Magellanic and BETTER, EASTER Cooker STRONGER Gentoo penguin fine scale foraging will be investigated during the breeding season, as well as the identification of the foraging areas of the same species breeding in Berkeley Sound.

Dr Puetz also intends to identify potential threats from human activities in the foraging and transit areas

ments of penguins in the Berkeley Sound area will be useful in relation to fisheries and oil exploration shipping movements.

The method is non-invasive and does not affect the thermal insulation of the study birds. Generally, communication with the device and data download can be performed via a Bluetooth connection without handling the birds.

However, it is envisaged that all devices will be recovered towards the end of the study.

The whole attachment procedure will last less than 15 minutes per bird, keeping stress to a minimum. Also, eggs and potentially chicks will not be affected as only the leaving birds will be caught after they have exchanged breeding duties

Two other licences have also been awarded for penguin behavioural studies, to Dr Maud Poisbleau of the University of Antwerp and another led by Dr Pierre Pistorius of the Nelson Mandela University

The latter will involve diet sampling, however, the scientist will use a special food mix to replace the lost meal afterwards.

Egging down

PENGUIN egging in the Falklands has reduced slightly according to a report on penguin egging licensing presented to the Environmental Committee on Tuesday, August 23.

In 2010 licenses were issued to collect 2,262 Gentoo penguin eggs at 20 Gentoo colonies. Returns to the Planning Office indicate that 2,059 eggs were actually collected.
The number collected is similar to the previous year when 2,123 eggs were collected according to returns.

The last three seasons have seen a slight drop in the number of collection requests, as the number of eggs collected between 2002 and 2007 ranged between 2,500 to 3,000 per year. Given the estimated total number of breeding pairs the current level of egging is considered to be sustainable confirmed the committee.

Queuing up for a quarter of an hour before the doors were opened, the customers were not disappointed at the quantity or quality of the goods on sale at the second Farmers Market on Saturday.

A joint initiative of the Rural Development Strategy (RDS) and the Rural Business Association (RBA), the first market was held back in March at the Jetty Centre car park.

On this last occasion the event was held in the gymnasium of the Stanely Leisure Centre which was a welcome change given the frosty and slippery underfoot conditions on the day.

Organiser Sarah Clement said she was extremely pleased with the turnout and even with the weather being less than co-operative there was more produce at this market.

"Also we had a more even participation of East and West farms sending in produce which was great to see with a total of 20 farms selling goods," said Sarah. The estimated gross takings was £2,500.

Sarah explained that after learning from the first market when huge queues formed to pay at the one checkout desk, the format had been changed and more people went along to run their own stands which meant customers could pay at each stand.

Sheila Stewart, Pat Pratlett and Sam Miller also volunteered their services to help out and took charge of selling the produce sent in by farmers unable to attend themselves as well as setting up and taking down the stands.

Sarah thanked all those who helped out on the day as well as the Stanley Leisure Centre for allowing the event to be held in the gym which was especially appreciated.

"The RBA and RDS would like to thank the farmers and buyers for making this Farmers Market a great success and we look forward to seeing you all at the next one," said Sarah.

The Wool Market Report - 18th August, 2011

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The EMI has continued to fall after the winter recess by 39 cents AS1,263 AU c/kg (804GB p/kg). It was thought that the price may maintain with a tightening of supply this week but the drop has still been seen. Currency considerations have been cited as reducing competition for purchases so supply is still high. Further drops have been seen in Merino fleece prices but the cross bred fleece market has seen more interest. Holidays, uncertain futures in the economic climate and poor competition have been compounding to reduce much action in the market this week. On a local level those of you who are in QFW will need to think about the self audit preshear checks and anyone wishing to get involved please contact me. A well run wool shed and shearing area should have little problem in gaining QFW status and it could help in selling wool in the future. Assurance is a valuable thing if markets get picky.

A strange sense of bereavement

FOUNDING Editor of the Penguin News Graham Bound gives a very personal account of an unusual illness, his battle aginst a rare and frightening disease and the eventual loss of a limb.

I have always felt rather sorry for the doctors and nurses who run our National Health Service. We are the beneficiaries of their skills and dedication, and yet medic bashing and whinging about waiting lists is almost a national sport. I have never been inclined to complain about waiting times. The NHS responds to the health needs of some 63 million of my fellow citizens and we do not pay much for it. If we want instantaneous treatment for some nonlife-threatening complaints, and custard creams with our hospital tea, we should cough up serious money and go private

However, few years ago, my Mr. Tolerant image slipped. In fact, it crashed to the floor and stayed there for a long time, while I came to understand how this system can occasionally let you down badly -

and dangerously

Inevitably, my story begins with an illness. The early stages were not alarming. I had been grumbling about the small bump on my ankle for some time, and after a walking trip in Spain, during which the bends and bumps of the rocky trails caused severe discomfort, I saw one of the GPs at my local surgery. He was very reassuring, and I was content that the lump was probably "a bony spur, tendonitis or the beginnings of arthritis". But under pressure from my wife, Nadia, who is habitually cynical about such glib medical assessments, I returned to the surgery frequently. The increasing discomfort did not respond to the anti-inflammatory drugs I was prescribed and the lump grew, slowly at first and then with a spurt that made it extend to both sides of my ankle.

By this time, I too was becoming concerned. The GPs treated me politely but with a hint of the disdain reserved for hypochondriacs. Eventually, I was given the choice of seeing a physiotherapist or an orthopaedic consultant. I was shocked. The choices were poles apart. After so many months, it dawned on me that the GPs had no idea what was wrong, but had been in no hurry to refer me to someone who might.

Two months would pass before I could see an orthopedic specialist, so in the meantime I visited a physio. Deep furrows in her brow suggested this was a problem she had not encountered before. After an hour or so of painful exercises, I left and did not return. At last, I saw the orthopaedic people. Over several consultations. I was examined, X-rayed and, finally, given an MRI scan. The procedures reassured me that, at last, something meaningful was being done. That reassurance evaporated, however, when I was told the scan results would not be available for a further four months. My dismay must have been obvious because the receptionist said, "Don't worry, you'll be called before then if there is anything to worry about.'

We went off to the Falklands for a summer break in the middle of the northern winter, believing that I would be called back if neccessary. There was no such call, and I almost stopped worrying about my ankle. But four months later, when I turned up for my appointment, it finally emerged that I had a tumour.

I was, of course, shocked. But the doctor said it was probably benign. They would have to take a tissue sample to be sure. The procedure was carried out a few days later. Another week passed before I was told the results of the tissue sample were "confusing". The clinical evidence was dispatched to the Royal National Orthopaedie Hospital at Stanmore in North London, and a few days later, I was told its leading consultant, Professor Tim Briggs, wanted me

I knew the way this was going: "goodbye bony spur, tendonitis or the early stages of arthritis", I thought. "Hello cancer." Tim Briggs, a wonderfully friendly and informal man of almost exactly my own age, and known to his staff as Briggsie, had left his operating theatre specially to see me. He was still in his scrubs. Tim's first question was chilling. "Why has it taken you so long to get here?" I stammered a reply: "I'd like to know that too." But going through my mind was one thought: he is about to tell me that we are too late.

Thank God, he did not. Looking up from the MRI scan imagery on his computer, he said: "You have a tumour and it is malignant. It's a sarcoma, and it is rare. I'm afraid there is no easy way to say this: we will have to amputate your leg below the knee. That is the only way we can be reasonably sure of stopping cancer cells from moving to other parts of your body.

He was right; there was no easy way of saying it, but, God, how I wished there had been as I watched my poor wife's face dissolve in shock and tears. One of the two nurses in the room comforted her. I felt numb. But I reasoned that the news was actually better than I had feared. They had a treatment. It was the cancer that terrified me, not the amputation. Almost as an afterthought, Tim Briggs asked a member of his team to arrange a chest X-ray as soon as possible. "Why?" I asked. He said, "Well, there is a chance that the tumour has metastasised to your chest. It probably hasn't, but we need to know one way or the other."

I then suffered the worst week of my life waiting for the results. I stayed at home and brooded, and with too much time on my hands I researched my problem. One lesson to emerge from this: don't check out your ailment on the internet. It's far too scary. However, before I switched the computer off, I learned that this was a rare disease, accounting for about 2,000 of the cancers -- roughly one per cent - diagnosed in the UK each year. It can develop in many parts of the body, but it often goes for tendons and other soft tissue around bones of the leg. If undiagnosed, sarcoma will spread, often leading to secondary tumours in the lungs and liver.

I was relatively fortunate because my tumour was around my ankle, about as far from my chest as it was possible to be. But still, there was a risk. When I returned to Stanmore, this time with my wife and my sister in law (reinforcement were definitely necessary), I was told: "Everything is fine. No sign at all of secondary cancer. Let's get you in on Sunday and we'll operate on Monday.

The relief was tremendous. But I was about to lose my leg, a limb that had never carried me to any sporting glory or even won a knobbly knees contest. But it had helped me cycle, walk, swim. drive and even sail through 50 years of life. Later, I would suffer a strange sense of bereavement at its loss. However, the alternative to amputation was so frightening that, as I entered the surgical ward, I felt content and at peace. I had lots of lovely people around me, and that also helped.

Post-surgery, my stump was heavily bandaged and bulbous, like a giant Chupa Chup lollipop. I ingested copious painkillers, the physiotherapists got to grips with me and the psychiatrist checked my brief depression to confirm. I think, that I was not about do anything "silly". There was to be no chemo or radiotherapy, because the surgery had been so radical.

Ten days later, I was home, to begin six months of recuperation. The first weeks were very difficult, but I was on the receiving end of such kindness from family, friends, nurses, doctors, and even the drivers who took me to and from Stanmore, that I still felt fortunate. The strangest aspect of recovery was phantom pain. My poor brain did not appear to understand that it had lost contact with the lower part of my leg, and continued to send out signals, often in the form of stabbing pain in a foot or calf that no longer existed. Drugs helped, as did acupuncture, administered by our Chinese doctor friend Ping, and deep relaxation, verging on hypnosis.

Gradually, life has returned pretty much to normal. I can still feel my missing foot, but phantom pain is now rare, and I can walk reasonable distances. However, if I don't concentrate on my gait I take on a distinct list to starboard, which in turn leads to back pain. Thanks to a clever adaptation to the pedals of my car, I can drive again. And I have even got back on my skis. I'm sailing and canoeing again also, and when I'm back in the Falklands, I go fishing - although the trout and mullet are as safe from me as they ever were.

I continue to visit Stanmore to see the prosthetists who made two new legs for me - one for everyday use and one just for skiing the physios who train me how to use it and Julie, the lovely Macmillan nurse consultant who looks for signs of resurgent cancer. So far, she has found nothing. I am seeing her again this week and such is our friendship that I'm looking forward to it.

From time to time Julie or Tim have asked me to meet sarcoma sufferers who are about to go into surgery. I am exhibit number one, walking and talking evidence that there can be quality of life after such radical treatment. I have also met fellow sarcoma survivors during sessions in the gym and in the prosthetists' surgery. Seriously delayed diagnosis is a common theme in our conversations.

A greater degree of knowledge among GPs would help all sarcoma patients. There is a movement to boost awareness in the medical profession, but education will take a long time. Unfortunately, I have no doubt that many more sufferers will make their slow way to Stanmore, where they may be greeted with the chilling question:
"Why has it taken you so long to get here?"

Not quite the Stanley Cup final decided if it would be Blackhawks or Sharks taking third place in the (not quite the ...) Stanley Cup 2011. Hawks were joined by pool player Anthony Phillips and Sharks had Stuey Duncan in goal and Buffalos' goalie Ever Perelta as an outfield player. The game started relatively slowly with plenty of passes and opportunities presented. For a while it looked as if the teams would stay nil all at the half but Sharks' Nick Stephens broke the stalemate with a long shot that caught out Blackhawks defence.

The second half started promising much of the same but Ever struck a powerful shot into the Hawk's net. The next shot in came from Sam Miller to stretch Sharks' lead three nil but Hawks' Frank O'Sullivan was quick to retaliate with a goal. Stuey pulled out some formidable saves for Sharks but it was Blackhawks' goalie Bono McKay under relentless fire. Ever scored another blinding goal and Paula Munoz was quick to follow by putting the puck in Hawk's net again. In the last few minutes Dan Fowler got the goal he'd been looking for for almost an hour and sealed the victory: Sharks six, Blackhawks

Penguins. Oilers needed a win to secure the Cup and Penguins needed a victory or draw to stay in contention. The first half was a long struggle with a lot of shots on target but none finding a net. In the last four minutes Roy Shepherd got the first goal of the game leaving Penguins one to nothing at the break.

The second half began in keeping with the theme little scoring but plenty entertainment. Player Trustration from volleying up and down the hall was turning the match into a big fight with sticks. Oilers were rewarded with a goal from Ian France followed the next minute by Grant Budd to stretch them into the lead. The body slams and athletic dives kept coming with Marcus cartwheeling in action movie style to protect Pen's goal. Both teams really wanted the win but Penguins were controlling the game. They fired shot after shot at Stuey across the hall but he responded with an incredible series of saves.

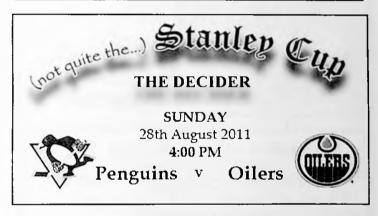

With the last seconds counting down, Penguins' Cup ambitions looked lost, but with four seconds left on the clock Roy slammed in a goal to raucous applause. Final score Oilers two, Penguins two.
