Don't panic we'll grow our own

A QUARTER of a million pounds is to be used to produce more fruit, vegetables, salad and hen eggs within the Islands.

Executive Council (ExCo) has agreed the funding which is to be administered by the Development Corporation (FIDC) in a bid to reduce the amount of imports into the Islands.

Approximately 319mt of fresh vegetables and fruit was imported into the Falklands by air and sea in 2009/2010, according to a paper produced by FIDC's general manager David Waugh, but it is estimated that 64% of those imports could be grown in the Falklands, either in a field (152mt) or in a poly tunnel (51mt).

Additionally, in the region of 12,000 eggs are imported via the LAN flight every fortnight.

The move to grow more locally was prompted by the increased protestations and actions from Argentina against British sovereignty, as well as their attempts to form an economic blockade by disrupting shipping since the restart of oil exploration in Falklands waters.

The potential for further disruption to shipping links and the added possibility of disruption to the air link, both of which are heavily relied on for the importation of fresh produce between South American and the Falklands, has created genuine concern for the Government said Mr Waugh.

"The aim is for the Falklands to become self sufficient and less susceptible to external pressure," he said.

Applications for funding from the Import Substitution budget will follow the standard FIDC loan application process. Two funding ratios have been proposed for those wishing to establish or expand import substitution activity, as well as appropriate areas of Beckside Farm being made available for lease.

Parts of Beckside Farm, such as the chicken shed, the paddocks and other areas of land could be individually leased for their most appropriate activity, ensuring effective use of the land, explained Mr Waugh. "It could be seen as an inefficient use of 1,100 acres of land if a business leased the whole of Beckside Farm just for egg production," he said.

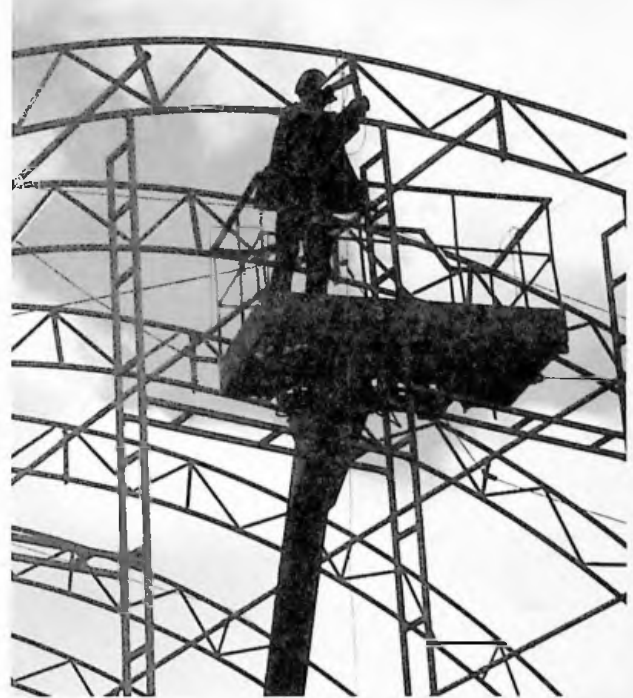

Funding on the basis of a 70% debt, 20% grant and 10% equity ratio will be available for those starting out and for rural businesses with a higher degree of self-funding available but seeking an incentive and some assistance, a 20% grant supported by 80% of the applicant's funds is in place.

Mr Waugh said the object was, "not to attract keen gardeners or hobbyists, but to encourage and assist professional, serious business minded operators."

MLA Mike Summers said yesterday, that the Import Substitution programme presented an opportunity and a challenge to Falklands farms and businesses to produce the quantities of eggs and vegetables that are required in our shops and restaurants.

He said the experience of high prices, low availability and often poor quality recently, had not been good and there was opportunity for productive businesses to add to the Islands self sufficiency. "It is hoped that the re-introduction of the containerised shipping service will provide better availability of fruit and vegetables in the shops, but it should never be able to compete with our own locally produced goods," he said.

Dick's quick fix will calm troubled waters

MLA Dick Sawle has announced a new development which will offer the people and businesses of the Falklands an alternative method of resolving disputes between each other, rather than taking action in Court.

He had identified a need for an Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) within the community, and told Penguin News he knew of several instances where people had disputes, but had been put off going to Court to resolve them, often because of the expense of time and money, and also the publicity of the proceedings and uncertainty of the outcome. As a result they had, "allowed the dispute to fester, souring personal and business relationships."

He said the advantage of ADR was that it is confidential, quicker and cheaper than litigation, and could be conducted where and when parties agreed for their mutual convenience.

Working with the Senior Magistrate, John Trevaskis, who is a Member of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators, MLA Sawle has launched a Mediation Service, which will be available to all businesses and private individuals in the Islands.

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

TO begin a column with a phrase as indescribably dull as 'import substitution', might, by some, be considered editorial suicide on a par with (although not half as exciting) 'Argentina' - not so bad really? However, having taken the plunge and planted the former subject on the front page I can only hope readers will judge for themselves the subject is indeed worthy of column inches. Especially bearing in mind the front page story of July 22 where we, or in fact statistics, suggested we were a nation of porkers and, in turn, much in need of a few decently priced green vegetables.

That said, I was still a little nervous about raising the subject of vegetable-growing, in a column that boasts an aim of provoking debate, when I was unexpectedly reassured by the actions of my office manager who:

1. excitedly waved a small bag of carrots at me because they cost under £2

2. just as excitedly and vociferously condemned her husband's rather sweet offer to purchase her some £150 Egyptian cotton sheets.

The interlude left me reassured that firstly we're excited by vegetables, and secondly we care a great deal about cost (oh and thirdly we should all marry men like Mr Biggs).

But I digress.

It's perhaps shameful that it has taken a degree of pressure upon our shipping links to force a wholehearted focus on seeking self-sufficiency in terms of fresh foodstuffs.

That said, at the very least Kirchner's bullying policy has reignited a little pioneering spirit, and it seems complacency is to be replaced with action. And while I could not have applauded a move for import substitution that in any way excluded those local producers already contributing eggs and vegetables to our retail outlets, the combined policy that should encourage expansion as well as entrepreneurialism seems reasonable.

Although of course feel free to argue - preferably on the letters page - because you won't be the only one. While musing over the subject this week, and commenting on how down-to-earth Tim Miller's letter was (see letters page) someone said, "Alternatively they could just give the money to Tim, with his wealth of experience imagine what he could do with it."

While I didn't entirely agree with handing over quarter of a million to one business, when others might be encouraged to develop, I did agree with her further thought that as an FIDC Board Member his experience would be invaluable when it came down to the awarding of funding.

And a discerning mind will certainly be required: particularly bearing in mind the amount of Islanders who might all of a sudden decide to don a flat cap and a pair of wellies in order to persuade FIDC to hand over the partial cost of handy little poly-tunnel - hell I would.

PUBLIC CONSULTATION

PROPOSAL FOR A JURY (AMENDMENT) BILL

Executive Council considered a draft Jury (Amendment) Bill that would increase and widen the pool of people from whom juries can be formed, make provision for the judge to determine the order of trials when two or more people are charged on the same indictment, and update some out of date wording in the current legislation.

At Legislative Assembly it was indicated that the Bill should be made available for public consultation with a view to the Bill being presented to Legislative Assembly in October.

A consultation document has been prepared to explain the proposals in the Bill. The consultation document and the Bill will be available from Gilbert House from 5th September 2011.

The consultation period will last for three weeks.

Anyone who wants to comment should respond to the Attorney General's Chambers by 26th September 2011.

Anyone who has queries about the consultation exercise should contact Mark Lewis on 28461.

Responses to the consultation should be made in writing to the Attorney General and can be sent to him at:- Attorney General's Chambers, PO Box 587, Stanley, Falkland Islands or by email to: mlewis@sec.gov.fk.

Further education for class of 2011

ELEVEN students have made the list to study in the UK this year.

Ariane Goss, Reuben Cofre, Matthew Lazo, Lauren McKay, Anthony Phillips and Roger Shillitoe will be going to Chichester College and Chloe Anderson, Ellis Smith, Damaris D'Avino, Mari-Ann Clarke and Hannah Collier will attend Winchester's Peter Symonds College.

Penguin News managed to catch up with a few of the students including Hannah Collier who has decided to study mathematics, Spanish, geography and business studies at A-level.

Very pleased with her GCSE results she hopes to use an A-level in mathematics to train as a primary school teacher.

"I chose Spanish because I am hoping to settle down in the Falklands so it will be very useful," she said, adding that her other choices were simply because she enjoyed the subjects.

Mari-Ann Clarke will study sociology, psychology, health and social care and Spanish at A Level.

Further along the south coast of England in Chichester, Anthony Phillips will be studying with the hope of becoming a technician and Reuben Cofre is considering a possible career in his father's fishing business, so will spend two years studying for a BTEC Extended Diploma in business Level 3.

"There weren't too many courses that I was really keen on and I figured business would be useful to do," he said.

Ariane Goss will study at Animal Management Brimsbury through Chichester College and has ambitions of moving on to veterinary nursing.

Lauren McKay has chosen to study agriculture, although she is a little nervous to be leaving the Falklands for so long. Some students leave today and most will be gone for a maximum of two years.

Races under starters orders

JOCKEYS and race sponsors will gather at the racecourse on September 12, to discuss changes to the race programme "to reduce the amount and length of the races in order to generate larger entries," according to the minutes of the last Stanley Sports Association (SSA) Annual General Meeting.

On the issue of drainage it was noted the Public Works Department had approached SSA Chair, Owen Summers with regard to inserting a drain across the racecourse, near the end of the woodwork for the Sappers Hill residential development. The work is likely to take place this month as this will give time for grass regrowth prior to the 2011 race meeting.

Speaking of the SSA stallion, Thyr, Mr Summers said the cost of horse feed and vet fees were up on the previous year. The stallion is currently unfit and not generating any income.

Within the 2011 committee Owen Summers is Chair with Bobby Short as Vice Chair and also Clerk of the Course.

The question of who should start races was discussed, following a complaint from a member of the public that jockeys should not be allowed to undertake that role. The committee did not wholeheartedly agree with this. It was felt jockeys were the most qualified to do so and it had also to be taken into consideration that the races depended heavily on volunteers, including other jockeys as starters (the latter only when absolutely necessary.)

Mr Summers noted the need for a new tote building, preferably built with the assistance of volunteers to keep the costs down.

Elaine Turner told Penguin News yesterday, "The SSA is run by volunteers and we are always on the look out for more to run the jockeys bar and for starting and assisting the starter, for judging and for the tote and for a whole list of other tasks"

The 2011 race meeting is predicted to cost the SSA around £8,000.

Nadia Smith

Nadia and Pippa go to London

ISLANDERS Pippa Christie and Nadia Smith will be joining up to 100 young parliamentarians from across the Commonwealth when they attend the fourth Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP), taking place in London next week.

Graduate trainee Nadia Smith hopes to use the opportunity to gain more knowledge on parliament. "I'm really excited. I've never had much to do with politics so I'm really interested to see," she said.

The aim of the event is to demonstrate the commitment of the Commonwealth group to engaging the younger generation in politics, parliament and the Commonwealth. They will be participating in exclusive tours of parliament and the House of Lords with a briefing and viewing of Oral Parliamentary Questions in The House of Commons (including Prime Minister's Question Time) and the House of Lords. The pair will also meet with Speaker of the House of Commons Rt Hon. John Bercow MP and the Commonwealth Secretary-General, HE Kamallesh Sharma.

The week will culminate in a keynote debate on climate change, taking place in the House of Lords Chamber on September 9. "Fortunately we get to pick which side of the argument we want to represent," said Nadia, explaining the group will be split into two political parties who have to support and present their teams chosen themes.

Separate from the CYP Pippa and Nadia also hoped to attend debates at the London School of Economics and Westminster School but it looking increasingly unlikely with their busy schedule.

He explained how it will work: "If the parties to a dispute agree to refer it to mediation, they will appoint the mediator by entering into a contract with him, including an agreement to pay his fees. They will each provide him and the other party with a written statement of their case, and the mediator will convene a meeting with the parties, and will speak to them together and separately, to assist them towards an agreed settlement of their dispute. If it succeeds, they will be able to have an agreement drawn up by the mediator for them to sign. If it does not work, they can still take their case to Court in the usual way, and none of their discussions during the Mediation will be admissible in evidence. In that way the parties can talk freely about the strengths and weaknesses of their case with the mediator, and he will only disclose matters to the other party if he is authorised to do so."

"This form of ADR is one which is growing in popularity around the world, and it is time the people of the Falkland Islands had the opportunity to take advantage of it."

MLA Sawle said that because the scheme complements the civil jurisdiction of the Courts, and does not oust it, the mediation cannot be undertaken by any of the officers of the Court; however, Dr Peter d'Ambrumenil, who is himself a qualified and experienced mediator, has agreed to act as such during his time here at the hospital.

"I would like to add my heartfelt thanks to both John Trevaskis and also Dr Peter d'Ambrumenil for their help with setting this up. Without their expertise and assistance it would simply not have been possible."

For further information about the ADR scheme contact Court Administrator Val Padgett on telephone 27271 or email courtadministrator@townhall.gov.fk

Mounds of spoil surround the road to Gypsy Cove

Dumping ground spoils tourist area

VISITORS to the Gypsy Cove area in recent months have been dismayed at the ever growing and unsightly spread of spoil being dumped from construction sites.

On the route to one of the Islands most visited tourist sites it is fast becoming a bone of contention locally and prompted a visit from MLAs Gavin Short and Sharon Halford along with Public Works and Environmental officers on Wednesday.

MLA Short said it did look "pretty awful" at the moment, but flattening and landscaping would, he had been assured, "be well in hand before the tourists arrived."

Even then, he said, "it is still going to look a tad ugly," but the natural ground the spoil was covering, "didn't look that pretty either."

Once the ground is landscaped it will be left alone for the natural vegetation to reclaim.

MLA Short said there was a shortage of places to dump spoil with the actual Mary Hill quarry itself being held back for large metal disposal.

"I think, truth to tell we were caught a little flat footed when the hydrocarbon boys hit town and the pace of development/expansion (or the amount of stuff being removed) surpassed expectations rather spectacularly."

Other sites to dispose of spoil have been identified in the area as a short term solution, with a longer term solution now being urgently looked at, he said.

MLA Short concluded: "I'm afraid that whilst excavation and dumping is in full swing it isn't going to look that pretty, these sorts of works never do. What is to be aimed at is ending up with something that is acceptable when the job is done."

No extra road work this season

ASSEMBLY Members have been busy hammering out the lumpy issue of the road network, but MLA and Chair of the Transport Advisory Committee Sharon Halford has warned there will be no extra works carried out this season.

On Tuesday MLAs were given a presentation and overview of the condition of the roads now, what will happen if the same level of funding continues as well as costs if there were to be immediate improvements made.

MLA Halford said it was agreed road maintenance could not continue as it was, but also that the road programme for this season would not be changed.

The Public Works Department would now calculate what is required in funding, including equipment and labour so that a programme to move forward can be budgeted for in the next financial year.

"We need to get everyone to understand where we will end up if we just carry on the way we are," MLA Halford told Penguin News.

Some of the roads have never been capped which would require a stone crusher for West Falklands and others are in such a state they will need to be rebuilt, she said.

"The reason we are where we are is because the decision to put the ferry in place and get rid of coastal shipping was made before the infrastructure was in place to deal with it."

Blacktopping the MPA road was also discussed and how this could be undertaken, over what time frame and also at what cost, said MLA Halford.

The Transport Advisory Committee meets on September 8 and includes agenda items prompted by letters from teachers who have concerns about the safety of some areas which staff have to traverse to carry out their work as well as a request from Saunders Island for assistance with tracks used for their tourist business and better facilities for working the Concordia Bay.

Titan to take up airbridge

AIR Titan is to take up the air-bridge flight as from this weekend as Air Seychelles makes its last journey from Brize Norton to the Falkland Islands under the current contract with the Ministry of Defence. Air Seychelles' final flight will be on Friday, whereafter it will return to its regular route between Mahe via Rome to London.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I WAS wondering where to start the diary when the answer was handed to me, not on a plate, but in a cardboard box collected in return for a green ticket in my post office box.

After flipping through the 24 items of mail I resisted the temptation to return and shoot the messenger; the individual who handed it to me was probably not guilty.

Unfortunately the mail, including bills, now overdue for payment, dated from July 19 when I left the Islands to the first week in August. As family members had been collecting mail in my absence and the green ticket only appeared today on my third visit to the Post Office since my return it is very mysterious. It is not so much the delayed mail, something to which we're accustomed, that I'm aggrieved by, but the damage to what I hoped was my reputation as a good and prompt payer.

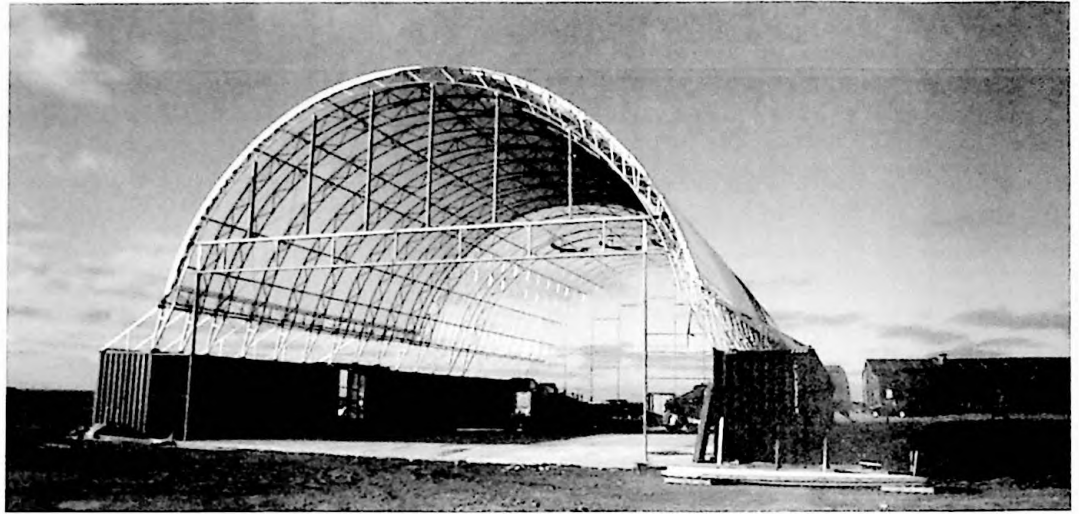

On a happier note we had a useful 'away day' today, Monday, with senior civil servants. First we thrashed out some ideas on various aspects of transport, FIGAS, the ferry and the expensive and endless problem of roads maintenance.

We should see further information and some costed proposals in the next few months. We then had a very comprehensive and useful presentation on potential civilianisation of some areas of work at MPA, and what role, if any, FIG may play in it.

Finally we shared with those who had not been party to vast amount of work done in recent months, the comprehensive plan for PR and related work. Much of this is already under way, but there is still much to be implemented.

Last week I had a substantial heap of papers to read, although I was unable to resist the temptation to keep up to date with e-mails while on holiday.

I'll have to find the last spot on the planet without internet for my holiday next year. Apart from Minerals Committee and the usual monthly round of meetings I also stood in for the Hon W Luxton on the Environment Committee, always interesting.

Shorty homes the helis

THE old harrier aircraft site next to Stanley Airport is fast becoming a new home for the two CHC puma helicopters used to service the oil rig Ocean Guardian.

Local builder Richard Short of Shorty's Building Services explained the steel trellis framing and plastic covering material was imported from Canada from a company that once specialised in green housing, but now in hangars.

"It isn't dissimilar to the original buildings that housed the harriers after the War and it's on the old harrier site."

The containers that flank the 12 metre high framework, and that the building was packed in for its journey, will eventually act as offices for the helicopter staff.

Asked if the construction with its plastic covering was not vulnerable to the high winds Richard said similar hangars had survived 28 years at Mount Pleasant and another was being used in the oil yard.

The hangar is 43 metres by 27 metres, and the only non resident involved in the construction is Canadian Bob, "whose speciality is stretching the covers," said Richard.

He expects the hangar to be finished in around three weeks.

Harriers at Stanley

After the 1982 war, the Royal Air Force took command of Stanley Airport and it was eventually extended and repaved, and renamed RAF Stanley.

As well as other aircraft, Harrier Jump Jets (1453 Flt) remained there to provide standby air defence until RAF Mount Pleasant was opened in 1985.

Bin your own

HOMES sited west of the Beaver Hangar are not entitled to refuse collection, and some new homeowners from that area, including Mink Park, have expressed dissatisfaction.

A meeting on the issue has, however, been planned between the Public Works Department and the contractor, Bonners Haulage.

Bonnie Curtis of Mink Park, West Stanley, only found out about the lack of a refuse collection service when ordering wheelie bins. She thought the situation unfortunate, the only option being to carry rubbish to the rubbish tip south of Stanley.

It was news to Natasha Elbakidze who is also soon to be a Mink Park resident. She said, "I'm quite shocked. I've seen the wheelie bin and that's not going to do for the amount of houses that are up there. It will end up with piles of rubbish outside of it. I really hope changes will be made."

Manfred Keenleyside of the Public Works Department said refuse collection was not undertaken for properties west of Beaver Hangar at present, due to low numbers, distance and disproportionate cost.

"Those properties west of Beaver Hangar do though attract a lower service charge - £228 this year as opposed to £426.

Bin service for West Stanley

"As there are additional properties being developed and some have already been occupied at Mink Park, we have placed a large wheelie bin near Beaver Hangar for those living beyond there to place their domestic waste in."

"We are also looking to agree a rate with the contractor for making collection as far as Mink Park."

Paul Bonner of Bonners Haulage told Penguin News, "It's very simple, our contract only extends as far as the Beaver Hangar but we are shortly going to have a meeting with FIG to discuss it."

Saints views on change sought

THE St Helena Land Development Control Plan (LDGP) has now been reviewed and is available for comment and public consultation. All areas of life on St Helena, from housing to heritage, will be influenced by land planning policies and Saints living overseas are invited to participate in the consultation process.

St Helena is evolving and so is the planning process, said a spokesperson from the LDGP.

"The planning system which influences the development of St Helena is changing. The LDGP provides a new approach to promoting and controlling change across the Island. It will place an emphasis on improved community involvement combined with a faster preparation period; a stronger evidence base; more focused content and improved quality and consistency."

Each week there will be weekly topics from the LDGP presented in the newspapers on St Helena and there will also be radio programmes on St FM that will be streamed online.

Questions and comments on the LDGP can be emailed to Christine Scipio-O'Dean at secretary@legallandlands.gov.sh or call (290) 2270. The LDGP document can also be viewed online at www.sainthelena.gov.sh

Chief Police Officer post permanent

EXECUTIVE Council (ExCo) agreed that a Chief Police Officer/Director of Emergency Services should be recruited on a permanent basis rather than a temporary post as is currently the case. MLA Dick Sawle said: "We felt that there was an over-riding need for continuity in a post of this importance." The post will be advertised locally and the job description was in the process of being reviewed by the Human Resources department this week.

Non-returnable deposits

GOVERNMENT will require a non returnable deposit on FIG building plots it has been decided by ExCo. If an individual goes ahead and builds, then the deposit counts as part of their payment. However, if the plot is returned then the deposit is retained. It is hoped that this will encourage people to plan better and avoid plots going to those who are not ready to build and who can hold a plot for months when someone else could have been developing it.

Credit card style licence

GOVERNMENT officials have been asked to look into the possibility of issuing plastic, credit-card size driving licences specifically for the Falkland Islands to go with the current paper licence. MLA Dick Sawle said many people had expressed the wish to have this at least as an option, in order to make our driving licence more acceptable abroad.

No census yet

THE census planned for later this year is postponed due to lack of staff in the policy department. It is now planned to conduct the census around April next year. As the previous census was conducted in April this should give a consistent result.

FIDC board

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Gavin Short is to replace MLA William Luxton as lead member on the Falkland Islands Development Corporation board with MLA Mike Summers taking on the second MLA position.

Loo priority

EXECUTIVE Council has requested the building of extra public lavatories be given some priority by the PWD, "as the Tourist Board project appeared to have stalled," MLA Jan Check.

Earwig winners in winter quiz

Roddy Cordeiro, Zoe Luxton, Dan Fowler and Ronnie Baird

AFTER a four year break the Falkland Islands Radio Winter Quiz once more graced our airwaves.

The quiz proved its worth, providing light hearted entertainment every Wednesday evening through the dark winter months.

The team "There was an earwig on my voting slip and it was the best candidate by far" (or The Earwigs as they were also known) was the overall winner of the competition - made up of Dan Fowler, Zoe Luxton, Roddy Cordeiro and their substitute player Adam Cockwell.

They fought a hard fight, and beat the runners up Meat and two Veg by one point in the final, which was broadcast last Wednesday.

Vibrant presenters Garry Tyrrell and Ronnie MacLennan Baird proved an entertaining addition to the show.

Falklands Radio would like to thank the pair for their contribution, and the sponsors of the programme for donating the prizes: the Malvina House Hotel for the meal for four, British International for the helicopter trip, and FITB for the trophies.

Refund for late tax charge

EMPLOYEES who have been charged for late filing of their tax returns, should not have had to pay as legislation was not in place to enforce a penalty.

Taxation Officer Karen Drysdale said anyone who had been charged is entitled to make a claim and would be refunded. She added however, that she did not believe there were many people who had been incorrectly charged.

In a recent paper to Executive Council Ms Drysdale said that on reviewing the Tax Office procedures for charging penalties, it had come to light penalties should not be applied to individuals who were late in filing their income tax returns and who are not required to submit accounts.

The Taxes Ordinance 1997 allows for penalties only to be charged under section 12(4) where an individual fails to submit their accounts (i.e. self-employed) with their income tax return by the due date.

Ms Drysdale said, "We have always applied penalties to all income tax returns that are filed late. There are no other provisions under section 12 which we can apply penalties for the late filing of income tax returns."

Executive Council agreed the proposed amendments to correct the discrepancy, making fines for all late returns legal which will be implemented from January 1, 2012.

In addition, penalties for late returns on income tax which have not been reviewed for several years are to be increased by a further £100 to £200 if the submission is more than three months late.

MLA Dick Sawle said another paper agreed would extend for a further year the tax exemptions for defence contractors' employees. "This will be reviewed before the year is up because if civilianisation is to succeed then there will have to be a level playing field in terms of taxation."

Another paper which was agreed, proposed to simplify and clarify a number of elements of the Taxes and MST Ordinance, for example by making winter fuel allowance tax exempt.

What is the best or worst piece of advice you have ever been given? If you're not in bed by ten come home. (From Mum, although I'm not sure if it's good or bad advice...)

Who would you most like to have a tot with? Bobbie Gentry - to find out just what was thrown off the Tallahatchie Bridge.

If you had a motto, what would it be? Oops, I didn't mean to

There's a Falklands has got talent competition, how would you audition? As the worst Welsh singer in the world, or the record for non-stop talking

What's the best book you have read recently? Lord of the Rings - there is so much in them you learn something new with every read

Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

Terriane or Krysteen Ormond - then there would be some interesting cocktails at GH receptions instead of just beer, wine or orange juice.

If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Iceland. When I was a kid I read a book on pony trekking there

What is your most embarrassing moment? Reversing into the only other vehicle on the old gravel patch outside Deano's - then having to tell Dad!

What would people be surprised to learn about you? I'm quite shy around people I don't know and hate public speaking

What is your happiest childhood memory? Anything that involved my horses or motorbike (it definitely wasn't getting my front teeth punched out by my brother)

Still in her 20s and fed up with all the Welsh jokes, Swansea born Sian recently left the Ag Dept and moved to FIMCo as Administration Officer, not thinking that she would still be dealing with mostly the same people. In the winter she can be spotted playing darts (usually badly) and in summer at the motocross track either on the number 63 bike or lap counting.

Doesn't have to be sheep to be agriculture corrects Tim

CAN I correct some name errors being used by Members of Legislative Assembly and the Falkland Islands Government (FIG).

Agriculture includes livestock farming and field scale arable crops be they wheat, potatoes, vegetables etc.

What is grown outside in fields worked with tractors etc at places like Fitzroy and Stanley Growers is agriculture.

The horticultural sector of agriculture normally describes protected cropping of salads and vegetables (greenhouses and poly-tunnels) and small intensive units of an acre or so of a wide range of mixed crops, which is the market gardening.

Just because it's not sheep does not mean it is not farming.

I welcome FIG's attention to increasing local food production. Focus needs to be on what can grow in our seasons and not to all grow the same products at the easy-to-grow period of the year.

That way you can go bust.

Success will be to grow most crops out of the normal season - that is where the demand is.

In a good year the Falklands are already virtually self-sufficient (local market) in potatoes, and, in season, for carrots, cabbage and swede etc. But we need them out of the easy season as well.

The re-introduction of the 40ft container service will assist in reducing some prices, depending on the port/country the service links to.

And this will be decided I guess by finding an international container line that does not also run into Argentina, and thus will not be liable to the blackmail threats Argentina put onto H.Sud and Maersk, making them drop the Falklands.

Some places are much less bureaucratic than others and some are cheaper than others for certain products. And the further the sailing time, the less the range of products that can survive the shipping time.

I wish South American Atlantic Services Ltd well and do not envy their task.

Brazil was a bureaucratic nightmare that was never really overcome, so we for instance still used Uruguay, but the shipping time from there to Brazil and to Stanley meant several products we used to get direct from Montevideo were no longer viable.

By far the least bureaucratic and most efficient country to ship from is Chile - but perhaps unlikely to fit the bill for international container links.

Falklands say farewell Steve

IT is with sadness we report the death of Steve Blenman on Thursday August 25, 2011.

Steve completed many tours with the British Forces both at Hillside Camp and Mount Pleasant in the late nineties and early 2000s. He made a great many friends here and the Falklands held a very special place in his heart.

Towards the end of last year Steve was diagnosed with an aggressive brain tumor and moved into St Catherine's hospice a short time ago where he was always surrounded by friends who travelled to visit him.

He will be laid to rest at St. Mary's Church in Banbury on Wednesday September 7 and it is at Steve's request that no black is to be worn.

As a fitting tribute perhaps everyone who fondly remembers Steve in the Islands could wear something bright during that day. Our thoughts of love go out to all his friends and especially those who have kept everyone up-to-date at this very sad time.

Stop destruction of countryside

I FEEL I must write and say something about the wanton destruction to our countryside, that has taken place in the last couple of years especially.

It will get worse, as many more young and not so young people think it is their right to destroy the land.

The countryside does not belong to the few who want to ruin it, it belongs to all of us. No one seems to care. Can't you see the harm that is being done? Soon there will be no hard green areas left. We haven't many to start with.

There are a few areas that will soon disappear; the banks along the road at Surf Bay are getting more ruined each day; the hard green area over at the north end of Surf Bay was ruined in one night, and Yorke Bay green, plus the sand dunes.

It's an absolute disgrace, the Lighthouse track or tracks have had their banks completely destroyed. This is going to leave the whole area a vast pond.

Canopus Hill is totally destroyed; the guns on Canopus Hill could have become a tourist attraction, along with the lighthouse.

Who wants to plough through mud and water to visit them? Have we no pride in our countryside?

When visiting other countries we don't expect to plough through mud and water to visit places of interest.

Some tourist have said to me, why are we allowing people to destroy the countryside? Yes, why? I don't object to people wanting to drive over the common. It is the only way to get to see lots of places. Many of the drivers are careful and considerate and it would be a pity if the many were stopped driving over the land, because of the few.

As for the horses, poor things, they are continually chased off their feeding ground. They just have to hear a motorbike and they are off. It must be terrifying for horses at night-time in those areas. They don't have a lot of good green areas to feed anyway. I don't think any more areas should be fenced off, just to stop the mud trackers going on them. The horses have a hard time as it is.

Wildlife is almost non-existent, even the geese are fewer. Once you could see the odd black-necked swan or some other rare bird on the ponds but not anymore. Even the small birds are fewer.

One thing I am amazed at, is that the vehicles are allowed to drive through the town completely covered in mud.

I am 76 years old and I have never seen the countryside in the state it is now. Let's do something about it now, before any more damage is done. It is a lovely place and worth looking after. We are lucky to live here.

Red tape and bull says Laurie

I REFER to your article 'Egging Down' PN 26 August 2011.

Of course less penguin eggs are being collected, there are a lot less people living in the Camp who eat them, you don't need a degree in biology to come to that conclusion. And to have a committee to consider that and indeed civil servants to process the nonsensical licensing project beggars belief.

In the spring of 1958 I was a shepherd at White Rock and the boss told me to collect seven hundred Gintoo eggs and hide them away from the rookery and cover them up until a tractor and trailer could come down from the settlement (Port Howard) to collect them for distribution amongst the families in the settlement, this was common practice on most farms in those days, but that was when common sense prevailed, now it seems to be red tape and bull*.

Your questions

Q Is it true that the PWD are planning to clear the drainage ditches along the sides of the Stanley/MPA road. Given the depth of these ditches and how they have contributed to several vehicle accidents, together with the fact that they rarely carry much water anyway, is this not an utter waste of public funds?

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside replied...

A Routine cleaning out of sections of the drainage ditches is planned to remove material which has built up so that the ditches are returned to their original level.

It is necessary to keep the road construction drained so that it does not lose structural strength and it is to help maintain this free drainage of the construction that the ditches are cleared, so that the bottom of the ditches stays below the base of the road (typically by 100mm), rather than necessarily relating to the size they may need to be to carry runoff during rainfall or snow melt.

Although this may go unnoticed by road users, buildup of material within the ditches is sometimes sufficient to close off the entrance or exit of cross drains under the road. It is incorrect to state that the ditches have contributed to several accidents, as vehicles should be driven on the carriageway and control of any vehicle must then have been lost before a ditch should feature in its travel path.

Carcass birds lay early eggs

SPRING has reached Carcass early with owner Rob McGill finding nests of Upland Goose eggs already.

On August 22, Rob found two nests containing two eggs and thought it was probably just a few odd ones. However two days later he found nests with six, seven and eight eggs which is as full as they get. "They just keep getting earlier and earlier each year for some reason," Rob told Penguin News.

SENIOR Agricultural Advisor Mac McArthur will finish his contract on November 11 this year it was confirmed at the Agricultural Advisory Committee on Thursday.

It was also noted that Andy Pollard has returned from his studies at Lincoln University in New Zealand, "having had excellent passes to gain a Diploma in Agricultural Science," said Director of Natural Resources John Barton.

Andy is running a pasture species, fertilizer and calcified seaweed research trial at Blue Beach Farm this spring and when this work is complete he will submit his thesis for his Masters degree.

Brian Aldridge, the Saladero farm manager will complete his contract on October 31.

New Agricultural Advisors Warren Landles and Helen Thoday have met about 65 per cent of farmers, said Mr Barton, "and visited a significant number of farms on both the West and East Islands."

EXECUTIVE Council has accepted Public Accounts Committee (PAC) recommendations in principle on Falkland Islands Government use of vehicles.

MLA Gavin Short explained it has been agreed that during the 2011/12 financial year, "the Director of Public Works in conjunction with the Chief Internal Auditor and Plant and Vehicle manager would develop a system to monitor vehicle fuel usage, investigate the options for vehicle maintenance and contracts and report on the feasibility and implications of encouraging greater use of private vehicles for Government business."

The Motion was passed at the most recent meeting of Legislative Assembly.

ASSEMBLY Members have asked government officers to look into the possibility of printing the gazette - the idea behind this is that those who subscribe would be able to receive a paper copy of the Gazette rather than the current electronic copy, making it simpler to read proposed legislation and other official documents.

Beef herd improvements

at the Agricultural Advisory Committee yesterday (Thursday).

With nine mature bulls plus weaner heifers and bulls, this currently accounts for more than 70 head of cattle at Saladero. In the spring this will increase by close to 40 calves. Consequently alternative grazing arrangements for the National Beef Herd cows will need to be sought.

The Director also noted that the farming community has been provided with a significant quantity of high quality Angus Stabilizer beef semen at significantly reduced cost.

He said eight herds across the Islands will be involved with the insemination of cows with Angus Stabilizer semen this coming joining, and a number of farmers will weigh the calves at birth, at weaning, and as yearlings, "so that the superior growth rate young stock can be selected to boost heifer numbers back into the breeding herds and provide high quality young bulls to significantly boost beef production across the Islands."

It is proposed that the AI programme for all the herds is overseen by Department of Agriculture staff in a similar way to the sheep AI/ET programme.

Buy new specialist vehicles not second hand say MLAs

SEVERAL Assembly Members were in agreement that specialist government vehicles should be purchased new on departmental recommendation rather than buying second hand in the future.

It would then be down to the Assembly to support the recommendation "rather than trying to do a bodge job," said MLA Emma Edwards.

The comments were prompted by a question posed by MLA Sharon Halford, asking for the total cost of the recently purchased fire engines for both Stanley and Stanley Airport, their ages when purchased, their life expectancy and how this would impact on the replacement programme for the Stanley appliances. She also asked what work was required to bring them up to full working order and when it was anticipated the capability test would be carried out.

MLA Gavin Short said the cost of both appliances was within the approved £230,000 which consisted of: £129,000 for Category 2 (Bremach Airport appliance) and £101,000 for the refurbished Mercedes (Stanley appliance).

The airport appliance was new and should provide 12 to 15 plus years of service if maintained and looked after, while the refurbished appliance was 20 years old when purchased and should provide 8-10 years.

He said there should be no impact on the future replacements for the Stanley appliances though this may be dependant on decisions in Executive Council (ExCo) and budget deliberations.

The Category 2 airport appliance is currently operational

MLA Short said the Mercedes Stanley appliance was not operational as new heavy duty rear suspension springs and a tank bladder were required and expected to arrive in September whereupon engineers from Fire Vehicle Services Ltd and a Bremach specialist dealer will arrive in the Islands to complete the repairs at their expense. The vehicle will then undertake a capability test whilst the engineers are present to ensure it is fit for purpose.

MLA Halford said it would appear the old machines have a better life expectancy than new ones, but she was pleased to hear work undertaken on the Stanley appliance would not be at government expense.

Whether or not BAS aircraft would have the necessary cover would be dependent on the capability test, said MLA Short while agreeing it was better to buy new than "inherit problems with machinery."

Chief Fire Officer Gardner Fiddes said, however, that when the appliances were purchased, cover for BAS aircraft was not included and they complied with the May 2008 ExCo decision that the existing category 2 appliances be replaced with another category 2 appliance. The ExCo paper stated that aircraft requiring a higher category of fire cover should no longer be allowed to operate at Stanley Airport.

A proposal for the replacement to be a category 3 appliance was rejected, by ExCo.

Jury still out on amendment bill

A JURY amendment Bill presented to Legislative Assembly on July 26, was halted as a result of concern that it needed closer examination before being passed by the House.

In the Falklands a person has the right to choose between a judge sitting alone, or a jury trial and the Bill presented a solutions to the perceived lack of jurors available for jury trials by extending the qualification of jury service and hence the pool of possible jurors.

Chief Executive Tim Thorogood noted: "There are situations in which it could be very difficult in practice to convene a jury that is as free as possible from prejudice or partiality, especially in a small community like this one. Even the perception of prejudice or partiality is a problem."

MLA Mike Summers raised the problem that in the current Juries Ordinance there wasn't a specific requirement or test in terms of sufficient command of the English language.

He explained, "When jurors are called there are opportunities for both the prosecution and the defence to examine those jurors to satisfy themselves that they are capable and appropriate people to hear that case. If as part of that process it becomes apparent that there is a lack of understanding of the English language then those jurors can be rejected by the prosecution and by the defence councils."

He noted that while there is a safeguard in place there is no test of the ordinance.

MLA Summers criticised the process saying: "I have serious misgivings about the process. This is an important issue dealing with the rights of people to a fair trial. It cannot be right that the principles of it being adopted, that were set out in the Executive Council Paper in the first instance, were not made public. And I had to protest to the Governor to get those issued in the first place.

"In the second place, there now appears to be a number of amendments coming to the House, which are quite substantial and not everybody has had the opportunity to review those and discuss them at length."

He said: "I don't think this has been properly handled. This is not a piece of legislation that needs to be rushed through."

It was eventually decided by the Assembly to cease the Bill at that point, and bring it back for a third reading at a later date.

The Bill also deals with a risk of inconsistent verdicts when more than one person is being charged at the same time with the same offence or connected offences.

Each of them has a separate right to choose whether to be tried by judge and jury or to be tried by a judge sitting alone. They may choose differently meaning two trials - one before a judge and jury and the other before a judge sitting alone.

The current ruling provides that the jury trial must be held first and that it must be completed before the trial with the judge sitting alone can begin, however the Chief Executive noted that in certain situations different verdicts might actually be contradictory (as opposed to simply different).

A new Clause in the Bill would allow the Judge to decide which is the most appropriate order to conduct the trials.

Tune in to MLA Sawle as he updates on Camp radio plans

ASSEMBLY Member Roger Edwards asked MLA Dick Sawle to provide an update with regard to Camp Radio. Are all relevant agreements in place; such as use of C&W masts, approved funding, a preferred contractor and use of SSVC frequencies and when can we expect work on the new service to be completed and come on line, he asked.

MLA Dick Sawle responded: Since completing the roll out of digital TV last year the FIG Department of Procurement and Efficiency has been taking forward the TV and Radio project to deliver enhancements to the FM radio network for this financial year 2011/12.

As per the digital TV service, SSVC is the preferred provider for the FM Network enhancement project.

The enhancements will see the replacement of life expired equipment by a more reliable distributed network infrastructure and the broadcasting of FIRS islands wide on FM.

There will also be the capability to distribute the BBC world service islands wide on FM and to extend FM coverage of the BFBS radio channels.

Some of the benefits of the new system will be:

1) Replacement of life expired equipment, bringing greater reliability

2) FIRS plus a second FM service covering the vast majority of the Islands plus extended coverage of the BFBS radio channels

3) Distributed resources with reduced dependency on a single, large isolated site such that any fault should have a more limited area of impact

4) Better monitoring and remote control for diagnosis

Current Status - SSVC and C&W have agreed the broad principles of site sharing and distribution and are working together to finalise the detail of the project. A total of nine sites have been identified, a mixture of C&W and MOD assets are involved:

The sites involved are:- Byron Heights, Green Hill, Leicester Hill, Mount Alice, North Arm, Sussex Mountains, Pleasant Peak, Mount Kent and Bombilla.

In conjunction with the recently upgraded facility at Sapper Hill, these will provide comprehensive coverage of the Islands for the FIRS network. Also, subject to final agreement with C&W on power consumption and equipment space, a second channel can be broadcast islands wide.

With the BBC World Service being the preferred choice for the second channel, provisional rights agreements have already been secured with them to broadcast on FM.

There are no plans for FIG to compete with either FM or MW coverage of the BBC World Service in the Stanley area, as there is already coverage broadcast under licence by KTV Ltd and assuming this equipment is in good order, coupled with the other proposed sites this will deliver equivalent coverage of the BBC World Service to the FIRS network.

Further, BFBS Radio covers a substantial part of the East Falkland, and there is some capacity to increase coverage in the West over and above FIRS and the BBC Worldwide service so that the BFBS services can be received as widely as possible.

Inevitably there may be some pockets on the Islands where not all of the services can be accessed. Where this is the case, smaller local transmission arrangements, subject to funding, will be considered in due course.

The overall frequency ranges for Islands wide coverage are currently being mapped as part of the on-going technical assessment.

Timetable - Design and sharing arrangements with C&W are targeted for completion over the next four weeks, following which equipment will be ordered to support a rolling installation programme starting late this calendar year. Completion will be by the early part of next calendar year 2012. Once installed as part of the rolling programme, broadcasting will commence sequentially area by area. As to which areas receive the service first - this is to be decided upon in the near future as part of the overall installation plan.

Budgets - The capital budget allocated in 2009/10 for TV and Radio continues to be used to fund this enhancement and at this present moment it is anticipated that this will be delivered on time and within budget. Precise details of costs are currently being negotiated and in order to release funding from the budget allocated, an Exco paper will be submitted in due course.

The Department of Procurement and Efficiency will continue to play a key part in coordinating the overall project. Further status up-dates will be released closer to the time when broadcasting equipment arrives on Island so that the installation can commence.

MLA Edwards thanked MLA Sawle for his detailed response but noted that a year ago Camp residents had been assured provision was imminent. He asked MLA Sawle if he would agree it was already "effectively a year late" and that it would be better to obtain full coverage of the Islands as was originally agreed rather than a majority.

MLA Sawle said he could not give assurance of full coverage because there was a technical assessment ongoing, as there had been for some time. He said although there was a map of where coverage was expected, but until transmission was started using the new equipment it would not be possible to ascertain if it reached every possible pocket.

"It is expected that all settlements will be able to receive coverage, but until it actually happens, it's impossible to say," he said.

MLA Sharon Halford agreed the project was a year behind. She said that while MLA Sawle may not have made assurances, the year was up, and assurances had been given by the Director of Procurement and Efficiency, who had said the equipment would be ordered and in place in March/April of last year, and then October of this year, "so we are well behind," she concluded.

MLA Sawle maintained the promise he had made was that, "we would get the radio service up and running as soon as possible; that was in November 2009 and was achieved with the old equipment," he said.

Educated question prompts debate

A QUESTION regarding future plans for further education prompted debate in the Legislative Assembly on Friday.

MLA Sharon Halford asked whether or not the Education Department was going to consider the possibility of changing the way students were funded in further education overseas or look to fully fund those training for skills needed in the Islands which are currently being filled by migrant workers and giving less funding for skills not currently needed in the Islands; and had any thought been given to treating some of the above funding as a loan which could be written off against time spent working in their chosen field in the Islands after qualification.

Responding to the question MLA Jan Cheek confirmed that the Director of Health and Education was working on a strategic plan for further and higher education that supports lifelong learning in the community and the proposals were currently planned to go before Exco in November and in time for the next round of budget submissions.

MLA Cheek said funding options would be an integral element of the proposed strategic plan and that the foreseeable knowledge, skills and experience required by the Falkland Islands would also be inherently considered. The possibility of a loan system to assist funding would be one element of the proposed paper.

MLA Halford said she supported the past work of the education department but with funding as it was there was a need to look at targeting areas where expertise was needed and make students aware of this. She said she would hate to see children finish their studies and be in debt, adding that there must be a way to do this on a sliding scale.

MLA Summers said there were benefits in education whether studying a subject applicable to the Islands or otherwise and not everyone was equipped to do "the things we need here."

"There's a strong argument that says we should have a system of additional funding or bursaries or scholarships that might exceed 100 per cent funding and other subjects, less necessary subjects, receive less," he said, adding that there was a lot of merit in differential funding, but it needed to be set out carefully so as not to disadvantage those who may want to study less applicable subjects.

MLA Dick Sawle, however said he believed education was to the benefit of the individual primarily, and secondly to the society. He said there was a need to be wary of targeting education funding to simply fill holes "that we have in our Islands workforce" and there was a great danger in saying what was needed now as that would change in the future.

MLA Mike Summers however disagreed with that theory: "It's my belief that the rights of the individual never supersede the rights of the community as a whole," he said, adding that it was important to think about it and consider the context in future discussions.

Readers, what are your views on further education funding?

Headteacher Tom Hill

Head teacher Tom happy to be here

NEW Infant Junior School Head teacher Tom Hill arrived in the Falklands on Monday August 22.

Tom is accompanied by his wife Rebecca and sons Sam (8) and George (5).

He told Penguin News, "We were led to believe the weather wasn't very good but it's been a delightful sunny place since we've been here."

"The school is really nice; an impressive building and very well equipped."

"Everyone has been so kind and helpful since we arrived."

4000 fans for FITB facebook page

THE official Facebook page for the Falkland Islands has attracted 4000 fans in the two years since its launch in September 2009.

The page was created to increase awareness of the Falklands as a holiday destination by generating discussion and sharing memories and photographs.

Layla Crowie, Tourism Clerk and Facebook monitor says "I have only been part of the Tourist Board team since January but in the short time I have been monitoring our Facebook page we have managed to increase our fan base by 500 fans through photo themes and interactive questions."

"It is fantastic to see this sort of growth occurring and to reach the 4000 fan mark is just remarkable."

In July of this year the Tourist Board ran a Facebook Questions survey which was hugely successful with a total of 1,467 people voting and helped to ascertain what it is about the Falkland Islands that appeals to so many around the world.

"As was expected the Falklands nature came out on top as the biggest draw.

One of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board's Facebook objectives was to showcase the Falkland Islands to an audience around the world by allowing fans to publish their photos.

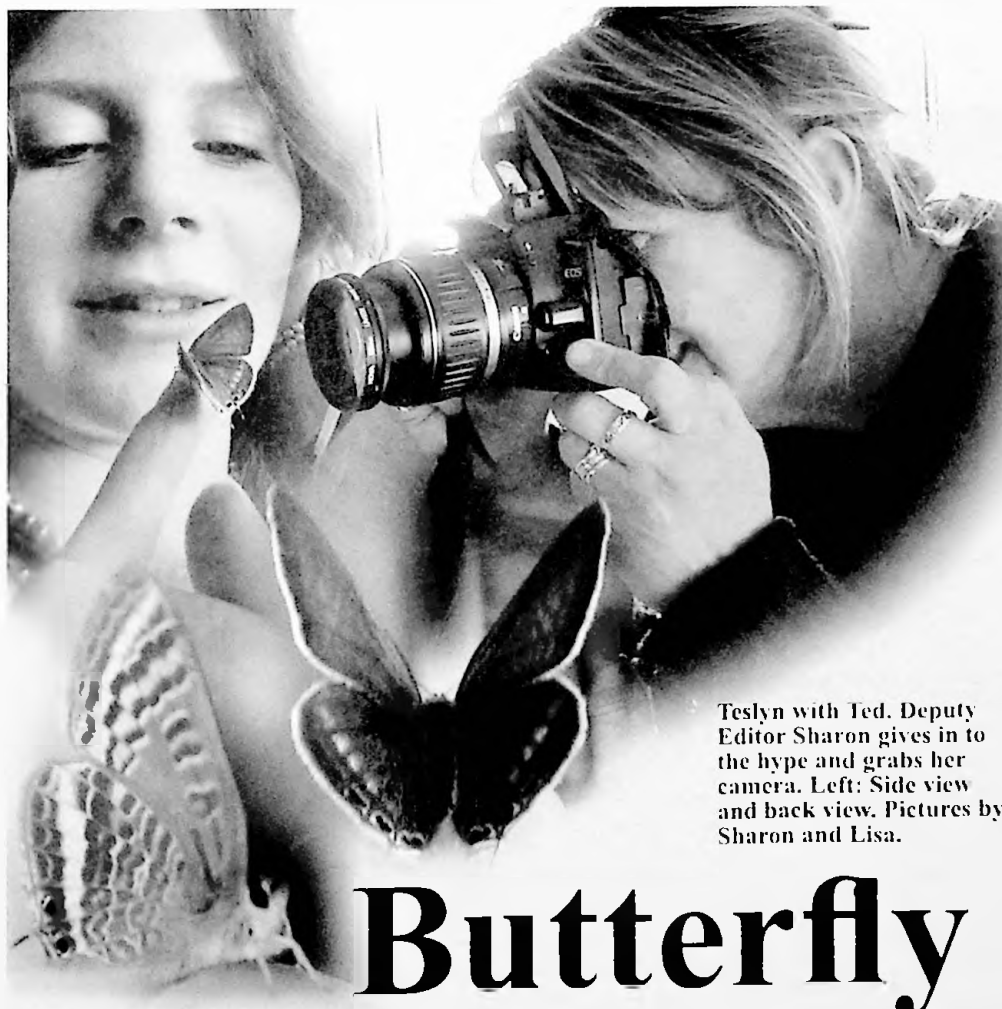

This has proved incredibly successful with 'Photo Themes' being chosen almost every month and dozens of fans sharing their photos and their memories.

"Over 1200 images have been uploaded onto the page since it began.

"The world is becoming digitized so quickly and having the Falkland Islands on Facebook is a fast, easy way to promote the Falklands at very little cost," concluded Layla.

The next meeting of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board will take place on September 8, with a Tourism Strategy meeting for members scheduled for the day before at 5pm at the Chamber of Commerce.

COURTESY of Penguin News journalist Teslyn Barkman, newspaper staff were in a state of high distraction last week after an introduction to an exotic foreign visitor.

Some weeks ago Teslyn purchased a pack of sugar snap peas from the West Store. Having eaten most of the pack she opened the final pod to find a relatively large caterpillar. Teslyn placed the caterpillar on a piece of broccoli in a jar with the lid off and then left it alone.

A few weeks later, on checking the caterpillar she discovered it had turned into an attractive butterfly.

The little creature - eventually named Ted - was carried to the office where an overexcited staff spent some time admiring it, and googling its origins.

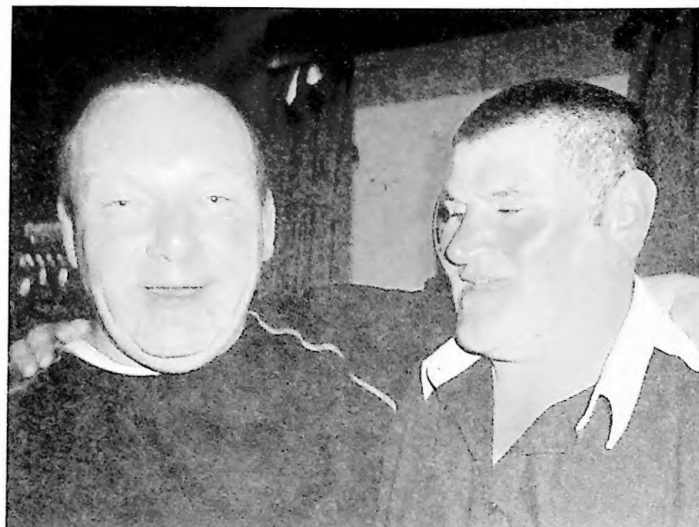

It was eventually concluded the butterfly was a Pea blue or Longtailed blue.

The species (Lampides boeticus) is a small butterfly found in Europe, Africa, South and Southeast Asia, and Australia that belongs to the Lycaenids or gossamer-winged family.

Ted has been carefully fed on home-made nectar (sugar dissolved in water) and is living above the radiator on the window.

Invasive species experts can be assured that Ted will not be allowed to leave the office.

Quality darts as top players fight it out

As the rain hammered down on a very soggy Saturday, the roaring open grate and anticipation of Stanley's top men and women darts players inside the Globe Tavern made for a cosy atmosphere.

Games kicked off soon after 2pm in the Globe 32/16 tournament organised by Willie Harvey.

Early games in the mens competition in which the top 32 players from the league compete, witnessed some very interesting games as Jimmy Curtis beat his team mate Richard Bonner 3-1 before crashing out to Graeme 'Chubbs' Hay in the next round. Boy Miranda was too good for Kevin Clapp winning 3-0 and one of the big clashes of the day was Peter Goss against Toot Ford with Toot coming out on top 3-0.

In the second round Rag Macaskill lost 3-2 in a hard fought battle against Boy Miranda and Toot Ford swept aside Steve Watt 3-1. Steve John beat his team mate Michael Goss also 3-1 and Jeremy Poncet earned a hard fought victory over Boyley Short 3-2.

Shane Blackley proved to be too good for Ewen Bonner winning 3-0, Jonny Ford beat Phil Kearney 3-1 and Angus Macaskill beat James Lang 3-1.

Into the quarter-finals and Chubbs Hay ended Boy Miranda's good run winning 3-0 and Steve John gave Toot Ford a run for his money but lost 3-2. An on form Shane Blackley had a hard fought battle against Jeremy Poncet winning 3-2 and Angus Macaskill cruised past Jonny Ford 3-0. In the semi-finals Toot Ford and team mate Chubbs Hay winning put on an excellent display of darts with scores of 120 and 140 being the norm and keeping the large crowd enthralled. Toot took the match 4-2 with both players receiving appreciative applause, while Shane Blackley bit the dust losing 4-1 to Angus Macaskill. Toot Ford held on to his form in the final, retaining victory with a 5-2 win over Angus.

In the ladies competition, 16 women competed for the title with Ann Murphy won against Gandy Blackley 2-1, Lucinda Lowe beat team mate Jo Newton 2-0, Natalie Smith lost 2-1 to Maggie Goss, Michelle Minnell beat Jane Clement in a hard fought battle 2-1 and Teresa Clifton won her game against Sharon Jaffray. Joanne Minnell-Goodwin was too good for Lizzy Newton winning 2-0, and reigning champion Lisa Jaffray started the defence of her title with a 2-1 victory over Brenda Bernstein, while Jackie Thomas cruised past Cherry Robson 2-0.

In the quarter-finals Ann Murphy began to show her form against Lucinda Lowe beating her 2-0, and Maggie Goss's hard fought victory over Michelle Minnell went right down to the wire 2-1. Teresa Clifton's hopes of winning the tournament were crushed when she played Joanne Goodwin losing 2-0, and Lisa Jaffray was next to crash out losing 2-1 to Jackie Thomas.

In the semi-finals Ann Murphy had a tough game with Maggie Goss with Ann coming out on top 3-2 and the other semi saw Joanne over come Jackie Thomas with a 3-1 victory.

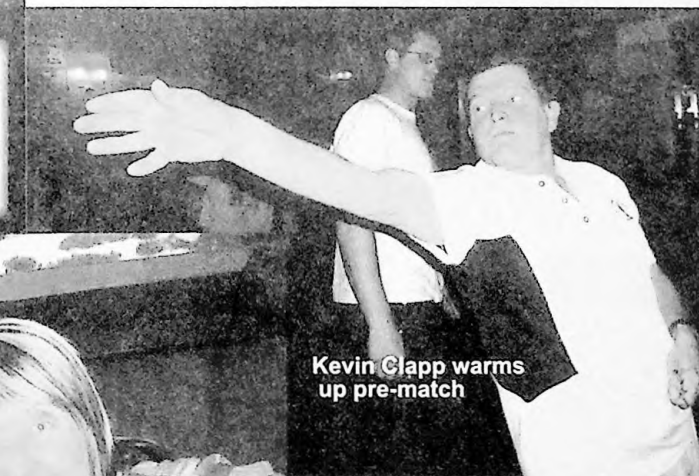

The final began with the crowd initially supporting their favourite and ended with great roars for each player as they stepped up to take their shots in a game which showcased the high standard of women's darts in the Islands. As it went leg for leg the match could have went either way but experience came out on top with Ann winning with a well deserved 4-3 final score. The day was rounded off with any remaining excess energy well and truly burned off on the dance floor.

Falkland including the cross sound ferry man operational area

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The EMI has finally stabilised this week shifting by only 1 cent to A$1,264 AU c/kg (805GB p/kg). The merino fleece prices have stabilised but surprisingly the cross bred fleeces have commanded more of a price shift. Since the winter recess prices for Merino fleeces have typically fallen by between 3 and 5%, whereas crossbred values have increased by more than 5%. Question marks still remain over the potential strength of demand in the months ahead. Wool prices continue to look dear compared with those for other fibres. The gap between cotton and wool is widening which may put pressure on manufacturers when decision making. Uruguay is facing its smallest clip in over a hundred years and the 2011/2012 season's wool production is estimated to be limited to 32 million kilos. The clip this year will come from 9.5 million sheep, a couple of decades ago Uruguay's flock was more than 25 million. The country is hoping that this year will be the lowest clip as through a National Strategic Plan to build sheep numbers and increase lamb production.

Kids' Keva says bye to Jelly Tots

AFTER nineteen years dedicated service to children's play group Jelly Tots, Keva Hansen said goodbye this week.

Keva told Penguin News, "I'll miss the children but I expect I will pop back to see them."

Preparing snacks, setting out toys, making tea and coffee and tidying up afterwards has been Keva's undertaking over almost two decades.

"I would have stayed the whole 20 years but I'm getting a bit old and the hall is a bit cold," she said.

On Tuesday's session of Jelly Tots Keva was presented with a picture and a cake for "nineteen years of fantastic and unwavering service," said Jo Turner on behalf of the committee.

Rosie King, one of the founders of Jelly Tots 21 years ago said, "When we first began we used to do it ourselves and it was getting really busy. My sister and I knew our children would soon be off to school so we decided to pay someone to do it instead and that's when Keva came along. It was so much easier having Keva there because there were up to 52 children those days when they didn't start school until nearly five years old.

"Keva was just excellent with kids, she had right heart for that job."

Come the revolution?

PERTURBED by a criticism of the Falkland Islands flag Ginge Davis of Stanley presented Penguin News with the above suggestions for a new one. Red, white and blue were the obvious colours said Ginge, representing as they do to the Falkland Islands 'democracy', while a black browed albatross, indigenous to the Falklands, would add character and ownership.

The alternative flag includes the second largest star in the galaxy found directly over the Falklands - Canopus - a star that traditionally was a source of navigation for mariners.

Players shake hands after the match

A close match for the Stanley Cup

PENGUINS and Oilers met for the final game of (not quite the...) Stanley Cup on Sunday. Oilers had the only win so far with the other game last week ending in a draw so Penguins needed a win to keep their Cup ambitions.

Both teams had clearly warmed up well and were taking controlled on target shots from the beginning but over ten minutes passed without either side scoring. Kyran Evans was frustrated at missing an opportunity to put Penguins in the lead and was sent off for two minutes after dangerously swinging and slamming his stick.

A man down Roy Shepherd struck in a goal for Penguins but was followed soon after by Ian France for Oilers to leave the score one all at the half-time break.

The second half started with Gordon Lennie putting Oilers ahead but Duane Evans soon levelled the score. Kyran was next to score finally sneaking the puck past Stuey Duncan in Oilers goal. Minutes later the scores levelled again with Grant Budd getting one back for Oilers. With everything to play for Penguins would lose their Cup chances if the game ended as a draw. Kevin Ross flicked in a goal ending the game Oilers three, Penguins four.

Another 22 minutes were put on the clock. It was decided at the start of the match that should Penguins win the game would run into overtime until a 'golden goal' was scored, this led to the match becoming the longest ever played in Falklands Dek Hockey. Each team had a lot of players to substitute, Oilers were managing their time well but the Penguins favoured a few key players to play longer, a tactic that had worked in the past, but they were starting to tire. Shot after shot was ringing up and down the sports hall but neither side's goalie would relent. In the end it was Grant who saw the opportunity and took a run through Penguins defence, the shot hit the net and Oilers won the Stanley Cup and with plenty of celebration to appreciate how hard they had to work for it.

There is going to be a referendum on 3 November 2011

You will be asked this question:

DO YOU WANT A SINGLE CONSTITUENCY
FOR THE WHOLE OF THE ISLANDS?

If you want a single constituency for the whole of the Islands: vote "YES"

If you want separate constituencies for Camp and Stanley: vote "NO"

How is the Assembly elected now?

There are two constituencies in the Islands:

- Camp, which elects 3 members to the Legislative Assembly
- Stanley, which elects 5 members to the Legislative Assembly

On 2 September 2011 there were 262 voters in Camp and 1315 in Stanley.

So, having these two constituencies means that there is:

- one member for every 87 voters in Camp
- one member for every 263 voters in Stanley

Single Constituency Bill

The Single Constituency Bill would amend the Constitution to replace the two constituencies with a single constituency. If it becomes law, voters throughout the Islands would elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

That would give everyone (in Camp and in Stanley) more choice about who to vote for. However, it might mean that none of the 8 members of the Legislative Assembly comes from Camp or that none of them come from Stanley.

The Legislative Assembly can only pass the Bill if two-thirds or more of those voting in Camp and two-thirds or more of those voting in Stanley support the Bill by voting "Yes". If that happens (and only if that happens), there could be a single constituency to elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

If a third or more of those voting in Camp or a third or more of those voting in Stanley oppose the Bill by voting "No", the Bill cannot be passed and the two constituencies will stay separate.

The Single Constituency Bill has been published in the Falkland Islands Gazette. If you want a copy of the Bill, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

What about the voting system?

In 2001, the referendum was not just about whether or not there should be a single constituency but also about a voting system for elections.

To keep things simpler this time, the referendum on 3 November 2011 is only about whether there should be a single constituency.

What happens next?

The referendum will be held on 3 November 2011. Information about when and where to vote will be announced nearer the time.

If you are registered to vote, you will be able to vote in the referendum.

If you are entitled to vote but are not registered, you should register to make sure that you can have your say on the issue.

If you want to check whether or not you are registered to vote or if you have any queries about registering to vote, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

A blast from the past

Eleven years ago...

At least 20 farms confirm their intention to supply wool to a fine wool pool set up to capitalise on the increasing premiums paid for wool finer than 20.5 micron. The idea proposed by wool advisor Doug Cartridge was discussed prior to and during Farmers Week and it is anticipated more will join once the process has been formalised.

At a Development Corporation Board meeting it is recommended the board release £25,000 for a portable toilet block to cope with the increasing number of tourists. Sites recommended are Volunteer Point, Gypsy Cove and the Darwin war cemetery.

The Development Corporation is to be formally integrated with the Department of Agriculture, "...in those functions where a shared mission and objectives can be obtained," while Falkland Landholdings will become a statutory corporation and share a common board with the two other organisations.

The decision follows a number of proposals on ways to, "improve the delivery of economic development in the Islands," which were submitted for public scrutiny in March 1999.

Councillors are divided in a four/four split over the intended implementation of a limited one way road system in Stanley. Executive Councillors Richard Cockwell, Jan Cheek and Sharon Halford are in favour of the system and agree to introduce for a six month trial, a one way system running clockwise along John Street, Barrack Street and Ross Road and including St Mary's Walk. Cllr Bill Luxton also favours the system, but Cllr Lewis Clifton says it is a "half baked idea" and won't get his support. Because it involves a change in law it is to be presented to a meeting of Legislative Council in the form of a Bill.

A total of £40,000 is released by the Development Corporation in an attempt to build up the Islands number of self catering establishments under the Self-catering Property Improvement Grant Scheme.

The process of organic certification gets underway with FIDC allocating £30,000 to install an organic certification system for the Falklands.

Councillor John Birmingham in Legislative Council, strongly condemns the spending of up to £200,000 of tax payers money on the importation of reindeer, "just because some short term staff feel it is a good idea." However Cllr Jan Cheek responded by saying, "we can't encourage diversification on the one hand and try and stifle every experiment on the other."

Difficulty in calling the Falklands is, "not due to any problems in the Falkland Islands network or a lack of international capacity," say Cable and Wireless after complaints are made.

Seven years ago...

Falklands Conservation receives a massive boost in the form of a grant of more than £100,000 from the UK Darwin Initiative.

The money will allow the charity to undertake a three year project on invertebrates, an aspect of Falklands wildlife widely ignored in the past.

Cable and Wireless announces the appointment of Rick Hall as Chief Executive Officer for the Falklands.

Parents are in favour of school children breaking up closer to Christmas for their summer break, say the Education Board. Proposals to amend holiday dates will now be discussed with the Attorney General and then Executive Council.

A new Broadcasting Bill is to be forwarded to Legislative Council making it an offence to use an unauthorised satellite broadcast decoder. Acting Governor Harriet Hall said that broadly speaking this means a decoder which is being used without being paid for, adding, "it is important to prevent this for copyright reasons among others." The Bill does not grant a monopoly on provision of decoders to any one company, she said.

Executive Council decides to reduce the cut-off age for child allowance from 19 to 17 and in addition the allowance is only to be paid to the children of Permanent Residence or Status Holders who are subject to the tax regime.

A team from the Falkland Islands Defence Force fights off stiff competition from 25 full-time military teams to take the top position in a March and Shoot competition hosted at Mount Pleasant. Major Peter Biggs, Privates Stuart Doyle and Craig Paice and Corporal Tom Blake ran 20 kms carrying 29 pounds of equipment in the fastest time and gain third in the shooting competition to secure top place overall.

A joint Falklands/Argentine survey cruise studying Southern Blue Whiting is underway aboard the Falklands Fishery Patrol vessel Dorada. Joint surveys haven't been carried out on an annual basis since September 1994.

The Falklands cricket team cancels a trip to Santiago to play in the South America Cricket Championships after a complaint is lodged by Argentina which causes the Chilean Cricket Association to withdraw its invitation.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police said a large number of both legal and illegal weapons were handed in during their August amnesty, adding that all items will be disposed of correctly.

DAP Airways plan 15 air cruises to Antarctica between November and March totalling 700 visitors. Last season 12 flights carried 400 visitors to the area.

Emma loses tourism but denies opposition

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Emma Edwards has been removed from the Falkland Islands Tourist Board, of which she was Chair, and the portfolio transferred to MLA Mike Summers.

A statement from Gilbert House, supported by six of her colleagues, this week cited her as having, "deep reservations" about certain aspects of the Tourism Development Strategy which is a formal government policy, adding, she was "quite clearly opposed to official policy in some areas."

MLA Edwards denies this however, saying she had not opposed the agreed policy, but had, "questioned the due process and the dissemination of information."

The government statement said: "The tourism portfolio holder is an elected Member whose duty is to carry out agreed policy. The Hon Emma Edwards' fundamental opposition to some areas of the policy has led to her position becoming untenable."

It added, "If any Member does hold deeply opposing views to any approved Falkland Islands Government policy, then we would not expect that Member to continue in a post whose role is to promote and further those aims."

MLA Edwards said, she agreed that a Tourism Strategy was agreed by Executive Council, but viewed this as a "working document open to refinement with the time lines and execution of the policy not set in stone."

"As an individual member I am entitled to hold an opinion and I am entitled to have reservations upon the timing and implementation of any matter still to be finalised. I have not opposed the agreed policy."

"However, I have voiced concerns over how one particular tourist project should be moved forward. I have not in any way attempted to obstruct a fully considered and agreed government enactment, but have questioned the due process and the dissemination of information."

"As the portfolio holder I believed it was my duty to ensure that all parties with a stake in the process needed to be informed of what was going on."

MLA Edwards also condemned how she was removed, saying it was carried out "behind closed doors."

Although the FIG statement suggested she chose not to be part of the process, MLA Edwards said: "I was offered a meeting with MLAs retrospectively. However, the timings of the meetings offered clashed with other commitments, and a meeting time I proposed was not suitable either."

MLA Edwards said she had still not met with her fellow MLAs at the time of their press release on Thursday.

Darren to take Falklands face to the world

Darren Christie

DARREN Christie has been awarded the newly created post of Public Relations and Media Manager for the Falkland Islands Government.

Mr Christie will manage public relations, media and events both in the Falkland Islands and across the world.

On announcing the appointment, the Chief Executive Dr Tim Thorogood said: "Darren has been appointed after a strong performance in the selection process which had a number of very capable candidates."

"Alongside his existing experience in media relations for the South Georgia Government, Darren brings excellent insights and ideas to the public relations challenges facing the Islands. He will enable us to achieve a much more pro-active approach in getting our message across to key international audiences."

On news of his appointment, Mr Christie said:

"I look forward to working with the local community. Members of the Legislative Assembly and colleagues as we work together to help the world see our home and society as we know it to be: democratic, self-sufficient and resourceful."

Mr Christie will assume his new post before the end of the year.

Mr Christie first arrived in the Islands in 2001, and joins the Falkland Island Government after five years working for the Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands.

Strategy will respond to industry needs

AN air link between the Falklands and Miami, and a master plan for the Stanley waterfront are just two of many tactics aimed at achieving the Tourism Strategy's six main objectives.

The objectives include retaining larger cruise vessels at historic volumes and increasing tourist spend, increasing frequency and stay of smaller vessels through passenger exchanges and routing changes, attracting more affluent tourists, improving facilities including accommodation and air and sea gateways, increasing the level of domestic tourism and attracting private investment in facilities.

At a presentation on Thursday Tourism Manager Paul Trowell said the Islands must respond to the "wants and needs of the industry."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

If I have a job understanding an issue I find the easiest way to sort it out is to speak to the relevant department or industry and request the "dummies guide." It saves time, and more importantly, it saves me the embarrassment of making sweeping statements about something about which I may have got the wrong end of the stick. I'm not saying I won't ever slip up again - that would be asking for trouble - but when the occasion arises, I expect and accept, that I will be promptly corrected.

With this in mind I have to say that with regard to MLA Jan Cheek's regular and apparently uninformed remarks about cruise ship days clashing, (Assembly Diary page 4) clearly the people in that particular industry have been far too polite to present said "dummies guide."

After all, the ships took up to two years in advance they are not interested in our petty little, 'not able to cope with two ships problems' and if they can't arrive on the date they have set in their diaries they won't come at all - end of story.

I discovered this many years ago when I tried to suggest in a motherly, 'I'm older than you so I know better,' fashion to my tourism coordinator daughter that it would be much better for everyone and make her job less stressful, if she could persuade her employers to arrange for the ships to come in on different days.

The wrath with which she delivered her explanation which fell just short of a power point presentation, left me in no doubt at all that I'd been a very silly mummy indeed, and with the intricacies of the cruise ship industry indelibly burned on my brain I have cringed every time someone else was silly enough to make the same sweeping statement.

Just as irritating is the idea that these powerful and affluent companies should dance to the tune of a tiny port whose government has not even managed within the last decade to come up with a plan to cope with the effluence that each cruise ship day brings.

But thankfully the need for toilets is no longer the responsibility of the Tourist Board - such a relief. So with this unwelcome hindrance as well the chair of the board conveniently removed, we expect to see great things in the form of an air link, the waterfront developed beyond recognition and if we can possibly stretch to it, a safe landing stage for these valuable and welcome visitors to take their first steps on our Islands in the not too distant future.

FIG's donation leaves 'bad taste'

SAMA (82) Chair Gary Clement MBE is disappointed with the Falkland Islands Government's (FIG) contribution towards a Falklands memorial planned for the UK National Memorial Arboretum.

£3,794.55 was donated to SAMA by those people who chose to donate 100 per cent of their holiday credits, and the Treasury has now confirmed that £25,500 reverted to the central fund from the fund which was closed at the end of June.

Those funds have not been earmarked for any particular project, MLAs have confirmed.

FIG has also made a donation of £3,000 towards a Falklands Memorial at the National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire to honour the South Atlantic Task Force and remember those who gave their lives.

MLA Dick Sawle said the original funding request was for an additional £5,000 to the £10,000 that FIG usually contributes.

SAMA Chairman Gary Clement MBE, however, is disappointed with the government's offering.

Mr Clement said in the past government had made an annual contribution of £15,000 to military charities, which was paid to SAMA to distribute accordingly. During the budget cuts a few years ago SAMA suggested a cut of £5,000, as the charity felt it held sufficient funds to cover their requirements during those quiet years.

He said, "But now we have the 30th anniversary on the horizon and the memorial that is to be built in the UK."

Mr Clement said he had explained to MLAs the memorial would display the names of the three local people killed in the War, as their names were currently not shown on any memorials in the National Arboretum.

"We asked for the £15,000 to be reinstated this year so we could make a donation of £6,000 towards the £62,000 the memorial is going to cost.

"I am told that due to the fact that SAMA received donations from people with their holiday credits, government decided to only give £3,000 towards this memorial."

Mr Clement said that to him this had left a "bad taste" as he was sure people had given their holiday credits to fund returning veterans and family members of which there were a lot to deal with next year.

The 30th anniversary was viewed as the last year of large returning groups, he said.

"I think when the invited MLA stands there amongst possibly hundreds of veterans and grieving families in May next year it will be difficult for them to say - Oh yes, and by the way we gave less than five per cent toward the building of this memorial, but it's very nice isn't it."

Drink drivers banned

THREE young Stanley men were banned from driving and fined in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday after they admitted drink driving.

James Earl Hamilton Curtis (19) was stopped on Ross Road in the early hours of August 27 and a breathalyser test gave a reading of 74 micrograms per 100mls of breath. He was fined £500 and disqualified from driving for 18 months.

Marc Anthony Courtney (19) was fined £400 and banned from driving for 12 months after he admitted drink driving on Fitzroy Road at 3am on August 28. Mr Courtney gave a lower reading of 60mgs of alcohol per 100mls of breath.

Bradley Gerard Roberts (20) was discovered to have 102mgs per 100mls of breath after he caused damage to a fence and building on Philomel Street and over turned his vehicle on September 3.

He was fined £750 and banned from driving for 21 months.

All three offenders were ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

New building regs a step too far

PROPOSED changes to current building regulations have raised serious concerns from tradespeople who feel they could unnecessarily make building in the Falklands even more expensive and difficult than it is now.

The controversial changes proposed apply to both Stanley and Camp and include the regulation of installation and commissioning of heating boilers, quality and quantity of glazing, minimum insulation requirements and definitions of conservatories, porches and extensions among many others.

Andy Brownlee MBE said not many of the proposals were appropriate and a few would be, "very wrong to impose on the Falklands."

He commended the department for their work over the past 10-15 years which had resulted in a vast array of building improvements and builder best practise being adopted, but he said, "Many of the proposals are a step too far and unnecessary."

Mr Brownlee particularly objected to the proposal that every boiler installation is undertaken or at least checked and commissioned by a person with an internationally recognised qualification.

"The Falklands' people are a very self-reliant and resourceful breed and many can turn their hand very effectively to just about anything; to say that they need a piece of paper to service or install their central heating boiler when many have been doing it safely and successfully for decades is absurd and unnecessary red tape," he said.

Self taught builder and local business man Richard Short was dismayed at the implications of some aspects of the proposed amendments, particularly the installation and commissioning of boilers.

"Where does it all stop? This could easily escalate outside the Islands resources," he told Penguin News.

He said Islanders were a resourceful bunch but the way things were going they would soon not be allowed to build their own house or even work on site because they weren't qualified.

"Do we want to make our kids believe they need a string of letters behind their name to work? Very soon we'll end up with a community that really believes they can't do anything for themselves," he said.

Jimmy Moffatt of the home improvement retail outlet Lifestyles which also supplies and manufactures windows disagreed with the proportion of glazing recommended for conservatories and porches.

"Due to the high solar gain we experience in the Falkland Islands, a glazed roof in a conservatory makes the room cold in winter and too hot to use in summer."

The other changes he disagreed with were mainly to do with over complication of issues that were not a real problem, only perceived, he said.

"The old adage 'if it ain't broke, why fix it' comes to mind. We have enough bureaucratic legislation enforced on the population that need not be. We live in the Falkland Islands, not the UK. Just because we want to stay British, doesn't mean we have to live like them," was his summing up of the situation.

Public consultation to amend building regulations was recently extended to give interested parties time to send their views to the Environmental Planning Department.

Andy takes the Ag reins

ISLANDER Andrew Pollard will succeed Mac McArthur as Senior Agricultural Adviser the Falkland Islands Government's Department of Natural Resources announced this week.

As well as being senior adviser the post also involves being Head of Service for the Agricultural unit, said Director of Natural Resources John Barton.

Andrew who will pick up the reins in early November said: "I am very excited to be appointed to this post, particularly at a time when there is real optimism and ambition to develop amongst the farming community. With the highly skilled team alongside me, I look forward to keeping the momentum moving forward."

He added that he was very keen to "maintain the good working relations with farmers that we've been building over the years."

Andrew has a broad agricultural background and has specialised in agronomy.

Mr Barton said, "Since attending Seale-Hayne Agricultural College in the UK, Andrew has some 10 years of working in Falklands agriculture. Recently he refreshed his knowledge through undertaking a postgraduate diploma in agricultural science at Lincoln University in New Zealand, and is working towards a Masters degree."

Andrew Pollard

Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) with the agricultural portfolio Mike Summers commented "The outlook for Falklands agriculture is positive with opportunities in meat and wool production. The Department of Agriculture has a significant contribution to make in developing these opportunities and improving farm profitability. It is pleasing to see Andrew appointed to this role. He has worked through the system, acquiring qualifications and experience which should serve him well for the challenges ahead."

Mr McArthur will complete his contract on November 11 this year it was confirmed at the Agricultural Advisory Committee on Thursday.

Brian Aldridge, the Saladero farm manager will complete his contract on October 31.

New Agricultural Advisors Warren Landles and Helen Thoday have met about 65 per cent of farmers, said Mr Barton, "and visited a significant number of farms on both the West and East Islands."

Chester Crowie has taken up the post of laboratory assistant.

Conservation project success

THREE Darwin Initiative funded projects put forward this year by Falklands Conservation will progress to stage 2 of the application Conservation's Chief Executive Officer James Fenton has confirmed.

A spokesperson from the Darwin initiative said, "the Falklands Islands seem to be good at submitting high quality applications."

Mr Fenton said "Funds are limited, though, and there is no guarantee that all three will eventually get the go-ahead. The successful ones will begin in April 2012."

A number of partners are involved in the projects with Falklands Conservation and the Falkland Islands Government involved in all of them. The projects comprise firstly the Southern Sea Lion Programme, led by the British Antarctic Survey, which aims to study the foraging ecology of Southern sea lions. This will help assess their overlap with commercial operations and also help elucidate factors preventing population recovery.

Secondly, the Conservation of Falkland Island Raptors project led by FC. This would provide a scientific basis to assist government policy for managing conflicts between raptors and rural livelihoods, particularly sheep farming.

Finally the Lower Plants Inventory and Conservation in the Falkland Islands project is led by the National Museum of Wales. This aims to understand and conserve lower plants, that is mosses, lichens, algae and fungi.

Whale of a surprise for Race Point farmer John FARMER John Jones of Race Point Farm discovered this 14 metres long sperm whale corpse on the beach between Fanning Head and Half Tide last Monday.

John's wife Michelle said they often see whales in the area "and there seemed to be heaps about this last March and April."

A sperm whale bull can grow up to 20.5 metres long and is the largest living toothed animal.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

WITHOUT getting into the semantics of horticulture/agriculture I look forward to seeing the resulting produce from any take up there is from the assistance for import replacement.

This is something I was advocating in my previous term on Council and which was actively pursued by the present Assembly, led by Glenn Ross. I have always grown vegetables and kept chickens but I am by no means self sufficient in vegetables and even less so when competing with earwigs.

I just missed the last farmers' market but can foresee a time when it could be a weekly event. There is no doubt that the demand is there. I'm still living in hope that someone will get a little dairy up and running before children forget the taste of real fresh dairy produce.

WITH the tourist season just weeks away it is a little disappointing to see that there are still a couple of days with large ship clashes when drivers and guides can only have one day's work instead of the two they would have if the visits were staggered over two days.

We really want our visitors going away talking about a great experience and part of that experience is contact and conversation with residents.

I HAVE strong sympathy with the correspondent who is horrified by the thoughtless destruction of parts of the common. This was a subject discussed in the Environment Committee when I recently stood in for the Hon. Bill Luxton.

I believe that all Assembly members are reluctant to add to the volume of legislation, but if a bit of consideration and common sense does not come into play then we may have to resort to compulsion.

PEOPLE are registering their views on the experiment of keeping summer time year round on Facebook.

If, as I do, you think life is too short for Facebook (on which I understand from a recent survey some spend up to four hours a day), then please pass your views to Gilbert House or any individual MLA. We really do want to hear from you on this and any other matter

Nine applications to build are approved

AT the August meeting of the Planning and Building Committee nine planning applications were recommended by the Environmental Planning Officer Anthony Payne and approved by the committee.

Cyril Ellis had his application for a 4x10 metre garage to be built at 24 Ross Road West approved. This replaces a garage which burned down in May this year at the same address.

At Lookout Estate a 450 square metre hardstand for use as a car and bus parking lot was approved for Andrea Clausen as well as a building for Falklands Conservation to use as a facility for oiled penguins to the south west of the Department of Agriculture. It was noted the building was container type units and was currently sited at Mount Pleasant.

Also meeting approval with the committee was an application for the erection of a garage at 52 Davis Street with access from Philomel Street for Bernard Betts as well as an extension and conservatory to Grant Munro's property at 69 Fitzroy Road.

The final three applications to be granted were the erection of a traffic safety mirror on the east boundary of Waverley House, a seven metre tower and six meter turbine along with a hut for Cable and Wireless at Cortley Hill on Wireless Ridge and the erection of a garage in the front yard of 11 Sullivan Street for Roger May.

Flock vaccination trial

A VACCINATION trial on a small sheep flock with a high incidence of Caseous lymphadenitis (CLA) or boils has been approved by the Agricultural Advisory Committee.

Senior Agricultural Advisor Mac MacArthur said last Thursday: "As the Falkland Islands shifts to producing more lamb and mutton for export, future markets could be jeopardised if vaccination and management changes to reduce the CLA incidence are not introduced. This is especially important as the mutton classes have a wide age range and the older the sheep the higher the incidence."

He said large farms with high incidences of CLA may also want to consider long term reduction through being involved.

Levels in the 2010/11 season at the abattoir were 17.83 per cent for sheep (as opposed to lambs, where the percentage is very low).

The worst affected farms have an incidence of up to a 37 per cent of sheep with boils.

PROPOSAL FOR A JURY (AMENDMENT) BILL

Executive Council considered a draft Jury (Amendment) Bill that would increase and widen the pool of people from whom juries can be formed, make provision for the judge to determine the order of trials when two or more people are charged on the same indictment, and update some out of date wording in the current legislation.

At Legislative Assembly it was indicated that the Bill should be made available for public consultation with a view to the Bill being presented to Legislative Assembly in October.

A consultation document has been prepared to explain the proposals in the Bill. The consultation document and the Bill will be available from Gilbert House from 5th September 2011.

The consultation period will last for three weeks. Anyone who wants to comment should respond to the Attorney General's Chambers by 26th September 2011.

Anyone who has queries about the consultation exercise should contact Mark Lewis on 28461.

Responses to the consultation should be made in writing to the Attorney General and can be sent to him at:- Attorney General's Chambers, PO Box 587, Stanley, Falkland Islands or by email to:- mlewis@sec.gov.fk.

Mary Hill's commercial waste only AVAILABLE space for mineral waste at the Mary Hill Quarry on the Gypsy Cove Road has been reducing rapidly and the Public Works Department is examining how the excavation material can be better managed.

Roads Engineer Simon Catton told Penguin News he along with other government officers had been looking at how the material can be better managed. He said from the discussions a way forward was identified, "that now needs some work doing but from today, Friday September 9, Mary Hill is now closed to all but industrial and commercial waste, which can still be tipped inside Mary Hill."

A new site has been identified to the East of Mary Hill as a new tipping area for mineral waste and anyone wishing to deposit material there should first contact PWD Highways on 27387 for a joint site visit to agree the conditions of use.

PWD Highways will progress the tidy up of the Mary Hill site in time for the tourist season, although it will not be finished until well into the summer as the material there now needs time to dry.

Mr Catton said, "People are also reminded that flytipping is illegal and unsightly and PWD and the RFI Police request those who have undertaken this activity remove the waste to the approved location."

£1.5 million for shipping link

STANDING Finance Committee have agreed a £1.5 million loan in support of a containerised shipping link operated by South American Atlantic Services (SAAS). MLA Dick Sawle said the deal was for a period "greater than one year," but was commercial in confidence and he could not confirm whether the loan was secure or unsecured.

A SAAS spokesman said the company had taken over the charter of the Scout and a general manager had been appointed who they hoped would be in the Islands in early October.

The process for recruiting other staff is in motion and the SAAS office will be staffed again from September 19.

"It will take some time to get all the necessary structures and logistical arrangements in place, however we are still working towards a first voyage in November. SAAS appreciates customer understanding at this time and will contact all known customers as soon as we are in a position to with tariffs and details for arranging shipments to and from the Islands.

Drilling slots for FOGL

FALKLAND Oil and Gas (FOGL) the exploration company focused on its extensive licence areas to the South and East of the Falkland Islands, has signed a contract for the Leiv Eiriksson drilling rig for two firm slots in the first half of 2012.

In its interim results for the six months ended June 30, 2011 it says that the operations and remaining 51 per cent equity in Northern Licence Area has been assigned back to FOGL by BHP Billiton together with a significant cash settlement.

The company has completed the site survey and 2D seismic programme.

An equity placing raised $51.8m before expenses. There was a cash balance of $110.6m at the end of June (2010: $80.4m). Current available funds, including the BHPB settlement, is $150.6m.

Richard Liddell, Chairman of FOGL, said: "We made good progress during the first half of 2011, during which we negotiated the exit of BHPB from our licences and regained complete control and operatorship of our licence areas while also securing a significant cash payment from BHPB."

"This was an excellent outcome, which has enabled us to drive forward with the most important phase of our exploration programme. In addition, we successfully raised $51.8m through a share placing, which, combined with existing cash resources and BHPB's payment, leaves us in a strong financial position to drill two wells in 2012."

"We also signed a rig contract and expect drilling to commence with the Loligo well in the first quarter of 2012."

First aid for Easters too

STANLEY Leisure Centre will join forces with Goose Green Farm to offer a First Aid training session on Wednesday September 21.

Recreation Manager Steve Dent, joint First Aid Instructor for the session said "The intention of this first session is to undertake some initial basic training in First Aid."

Following this we will then be in a position to discuss the benefits, or otherwise, of offering more enhanced skills and/or the setting up of a first response team with residents on East Falklands.

"From an organisational point of view we need feedback as soon as possible on attendees, either to myself or to Glynis Newman at Goose Green."

"The course is free of charge and a certificate will be issued from the UK following successful completion."

Commonwealth Manx adventure for Islands youth

SWIMMER Sorrel Pompert-Robertson is the first of the five strong Team Falklands, to compete at the Commonwealth Youth Games 2011 in the Isle of Man this week.

Team members arrived in the Isle of Man late last week, "and the excitement and energy is escalating," said Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association (FIOGA) Capacity Support Officer Natalie Brett who accompanied the team.

They are based in the Welbeck Hotel in Douglas, Isle of Man and will compete at the National Sport Centre which is about 20 minutes up the road, said Ms Brett.

The Youth Games opening ceremony took place yesterday, (Thursday) in Douglas and Sorrel Pompert-Robertson was the team flag bearer as the youngest member representing the Falklands. The opening ceremonies were televised live on BBC.

The ceremony, which has been produced by acclaimed national outdoor performance specialists 'Walk The Plank' featured over 225 dancers, musicians and actors as they paid tribute to the Isle of Man's heritage, and welcomed guests from all over the world. The ceremony blended the best of Manx culture with references to five continents from which the Commonwealth athletes came.

Competition itself began today (Friday) September 9 with Sorrel scheduled to swim 100m freestyle and 100m breaststroke. Sorrel competes in 50m freestyle and 50m

Youth team with Natalie breaststroke on Saturday. Badminton first round of competition starts today with Women's Singles (Laura Min-to and Sonia Arkhipkina), Men's Singles (Dominic Jaffray and Jordan Phillips), Women's Doubles (Laura and Sonia), Men's Doubles (Dominic and Jordan), and Mixed Doubles (Laura and Dominic, Sonia and Jordan) and advancing to Saturday and Sunday will be determined based on Friday's results.

Swimming will be shown live on the games website <http://www.cyg2011.com/> and FIOGA will be updating facebook, twitter, flickr, and the FIOGA website daily.

Dame Kelly Holmes DBE, MBE, the 2004 double gold Olympic Medal winning runner tops an impressive list of Olympic and Commonwealth medal winning athletes who will be visiting the Isle of Man during the 2011 Commonwealth Youth Games.

Your Questions

Answered

editor@penguinnews.co.fk (fax 22238)

THE following questions were answered by Principal Crown Counsel Rosalind Cheek...

Q How old do you have to be to teach someone to drive, and how long do you have to have had your driving licence for?

A There is no specific age restriction, but someone supervising a learner driver must have held a driving licence for at least two years (reference regulation 5(9) of the Road Traffic (Provisional) Regulations, Title 63.1.1 Revised Laws of the Falkland Islands).

Q Do the insurance offices that issue insurance have any obligation to check that you are not breaching the law when they sell you insurance, ie if you are not old enough then they should not sell you the policy?

A I am not aware of any regulation to this effect, and it is for the person buying the insurance to read the terms and conditions offered.

Q Do you have to have 'L' plates on your vehicle (when driving under a provisional driver's licence)?

A No, the law here doesn't require it

There is going to be a referendum on 3 November 2011

You will be asked this question:

DO YOU WANT A SINGLE CONSTITUENCY
FOR THE WHOLE OF THE ISLANDS?

If you want a single constituency for the whole of the Islands: vote "YES"

If you want separate constituencies for Camp and Stanley: vote "NO"

How is the Assembly elected now?

There are two constituencies in the Islands:

- Camp, which elects 3 members to the Legislative Assembly
- Stanley, which elects 5 members to the Legislative Assembly

On 2 September 2011 there were 262 voters in Camp and 1315 in Stanley.

So, having these two constituencies means that there is:

- one member for every 87 voters in Camp
- one member for every 263 voters in Stanley

Single Constituency Bill

The Single Constituency Bill would amend the Constitution to replace the two constituencies with a single constituency. If it becomes law, voters throughout the Islands would elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

That would give everyone (in Camp and in Stanley) more choice about who to vote for. However, it might mean that none of the 8 members of the Legislative Assembly comes from Camp or that none of them come from Stanley.

The Legislative Assembly can only pass the Bill if two-thirds or more of those voting in Camp and two-thirds or more of those voting in Stanley support the Bill by voting "Yes". If that happens (and only if that happens), there could be a single constituency to elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

If a third or more of those voting in Camp or a third or more of those voting in Stanley oppose the Bill by voting "No", the Bill cannot be passed and the two constituencies will stay separate.

The Single Constituency Bill has been published in the Falkland Islands Gazette. If you want a copy of the Bill, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

What about the voting system?

In 2001, the referendum was not just about whether or not there should be a single constituency but also about a voting system for elections.

To keep things simpler this time, the referendum on 3 November 2011 is only about whether there should be a single constituency.

What happens next?

The referendum will be held on 3 November 2011. Information about when and where to vote will be announced nearer the time.

If you are registered to vote, you will be able to vote in the referendum.

If you are entitled to vote but are not registered, you should register to make sure that you can have your say on the issue.

If you want to check whether or not you are registered to vote or if you have any queries about registering to vote, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

(LAST week PN featured two ideas for Falklands flags by Roy (Ginge) Davis. Lack of space decreed we did not include his entire explanation in the article, but we are happy to include it on the letters page this week -Ed)

Ginge desires the right flag

I was driving home from the hospital about a month ago. I had the radio on but wasn't listening to it until I heard a woman being interviewed who was criticising our flag. I was a bit taken aback and thought, 'another one coming down here wanting to change everything.'

I did not hear all of the interview apart from the criticism of the flag saying there was nothing on it that represented anything to do with the Islands. Because I hadn't heard all of the interview I did not know if she had mentioned already that the Falkland Islands motto Desire the Right on the bottom of the shield which makes up part of the crest, was on the flag. She also mentioned our galleon looked as though it had been painted on by a five year old.

So I thought I would design my own suggestions for a flag. I went to see MLA Edwards to clear up something I mentioned at the public meeting. I put this question to him at the end of the meeting and he said to me we had already changed the flag. He said go outside and you will see the new flag. I went outside but as there was no wind the flag was just hanging and I could not see any difference. But since then I have seen the new flag and I think it is a really great improvement but other than Desire the Right it has nothing on it that tells you it is the Falklands.

I had two ideas which I had put on place mats. The first one was an overview of the Islands in red because red, white and blue are the colours of democracy. A Black-browed albatross is the white part - it is indigenous to these Islands and in that colour because of the Union flag.

The second one represents the second largest star in our galaxy which is directly over the Falkland Islands and is called Canopus. 1911 saw the opening of the Panama Canal so our star was a stepping stone for mariners and passengers to the West coast of America. It was undoubtedly a great aid to navigation to places like Australia and New Zealand so we are fortunate enough to have a major feature in our area of the galaxy.

My plans now your plans says poultry man Robin

I SEE in the Penguin News Vol 23 No 14, suggestions for the future likely use of Beckside farm, along with what seems a set of financial hand-outs.

It seems funny how not long ago we approached FIDC with a five year plan to reinstate the poultry unit and possible ways to re-introduce the dairy herd, along with a garden venture. At a lengthy meeting we were congratulated on a very good business plan that ticked all the right boxes.

Then came the bombshell, "Sorry we are unable to do anything with the site while it is under investigation." They also said half the land was being reserved for the abattoir. Of course by this time they had possession of our business plan - how convenient.

After many months of head banging, and given that FIDC wanted an extortionate price for the property if it were eventually sold, we told them we would set up a commercial poultry unit on our own property.

You would not believe the grilling we got from FIDC as to how we could not do this or could not do that "as it would cause serious issues"; the usual rubbish. However, we continued to develop our poultry unit because we recognised the need for eggs.

Then we heard that plans for Beckside were being made, comprising virtually what we had set out in our business plan (very coincidental) to reinstate the poultry unit. Now to add insult to injury it appears that the site is not after all going to be sold, but leased just as we requested in the first place.

It would not surprise me to find that this shady department helps a potential individual to import live chickens, something they told us would be very difficult to do nowadays.

It is clear from where we are standing that someone in authority did not want us to develop our plans because they actually wanted to use these plans themselves. Having given the complete information to some councillors we were informed that it appeared to have been stitched up with red tape and that it did warrant further investigation. Sadly that is as far as it got.

What is also funny is the fact that no one seemed to be interested in doing what we are doing, until they realised we had actually done our research and discovered the enormity of the volume of eggs required, and almost overnight it was a very desirable thing to do. Even Councillors are now suggesting people keep backyard hens on government property. The only difference is whoever gets to use the unit at Beckside will likely get a whopping start-up hand-out.

We can feel justifiably proud that what we have achieved to date has NOT involved hand-outs from Government or FIDC - that sadly will not be the case in their latest plans for Beckside Farm.

It's not quite the right site

WHILST not attempting to spoil a good story I would like to put the record straight about the helicopter site at Stanley Airport in last week's Penguin News.

The Harrier aircraft, operated by the RAF 1 and 4 Squadrons, were based in hangars on the north side of the runway.

Although as the article correctly stated Mount Pleasant was opened in 1985, for those not around at that time it may be worth mentioning that the airport remained under the control of the Royal Air Force until May 1 1986 when during a ceremony the RAF blue ensign was lowered for the last time.

On the following day the Phantom aircraft departed for their new base at MPA and the airport was handed back to FIG.

Over priced food for thought

WITH the much better prices being offered to farmers for sheep products I thought this photo taken in a local French supermarket might be of interest.

This was a very small leg of lamb - 2.5 kg at nearly 42 Euros or about £36, yes, thirty six pounds!

A small niggles of worry - how many ordinary people can afford these prices?

Certainly we, while we are here, eat pork and chicken which are a quarter of the price. This may be because when we are at home we can pig out on lamb, mutton and beef.

I just wonder if these prices will tempt too many producers to enter the market, so that an oversupply combined with unaffordable prices, may create a collapse in lamb prices?

I hope not - but it's just a thought.

Doctor on call

TO help meet the needs of Camp residents there will be a doctor to whom they can speak when they telephone in for advice, it was confirmed at the Health and Medical Services Meeting on September 1.

From September 5, 2011 Camp residents can call Monday-Friday between 9am and 10am to ask to speak to the doctor. The duty doctor will call the patient back between 10am and 10.45am. If a patient calls after 10am their name will be taken and they will be called the next day. If it is an emergency they will be put through to casualty.

A concern was raised by lay member Ailsa Heathman who noted that particularly in the summer when Campers were very busy on the farm, an earlier time of 8.30am would be preferred for the phone-line to be open: "The hour between 8am and 9am is when most Camp residents are having breakfast and can be guaranteed to be in their house," said Mrs Heathman.

Dr Rowlands advised this was not possible as this was when the ward rounds were taking place.

Member of Legislative Assembly Sharon Halford said if Camp time and Stanley time were not to be kept the same this would not be an issue for some farms.

Staff matters

LOCAL recruitment for a podiatry contract had failed it was reported at the Health and Medical Services Committee meeting.

The current situation is that patients who require minor treatment should see their GP, however, there is a local based candidate looking to train in this area. It was agreed this would be worth supporting.

The failure to recruit a pharmacist was also reported. The candidate cited financial reasons for refusing the post. A higher salary is being considered in order to attract more interest. In the meantime locum cover is being provided.

Recruitment is being finalised for a Community Psychiatric Nurse. If confirmed, the candidate will be arriving in January 2012 and locum cover will be arranged to cover the gap.

A contract is currently being finalised for a Senior Dental Officer.

Refurbishment

THE Health and Medical Services capital programme is ongoing in the areas planned with the completed refurbishment of number 9 Thatcher Drive.

A refurbishment of Numbers 10 and 11 will be funded out of next year's budget. The refurbishment of the KEMH entrance and reception area is still planned for later in the year; exact timings are still to be confirmed.

Albatross survey

THE results of a survey made in September and October 2010 of all Black-browed albatross breeding colonies in the Falkland Islands has been published by Ian and Georgina Strange of Design In Nature. The report, in CD-ROM format contains maps, charts, tables and many aerial photographs showing all the Islands colonies.

The report details the aerial photographic methods used to count all those adult birds that return to their nest sites at the commencement of the breeding season. Using high definition images, counts can be made without the need for extrapolation or mathematical modelling, which is generally used in more conventional ground surveying. The power behind the aerial photographic survey methodology described in this report is its simplicity. Through this simplicity it is, in many respects, advanced to those systems that ground surveys employ.

Aerial photographic surveying, with its advancement into digital photography and high definition imagery, presents the information in a form that is difficult to dispute. Photographic images that are capable of showing individual birds on their nests, even in densely populated colonies and located in formidable terrain, offer and record information on numbers that ground survey methods are unable to obtain. The format, like any photograph, is a dedicated record that cannot be changed; valuable archival material for comparison with future surveys.

Although the reports emphasises is on the methodology used it presents the surveys findings and draws a comparison with an all Island survey made in 2005. These show that the Falklands population of Black-browed Albatross has increased by 21 % in the last five years. As predicted and discussed in the results of the 2005 survey, one colony showed a small decrease of 2.3 %. The reason for this is unclear, however it is known from surveys of some colonies, carried out annually, that natural fluctuations are usual. In the case of this one colony, it is possible that it has reached capacity in terms of suitable nesting areas with birds moving to sites showing large increases.

The report discusses a number of issues concerning the surveying of the Islands albatross population. It believes that the Falklands fishery plays an important role in the increases seen over the last twenty years, but such increases cannot be sustained continually. Will we therefore see a natural levelling of the population sometime in the future?

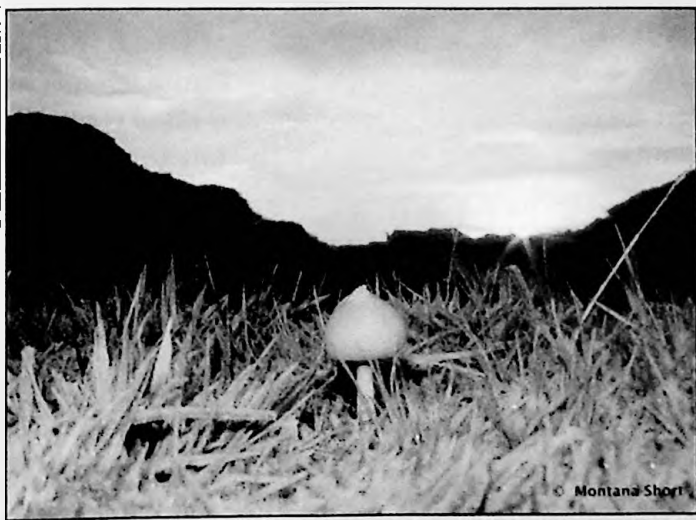

Copies of the CD-ROM are available in the Capstan and POD gift shops.

This week Montana Short shares his dramatic winter shot of a toadstool. He said that when photographing plants while a specialist lens can help, it's not necessary to use special equipment if you use your imagination. "The picture above was taken on an ordinary compact camera, lens set at the widest angle 28mm and the built in flash used to light up the subject. Getting down low and wet helped to dramatise the picture."

Hydatid update

ALL eight dogs that tested positive to hydatid cyst in the March/April tests, have subsequently tested negative, confirmed vet Zoe Luxton.

"So in these cases the drug is doing what it needs to do," said Ms Luxton

In response to the positive results, in the immediate term there will be shorter intervals between dosing of dogs in the Falklands. Dosing with praziquantel was every six weeks but this will be reduced to four weeks. She suggested that in 12 months time there should be a re-test of all dogs.

Ms Luxton responded to a question passed on by the Rural Business Association representative at the Agricultural Advisory Committee Meeting on Thursday September 1.

She also confirmed it is not illegal to feed kidneys to dogs. Hydatid cysts form primarily in the lungs or livers of the intermediate hosts (sheep) and it is illegal to feed dogs these organs. In very rare circumstances the larvae that hatch in the sheeps intestines can migrate further and cysts can form in the brain, spleen, kidney or muscle.

Ms Luxton told Penguin News, "Can I remind all farmers killing animals on farm to examine carcasses and offal very carefully and to continue sending in any suspicious lesions."

Feral cattle to be destroyed

ALL feral cattle will be destroyed by the end of summer it was stated by the Senior Agricultural Advisor Mac MacArthur last Thursday. It was estimated that there are still around 100 feral cattle on the Islands, not including those that might be judged unmanaged as opposed to feral.

Falkland Islands Government Veterinarian Zoe Luxton also noted the Agricultural Department now has a list of approved tags for cattle tagging. She said the list comes with a farm approval pack and farmers were welcome to call and request the list.

She noted that this was a shortened version of the tags approved in UK and Australia, thus if farmers have a preferred tag not included on the list they should call the department to check the status of the tag.

She explained there would be a transitional period for tagging but the next time farmers purchased tags they should use the approved types.

Farm statistics

At the meeting it was also confirmed that farm statistics would be released in late September or early October. They had been held up by one farm that had a minor problem slowing the process.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

146.625....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band
156.800....Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The EMI has increased this week to $1,270 AU c/kg (835GB p/kg). The main impact seen in the shift in the indicator and the £ price increase is based on exchange rates. The Exchange rate of Sterling and AUS has gone from 1.57 to 1.52 in a week. In addition this week, finer fleeces held their value, from last weeks unusually low prices for the finer end of the micron scale, whilst the coarser wool lots fell in value. Good sales were made last week with clearance levels of 90% sold in Australia and 86% selling in New Zealand. Many Europeans are back from holidays now and trading will add some competition to the market place. The exchange rate is still critical so we will be watching that very closely over the next few weeks. For those of you pre-lamb shearing watch out for an interesting article from Steve Pointing in this month's Wool Press which indicates the positive and negatives that occur from this management practice and how to manage the sheep to get the most benefits from pre-lamb shearing.

Meanwhile back on The Farm...

Andrew Newman trades business suit for boiler suit and wellies as he takes his family to Port Edgar for a spot of farm sitting...

AND so I have the last week of news from Port Edgar farm.

It has been an amazing month, there have been testing times, some every day occurrences and some issues of my own making.

On the whole it has been much better than I could have imagined, even the missus and the kids are still happy, the former still non-smoking and the latter not realising there is school tomorrow.

The city dwellers hooked in well and I have completed a number of jobs for the real farmer, including some impromptu panel beating on the land rover bonnet which fits (ish) again.

Even the driver's window wiper works thanks to the welding skills of Nigel Knight.

One of the jobs was a bit of a busman's holiday, some maintenance work at the airstrip, which Andy and I carried out when the missus returned from an overnight stop at home on the East.

The only down-side, in 20/20 hindsight, was letting the fairer sex and the kids carry on back to the farm.

Several hours later we are driving back along the track and observe their rover heavily bogged and abandoned.

After a quick look Andy gets in and with a push backs the rover gently out. In amongst our celebratory laughter we remember we have the camera and decide it would be funny to drive it back and take photos of it coming out, again.

It didn't work. We had to tow it out and the girls had the last laugh. They did, however, have to put up with moaning kids and wet feet.

I was also low on dog food so Andy and I decided to get the dogs meat (sheep) in and dispatch a few.

When we departed the house on two motorbikes I thought the dogs were howling with frustration that we had not taken them (you wouldn't need dogs to get 20 sheep in when you have two motorbikes right?) It turns out it was canine howling laughter as we returned an hour plus later, soaked in sweat and my language barely resembling the Queen's English.

They went everywhere but to the pen at the killing shed and it dawned on me that they had carried out this escape routine many, many times before.

However, sheep are further down the food chain than the dogs in Camp life and fresh meat was available that night.

I must assure any folk that may have had concerns regarding my use of sheep kidneys to pill the dogs a couple of weeks ago, that the Hydatid Eradication (Dogs) Order 1981, amended in 2003 is my reference document.

Only sheep lungs, liver and heart may not be fed to dogs.

Despite the miniscule chance of a kidney having a Hydatid cyst I did actually put a pill in it - so the dog would have to be pretty special to catch anything from food containing the cure.

With impending bad weather and a job of eye locking sheep at Coast Ridge Farm we went back up the road of bones to Fox Bay.

Andy, Jo and Thomas continued on to Port Howard and the ferry, back to the East Island.

We meanwhile carried out Keith Knight's work load and eye locked his hoggets.

Only the preparation for departure remained at Port Edgar, all animals were fed and watered, all machinery put back where it belonged and with a tear in my eye we departed over the hill and back to my world of the business suit.

All good things must come to an end.

Thank you Mandy, Tex and girls for letting us play at being farmers, especially thanks to all the folks that visited, called and helped us out over the month. I bet ginger cat and the old dog Ben are still laughing at my various misfortunes.

Over the garden fence

fortnightly with Ginge Kidd

In my garden spring has sprung! Well, for today anyway, and as I wander around and gaze at the borders I'm delighted to see clumps of Snowdrops nodding in the breeze, Crocus in various colours and sizes, low growing Iris with rather large, and lovely, flowers, Hellebores raising their heads to display white, pink or red flowers, big fat buds where the Paeonies will later display their big blousy flowers and... weeds everywhere. I itch to start removing them, but really, the ground is still much too wet and sticky and I would be doing the soil a lot of harm walking over it in this state.

What I can and must do is plant some vegetable seeds under cover and get the season underway.

All my seed trays and pots have been washed and drained. The soil is in the tunnel and so reasonably warm and I'm raring to go. As usual I've been tempted by all sorts of different seeds and am having difficulty fitting them all in the fridge. I promise myself not to get carried away every year but here we are again. I use small pots for most of my seeds at this time of year and, having nearly filled them with (bought) compost I've smoothed them, watered them and started the seed sowing process.

First, the tomatoes. I like to try a few different ones each year and so only sow a few seeds of each per pot. There are an awful lot of varieties out there but I have always liked Alicante and Moneymaker for reliability, but for flavour and appearance my favourite has got to be Tigerella. This stripey tomato looks and tastes great. I also like to put up in hanging baskets Gardener's Delight, a delicious cherry tomato that all kids, and adults love. I try to spread the seeds a centimetre apart and then cover them (just) with sieved compost. They, and the peppers, cucumbers and aubergine seeds, which I treat in the same way, will eventually be grown on in a greenhouse, though some might sneak their way into the front porch.

The much larger seeds of courgettes, marrows and pumpkins will be covered a little deeper and they are destined for the tunnels later on. Meanwhile, they need somewhere reasonably warm and well lit to start the germination process, a plastic cover will go on, and some will end up in the electric propagator that I was given some time ago.

Meanwhile some of the 'small seed' needs to be started. The ground outside is still so wet and cold, that any seed going in there would probably simply rot, and so once again I've used small pots - I used to use trays but have found they take up too much space.

When it comes to the brassica family I love to try a few different varieties and so I've managed to fill eight small pots with different cabbage seeds, three with cauliflowers, and five more with various broccolies. I haven't used many seeds, they will eventually be planted out in rows that hold 12 to 15 plants each. I like Primo cabbage and also Greyhound as reliable early ones, but have tried a few new ones recommended for sowing at this time. With cauliflower, All Year Round works well for us.

Last but not least, in trays this time, some lettuce for transplanting, and some in deeper trays, for 'cut and come again' purposes - if we can eat them before the earwigs and slugs do I'll be delighted.

In a large pot with finely sieved soil I've planted some carrot seeds, very thinly, as I've never liked the job of thinning out. I've always used Nantes very successfully for this.

Lastly for this week, I've planted some early seed potatoes in the tunnel, they should provide us with brand new spuds just as our old ones run out towards the end of the year.

2016 for oil say Rockhopper but Islanders cautious

ROCKHOPPER Exploration's announcement this week that they expect to begin pumping oil in 2016, set the international media off on a further round of speculation about future wealth, but Falklands stakeholders and interested parties are taking a more cautious approach.

The company said production from the Sea Lion discovery made in 2010 will be ramped up to around 120,000 barrels of oil per day by 2018, however, Director of Mineral Resources Phyl Rendell told Penguin News "Rockhopper Exploration are working up their conceptual plans for development of the Sea Lion field because they need to establish what the costs might be to produce hydrocarbons from the field. Then they can ascertain if these funds can be raised to develop it."

There was a need to share the information with investors because they need to know when they might start to get a return on any funds they commit to the project, hence a production date of 2016 is being quoted, said Mrs Rendell.

"Obviously a production phase offers opportunities for local companies and unlike exploration, there would be continuity of work so that investment in infrastructure can be considered," she said.

An Oil & Gas Development Group, a sub-group of the Economic Development Strategy working group, is currently considering what policies and guidelines should be adopted to enable local companies to secure contracts for both exploration and production phases. Training and certification for employees is one area which has already been identified as a need to meet industry standards.

A development phase would have an impact on the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) including the Department of Mineral Resources, explained Mrs Rendell.

There will need to be more regulations to manage offshore activities during production and the department will need to manage the assessment of development plans that are required to be submitted by oil companies for approval. This is an open process, similar to that for EIAs, (Environmental Impact Assessment) when the public will be able to comment on the plans.

Mrs Rendell said revenue to FIG would not come from a production phase, apart from acreage rents, until oil is produced and royalties paid.

However, exploration activities already create considerable benefits to the economy with companies buying services (tax on workers, FIPASS berthing fees, water, electricity etc) and paying tax on business generated by the oil industry.

"It is hard to say at this stage what level of funds would be received from production. These details are yet to be submitted to FIG as part of a development plan," Mrs Rendell said.

Rockhopper Exploration made the announcement at a Capital Markets Presentation on Wednesday where it was noted that development costs to first oil production was expected to be in the region of $2 billion.

The company expected to complete its concept engineering studies in the first quarter of 2012 and shortly after to begin its Front-End Engineering Design (FEED).

The FEED is expected to be completed and submitted to the Falkland Islands Government in the first quarter of 2013, by which time Rockhopper would expect to have awarded the contracts to the Floating Production Storage and Offloading (FPSO) provider and subsea contractor.

Accounting for all outstanding payments for the previous well drilled, Rockhopper estimates that it will have cash resources of $170 million. The company is therefore said to be fully funded to complete the current well, and the remaining two committed drilling slots that it has with the Ocean Guardian. Rockhopper is considering its position as to whether it will take up any additional options on the Ocean Guardian.

Edwards 'conflicted' says Sawle

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Dick Sawle claims MLA Roger Edwards was excluded from a meeting that resulted in the decision to remove MLA Emma Edwards from the Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB), because he was, "clearly conflicted" as Emma's father.

Earlier in the week MLA Roger Edwards condemned the treatment MLA Emma Edwards was afforded when she was removed from the chair of FITB last week.

Talking to Falklands radio MLA Roger Edwards said Emma had been treated in an "appalling," and "underhand," manner.

He believed in "looking someone in the eye" when he had something to say about them, not in holding "secret meetings," he said.

Last week Gilbert House announced MLA Emma Edwards' position as chair of FITB had become "untenable," saying she had been, "quite clearly opposed to official policy" in some aspects of the Tourism Development Strategy.

MLA Emma Edwards vehemently denied the statement. She said she had only questioned the, "due process and the dissemination," of the strategy.

MLA Sawle reiterated this week that MLA Emma Edwards was offered opportunity to meet with all MLAs at any time to discuss the issue, but had refused to do so and that both Roger and Emma had been present at a similar, recent meeting when the FITB portfolio held by MLA Bill Luxton was removed. "The process then was exactly the same and, with the consent of both Roger and Emma, the portfolio holder was changed," said MLA Sawle.

MLA Emma Edwards, however said the situations were different.

"In my case I was accused of not agreeing with an aspect of government policy and I believe my views should have been heard before a decision was made."

Penguin News

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

WITH final tweaks being made throughout the week to our transformed website, (penguin-news.com) prior to it going live today, it was of course sod's law that everything that could possibly happen in the Falklands in terms of news this week, damn well did happen.

What with high rebellion in the ranks of the legislature, Sonia kicking some Maldives butt at the Youth Commonwealth Games, and Rockhopper declaring they will pump oil in 2016, I was reduced to adding the stories to the unpublished site simply for my own sense of satisfaction due to a so far nonexistent audience.

Still, despite the excitement all three subjects generated locally, and in particular the pickle some of our elected representatives seem to have found themselves in, having inadvertently cast MLA Edwards in the role of victim, it was in fact none of the above that truly piqued my interest, but a less publicised issue (see page 9).

During the Transport Advisory Committee meeting last Thursday, Work Boat Services Manager Adam Cockwell raised the point that the committee seemed overly reactive, and might make greater efforts in promoting the relationship between the ferry, FIGAS and land transportation. Based on the evidence of that particular meeting his point was certainly supported, the agenda having dealt only with complaints about roads, or requests for financial assistance. This, presumably common situation appeared to leave both he, and at least one other committee member, of the opinion that the TAC was doing little more than reacting to complaints, well, apart from when they weren't rubber stamping decisions already reached by MLAs, claimed Mr Cockwell.

His point could be argued for and against infinitely I am quite certain, and it is perhaps the fact that it wasn't properly debated at all that irked me most. For the Chair's response to his agenda item could well be described as, at best defensive, and at worst, resentful.

As it was, I have no doubt that he was left feeling that a perfectly reasonable question floated off into the little black void labelled 'implied criticism'.

If that were not enough, the Chair and the Director of Public Works took pains to point out that Mr Cockwell's thoughts with regard to inter-relationships were already covered in the committee's Terms of Reference. They were perfectly correct, however that response did not entirely reveal whether the mission itself was being adhered to.

So what's my point? Well we are a nation of government committees and long may that last. Who could not sensibly approve of the people in the know having the opportunity to influence relevant policy. But what is the point of a committee if its function is minimal? That is not to say it is so in reality, but if the question is asked it deserves to be recognised and discussed, not dismissed.

We desire good governance and a practical administration, and in general I think we have it, but if we are not allowed to question the system that propounds to be good, then its credibility is entirely lost.

PUBLIC CONSULTATION

PROPOSAL FOR A JURY (AMENDMENT) BILL

Executive Council considered a draft Jury (Amendment) Bill that would increase and widen the pool of people from whom juries can be formed, make provision for the judge to determine the order of trials when two or more people are charged on the same indictment, and update some out of date wording in the current legislation.

At Legislative Assembly it was indicated that the Bill should be made available for public consultation with a view to the Bill being presented to Legislative Assembly in October.

A consultation document has been prepared to explain the proposals in the Bill. The consultation document and the Bill will be available from Gilbert House from 5th September 2011.

The consultation period will last for three weeks. Anyone who wants to comment should respond to the Attorney General's Chambers by 26th September 2011.

Anyone who has queries about the consultation exercise should contact Mark Lewis on 28461.

Matt joins Chef of the Century Robuchon

HEAD chef at Malvina House Hotel Matt Clarke is to take up a brief sabbatical working with 'Chef of the Century' Joel Robuchon at a restaurant in Las Vegas.

Mr Robuchon, a top French chef and restaurateur was also awarded the Meilleur Ouvrier de France (France's Best Craftsman) in cuisine in 1976 and has a total of 26 Michelin stars between his dozen restaurants around the world.

Mr Clarke, who has a house in Las Vegas, told Penguin News he went to Chef Robuchon's three Michelin starred restaurant when he was last home, "we got talking and he offered me work."

"He was very interested in the Falklands and in fact he invited me to Paris, but my French isn't terribly good so I thought Las Vegas would be better. He's the kind of guy who is very passionate about his cuisine and is willing to share that passion if you are willing to learn."

Mr Clarke said appreciatively that Malvina House Hotel Manager Carl Stroud had offered him an extra six weeks on top of his holiday, in order to take up the opportunity, which he said would also benefit the hotel restaurant.

"As a chef you never really finish learning and as a head chef I don't have anyone to learn from

but myself at the moment.

"I'm not nervous but I'm definitely excited, it's my turn to be shouted at now."

"It's always hard for a chef to go into a new environment but I hope a lot will come out of it."

Mr Clarke who has transformed the Malvina House menu with his fine but wholesome cuisine and with occasional fun additions such as crocodile and ostrich, says, however, he never wants the restaurant to become pretentious.

He said he would always include such favourites as squid and lamb on the menu, "but it would be really good to put the Falklands on the map culinary wise - I want Malvina to be known for dishes of quality and for using plenty of local produce."

He said, "I really want to take this opportunity to thank Malvina House Hotel for supporting me in my professional development."

Sawle: Edwards conflicted

"It doesn't matter that meetings were offered, and I must reiterate that these meetings were offered retrospectively, after a decision to remove me had already been made and was told that the decision was unanimous by all MLAs; it didn't matter what I had to say on the issue," she told Penguin News.

"The decision came out of the blue on a Saturday afternoon. No one had discussed with me that my fellow MLAs were concerned about views I held with this portfolio," she said.

MLA Edwards said she had been quite busy with the start of a new school year, sorting out exam queries and the times proposed were not suitable.

"I did offer to meet with all other members on the Thursday of that week, but due to commitments of other MLAs this time was not suitable for them."

She agreed with MLA Roger Edwards' comment that if something needs to be said it is better to do it face to face.

She concluded: "I hope we can now draw a line under this unpleasant incident and continue to work with my fellow MLAs."

When asked if he thought recent events would impact on the working relationship of the Assembly as a team or the relationship between the Assembly and the electorate, MLA Sawle said he, "didn't see why it should."

"It's part of political life. The main objective is not personalities, but working together with the best interests of the country at heart," he said.

It's all happening at penguin-news.com

PENGUIN News' brand new website penguin-news.com will provide daily news updates and include sport, features and a weekly opinion poll all free of charge.

As before, the front page, back page and television pages will be freely accessible (simply register online) and paying subscribers will continue to be able to view the full newspaper every Friday. (To access your subscription simply click on the front page image either on the 'News' page if it's the latest edition or via 'The Paper' page if you require an older edition.)

"Some of the latest news stories will be reduced with the full detail in the paper on Friday," said Managing Editor Lisa Watson, "some others will be provided in full.

"Regarding features such as Gardening with Ginge or Bound Ungagged, that are already included in the newspaper, they will be added the week after they are published in the paper, however, we are seeking feature writers and columnists to write exclusively for the website on a weekly, monthly or fortnightly basis, or even a one-off basis so if you have an idea for a column or feature (events, hobbies, politics, humour or anything else) please contact us."

Sports clubs are also very much encouraged to submit articles, results and photographs to Penguin News for inclusion on the sports page, and interested persons should give Teslyn a call on 22684. Lisa said, "Promoting your club's activities will encourage people to join and everyone likes to see their sporting achievements publicised, so please make use of the site to develop your club."

The site includes Falklands' weather and share prices and Penguin News will be adding other useful information as work on the site progresses.

Lisa added, "The site has a simple layout with the emphasis on the provision of news, but we welcome feedback and ideas. The first opinion poll (top right on the front page and simply click the answer of your choice) will be about the site itself.

"There may be some bumps along the way in the first few weeks, but if you have any problems with your subscription give Fran a call on 22709.

"We're very keen that the website doesn't detract from the paper itself; it will be a delicate balance, but we know we can do it.

"Penguin News has appeared increasingly limited in terms of keeping people updated as more and more news is provided daily online - this development has been a long time coming."

Desirable news

SHARES in oil exploration company Desire Petroleum dropped on Monday, after they announced a profit of $333,000 (compared to a loss of $6.3 million a year earlier). Desire said it still believed in its Falklands prospects and intended to rejoin the drill campaign, but company chairman Stephen Phipps was unable to say exactly where the funding for this would come from.

Director of Mineral Resources Phyl Rendell said: "FIG has every confidence in Desire Petroleum being part of further exploration drilling activities. The company invested wisely with Rockhopper and Argos in acquiring new 3D data last summer. Once this data, that is reported to be of excellent quality, is interpreted, companies will be able to market any new structures that are identified and drill them." The company's share price had begun to rise by the end of the week.

Baby Stanley

FORMER BFBS presenter Clare Mansell nee McCann has remembered her happy time in the Falklands in the name of her new-born son. Clare told Penguin News, "My husband and I met in the Falklands in 2006 while we were both based at Mount Pleasant. The Falklands is a special place for both of us and we have many fond memories of our six months there." When their son Theo was born at the end of last month, "we felt we wanted to honour the place we met and give him a connection to the Islands, so we have given him the middle name of Stanley."

SAAS to fill gap

SHELVES are filling up again in Stanley shops following a delay of nearly two weeks in the arrival of the FIRS vessel at East Cove. With a five week sailing, a delay of two weeks can wreak havoc on retailers, particularly those with tight stock control and date sensitive products. It is understood that the SAAS service will, where possible, arrive between the FIRS vessels thus spreading the risk for regular importers and reducing stock inventory costs.

MLAs overseas

LEGISLATIVE Assembly members Roger Edwards and Sharon Halford left the Islands on Tuesday for the annual Party Conferences in the UK. They will be joined by the Falkland Islands Government London Representative Sukey Cameron MBE.

"I THINK local shareholders will need some patience now before they see any great increase in share value with not much excitement until a certified Competent Persons Report (CPR) is available in 2012," said one Islander.

"A lot of money has to be raised and this may dilute current shareholders' interest. There's also a chance of a farm-in from another company which could pay or contribute to the development costs in exchange for a share in the oil field, or Rockhopper could borrow funds against future earnings to repay it."

Another individual in the know said, "That they have commenced FEED work is good and to announce a projected production date is also encouraging.

Islanders chat about the current oil situation in the Falklands

"The biggest dangers I can currently see are: i) if there is no funding available in this tight business climate, ii) if the Falklands Government comes under pressure to change the terms and conditions of the licence and iii) if another company made an outright bid for Rockhopper before they had an opportunity to progress the company to its true value."

A retailer said, "For local businesses, as Rockhopper only has three more drills scheduled I would expect things to slow down while production planning and work is carried out on field and more funds are raised to continue exploratory drilling by Rockhopper and also while other companies with North Falkland basin licences raise funds to continue or commence drilling. "If the Ocean Guardian does happen to stop operations, the arrival of the Leif-Eriksson rig at the end of this year will keep up the current pace of activity for the first six months of 2012."

One concerned businessman said "The biggest problem could well be keeping the dreamers and schemers within the government from wanting to spend money before oil revenues are assured and reach the bank."

"But the long term view is good, providing there is more local interest shown by the current population on the wide range of issues which oil will bring. We need to keep control of our country."

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

SCARCELY ill informed – I have received the same lectures from other agents employed by large cruise vessel companies. The difference is that I do not accept that we should be dictated to as a country by any big business, tourism, or others. If we could work co-operatively with companies for the benefit of all it could only enhance our reputation as a destination and theirs as operators with a real customer focus. I am well aware that cruise schedules are compiled years in advance; that is why I've been talking about it for years. I've spoken to individuals in the cruise business who confirm that, given sufficient notice, most would comply if like other small ports we choose to limit the number of vessel calls in a day. There is a risk that some would not come, but the cruise companies would risk losing the substantial number of passengers who book because the Falklands feature on the itinerary. Business is about taking calculated risk.

IN a matter of weeks some very young people, this year's GCSE group, may be making some of the most important choices of their lives. Whether aiming for A'levels, apprenticeships, vocational or other further education courses, it is not too soon to start researching requirements and course details. Parents can do much to encourage them to thoroughly explore all their options; the internet is a great tool for this. The school can also advise. The courses on offer are not always as useful as they may appear. With increased competition for university place some subjects, perceived as 'soft options', will be discounted in the contest for places on the most desirable courses.

THANK you to those who have sent in responses to several MLAs on year round summer time. As always please keep the views and questions coming in to keep us on our toes. Another subject on which I have seen some feedback is that of proposed updated building regulations. Safety must be first consideration, so as an example, having a boiler installation checked by a qualified person does not seem unreasonable. More feedback welcome.

CONSERVATION staff along with local volunteers have continued their efforts to restore tussac grass to eroded areas throughout the winter.

Three weekends focused on an area of bare peat in the fenced off section of Cape Pembroke's southern coast. On each of these weekends Tussac tillers were sustainably sourced from a nearby natural stand in the Hudassa Bay area.

"All planted tillers have been grazed by hares, but green shoots remain on the majority and so the signs are therefore encouraging for these plants to survive," said FC's Dr Rebecca Upson.

A 50 by 50 metre area was fenced off with hare-proof mesh and planted on September 3 so the level of damage caused by hares can be monitored.

Last weekend a team of four FC staff and 15 volunteers headed out to Elephant Beach Farm to help Ben Berntsen continue to plant tussac along a section of his north coast.

A thoroughly enjoyable and rewarding weekend saw a large area greened up with tussac tillers.

Dr Upson said: "This time the approach taken was to collect tillers on site from the oldest tussac plants available – now seven years old. This meant that we were able to cover a much larger area than usual and volunteers were amazed at how quickly we could see a substantial difference in places that just an hour or so earlier had been bare peat."

The aim is eventually to plant up the whole of Elephant Beach Farm's north coast in order to restore the rim of tussac that would have once flourished there. Eventually it will be grazed in a controlled way as winter feed for livestock.

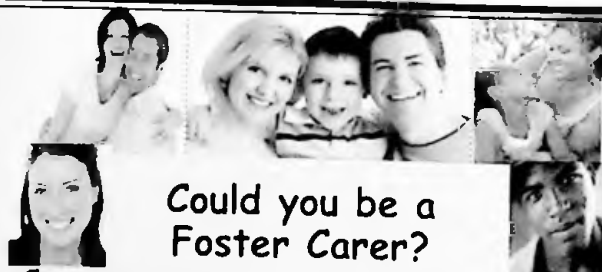

Dr Upson said the restoration of tussac at both sites would decrease coastal erosion, encourage wildlife and provide knock-on benefits for tourism. "Small birds are already moving into the tussac with several nests holding eggs spotted," she said.

Falklands Conservation would like to thank all the volunteers who have given up their time to help with these valuable restoration projects.

Jock and June celebrate their Diamond wedding anniversary

Jock and June on their wedding day 60 years ago

JOCK and June McPhee enjoyed a string of visitors to their home this week in celebration of not only their Diamond wedding anniversary, but also Jock's 90th birthday.

They were married in Stanley on September 10, 1951 with Jock's birthday on the 13th. After living in Stanley for a short time they moved to Mount Pleasant house where Jock was a Fitzroy shepherd. Five years on, just as they were about to emigrate to New Zealand, he was offered the job of managing and building up Green Patch farm which he did through the 1960s and 70s before buying Brookfield when it was subdivided in 1980.

The well respected farming couple moved from Brookfield to Stanley a year ago, and added to the excitement this week was a surprise visit from former Camp teacher Alison Early who travelled from New Zealand especially to celebrate Jock's birthday.

"We had a lovely day with family and friends popping in and we toasted both occasions with a few glasses of port," said their daughter Trudi.

2. If you had a motto, what would it be? What if there were no hypothetical questions?

3. What is your most embarrassing moment? Probably week two of my traineeship when I accidentally hit "reply all" to an email and it went worldwide within minutes

4. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? I think there's got to be scope for some sort of micro brewery and I've always fancied trying home brewing

Young Commonwealth team do Falklands proud

THE fourth Commonwealth Youth Games have come to an end and the team have done the Falkland Islands proud with Sonia Arkhipkina claiming the first ever win in a badminton match at the games, and Sorrel Pompert-Robertson achieving several personal bests in the swimming pool.

After being welcomed at the schools on the Island and enjoying the opening ceremony officially opened by the Duke of Wessex (Prince Edward) the first day of competition (Thursday September 8) was said Natalie Brett, "a good one." Adding to the excitement of the day was a visit from Prince Edward as well as Dame Kelly Holmes with team members meeting both.

Sorrel raced the 100m Freestyle followed almost immediately by the 100m breast stroke; normally there is a men's event between each of the women's events to give female swimmers a rest between races, unfortunately event 2 Men's 400m IM only had seven swimmers registered so they moved it to the finals in the evening. This meant Sorrel swam in heat one of three in the 100m freestyle and then in heat one of the 100m breast stroke. Miss Brett said she did very well taking this into consideration finishing in 1:14.22 in freestyle, taking a second and a half off her personal best (set in the Isle of Wight earlier this year) and in 1:34.27 in breast stroke, only a couple of seconds off Claire Kilmartin's Falklands record for that event.

In badminton, the team had a good first day, scores were varied but not always reflective of the spirit and effort of the players. First to play was Dominic Jaffray and Laura Minto against Australia's Wong and Guan; they lost in two sets 6-21 and 5-21. "Being the first game of the day is always difficult and they managed to get some good rallies in," said Miss Brett. Next on the courts was Jordan Phillips and Sonia against India's Kidambi and Kukkapalli, they also lost in two sets 4-21 and 7-21.

In the men's singles Dominic faced India's Joshi, ranked 5/8 going in, who pushed Dominic to the extremes. He responded very well losing a respectful 7-21 and 11-21. Jordan faced Zambia's Mulenga and lost 9-21 and 11-21 although he put forward some strong rallies.

In women's singles Laura faced

Trinidad and Tobago's Fleary. Miss Brett said she started strong but had moments of self-doubt, before composing herself and coming back strong in a late effort that left her to lose 16-21 and 8-21.

Sonia faced Maldives' Husam and had a very strong match, achieving the Islands first Commonwealth Youth Games badminton win, 21-11 and 21-5. She moved on to face England's Westwood in the top 16 and lost 5-21 and 7-21.

In the men's doubles Dominic and Jordan faced South Africa's Malan and Naidoo; this was a strong battle from the Falklands concluding in a loss of 13-21 and 10-21. Finally, in the women's doubles Sonia and Laura faced Canada's Tung and Kwok; the girls put up a good fight but lost 3-21 and 8-21.

On Saturday Sorrel Pompert-Robertson raced in 50m freestyle and 50m breast stroke. Compared to Friday she had a better schedule, racing in the 3rd and 8th race of the morning allowing a longer rest between events.

In the 50m freestyle, Sorrel remained very composed while the swimmer from Malawi in the lane next to her had a false start resulting in a disqualification. She finished the race in 33.78 - a new personal best. The final event was the 50m breast stroke and with lots of crowd support from her team, Sorrel finished the race in 42.21, creating another personal best and again only milliseconds away from the Falklands record for the event set by Claire Kilmartin.

Transparent government? Seriously?

I KNEW and accept that changes would take place when the new Assembly took office nearly two years ago.

May I ask what has changed with reference to the General Purpose Committee (GPC)?

I ask because the headline of PN Vol 23 No 15 has MLA Edwards condemning how she was removed "behind closed doors" from the tourism portfolio.

Only a couple of years ago GPC not only consisted of the right of all elected members to see and discuss ExCo papers and matters of the day, but was also a forum for discussion about current individual portfolio issues that were of concern to the Assembly as a whole. This approach now appears to be null and void.

Would any member of the current Assembly care to enlighten me (and the general public) on how an Assembly member may be summoned to a meeting about their portfolio and can apparently refuse to attend because it is not suitable?

How can we take seriously mandates on more open government when this sort of situation arises?

Gold rush murders

THE Falkland Islands Amateur Dramatic Society will stage their latest murder mystery, The Gold Rush, on September 30.

Set in the town of Gold Rush, Colorado in 1880, the plot features the murder of Geraldine Rafferty, the owner of Rafferty's Bar and Grill, a woman whose past is shrouded in mystery. Fittingly, she dies during a poker match. Can the audience unravel the secrets of a large cast of eccentrics and desperadoes, all of whom seem to have had a motive to kill one of the town's most notorious citizens?

For the first time FIODA have opened one of their popular murder dinner productions to young people age 14 and above.

The ticket price of £15 includes a two-course meal provided by Shorty's Diner, and guests should bring their own soft or alcoholic drinks as no bar will be in operation. The cast will of course be in costume, and the audience are encouraged to dress up or at least don their denims and pick up their stetsons.

Tickets are available from Alison by telephoning 22817 or emailing alison.inglis@horizon.co.fk. Numbers are strictly limited to 80, and seats will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

Emptying bins not an option?

THE recent article Bin your Own in PN Vol 23 No 14 has got some people asking serious questions regarding the disposal of rubbish from their homes.

I wonder how many people remember when Councillor Mike Summers served on the previous Council and was asked why we couldn't empty our own bins and avoid the service charge being made at that time.

His reply was, "It is not an option," then he went on to inform us we must work more towards "user pays."

Now a few years later we learn of the Mink Park saga where users are told they will not be getting a personal rubbish collection service because the contract does not extend beyond the Beaver Hanger.

Excuse me for asking, but is that not in total contradiction to the earlier comments made by Mr Summers?

If this is another way to reduce government expenditure, then by the same token why can't everyone have the option to empty their own bins and reduce their extortionate service charges? The saying is, "what's good for the goose is good for the gander," right?

The real issue here is that government is running too fast as usual, trying to cut corners with no back-up in place to allow for these inevitable add-ons.

A bit like the road network - build them quick keep the cost down cheap, then several years later total chaos.

I wonder if the new development on Sapper Hill will also fall outside the contract of services?

Is it any wonder people get annoyed when they are told one thing but offered another? So much for user pays and "it is not an option."

Spoil should be out of sight

I WAS disappointed to read in your last edition that the Administration has decided that the area to the east of Mary Hill is suitable for the dumping of mineral waste.

How can they ignore the fact that this area is on the route to one of the major tourist attractions in Stanley and those that don't actually visit Gypsy Cove will drive past it on their Stanley Highlights tour. MLA Short commented that the natural ground the spoil was covering, "didn't look that pretty," that is because the area has been abused since the early 70's but was slowly recovering.

MLAs seem convinced that all the area needs is some landscaping and then seeding. I don't think it is quite as simple as that, as most people know the clay is like concrete in summer and goo in winter. Can we afford to landscape this area or should it be a cost to the developer?

I also disagree with MLA Short that there are a shortage of places to dump spoil. I suggested the area to the south of Megabid (where the spoil from the container park was dumped) but the Environmental Planning Officer said that area has been ruled out.

There has got to be somewhere close to the hydrocarbon development that is out of sight of the main tourist routes.

Good prices for silver and gold

MY visit to the York Stamp and Coin Fair was worth the trip as I was able to sell silver coins direct to dealers.

These ranged from the Victorian sovereigns, crowns and florins that would find their way to collectors through to pre 1947 silver that has a trade value estimated at 50 times their face value, converted into today's money purely for melting down to extract the silver. At first thought this appears to be a waste.

However, as an alternative to sitting in a long forgotten shoe box under the bed, a florin or two shillings is worth 50 times 10p or 50pence. Where there is one, there usually is more and it doesn't take long for the pence to become pounds, in your pocket.

Gold remains the investors metal of choice. Witness the many gold conversion stalls in shopping malls, inviting you to submit broken jewellery for conversion into cash.

Perhaps we should offer this service here, with the odd bits of unused gold finding their way to dealers willing to pay cash per pound.

Waterfront to become the 'jewel in the crown'

THE Falkland Islands Tourism Strategy includes a plan to transform the Stanley waterfront in order to attract "as much money from the tourists as possible," said MLA Dick Sawle at a presentation of the Strategy to Tourist Board Members last week.

He said they hoped to make the waterfront the "jewel in the crown," and, "more attractive than it is."

It is presumed that this will be undertaken through private financing confirmed Tourist Board General Manager Paul Trowell who gave the presentation on the strategy. Mr Trowell outlined the background noting that despite the existence of a previous strategy it was decided to develop another, in line with the existing thinking and the new Economic Development Strategy.

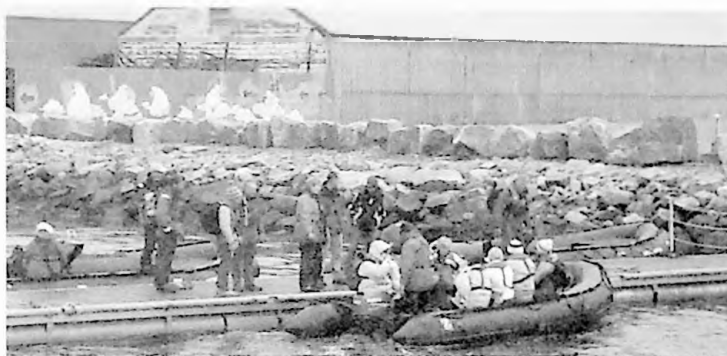

He outlined the six main objectives and then the tactics behind them adding "the tactics are a work in progress... we are working hard to see if there are any concrete ways to move them forward as a country."

The main objectives identified for a medium term (five year) strategy comprise:

Objective one: Retain larger cruise vessels at historic volumes and increase the amount of local spend via a waterfront development.

A key tactic to achieve this was the waterfront development combined with inviting important trade decision makers to the Islands. Mr Trowell emphasised that the development of the current cruise ship landing facilities was a priority.

Objective two: Increase the frequency, length of stay and activity by expedition cruise vessels and yachts through passenger exchanges, routing changes and agreement with South Georgia.

This objective was centred on the provision of a chartered but regular direct air service to North America (Miami) throughout the cruise/tourism season, said Mr Trowell, with a 200+ seat capacity to enable the cruise passenger exchanges.

He said the strategy envisaged the restart of cruise passenger exchanges at the level of 100-150 passengers per week with effect from the 2012/13 season. Other tactics comprised joint marketing with South Georgia and market visits to key expedition companies to build relationships and promote charter and land based extensions.

Objective three: Prioritise attracting more affluent tourists from North America, followed by the UK Germany and the Netherlands.

Tactics included the development and implementation of a commission strategy for land based operators and the support for wholesale partnership and joint venture promotional activity with two selected wholesalers from the UK, North America and Germany and the Netherlands.

An 'in market representative' in Germany and the Netherlands, an extended language section on the website, joint ventures with niche publications such as Lonely Planet, and developing an online booking system for FIGAS were also noted along with other tactics.

Objective four: Improve standards and capacity of facilities for tourists - accommodation, air and sea gateways, staff training and availability, availability of appropriate land and land access, provision of suitable range of activities, improve infrastructure.

Tactics for this objective included the development of a serviced hotel in Stanley with a 25 room capacity as well as two new high quality lodges on West and East Falklands. The latter drew some criticism from FITB Members cynical of the success of such a venture however, others noted similar lodges were successful in Patagonia, a region comparable with the Falklands.

The upgrade of the arrival and departure areas at MPA to an international standard was a tactic included for objective six. Mr Trowell said funding had been made available for this to begin very soon. The creation of annual tourism awards, the upgrade of the Gypsy Cove Road, better toilet facilities and the opening up of land for fishing and hiking were additional aims.

Objective 5: Increase the level of domestic tourism.

Mr Trowell explained the strategy behind this objective included increased information to new recruits based at MPA and new government contractors and their families and the distribution of key tourism updates and collateral to the domestic market; also new walking and historic, travel guides available to promote domestic tourism.

Objective six: Develop joint ventures as a vehicle for developing tourist attractions and facilities including attraction of foreign direct investment.

Mr Trowell outlined two main tactics, the first being continued assistance for private accommodation and attraction providers to enhance what they offer and provide better facilities, and the second to provide sound financial models to attract investment on accommodation projects such as luxury lodges.

He said the Falkland Islands Tourism Strategy will require strong commitment from the government and the industry.

A working group has been set up to drive the objectives forward and the main drivers will be the Falkland Islands Development Corporation and the Falkland Islands Tourist Board. The next steps will be to draw up timelines and allocate resources and responsibilities and pull the resources together.

Mr Trowell told Penguin News, "This is a very exciting time for tourism in the Falklands and this new Strategy now provides the direction to move forward with tangible tactics that will benefit many industries in the Islands."

New Senior Magistrate to take up post in October

MR Carl Gumsley is to take up the post of Senior Magistrate for the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and the British Antarctic Territory.

Mr Gumsley is a practising barrister and Crown Court Recorder and presently practices from his Chambers in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, where he lives.

Commenting on his appointment, Mr Gumsley said he was extremely excited and very honoured to have been appointed as the new Senior Magistrate.

"I had been looking to concentrate on my judicial career more and this is a fantastic opportunity which will allow me to do what I love, against the background of the stunning beauty of the Falkland Islands, its incredible wildlife and the legendary hospitality of the people," he said.

"I am looking forward to dealing with the variety of different areas of law which the post demands. I hope I will serve the people of the Islands well. I am particularly looking forward to putting what 4 x 4 skills I have to the test and learning how the real experts do it."

He has experience in a number of areas of law including crime, civil, family and mental health amongst others.

As well as fulfilling his roles as a barrister and a judge, he has lectured and tutored at the local university. He is also a member of the Ministry of Justice project "You be the Judge" which seeks to bring a greater understanding of the Criminal Justice System to the public and introduces students from local universities and schools to the court system.

But it would seem that Mr Gumsley who is due to arrive on October 27, is not looking for a quiet life in the Falklands as he has promised himself that he will finally learn the saxophone during his time here.

He is married to Jackie who has a daughter, Emma, who is staying in the UK to complete her degree. However, they will be accompanied by their two dogs, an elderly and grumpy Westie and a youthful and enthusiastic Labrador.

There is going to be a referendum on 3 November 2011

You will be asked this question:

DO YOU WANT A SINGLE CONSTITUENCY
FOR THE WHOLE OF THE ISLANDS?

If you want a single constituency for the whole of the Islands: vote "YES"

If you want separate constituencies for Camp and Stanley: vote "NO"

How is the Assembly elected now?

There are two constituencies in the Islands:

- Camp, which elects 3 members to the Legislative Assembly
- Stanley, which elects 5 members to the Legislative Assembly

On 2 September 2011 there were 262 voters in Camp and 1315 in Stanley.

So, having these two constituencies means that there is:

- one member for every 87 voters in Camp
- one member for every 263 voters in Stanley

Single Constituency Bill

The Single Constituency Bill would amend the Constitution to replace the two constituencies with a single constituency. If it becomes law, voters throughout the Islands would elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

That would give everyone (in Camp and in Stanley) more choice about who to vote for. However, it might mean that none of the 8 members of the Legislative Assembly comes from Camp or that none of them come from Stanley.

The Legislative Assembly can only pass the Bill if two-thirds or more of those voting in Camp and two-thirds or more of those voting in Stanley support the Bill by voting "Yes". If that happens (and only if that happens), there could be a single constituency to elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

If a third or more of those voting in Camp or a third or more of those voting in Stanley oppose the Bill by voting "No", the Bill cannot be passed and the two constituencies will stay separate.

The Single Constituency Bill has been published in the Falkland Islands Gazette. If you want a copy of the Bill, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

What about the voting system?

In 2001, the referendum was not just about whether or not there should be a single constituency but also about a voting system for elections.

To keep things simpler this time, the referendum on 3 November 2011 is only about whether there should be a single constituency.

What happens next?

The referendum will be held on 3 November 2011. Information about when and where to vote will be announced nearer the time.

If you are registered to vote, you will be able to vote in the referendum.

If you are entitled to vote but are not registered, you should register to make sure that you can have your say on the issue.

If you want to check whether or not you are registered to vote or if you have any queries about registering to vote, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

Back on the Farm...order is restored

As the Newman clan return to Stanley, the Alazia family pick up the reins again and see that order is restored on the family's acres, Tex has the final word...

Bellies overfilled with junk food and draught beer and wallets emptied we have returned to wrestle our farm back from the Newman family.

While they were adapting to farm life we were enjoying a holiday in the UK. We spent the first two weeks near Lanark seeing daughter Felicity and her partner Willie. I was happy to escape shopping and helped Willie with shearing, sorting sheep and cattle for sales and even had time to climb the Tinto Hills, where you can see Glasgow from a safe distance.

We also had a great weekend at the Peebles Show, the highlight of which was at the days end visiting a caravan belonging to one of the shows organisers which was best described as a sports bar complete with... Ron Rozee! A few great hours resulted in me offering to help dismantle the show ground fences next morning. Thirsty work it was too, but no "good morning Tex" from old Ron, instead, "you haven't got a beer in your car che?" was his greeting.

We then left Willie to fend for himself for a week and bombed down the M6 to North Wales where the population seems to be mostly made up of Mandy's relatives.

A week of meals with each sister and mother in law and a bit of bowling, cinema (Cowboys and Aliens is great) and I even tried the 'in thing' - a fish pedicure.

Those little fish were no match for the thick rhino skin of my feet and they soon left the hard stuff to gnaw away at softer ankles. With feet feeling great we climbed Mt Snowdon, another great view if you can manage to stand on the very crowded summit.

Our last week was spent down south, delivering boxes for shipment and more shopping, where Mandy bought her dream new lounge furniture, courtesy of Harvey's and sold to us by the brother of BFBS radio presenter Dusty Miller. A day trip to London ended the hols before heading to Brize and home.

Arriving at Fox Bay via Mount Pleasant and town we were relieved to see our farm sitters had left our horse parked up by the air strip. We'd half expected to find the Newman clan chained to our boundary gate in a copycat of the Essex gypsies awaiting eviction.

Four weeks of driving a VW Touran sets the mind to mount a car from the right, where as our pickup is left hand drive. The times I have got into a vehicle only to find no steering wheel.

A bit of a slide on the road pretty soon reminds one that there's a big difference between tarmac and wet clay and boulders.

A bit closer to home and we see a strange vehicle heading our way. We experience a moment of anguish that it might be a stock truck hired by Andrew and full of our hogs heading to the abattoir as

Scenic Wales with family and friends

OSL (old season lamb), but we discover it is James and Jennifer with a newly acquired Rover.

Another half hour to Port Edgar and we're much relieved to have seen at least some of our sheep still in the camps they were meant to be.

The last hill is reached with some pleasant anticipation and another heart attack is averted as what looks like smoke rising (oh no, Newman has burned the place down) turns out to be just mist or more likely, seeing as it is Port Edgar, steam rising off the much warmer grass.

Old ginger cat and the dogs were fairly pleased to see us but they had that look of, "Oh no back to you lot feeding us again - no more treats for us."

Everything has been left just fine by the wannabe farmers and they have done a great job looking after the farm. All the sheep we've seen so far seem to be in the right camps and of sufficient numbers to suggest they are not queuing up outside Sand Bay branded AN.

Thanks again to a great family that do a great deal for Camp social life.

I am off now for my favourite supper of steak and kidney pie... that's if Andrew hasn't fed them all to his ginger friend.

Lack of direction from TAC says ferry boss

THE Transport Advisory Committee should "take more ownership of transportation as a whole in the Falklands," Work Boat Services Manager Adam Cockwell stated at the meeting on Friday.

He said little direction was given to Work Boat Services and the Falkland Islands Government Services (FIGAS) by the group, which seemed to be primarily reactive to complaints about the state of roads.

Mr Cockwell said as an industry representative he should be receiving feedback from the customer via the various representatives, saying, "the whole purpose of the committee is to advice on transport," and as such should be more "proactive."

He noted that it was his aim to offer the best possible service, but expected a greater degree of guidance from TAC members.

He also commented that he did not recall any "FIGAS, or Coastal shipping and ferry Executive Council papers ever being discussed in TAC."

Chair MLA Sharon Halford suggested Mr Cockwell and FIGAS General Manager Morgan Goss meet to discuss how the ferry and aircraft schedules might work around each other.

MLA Roger Edwards suggested that when the ferry was not running, it might be useful if FIGAS flew every day. Mr Goss indicated that this would not be possible under the current budgeting direction he had been given by MLAs.

He commented, "If I really followed MLAs direction we'd only fly every ten days."

Mr Goss and Mr Cockwell agreed to meet in order to examine whether there was common ground with regard to service provision, although the latter reiterated that it was not his role to make proposals to the committee, but that committee proposals should be put to the service providers.

MLA Halford said Mr Cockwell's expectations of the TAC were covered in part five of the Terms of Reference which notes, "In the exercise of its functions the Transport committee shall take special note of the interrelations between land, sea and air transportation and the effects changes to one may have on the other." She disagreed with his interpretation that the TAC was only reactive and not proactive.

Road and ramp help refused

DAVID and Suzan Pole-Evans of Saunders Island were refused financial help from government with labour and heavy equipment to create a ramp for use with the Concordia Bay as it is "not within our current policy" said Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside at the recent Transport Advisory Committee Meeting. It was noted the farm had been provided with gabions for the ramp. Their request for a labourer and plant to assist with the tourist track to the Neck was also refused as the farm "already had plant necessary to the work."

Road seal trial

A ROAD sealing trial with eco-track materials will take place in October confirmed Roads Engineer Simon Catton. Two hundred metres of the material will be laid the full width of the road on the back side of Fitzroy Ridge on a Sunday to be decided.

Initially a much larger order had been considered, however, Mr Catton said there had been an indication from the manufacturer of potential problems with the material at very low temperatures. The materials cost just over £4,000.

Music making Maggie

EAST Falkland farmer Maggie Goss has been tinkling the ivories of her piano accordion for the pleasure of family and friends for many years and more recently delighting tourists at the Sea Cabbage Café at Bluff Cove with her foot tapping tunes.

She now has a CD out called The Falklands Way, which includes music written by the late Owen McPhee, Rock Berntsen and her brother Robin Goodwin.

One of a large musical family whose parents both played accordion, Maggie said the CD was recorded in Pete King's front room and has traditional and Scottish tunes as well as a bit of country.

Discs will soon be on sale in Stanley, but if you would like to order in advance, contact Pete King on pk@horizon.co.fk.

Maggie said they hope to put another disc together next winter and joked that with old age catching up and arthritis setting into her fingers, it was time to get the music preserved.

Maggie has her own particular style and is an accomplished self taught musician whose music and lifestyle is The Falklands Way, every step of the way.

This week Andrew Pollard shares his action shot of an Orca off Sea Lion Island.

"Whilst it is far from being my 'highest quality' photograph, it is my favourite regarding, being in the right place at the right time. I captured this photograph using a Canon 500D with an 18-200 lens. This photo of the breach is actually part of a five photo sequence and would have been better if mounted on a tripod. However, some times you just have to rely on turning around and hitting the trigger," said Andrew.

Grateful Greenough boys parachute for cancer charity

Geoffrey and instructor

Brandon and instructor

GEOFF and Wanda Greenough are currently living in Southampton with their children while Geoff completes his cancer treatment.

Inevitably this has affected the entire family, but they are quick to praise the fantastic support they have all received from the doctors and staff at the Southampton General hospital.

To show their appreciation

Geoff and Wanda's sons, decided to do a parachute jump to raise funds for Ward D3 and the Uro-oncology units.

It took four attempts to get everything including the weather in place but on June 26, Brandon Greenough and Geoffrey Wells took the plunge from 13,000 feet and raised a massive £905.

Fund raising had taken place both in the Falklands and in the UK and Ward D3 are now the proud owners of a laptop which sports a plaque thanking the staff from the Greenoughs and the people of the Falkland Islands who had made donations.

A further £605 was given to the uro-oncology fund, which helps cancer patients cope with life during cancer, family breaks away, rehabilitation and a whole range of other things to help cancer patients and their families.

The family also donated a Falkland Island clock and a picture as a thank you for caring for Geoff during his cancer treatments.

Ben Mead, Geoff's doctor who is soon to retire was presented with a map of the Falklands, a Falklands clock and a pen, for all he has done for Geoff. "Dr Mead's dedicated work will be very much missed by all those people he has helped," said Wanda.

Gus Seebaran, Geoff's cancer care worker was also given a Falklands picture. "He has been excellent to Geoff as well as to us as a family and he is also starting up the uro-oncology fund to help other cancer patients," Wanda explained.

"We were very proud of Brandon and Geoffrey for doing this jump to raise awareness for cancer and support their dad, and we watched them with pride," she added.

"We would like to say a huge thank you to everyone who donated in any way and not forgetting Violet Clarke for all the hard work she put in on our behalf.

"Also a huge thank you for all the support, messages and cards we have received during this very difficult time in our lives," said Wanda.

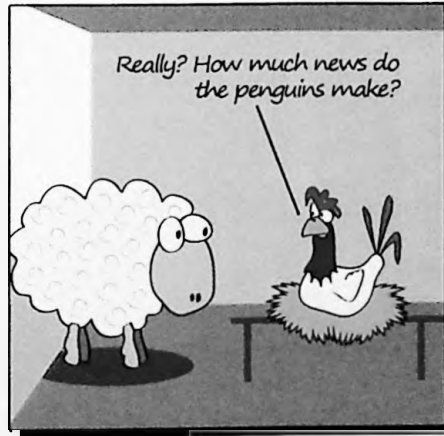

"Geoff is doing well, he has frequent scans and blood tests, so fingers crossed he will be clear now, and then we can come back home."

Craft Fair 2011

THE Falklands Craft Fair 2011 had many colourful entries this year with each category supported by a wealth of artists and craftsmen and women. Organiser Natalie Smith had many thanks to make... "On behalf of the Falkland Craft Fair I would like to thank our sponsors, the judges and those who kindly helped to display the entries and clean up afterwards. Thank you to John Birmingham for the announcing and to Richie Anderson for presenting the prizes.

"Also thank you to everyone who came to view the show and bought raffle tickets - we rely on the proceeds from admission fees and the raffle to cover the children's prizes and other running costs.

"Although entry numbers were down on the last few years the standard was as high as ever and displayed some of the amazing talent we have here in the Islands.

"It is not too early to start preparing your entries for next year's show which will as usual be in early September. For more information and a wonderful collection of photos from over the years check out our Facebook page - just search for Falkland Craft Fair."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)...Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

2.182 MHz IIF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The EMI has increased this week to AU $1,294 cents/kg (clean) (844GB p/kg). Good sales and good clearing rates in New Zealand and Australia for all types of wool were seen last week, and market reports say the same for this week. A very positive market at present.

As mentioned in a previous Wool Market Report there has been a resolution between China and South Africa over importing wool into China from regions in S.A. with Rift Valley fever a very infectious livestock disease. Although it has never been proven to be transferred in wool after the first outbreaks in 2010 the export of wool to China fell by 75%. Some of this volume will now be available which will increase supply, which potentially will affect price.

For those of you who missed it the Falklands were on the BBC news earlier last week when they did a piece on wool prices. Robert Ferguson was interviewed and North Arm shearing shed was shown. Strap-toothed calf found by David and Suzan Pole-Evans in 2004

Gray's beaked whale on display at Mike Butcher's home

Rare whale findings make Islands a global treasure spot

THE discovery of a rare whale dead on a beach might be an exciting discovery elsewhere in the world but it doesn't faze some Falkland Islanders these days. Or does it?

A scientific paper recently published in the Journal of the Marine Biological Association of the United Kingdom found that the Falklands is one of the world's hot spots for the rarest family of whales, the beaked whales.

The study found that beaked whales, recognised by a skull with an elongated beak and sometimes with a few large teeth, are regularly found washed up on beaches in the Falklands. But as a co-author of the paper, Helen Otley puts it, "when we say regularly we mean like one a year or one every two years because some of the species recorded are known globally from a handful of records, as skulls found on beaches and/or brief glimpses at sea."

The records from both the Falklands and South Georgia were gathered from previously published scientific papers going back to 1866 and from skulls collected by Islanders with much of the work undertaken by John Smith in the 1980s and 90s.

However, some of the more recent research has confirmed the identification of all the whale skulls by analysing the genetics extracted from a small bone shaving by Dr Merel Dalebout at the University of New South Wales in Australia. Associated costs were covered by the Environmental Studies Budget and Falklands Conservation's grants scheme.

John and Helen have collated 37 records of beaked whales stranded in the Falklands and one in South Georgia with seven species recorded - Strap-toothed (most common), Andrew's, Arnoux's, Cuvier's, Gray's, Hector's and Southern Bottlenose whales. Helen explained the findings in the Falklands are all the more interesting because Falkland Islanders have taken photos and kept the skulls. The whales range from a very young 200cm long strap-toothed whale calf found by David and Suzan Pole-Evans in 2004 to Alan Henry's beautiful Andrew's beaked whale found at Pleasant Roads in 2008, and the full skeleton of a Gray's beaked whale that stranded at Green Patch in 2000, which Mike Butcher has on display. Many more skulls are on display in the Falkland Islands Museum.

"The more I collected beaked whale records, the more I realised they aren't a rarity for the Falklands," said Helen. She sees that lack of rarity as the thing that's special, adding, "the more we delve into our Falklands' natural history, the more the Falklands gets recognised as a global treasure spot."

In the vast majority of the cases, just a decomposed skeleton was found, so it is difficult to tell where and how the beaked whale died. Although some whales would have died naturally at sea and then washed ashore, beaked whales are very vulnerable to being injured by underwater noises generated by ships, particularly those using sonar (e.g. Navy vessels) and seismic survey vessels. Some strandings of beaked whales elsewhere have occurred around the time of naval exercises or seismic surveys.

Helen said that as beaked whales are deep divers, scientists have postulated that the sound waves in the water might be causing them to surface too rapidly or stay down too long or the sounds cause direct damage to the muscles and tissues of the whales. For this reason, the Falkland Islands has always had strict regulations on how seismic survey vessels operate.

"I think it would be difficult to say that the high number of beaked whale strandings in the Falklands was not a natural reflection of there being many at sea but only due to whales dying from injuries caused by the noises made by ships," said Helen, adding, "certainly, our work has shown a long history of beaked whale strandings prior to the 1990s."

"And like Theo Delignières's recent find of Hector's beaked whale, we need to keep on reporting all dolphins and whales found."

"So if you're out in camp and you find a recently stranded cetacean or even a weathered old skull, take a photo, record the location and let Falklands Conservation or the Environmental Planning Office know."

West King flies north

A KING penguin stored in the Falklands Museum freezer for several years has been restored to its former glory by taxidermist Steve Massam and is soon to make its way to the November opening of a newly refurbished section of the Oates Museum in the UK.

On display at Craft Fair on the weekend the penguin which was found dead on West Point will soon make its way north with Museum manager Leona Roberts.

Taxidermist Steve is always on the lookout for specimens, rare or common, the fresher and less damaged the better, but any specimen would be considered, if not for taxidermy skeletal preparation could be an alternative option.

Islanders take first steps on FIG career ladder

IN ORDER for local talent to be increasingly represented in professional and senior management roles within the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) the Career Development Scheme was launched this week.

The scheme aims to provide financial support to those who successfully gain entry on to the scheme Human Resources' Hilary McFarland told Penguin News.

Describing the background to the scheme Ms McFarland said it was recognised that FIG currently employs a good deal of overseas contract staff in certain professions and senior management roles because of the specialised qualifications and experience they can bring to the service (qualifications and skills are not always immediately readily available in the Islands when such posts have fallen vacant).

She said though FIG completely appreciates the great and varied talents that people can bring without having formal qualifications, more and more FIG has to ask for such qualifications and experience in posts as a minimum, because the roles in question work increasingly on an international stage, where such qualifications or specialisms are considered as essential to the delivery of the work.

She said although some Islanders have had the opportunity to study for these qualifications, for a number of reasons others may not and so find themselves unable to apply for senior posts in Government at the moment.

She explained the scheme hopes to address that, and reduce FIG's dependence on overseas appointments by providing opportunities for Islanders to study for relevant qualifications so that they can be in the best position possible when such posts become vacant in the future.

Because the scheme is aimed at increasing the number of eligible local applicants for such posts, only those with Falkland Islands Status or Permanent Residence Permits (PRP) will be eligible to apply for funding.

The qualification an applicant wishes to study will need to be one that is required for a specific government post or is a requirement of a range of posts and therefore by studying the qualification, "you will clearly improve your future career prospects for a government post."

Ms McFarland said: "You must be able to evidence that you are likely to be successful with the qualification. There are a number of ways you can do this and these will be tested at the selection stage.

Individuals not currently employed by FIG will be given financial support up to the equivalent of a 50:50 split of the course fees. This sharing of funding is "to ensure a firm commitment and motivation to completing the qualifications."

Advice on types of qualification study to be supported and on available courses can be obtained by contacting the Assistant Director of Education (see advertisement) or the Department of Health and Education can advise on courses relevant to that sector.

The priority areas that have been agreed on for this year are: teachers (Camp and travelling – all phases and subjects) nurses, pharmacists, midwives, engineers, (civil, mechanical and electrical in particular) and technicians, medical doctors, (practitioners and specialists) vets and agricultural advisers, lawyers/ legal practitioners, accountants and auditors, fisheries scientists/ researchers, senior business managers, social workers and aviation engineering specialists.

This is not FIG's first scheme with comparable aspirations: running concurrently is the very successful General Management Scheme (for up and coming managers who would like to reach director level) and the Succession Planning Scheme which involves 'grooming' individuals for particular jobs that may become vacant in the next few years.

Principal Crown Counsel Rosalind Cheek (37) from the Attorney General's Chambers and Junior Technical Assistant Caris Stevens (24) employed by the Design Office are both on the latter scheme.

Ms Cheek said as a result of the scheme she now has a plan to work towards being potentially able to apply for the Attorney General's post in a few years time.

In the meantime she will be placed on secondment early next year, and then again perhaps in a year or two, "so that I will have had the support and training opportunities to give me the best chance if I were to apply in the future."

Ms Cheek has been with the Attorney Generals Office for 10 years, "so I have a lot of years left in my career and I'm not in a desperate rush, it just means if I do apply I am a credible candidate."

She emphasised, "I wouldn't want any suggestion that if I got the job it was purely because of being a Falkland Islander, its an incredibly challenging role so the job can't be underestimated."

Ms Cheek studied law at Newcastle University before attending the Guildford Law School and then undertook her solicitors training contract with a UK firm.

Miss Stevens is on the scheme with a view to replacing a contract officer in one of a number of posts including Property and Facilities Manager and Contracts Manager.

She begins a distance learning course in May 2012 with the College of Estate Management to do a Postgraduate Diploma/Masters in Surveying. This will take just over three years.

Miss Stevens degree was in Interior Architecture which she explained wasn't completely appropriate for a career in the Falklands; her degree relates to the redesign of older buildings, and most architectural work in the Islands deals with new builds. She said the scheme was offering her "stepping stones" towards the employment she desires within FIG.

Career Development Scheme Investing in your future and the Islands

It is known that Members of the Legislative Assembly are committed to developing local talent in order to secure a positive and prosperous future for the Islands and have been working on developing initiatives to support this commitment.

The Falkland Islands Government is therefore pleased to announce the launch of one such opportunity - the Career Development Scheme.

This particular scheme is aimed at increasing the numbers of Falkland Islanders and Permanent Resident Permit holders taking up senior professional and management roles in Government in the future.

The scheme offers a chance to receive financial support to study for a substantial, formal higher education or professional qualification that will be relevant to the posts which FIG see as high priority in the medium to long term for the Islands such as nursing, teaching or engineering etc.

In return for this financial support you would be expected to apply for suitable Government posts in the 5 years after you gain the qualification.

For further details of this scheme or to apply for funding, please contact the Assistant Director of Education in the Department of Health and Education on tel 27289 who will provide you with an information pack giving full details of the scheme and an application form.

Closing date for applications is 7th October 2011

Cricketers warmed up for outdoor practice

WITH the start of the outdoor cricket season only a couple of months away, the Falkland Island cricketers have been participating in an indoor league in order to prepare themselves for the upcoming summer.

One of the main purposes of the league was to try and introduce new players into the sport and to encourage those who used to play to pick up a bat and begin cricket training again.

Five teams entered to play in the league on a 'round robin' basis. The games were played every Sunday evening from 6pm to 8pm.

The Fire Service team, captained by Andrew Brownlee, went unbeaten in the league to claim the top spot.

In close second were The Johnny Foreigners, captained by Martin Collins. They unfortunately lost to the Fire Service in their last game of the league cementing the Fire Service as champions.

We hope to hold another competition before outdoor practice commences at the beginning of November. It will be a similar set up to the previous league but with a couple of new teams competing for first position.

The start date for the second competition will be this Sunday September 18, so please come along and watch the Falkland Island cricketers in action.

The Falkland Islands Junior

Cricket Club has also been training indoors in preparation for the summer season. The most talented U17 cricketers were selected to form the Junior Club, and train once a week in the sports hall working on their technique and improving their personal level of ability.

Along with practical sessions, they also learn the rules and etiquette of cricket in the classroom. Once confident of the rules and at a high enough standard they will begin playing matches against each other in the field and further improve the level of cricket at which they are currently playing.

If you have any questions regarding cricket in the Falkland Islands or you are interested in joining the club please do not hesitate to contact me.

Adam Glanville wins the September Medal

THIRTEEN golfers set out into a cool north wind on Sunday to compete for the Décor Services September Medal.

Conditions were tricky, although some of us made them seem harder than they were. Adam Glanville followed up a solid round last month with a winning score this time around. Adam shot 77 for a nett 66 and won by one shot from Tim Bonner with a nett 68.

Only three birdies were recorded, by Adam on the 5th, Darren Wade on the 18th and Ric Nye on the 4th. The golf club would like to thank Décor Services for their continued sponsorship of the Monthly Medals.

The next competition will be a whiskey stableford on September 18. This will be a club sponsored fun competition to give members some competition practice before the season gets into full swing in October. All competitions from now on will revert to summer tee off times; sign in by 0900 for a 0915 tee off. Check out www.falklandsgolf.com for competition results, juniors, fixtures (new list being finalised), links to sponsors and more.

Argentine threat to airlink is act of desperation says Cheek

IF Argentina goes through with its threat to suspend the Falklands/Chile airlink it will be an "act of desperation," said Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek.

President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner this week told the United Nations, "once again we convene the UK to abide by UN resolutions," (for talks on the Falklands) adding, "we will wait for some more time, but if not we will be forced to review current provisional understanding."

She added, "I refer to the 14 July 1999 understanding when it was agreed to have a two way weekly flight by LAN Chile linking the Malvinas."

The July 14, 1999 agreement was signed in London by Foreign Secretary Robin Cook, his Argentine counterpart and Falklands councillors. Under the agreement Argentine citizens could once again travel to the Islands on their Argentine passports.

Britain has adamantly refused sovereignty negotiations over the Falklands, "taking advantage of its condition of member of the UN Security Council with a right to veto," said Kirchner.

"It is obvious the UK cannot claim sovereignty over a territory that's 14,000 kilometres away from their land. We are not asking the UK to accept sovereignty talks straight away, we are asking the UK to comply with the UN General Assembly resolutions."

MLA Cheek said: "It's clearly a threat and we are expecting more in the lead up to the Argentine elections.

"Although hypothetical, if she carries out the threat in my opinion it would be a massive own goal, she would be cutting the Islands off from Argentine veterans and their families and from Argentina's neighbours... I think if she went through with it, it would be an act of desperation, it would also harden Falkland Islanders attitudes towards Argentina."

MLA Cheek said, "We are not open to blackmail," adding, "we are constantly looking for alternatives (airlinks) anyway."

Speaking to Penguin News the Governor said: "Much of the language used in the speech is familiar. The implicit threat to the air link is new, although it is not exactly clear from President Kirchner's speech what she is proposing. We would naturally regret any further unilateral Argentine action which damaged the links between the Falkland Islands and neighbouring countries.

"You saw from last night's reception for the Chilean community here what the real benefits of strong neighbourly relations can be. The Falkland Islands have an important role to play in the South Atlantic region. The cooperation we used to have with Argentina in a number of areas - fisheries, hydrocarbons, communications - was to the advantage of all in the region. It is regrettable that Argentina has systematically withdrawn from most of these arrangements, and now appears to threaten to withdraw from another."

Foreign Office to meet with Rocky

ROCKHOPPER shares dropped 6.75p to 202.25p yesterday despite London City voices saying the AIM-listed company looked well set to attract bid interest.

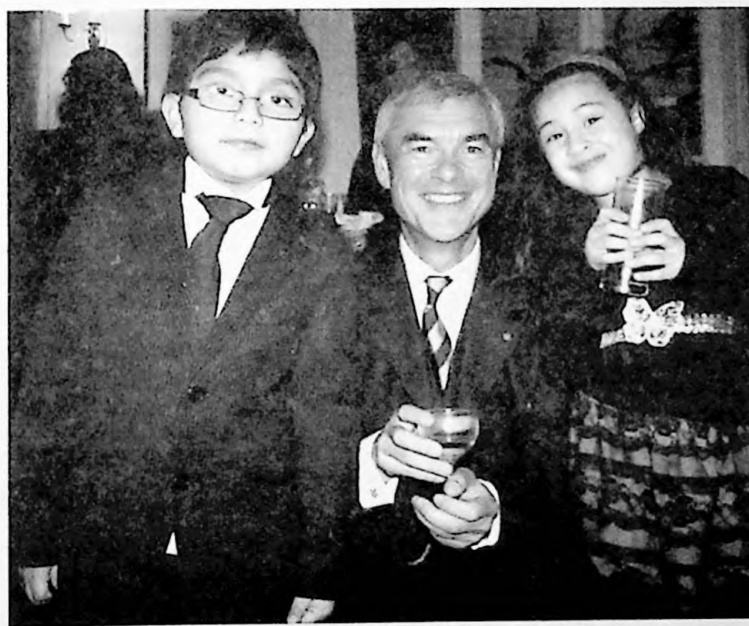

It was also reported this week that Senior Foreign Office officials will be meeting with Rockhopper investors and potential investors to discuss the Falklands according to a Foreign Office spokeswoman.

Reuters report that Fidelity Worldwide, Royal London Asset Management and Legal & General Investment Management are among Rockhopper's top ten shareholders.

"These are education sessions held for the benefit of investors and potential investors to teach them about the relationship between the British government and the Falkland Islands government," a source familiar with the situation said of the meetings.

The Foreign Office official declined to comment on when the meetings were scheduled to take place.

Falklands celebrates important Chile links

HIS Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood hosted members of the Chilean Community at a reception at Government House on Wednesday evening.

In a speech to guests he noted that Chileans played an important part in the Islands' social and economic life.

He said, "It was wonderful, for example, to see players from Chilean backgrounds representing the Falklands at the recent Islands games."

Mr Haywood added, "The historic links between the UK and Chile go back over 200 years to the time of Chile's independence."

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

DESPITE those who would argue to the contrary I remain convinced there's a fair few advantages to increasing maturity. After all, even if one's skin loses a degree of elasticity, metaphorically speaking it also grows a whole lot thicker: a pretty reasonable swap, particularly if you work in local media.

But it's not just about the physical aspect, little things make us over-forties happy. Last week I drove a JCB for the very first time, and this week I read that moderate drinking of ale and lager can cut the risk of diabetes and high blood pressure. With my student days left far behind I never feel obliged to wear flat shoes (apart from when driving heavy plant) or even pretend I don't like country music. So you see, post teenage angst and pre hip replacements, getting older isn't so bad.

On the downside you start worrying about duller issues. Is the paint flaking off my house and why is my pension worth so little? And over recent years I've occasionally pondered the question of who will make up the next generation of the Islands' Legislature.

Happily with regard to the latter, Nadia and Pippa's inspiring jaunt to the Commonwealth Youth Parliament (see page 4) and their idea to set up a Falklands Youth Parliament is reassuring. Currently in the Falklands there are few ways for young Islanders to become involved in local politics. While government committees would, without doubt, welcome some fledgling blood, it takes quite an unusual degree of self confidence for a younger individual to view themselves as a worthy addition to an advisory body.

What could be more welcome then, than an organisation that would not only promote debate, but encourage the idea that a career in politics could be based on a practical understanding of the issues faced in the care of one's country, and not necessarily on a deeply academic knowledge of the rather intimidating concept of 'politics'?

It is worrying how often Islanders can hear to suggest they are unqualified to be a Member of Legislative Assembly because they "don't know much about politics," when in fact there must be a fair few of our current MLAs who wouldn't recognise a definition of political science, or even international relations, if it bounced out of google and slapped them in the chops. And why should they? There are probably a host of reasons why the community has judged (or arguably mis-judged) that past or present representatives haven't been up to the job, but the lack of a degree in politics likely wasn't high on the list.

ITT sell Falklands at Travel Mart Latin America

Sally Ellis and Abbie Heathman in Brazil

"WHAT'S new?" was the question most asked of International Tours and Travel agents Sally Ellis and Abbie Heathman at their visit to the 35th Travel Mart Latin America held in Florianopolis on the south coast of Brazil this year.

Displaying as Falklands Travel "to connect us more directly to our product," said Mrs Ellis, "we had up to 40 preset appointments between buyers (tour operators, wholesalers and the like from all around the world) and sellers (operators selling destinations, hotels and services in Latin America) over the two days."

She said this was an ideal way of meeting face to face with operators who concentrate specifically on Latin American as a destination. Additional business is undertaken over various social events which also provide a backdrop for the current host country and next year's host (Colombia) to sell themselves through displays of local music, dance and food.

"With a new brochure hot off the press ITT were able to provide up-to-date and visually impacting information on the Falklands to both existing and new operators in each 15 minute appointment."

Mrs Ellis said the ultimate aim was to secure much fought after space in an operator's brochure and website which means they will be actively marketing the Falklands. "In so doing we are reaching a much wider audience than the Falklands tourism industry could ever achieve single handed."

She said it is often a question of "courting" operators over a three or four year period before bagging the space.

As always it is not all plain sailing, said Mrs Ellis, "the same problems have continued to dog our selling power for many years. The lack of a comprehensive and across the board commission structure in the Falklands is always a sore subject and one that definitely hampers our efforts. No operator is going to opt to sell the Falklands if they are not rewarded in some way for doing so."

She explained it made little financial sense for them to put effort and money into marketing and staff training to sell a destination which any prospective client could book cheaper by going directly to the supplier or operator in the Falklands.

"In this day of internet, travellers find it easy to shop around and get prices locally. ITT are encouraged that implementation of a commission structure is included within the objectives of the newly adopted National Tourism Strategy," she said.

Mrs Ellis said operators were always keen to learn of new or innovative ways in which their clients could explore and enjoy the Falklands. "Whilst the Tourism Strategy has its sights set on new all-inclusive lodges (I live for the day when I am able to offer that as a response to the question, what's new), in the meantime ITT urges all suppliers to put a little thought each year into how they could improve or tweak any product they offer, for example a traditional Falklands dinner one night a week, a special picnic hamper to enjoy during a regular day tour. Value adding means happy clients which means pounds in your pocket."

Waterfront master plan consultants coming soon

THE Development Corporation (FIDC) has announced the appointment of a consultant who will undertake a master planning exercise for the Stanley waterfront area, but it is not known how much the project will cost.

"Unfortunately we can't release this information for reasons of commercial confidentiality," said FIDC's project manager Chris Cole.

Three consultants are due to make an initial visit to the Falklands at the end of September to commence discussions with key stakeholders and organisations, said an FIDC spokesperson.

In early November there will be public consultation which may include a public meeting and other activities.

Marina Projects Limited working with their sub-consultants, PLC Architects is expected to develop a master-plan providing a comprehensive framework of urban design and development strategy for the Stanley Waterfront and Town Centre, said the spokesperson, adding it was expected to become a guide for "future developmental" considerations for the waterfront.

The objectives of the Waterfront Masterplan are to produce a plan which will:

- Provide an amenity for residents and visitors alike that will provide Stanley with a vibrant urban centre for all ages.

- Provide additional accommodation, activities and attractions for land-based and cruise ship tourists, that would add value to Stanley's tourist offering, with the target of increasing tourist spend.

- Provide a new and improved location for the Museum, including a broader opportunity for external exhibits.

- Provide an attractive, appealing and high quality waterfront that will complement the rest of the town reflecting its history and culture.

- Create a warm and appropriate welcome to disembarking tourists (mainly from cruise ships).

- Improve the movement and flow of embarking / disembarking cruise ship passengers along the Waterfront.

Marina Projects said their close links with the marine industry worldwide and ability to engage fully with stakeholders, the superyacht sector and the expanding Antarctic expedition and cruise ship market, would help ensure that the Stanley waterfront masterplan was "truly optimised and in a position to fully exploit the high value tourism opportunities and potential."

FOGL brokers

FOGL, the oil and gas exploration company focused on its licence areas to the South and East of the Falklands has announced that it has appointed Jefferies International Limited as Joint Broker alongside Oriel Securities with immediate effect. Jefferies is a major global investment bank and a leading oil and gas advisory firm. Tim Bushell, Chief Executive of Falkland Oil and Gas, said: "This is an important period for FOGL as we continue to work towards the commencement of the drilling campaign in the first quarter of 2012."

Argos hopes up

ARGOS Resources expects to identify further prospects as the 3D seismic data gathered in the North Falklands basin is interpreted and the company's chairman says the group is on schedule to be drill ready late this year or early next. The seismic data collected is reported to be the best quality seen in the North Falklands Basin to date and with several new prospects already added to its existing prospect inventory Argos is looking to add more. Argos reported a $557,000 loss for the six months ended June 30 2011.

Building regs

THE consultation period for proposed amendments to building regulations closed on Friday September 16. The deadline was extended unofficially after interested parties became aware of the paper's existence and requested further time to respond.

Building Advisor Nick Stevens said the comments received were, "many and varied, both positive and negative." He added that it will take him some time to sift through them and compile a further report.

Same arrests

DURING the last quarter, Police records show a 29 per cent increase in the number of incidents recorded compared to the same period of 2011. Chief Police Officer, Superintendent Barry Marsden said this was due to a more consistent and accurate recording system and that the number of persons arrested was similar to the previous year.

Police group

A POLICE Consultation Group has been formed and held a planning meeting on July 29. An inaugural public consultation meeting has been arranged for October 7 at 7.30pm at the Chamber of Commerce. The Consultation Group is made up of Chief Superintendent Barry Marsden, MLA Gavin Short and Keith Biles.

Chile links

Governor Haywood said it was natural to have a strong relationship with a good neighbour.

"We particularly value the links we have developed with Punta Arenas, which provides us with important air and shipping links," he said.

"The value placed on our relationship with Chile was seen very clearly in the money that was raised by Celia to help Lolol after the earthquake."

Penguin's poll

PENGUIN News' results of their online poll 'What do you think of our new website?' were encouraging. On Thursday 65.3% approved of the site with 36% calling it excellent and the remainder, good, OK or not bad. The other 34.7% didn't like it. MacDonald to go on trial

A JOINT charge of rape against Irene MacDonald who had been charged with the offence along with her husband has been dropped.

In a pre-trial review in the Supreme Court on Tuesday it was announced that the new Prosecution Counsel for the case, Miss Lisa Judge, due to arrive in the Falklands in October, had discovered

"evidential concerns" which led to the charge against Mrs Macdonald being dropped.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said that this did not affect the two charges of rape and a single charge of threatening to kill against Colin MacDonald, who is currently serving a 13 year prison sentence for other sexual offences.

Colin MacDonald rape charges still stand

Other directions from Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis included a request to use the complainants recorded statement as evidence and to make changes to the draft indictment made against Mr Macdonald.

She said the claimant's original belief was that the assault and threat to kill took place between August 1, 1975 and August 31, 1975 but this has been changed to the wider time period of between August 1, 1975 and September 23, 1975.

Mr Trevaskis said it was necessary for all to consider the larger time bracket and how it affected the nature of the charge, evidence and alibis, he added that he hoped it would not adversely affect the case.

Mr MacDonald's trial is expected to start November 14 2011.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

A PLEA – if you want to contact me please either leave a message on my answer phone or at Gilbert House as I seem to spend more time in meetings than I do at home.

I always call back anyone who has left a message as soon as I find it, unless they have said that they will call again later. This week in addition to normal meetings I met Chilean journalists on Monday morning as no-one else was available and will be standing in for the Hon. Bill Luxton at Police Committee on Thursday. Various reasons for absence mean MLAs are thin on the ground this week.

I HAD the pleasure of passing on praise from satisfied 'customers' to a couple of FIG departments this week. I guess it is only human nature to leap to complain and be much slower to praise and thank individuals for jobs well done, but a thank you is always appreciated. I frequently hear of staff in Falkland Islands Government Office in London who go far beyond the call of duty in their care in making arrangements and sorting out problems for medical patients.

I HAVE avoided until now, public comment on recent portfolio changes but would like to emphasise that these are a matter for members to agree by majority decision. If, as was recently the case, a member agrees a change, and then withdraws that agreement we are placed in a difficult position but try to achieve a sensible outcome.

WITH the arrival of the 'visiting season' that is better weather and an appealing season for those who can choose their timing to visit, I try to see the Islands as if through the eyes of a new arrival. Some areas around Stanley are not very pretty, and as my grandson correctly reminded me, some people drop their rubbish anywhere.

While some is a problem for Government, including the much debated subject of disposing of spoil from industrial sites I think we all have a part to play. Should we 'name and shame' the worst offenders, or reinstate beautiful Falklands awards?

Falklands reps get full Parliament experience

THOROUGHLY aware of the sheer volume of work involved in politics at the recent Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP), Nadia Smith said such a high level career may not be for her just yet. "but there was a strong possibility the Falklands Legislative Assembly may beckon one day."

Representing the Falklands, Nadia along with Pippa Christie attended the CYP which was held from September 6 to 10, in the Palace of Westminster and Portcullis House and hosted by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) UK in partnership with the CPA Secretariat during the Centennial Year of the CPA.

Each Commonwealth state was invited to send two delegates to the event within the ages of 17-29, and 100 delegates attended from six different continents.

Many of the other delegates were seasoned Youth Parliamentarians, others were already working as Parliamentary Clerks and a few were already serving politicians in their home states.

Nadia explained the event aimed to give a real flavour of the role of a parliamentarian, and parliamentary processes as well as engaging young people in discussions on the challenges facing the Commonwealth.

60 per cent of the Commonwealth is under the age of 60 and Dr William F Shija, Secretary General of CPA remarked that this highlighted the importance of their attendance as possible future leaders.

Those attending were expected to play a role as members of the government of a fictitious state, Commonwealthland, complete with governing and opposition parties, independent members of parliament, a prime minister, opposition leader and ministers and shadow ministers of different portfolios.

"The days were full-on with caucusing, speeches, debates, motions, bills and Select Committees, with preparation for the following day and discussions of the day's events going on late into the night; often in the bar as we believe is the way of all good Westminster politicians," said Nadia.

"It was interesting to observe the Youth Parliamentarian's differing styles; some straight to the point, some theatrical and humorous, and others whose mannerisms and oratory were uncannily like those we had witnessed in the real Prime Minister's Questions the day before," she added.

So, was all that burning the midnight oil and courageous public speaking worthwhile?

Nadia said: "It enhanced our understanding of the work that goes on behind the scenes in a functioning democracy, as well as making lots of new friends. Many of these friends are likely to be movers and shakers in their countries in the future and will hopefully maintain an interest in the Falklands as they do so."

And while Nadia and Pippa were making new friends they were also surprised at how many long-time Falklands supporters they came across in their four days of rubbing shoulders with the real Parliamentarians in the Palace of Westminster. "Lindsay Hoyle MP, Nigel Evans MP, Baroness Scotland, and Baroness Hooper were also particularly interested in hearing about our competitors in the Commonwealth Youth Games," said Nadia.

The highlight of the four days was the final debate on the motion to reduce Commonwealthland's carbon emissions by 100 per cent by 2050. This was held in the House of Lords, presided over by the Lord Speaker, Baroness D'Souza, with highlights of the debate screened on the BBC Parliament Channel.

"The debate made the history books as it was only the fifth time the House of Lords was used for anything other than official business and the first time ever that members of the House of Commons were invited to sit on the hallowed red benches," said Nadia.

Spurred on by the Falklands' track record in respect of climate change issues, Pippa Christie contributed to the debate urging the Governing and Opposition Parties not to use major powers' own stance on climate change as an excuse for inaction and saying that small states could show the way.

Falkland Islands Government Representative, Sukey Cameron was invited to the House of Lords to observe the debate along with serving members of the House of Lords and House of Commons.

So now with a solid understanding of the parliamentary process Nadia and Pippa hope to be able to harness the experience to help set up a Falkland Islands Youth Parliament so that more young people get the opportunity to engage in debating political issues and to attend similar events all over the Commonwealth in future.

"Thank you to all those who supported our attendance at the event," said Nadia.

In port with the Poncets

HANS Hansson began life in 1960 as a Norwegian rescue vessel. During her career she assisted 947 vessels and has saved 161 lives operating in the Baltic Sea.

Berthed at the FIC jetty she now flies a British flag and is the latest investment of adventurer Jérôme Poncet and his son Dion, who are busy renovating her as a highly capable expedition vessel to tour South Georgia and Antarctica.

Their company Golden Fleece Expeditions has been touring the region for many years with its well equipped motor-sailor yacht Golden Fleece. The ambition to purchase the small ship Hans Hansson stemmed from the ambition to provide extra comfort for a larger numbers of passengers.

The motor-vessel is certainly spacious: guest accommodation on board includes two en-suite twin rooms on the main deck and four twin rooms sharing two bathrooms on the lower deck.

"I'd had my eye on ships of this kind for a while, but we came across it more by chance than accident," said Dion. "The times are changing; people want more luxury and hot showers," he added.

Jérôme and Dion have 55 years experience between them of sailing the stormy southern waters, and have spent the last three years working with BBC film crews shooting the documentary series Frozen Planet.

Sebastian, Jérôme and Dion

The Poncets offer a totally different experience compared to the large tourist cruises that dictate to passengers in order to keep them on a predetermined schedule. The pair provide a more flexible approach to guests and being effectively tour guides themselves they can take clients to more remote locations and build itineraries to suit groups.

The unique Hans Hansson experience will cost the individual on average £150 per day.

"The tour length is usually a minimum of three weeks but it's down to the client really. It takes three and a half days roughly to get to South Georgia and around four travelling back to the Falklands against the wind," said Dion. He added that ideally they look for groups and can carry a maximum of 12 people as well as four crew members.

Powering the ship is the original and huge eight cylinder Bergen diesel engine that looks dated but shines with reliability and craftsmanship: "They don't make engines like this anymore," said Dion. "It hasn't missed a beat in 51 years."

He explained the eight cylinders are each an individual engine, so on the rare occasion one should fail there is back up.

The first expedition is scheduled for late December and will provide a prime opportunity to assess how the ship operates within the Southern Hemisphere.

The hardy vessel has already captured the imagination of the Penguin News staff with the Deputy Editor harbouring sneaky thoughts of exploring Antarctica as ship's chef while noting the old sailor's adage: "Beyond 40°S, there is no law, beyond 50°S, there is no God."

"By tradition," wrote Alan Gurney in Below the Convergence, "those who have rounded Cape Horn under sail can take their after-dinner drink with one foot upon the table; those who have sailed across the polar circles can drink with both feet upon the table," without doubt a right the Poncets have earned many times over.

Grateful for opportunities

I am Chilean but came to the Falklands seven years ago and have since considered this my home. As such, I am grateful for the opportunities the Falkland Islands have opened up for me and have embraced the culture.

I have the utmost respect for this country and its people, and completely agree that the Falkland Islands are British and should remain so. I know the same is true for a number of other Chileans, and those from other countries, who have chosen to live here.

So, why this letter? I would just like to say that, whilst I respect each person's right to have their own political opinion, I find it extremely annoying (and embarrassing) that some people (originally from other countries) feel that they can effectively "stick two fingers up" to the Falklands and their people through their actions, whilst continuing to take and enjoy the benefits of living here.

Everyone is entitled to their opinion but if they know that they are contrary to the widely held opinion why behave in an antagonistic manner? It does no one any favours.

It is a testimony to the excellent (and more forgiving) people of the Falklands that such behaviour is tolerated. In some less democratic and fair countries, this would be a sure route to deportation.

Miguel's query from Cordoba

MY name is Miguel Quiroga and I was born December 1, 1992 in Córdoba, the second biggest city of Argentina.

I was never rich, but I always had a home, food and excellent education in one of the best schools in Córdoba city. From when I was a child I have memories of listening to a recording at my school from the 2nd of April but I didn't understand what was happening. It wasn't until I was 13 in a geography class when we discussed the Islands that I began wondering about it.

Perhaps you question why I am writing in a newspaper from your Islands, because I have heard that Islanders hate my country. Is that true? Since I was 14 I have wanted to speak with Islanders, know their customs, their activities, their work, because it is such unknown territory. I have sent messages to Islanders by Facebook but not received an answer so far.

Maybe you wonder yourself what Argentinean people think. Well when the soldiers came home to Argentina they faced a nation of people who didn't speak to them, they were like ghosts, 'dead people with life', that was what I was told. But then later, perhaps around the year 2000 they were renamed 'our heroes'.

My first contact with a veteran was in 2010 through my own persistence. I asked him to go to my school to give a lecture. From that moment I had even more questions but the veterans could not answer my main question, 'what do the Islanders think, the people who live there'.

I sent e-mails. I talked with an Argentinean veteran. I read books; earlier in the year I was at a meeting where an Argentinean veteran and a British veteran spoke. His name was Christopher O'Brien, and the two veterans are now friends and Christopher has stayed at the house of his new Argentine friend Roberto Briend.

I know it is painful to speak about the war, particularly for the older people. I will never feel what those people feel because I did not experience it. But it is painful for me as well because it is an Argentinean issue too.

I would very much like to be in contact with Islanders – please email me and we can exchange questions and answers.

MLAs at work abroad

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly Sharon Halford and Roger Edwards met with the Foreign and Commonwealth Minister of State Jeremy Browne at the Liberal Democrat Party Conference this week.

Mr Browne is steadfast in his support for Islanders' self determination, commenting recently: "We have no doubt about our sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. The principle of self determination as set out in the UN charter applies. There cannot be negotiation on sovereignty unless and until the Falkland Islanders so wish.

He has also noted, "While we disagree with Argentina over the Falkland Islands, we have a close and productive relationship on a range of other issues, including on economic issues in the G20 and on climate change, sustainable development and counter-proliferation."

The Assembly Members will also attend the Labour Party Conferences in Liverpool between September 25 and 29 and the Conservative Party Conferences in Manchester between October 2 and 5.

Cricket Premier League leaps into action

ON Sunday the Falkland Islands Premier Cricket League got under way.

The Royal Challengers Stanley and Fire Service Rescue 1 kicked off the league with a few new faces playing for the first time.

The Royal Challengers managed to score a total of 98 runs after wicket deductions which looked to be a reasonable target to chase. However, good bowling and fielding resulted in the Fire Service Rescue 1 only scoring 19 runs in their allotted 12 overs after the penalty runs were taken off the total score. Royal Challengers won by 79 runs.

The second match of the evening was played between the Falkland Islands Junior Cricket Club (FIJCC) and Saints Plus One. FIJCC got off to a bad start, losing lots of wickets early into the match and could only put eight runs on the board. With such a small total to beat, the Saints Plus One took no time in scoring a lot of runs after also losing an early wicket due to exceptional fielding resulting in a run out. Declan Bonner took three wickets in his only over of the match, however, it was not enough and the Saints Plus One eventually won by 110 runs.

The fixtures for this Sunday are:

1700 - 1800 FIJCC vs. STDs

1800-1900 Fire Service Rescue 1 vs. Fire Service Rescue 2

1900-2000 Royal Challengers Stanley vs. Saints Plus One

All of the results and league table can be found on the Falkland Islands Cricket Association website - www.falklandscricet.com. Click on the FIPL T12 tab to view information on the league.

Remote Possibilities

The Falklands have featured in the October edition of the Lonely Planet travel guide, following a visit in February this year. The five page article by Rory Goulding showcases the Islands with descriptions of locations on both East and West Falklands and is accompanied by some amazing images by Michael Heffernan.

Entitled 'Remote Possibilities' the article carries the sub-heading, 'Unlock the beauty of the Falkland Islands where penguins outnumber people.'

The monthly magazine is described as a "high end travel publication" with a distribution of around 55,000 in the UK.

Conservation Ball auction already attracting bids

ARTISTS, donors and special guests were invited to a champagne reception last week, to open an exhibition of local artwork donated for the upcoming Conservation Ball auction.

There was a great variety of work on display at the Jetty Centre, with plenty of original artworks and prints, as well as two meals, a trip to South Georgia and two handcrafted bowls.

Silent bids were collected from the exhibit and will be considered alongside other bids at the live auction tonight (September 23), to be hosted by new Agricultural Advisor's Helen Thoday and Warren Landles.

Organiser of the event Farrah Peck said she was extremely happy with the artwork, "I'm very grateful that the local artists we asked donated items, and clearly poured hours of work into their pieces."

The works have been well received by members of the public said Farrah, "people seem very impressed with the donations and we've had quite a few silent bids already."

The Conservation Ball is sponsored by Consolidated Fisheries Limited and funds raised will be put towards Falklands Conservation's many projects such as the tracking penguins, rescuing oiled birds and the Watch Group trips which take youngsters out and about during the summer.

Big four play out last tournament of 2011

JOINTLY sponsored by Ally and Cathy Jacobsen, of the Victory Bar, and Paul and Bunny Bonner, of Bonner's Haulage, the rules for this darts tournament alternate. Being an "odd" year the tournament was played under "Victory" rules, ie it was seeded with the seedings based on the league back of the card results.

Twenty years ago the quartet of James Lang, Colin Smith, Gary Hewitt and Colin Ford were often referred to as "the big four" with their names dominating the darts prize lists. It would appear though that the Victory Bar/Bonner's Haulage tournament on Saturday September 17, 2011 was the first time all four have reached the semi-finals together.

Defending champion Lisa Jaffray did not play in the ladies tournament this year, so it was left to her sister-in-law Sharon to uphold family and team honour.

Sweeping away two of her fellow Rosella team-mates, Sharon survived a controversial final to declare that whilst she has never liked champagne, "it tastes mighty fine out of a silver cup"

Entry numbers were boosted by a contingent of MPA players, and some excellent darts were played throughout the evening by both men and women.

Controversy over the number of legs to be played in some matches, including the ladies final, and the abrupt end to the prizegiving, caused by a fire alarm being deliberately set off, disrupted an otherwise enjoyable evening.

146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice

Marine Band

The Wool Market Report - September 15 2011

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THIS week has seen a decline in the markets and the price with the EMI has falling by 20cents to AU $1,274 cents/kg (clean) (831GB p/kg). After a positive week last week, this week was not, as it was predicted. Although clearance in sales was good, the price was poorer particularly in the finer micron. This has been exacerbated by the change in exchange rate so the picture looks worse. In addition the country debt in Europe is affecting all global markets, wool being no exception.

China is still buying and figures released showed that 72% of Australian exports in July went to China. There were some European buyers but not many, however Italy and the Czech Republic, the main purchasers were still buoyant.

Their Royal Highnesses and The Prince of Wales and The Duchess of Cornwall were joined by representatives of the UK wool industry, as well as figures from the worlds of fashion and interior design at the official opening of the Wool Modern exhibition in London on September 7. It is part of Wool Week organised by the Campaign for Wool.

Out and about on the weekend - the Falklands way

Bikers just outside Goose Green on the track to Walker Creek

Picture Gary Clement

Bikers burn up the miles

AN intrepid bunch of biking and quad enthusiast's met at Goose Green on Saturday morning for a scenic trip around Walker Creek and Goose Green. The weekend had started with a flat calm, sunny spring morning, however, the wind gods had other plans.

By the time we had reached Goose Green and unloaded our bikes a force ten was up and running, stripping the enamel off our tightly clenched teeth, you had to pity the rider's without goggles as minute particles of lava dust exposed the inner workings of the eye ball.

Not to be deterred by such tiny irrelevances, we set off for the first gate, or I should say we rattled off to the first gate; it seemed we held a drag race from one gate to the next, bouncing my old bones like a demented dice thrower intent on winning his first whisky and water.

An interesting sight we saw was an abandoned bore hole left over from the gold prospectors, having hit a deep underground water source, water continues to bubble out, filling Swan Inlet river like someone has left a tap on! There's a business for bottled mineral water anyone?! It had a hint of clay and salt when we tasted it, but I'm reliably informed that in summer it is the sweetest tasting water around. Talking of Swan Inlet, we had to cross it twice, giving a couple of us the chance to show off our Tom Daley diving skills, much to the merriment of all.

Sunday afternoon quickly arrived as we turned homeward from Black Rock, splitting into two groups, one heading for Goose Green and the more adventurous heading into town. We enjoyed the hospitality of the Goose Green social club, the culinary delights of Brian and Gilberto's BBQ in the shearing shed, racing over the endless flats of Lafonia, standing in awe at the magnificence of the Falklands only waterfall at Black Rock and witnessing Curly inspecting the underbelly of a quad, whilst rocketing down the old clay track.

We arrived back in one piece, albeit wind blown, with sore bums and aching muscles, but also a huge happy smile having had a great weekend out of town.

Bono's boys home on Estancia range

The smell of spring in the air is tempting the outdoor type out on the weekends and clay pigeon shooter Bono McKay may have found the perfect recipe for a Falklands day out with the boys.

Making use of the Estancia land which the owners encourage, a mixture of 4x4 driving and clay shooting rounded off with a barbecue cooked in the back of the Land Rover has all the ingredients for a great day out.

and much more.....

Fortnightly with Ginge Kidd

I have to confess I am a bit of a cheat. If there is a way to make life easier - I will take it!

Our vegetable garden is very badly drained and so I would not dream of putting any seeds in just yet. Instead I fill a length of guttering with reasonable soil and plant peas in two rows, about an inch apart within the rows, this I find gets them well ahead for us I will plant some more seeds by the same method in about three weeks time. We could never hope to produce enough fresh peas to freeze for the year (or even a month) but they are wonderful to eat fresh and the grandchildren love to help picking them (and eating many as they go along the rows, yummy!).

Now would also be the time to plant broad beans outside, as however, they are one of the few pulses we don't eat, I will not be bothering with them.

I wish that I had left the onion and leek seeds to plant in pots until now, I really gained very little by planting them last month in pots under cover. I suspect that if I were to plant some more now they would germinate and overtake those planted earlier.

The Savoy cabbages planted last year, have been providing us with greens throughout the winter, both cooked or, as we prefer them, very finely shredded and either added to potato or mixed salads, which gives extra flavour and a change of texture, in a coleslaw or just plain with a salad dressing. Wonderful stuff.

Vibrant yellow crocus

The strawberry plants outside are looking quite healthy, a quick clean up and some slow release fertilizer, such as Growmore, and they can be left to their own devices - the grandchildren will quickly tell us when they are ready! They are already casting their eyes over those growing in the tunnel, and so much more advanced. I haven't the heart to tell them they will also take a few weeks.

Most of the many rose cuttings given to me by friends and put into pots during March and until May have rooted.

Roses which will soon grace the front garden

It's wonderful to see all those fresh white roots snaking out of the pots. I must pot them on individually and let them grow on under cover for a while. We are going to need loads more plants to fill the new flower border in front of the house. Meanwhile I shall have to walk on a board and do some weeding of the flower beds as I am almost twitching with impatience about it. Besides, the various primroses are really having a bit of a job displaying their flowers and it's such a waste! I've noticed also that a few tulips are showing themselves, in fact, some of the earlier, smaller ones, have nice big flower buds on them.

This would be a good time to plant seeds of Livingstone daisies but, much as I admire their blooms on a sunny day in someone else's garden, I lack the patience to plant seeds of them (or any other half-hardy annuals) in pots or seed trays, growing them on and hardening them off before putting them in the flower beds, knowing they will die at the end of a season anyway. It's one of the reasons I grow perennials. They usually disappear for the winter also, but, they come back, bigger and better every year.

I will though towards mid September, scatter seeds of some annuals in any gaps I see, Linaria, Godetia and Eschscholzia come to mind. They will do their own thing and happily germinate and grow in most conditions, providing sheets of colour by Christmas time.

The cabbage and some other seeds planted two weeks ago will have to have a position where the light is at its strongest or they will get very leggy and prone to disease. I am often asked why when we have so much space undercover, we don't grow vegetables all through the winter. The answer is quite simple, lack of the right conditions!

We could probably, provide heating, peat is still quite cheap. But, for plants to thrive and keep producing fresh vegetables they need at least 12 hours of daylight every day. This could be provided by some lamps called 'Grow Lights' but they are very expensive to buy and more so to run! We would probably need our own wind-farm in the backyard.

Tessa, Samantha, Jasmine and Sasha keep a watchful on the strawberry plant's progress

THE ONLY SHOP FOR HOME IMPROVEMENTS

There is going to be a referendum on 3 November 2011

You will be asked this question:

DO YOU WANT A SINGLE CONSTITUENCY
FOR THE WHOLE OF THE ISLANDS?

If you want a single constituency for the whole of the Islands: vote "YES"

If you want separate constituencies for Camp and Stanley: vote "NO"

How is the Assembly elected now?

There are two constituencies in the Islands:

- Camp, which elects 3 members to the Legislative Assembly
- Stanley, which elects 5 members to the Legislative Assembly

On 2 September 2011 there were 262 voters in Camp and 1315 in Stanley.

So, having these two constituencies means that there is:

- one member for every 87 voters in Camp
- one member for every 263 voters in Stanley

Single Constituency Bill

The Single Constituency Bill would amend the Constitution to replace the two constituencies with a single constituency. If it becomes law, voters throughout the Islands would elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

That would give everyone (in Camp and in Stanley) more choice about who to vote for. However, it might mean that none of the 8 members of the Legislative Assembly comes from Camp or that none of them come from Stanley.

The Legislative Assembly can only pass the Bill if two-thirds or more of those voting in Camp and two-thirds or more of those voting in Stanley support the Bill by voting "Yes". If that happens (and only if that happens), there could be a single constituency to elect all 8 members of the Legislative Assembly.

If a third or more of those voting in Camp or a third or more of those voting in Stanley oppose the Bill by voting "No", the Bill cannot be passed and the two constituencies will stay separate.

The Single Constituency Bill has been published in the Falkland Islands Gazette. If you want a copy of the Bill, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

What about the voting system?

In 2001, the referendum was not just about whether or not there should be a single constituency but also about a voting system for elections.

To keep things simpler this time, the referendum on 3 November 2011 is only about whether there should be a single constituency.

What happens next?

The referendum will be held on 3 November 2011. Information about when and where to vote will be announced nearer the time.

If you are registered to vote, you will be able to vote in the referendum.

If you are entitled to vote but are not registered, you should register to make sure that you can have your say on the issue.

If you want to check whether or not you are registered to vote or if you have any queries about registering to vote, you should contact the Registration Officer, either by phoning 27269 or by visiting the Registry in the Town Hall.

Leiv sets sail on solo southern journey

ISLANDER Leiv Poncet sets sail today on a solo circumnavigation of the Southern Hemisphere. Leiv who has kayaked around the Falklands and South Georgia by himself is no stranger to epic journeys and as he told Penguin News, there is no better way to visit far flung places than in the comfort of your own home. Turn to page 5 to read more about Leiv's new adventure.

Lookout Lodge not so woman friendly

LOOKOUT Lodge management does not discriminate against female applications for lodgings, owner Caroline Cotter told Penguin News yesterday; however the accommodation is generally considered unsuitable for females by Ms Cotter and by the Social Services Department.

According to a Social Services Department report to the Housing Committee meeting to be held on Tuesday (October 4), the issue of whether it would be discriminatory if females were not allowed to live at Lookout Lodge was discussed with the Attorney General's department who advised: "If Lookout Lodge is classified as a hostel or dormitory style shared accommodation then it would be within the law for it to restrict the accommodation to a 'men only' policy."

"However, if Lookout Lodge is a hotel, boarding house or other similar establishment then it would be illegal to discriminate on the basis of sex and a claim may be brought by way of civil proceedings"

Ms Cotter confirmed there had been two cases where she had turned down applications by females. The first of these she said was due to the individual's "non-attendance of three pre-arranged meetings to discuss the rules."

On another occasion a girl of four months pregnant applied, but Ms Cotter said she was concerned for a pregnant girl living in the Lookout Lodge environment, and also turned down her application.

Built 13 years ago, Lookout Lodge is low cost accommodation and over the years gained a reputation for unruly behaviour by guests.

Social Worker Sharon Kelly told Penguin News that the shared bathrooms alone made it unsuitable adding that it was "a very male resource."

She said they had been looking at the housing needs generally in the Islands but also how Lookout might be made more female friendly.

Ms Cotter said since taking over in 2009, and buying Wickham Heights Ltd in 2010, she has worked hard to, "turn the place around," and says she is succeeding.

She said the police seemed to view Lookout Lodge as a dumping ground for drunks in the early hours of the morning.

"The problem was those people wouldn't pay for their night's lodgings. I put a stop to that practice by the police. I couldn't have it treated as just a dive."

Some locally based companies stopped using the Lodge over the years, but "we've got the fishing companies back now and have guests from the British Antarctic Survey," she explained.

To utilise the kitchens Lookout Lodge provides hot meals for the oil flight and Ms Cotter, who is a trained chef, is seeking other contracts.

Ms Cotter says her business ethos is "to share the pie." She said she wants money from overseas guests to go, "back into the local economy," as a result she wants to involve as many other local companies as possible in the contracts she is pursuing.

Fisheries licence fees studied

ALTERNATIVE ways to charge Falklands fishing licence fees have been examined in a report presented to representatives of the fishing industry as well as MLA Gavin Short and the Director of Natural Resources John Barton this week.

Mr Barton told Penguin News that consultant Mr Ragnar gave a presentation on the 450 page report, and clarified any issues that might arise from it.

"The essence of it is looking at alternative ways to charge licence fees. Currently we have a quite fixed licence fee system, so we are seeing if there are other ways than the current method," said Mr Barton.

He said the study overall had been very valuable: "It is very timely because we are now several years into the ITQ (Individual Transferable Quota) era and while the licence fees might be the headline of the study there is also scope for fishing companies to invest in the fishery and we will be examining ways of facilitating that in economic terms."

The report has yet to go to Executive Council so those involved declined to comment on the detail of the report, however Director of Fortuna Ltd Stuart Wallace said, "the study is a major piece of work carried out over a number of years by internationally renowned Fisheries economists."

"We think that it will be central to future consideration of the level and type of fees paid by the industry."

"Members of the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association (FIFCA) will consider the report in due course and discuss how we believe its findings and conclusions can inform industry and government fee discussions in future."

Price of Penguin News increases next week to £1.50

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE I am loathe to suggest that any story in the Penguin News is more important than another, conscience dictates that I draw your attention to page 6. 'Have your say' Falklands: GB launches consultation. While it may not sound the most exciting of subject it's almost certainly one of the most vital, for it directly invites each and every citizen of this territory to offer up their opinions on our relationship with the UK and how that relationship might be developed.

Although I personally would struggle to come up with helpful responses to some of the rather broader questions, the inquiry 'What more could be done to raise Territories' profile internationally' did pique my interest, particularly bearing in mind Argentina's internationally staged performance in the role of a country wronged by an 'unco-operative' Britain over their refusal to negotiate on the sovereignty of the Falklands. As Graham Bound notes in his column, Kirchner is doing a grand old job of taking international centre stage, and while our own government is doing its utmost to catch up in the publicity stakes, if the British Government is intimating it might be happy to add some resources to the promotion of the Falklands face, I think we should be logging on and tapping our thoughts with zeal.

After all, as a population that prides itself on expressing opinions freely, we shouldn't therefore shirk the additional responsibility of doing the same in the direction of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. So consider minimising your Facebook page for just a few minutes, turn to www.ukoversasterterritories.readandcomment.com and get creative.

On a subject that may draw less enthusiasm, it seems we are forced to increase the cost of the paper from £1.20 to £1.50 from next week, in order for this organisation to break even. Having discovered on my arrival that this was an inevitable move, due to an increase in printing costs, we have worked all the harder to offer better value to the reader. Whenever it has proved affordable (intermittently in the winter when the print run is lower and when advertising sales have supported it) we have included four extra pages where possible, a practice we intend to continue. The website too offers additional stories (for free) and some interactive fun with the weekly poll. Incidentally we welcome your thoughts with regard to potential subjects for the poll.

Falklands Conservation Trust Chairman Darren Christie accepts the gift of Hawks Nest Pond on West Falkland, watched by land owner Tony Blake, and FC CEO James Fenton (not pictured). Hawks Nest pond was gifted by Tony in memory of Lyn Blake, a Conservation Trustee, who enjoyed watching the variety of birds attracted to the pond. The area is a popular stop for many vagrant bird species and an important breeding habitat and home for Black-necked swans, herons, Silvery grebes, quarks and priority birds Steamer ducks and Ruddy Headed geese.

Sheltered homes refurbished

THE refurbishment of nine sheltered accommodation units has been completed in Thatcher Drive. The two remaining units 10 and 11 Thatcher Drive will be refurbished in 2012/13 financial year when a further £18,000 will be released.

In the Social Services Report to the Housing Committee Meeting to be held on October 4, it is noted, that one tenant has moved in to KEMH residential unit. Another tenant has moved from a two bedroom bungalow into a one bedroom property. This has left a two bedroom bungalow vacant. A couple from the waiting list has been offered this property but they declined.

All remaining sheltered accommodation units are occupied.

Clinica visit

A TEAM of seven from Clinica Magallanes led by their Chief Medical Officer and Mr John Rees from the British Embassy in Chile, is due to visit the Falkland Islands in October 2011 for one week. The exact dates have yet to be confirmed.

Ambulances and police meet the helicopter on Monday

Onion Range injured flown to town

A SAR helicopter landing on the Stanley football field at 6pm on Monday, with injured servicemen on board, sparked rumour locally there had been a shooting accident on the Onion Range MoD training ground.

While we were unable to contact media people at Mount Pleasant this week, a reliable source assured that there had not been a shooting, but that four military personnel in training for deployment to Afghanistan had been carrying large bergens and fallen causing injury. One is thought to have suffered a spinal injury while two others injured their ankles.

At the time of going to print Penguin News had been unable to confirm this information with the MoD.

Taxi driver remanded in custody for sex offences

A 38 year-old Stanley taxi driver was remanded in custody on Tuesday after he admitted three counts of sexual activity with a child and one of meeting a child after grooming.

William Harvey had previously entered not guilty pleas to charges of meeting a child after grooming and sexual touching of a child, but in the light of fresh evidence and the new charges, he changed his plea and also admitted the grooming offence.

The earlier sexual touching charge was withdrawn by the prosecution as it was superseded by the new charges.

The offences took place in May this year, in his room at Lookout Lodge. The court heard that Mr Harvey had become friends with the 15 year-old girl - whose age he was aware of - on the social network site Facebook, and they had then exchanged mobile phone numbers.

Hundreds of text messages had passed between the two, many of which had been sexually explicit, culminating in Mr Harvey persuading her to go to Lookout

William Harvey

Lodge on May 9, when the offences took place.

In other texts retrieved from his phone Mr Harvey had suggested sexual acts as "detention" when the young girl told him she had been in trouble for not completing her homework.

In police interview Mr Harvey was unrepentant saying he had enjoyed the danger of doing something he should not do. He claimed, "she wanted it" and further attempted to shift the burden of responsibility by saying he was, "not her first victim."

Presenting the agreed facts Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told how Mr Harvey had encouraged the girl to sneak out of her home at night and told her to keep their relationship "secret."

The claimant had attempted to protect Mr Harvey because she, "didn't want to get him into trouble," in an early statement, but later told police she regretted getting involved because of the age difference and had said yes to him, because she had, "become confused and didn't know what to say."

Adjourning until October 16 for sentencing to allow time for a presentence report to be prepared, Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said he was satisfied the offences were so serious only a prison sentence was appropriate.

Remanding Mr Harvey in custody Mr Trevaskis said, "you may assume you are beginning your custodial sentence."

Black Borders

FALKLANDS oil and gas explorer Borders and Southern has swung into the black, just months before it embarks on its drilling programme.

The company posted pre-tax profits of $761,211 in the six months ended June 30, compared to a loss of $672,185 in 2010.

The company says it has sufficient funds to complete its two well drilling programme which it hopes to start in mid-January and plans to drill the Darwin prospect first, which boasts an estimated recoverable resource of 300 to 760 million barrels, followed by Stebbing, which has an estimated recoverable resource of 710 to 1,280 million barrels.

The two prospects are geologically independent of one another, so success or failure with the first well has no impact on the second, said a company spokesperson.

Penguin poll

THIRTY five per cent of 134 voters believe that Stanley waterfront should be greatly changed to encourage tourist spend according to the Penguin News website poll.

By Thursday, 26.9 per cent said the jetty and dockyard should be changed, 17.2 per cent said nothing should be changed, 3 per cent said just the jetty and 17.9 per cent said only a little of the waterfront should be altered. Tourism Manager Paul Trowell said, "I think it is very encouraging that the majority of respondents have indicated they are looking for change to increase the opportunities for tourism spend, but to know how this is to be achieved will need a lot of planning and input from the public sector and tourism industry so all will benefit."

Emergency test

THE Falklands Islands Government assisted by HM Forces will be testing their emergency preparedness and response plans on Friday September 30, 2011. Interim Director of Emergency Services and Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden said there would potentially be an increase in air activity, shipping and emergency vehicle movements in the Stanley area between 8.30am and 4.30pm which may involve the use of simulated smoke from the area of Port William.

RTO priorities

WORK on the Road Traffic Bill is progressing with the use of mobile phones while driving and licensing of taxi drivers being given priority. Both issues are to go before the September Executive Council and should be completed and handed to the Legislative Drafter by the end of that month, said Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden at the Police Committee meeting on Thursday.

Drivers fined for speeding

FOUR speeding offences were dealt with in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday before Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis and Justice of the Peace Andrew Brownlee.

All pleaded guilty by post, were ordered to pay prosecution costs of £85 and had their licenses endorsed.

Lookout Lodge resident Hernan Labra who had no previous convictions was fined £100 for driving at 36mph on Ross Road West on August 13.

On August 27 Stanley woman Lyn Jane Summers was clocked travelling at 41mph also on Ross Road West and was fined £150.

On the same day Stanley man Cheveze John Douglas Goodwin was also recorded driving at 36mph on a motorbike on Ross Road West and in light of a previous driving conviction was fined £140.

Goose Green worker Nigel Peter Morrison was fined £85 for driving at 52mph on the Stanley to Darwin road in the Mullet Creek area on September 14 and apologised to the Court for what he said was his, "first driving offence in 26 years."

RFIP response targets 'pretty impressive' says Governor

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police received 176 '999' calls between April and June of which 99 per cent were answered within 10 seconds, meeting targets set in the business plan.

Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden however voiced his doubts at a recent Police Committee meeting that the target of a five minute response time to urgent and non-urgent incidents in Stanley during normal working hours (8am - 2am) was reasonable.

He said not meeting the target left a 'red mark' on their achievements, and that his instruction to staff was to "arrive safely."

Mr Marsden said 76 incidents had been called into the Police Station during normal hours, with 83 per cent of responses achieved within five minutes.

He recalled an incident he had been called to when road conditions had been icy and to attempt to reach the scene within the five minute target would not have been safe.

Governor Nigel Haywood said the current response statistics struck him as being "pretty impressive" adding that the system may have "got ahead of common-sense."

Mr Haywood said it was good for the confidence of the public to know what the aim was, but when the target could not be met, adequate text to explain the situation rather than a relaxation of targets was most acceptable.

There is a 15 minute target for responses outside of normal hours and the three calls received in the time period had been met within that time, said Chief Superintendent Marsden.

Police officers are soon to be kitted out with new expandable batons as well as rigid handcuffs following funding approval as well as CD interview recording equipment and prison tables.

CS Marsden said there were few funds to be handed back at the end of the financial year which was due to extra resources for the prison being requested as a result of the unexpected increase of prison numbers which rose from four to seven including a female prisoner who had required female staff attendance only. CS Marsden said however that the prison population was now down to two, adding "vacancies exist."

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE first meeting this week was a presentation on the Fisheries Resource Rent Study by consultants who have been looking at licence fee levels and options for alternatives which could satisfy the requirements of both FIG and the industry. The Hon Gavin Short and I were the only MLAs available to attend along with industry representatives and FIG officials, but a report will be available to those who missed it. It was no surprise to learn that fee levels in the Falklands are among the highest in the world. As such they could be considered to be a disincentive to investment. Reinvestment of profits could make businesses more efficient and ultimately more competitive in difficult markets. Some fishing businesses have already made significant and largely successful investments in their own and other sectors with consequent benefits to the local economy including tax revenue. There are however a few companies contributing negligible amounts to the local economy. The suggested models will make for interesting discussions.

I found myself in full agreement with the editorial comment that a degree in politics is not the most desirable qualification for political life in the Falklands. I would go further and suggest that while it may equip someone to study, teach or commentate on politics, it would be little or no use for Assembly Members who should perhaps have a track record in another field and some real life experience before standing. It is a frequent criticism elsewhere that people who see politics as a career, going straight from university to research assistant, to candidate and then being elected, have led sheltered lives removed from the real world. My list of qualifications would also include passion, common sense, stamina, modesty and a willingness to admit mistakes and listen to other points of view. The ability and curiosity to learn about many different subjects is as important as a decent grasp of the Islands' history and political system. If that sounds daunting, let me reassure you that I do not claim to possess all or any of the above, but determination and an inquisitive nature help.

PWD not overly impacted by recent time change policy

Summer/winter time: Normal working hours lost "relatively low" says DPW Manfred

DIRECTOR of Public Works Manfred Keenlyside has reported that normal working hours lost during midwinter, due to Stanley remaining on summer time, was "relatively low."

Members of the private sector were less happy however. Paul Bonner of Bonners Haulage told Penguin News his company lost 200 working hours during the winter.

At the public meeting this week Tim Miller asked MLAs what the cost was as a result of PWD staff starting work at the normal start time before daylight but then having to wait until daylight around 0900 in order to start working outside?

He said, "How many normal work hours were lost in total?" Mr Miller said his employees had lost out financially as a result of Stanley remaining on summer time.

Mr Keenlyside's written answer was presented at the meeting by MLA Emma Edwards. The response included the comment, "Reference to tables suggests that remaining on summer time results in almost identical numbers of days when sunset and/or sunrise would occur within the standard FIG working day - 08.00 to 16.30, as would be the case if the time were put back to standard/winter time. On winter time 107 days, summer time 111 days.

"This would appear to suggest that the net amount of daylight hours falling within the standard working day, and therefore the amount of time which may be lost in situations where outside working only is possible would be virtually the same for most activities."

Mr Keenlyside said that with or without the time remaining on summer time, it is normally possible to plan to have staff work indoors in workshops when it is too dark to work outside as not all work is in any event done outside.

Two areas where some impact was noted included at the quarry where crushing could not commence as early in the day as there was not sufficient artificial lighting, and in the practice of road salting during the early hours. Ice often forms just before dawn, and the one hour difference meant there were more days when the ice formed too late to allow time to complete all of the salting within Stanley before the main flow of traffic to work happened.

He added, "Conversely of course, there was less risk of frost having set in before the evening run of traffic home."

Mr Keenlyside said, "Overall it appears that there was some inefficiency caused due to the time not being changed. I would not suggest a value for this as there are too many variables, but it would appear to have been relatively low and that the effect appears to be addressable at low cost if it were known that the time shift were to remain in place next winter."

Review of Government in November

TERMS of reference for the review of government are likely to be published in the future, confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Jan Cheek at the public meeting on Monday evening.

MLAs, Emma Edwards, Gavin

Short and Jan Cheek, who attended the meeting, confirmed that the review would take place in November and had only been delayed because Mr Keith Biles who was needed for the "review of the review" was presently out of the Islands.

Bill would widen pool of jurors

THE Falklands sometimes has difficulty finding enough eligible people available to serve on juries explained Attorney General Mark Lewis this week.

He gave a presentation on the proposed changes to Juries at the public meeting on Monday.

In a two part presentation he outlined that the Jury (Amendment) Bill if passed would firstly, increase the number of people that can be called for Jury Service, and secondly, potentially change the order of trials.

Mr Lewis said with regard to the former there had been difficulty in the past in obtaining enough eligible people for jury duty and the Bill would raise the maximum age for a person to be able to serve to 70 years and would allow residence permit holders and work permit holders to serve. The effect of this would be to double the potential number of people who could be called for jury service.

Members of the public made a number of points in response, one noting that it seemed unfair that those people who were unable to vote or influence government in any way, would be expected to serve. Another person said he was unhappy with work permit holders being able to serve as they did not go through the same processes, as for example, those seeking permanent resident permits.

Regarding the order of trials Mr Lewis noted that in the Falklands persons could choose between a jury trial or a judge trial. The constitution allows that the jury trial always take place first. In a situation where two people might face the same charge, but choose different types of trial this could potentially lead to 'unsafe verdicts'. He explained that if in the jury trial the crime was judged 'never to have happened', then if the second person (who chose to face a judge) was however, found guilty, then the verdict would be compromised by the judgement of the first trial.

The Bill recommends that the judge be able to choose the most suitable order of trials.

Adventure assured for Leiv's life at sea

Leiv aboard Peregrine

KEEN explorer and sailor Leiv Poncet is making the final preparations for his latest adventure, to solo navigate the Southern Hemisphere on his sailing yacht.

Leiv has been ashore at Beaver Island since April carrying out modifications to his originally Spanish yacht Peregrine, preparing it for his round the world tour.

He leaves Stanley's Public Jetty today, destined for Cape Town, South Africa. If the weather is good, and sea state allows, he would like to stop off at Tristan da Cunha en route, "but it would need to be pretty calm," he said.

Decisions on where to go and how long to stay are still being made, but he thinks the whole tour will take a year and a half to complete.

After a month or so in Africa his next stop will be the Kerguelen Islands, a French territory in the Southern Indian Ocean between Africa and Australia, which is the next destination on his tour.

"I'll be stopping in Western Australia first and then Tasmania.

I went to uni there and I've got friends and family to visit too, so it'll be a familiar stop.

"I'd like to go to New Zealand, but by that time it'll be nearer winter and there's still plenty to see elsewhere. New Caledonia is really tempting," he said.

When asked what inspired him to make the trip he replied, "It's something I always planned to do but I needed to find a boat, money and make the modifications necessary.

"But my inspiration comes mostly from a desire to see these places, new and familiar. They are becoming harder and harder to visit, but to be able to do it from the comfort of your home is something special."

He added with a smile that buying a boat is "certainly cheaper than buying a house."

Jealous Penguin News staff are full of admiration for his brave plans and agree buying a boat certainly sounds more exciting too.

Lucille McMullen

1. What is your most prized possession? My passport

2. What is your most embarrassing moment? Jax Clement made me drive up a pile of shingle on the way to the North Arm two-nighter, where we promptly got stuck. I must be the only person in the Islands to get bogged on the road!

3. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? A huge shoe/boot and handbag shop

4. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? Disco dancing, especially if there is a strobe light and a smoke machine!

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? My mother's parking

6. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Mum (June McMullen), she would have everyone whipped into shape in no time, I am not sure I would hang around though

7. What is your nickname and why? Lou, it is so much easier to say than Lucille. Loosewheel is another, but I am not sure who thought it up or why as I don't remember losing any wheels.

8. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Iceland to see the Northern lights and I'd go back to Cape Town and get to the top of Table Mountain

9. What song makes you feel happy (or sad) when you hear it? Lucille by Kenny Rogers - why wasn't I born a year earlier?

10. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I helped to build part of the Dunnose Head road, once I learned how to drive the bulldozer.

Lucille (30) lives in Stanley with her fish Zig and Zag, loves a bit of mud tracking and camping. In her ideal world, international flights would be half the price, enabling her to visit family and friends in far flung places more often.

Press greet visit to Ilen

EAST Falklands farmer Rob Pitaluga and former Governor, Sir Cosmo Haskard and his wife Lady Haskard, enjoyed quite an "occasion" when the group paid a visit to the historic Falklands vessel AK Ilen in Southern Ireland.

They were greeted by several local photographers and members of the press.

The Ilen which is being rebuilt at a shipyard at her original home in Baltimore was built by the Fisheries School there (Ireland's first vocational school) in the mid-1920s. She was launched in 1926 and two Cadogan brothers from Cape Clear Island sailed her to the Falklands, where she was delivered to the Falkland Island Company for inter-island trading. Ilen remained here until the mid-1990s, when Limerick man Gary McMahon located her abandoned in the Falklands and took her back to Baltimore in 1998.

The vessel is now at Hegarty's Yard at Oldcourt near Skibbereen, and she continues to attract attention from a regular stream of visitors, some of whom know her history and others who are just becoming intrigued by her story.

According to the Southern Star newspaper Mr Pitaluga said, "I knew the AK Ilen but never set foot on her deck. However, boats and sailing vessels are part of our culture and we depended on small sailing vessels. All the farms on the Falkland Islands are quite remote and deliveries would be made by the very small vessels.

"The AK Ilen is sturdy, beamy, in fact like a wooden tank and she was very good for the job she did, carrying sheep on deck and down below, as lots of room was needed."

The Ilen worked mainly around Speedwell Island and her Falklands' skipper, the late Terry Clifton, made a number of visits to witness her transformation in Ireland.

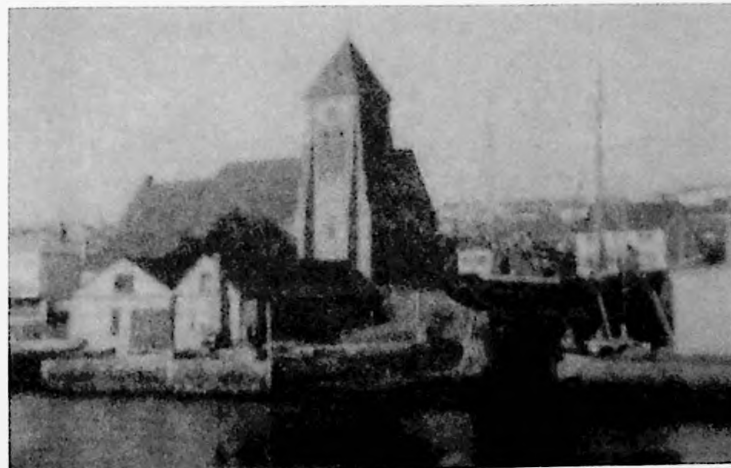

Mr Clifton was in fact offered the honour of being at the helm on her first voyage after the rebuild, but very sadly he died before the work was completed.

Sir Cosmo Haskard (Governor 1964-1970) was actually in Baltimore for her arrival in 1998 and Mrs Haskard photographed the vessel with her Box Brownie camera when the vessel underwent a refit on the slipway in Stanley in 1965.

The Ilen is being preserved for posterity thanks to the rebuilding programme being undertaken at Oldcourt, Baltimore by the AK Ilen Company.

'Have your say' Falklands: GB launches consultation

THE Falkland Islands and all other British Overseas Territories are being offered the opportunity to influence the future relationship between Britain and the territories.

Minister for the Overseas Territories, Henry Bellingham MP launched the consultation process during a visit to Bermuda.

He said: "Since we came to Office in May 2010, this Government has worked hard to re-invigorate the UK's relationship with the Overseas Territories.

"This consultation is an important part of that approach as we move toward a new White Paper on the Overseas Territories next year.

"There are many people and groups who have an interest in the future of the Overseas Territories and can provide us with insight into how to develop the UK's relationship with them. I look forward to receiving ideas."

The British Government said that the policies required to meet goals need to be tailored to each Territory thus the requirement for responses directly from the people.

Six key questions have been asked, and a White Paper will be published on the Territories in 2012 that will set out in detail the British Government's approach to the Overseas Territories.

It is cautiously noted, "any responses will need to take into account current global economic challenges which are likely to impose constraints on public expenditure in the UK and the Territories for the foreseeable future."

People wishing to respond can do so online, by leaving a public comment on the website <http://ukoverseasterritories.readand-comment.com/> under any or all of the questions (comments will be checked against the site's moderation policy before publication), also by private email to the Foreign & Commonwealth Office in London, or by post.

The questions are as follows:

i. Challenges: What are the main challenges facing your Territory/the Territories?

ii. Cooperation with the UK: What are the most important areas of cooperation between your Territory/the Territories and the UK? In what areas would you like to see greater engagement and interaction between the UK and your Territory/the Territories? How can the UK and your Territory/the Territories strengthen cooperation and build more effective partnerships?

iii. Governance, financial management and economic planning: How do you assess the quality of good governance, public financial management and economic planning in your Territory/the Territories? What are the priorities for improvement? How can the UK best work with your Territory/the Territories to strengthen these areas?

iv. External support: What do you think of the quality and range of external support (i.e. support other than from the UK) available to your Territory/the Territories, including from regional bodies, the Commonwealth, and the European Union? What can the UK best do to help Territories access external support?

v. Cooperation between Territories: What potential do you see for increased cooperation and partnership between Territories? In which areas does your Territory/the Territories provide support to other Territories? How might this be expanded?

vi. Global profile of the Territories: How does your Territory/the Territories promote its successes? What more could be done to raise Territories' profile internationally? How can the UK best support this?

Speeding trucks should slow down

HAVING just survived the trip from Stanley to MPA, I felt that I had to put pen to paper.

I have had to stop five times on my return trip due to lorries going too fast and kicking up so much dust that I was unable to see, as well as adding another chip to the windscreen.

Please have consideration for other road users when passing - slow down.

Tough Sue pedals 400k for charity

FALKLANDS born Sue Elmes (nee McKay), a grandmother, with one lung, a non functioning right hand and arthritis, who has just undergone heart surgery aims to ride a 400km bicycle charity ride in Kenya.

Sue (sister of Glenda Watson of Long Island Farm) was celebrated in the Plymouth Herald and other local newspapers for her aim to raise more than £3,000 for Breast Cancer Care, Jo's Trust and Ovarian Cancer Action.

The challenge is set for November when she will cycle off-road in Kenya for ten days.

As well as having suffered for years with Hydatid cysts Sue also recently had her gall bladder removed but says she won't let her illnesses put her off focus.

Sue (61) is a former paediatric nurse. She told the Plymouth Herald, "If I can't nurse daily the next best thing I can do is try to raise as much money as I can to support these incredible charities."

To support Sue email rosalieglenning@yahoo.com.

Car park closed

THE town hall car park entrance will be closed from Thursday September 29 for three weeks. This will allow the Public Works Department Highways contractors to undertake concreting works.

The area will be coned off and traffic lights will be used to control the traffic. The current car park exit will be made two way for the duration of the works and some parking bays will be closed outside the bank to ensure safe movement of vehicles in and out. If you require any further information please contact PWD Highways on 27387.

Chile concerned

THE Director of Chilean newspaper La Prensa Austral has expressed concern regarding the Argentine threat to end the Falklands Chile airlink.

Alejandro Toro Sanchez who recently visited the Falklands said: "During these days, Cristina Fernandez's warning is a major concern of the Chileans in the Falklands, among whom there is a feeling of great distress for they know not what will happen or if the government of Chile made representations to Argentina to prevent the loss of this flight: a fundamental connection to their country."

Join the big craft bonanza

EVERYONE is invited to enjoy a bonanza of craft activities at the Falkland Islands Community School on Saturday, October 8.

Louise Taylor told Penguin News, "The event kicks-off at 9am and continues until 9pm and will be fun for all the family while raising money for the Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust."

Activities on offer include plaster casting, card making, cookery, macramé, papercraft, different types of painting, pyrography, sewing, calendar creation by computer and, to celebrate International Wool Week, lots of wool-based crafts including spinning, weaving, felting, crochet and knitting and a display by the Agriculture Department.

"There's even an opportunity to make a rustic stool from local trees. Food will be served so you can craft, eat and craft some more," said Louise.

She said, "You can pick up a preliminary timetable to find out what's on when, and some activities are simply 'drop in and have a go', but some sessions can be booked in advance to secure a place. Timetables are available from the Library, Post Office, Leisure Centre, Jetty Visitor Centre, Seamen's Mission and Lifestyles. Bookings can be made with me (21443) and at the FICS between 5pm and 6pm on Friday October 7 or just come along on the day to see what's happening."

If you would like to offer to run an activity for the day, it's not too late, just let Louise know.

The Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust provides support to families facing life with cancer and confidentially assists both sufferers and carers with communication costs whilst patients are overseas. The Trust instigated and part-funded the first mammography screening programme in the Islands and has a comprehensive lending library with relevant information.

LOL Falklands begin social networking

TWITTER? Don't talk to me about Twitter. Boundungagged's hashtag is no threat to the likes of Stephen Fry, with his 3,000,000 followers, or even to Cristina Kirchner, who has a relatively puny 630,000 fans. My Twitter account has 19 followers. I had 20 for a while, thanks to a Russian woman who assumed that my Boundungagged tag indicated an interest in sado-masochism. She didn't stay for long. But never mind the quality, feel the width: among my faithful is Yoko Ono.

The truth is that it's tough, this social networking caper. With Twitter, you've got to be patient, slowly building up a following. If you continue to feed it with titbits, your following will eventually reach a critical mass. After that, it takes off a-la Stephen Fry, and you can key in any old rubbish and they just lap it up.

From what I can tell, FIG's foray into the Twitaspheer has been a bit half-hearted. A quick look reveals that, so far this month, FIG has posted five items on its account: not a lot for a government. What's more they are a bit of a yawn. No raving about Rockhopper striking a gusher, or the wool prices going through the roof, or even some passionate reaction to Cristina Kirchner's UN announcement that she is going to chop the air-link with Chile unless London agrees to talk about you-know-what.

We know there has been reaction in Stanley to la Kirchner's blatant aggression, because councillors responded in Penguin News. They said something along the lines of, "They'll be shooting themselves in the foot if they stop the LAN flights because their own people won't be able to reach the Falklands." That's quite a good line, so why was it not Tweeted? Instead, the highlight is some dry stuff about the umpteenth FIG visit to a party conference.

In the same period, CFK (those initials are delightfully close to Kentucky Fried Chicken) has tweeted 50 times. Granted, hers are fairly anodine posts too, on the whole, but sometimes they give an insight into the more personal corners of la Presidente's world. Stanley could be pouring out the gossip little bits of news, peppered with acerbic observations about the neighbours, thereby showing what a sparky and charming place it is.

I have a nagging feeling that the government's heart is not really in new media. Sure, FIG's Twitter feed stutters on, but Facebook is used by only a few individual councillors, mainly, it appears to me, to keep up with friends, rather than to give the electorate a lever which, if pulled, can make something happen.

Jan Cheek was scathing about Facebook in a recent issue of PN, admonishing some Islanders for having it switched on for up to four hours a day. I believe she suggested this was rather sad. But keeping the radio or TV on for that amount of time would not be considered over-indulgent. Facebook is competing with radio and TV, and it's probably winning. It's how people keep in touch these days, so its use is not a bad thing.

Anyway, no one in the Falklands should be rude about social networking because our little community virtually invented it. If you're over 40, you'll remember the RT: the radio-telephone that kept even the remotest corners of the Islands in touch with other Islanders. And it wasn't just about friendly chats. You could order supplies from the West Store and the Co-op, send a telegram overseas and, during a designated daily slot, talk to a doctor.

Walking through Stanley on a sunny summer day, you could hear the RT blaring through the billowing lace curtains of every second open window. It was the soundtrack of daily lives, and the Facebook of its day. Life could be pretty dull, even lonely, in the Falklands, but the RT kept friends in touch and generated community-nourishing gossip.

How fascinating it was to learn, from the radioed shopping lists, what drinking habits were like on, say, New Island. Or to learn how Mrs so-and-so's yeast infection was progressing. Those doctors could use as many euphemisms as they liked, but we knew what they were on about.

The rest of the world is just catching up with what we knew three decades ago: that people need to talk. We need to share our happiness and our sadness, and to know each other's secrets. That's what community is all about, and that's what social networking does. Facebook actually extends the community, uniting Islanders all around the world. For the first time since they left home, the diaspora feels involved in the Falklands.

If your nostalgia for the good old days gets the better of your interest in the present, ditch the laptop and fire up that big old HF transceiver. But, when the valves have warmed up, all you will hear are the crackles and pops of static. The rest of us have moved on.

Spaced-out cruise ships

Here's something about which I agree with Councillor Cheek. She had a good point when she said we should negotiate with cruise ship operators to avoid overwhelming Stanley's very limited facilities with passengers from more than one large ship at a time.

There was quite an angry response from some people in the industry. They argued that this would not be possible because operators plan too far in advance. They certainly do – probably two years in advance, but that just means FIG, presumably through the Tourism Office, would need to engage with the companies at that point.

I think it's quite a serious issue. How can Stanley's shops really be expected to maximise sales, or the museum and post office get everyone through their doors when the population has been multiplied by three? Furthermore, I don't think visitors get the best impression if they spend their few hours in Britain's final frontier elbowing their way through a mass of humanity. If they want Oxford Street rather than Ross Road, they'll probably go there.

Then there is the issue of providing emergency accommodation if weather deteriorates suddenly. Accommodating passengers from two large vessels in Stanley would be nigh-on impossible.

I suspect the cruise companies are regarded a little too reverentially. If pushed, won't they take those very important tourists elsewhere? Well, some might like you to think that, but others would see the benefits of better planning to their clients. The Falklands offer a wonderful contrast with Latin America and the Antarctic. Cruise operators need that quality to be maintained, so the Falklands negotiating position is strong. I think a dialogue with the companies, ideally through their industry association, would achieve something useful. Graham.bound@btinternet.com

Year 10 experience Falklands wool

Agriculture Department spies for next generation of farmers

HELEN Thoday and Teenie Ross from the Agriculture Department enjoyed an easier audience than usual last week, when they taught Year 10 science after an invite from Science Teacher John Carlin to present 'Genetics and animal selection in a real scenario.'

Ms Thoday told Penguin News, "The class of 25 learned about the characteristics that farmers and the department's own farm at Saladero select for in their sheep flocks."

She said the youngsters discovered that the physical characteristics, such as wool quality and leg and face attributes are all part of a successful breeding programme. Using the Australian Visual Sheep Score system the class then selected sheep from an imaginary flock, class wool samples from mid-side samples collected that week from various farms and also saw how much useable wool can come from one fleece.

For a bit of fun at the end of the class each group had to match up which fleece came from which animal with alpacas, sheep and goat samples. This resulted in a 100 per cent success rate, said Ms Thoday.

She added, "It is really important for children to understand that the science they are learning at school is going on, on their doorsteps."

"Farmers will pick their own attributes that they feel are most valuable to them and select sheep to breed from with those attributes. We had a great mixture of kids from Stanley and Camp and I strongly believe one of our roles at the Agriculture department is to think about the next generation of farm staff and managers, so I really enjoyed letting the class know how technical farming can be."

FIDF practice their field craft

FOUR recruits to the Falkland Islands Defence Force had their first taste of field action in the harshest of conditions.

Trained FIDF members rallied on Saturday to put Neil Ward, Drew Robertson, Ryan Elstow and Dion Betts through their paces, and expand their knowledge of field craft.

Meeting at the FIDF hall the group headed out to Wireless Ridge to train, in gale force wind, rain and sleet. PSI Colour Sergeant Trevor Law soon discovered that the soggy ground was not going to make it easy by getting bogged in record time. I was fully prepared to make a mockery of this in print - I discovered 20 minutes later that parking a quad bike over a discreet stone in a puddle to take a picture was not so clever either.

Morale was high in the group and the two fire groups marched off focussed on their navigated route. The objective was to observe the area surrounding their camp by patrolling through check points.

Fortunately this also meant no one was around to witness my not-so-tactical lifting of a quad from of a ditch either.

Sergeant Major Watson said the first step exercise was quite similar to those done in the past with new recruits, "there were no tactical assaults, it was purely field craft."

Sgt Maj Watson added they did very well in spite of the extreme conditions.

"It was ideal really. The harsh weather it tested their field admin... which they all handled really well," he said.

He also said the help of the trained ranks played a notable part in the recruit's success.

They returned Sunday afternoon after a night of patrol, lights and noises on the Ridge, and with the weather taking a change to bright and calm.

After a sweltering yomp back to town the force welcomed the chance to hop on the rigid raider and whip up a breeze in the harbour to cool off.

Next the recruits have a smaller exercise in mid-October to cover more fire movement, attack and break contact drills before their passing out exercise scheduled for November.

This October we will be celebrating 30 years of Diving in and around the Falkland Islands. Now working under the name of the Marine Exploration and Research Centre (M.E.R.C.) we will be continuing to carry on the work of the Wreck Survey Group and the Marine Life Sciences Group.

During these 30 years we have located 16 shipwrecks, produced 2 underwater videos, identified many new species of marine life, written two magazine articles and taken part in a number of scientific projects. This culminated in 2009 with the publication of the first book about the underwater world entitled 'Beneath Falkland Island Waters'. It is a book that does not go out of date, but will simply be added to in a few years time with more information and photographs. In addition to the book we have just had our original VHS tape of the same name digitised. This is now available on DVD and will also be added to any future book sales free of charge.

With its principal bases centered at the Boathouse, Stanley and the Narrows Nature Reserve on the West, MERC will be concentrating on its primary underwater projects over the next few years and we welcome all divers civilian and military to participate in our activities.

To complement what we have already accomplished Dave Eynon will soon be embarking on an ambitious 8 to 10 year project to walk around the entire coastline of the East and West Islands during the late Spring and Summer months. The aim of this mammoth LONG WALK will be to report on the health of the coastline and to see at first hand the extent of beach litter, the wildlife, sites for future dives, and where some of our shipwrecks end up. A report on the numerous walks will be recorded on our web site on a regular basis, as well as any relevant photos and video clips.

S.A.M.S. 14 metre Catamaran is presently out of the water to undergo maintenance. Besides the boat being utilised by S.A.M.S. the boat will also be available for Inshore Fisheries Research, Shallow Marine Surveys, Wreck Surveys etc, and of course the work of M.E.R.C.

Safety is a very crucial part of diving and we always carry onboard oxygen and have on stand-by the S.A.M.S. Recompression Chamber.

All diving equipment is tested and serviced in accordance with UK rules/regulations.

We also have an Exhibition Area set aside in the Boathouse Gallery for showing the work of M.E.R.C. together with a large number of photographs of the marine life beneath Falkland Waters. We will in the new year have an A2 Epson printer to further enhance our range of photos for sale and for exhibition.

We are in the process of updating our web site www.falklandsunderwater.com which will have more relevant features such as short video clips, dive logs and environmental data of our coastline.

The Expert Class slips the clutch and roars up the beach

Motorcross season kicks off at scenic Long Island

Nathan Gemmill riding high

THE arrival of spring came just in time last Sunday, as the first round of the 2011/12 Moto X season launched into action at the magnificent sand beach fronting Long Island Farm. With rollers gently lapping the shoreline, the sun burning away the early morning mist, terns screeching their arrival and the thunder of powerful 4-stroke motocross engines warming up in the pits. Just another little reminder as to why we love the Falkland Islands.

The first to taste the sand track were the juniors and clubman which we ran together. It would have been a lonely race for young James Tyrell, the only junior to turn up. Not that it made any difference to his fun, as he gave a great account of himself in the clubman ranks. We had a few new faces in the clubman class, Arthur Turner didn't know which class to race in so chose both. Nathan Lowe and Travis McGill were fresh from the junior ranks. Garry Tyrrell fresh from FIODA stage and screen and lastly Aidan Smith tasted his first moto x race.

Arthur took both race wins but not without some fierce competition from Aidan and Nathan, both riding with confidence. The odd nose ploughing into sand didn't help them with straight line speed and spoiled their chances of ruining Arthur's day. Bjorn Eriksson had a successful day getting a 4th and 3rd place, earning him 3rd overall on the day. Travis McGill riding well, suffered sick bike syndrome in the second race, ending what would have been a great day's result.

The expert ranks were boosted this year by Nathan Gemmill and Dylan Stephenson from the clubman ranks and both hungry for success.

The man to beat was Jay Moffatt on a 250KTM. In blistering form he took both wins on the day, but not without Nathan and Arthur getting to within a hairs breadth of challenging Jay for the lead during the second race. Dylan rode steady all day earning him 4th overall on the day ahead of Scott and Conrad. Robert Ferguson started well in both races but had to pull out due to an injury in his throttle hand.

Regan Newman took to the track on her quad during the breaks, earning her a trophy in the PeeWee class.

Many thanks to Glenda and Neil Watson for allowing the event to take place in such a superb setting, the Victory Bar for sponsoring the event, Janice and Walter for taking care of all our medical needs, the lap counting girls and marshals, without whom these events could not take place, and lastly the spectators for being so litter conscious. The amount of rubbish I collected after the event fitted into the palm of my hand.

Conservation night of glamour

Falklands Conservation's Sarah Crofts and Farrah Peck glam up on the night after all the hard work of organising the event
Below: FC's chief executive James Fenton addresses the gathering

One of the most glamorous events of the year, Falkland Conservation's annual ball is sponsored by Consolidated Fisheries and is organised to raise funds for local projects throughout the year. This year more than £100,000 was raised which is an increase on last year.

Not only a worthy cause, it is also a chance for those attending to dress up to the nines, sip champagne and this year to feast on fine foods prepared by Malvina House Hotel chef Matt Clarke and his team.

Causing some amusement for farm orientated folk this year was the main course of lamb shank, a cut by Falklands tradition usually fed to cats and dogs. Going by the enthusiasm of the guests on savouring the slow braised shank of Bleaker Island lamb with confit of leg, candied shallots and garlic, root vegetable mash, leek gratin and Montes red wine and rosemary jus, animals will no longer be served such a delicacy in the future.

Creating equal excitement was the artwork and photography on display and up for auction. Penguin News reporter Teslyn Barkman's work in oil 'Terning Skies' raised an impressive £465 alone while Zhanna Shcherbich's felt artwork also sold for more than £400.

The coveted South Georgia cruise was auctioned for £4,000 and went to FC staff member Rebecca Upson after a bidding battle with a military guest, who kindly conceded and let Rebecca take the trip.

FC's Sarah Crofts said staff had really enjoyed the evening and were really pleased to see everyone have such a fantastic night. "We received lots of praises and positive comments from the guests. None of this could have been possible without the hard work by Farrah (event organizer) FC staff / trustees and all our other volunteers and helpers on the night and in the run up to the evening."

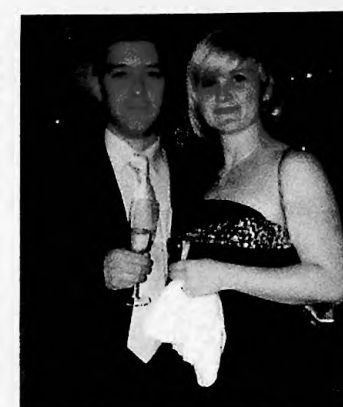

She thanked the guests themselves for looking so glamorous and for supporting Falklands Conservation through the auction.

"Consolidated Fisheries obviously need lots of thanking for their continued and generous sponsorship of the event as well as all the people who donated towards the auction," said Miss Crofts.

The evening ended with everyone make a concentrated effort to burn off the earlier excesses on the dance floor to mixed music provided by DJ Andreas Balladeros.

The Wool Market Report - September 22 2011

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THIS week has seen a further decline in the market with the EMI falling by 39cents to AU $1,235 cents/kg (clean) (784GB p/kg), the lowest since January. The situation remains very similar to last week with price reductions blamed on international financial problems and exchange rates. Finer micron has also seen the biggest reduction in price. Skirtings have seen quite a good market this week, with buyers picking up cheaper lots for blending purposes.

Recent revolutionary technology has meant finer wool from specific regions can be traced using DNA technology. With so much wool being prepared in countries which are rife in counterfeit goods, this new system will mean customers can be guaranteed the luxury products they are purchasing are the real thing.

The DoA and the Weavers and Spinners association are collaborating to celebrate International Wool Week from 3rd - 10th of October. Watch the press for more details.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Wester Ben plans exhibition

Shearing works will form the centrepiece of Ben's exhibition.

WEST Falklands' artist Ben Cockwell will give his first exhibition of work next month at the Jetty Centre in Stanley.

Ben's mainly portraiture work involving close ups, bold pastel colours and extravagant strokes has already gained him commissions despite having only returned to art in the last two years.

He said, "I got hooked on portraiture very early on, a subject I'd never touch in a million years or so I thought. Now it's easily my favourite subject, I'll paint anything that inspires me though, landscapes, architecture, wildlife, a piece of rusty metal, the surface of a stone and so on."

If he had to describe his style it would be "post impressionism," he supposed, "but I like to interpret what I see, and see where that takes me rather than use any photo realistic style."

Ben carries a camera and notebook wherever he goes to capture images and write down ideas.

His interest was beginning to become expensive, however, "my art needs to start paying its way," hence the idea for the exhibition.

On October 14 guests will be invited to an initial exhibition, however the work will be open to the public from October 15 until October 22.

Even those with only £1 to spare could obtain a piece of his work. In aid of the West Falklands First Aid Fund he is raffling one of his highly charismatic animal portraits.

What's next on the agenda for Ben? "Well I'm really hoping just to make people aware that I'm out there and willing to do portraits. I've got a kit to produce limited edition prints so hopefully I'll eventually be able to sell them too."

Ben's work can be viewed at bensart.net.

'Introspective': Ben's niece Abigail Marsh.

You could win a piece of artwork by Ben Cockwell. Raffle tickets on sale at SeAled PR and retail outlets

COCKERELS crowing with the dawn was a part of everyday life in Stanley. Over the last couple of decades that wake up call disappeared. However, with the scarcity of locally produced eggs, and the dislike of mass produced imported ones, many people are taking on a few hens so that they and their families can enjoy the taste of freshly laid eggs. Oh, and if you don't want to breed, there's no need for the alarm clock! Hens lay perfectly well without a cockerel. In fact, an over zealous male can put the hens off laying, or make them hide in the nest box all the time to avoid him.

Keeping 'Backyard Hens' can be fun and rewarding for both the humans and hens involved. It can also be a life of misery for the hens and become a chore for the humans. In this regular column I hope to give a few tips so that you can enjoy keeping these useful and productive pets.

Here's a couple of tips to improve the general health of your hens. Put a teaspoon of Apple Cider Vinegar (not ordinary vinegar) and a clove of garlic in their drinking water to provide an all round tonic. Garlic is said to have antibiotic properties, repel lice and mites and apparently make their poo smell better! By the way, you can only put garlic in the water if you have a sealed drinker. If you just use a bowl or bucket, the first hen to it will eat the clove!

The ACV is not actually a wormer, but used constantly it helps control infestations by keeping the gut healthy. It is claimed to improve fertility (egg laying is all about fertility, even if you don't intend to have chicks), help the respiratory system and is a natural fly repellent. You can use it to clean your hen house as the acidity is not liked by the various lice and mites that affect poultry. It works well using a garden sprayer and gets in all those little nooks and crannies.

I am not an expert in poultry, but have learned a lot through trial and error that I hope to pass on to you.

If there's anything in particular that you want to know about regarding poultry, email me and I will share my thoughts on the subject in this column.

First Passage shearing shed with Peregrine anchored in the bay

Ali, Ken, Kevin, Sally, Aidan, Tom, Liev and Diane in the shearing shed come living quarters

Biggest rat eradication project on record

FIRST Passage Island, a wildlife hotspot off the coast of Shallow Harbour Farm on West Falkland is the largest island in the Falklands on which a rat eradication programme has been launched and as far as hand-broadcasting bait goes (as opposed to spreading by helicopter), at 750 hectares and with 40km of coastline could also be the largest in the world.

The passage group consists of four islands with First the only one not yet rat free and as a result on the other islands tussacbirds and Cobb's wrens can be seen by the dozen feeding along the beaches, and small petrels in their thousands burrow into the tussac.

The human history of the group is as remarkable as its wildlife: between 1884 and 1982 a succession of farmers, mostly single shepherds but occasionally a family, lived on First Passage, in a state of isolation that is by today's standard hard to imagine. Supplied irregularly by passing schooners, their only link with the mainland was a four mile dinghy row across to Rous Creek and from there a long walk or horse ride to Dunnose Head.

The island's owners, Ali and Marlane Marsh of Shallow Harbour, ran sheep on the island for a few years back in the late 1980s and early 90s, until the combination of difficult logistics and low wool prices presented them with no alternative but to de-stock.

The idea of also getting rid of the island's rats was first suggested to them by a visiting New Zealand eradication expert, Derek Brown. Derek's been advisor to Falklands rat eradication programmes since 2001, and has always believed that with enough practice and experience, we'd eventually be able to tackle some of our larger islands.

First Passage is indisputably the poor cousin of the group, having been grazed by sheep for over a hundred years, damaged by fires and infested with rats. In an effort to help restore the island to its former glory, Beaver Island Land-Care carried out a rat eradication operation there earlier this month. A group of six people - Ali Marsh, Kevin Marsh, Sally Poncet, Diane Towersey, Aidan Smith and Tom Elsby - camped for 10 days on the island, with logistical support from Liev Poncet on his yacht Peregrine. Their aim: to bait the entire island for rats so as to give the birds from the neighbouring islands a chance to successfully re-colonise.

There are a few basic essentials to get right if a baiting operation is to have every chance of success: reliable transport for nearly three tons of rat bait from Stanley to the island, skilled and experienced operators prepared to camp for up to 17 days in a draughty dusty shed, a dedicated support boat for carrying people and gear on and off the island on set dates, funding for fieldwork equipment and salaries, "in kind" contributions to supplement a limited budget.

FIG and in particular the Environmental Planning Department were fully involved every step of the way, and the bait was donated by the South Georgia Heritage Trust as surplus to their project last year.

Thanks to the long hours, hard work and experience of everyone on the team, there were no hitches, no breakdowns, no injuries and only a couple of waits on weather. Living conditions were not that bad either: we were able to camp under cover in the shearing shed that the Marsh's had built in the 80s - the lovely old settlement house is now way beyond habitable for anything but rats and thrushes. We set up our tents on tarps laid over the sheep gratings; evenings were spent huddled around the wool table downing Shallow Harbour mutton, the generator droning away as it charged up VHF radios, laptop and batteries. The first two days were the hardest, carrying 23 kg bags of bait for over 1 km through dense tussac at the north end. After that though, the quad and bikes came into their own. Tom, Aidan and Ali in particular, clocked up impressive mileages delivering bait bags to everyone, as well as broadcasting.

In all, we either walked or rode along 700 km of baiting lines, which were 100m apart all the way down the length of the island. Aidan clocked up 163 km on the Suzuki DR200, including one day of 79km, and Ali wasn't far behind with 138km. Tom spent a lot of his 109 km spreading bait from the ART quad (a Suzuki 300) that was able to carry up to 16 bags while most of Kevin's 103 km were done on foot, as were Diane's 96 km, and Sally's 84 km.

The project was funded in part via grants from the FCO's Overseas Territories Environment Programme and FIG's Environmental Studies Budget which covered operator fees, logistical support and running costs. However, the "in kind" contributions were equally generous: Shallow Harbour Farm transported most of the gear out from Stanley and lent a generator, motorbikes and all the modcons in the shed; the Antarctic Research Trust lent their quad bike; Beaver Island Farm provided handling and transit storage facilities for bait; Beaver Island LandCare lent all the computing and GPS equipment; Ken Passfield and Derek Brown advised during the pre-operation planning and island survey stages.

Confirmation of the success of this operation will come in two years time when we return to check for rat signs. Going on the success of past operations carried out by this team, there's every chance that all our hard work will have paid off and Ali and Marlane will have another rat-free island.

Saints Plus One remain unbeaten

THERE were three matches last week in the Falkland Islands Premier League.

First to play were the STDs and the Falkland Islands Junior Cricket Club. FIJCC won the toss and put the STDs in to bat. Runs slowly ticked over for the STDs who eventually scored 97 off 12 overs after wicket deductions.

Kalon Jaffray and Ross Stewart started well scoring 20 and 15 runs respectively off their four overs. FIJCC put in a spirited effort in trying to beat the STDs. It came down to the last ball, with Daelyn Peck needing to score four runs to win, however, he could only manage two and the STDs won by one run.

The second match of the evening was played between the two Fire Service Rescue teams. Fire Service Rescue 2 went into bat first. They managed to score a lot of quick runs which immediately put the opposition on the back foot.

However, good bowling resulted in Fire Service Rescue 1 taking many wickets. Alex Pearce took four in his first over,

Team	Played	Won	Lost	Overs	Runs For	Runs Against	Run Rate	Net Run	Points
1 Saints Plus One	2	2	0	24	172	48	7.17	5.17	8
2 Fire Service Rescue 2	1	1	0	12	94	5	7.83	7.42	4
3 Royal Challengers Stanley	2	1	1	24	138	81	5.75	2.38	4
4 STDs	1	1	0	12	97	96	8.08	0.08	4
6 FIJCC	2	0	2	24	104	207	4.33	-4.29	0
7 Fire Service Rescue 1	2	0	2	24	24	162	1.00	-5.75	0

which reduced the total to 94 after penalty runs were subtracted.

Accurate bowling from Jamie Punter and Andrew Brownlee ensured that Fire Service Rescue 1 were unable to score many runs from the start. Andy claimed a two wicket maiden in their victory, as they won by 89 runs.

Special mention needs to go out to Julianne Benjamin and Dahianna Burucua who were the only players on their team to finish with a positive score. Julianne hitting the only four for her team and taking a wicket.

The third and final match took place between Saints Plus One and the Royal Challengers Stanley. The Saints Plus One won the toss and put the Royal Challengers in to bat first.

Wickets fell quickly at the start which put the Challengers behind for the majority of the match. David Phillips top scoring with just 12 runs set the standard for the other batsmen. A total of 40 runs was put on the board for the Saints Plus One to chase.

Great bowling from the Royal Challengers also got the batsmen off to a bad start. Nine wickets were taken in the first four overs with Clovis Kilmartin claiming a hat-trick. Harrison Law took four wickets in his first over of the match and continued bowling well throughout the match, bowling no extras.

However, the Saints Plus One slowly piled on the pressure. Frank O'Sullivan scoring 35 runs ensured victory by 22 runs.

CE decides he's not sticking to contract

WITH the search for a Government Chief Executive about to begin, MLA Roger Edwards says he hopes that no former chief executives will be involved in the new recruitment process as has been the case in the past.

Three and a half years after taking up the position of the Government's Chief Executive, (CE) Dr Tim Thorogood has tendered his resignation to the Governor.

While his tenure as CE has hardly been a smooth one, particularly as the driver behind the Government restructure which caused much controversy less than a year after his arrival in the Islands, MLAs have thanked him for his work and wished him all the best for the future.

Mr Thorogood cited personal reasons for his decision to leave a year before his contract expired with his last working day to be February 1, 2012.

MLA Roger Edwards, who is currently attending the Party Conferences in the UK, told Penguin News that he was not surprised by Mr Thorogood's decision to resign.

"Personally I never thought he would stay for the full two years — I thought it was a comfort blanket to give him time to set up in business elsewhere, and it is my understanding that is the case," he said.

"I was not a supporter of extending his contract when the new Assembly was voted in and would have preferred to have a new chief executive at that stage," said MLA Edwards, adding that as we live in a democracy he "had to go along with the rest."

Mr Thorogood who took up the post of CE in early January 2008, lived in the Islands for two years as a child when his father was the first Cable and Wireless representative in the Falklands and that link was maintained when his wife Alison took up the position of Customer Services Manager with the same company.

The Governor said that, whilst sorry to receive the news of Dr Thorogood's resignation, he understood the reasons behind the decision and praised the drive he had provided to the Government, adding, "this provided a firm basis for a successor to build on."

The amount of time Mr Thorogood has spent out of office and overseas has been criticised locally and prior to news of his resignation, Penguin News had asked Human Resources for a breakdown of how many days each year he spent on FIG related business overseas, and how much annual leave he was entitled to.

While the department would not discuss any individual terms and conditions, they did say Mr Thorogood was on standard contract officer leave terms.

"Regarding working overseas, strategic and operational demands have resulted in the CE working overseas on FIG related business for approximately 19.5 working days a year on average. This demand has in large part been down to the CE's personal input being required in the appointment of several key senior staff posts," said an HR spokesperson.

There are busy times ahead for HR and selection boards with the recruitment process also underway for key positions such as general managers for the Development Corporation and the Tourist Board as David Waugh and Paul Trowell both complete their contracts.

New interim at FIDC

JULIE Cooke is the new interim Financial Controller at the Development Corporation and took up the post on Tuesday.

General Manager David Waugh said Ms Cooke was in place as interim until a permanent was sourced for the post.

He said that having advertised locally without success, "we are now recruiting offshore on a contract basis. We hope to have a contract permanent in place as soon as possible in the New Year." Ms Cooke replaces Steve Manders who left before the end of his contract for personal reasons. Mr Waugh said Mr Manders' departure was however not sudden, "he did provide and work the contractual notice period," he said.

Attracting support at Party Conferences

"ONCE again, the Falklands stand has attracted a lot of interest and support at the Labour and Conservative Party Conferences," Falkland Islands Government Representative in London Sukey Cameron told Penguin News.

The conferences were held in Liverpool and Manchester.

Meeting Parliamentarians, delegates, diplomats and the media, the Hon Sharon Halford MLA and the Hon Roger Edwards MLA, along with Ms Cameron, took the opportunity to update them on developments in the Islands and appraise them of the current hostile Argentine stance.

"At the Conservative Conference, both the Secretary of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs restated the Government's very strong support for the Falklands," said Ms Cameron.

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

It was with a degree of wry amusement last week, that we witnessed in a Mercopress story the Falkland Islands people transformed by Argentine Defence Minister Arturo Puricelli from 'British pirates' as we are more normally, colourfully, labelled in Argentine circles, to 'hostages' of Britain.

Being independent types in this office we were unanimous in our agreement that we in fact preferred to be pirates, primarily for the reason of its romantic and dramatic connotations (as in Johnny Depp but not as in Somalian.)

Who after all wishes to be portrayed as an inconsequential victim?

Joking apart, it did interest me that while most of the Argentine Government seem quite certain that we are not a bona fide 'people', it seems others appear uncertain precisely what we do constitute.

And, while we might be ill advised to appoint the Minister to a position within Falkland Islands Government PR body, still at the very least he clearly underlined our existence, an action the Argentine government has been avoiding for years.

Unfortunately, while other governments might recognise his bluster for the melodramatic electioneering it is, the Argentine people are likely to be rallied by such emotive yarping.

Still, I couldn't help a moment of grudging admiration for the way he took all of those nouns that we associate so closely with Argentina's treatment of ourselves (aggression, force, threat, isolation) and used them to describe Britain's stance.

Truly, Argentina's skill at rewriting history is only surpassed by the efficiency with which they launder their present day actions.

What did cheer me up this week though, in an entirely immature way you understand, was a piece in the Sun alongside a story describing Argentine football player Carlos Teves facing gross misconduct for his part in the 'Munich mutiny'.

Footballing legend Ricky Villa summed up the behaviour of his countrymen saying, "It's simple to define the Argentine player, we lack discipline, responsibility, order. Generally we're quite awkward. It's difficult for us to accept some realities... Argentines find it a problem when rules are placed on them."

Bless you Ricky for pointing that out - does it go without saying the the same might be said for your government?

Roger chats to PM

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Roger Edwards, who is attending party conferences in the UK, met up with Prime Minister David Cameron at the Royal British Legion reception.

MLA Edwards said Mr Cameron asked about plans for the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War. When asked if he had plans to attend events in the Falklands next year, Mr Cameron told MLA Edwards that while he was not sure he himself would be able to visit, he would certainly be taking part in activities in the UK.

Extra legal services

IN response to concerns expressed by many, including the courts and existing legal practitioners, the Development Corporation has been tasked to provide extra legal services in the Islands.

Following last week's Executive Council meeting MLA Jan Cheek explained that there is a problem in ensuring that people are properly represented/defended.

She said this is of particular concern when there are two or more defendants in a case whose interests do not necessarily coincide so they cannot be defended by the same practitioner.

"In more serious cases, a barrister may have to be brought in from overseas at great expense to the taxpayer," she added.

FIDC were initially asked to approach a number of commercial companies to see if they saw a new legal practice in the Falklands as a business opportunity.

MLA Cheek said it was her understanding that the FIDC funding to cover the first couple of years is a start up project of the kind they were set up to do.

"It is being done commercially through FIDC so that they are independent of FIG," she added.

McGrigors are the only firm of legal practitioners currently working in the Falklands along with former attorney general David Lang.

Victory is 'recommended' pub

THE Victory Bar was the pub with the most votes in last week's Penguin News poll, in answer to the question: 'If a visitor asked where best to go for a beer which pub would you recommend?'

Owners Cathy and Ally Jacobson are currently over seas however Victory Barmaid Maria Alfaro said, "I think they chose our pub because of the atmosphere. Cathy and Ally always share rounds and people come on weddings and funerals and know if they're happy or sad they can share the family atmosphere."

"It's a trusting pub where people can leave their own glasses to drink from, and put things behind the bar and they will be safe."

"The music is not too loud, there's TV, food, pool, fruit machines and most of all it's a clean pub."

Maria Alfaro at the Vic

The Victory Bar took 49.5% of the votes by Thursday with the Rose in second place

Red Lion Foods covers Liberty Lodge costs for five years

MANAGING Director of Red Lion Foods Andrew Gidden has gifted £30,000 to the Falklands Veterans Foundation to cover the costs of the Falklands veterans' house in Stanley 'Liberty Lodge' for the next five years.

100 percent of the post-tax profits of Red Lion Foods is used to help UK Forces' charities and causes. The company has already given over £370,000 to the causes and their target is £1 million for their first year of operation. Mr Gidden explained to Penguin News.

He said, "The relationship between the Falkland Islanders and the veterans is fabled," adding that it was an honour to visit the Islands.

Mr Gidden explained he had worked with many different forces charities, including the larger ones such as Help for Heroes and smaller organisations such as 'Scotty's little heroes'.

"During that journey I met Smokey (Cole) and Tony (Davies) and I feel they have created something unique in the Falklands where the veterans can come and hopefully recover," he said.

Over the years Mr Gidden has worked for Saatchi and Saatchi, Cadbury and John West.

He said, "I reached a point where I was able to kick back and relax," however, one day having browsed an article about the amount of money raised by Paul Newman's salad dressing it occurred to him that the sale of foods could be put to a charitable use.

"I'd done so well myself and I'm a great believer the reason British people have the right to do what they wish has been a hard won thing. 30 years from now when everyone has forgotten about those who fought in Afghanistan, I want there to be money to help the veterans."

Mr Gidden also feels that Falklands veterans, "who have now lived a full life, have much to offer in the form of mentoring younger war veterans," and he wishes to work on a project that incorporates this philosophy.

A cheque for £6,000 was also presented to SAMA (82) in the UK for the National Arboretum memorial which will display the names of the three Islanders who died in the 1982 War. This comprised £3,000 from FIG, £1,000 from the 2012 Committee and £2,000 from SAMA (82) in the Falkland Islands.

Exco debates business service charges

EXECUTIVE Council members examined a paper last week on the subject of service charges levied at residential property owners, while owners of business properties only pay for water and refuse collection.

Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek said that while house owners pay a contribution to street lighting and road cleaning along with water and refuse collection, all of which are included in the service charge, businesses only pay for water and refuse collection. More work is to be done however, before a formal proposal is made, said MLA Cheek.

At the same meeting a broad overview of waste management was noted and will be published in due course.

"Waste management is a huge problem worldwide and this paper suggests ways ahead," said MLA Cheek while offering assurance that it was in no way intended to "pre-empt any ongoing commercial initiatives."

The Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside also put a paper forward on energy policy options which might be followed in relation to the development of an energy Policy and Strategy for the Islands.

He recommended the policy for the Islands should promote practice, including via the revision of legislation relating to construction standards under the Building Control Regulations and Planning Ordinance which would reduce consumer operating costs through energy conservation and good energy house keeping.

That the reliance on imported fossil fuels should be reduced, particularly for the production of electricity throughout the Falklands, that the use of appropriate technology to reduce or optimise the use of energy including by means of loans or grants, and finally that the production of carbon dioxide and other polluting emissions be reduced.

Couple appeal 'unjust' planning conditions

STANLEY residents Stuart and Lilian Wallace have had their appeal against a planning decision turned down by Executive Council.

Mr and Mrs Wallace had received planning permission for the erection of a single storey house, garage and provision of off-street parking within Bennett's Paddock, Moody Brook Road in March. However it was accompanied by five conditions which included that "no new access shall be formed onto Moody Brook Road," and that "details of proposed access arrangements from the road into the site shall be submitted as part of a full planning proposal to develop this site."

The reason for imposing the condition was, said the Planning and Building Committee, "in the interests of highway and pedestrian safety."

The Wallaces appealed against the condition saying it was "inconsistent, unjust and unnecessary," because all the houses to within a few hundred metres of the site had such access.

"The area is one of the identifiable and appropriate sites for private development," said Mr and Mrs Wallaces, adding that such a condition was an "effective deterrent to the incremental development of good building sites," in the area.

Andrew Gidden: Sell me all your lamb

"I WANT to buy all Falklands lamb and sell it under the Red Lion Foods label," Managing Director of Red Lion Foods told Penguin News on Wednesday night.

Mr Gidden (see story left) said, "I paid a visit to the abattoir and was very impressed with what I saw. It's a highly professional, world-class set up. They have innovations that don't exist in abattoirs in the UK."

He hopes to meet up with Falkland Islands Meat Company John Ferguson to discuss the idea.

"Falklands lamb is younger and leaner; more healthy than the lamb we eat in UK. I want to launch it under a Falklands label."

Mr Gidden, who said he was shocked by the price of groceries in the Islands, said he also hoped to eventually sell Red Lion Foods in retail outlets in the Falklands.

If he succeeds he has a plan to give all Islanders a half price voucher for one item of each Red Lion food line on sale.

Price of masterplan consultancy

THE contract amount for the preparation of the Waterfront Masterplan being funded by FIDC, including consultations and related expenses, is £65,643.

Three consultants from Marine Projects Ltd are due to make an initial visit to the Falklands at the end of September to commence discussions with key stakeholders and organisations, said an FIDC spokesperson.

Corrections

CORRECTION to last week's story on the vessel Ilen: Gary McMahon did not find the Ilen abandoned in the Falklands. At the time of purchase she was still being used by owner Paul Ellis, although Paul was in New Zealand when the vessel was moved north.

Secondly, it should be noted that Falklands Conservation raised £10,000 at their Ball not £100,000.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

IT seems from last week's PN that my light hearted comments on the fact that I do not have time for Facebook touched a nerve somewhere. While not a total Luddite, I use technology for my convenience and refuse to become a slave to it. In my experience it is sometimes better to pause before dashing off an e-mail and even more important to take a little time before responding on important issues. Social networking can be a two edged sword and its ill considered use can rebound on the user.

READERS will have heard that the ban on using hand held mobile phones will come into force in November. I know this will please the large number of people who have raised their concerns in public meetings and with individual MLAs. I have lost count of the number of times I've been too close for comfort to drivers with mobile phones clamped to their ears while driving around some of Stanley's tight corners, or even worse, passing on the MPA road.

WITH an average of five meetings a day this week and all the associated reading, I'm looking forward to the middle of the month when we should be almost back up to strength.

THE single constituency referendum is just weeks away and although I voted 'No' last time because of the unsatisfactory voting system which would have been linked with a 'Yes'; this time I will be voting in favour for many reasons.

I would have liked to be able to vote for candidates standing in the camp constituency in past elections. I've made no secret of the fact that I've not used all my votes in several recent general elections, preferring only to vote for those I wanted to represent me. As I believe a good representative works for the whole of the Falklands not just for one section, more choice would be welcome.

Two constituencies create artificial divisions and the notion, promulgated by a few, that Stanley members do not support the development and interests of the camp population is a total distortion of the truth.

Signature forging admitted and drink driver banned

WEST Falklands resident Kaylee Ileen Simone Smith (19) was released on bail pending a pre-sentence report on Wednesday after she pleaded guilty to eight charges which involved the forging of her mother's signature on cheques.

The cheques amounting to more than £260 had been used in the FIC, Kelper Stores and Pandora's Box between July 23 and August 26.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said Miss Smith's parents had made enquiries at Standard Chartered Bank after they noticed blank stubs in their joint account cheque book and when it was confirmed Mrs Smith's signature had been forged, they reported the incidents to the police.

In police interview Miss Smith had admitted taking the cheques and forging the signatures saying she was "desperate for food" and "wanted her mother to suffer."

Claims for compensation had been made by the shops which received cheques that were stopped at the bank and while Miss Smith's parents did not make a claim for compensation on the monies used, they did for the £60 bank charge incurred when the account was overdrawn as a result of the forged cheques.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said it was necessary to obtain a report from Social Services to decide the most appropriate way to deal with Miss Smith and advised her to obtain legal representation for the next court hearing listed for November 2.

appropriate way to deal with Miss Smith and advised her to obtain legal representation for the next court hearing listed for November 2.

Driver banned

STANLEY man Ryan Peter Buckett (20) was fined £500 and banned from driving for two years on Wednesday after he admitted drink driving.

Mr Buckett who gave a lower reading of 87 micrograms of alcohol per 100 millilitres of breath was also ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

The court heard that Mr Buckett was stopped by police on Racecourse Road in the early hours of October 5 after they had been informed that he had left an address on John Street in his Land Rover 90 and was believed to be under the influence of alcohol.

He was located driving in an erratic manner on Ross Road where he mounted the kerb twice and was stopped after he turned onto Racecourse Road.

Mr Buckett apologised to the court saying his thoughtless actions had let many people down and that although he had slept for a few hours before making the journey he now realised it had not made him capable of operating a vehicle. "I endangered my own life as well as those of innocent people," he said.

'Substantial' licences for new season

THE Fisheries Department has received a "substantial number of applications" for illex squid licences for the next season, confirmed Director of Fisheries John Barton at the Fisheries Committee meeting on Wednesday.

He added, "It remains to be seen if there is a lot of illex early on and how things will develop."

Responding to a question from a committee member he confirmed that loligo catches had not improved greatly over the season, hence the fishery closing eight days early and with only a total of 34,000 tonnes caught. He noted that this was the fifth poorest year on record and "at the low end of the spectrum in the loligo fishery."

The reason for the poor catch was unclear but he noted there had not been a huge biomass at the beginning of the season and indicated that winds may have pushed the stock north. There have been good loligo catches on the high seas to the north of the Falklands.

OK for wet chain storage

EXECUTIVE Council has agreed to renew permission to store metal chain on the seabed at Port San Carlos.

Byron McKay Port Services were granted a licence in August 2010 to store up to 2,000 tonnes of vessel chain in support of the offshore exploratory drilling programme.

The wet storage of anchor chain is preferable to dry storage on land, due to the weight of chain involved and because it is easier to load and unload directly from the ship.

The site at Port San Carlos was chosen because it is devoid of maritime traffic, sheltered, relatively free to access and collect the chain and is situated close to the North Falkland Basin.

Oil visitors

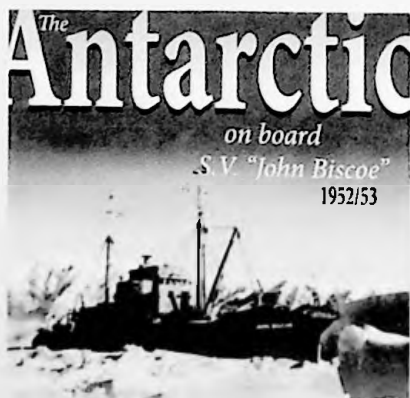

GOVERNMENT consultants, Dr Phil Richards and Tom Dodd from the British Geological Survey held meetings with FIG last week, confirmed Director of Mineral Resources Phyl Rendell.

Tim Bushell, CEO of FOGL, Mike Thomas, Logistics Manager and an environmental consultant from RPS visited Stanley at the end of September.

Argos Resource personnel will visit the Islands next week.

The Director and Director designate will attend the AAPG convention in Milan which starts on October 23.

Tommy's island

BIGGS Island in the Antarctic is named for Falklands man Tommy Biggs and not for the Falklands' Biggs family generally, the former told Penguin News.

Following a conversation where Mr Biggs was forced to defend his namesake Island to another member of the Biggs clan, he decided to approach the newspaper to clear things up.

Mr Biggs said the island, which forms the easternmost point of the Henkes islands off the south end of Adelaide Island, was named after him by the UK Antarctic Place-Names Committee in 1963.

He was a coxswain on a launch belonging to RRS John Biscoe, used by the Royal Navy Hydrographic Survey Unit.

"I was driving the boat and a guy used to jump from it onto the islands, at that island he fell in the water.

"They hadn't named that particular island and I think they had run out of posh names so they named it after me," joked Mr Biggs.

Book examines War

A DAMN Close-Run Thing: A Brief History of the Falklands Conflict, is the latest book on the Falklands War.

Russell Phillips' book includes a summary of the events preceding the conflict and discusses why the ruling military junta in Argentina believed that an invasion would not be opposed.

As well as describing the major military actions, he says, "it also includes details of an Argentine plan to sink a Royal Navy ship in Gibraltar harbour (foiled at the last minute by Spanish police) and an audacious British plan to land SAS soldiers in Argentina to destroy exocet-carrying aircraft while they were still on the ground."

Mr Phillips said his book "details the decisions on both sides that led to the conflict, and the conduct of the conflict itself."

The ebook is available now for only $2.99 from Amazon.com: <http://www.amazon.com/dp/B005MNT01G>, as well as the apple bookstore and Smashwords.

Mr Phillips was born and brought up in a mining village in South Yorkshire.

He has lived and worked in South Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Cumbria and Staffordshire.

His articles have been published in Television Magazine, Miniature Wargames, Wargames Illustrated and The Society of Twentieth Century Wargamers Journal.

He currently lives in Stoke-on-Trent with his wife and son.

Mobiles: law catches up

THE law is catching up on mobile phone users who chat and drive.

The Road Traffic (Mobile Phones) Order will outlaw the use of handheld mobile phones and other handheld communication devices 'while driving a motor vehicle.'

The order will come into force in November and the details, including any exemptions, will be publicised over the next few weeks, confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek at the recent meeting of Executive Council.

In the document 'a communications device' is described as a device that transmits or receives data for one or more of the following purposes: sending or receiving oral or text-based messages; sending or receiving facsimile documents; sending or receiving still or moving images; and accessing the internet.

The concept of 'using' the device includes, in relation to a mobile telephone or other communications device, each of the following actions: making or receiving a telephone call with it; transmitting or receiving data with it; holding it in a position in which it could be used; operating any of its functions; and looking at its display.

The law includes riding a motorcycle, or supervising a learner driver/rider.

Your questions answered

Q What do the zig zag lines on either side of zebra crossings indicate?

Acting Inspector Tom Whistler provided answers to this and the following three questions

A The lines indicate where a driver of a vehicle shall not cause the vehicle or any part thereof to stop within the limits of a crossing unless either his prevented from proceeding by circumstances beyond his control or it is necessary for him to stop in order to avoid an accident or giving precedence to a crossing pedestrian.

Q Is it legal to park or be stationary on these lines?

A It is illegal to park or to remain stationary on the lines, unless it is for the purpose of turning left or right, or a requirement of the emergency services, also refer to the above answer.

Q Is it legal to pass a vehicle that is parked on the zig zag lines or a zebra crossing?

A There is a prohibition against overtaking within the controlled zone.

Q Is it a traffic offence to manoeuvre without indicating?

A No there is no lawful requirement to indicate whilst manoeuvring, however it is advised to in order to be considerate to other road users.

Q Does the KEMH laboratory (or other sections within the hospital) carry out inspections and/or tests for the Fisheries Department and private fishing companies?

KEMH Manager Michael Poole answered these three questions

A Yes, the KEMH Public Health Laboratory does perform tests for private fishing companies as part of the hygiene certification process for fishing vessels that is managed by the Vets Department at the Department of Agriculture (DoA). The DoA is not charged for this service. The Fishing Vessels are currently charged £223.30 for an annual inspection and £154.60 for a transshipping inspection.

Q If yes, how much revenue is generated?

A The total FIG revenue for fishing vessel inspections for the 2010/11 financial year was £24,466.50.

Q If yes, but no charge is made to either sector, how much revenue would you estimate could be generated per annum by introducing a charge?

A In April 2009, Executive Council reviewed this issue and agreed that they would like to see a charge of £347.95 per test implemented from the point at which ISO Accreditation is achieved by the Public Health Laboratory. This accreditation is hoped to be achieved within 18-24 months. It is forecast that this would then result in an additional c. £20,000 of revenue per annum.

Emergency day at sea

A DISASTER scenario was created last week in order to test the capabilities of our emergency services and their abilities to adapt and coordinate a rescue and recovery.

A fire on board a ship was reported in the early hours of Friday morning requesting assistance to attend a number of casualties and fatalities. Stationed in Port William, the fisheries patrol vessel Protegat provided the stage where a number of military personnel with very realistic wounds waited patiently to be rescued.

Soon the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) were called in to provide rigid raider health and safety support and take Chief Police Officer and Director of Emergency Services Barry Marsden to the ship to coordinate a rescue reporting back to the Silver Command headquarters at the FIDF hall.

The Search and Rescue Sea King helicopter was deployed to rescue the most severe casualties and the walking wounded were taken by launches to the KEMH ambulances already waiting on FIPASS.

The casualties were removed and the Falkland Islands Fire Service were rapidly called in.

"The crew had been dealing with the fire but it had got beyond their experience and shortly afterwards three crew were reported missing," said Chief Fire Officer Gardner Fiddes. "From our part, it was a success... we train regularly to deal with disasters like this so we are always prepared."

The roles of the launches were essential, moving casualties and taking the fire service to the disaster. But it was the contributions of each service that meant the capability day was a success.

Archery classes on target

ARCHERY is taking off in the Falklands and it only costs £5 to have-a-go.

Organiser John Clifford said: "To take the sport up seriously we'd hope to practice twice a week, hopefully in the FIDF hall. Olympic professionals shoot up to 18 metres away from a target, the sessions start at around nine metres but it's surprising how fast people improve."

He added that if someone wished to take the sport up regularly the £5 sessions would be subtracted from the annual subscription of £40, which is used to book the hall and replace any equipment.

Attorney General Mark Lewis has been a keen archer for three years and runs the sessions at 10am each Sunday at Stanley Leisure Centre.

fortnightly with Ginge Kild

Well, we really do get it all here don't we? This last week has given us rain, wind, snow and, just when we thought we'd got the seasons completely wrong, that absolutely gorgeous Sunday.

I for one, was delighted to get out in the flower beds and make a start on weeding them, now, as the weather seems to be carrying out the same cycle again, I'm left with just a little to do on the borders before feeding the lot with a generous helping of 6X! Wonderful stuff that, even though it smells rather strongly until watered in, I have every confidence that it is doing the world of good in there, even the worms seem bigger for it.

Meanwhile, I was able to start pricking out into small pots the many dozens-or is it hundreds- of seedlings awaiting attention. It is not just vegetables at this time of year but all the flowers, shrubs and tree seeds as well, and it is a job that cannot be put off or all the plants will become spindly and possibly diseased. With a mug of tea beside me and surrounded by plants, pots and bags of compost I set-to with a will.

As always when weeding or doing simple gardening jobs my mind wanders away, either dreaming up new plantings or musing on some plant disasters. This time as I potted away, I was reminded of the awful mistake I made as a youngster while trying to give Mum a surprise by pricking out some plants for her; it turned out not to be such a good one. I had made the tragic mistake of handling her delicate plants by the stems, some surprise. And not so good for her plants either. Fortunately, there were more plants left and she showed me how to always hold them by their leaves, it made sense when she explained why, after all, what living thing would wish to have it's neck squeezed? It's a lesson I've never forgotten.

My 'mechanical horticulturist' has been out with hammer and nails this past week. We now have three raised beds in the vegetable garden, they are about a metre wide, to allow me to get at them from either side, and the length of the plot. The bottom one which is about twenty centimetres high, has been filled with upside-down top sods and half rotted kitchen and garden waste covered with a few centimetres of good soil. This one I am going to use for our second early spuds. We use 'Charlotte' a wonderful, tasty salad potato.

By the time they are lifted the soil in that bed should be just right for any crop. The other two are slightly lower, only fifteen centimetres high but otherwise the same dimensions, these are full of good soil and I intend to use them for carrots, parsnips and anything else that comes to mind at the time, although I will try to stick to root crops in them as our own soil has little depth throughout the veg garden. At the moment they are all covered in plastic to warm them up and, to germinate the first 'crop' of weeds. They will then have the seeds put in before being covered by Horticultural fleece which is so easy to use, a few thumb tacks and it is in place and keeps cats and birds from scratching everything out.

The other wonderful thing about raised beds is, you need never step in them and therefore the soil does not get compacted, everything can be grown so much closer, and any manure goes where it is needed too. And of course the bonus is that drainage is no longer a problem for us with raised beds.

The other job this past week has been weeding the fruit bushes, they were very productive last year and some smaller gooseberries bushes grown from cuttings, are looking quite promising this year. With all these children willing to pick them I shall concentrate on jam and jelly making and leave them to deal with the prickles. The red, white and black currants are really quite large now, they and the raspberries (surely the best fruit of the lot) were pruned in the Autumn so now they've all been given a slow release feed of blood, fish and bone, and, when I run out of that, Growmore - same results, just not organic. The thornless blackberry growing under cover, (as our seasons appear too short for it to fruit otherwise) is also becoming quite thuggish and will have to be restrained after it gives us some fruit this season.

Now, or as soon as the rain stops, I shall loosen the last remaining swedes in the garden so that the kiddies can do their bit and lift them for me. Then after peeling and dicing into one inch squares (I can't always convert into metric) they will be blanched by half filling a large bowl with them, adding about three table-spoons of boiling water, cover them, and then with the microwave on 750 or thereabouts, be given four minutes before pouring cold running water over them to cool quickly, before being well drained in a collander and going into the freezer.

Swedes are such a useful vegetable it would be shame to waste them, what would a stew be like without them?

The Wool Market Report - September 29, 2011

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

After a poor start to the week for prices, things have improved slightly toward the end. The EMI closed at 1,193 cents/kg clean, down 42 cents from last week (741GB p/kg). After reductions across all micron at the start of the week, things fared better for some micron with the middle range holding price.

The world economic situation, rather than lack of demand is still being pointed at as the main cause of the current price drops with further interference from exchange rates. Demand is still good with all sales having good pass rates. The Micron Price Guide for 24-25 fleeces are still 26% higher than the this time last year.

Look out next week for many activities for International Wool Week. Camp Education, IJS and the craft a thon are all getting involved to celebrate and promote Falkland Wool and what it means to our economy and community.

Free the Falklands from plastic bags

Falklands Conservation continues to campaign on reducing the use of plastic "throw away" shopping bags.

At the start of the campaign in 2007 we estimated that over 1,000,000 plastic bags were being used per year in Stanley. In 2009 the main retail stores started selling Bags for Life and in a recent survey, we found that eight out of 10 shoppers used the shop free plastic bags making us a rather "happy plastic nation."

By making sure you take a Bag for Life each time you go shopping you could be saving on average per household in the region of 500 plastic bags being thrown away each year.

This year to help promote the message we have "bagged" a few au naturel models from the Mount Pleasant base.

Did you know?

Plastic bags are either restricted or completely banned now in more than 25 per cent of the world. In the UK new laws are being discussed which aim to reduce the amount of plastic bags given out in super markets.

Why we should reduce plastic bags

It's well known that plastic bags hang around the environment for years polluting the oceans and causing untold damage to wildlife and blemishing our environments.

In the last 40 years that plastic bags have been on our planet, it is only now that scientists are beginning to see the long term effects.

Increasing research suggests that plastic toxins released into the environment are entering the food chain causing potential health concerns for not only wildlife but also humans.

The reward bit

As ever FC like to reward those who are doing their bit to help the environment and by participating in the token scheme you could win yourself a bunch of goodies from the FC shop.

Simply collect a token card from either the West Store, Chandlery or Kelper Stores and take it with you every time you go shopping.

Collect a stamp/sticker when you use a Bag for Life and hand it in to Falklands Conservation once full. A winner will be pulled out of the draw in November.

Happy "green" shopping.

Sarah Crofts

Doing the weekly shop? Remember your Bags for Life

Tips to reduce your use of plastic bags

- Recycle the plastic bags you have already
- Carry Bags for Life or old shopping bags in your car
- Do you really need a plastic bag to carry one of two items of groceries?
- Grab a box instead; often they are put out for this very purpose.
- If you do big weekly shops, why not invest in some large plastic tubs that you can use to put in your trolley and take straight out to your car
- Remember the average life span of a plastic bag is only 12 minutes. A Bag for Life will keep living on for more than 12 months

Kids Zone fundraiser more than a mere giggle

AN uproarious Kids Zone annual fund-raiser quiz was held on Saturday at the Falkland Islands Defence Force hall.

This year followed a similar format to previous years. Lots of donations were gratefully received from local companies, from the food through to great raffle prizes.

We had a healthy number of teams and the quiz had normal categories on the great Penguin News and sport, music and such-like. Then we had some games – decorate your paper table cloth, and then make a mummy out of one of your team and compete in the toilet plunger race. Very, very funny indeed. I am sure there are some great pictures on Facebook as well as those carried in Penguin News.

All raffle tickets were sold on the night and the top prize of a helicopter flight for four people was kindly donated by CHC and Rockhopper Exploration. They also entered very competitive teams, although it has to be said I think they were there for the dressing up more than the quiz.

The money raised this year will be heading towards a replacement for the SKZ school bus. The manager and all staff at SKZ asked me to thank all those that attended the quiz and of course all those who made it such a great night due to their help and very kind donations. Personally I hope you all had at least a giggle and at best howled with laughter.

A winning start for Johnny Foreigners

JOHNNY Foreigners began their Cricket League campaign with a win last Sunday, against STDs.

STDs won the toss and elected to bat first. After losing two wickets in the first two balls of the match, they were immediately on the back foot.

Good bowling and fielding resulted in STDs losing 17 wickets in total which was taken off the score at the end of their innings.

A late flourish from Kevin Clapp wasn't enough and after deductions STDs could only manage a score of 45 to defend.

With such a low score needed to win, Johnny Foreigners set out positively, scoring quick runs early on to ensure victory.

The scores were equal when the last batting pair took to the crease. Andy Stanworth and Torin Harte batted sensibly in order not to lose wickets and to tick the runs over.

At the end of the allotted 12 overs, Johnny Foreigners ended up with a total of 68 runs after penalty runs were subtracted, and eventually won the match by 23 runs.

The second match of the evening was played between Royal Challengers Stanley and Falkland Islands Junior Cricket Club. FIJCC won the toss and put the Royal Challengers in to bat first. Both David Hewitt and David Phillips scored well with 28 and 25 runs respectively which helped Royal Challengers Stanley reach a score of 90 after wicket deductions.

Ryan Poole was the pick of the bowlers for FIJCC with 3 wickets for 15 runs.

Ross Stewart and Kalon Jaffray opened the batting for FIJCC, who both managed to score a lot of runs early on; however, the batters who followed were less successful and lost many wickets.

Royal Challengers Stanley kept the score down to 72 which resulted in Junior Cricket Club losing by 18 runs.

Golf Report October Medal

ON Sunday October 2 the Décor Services October Monthly Medal was played. There was a good turn out of 16 players and, despite a cold wind and the occasional shower, some good scores were returned.

Two players tied for the lead with scores of Nett 68. After a count back, Tony Rocke was declared the winner. Second place went to Roy Reynolds who was playing in his last competition before leaving the Islands on Tuesday. Only six birdies were recorded with Rod Tuckwood, Troyd Bowles, Ric Nye, Tony Rocke, Glenn Ross and Roy Reynolds recording one each.

The golf club would like to thank Décor Services for their continued sponsorship of the monthly medals and wish Roy and Linda Reynolds all the best for the future.

Next Sunday will be the Fortuna Competition. Players should sign in by 0900 for a 0915 tee off. Troyd Bowles

Haddens win top prize in travel raffle

SHEILA Hadden, the first lady to ever win the Governor's Cup horse race back in 1953, is still on a winning streak as she along with her husband Nick galloped off with the top prize of a 20 day Antarctic cruise in Falklands Conservation's travel raffle drawn on Wednesday night.

The couple who are both 89 years young, are excited about their win but say they will decide whether they are fit enough to take the once in a life time trip, nearer the time.

Scheduled for January 13, the cruise donated by Quark Expedition takes in South Georgia and the Antarctic Peninsula aboard the Sea Quest.

Nick and Sheila bought three tickets in the raffle and gave one to Isabel Hutton for her birthday. £12,000 was raised on ticket sales and added to the £10,000 from the Conservation Ball it is the most Falklands Conservation ever raised.

"I'm ecstatic that our annual fund raiser has gone so well. It has been a real pleasure to provide our community with such great raffle prizes, as well as the Charity Ball last month," said Farrah Peck.

Peter McKay was the lucky winner of the second prize of a UK return flight for four on the oil charter flight donated by Rockhopper.

Policy Head looks to strengthen economy

THE new Head of Policy, James Fotheringham is looking forward to getting his teeth into some of the issues that were identified in the Economic Development Strategy and in working towards realising the ambitions for the Islands.

"There is already a lot of work on-going in taking this forward but I'm keen to see what more can be done to help strengthen the economy of the Islands," he told Penguin News this week.

Mr Fotheringham said he was approached by a recruitment agency about the position at a time he was looking for a new challenge and he felt it would be an ideal fit with his background in economic and policy development.

Most recently he has been working in the consultancy world, advising local authorities and Regional Development Agencies on the impact and effectiveness of a whole range of activities - including everything from programmes of business support for small businesses, construction industry training programmes, to the economic impact of hospitals, ports and colleges.

At the moment he is trying to absorb as much information as possible about the Islands and the issues they face. "I'm very keen to get out and about and engage with local people and business to understand their concerns and priorities for the Islands," he said.

Mr Fotheringham said that as an economist his core skills lie in undertaking economic and policy analysis. "So I'm looking forward to providing some sound advice to the Elected Members and my colleagues in government to ensure a sustainable economic future for the Islands."

While the drive from Mount Pleasant was, "an experience," his says overall first impressions of the Islands are positive and he is excited about the wildlife.

Mr Fotheringham is unaccompanied and says he will be looking for some new friends, "as well as some golfing buddies as soon as my golf clubs arrive."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

I HAD to smother a rather unladylike snort at the Development Corporation board meeting this week when it was suggested there might be some interest in the Import Substitution funding, "after Christmas, given the growing season."

So, no rush to plant the garden this year then fellow gardeners, as I guess word has been handed down from on high that we are going to have an exceptionally long summer and extended growing season.

Back in 1993 there was a similar scheme to promote local production of vegetables which was met with much more enthusiasm, but maybe that was because a practically free polytunnel was handed out to those who took the time to fill in an application form.

This time however, there is a much stricter regime, so strict in fact that the business which has worked its green fingers to the bone ensuring we get as much of our daily vitamin intake from Falklands soil (and water) is excluded even from the development grant (80% investment by the business and 20% grant from FIDC) because it is classed as being in Stanley not Camp. It seems a bit harsh to my mind, given that the Market Garden is arguably one of the most successful businesses ever given a kick-start by FIDC and they have tried and tested methods of producing large quantities of vegetables in the Islands.

I'm left wondering whether the project should have been called Farm Subsidy rather than Import Substitution, and who exactly Mr Waugh had in mind when he said the object was, "not to attract keen gardeners or hobbyists, but to encourage and assist professional, serious minded operators." If Tim Miller and his Market Garden team don't fit that bill, then I can't for the life of me think who will.

JUMPING to another subject, it was with some disbelief I heard just over a week ago of fly tipping on the Stanley Common area known as the FIDF paddock (see page 4).

At first I thought it would be just a few bits and pieces which had possibly fallen off a trailer by mistake, but on closer inspection it became apparent that entire lorry loads had been purposefully dumped in an unsightly and thoroughly thoughtless manner.

I'm among the first to shout about fanatical conservationists being overly protective of some Common areas to the point of not even wanting animals grazing, but this sort of abuse of land which is intended for everyone to roam and enjoy safely is despicable.

It is exactly this sort of behaviour that gives those who would like to see access to the Common restricted in certain areas, the ammunition they need to prove that it needs protecting from the very people it was put there for.

Fortuna Seafoods developing markets for Falklands' fish

UK supermarket fish inspector concludes frozen Falklands fish is better quality than fish sold as fresh in UK supermarkets.

FORTUNA Seafoods, currently developing markets for Falklands products in Europe and Asia, is offering to purchase catches landing in Stanley from other vessels operating in the South West Atlantic, confirmed James Wallace speaking from the company's Holland Office.

Mr Wallace said the operation was set up to offer customers a higher value product and service as well as develop Fortuna's position in the seafood marketing world.

He explained that the SAAS container service originally provided the basis that was needed: "It improved the capabilities in the Islands and strengthened the local contribution that could be made to the marketing function."

Wild-caught fish and squid has premium status and delivering it in modern temperature-controlled reefer containers direct from origin to the customer and keeping transshipments to a minimum gains extra credit because preservation is improved.

"The mode of transport is a point of differentiation that buyers and sellers of quality fish products will use to good effect in their promotions," said Mr Wallace.

Next to offering fish direct from the Falklands the company began importing products into Europe through Holland for sale to distributors and wholesalers.

Rotterdam is a new entry point for Falkland's fish: "Competition amongst fish sellers is low, it is close geographically to markets in Eastern Europe, and the port is one of the busiest in the world serviced by a huge number of transport providers offering attractive rates to most destinations," said Mr Wallace.

The location presents an interesting new value proposition to retail-focused buyers looking for convenient access to foreign fish in that it "opens up access to the wholesale market which has some significant advantages."

"Buyer power is highest at the import level, large importers will shop around from a large network of international producers and price inevitably becomes the main basis for choice, with less regard for quality."

"At wholesale level price scrutiny is reduced, buyers place a premium on convenient access to an EU stock of high quality sea-frozen seafood that is backed by the producer's guarantee and can be delivered from Rotterdam by road to most European cities within 48 hours."

Mr Wallace feels selling to retail-orientated customers is rewarding and the motivation to source alternative species, such as Falklands fish, in order to lessen the burden on European fish stocks exists, especially in Northern Europe, "but the segment has different needs that require a different approach to marketing. For one there is an emphasis on education," he said.

The first containers of fish were shipped from the Islands in 2009 and around 1500mt have now been imported into Holland and sold through-out Europe.

Road to the Cape?

'BAN off road driving and build a road to the Lighthouse,' was the most popular option in the Penguin News Poll that asked 'How can we best protect environmentally important areas from motor vehicle damage in the peninsula east of Stanley?'

40 per cent of the 108 people who had voted by Thursday morning believed this could be a solution to the problem, that most recently involved damage to an area of pond where rare Falklands flowers grow.

19.4 per cent felt, however, that advisory and educative signage would be a less draconian method but another 18.5% believed the most vulnerable areas should be fenced off.

14.8 per cent believed nothing should be done at all, and the remainder suggested that off road driving should be banned in certain areas.

Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Emma Edwards who holds the Environment Portfolio thanked Penguin News for running the poll and raising the issue with the public.

MLA Edwards said, "I was very interested to see that people felt that building a road to the lighthouse came top, by quite a considerable margin. It would certainly be good to allow people better access into this area and with a designated parking area it may be able to discourage people from driving all over the Cape. It would though be quite expensive and currently go against government policy of not building any more roads."

She said she believed that advisory signage had been erected in the past, "and if you look hard you can still find it (I've looked, but haven't found it)."

She said it had been discussed and it was agreed to be a good idea: "It is certainly something that can be done relatively cheaply and swiftly. I will raise this again with the Environmental Planning Officer and find out where we are with erecting this signage."

MLA Edwards feels fencing off an area should be a very last resort. "Cape Pembroke is part of the Common, so unless we pass legislation it would be very difficult to stop people from driving over these areas."

"Banning off road driving again I think is not possible without passing legislation and would be unfair to those people who drive responsibly over the area."

Something must be done though she concluded: "Flying over Camp Pembroke as we came back from the West this weekend you can see the doughnuts and numerous tracks cutting up the area and it looks a right old mess."

MLA Edwards said if the Falkland Islands Government had the funding then she would support the idea of a road being built down to Cape Pembroke Lighthouse so that people could be asked not to drive but "park up and walk around what is a very beautiful area."

Good spud crop

THE 2010/11 potato crop from Fitzroy has yielded well with 22 tonnes sold to date and a further nine tonnes held for seed, Falkland Landholdings general manager Owen Summers informed the board on Thursday.

He said the Fitzroy manager Alan Eagle estimated there was approximately a further four tonnes for sale and anticipated he would be sold out in the next two to three weeks. The overall total yield was as budgeted for in the 2010/11 season, said Mr Summers.

Little interest

DEVELOPMENT Corporation General Manager David Waugh said on Wednesday there had been limited interest in the Import Substitution project and no applications had been received to date. He said it had been suggested they could expect more interest after Christmas because of the growing season in the Falklands.

The Import Substitution programme is an initiative to reduce the amount of fresh fruit, vegetables and eggs imported into the Islands and is restricted to rural areas.

Building caution

LOCAL builder Wayne Stanley James McCormick and Bluff Cove Ltd had two charges each of breaching building conditions withdrawn in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Representing the Crown Alison Carter said Mr McCormick had been cautioned that morning and as a result she had served a notice to discontinue the case.

Kevin Kilmartin for Bluff Cove Ltd was also cautioned. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said the case was therefore marked as withdrawn.

UK support strongest ever

"WE'VE always had support from the British Government before but now it is just so strong," Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Sharon Halford told Penguin News this week on her return from the United Kingdom Party Conferences.

MLA Halford attended with MLA Roger Edwards where they manned a stand at each conference, accompanied by Falkland Islands Representative in London Sukey Cameron.

She said, "Because we've been attending for so long the Falklands stand is normally very well placed."

At the Conservative Conference they were able to catch the eye of most all visitors, being placed very near to the entrance.

"There's a great deal of cross party support, so each conference is as important as the other," she added, "we don't always remain on the stand but attend fringe meetings and sessions."

MLA Halford

They were able to meet a number of influential politicians including the Prime Minister and other party leaders and ministers as reported last week in Penguin News.

"It was also amazing how many people who spoke to us who had connections with the Falklands, whether because they had visited on cruise ships or from serving in the forces."

At one reception MLA Halford discovered herself sitting next to a lady who had enjoyed the Long Island Farm tour during a visit to the Falklands. "After chatting we realised that I had been her guide on the day," she said.

A young man who passed by the stand displayed to the group his Falkland Islands cufflinks. "they had the old Desire the Right crest," said MLA Halford, "but he couldn't remember how he had come by them."

"It's vital that we get the Falklands message out to as many people as possible," she said, "The party conferences are a great way to reach the influential ones."

Loans available

THE Development Corporation is now promoting the availability of loan and grant funding plus business advice and support, something which had not happened in the past, said GM David Waugh. He said hopefully more people would start to come forward for support. However if you are an established, larger business there is not much the Corporation can do for you. "It is more for embryonic, start up businesses," said Mr Waugh.

Uphill accident

TRAVIS McGill (16) was taken to hospital with minor injuries after his motorbike was involved in a collision on the corner of Philomel Hill and Fitzroy Road on Wednesday. Inspector Len McGill of RFIP said they have identified witnesses at the scene and the investigation is hoped to be concluded within the week.

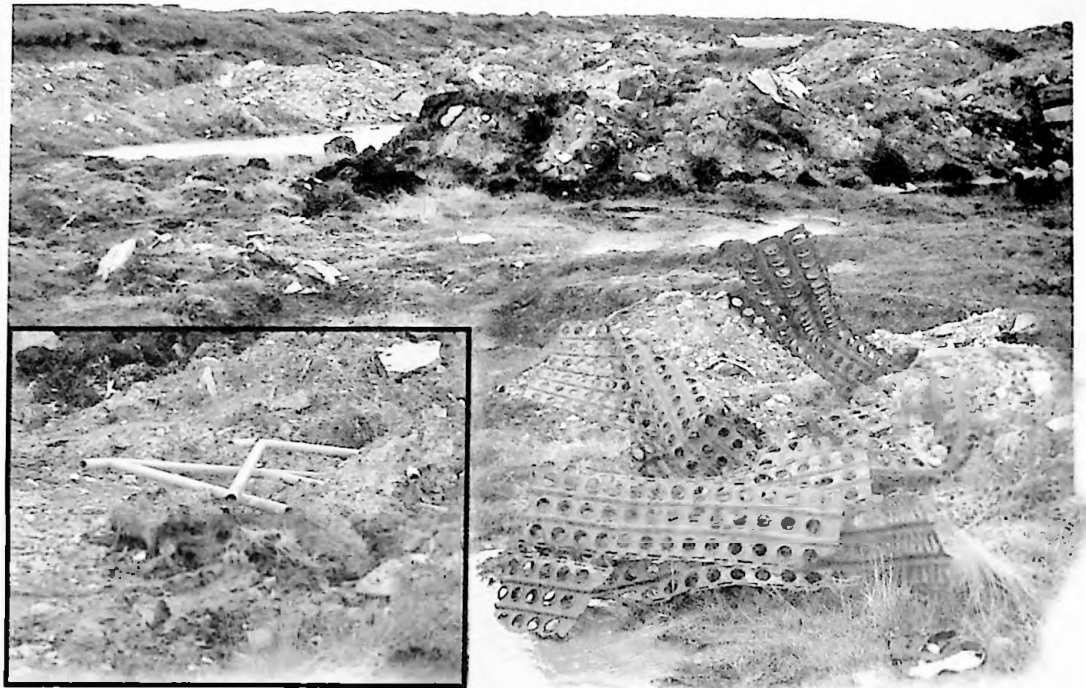

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THERE is a tendency to dwell on bad news, not good. I was reminded of this when I received a note from one of our 2011 graduates with news of his plans. I'm not sure if we have made enough of the remarkable achievements of our university students with a raft of good results in a wide range of degree subjects, including two with firsts among the 14. If we needed justification of past policies and expenditure on education then this demonstrates it. All but one of the graduates received most of their pre sixth form education in the Falklands so whatever we were doing up to five or six years ago when they left for sixth form or equivalent studies obviously gave them the grounding they needed. Their own application and hard work with the support of their families did the rest.

HAVING spent a good number of hours in recent weeks speaking to visiting journalists as well as responding to written queries from others, I believe we are getting the facts out there; but this has been, and will be, a never ending process for the life of the present Assembly. While we have benefited from the work of some quality journalists, so much coverage is slight, superficial and riddled with inaccuracies that I'm beginning to believe the doom sayers who predict that the average human attention span is being shortened by the speed and immediacy of the internet. When I look at serious papers on the internet and click on what looks like an interesting piece I'm almost invariably disappointed by the brevity and lack of real analysis on offer.

THIS week is somewhat quieter than recent ones; meetings include the normal session with the Governor and the Chief Executive, Education and Mineral Resources portfolio meetings, meetings with the Chamber of Commerce, visitors from the MOD and an NGO. Most interesting for me is the Falkland Landholdings board, the first since I took on that role. I am looking forward to seeing more of the work of the farms as soon as I can find some time.

Rubble and spoil illegally dumped on Stanley Common along with tangled metal, plastic bags and (above bottom left) distinctive yellow piping which looks like it could have been hand rails for steps. Do you know where it may have come from?

Fly tipping can lead to fines of up to £10,000

THE dumping of rubbish on Stanley Common can attract a fine of up to £10,000 for the culprit, the Attorney General Mark Lewis has confirmed.

Inspector Len McGill of the Royal Falkland Islands Police said a recent incident is being treated as a serious environmental issue in breach of the Stanley Common Ordinance 1999.

Department of Agriculture staff were horrified to find a large amount of rubble, spoil and twisted sheets of metal and tubing dumped inside the area known locally as the FIDF Paddock recently when they went to check the area prior to horses being put in there.

Not only is fly tipping junk illegal it is also a hazard to horses which can result in serious injury and veterinary surgeon Zoe Luxton has condemned the action.

The Stanley Common ordinance states that any person who, "throws or deposits or causes to be thrown or deposited on the Common any dirt, ashes, rubbish, decaying animal or vegetable or other noxious matter save in such place and in accordance with such conditions as may be prescribed for the purpose commits an offence."

So, dumping on Stanley Common is a criminal offence that could attract a relatively substantial fine, said Attorney General Mark Lewis.

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside explained that the metal which was causing most concern had been cleared away and a trench dug through some of the material which had been placed in an arc and had trapped water causing ponding and a boggy area.

"We have done a little tidying up of some of the spoil to make things a bit safer for the horses, which was done within a working day, but to tidy up the whole area, which I do not have planned in yet, will take rather longer and depend on whether it is decided to spread it at or near where it is, or move it to another area," he said. Agreeing it was illegal to fly tip in the area, Mr Keenleyside said in practice unless it could be determined who dumped the waste there was little that could be done other than clean it up.

"No one has reported either doing the dumping or having seen anyone doing so, although it would appear that at least several people must have been involved in the excavation, carting and dumping," he said.

"The trail is rather cold, as it looks like the main bulk was dumped last season, as there are weeds that would have been last years growth, but we are trying to see what if anything can be established about who did it," he added.

It is intended to put signs in place on the common gate leading to the area and also further down the track, said Mr Keenleyside.

Inspector McGill said he was interested in hearing from either the person who had dumped the rubbish on the Common or anyone who had information they thought would be useful in determining how it got there. Call him on 28100 or email inspector@police.gov.fk

Vet carries Falklands message to Kiwi's

WHILE the climate is harsh the people are not, Hastings Vet Peter Ebbett said of Falkland Islanders when he returned to New Zealand recently, following work training Department of Agriculture staff in ultra sound pregnancy scanning of ewes.

Mr Ebbett said, "They are unbelievably friendly and very patriotic - Falkland Islands first and British a close second."

He also drew attention to problems caused by the Argentine government's aggressive policy on the Falklands.

"The Falklands is suffering the legacy of the 1982 Falklands War. Argentina will not allow supply ships in its waters. The only ships that can get there are from Britain.

"The only reason Argentina allows airplanes is because they have to - there is an international agreement which means they have to let Chile use their air space."

Mr Ebbett also ran a farmer seminar on sheep reproduction and production during his visit.

Helen lives on Hansen Hill with Warren Landles and Sash Bash the Labrador. She arrived from the UK in July and works at the Ag Department as an Agricultural Advisor. She is enjoying life in the Falklands and especially exploring Camp with work and at the weekends especially if it involves a FIGAS flight.

Jobsworths ruling was double standard

It came as a great shock to many of their supporters, workers and friends, to discover recently that the owners of Bluff Cove had been charged with offences against the planning and building regulations and summoned to the Criminal Court. The charges related to the building of a restaurant at Bluff Cove, which many of us are looking forward to visiting and seemed to arise at best from a breakdown of communication and, at worst, from some kind of malicious entrapment.

With an enthusiastic team of over thirty people working for them on large cruise ship days, Hattie and Kevin Kilmartin are probably the largest single tourism employers in the Falklands. Having built up their business over a number of years, they are the only tourism operators in the Falklands to have won prestigious international prizes. In the off-season, they get out and about looking for customers among the cruise companies and consequently are major export money earners.

At considerable personal expense, on top of their considerable investment in their penguin tours and facilities at Bluff Cove Lagoon, the Kilmartins have decided to expand their business, in the process offering more employment out of the normal tourism season and filling the gap left by the sad demise of the Falklands Brasserie.

In these circumstances one would expect any normal government to be doing everything possible to assist the Kilmartins enterprise rather than allowing bureaucratic 'jobsworths' to make life difficult for them. Sometimes I despair at how powerless our government appears to be when confronted by its own regulations and the people they employ to interpret and enforce them. Too often the tail appears to be wagging the dog.

In any case, while I would not wish to be seen to encourage breaches of the law, a much more serious and deliberate planning offence was publicly dismissed as unimportant by one of our councillors a few years ago, when allegedly committed by a prospective, and ultimately successful, candidate for one of the most senior positions in our civil service. Sauce for the goose anyone?

Out of the frying pan

So Teflon's off and leaving us, is that such a shame?
Of one thing I'm quite certain, we'll never be the same Strategies, reports and visions like never seen before
This Council had the chance, but failed, to show him to the door
But who comes next we ask of you? ...Not another wizard
What we need's a steady hand to see us through the blizzard

Keep calm and they'll carry on cruising

I WAS concerned to hear that it was felt by some people that more than one cruise ship in Stanley at one time was too much to cope with, mainly because it made it difficult for the people in the shops, museum, post office and similar.

Any attempt to get the ships to alter their schedule will only result in the ships not calling into the Falklands.

West Point was the first destination in the Islands to receive purpose built cruise ships when the famous Lindblad Explorer arrived in January 1970.

The explorer stayed for two days at West Point and then went to Carcass and Stanley. All the passengers came to the house for tea and to see the gardens and of course to see the albatross, penguins and other wildlife. In the afternoon they all had tea and cakes cooked by my wife Lily.

As time went on more and larger ships with up to 1,000 passengers coming to West Point.

For these numbers our friends helped to cook the cakes and drive the Rovers for passengers who wanted a lift to see the albatross.

I remember Lily once drove for seven hours. Everyone was happy and nobody complained. I am very grateful to those kind people who helped so willingly. Mostly there were no more than four or five helpers. Surely if little West Point could cope with that number of passengers then Stanley should be able to manage much larger numbers as there are many more people to help.

It should be mentioned that Stanley has a long history of excessive charges for ships. This was so bad that the owners of the last big sailing ships that were damaged by severe weather in the Southern Ocean instructed the Captains to avoid Stanley and put into Montevideo for repairs.

Before the Linblad Explorer came to the Falklands the Chilean ship Navrino with about 50 passengers called at Carcass, West Point and Stanley, however the Navrino was not a purpose built cruise ship. The Linblad Explorer was always known as the Little Red Ship and achieved many firsts, mainly under the command of her famous Captain Nillsan. First east to west through the northwest passage, furthest north and furthest south of any purpose built cruise ship.

I must thank all of those who have helped West Point for so many years. Customs and Harbour, Falkland Islands Company Shipping agents, Sullivan Shipping Limited agents, Debbie Summers for her help with the larger ships and all those in the Government who have helped.

Gabriella to be published illustrator in Shelterbox international charity book

A PUPIL at Stanley Infant and Junior School has won a competition to have their illustration featured in a new book published by international disaster relief charity, ShelterBox.

Gabriella Graham, aged 10, was one of eighteen children whose drawings were picked to go in the book, called The Day the Rain Came.

The illustration competition challenged teachers and children to explore a story about flooding and bring it to life with their pictures, giving them a unique opportunity to understand how a disaster like this might affect families and communities involved.

The competition was judged by staff at ShelterBox, the authors of the book Helen and Claire White and renowned children's author and illustrator Michael Foreman. Her illustration particularly impressed the judges because of its use of colour.

Michael Foreman said: "Everyone who took part in this competition experienced the joy of making pictures but they also used it as a way for them to reach out to the wider world of children, and to show they care."

The book will be launched on November 3, 2011, at a special London event organised by ShelterBox and The Reading Agency, an independent charity working to inspire more people to read more.

At the launch event, Gabriella and the other young illustrators will be presented with certificates and prizes for their winning entries used in The Day the Rain Came. Michael Foreman will also lead a workshop sharing his passion for creating books.

Anna Stenning, Gabriella's teacher said: "We're delighted that a child from our school has had their illustration chosen for this book. The children here are often quite unaware of world disasters, as the TV news is for the Forces, and unless people have satellite TV from South America, major news stories are not continued beyond day one. Even being next door, and suffering from the effects of the recent Chilean earthquake, there was very little information.

"I did an assembly about the competition and the children were very enthusiastic. They couldn't believe how much could fit into one box - I put one together here for them to see. The fact that there had been an earthquake in Chile, and air links here were affected did actually hit home."

Mrs Stenning told Penguin News, "Many children did pictures for the competition but I had to choose just 17, one for each part of the book."

"They were sent off and Gabby won plus Flora McKee, Amanada McGhie and Jessica Cooper received a Highly Commended."

Onus on organisers

SPORTING events such as sports weeks and motorcross have traditionally been attended by trained KEMH staff and qualified First Aiders, working on a voluntary basis but this has raised concerns in the hospital in terms of staffing, equipment and insurance.

Director of Health and Education David Jenkins drew attention to the concerns in his report to the Health and Medical Services Committee last Thursday.

It was noted that these uninsured volunteers could be taken for granted and the system might ultimately fail if the volunteers became unwilling. A number of options were presented to the committee. Options one and two were 'to do nothing', and to 'no longer cover sporting events'. These were dismissed as unreasonable. Option four, (providing medical service for events as an obligatory service from the hospital) would require additional staff, equipment and finance but would be considered if it was found to fit within the hospital schedule.

Option three was eventually decided upon. It would place the responsibility of finding medical cover on the organisers themselves and if volunteers from the hospital could not be found the organiser would need to arrange suitable cover in a trained first aider.

Mr Jenkins said, "I personally think that three is an achievable solution. No financial penalty is incurred on the hospital but with an official stance we can provide insurance cover for the volunteers."

A number of concerns were raised: Dr Barry Elsby noted the increase in the number of events saying he hoped the organisers would be aware of the level of expertise required and the level at which their volunteer first aiders were trained.

Another member was worried that some organisations would opt out of medical cover if they had to pay staff and hire equipment to provide a medical service, or that it might lead to the cancelling of events.

The committee eventually resolved to run with option three and report back in a year's time with a recommendation.

East aid

THE Health and Medical Services Committee Meeting agreed last week that East Falklands settlements such as North Arm and Goose Green would benefit from a First Response team in place with training in First Aid and trauma management. It was agreed in principle that the resources were needed to achieve this should be found.

Petition for Falklands

AN e-petition has been placed on the HM Government petition website calling for the UK Government to stop giving financial aid to countries, such as Argentina, who act against British policies, peoples and beliefs.

Wayne Faulkner has petitioned the Department for International Development saying in particular he objected to UK aid to Argentina (through guarantees to both the World Bank and contributions to European Union Aid) "a country that continues to oppress the Falkland Islands." From bog

PEAT cutting Monday fell this year on Monday October 3. While many Islanders will remember the days of walking or driving to the peat bog to cut or rickle peat, those newer to Falklands shores may be confused by the oddly named public holiday. In 1976 Falklands author and historian John Smith described precisely what peat meant to the Falklands then – and still does for some. Many thanks to John for offering his fascinating description for publication.

For many people in the Falklands peat is still the sole means of cooking and heating. It is very much taken for granted, but without peat the population and development of the Islands may well not have taken place. Peat is composed of a dense carpet of rotting vegetation, dead roots and plant life saturated by water and compacted by time. It covers vast areas of the Islands varying in depth from a few inches in some places to other parts where it forms a giant carpet twenty feet thick. For such a vital commodity there is little to commemorate its discovery. Perhaps some time in the future we may have a national 'Peat Day' or maybe a set of postage stamps so that the great moment is more positively recorded."

It happened on the 17th February 1764 when Dom Pernety, a priest accompanying the French aristocrat and explorer Louis de Bougainville on his expedition to the Falklands was seeking a suitable spot to set up their camp. The most urgent need was fuel for the fire, a serious problem in a land without trees. Fortunately Dom Pernety came across an eroded bank of earth at Port Louis with the soil on its exposed face having been dried by the wind to a crisp, almost coal-like state. He returned to their camp with several blocks of the stuff with which he very shortly had a bright and cheerful blaze underway.

Bougainville and his party supped that evening little realising the importance of Pernety's discovery and effect it was to have on the future of the Falkland Islands for many years afterwards.

In an unobtrusive but permanent way, peat dominates life in the Islands, it is a continuous process which cannot be ignored. Towards the end of September each year its "Off to the peat bog" firstly to clean up the bank which involved trimming the crust on the surface left by the frosts of winter.

Back to the bosom of Britain

I HEAR that a review of the UK's relationship with its colonies is being launched. Or should I say the overseas territories? I've always had trouble figuring out if the latter term is just a euphemism for nasty old colonialism, or whether the relationship with Britain really is so much fairer these days that it merits a new title. Whatever, I think this review is a good thing.

I must admit that I rather shocked myself when I began thinking about this review and developing the opinion that this is a chance to give up some of the political and economic independence that the Falklands have developed over the last three decades. That's right: I do believe it would be good to return to the bosom of the mother country, although certainly not as one of those dreadful old colonies.

Now that I'm almost a grown-up, logic can get the better of my emotions. Back in the late 1970s, though, we in the PN leader-writing department (well, me, I suppose) were all for breaking away from London. Colonialism was a largely abusive system of government that kept the good pioneering folk who settled the islands on behalf of the empire firmly oppressed.

Those of us who weren't incubating a massive inferiority complex were working up a simmering anger. London and the wool barons back in the UK liked to refer patronisingly to the relationship between London and Stanley as benignly paternal, but PN did not smoke that, and we preached independence, or something approaching it. This was a patently absurd and impractical position, but good copy was to be had from suggesting that anything was better than being second-class citizens. I recall someone at Government House suggesting we could have independence "when we learned how to spell it."

The independence thing was more a form of protest. But, to our amazement, after 1982, we virtually got it. We all enjoyed increasing autonomy, and we couldn't stop smiling when we were given the green light to exploit natural resources. This generated quite a slush fund for the government, and jealously guarded wealth elsewhere. On the other side of the equation, however, the UK faced a huge and open-ended commitment to defend the Islands.

This new system put the boots very much on the feet of the Islanders. And it worked surprisingly well. But now one has to ask if this way of life and this expensive relationship with the UK is sustainable, especially in the face of an increasingly serious threat of Argentine militarism and the reality of a blockade.

It's an inconvenient truth that, every now and again, ministers from either side of the House come along and decide to do something about the pesky diplomatic and defence anachronism that is the Falklands. That usually involves talking to Argentina. It will happen again; maybe not in this government, maybe not in the next. But it will, eventually.

Surrendering that autonomy and at least some of that wealth, and returning to the bosom of Britain would guarantee security in perpetuity, especially if London followed, broadly anyway, the model of France. Paris maintains overseas departments – counties, as we would call them – in the Pacific and the Caribbean. An equivalent British system would give the Falklands the same status as, say, Sussex. There would be a degree of autonomy in the form of a county council but greater powers would be vested in Parliament, where, needless to say, there would be a Falklands MP. (Sadly, I suspect that MP would be Conservative, but that would be a small price to pay for the security of full union with Britain.)

Where would that leave the Argentines? Pretty much in check, I would say. Blockading and threatening a British county with its own MP sitting in London would be a completely different ball game to threatening a tiny quasi-independent colony occupied by (as they see it) upstart people with ambitions of unlimited wealth and blowing raspberries across the water. There would be safety in county status.

Perfidious ministers would be no more able to negotiate away the county of the Falklands with its MP than they could Sussex, Kent or Cornwall. Another threat disposed of, simply by cosying up to Britain. If it ever did come to a fight, there would be little controversy about it. After all, even the lefties agree that no-one invades Britain and gets away with it.

Would London go for it? They probably would if they were presented with the tantalising offer of the oil reserves that even I am beginning to believe actually exist. Falklands oil would make a very attractive replacement for the North Sea reserves that are now running out. Let's be honest, Falkland Islanders really do not need billions of barrels of oil and grotesque wealth. Just a small slice of that cake would suffice. But it could buy security in perpetuity as new British county.

This is a chance to be bold. The autonomy and riches experiment was fun for a while, but with an aggressive neighbour ascendant, maintaining our autonomy and distance from Britain offers nothing but danger.

Then, the working face of the bog is lightly scored with a spade as a guide for cutting; another aid to cutting is a thin line stretched between the pegs along the whole length of the bank to ensure a perfectly straight cut. Then the cutting begins. The grassy top sod is carefully sliced off and placed in the bottom of the bank so forming a dry platform on which to stand as you work along, as well as keeping the bottom of the bank neat and tidy. The cut is a yard wide and a yard deep, each cubic yard is sliced up into a series of 'rits' nine inches square thus making sixty four sods to the yard.

The sods are then individually thrown out with the spade; an acquired skill involving a deft flick of the wrist which rolls the wet sods well clear on the top of the bank. When correctly done this results in a dead straight peat bank with a blanket of sods along its entire length some three or four yards wide. It is superbly neat, there are those who are born good peat cutters, and those who are not.

To those unfortunates it's a long, hard, back breaking process causing much anguish and swearing, but when all the peat is out the glow of relief and satisfaction is a wonderful thing. A cubic yard of wet peat weighs one ton and the average quantity of peat cut for each household every year is one hundred and twenty yards. All cut with a 'Bulldog No 3' spade which has its edges honed to razor sharpness and a small circular hole drilled in the centre of the blade which prevents wet sods from sticking.

The cut sods are then allowed to dry out for a month or so with wind forming a good crust on the exposed sides. Then it's time for 'rickling' when the sods are stacked up into pyramid shape pile just above knee height, the wet side facing outwards enabling the wind to whistle through the rickles in this last stage of the drying process. Rickling is back-aching work to which the whole family is usually pressed into giving a hand.

Having got this far it's usually about December when the task has to be faced of carting the peat from the bog to the shed. This is done by lorry involving yet more throwing it up and in. Nearly all houses in Stanley have a large shed at the back of the garden which is built of timber battens spaced apart to allow a continuous draught of air to pass through. These sheds back onto the road so when the peat is tipped from the lorry it can be thrown well back into the shed, this is essential as most sheds are designed to hold just one year's supply and any errors of judgement in not using up all the space means that you might well be left on the pavement with the last load wondering what you are going to do with it. A lorry load of peat at your feet looks awfully big when there is no more space in your shed for it.

For most men the first task of the day is to chop the peat and bring it down in peat buckets which are then stood in a line outside the back porch. Each sod is chopped in pieces about the size of a cricket ball with which the buckets are filled – usually five gallon oil drums with the top cut out and a wire handle fitted. It is at this time that the housewife takes over as she keeps the fire stoked up throughout the day, which has to be done carefully and involves frequent riddling of the grate in order to clear away any build up of ash which would interfere with the draught vital for the efficient working of the stove. Each time the ash pan is full up it has to be taken outside to be dumped in the ash drum, a 45 gallon drum with the top cut out which is emptied every week. No matter how carefully the door of the house is opened and the direction of the wind taken into account, the usual result is a great deal of ash being blown back into the house as well as all over the unfortunate person carrying the pan.

Then the final job each day is to bank the fire down for the night when a fairly dampish sod is placed among the hot ashes in the firebox and the are dampers closed. If this has been done correctly the result is a pleasantly warm kitchen to come into next morning, then you open the damper, give the stove a good riddle to clear the accumulation of ash, so that very shortly there is a good healthy fire to bring the kettle to boil for that splendid first cup of coffee or tea of the day.

Fetching the bankers in at night time is a good way of getting rid of people who tend to stay on a bit too long in the evening, it's a sure sign that you are ready for bed even if they are not. If they are really persistent and won't shift then you close the damper right up and leave a bit of the firebox door open. Harsh treatment but a sure way to get rid of anyone as this causes a few hefty puffs of smoke and ash to shoot out ensuring your visitor has taken the hint as he or she coughs and chokes their way out into the night.

To get the fire going really quickly first thing in the morning the trick was to put on a shovel full of knobblings, very small lumps of peat which tend to accumulate on the peat shed floor. You close the firebox door take off the bottom door for a few minutes and a really good, intensely hot fire is produced, but caution has to be exercised as this practice is quite likely to set the chimney on fire.

There are several makes and types of peat stove, in the early days cast iron ranges with splendid names like 'The Stanley Range No 9' or the 'Modern Mistress' sometimes a 'Carron' stove or nowadays most used is the 'Rayburn'.

In the days of sailing ships, some homes were lucky enough to have galley ranges from disabled vessels, these were much sought after as they held the heat allowing slow and even cooking which produced meals of mouth watering quality. Using a peat stove was almost a science and there were some folk who could tell the exact location of your peat bog just by looking at the colour and quality of the ash in the ash pan.

To the newcomer cooking on a peat stove looks deceptively easy with everything simmering away, everywhere clean and sparkling and the housewife completely under control. This is either a thing you are born with or an art acquired after much practice. There are many newcomers who are reduced to tears of frustration and rage trying to get to grips with the mysteries of working a peat stove. Ashes everywhere, the kitchen and the house half filled with smoke, and worst of all the fire goes out just before a mealtime whether through not stoking it properly or forgetting to stoke it at all. After a while though you get the hang of things and are proud to boast to other new arrivals that the only time you need to let the fire go out is for sweeping the chimney every three months.

Years ago there used to be a highly efficient method of sweeping the chimney. After first of course letting the fire out, a rope was dropped down the chimney from the roof and a live goose tied to the end which was then pulled up the chimney a couple of times. The resulting thrashing about of the wings, feet and beak effectively dislodged all the loose soot leaving the whole thing spotlessly clean until the next time. The goose would be somewhat startled, but it saved a lot of messing about with brushes. Perhaps fortunately in these times when people are more conservation minded this practice has been abandoned.

This brief introduction to peat will hopefully help the visitor to both Stanley and the settlements to understand why there has to be unsightly drums for the ashes outside every house. Also it might help you understand why sometimes in Stanley you might hear people talking about changing their peat bog as they are moving house. Each house in Stanley is allocated its own peat bog, so when you move house you have a new peat bog. You might also hear talk of wheeling banks, these are bogs where the bank is too high, instead of throwing the peat out over the top of the bank it has to be wheeled in a barrow then spread out on a flat ground nearby to dry.

The different areas of the peat bogs each has their own name: the Eliza Cove banks, the Dixie banks, the Karl Fritzen banks, Sapper Hill and Browning's Farm to name but a few. So there you have it, when you listen to talk of bogs, banks, rits, knobblings and sods that's what it's all about, unglamorous but essential.

GOLD RUSH MURDER

FIODA are celebrating the success of their recent production, The Gold Rush Murder, set in Rafferty's Bar and Grill in the town of Gold Rush, Colorado in 1880.

78 diners assembled in the Parish Hall on September 30 to enjoy a delicious two-course American-themed buffet from Shorty's Diner whilst trying to unravel a plot with more twists than Hercule Poirot's moustache.

At the start of the evening long-suffering Sheriff Quickdraw McGraw (the ever-reliable Louise Taylor) assisted by dim-witted Deputy Diana Dawg (defily played by Paula Fowmes, who demonstrated impeccable comic timing) challenged the guests to help them unmask the killer of Geraldine Rafferty. Throughout the night each table took it in turn to interrogate the 10 suspects, who as refreshments flowed, gradually revealed past histories, present misdeeds, and of course motives for murder.

Murder Dinners provide an ideal opportunity for wannabe actors to try their hand in a more relaxed setting than the Town Hall stage. Newcomer Robin Cooper drew all eyes as a malevolent stagecoach driver, while stagehand Joanne Lazo stepped out from behind the curtains as a store-owner with a dark secret. Murder Dinners also tempt actors back into the limelight. Pollyanna Lennie made a welcome return as a love-struck school-teacher, with Tim Stenning again demonstrating his talent for playing a smooth villain. Scott Betts and Catherine Catton as a louche cowboy and glamorous madame showed their recent success in panto 'Dick Whittington' was not a one-hit wonder, while Tasmin Tyrrell and Beth John proved that the future of acting in the Falklands is in safe hands

Any Wild West production is a good occasion to dress up and practise a dodgy accent. The check-shirts and feather boas of cast members competed with the Stetsons and cowboy boots of the audience. Prizes were awarded to Greta Skene and Jackie Cooper for the most original outfits. Several cast members perfected their American vowels, but the most mesmerising performance came from Garry Tyrrell as Scottish émigré Dr McPriest, effortlessly switching from a comic double-act with brother Jason Lewis (masquerading as Chief Makepeace) to a man burdened to breaking-point by whisky and guilt. Garry's accent was so convincing that one (English) member of the audience was heard to enquire of the (Scottish) director whether living in the Falkland Islands had softened his Glaswegian tones.

As Danny Jones (Robin Cooper) revealed he had shot Geraldine because she abandoned him in an orphanage, Johnson Johnson (Tim Stenning) stepped forward gun in hand to avenge his childhood sweetheart, shouting "you're no son of mine" as he took aim at the hapless Danny. The winners on the night were Daphne Arthur-Almond and guests, who managed to reveal a staggering 13 out of the 14 secrets the suspects were harbouring. The cast awarded a special prize to McGrigors solicitor Paul Deans for his energetic cross-examination technique.

FIODA would like to thank Christ Church Cathedral for the use of the Parish Hall, FIDF for the loan of the chairs, Shorty's Diner for exceptional service, wardrobe mistress Theresa Lang, designer Kathryn McGeachie and stagehand John Birmingham. If anyone is interested in becoming involved in FIODA's next production, whether on or off-stage, contact Lidda Luxton, Jason Lewis or Ronnie MacLennan Baird.

WOOL WEEK

INTERNATIONAL Wool Week is to celebrate wool. Its aim is to raise awareness for its many uses and promote it globally. Wool has seen resurgence in recent years. Global Wool prices are high and in January of this year reached peak prices never seen before. Demand is increasing and with super fine wool there is a new area of wool products available to consumers. Consumers are choosing wool as it ticks many of the boxes for the environmentally conscious shopper and it is sustainable and environmentally friendly. Wool has a multitude of uses from high tech base layers, classic hats and scarves. carpet and insulation to craft uses such as felting and spinning.

The Falklands economy and community are built on wool so it was important for the Islands to celebrate wool week throughout all parts of the community.

The Falklands has 488,000 sheep and export 1.3 million kgs of wool a year.

I would like to thank all those you supported and got involved in Wool Week and look forward to celebrating it again next year.

Helen Thoday, Department of Agriculture.

What does wool mean to you?

"Wool means a lot to us it is our main source of income and important to our way of life, a large part of Falklands income and as I see it will be for years to come."

Raymond Evans, Pebble Island

"Wool is a living but shearing's a sport."

Shearing Gang boss and farmer, Lee Molkenbuhr, Johnson's Harbour

"We love wool because it is a fantastic local resource. It can be made into art, interior furnishings, clothes and accessories. It keeps us physically and mentally agile through the use of our hands and minds. It brings us closer to the long local history and culture of sheep raising. It brings us the friendship of fellow fibre enthusiasts. And finally, it is the means of excellent relaxation from the many stresses of life through the practice of craft."

The Guild of Spinners, Weavers & Handicrafts encouraging wool crafts for over 60 years.

"Keeps me off the breadline"

Nigel Knight, Farmer Coast Ridge Farm, West Falklands

"A grand day out. A change of scene. Beautiful Darwin. The rhythmically restful click of the spinning wheels. Laughter and chatter. Soup and thwackie. A bobbin filled. A garment born."

MPC Spinning Ladies after a day of spinning with Bonnie Greenland at Darwin

"Wool is nice and interesting but greasy. Sheep do smell but Dad gets lot of money for wool."

Kia Alazia, GG Camp Education's special wool week.

WOOL FACTS

It only takes 1 kilo of oil to produce one kilo of clean scoured top however it takes over 5 kilos of oil to produce 1 kilo of nylon.

If you laid all the wool fibres produced by a Merino sheep fleece, over a year, from end to end it would be 13,000 kilometres long!
Wool is as strong as steel.

The fastest time to shear a single mature sheep is 39.31 seconds by Hilton Barrett (Australia) at the Wellington Show 2010 in Wellington, New South Wales, Australia, on 1 May 2010.

The Wool Market Report - October 6, 2011

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A similar situation to last week with price drops in the first half of the week but becoming stable to positive by the end of the week. The EMI closed at 1,164 cents/kg clean, down 29 cents from last week (731GB p/kg). There were further reductions in the finer micron markets but prices remained firmed and increased by the end of the week in the cross bred micron markets.

There has been a noticeable absence from European buyers this week who usually purchase the finer micron wool and further lack of demand came from China where national holidays have meant buyers where not bidding. Pass rates at sales this week have been around 77% down from the last few weeks. However with the Chinese returning to work next week this should alter. Price indicators in the UK and New Zealand have seen price rises this week, showing the effect of exchange rate on the Australian Index.

Some note worthy news is that a Scottish Knitwear company Hawick Knitwear is recruiting 50 trainees over the next three years. The first stage for 15 recruits achieved 140 applicants for the post. This demonstrates a change in perception of the industry as a stable, flexible and modern one. The first trainees are already in place and undergoing intensive training to develop the skills required to make luxury knitwear.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Louise Taylor mashes paper for recycling into cards, tags and gift bags

THE first ever craft-a-thon was held at the Community School on the weekend weekend and, judging by the smiling faces and feedback from the many that attended, it proved a great success.

An array of beautifully dyed soft Falkland wool greeted those arriving for felting workshops as individuals were spoilt for choice, not only between the fantastic colours on offer, but also the options of making a scarf, hat, mittens, booties, slippers, flowers or a felt picture. Those with a little less time to spare could try felting a soap.

The Spinners and Weavers group contributed to the celebration of International Wool Week with their demonstrations and workshops including crochet and knitting.

The range of fabrics displayed was no less colourful in the textiles room where people were busy at work on pretty appliqué cushions and gorgeous zip-bags.

Children enjoyed crafts provided by the Jellytots group and Stanley Leisure Centre, while plaster casting proved popular with children of all ages. Under the guidance of Steve Massam hands, fingers and even lips were modelled as well as the production of penguins and seals from moulds.

Candles were made and glass jars painted to design an effective holder for a night-light and budding artists also tried their hand at water-colour painting with Richard Cockwell while learning about the use of colour and discovering hidden talents.

Other activities included card making, papercraft, jewellery making, macramé, pyrography and making a calendar.

Off-cuts from trees were cleverly turned into rustic stools in the woodwork room under the skilled guidance of Colin Davies and the smells from the cookery room showed that "something different for Christmas" and pastry making create both delicious odours and tastes.

Meanwhile, those feeling hungry could stop a while in the café to sample home-made cakes with tasty soup and hot-dogs whetting the appetite at lunch-time.

The organisers of the event would like to say a huge thank you to everyone who ran an activity, donated food and other items and, of course, to those who came along to have fun learning a new, or perhaps reviving an old, craft or two throughout the day.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

But it's not all finished yet... watch this space for news of a sale, raffle and auction of some of the wonderful things produced.

Planning meeting: garages houses and Canache plan

WITH the absence overseas of Councillor Sharon Halford, this month's meeting on October 6 was chaired by MLA Jan Cheek who was supported by MLAGavin Short.

Five members of the public attended, three of whom were present to practice minute-taking, to follow proceedings which included twelve applications seeking planning permission.

Eleven of these obtained conditional consent, the first of which was a proposal for alterations to a listed building and two members of the Historic Buildings Committee attended to give that body's views, those being MLA Emma Edwards and Gerald Cheek.

It was proposed that the roof-line be raised of the south lean-to at 20 Drury Street for Juanita Brock and this was agreed providing the height of the roof shall be no more than 360mm above the current roof line.

Details of the other ten proposals that gained consent are as follows:

- Single-storey dwelling to be built in the south part of the garden at 12 Dairy Paddock Road for Keith Dickson.

- Single-storey dwelling at 23 Mink Park for Roy and Sarah Shepherd.

- Erection of garage and creation of new access at 52 Callaghan Road for Carlin and Sarah Yon.

- Erection of 30m x 9.5m polytunnel and shed for Falklands Fish Farming Ltd at Moody Brook Aquaculture Site.

- Erection of greenhouse at 18 Murray Heights for Reg Anderson.

- Extension to warehouse, removal of bund, construction of lay-down area for seven temporary containerised site offices and facilities, also provision of off-street parking at 9 - 13 Boxer Bridge Road for Byron Holdings Ltd.

- Installation of 3.8m satellite dish at their Earth Station on Darwin Road for Cable & Wireless Ltd.

- Erection of double-domestic garage for Stephen Luxton at 1 Mullet Creek on East Falkland.

- Siting of container for storage of vehicle parts at Falklands Garage, Plot 60 Lookout Industrial Estate for Derek Jaffray.

- Erection of garden shed and greenhouse at 12 Mink Park for Hannah Humphreys.

The final application to be reviewed was for the erection of a single-storey dwelling to be built at 21 Mink Park for Luis Bahamonde and Angela Westavino. Members were reminded of earlier proposals to arrange a staggering of buildings to improve the overall layout of the area, and agreed that the applicants be invited to amend the siting of their house to achieve this.

The proposal was therefore deferred.

Next on the agenda was a report on progress being made on seventeen applications for a building permit, of which nine had been approved with some conditionally.

A draft document on the Canache Management Plan was then reviewed and the Committee were of the opinion that further public consultation was required which will take place shortly.

The next Committee meeting will take place on Thursday November 3 at 8.30am in the Liberation Room of the Secretariat.

Back on the farm...

Tex Alazia explains what its really like to be a West Falklands Farmer.

Tex is married to Mandy and has three daughters, Felicity, Fayan and Rhian. This week he's caught up in belly crutching and being generally absent minded. Daughter Fayan is off shearing and Mandy is helping out the neighbours

NEARLY a month has flown by and in an effort to keep Mr Newman's banter going, which folk seemed to enjoy, I have talked myself into doing something similar once a month.

But no chance of this leading to a call from the likes of the News of the World, I have trouble making a mobile call let alone being smart enough to hack someone's phone.

After unpacking we were straight into gathering up all of our ewes from three separate camps and slowly driving them home for belly crutching and then driving them to their camps saved for lambing.

Thanks to Leon Marsh and Justin Knight (standing in for his absent brother) for helping us to gather Black Shanty. Making use of Fayan before she headed east to start pre lamb shearing, we set about crutching 1,800 ewes.

This operation allows the lamb to quickly find its milk dispenser and is much cheaper than the Department of Agriculture scanning machines, as we can identify and separate any dry/barren ewes very accurately from those in lamb, but struggle a bit determining any twins.

I thought we were making good time with me averaging one ewe per minute and Fayan nearly two to my three, but then we worked out that was no faster than Evan Jones shearing the whole animal on his record breaking day last season.

After Fayan abandoned us to drag Joe from Deanos and attempt to squeeze a portly Evan into his strides, I managed to speed up a bit by rigging up a hurdle on the shearing board, so I could just let the sheep go on the board to head into the next catching pen instead of having to guide it down the chute.

While setting gates to release sheep I found my best claw hammer that I had lost and looked for prior to our hols.

It's always damn annoying to instantly remember what job you were doing when you lost it. Of course if my farm sitter had decent eyes in his head, then he should have seen it while walking past it almost as many times as me whilst feeding the dogs, and thus would have saved me buying another from B&Q.

Taking ewes away one day and my mind perhaps on the new bike I was running in for Fayan, I managed to drive past the dog cages and out to the paddock, found the sheep and putting whistle to lips realised I had no dogs. Heading back to collect them, I noticed the wife watching further up hill, so no hiding it I guess. With sheep eventually home we got on with our other jobs including moving the ex Spring Point school to Stewarts Brook.

(Sorry about the gate post Mike but it looked a bit rotten and in need of replacing.)

Elsewhere the Turtles, Nightingales and others have started shearing and finding more goose eggs than me I believe so I'm a bit jealous, and across the pond Falklands Landholdings must have been burning as we have had some smoke here.

This has given me a good excuse for not tackling the overflowing wash basket.

The wife is away helping Kev Marsh. Justin and Ali Marsh with Kev's pre lamb shearing as their Kev and Ali's families were delayed in UK awaiting baby Ali Ray's passport (or maybe just stuck in a long checkout queue).

I think Gran Joan has had her work cut out feeding those boys, but with Lisa and Co due home tomorrow Kev is probably now on a diet of Viagra and Red Bull.

This evening neighbour James (McGlhie) came and collected a few Stoney Ridge sheep, so if the Penguin News girls have to correct any spelling mistakes in this then blame him and some empty beer cans on the bench.

Anyway, I had better get back to washing five days worth of dishes and find the Hoover.

Also got News International waiting on speed dial (not sure if that means a way of dialling the number real quick or a hot line for a class A drug delivery) either way I'll give it a whirl.

In the hen house

with Mandy McLeod

dunvegan@cwimail.fk

WITH longer days the hens and ducks are laying well. I love the little pullet eggs, particularly the turquoise eggs of the Cream Legbars. The first few eggs are so vivid in colour. As the eggs get bigger over the next few weeks they gradually fade to a paler turquoise. Very Pretty! The breeds that produce green eggs are Araucanas, which originate in Chile. Cream Legbars were created using Araucanas in the mix, hence the turquoise colour. Green eggs are said to be lower in cholesterol, although I've not read anything scientific to prove the point. Did you know that all eggs start off white? Hens have the equivalent of a mini spray booth that colours the egg just before it is laid. This shows particularly with dark brown eggs because when you wash a freshly laid one, the colour comes off! Look at the inside colour of an egg shell and it is white.

Being Spring, fertility is high, as you would expect. I candled the seventy-four duck eggs in the incubators last night and all of them were fertile, so the drakes have been doing their job! Candling is shining a strong light through the eggs to check on the development of the chicks or in this case, ducklings. I candle twice during incubation. Once a third way through so that I can discard any infertile ones, and again three days before hatching to remove any that might have died in shell for whatever reason. This is really important as a bad egg containing bacteria can kill everything if it explodes. This happened once when I was busy and didn't do the eighteen day candling because I didn't think it was that important. Half had hatched when I had an 'eggsplode' and I lost the lot, even the chicks that had already hatched as they had no resistance to the bacteria. I won't skip it again.

This cold snap isn't good for my early chicks. I have twenty mixed rare breeds that are a month old. Now that they have a good feather cover, I put them outside during the day, but they are still vulnerable to frosts because they huddle to keep warm and the ones on the bottom get smothered. I don't take any chances now and put them indoors in a box at night until the weather warms up. It doesn't take long and it gives an opportunity each morning to check each chick over. Hopefully we will get some warmer weather soon.

Antarctic project launched

A BRITISH engineering team will head off to Antarctica for the first stage of an ambitious scientific mission next week to collect water and sediment samples from a lake buried beneath three kilometres of solid ice.

The research project will yield new knowledge about the evolution of life on Earth and other planets, and will provide vital clues about the Earth's past climate.

Transporting nearly 70 tonnes of equipment the 'advance party' will make a journey almost 16,000km from the UK to subglacial Lake Ellsworth on the West Antarctic Ice Sheet (WAIS). It is one of the most remote and hostile environments on Earth with -25°C temperatures. Their task is to prepare the way for the 'deep-field' research mission that will take place one year later. In October 2012 a team of 10 scientists and engineers will use state of the art hot-water drilling technology to make a three kilometre bore hole through the ice. They will then lower a titanium probe to measure and sample the water followed by a corer to extract sediment from the lake. Lake Ellsworth is likely to be the first of Antarctica's 387 known subglacial lakes to be measured and sampled directly through the design and manufacture of space-industry standard 'clean technology'.

Sediments on the lake bed are likely to reveal vital clues about the history of life in the lake and the ancient history of the WAIS, including past collapse.

Hat tricks for Royals

THERE were three matches last week in the Falkland Island Premier League (FIPL).

The first match of the evening was played between Fire Service Rescue 1 and Johnny Foreigners. FSR1 won the toss and put the Johnny Foreigners in to bat. A good opening partnership from Andy Stanworth (29 runs) and Anton Wolfaardt (36 runs) gave Johnny Foreigners an early advantage as Fire Service Rescue 1 struggled to take many wickets.

A total of 127 runs were scored from Johnny Foreigners 12 overs. With a big total to chase, FSR1 had to score quickly and not get caught out in order to win the match. Unfortunately, good bowling from Johnny Foreigners resulted in 12 wickets falling. Alex Pearce topped the scoring for his team with 34 runs not out, but in total Fire Service Rescue 1 could only manage 49 runs from their 12 overs and Johnny Foreigners won the match by 78 runs.

Royal Challengers Stanley and STDs were second to play. STDs won the toss and elected to field first. David Hewitt (39 runs not out) and Cody Betts-McKay (25 runs not out) scored well as Royal Challengers scored a total of 105 runs after wickets were subtracted for STDs to chase. David Hewitt remains the leading boundary scorer in the league with 13 boundaries. Torin Harte and Axel Rodriguez-Reid scored the most for their team with 19 and 11 runs respectively after four overs.

With over 50 runs required from the last overs of the match, Justin Collins and Stephen Lapham needed to score in order to win. However, two hat-tricks from David Phillips and Clovis Kilmartin (his second in the league) ensured victory for RC's. 11 wickets were taken in 24 balls. After penalty runs were taken off, STDs finished on -4 so Royal Challengers won by 101 runs.

The third and final match of the week took place between Fire Service Rescue 2 and Saints Plus One. For the third game in a row, SPO won the toss and chose to field first. Tight bowling from Wayne Leo, Nick Francis, Mike Moyce and Adam Glanville kept the opening pair, James Bates and Derek Clarke, from scoring many runs. This trend stayed the same throughout the 12 overs, and in the end, FSR2 could only score 44 runs. With such a low total to chase, Saints Plus One took no time in making the runs and eventually won the match by 49 runs. Adrian Joshua was the top scorer for his team, with 26 not out.

Shooting recruiting

THE Falkland Islands Rifle Association will commence their 2011/2012 season on Sunday October 16 at 10 am. Last season we were unable to compete at all due to difficulties in getting ammunition to the Islands.

This season it has been agreed to start shooting later in the day to give those late risers time to make the range too.

If anyone is interested in joining the oldest sporting club in the Islands contact the secretary

Derek Goodwin on 52357 or the club chairman Gareth Goodwin on 52604 for more details.

The club does have rifles to hire out on the day and members would be happy to help anyone wanting to try out rifle shooting for the first time.

The club hopes to send a team to Bisley in England next year so come along and try your luck. You may make the team.

See you at the Rookery Bay Range on Sunday.

Declan wins the Fortuna Cup

THE Stanley Golf Club summer schedule got under way last Sunday with the Fortuna Ltd Cup. Fortuna Ltd have been generous supporters of the golf club for a long time and the Fortuna Cup is always popular with members as it traditionally signals the start of the summer golf season.

18 players signed in for the competition, a very healthy turnout considering the wind exceeded thirty knots at times.

Some players showed signs of early season rustiness and struggled to put a good run of holes together. Others played well and returned scores near to nett par. Only one golfer managed to conquer the wind and play to his handicap, setting a record for the youngest ever competition winner, and by an incredible margin in the process.

Declan Bonner won the Fortuna Cup with 36 points in only his second competition playing off the men's tees. Declan was two points ahead of his playing partners Rod Tuckwood and Ian Stewart who finished second and third respectively. It was neck and neck between the three until Declan birdied the long par 5 18th to pull clear.

The minor prizes were shared between the rest of the field with Adrian Joshua winning best front nine and Tony McMullen winning best back nine. Tim Bonner was nearest the pin on the 4th hole and Rod Tuckwood was closest on the 17th. Kevin Clapp won the longest drive with a monster 200m. There were seven birdies recorded by seven different players. There was only one bogey.

and that was Declan who was cut from 16 to 15.

Stanley Golf Club want to thank Fortuna Ltd for their continued sponsorship of this popular tournament. It is very fitting that the youngest ever competition winner should come in one of the longest running competitions.

Also of note, Ieuan Ford played on the day and completed his third card for handicap and will now also be eligible for senior events. Ieuan is a couple of months younger than Declan and will doubtless be among the prizes soon as well.

The golf club is delighted to have two youngsters competing in the senior ranks and look forward to welcoming more in the future as we continue to develop golf in the Falklands.

One member pointed out that golf is probably the only sport where you could see such a diverse grouping as 14 year old Declan Bonner, six foot plus (and successful Island Games team member) Ian Stewart and retired plumber (and Island Games veteran) Rod Tuckwood all competing for the same prize.

Next Sunday, October 16, the club will host a 12 hole team competition. Entry form in the clubhouse.

Free TV import issues checked out by Customs

ISLANDERS hoping to import an alternative access to television had their plans nipped in the bud on the weekend when Customs and Immigration officers delayed the release of the equipment pending further investigation.

But, should it prove to be bona fide equipment, users could soon be enjoying hundreds of channels anywhere in the Falklands for a one off payment in the region of £300 using the FTA (Free to Air) system.

Free to Air means the signal is not encrypted in order to protect either commercial interests or copyright.

Even if this particular consignment is found to have been adapted in any way, other options within a similar price range do exist, one of the importers awaiting the outcome of the investigation said.

Collector of Customs Robert King said the satellite TV reception equipment had not been "seized" from Saturday's LAN flight, but that the items in question had not been released pending further examination. "This is a customs procedure that occurs fairly regularly in regard to imported goods for a variety of reasons," he said.

More than 20 FTA sets imported on the weekend were still being checked out by an independent technician at the time of going to print, and Mr King said the process would not be concluded "before the end of the week."

He said the reason for this particular equipment being held under customs charge was that information had been received to the effect that there was currently a wide-scale problem in most South American countries relating to such equipment. This involved it being offered for sale as

FTA satellite TV reception equipment when in fact what is being offered is not the genuine article, but was equipment that had been cloned, adapted or modified so as to enable protected (encrypted) transmissions to also be received without the consent of the owner of the programme content or the organisation transmitting it on their behalf.

"Such equipment is unlawful world wide and in the Falkland Islands by virtue of the Broadcasting Ordinance," explained Mr King.

The buyers of the TV reception equipment are dismayed at the way their well researched efforts to obtain additional media not only for themselves, but as a way forward for Islanders living in remote areas, had been treated.

Gary Clement said he was annoyed that in view of the enquiries made into the legalities of using and importing the equipment, they had not been made aware through a simple announcement or message in advance of the orders being placed with the Chile supplier, that there was a need to have the equipment verified.

MLA Dick Sawle said the key issue was whether or not a satellite decoder was authorised or not.

"If it is, then no problem and if it is not, then it cannot be imported," he said.

"If they are capable of receiving only Free to Air transmissions, then there is no problem and we are arranging for independent tests to be done on them to ascertain the facts," said MLA Sawle.

Mario Zuvic of Falklands television provider KTV declined to respond when Penguin News asked whether the import of such a system would impact greatly on his business.

Viv Perkins and Jan Miller at Government House

Jan and Viv's work awarded at GH

SURROUNDED by family and friends two ladies who have generously contributed their time and effort in supporting community organisations, clubs and charities over the years, received the Queen's Certificate and accompanying Badge of Honour on Wednesday evening at a special reception at Government House.

Vivienne Perkins was awarded for her work with the charity shop 'Bargains Galore', support for Christ Church Cathedral and Lighthouse Seamen's Mission, involvement with the Stanley Darts Club and the assistance provided to pensioners in the local community.

Governor Nigel Haywood said Ms Perkins was described in the nomination letters as self effacing and generous as well as diligent.

The award to Jan Miller was for her work with the Scout Group (many of whom attended the presentation), help in organising events, wreath-making and support given to visiting veterans and their families. Mrs Miller has been a Scout Group leader for a total of 30 years.

Mr Haywood said he was pleased to say they were very well supported nominations by people writing in, or by people adding their name to the nomination papers.

He said the theme that ran throughout the letters of support written about the two ladies was the "quietness" of their work and their preference to "work behind the scenes."

The Queen's Certificate and accompanying Badge of Honour is a local honour, approved by Her Majesty the Queen, to allow the Falkland Islands Government to acknowledge those having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands.

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

FARMERS being a fiery lot I approach the task of commenting on agricultural subjects with as much happy anticipation as a black spotted gimmer to the shearing board.

Still, having this week had my ears boxed - metaphorically speaking - by a teacher, a corporation manager, three Argentines and a gentleman who believes he should receive his Penguin News on a Thursday, it seemed perfectly logical to throw myself on the mercy of Campers, at a time when even the hint of a reprimand pops me into a protective zen-like state.

As a second-hand receiver of farming knowledge, courtesy of my family and my partner I am always intrigued by the latest livestock debate (be reassured my input mainly comprises questions, in an attempt to keep up with the conversation) and at this time of year the subject matter is invariably 'sheep management immediately after shearing', and 'the pros and cons of pre-lamb shearing' (see page 5).

As it happens I have listened to, and now read, persuasive arguments for both sides with regard to the latter, and it seems likely that, as with many much debated farming practices, what is wrong for one type of farmland may be entirely appropriate for another.

Stories circulating, however, that more than one farm has experienced shockingly high post-shearing mortality rates, must, apart from leaving the farmers devastated and doubting, have raised questions within the Veterinary Department and the Department of Agriculture, with regard to various evolving farm management styles.

Of course invariably the Falklands' unpredictable weather will continue to unleash occasional havoc on Falklands' livestock however carefully and thoughtfully farmers manage. But that is not to say more recently introduced practices could not be informally monitored, and information gathered together by an appropriate body, so that the knowledge can be made available (even on something as user friendly as a social networking site). Farmers can then examine some willingly shared statistics and anecdotal evidence, and also offer up further experiences, so that those considering changing their practices could be as well informed as possible in terms of current, practical thinking.

Penguin News is interested in collecting points of view on topical agricultural debates. If you have any suggestions we'll be happy to receive them.

Chandlery's customer service tops the poll

Seafish Chandlery staff on Thursday.

SEAFISH Chandlery staff were delighted to hear they had polled top marks with 57 per cent of the votes in the latest Penguin News online poll that asked 'out of all the grocery outlets who would you award top marks for customer service?'

A spokesperson for the company said, "It is extremely pleasing for our staff to have their efforts recognised and appreciated in this way. We have always prided ourselves in the level of customer service provided by our staff, and believe that this has been valued by our customers over the years.

"Our customer service training has always been carried out 'on the job and in-house' so over the years has become part of the fabric. Having a pleasant working environment and a nutty boss helps a bit too."

In close second place with 49 per cent of the votes was smaller and newer establishment South-east Imports.

Owner Marlane Marsh said, "We are really pleased we have polled so high on your web page. We always try to do our best for customers thanks to the two hard-working, lovely ladies at the sharp end in the shop. Thank you to everyone who voted for Southern Imports. We hope we can continue to provide a good service for our customers."

FIC West Store also picked up a very reasonable 23 per cent of the votes with K3 in third place with 16 per cent and Stanley Services with 9 per cent.

K4 was placed sixth and K1 seventh.

Team tranquil enhance cemetery

A TEAM Tranquil project to provide attractive and sheltered areas in the Stanley cemetery, for use by grieving family and friends came to fruition yesterday.

Ruth Taylor speaking for the group that promotes good mental health, said a little idea bloomed into a community project.

She said, "People gave plants, made plant boxes, and helped tidy the site, many people helped."

Mrs Taylor said Managing Director Seaview Ltd Alex Reid paid for two benches and the FIC for another. An anonymous local firm paid for shipping, and physical assistance was given by the Public Works Department.

The project has been such a success that Team Tranquil is now considering what else they might do to enhance the cemetery for both the young and the elderly so that they can sit in relative comfort and remember their loved ones.

Court news

STANLEY man Belfred Theodore O'Dean (47) was banned from driving for a year and fined £240 after he admitted drink driving in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

The court heard that in the early hours of October 10, the police had received a call from the hospital to say a man had walked in with a head injury saying he had rolled his vehicle on the Stanley to Darwin Road.

Mr O'Dean agreed to give a road side breath test at the hospital which proved positive at 53mg per 100 ml of breath, but was not considered fit to be taken to the Police Station for further testing.

Mr O'Dean's Land Rover Discovery was located by the Fire and Rescue Service some seven and a half miles from town and given the average walking speed of four miles an hour, it was concluded that the accident would have taken place at around 11pm on October 9.

Mr O'Dean who apologised to the court for his actions, was also ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs. More Court on page 4

Ocean Guardian rig down-manned after power loss

Facebook offers the only available images of the Ocean Guardian oil rig suffering the effects of a power loss this week.

THE Department of Mineral Resources and Rockhopper plc have been meeting daily since a loss of power on the Ocean Guardian drilling rig caused drifting.

A spokesperson for the department confirmed the meetings have included Diamond Offshore and AGR representatives: "Similarly, any additional updates are being provided by Rockhopper throughout the day, either by phone, email or additional meetings.

"The Chief Executive is being constantly informed of the outcome of these meetings."

The loss of power occurred on the rig on October 16 while the rig was preparing to move to its next well location following the plugging and abandonment of well 14/10-8.

As a result of the loss of power onboard, all non-essential personnel were down-manned, as a precautionary measure, by helicopter to Stanley, according to a statement from Rockhopper plc.

Power has now been re-established and appropriate checks are currently being undertaken prior to the expected re-manning of the rig and resumption of normal operations within approximately one week.

The company said the incident had no environmental impact and resulted in no injuries to personnel onboard.

The Falkland Islands Government was informed on Sunday afternoon, shortly after the incident occurred. A Department of Mineral Resources spokesperson told Penguin News the rig had completed drilling operations and was in the process of lifting its first anchors.

The Marine Officer and the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department was aware of the situation from the start and if there had been a danger to the environment, they, in conjunction with the Environmental Planning Department, would have decided the best course of action, said the spokesperson.

Some evacuated crew were housed at Lookout Lodge, and Malvina House Hotel was particularly busy on Tuesday. "We had extra guys check into the hotel waiting for confirmation of what was happening," said Hotel Manager Carl Stroud.

Also on Tuesday night hotel chefs had the additional task of providing a buffet for 100 people.

Images of the rig listing were difficult to obtain, however, one member of the evacuated personnel posted a photograph to the social network site FaceBook.

Road works under budget

RECONSTRUCTION of the area of Ross Road outside Studio 52 came in £8,698 under budget confirmed Director of Public Works Manfred Keenlyside.

The budget estimate for the road reconstruction works was £105,936 however the actual cost of work was £97,238.

Mr Keenlyside said: "this includes the footpath leading down from Infant Junior School and moving the cabin to allow for that, together with the screen fencing erected adjacent to the path."

He said the more recent section of works adjacent to the Town Hall car park entrance was budgeted at £28,023 and although costs are not finalised yet it is likely it will come in within the estimate.

Rockhopper Desire farm in Rockhopper Exploration Plc has announced it has entered into a further assignment to secure an additional well slot using the Ocean Guardian drilling rig.

Rockhopper intend to utilise the additional slot to drill a well on the north western acreage of license PL004, which Rockhopper believes contains the extension to the Sea Lion Field. Rockhopper has farmed in with operatorship subject to all regulatory consents, to earn an aggregate 60 per cent interest. Desire Petroleum retains a 40 per cent interest. The well will be located in Area 1 of the proposed farm-in area, which will become known as license PL004b once all regulatory consents are obtained.

Cheeky choice

YEAR 8 students this week paid a visit to Penguin News in order to discover precisely how the organisation operates.

After a talk from the Editor and some excellent questions asked by the students the group were allowed to vote on the front page colour.

While Penguin News staff were anticipating a dignified blue or cheerful yellow, both boys and girls, possibly out of a sense of wickedness, ganged together and opted for hot pink.

So if you have had to don sunglasses in order to bear the glare a number of you only have your offspring to blame.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

THIS week's meetings include portfolio meetings for housing and Health and Medical Services and regular meetings with the Governor and Chief Executive as well as the meeting of the Education Board followed by the rotational visit to the Training Centre. The Board visits the various units in turn after the regular meetings so that all members can be familiar with the work of those units. It is important that everyone concerned understands that the Board's role is to advise on policy, not to 'micro manage' the units.

The news this week of rising world food prices is a mixed message for us, good meat prices look likely to keep the abattoir on track; but the overall picture is one of increasing prices for everyone worldwide. This is driven by increased fuel costs as well as rising demand as huge populations world wide want to enjoy a decent standard of living.

Recent nonsense from Argentina proves, if proof were needed, that their spokespeople have no regard for fact and no respect for truth. To respond to every wild falsehood would require a vast team working long hours. Fortunately for us, as they heap lie upon ever more unlikely fantasy they lose all credibility with intelligent audiences so are doing the work for us. When they complain about the legitimate defence of the Islands they disregard the fact that that defence is only required because of their short lived invasion of our otherwise peaceful country.

We look forward to welcoming a group of Members of Parliament on a visit shortly. This is a great opportunity to make sure that we have a group of well informed people when Falklands issues arise. Last year the regular visit did not happen because of the UK elections but we are always very appreciative of those who manage to take time away from busy schedules to visit the Islands and see at first hand what it is all about. They will be accompanied by FIG London Representative and have an opportunity to see many aspects of Island life and visit a sample of key Government departments.

Sex offender jailed

THIRTY-EIGHT year old former taxi driver William Harvey was jailed for four and a half years in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday for sexual offences with a child.

Mr Harvey, who pleaded guilty to three charges of sexual activity and one of meeting a child following sexual grooming on September 27, had been remanded in custody since that date while a pre-sentence report was prepared. Those three weeks will count towards his sentence.

Via text messages, Mr Harvey had persuaded a girl who was only just 15 years old, and whose age he was aware of, to go to his room at Lookout Lodge in May this year when the sexual offences took place.

Interviewed by the police he said he had decided to have sex with the victim before she arrived at his room and was excited by the illegality, and the risk of being caught. He said afterwards he regretted it, but because of concerns for his own reputation, not for the effect upon the victim, whom he described as "wanting it," and had referred to himself as "not her first victim."

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said he had read the pre-sentence report in which there was no mention of genuine remorse or victim empathy. "You appear to be trying to cast yourself as the victim of this situation, and even suggest that you can justify your actions by blaming the victim," he said.

Mr Trevaskis asked defence lawyer David Lang if there had been any indication that Mr Harvey's attitude had changed now he had had time to reflect. Mr Lang replied Mr Harvey may have the beginning of a realisation of what he had done, but added he would not like to go any further than that.

Mr Trevaskis said Mr Harvey had a "high to medium risk of re-offending" and that all the offences had been aggravated by the vulnerability of the victim.

For the first of the three penetrative sexual activity offences he was sentenced to 36 months and 32 months each for the other two, all to run concurrently. For meeting a child following sexual grooming Mr Harvey was sentenced to 18 months in prison consecutive to the other sentences, giving a total time to be served of 54 months.

An additional day in prison was added to the sentences for an outstanding fine of £275 owed to the court from a previous offence not connected to this case.

Inspector Len McGill of the Royal Falkland Islands Police said the conclusion of the case was the result of a thorough investigation by a team that is becoming increasingly skilled at working with other agencies and modern technology.

"With improved telecommunications expected in the near future this technology will be used by the RFIP in the investigation of crimes and the community should be aware that such data and information can be retrieved lawfully and will be used as evidence," he told Penguin News.

Inspector McGill said the sentences in Mr Harvey's case were appropriate, "and should act as a warning to others who may be engaged in such activity in the community."

Investigations would include cyber bullying, harassment and as in this case grooming, said Inspector McGill.

Four MPs fly south

FOUR members of the UK parliament are scheduled to visit the Falkland Islands for a week beginning November 3.

Two Labour Members of Parliament, Gemma Doyle and Ian Murray and two members of the Conservative Party, Philip Dunne and Mark Francois along with the Falkland Islands Government London Representative Sukey Cameron MBE will undertake a busy schedule of meetings plus a visit to battlefields and Sea Lion Island during their visit.

The group will be briefed by the Chief Executive, Governor and Members of Legislative Assembly on Friday November 4, before meetings at the Agriculture and Education Departments as well as the Chamber of Commerce.

Gemma Doyle is the Shadow Minister for Defence (MP for West Dunbartonshire) and Ian Murray (MP for Edinburgh South) the Shadow Minister for Business.

Mrs Doyle sees her role as primarily to protect defence jobs, of which there are some 17,000 in her area.

Bad weather and high losses for early shearers

ONE Falklands farm has reported post-shearing severe sheep losses to the Falkland Islands Government Veterinary Department, and there have been unconfirmed reports of at least two other farms having suffered a high incidence of mortality in a ewe flock and a hog flock.

Senior Veterinary Officer Stephen Pointing told Penguin News, "We have only been made aware of one case where a large number of sheep died post shearing."

"This was on a farm on East Falklands. The farmer phoned us to let us know what had happened and a welfare report has been entered on the relevant farm file."

He said that all reports connected with animal welfare are followed up within 24 hours of being reported.

Asked what rules affect the issue, he referred to the Code of Practice for the Welfare of Sheep. In section 2 of the Code entitled Protection from Climatic Extremes, it states: "All reasonable precaution should be taken to minimise the effects of weather that produces cold stress in sheep. It is essential that adequate feed, water and shelter be provided, particularly in early lambing flocks or freshly shorn sheep."

In section 5.2 entitled Shearing, it states, "Because shearing is stressful, managers should attempt to avoid undue handling and exposure to adverse weather. Sheep should be returned to food and water as soon as possible after shearing, and certainly not spend more than 24 hours without at least water and preferably food as well."

He said there were no specific rules relating to the amount of time sheep should be retained in paddocks post shearing, however, farmers Shelley and Peter Nightingale noted in a later Wool Press article, "Ewes go straight from the shed into rested camp with good shelter."

They noted, "Last week we sheared 600 AI ewes; today we turned them into their lambing camps. Despite a day or two of freezing weather, followed by a heavy Northerly rain, we saw no dead clippies. They are now in camps rested since last lambing."

Asked if the Department of Agriculture would be offering advice to farmers who had suffered losses Mr Pointing said he had already written an article in the September edition Wool Press entitled Pre-lamb Shearing - The Welfare Implications and noted Peter and Shelly Nightingale's article in the October Wool Press entitled Pre-lamb Shearing - The Truth.

He said, "I would add that those farmers who are advocates of pre-lamb shearing (like Peter and Shelly) realise that it can cause problems from time to time, but still think it is a better system than shearing ewes much later in the season when, because of their very heavy fleeces, they are much more prone to fall into ditches or get cast."

"They also point out that in the Falkland Islands it is still possible to get 24 hours of really bad weather (heavy rain accompanied by strong winds) even in February and all of them can relate stories of large numbers of sheep deaths on several different Falklands properties even in the months of December, January and February."

Mr Pointing said the use of cover combs is obligatory between September 15 and October 15.

For our non agricultural-type readers, a cover comb is a shearing comb designed with deeper teeth to leave a longer wool length on the sheep, thus leaving it less vulnerable to the elements.

Aurora's biggest season ever

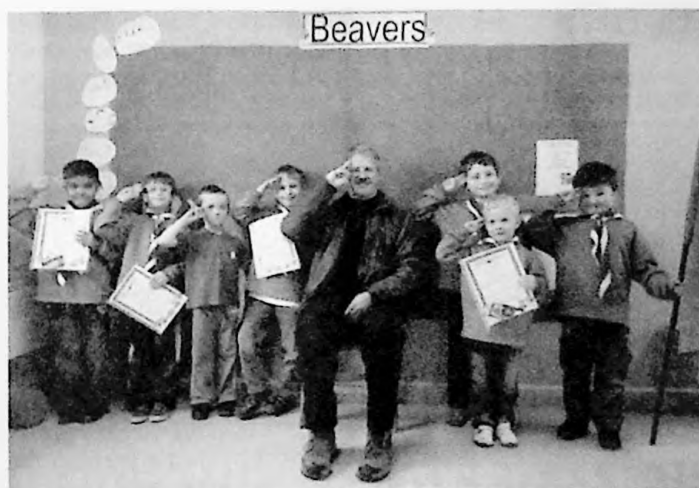

EXPEDITION cruise company Aurora has announced a new 2012/13 Antarctic programme which includes a greater variety of voyage lengths and incorporates flights out of the Falklands.

20 voyages are planned encompassing highlights of the Antarctic Peninsula, Weddell Sea, South Georgia and the Falkland Islands. A company spokesperson said the season was set to be their biggest ever.

The 2012/13 season has a variety of new features, including a choice of two ships, with the addition of Akademik Shokalskiy to the Antarctic Peninsula program, and offers more opportunities for adventure activities with kayaking offered on 16 voyages.

Aurora Expeditions has created a new trip that will follow in the wake of Sir Ernest Shackleton which will, "shine a light on Shackleton's heroic expedition."

Prices for the 2012/13 Antarctic season start from US$6365 per person based on a triple cabin for an eight day cruise.

THE Beavers were looking particularly smart at Tuesday night's meeting as they donned their new uniforms and proudly posed with the man who had carried them to the Falklands.

Welsh Guards 1982 veteran Kenny Dawkins who is in the Islands as part of a five strong SAMA Wales pilgrimage ensured the safe delivery of the uniforms on Monday's airbridge flight.

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONBUSINESS ADVISOR - FIDC

FIDC now has an opportunity for a suitably experienced person to join our team as an additional Business Advisor. The successful individual will work with private-sector applicants looking for business support and potential funding opportunities to support the growth and diversification of the Falklands' economy and infrastructure. Applications are invited from individuals looking to work on either a full or part-time basis.

Reporting to the Financial Controller and working with our existing Business Advisor, this is an exciting, hands-on role that requires an understanding of the Falkland Islands' economy coupled with Business Advisory capabilities. Candidates will be able to demonstrate past experience of Business Plans, be commercially aware and financially literate, have a 'can do' attitude and be results driven whilst having a 'feet on the ground' approach. Excellent written and oral communication skills, experience of using Microsoft Excel and Word, and the ability to work in a confidential environment are a must. Experience may have been gained in a Banking, Business Advisory or Business environment either within the Falkland Islands or offshore.

For a full job description contact Michelle Trowell, on pa.admin@fidc.co.fk or telephone 27211. Applications, including a full CV and covering letter, should be submitted to the Financial Controller, FIDC no later than 1600 on Monday 14th November 2011.

Don't let facts get in the way of a good story

AS usual, I enjoyed the editorial contained in the PN edition of October 14th, 2011 - the brief report to the FIDB on the status of the import substitution programme providing your newspaper with yet another opportunity to deride the efforts of the FIDC team to deliver an approved strategy intended to assist the sustainable development of the Falkland Islands.

Despite the consistently uninformed criticism of FIDC by the Penguin News, I do, nevertheless, enjoy the usual light-hearted humour with which it is often written.

However, given that the PN seems to follow a philosophy of "never letting the facts get in the way of a good story or critique", at least when it comes to FIDC and its activities, I do think it worth informing you and your readers of the "facts" surrounding the comment that I made to the FIDB that "we expect more interest in and applications for import substitution funding after Christmas."

The facts are that the availability of the funding came too late for successful applicants to invest in growth for the 2011/12 season. Therefore it is anticipated and hoped that there will be a significant number of individuals and businesses that will seek support for starting or expanding their rural business, with any necessary investment in equipment, polytunnels, etc. in good time for the next growing season. We have, in fact, already received a significant number of enquiries in this regard. My comment was informed by the market and was not a personal view.

This explanation could, of course, have been checked by the Penguin News with a simple phone call before writing the editorial. However, I do understand that such a checking of the facts would have got in the way of a good story - and perhaps resulted in one that would have been less fun to write.

David Waugh
Falkland Islands
Development Corporation

PENGUIN News did in fact contact FIDC for an update on the Import Substitution project on the Tuesday prior to the FIDB meeting, however no information was forthcoming.

At the meeting Mr Waugh said there had been two or three enquiries, but no applications to date, however the subject was further discussed in the closed section of the meeting which excluded press and public attendance.

The Executive Council paper (169/11) states that the funding (£250,000) is for 2011/12 and closes on June 30 2012, with any remaining funds returned to FIG after that deadline. To my knowledge it has never been publicly stated that production was never expected before the 2012/13 season.

Both the press and the public would benefit from more items being included in the open section of the meetings which until fairly recently, were some of the most interesting and open discussions available to the public.

The weekly comment column on page 2 is indeed the opinion of the writer, based on the information and facts made available to the public and is not in any way an attempt to distort the truth as Mr Waugh has suggested.

Scouts working for everyone

NEXT week (October 24 - 30) is our Scout Job Week, when all the Beavers and Cub Scouts will be out and about doing little jobs for people/businesses in exchange for a donation for Group Funds.

If anyone has any jobs we can help with, which would be suitable for children aged 6 - 10 years to carry out (with adult supervision) please let us know.

Although we have spent the last two years raising money to repair the Scout Hut floor - the floor was in a worse state than first thought, so we need to raise another £4,000 to pay for materials.

If anyone can help, please get in touch with Jan or Tim Miller on 21498 or email j.t.miller@horizon.co.fk

Preferring the Port in Stanley

LAST week I wrote to Penguin News on the subject of cruise tourism. In my original letter I used the term Port Stanley but during editing it was changed to Stanley to be consistent with what is normally used in the newspaper. I wanted to clarify this as I have always been very verbal over the years about my belief that the word 'Port' should be retained in the name of our capital.

Wear it pink

WILKINS Kennedy staff and other company employees will be clothed all in pink on November 2 as part of their 'Wear it Pink' day to raise money for Falklands Charity Cancer Support and Awareness (CSAT).

Director of Wilkins Kennedy in Stanley, Karen Lee said, "The idea would be to highlight the issue of breast cancer but also to raise money for the charity which has already raised so much money to help people with early detection of this terrible disease."

The Infant Junior School has already confirmed that they will be undertaking the fun task early, on October 21, and the Falkland Islands Community School is also likely to join in: "Everyone wearing pink will be asked for a small donation but if they don't feel able to then this is fine, as awareness is as much the name of the game as the money."

Mrs Lee said, "CSAT have done much in the past to assist women in early detection of breast cancer. The money that is raised from this day will go towards their general funds and will be used to support families and individuals that have Cancer of any sort."

"We all know of someone that has suffered and as we approach what would have been my sister Maria's 40th birthday (November 3), who died from Cancer in 2000, I personally hope that together we can raise lots to help people beat the disease and detect it early."

Falklands Friction film shows passion on both sides

A NEW short feature film, Falklands Friction, about the relationship between the Falklands and Argentina was screened on Australian SBS Television earlier this week.

Film maker Nick Lazaredes includes interviews with former Farm Manager Eric Goss, the Governor and MLA Mike Summers. Mr Lazaredes also shows

Argentine school children being taught the Argentine version of history, that claims sovereignty of the Islands, plus an interview with Cesar Trejo, a war veteran.

The TV station's website describes the subject matter: "The weapons may have remained silent in the nearly 30 years since the Falklands Conflict, but the war of words has continued."

It comments that Argentina is trying to use its influence in Latin America to disrupt vital shipping links: "Some Argentinian militants are even threatening to sabotage oil rigs around the Malvinas."

The film clearly relates the strong feelings of the populations on both sides and highlights Argentina's attempts to undermine the Falklands' economy.

Mr Lazaredes invites Islanders to comment on the film on the site which can be viewed at the following sites:

The extraordinary story of Egg

FORMER Falklands travelling teacher, Chris Dunn, has won the BBC Wildlife Magazine prestigious nature-writing competition, with a story about a pet turkey vulture.

Chris spent three years in the Islands. His round included wildlife hotspots such as West Point and Carcass Island. A keen wildlife artist, he currently teaches art and design at a secondary school in Kent.

The story, 'The life of Egg' is a charming description of how Chris found a turkey vulture egg to one side of a looted vulture nest. He carried it home and hatched it before one of his pupils took over the care of the rather ugly juvenile.

According to the story, "Egg never showed any interest in escaping. He was, in his own imprinted mind, a very small unusually shaped child."

Peat cutting was Eggs' favourite time of year and he would make his way out to the bog walking, fluttering, flapping and fence hopping to keep up. During smoko he would visit each peat cutter in turn in the hope of a share of the snacks.

Penguin News is currently awaiting permission and syndication fees from BBC Wildlife Magazine before reproducing the prize-winning story.

Judges of the competition said Chris Dunn's piece won because "it's an extraordinary story simply and elegantly told, with a great sense of place."

SIXTY-THREE 90 litre bio-degradable bags full of rubbish were collected from Whale Bone Cove during Saturday's Falklands Conservation Watch Group Beach Clean.

Maggie Barkman said, "The sun shone on Saturday and from 10am until 3.30pm a continuous trickle of people contributed to collecting the rubbish from the beach and surrounding area."

"The majority of the rubbish collected was plastic, most of which appeared to be the blue plastic bags used to pack and separate squid blocks along with plastic binding strips from packing cases. Both types are potentially lethal to the wildlife in the area."

Maggie appreciated the patience shown by rubbish collectors in picking up a tremendous amount of Qtip plastics (cotton buds without the cotton). She said the most bizarre item found by the group was a white hard hat.

Maggie offered special thanks "to those young members of the watch group and their even younger siblings who worked tirelessly during the whole day."

Thanks also to The Lighthouse Mission staff who were very tolerant of us all invading their peace at lunch time; and also to Simon Catton of the Public Works Department who provided us with a large lorry to dump it all in."

Artist Ben Cockwell's mission accomplished

The artist with his favourite piece of work

ARTIST Ben Cockwell, recently quoted by Penguin News as saying his hobby would have to start paying for itself, achieved his aim at a well attended exhibition of his work on Friday night, October 14.

In addition to the sale of nine paintings and 16 limited edition prints, £280.50 for First Aid equipment for West Falklands was raised by a raffle of one of the pieces.

The full exhibition included 47 paintings, many of which had already been sold or gifted, and then borrowed back for the occasion. The entire work shown at the exhibition added up to around 400 hours of labour said Ben.

The exhibition was open to the public all of this week.

Over the garden fence

fortnightly with Clay Kid

DON'T you wish this weather would let up? Poor little plants, the daylight hours convinced them to poke their noses out - only to have their ankles freeze in the cold winds, hail and even snow, brr.

All the same, we have managed to achieve quite a lot these past few days, the Garden Centre opened seed potatoes and so half a raised bed was planted with Charlottes and the other with some Estima, both second earlies. Some earlies, Rocket and Maris Peer have been planted in the tunnel.

All cabbages, caulies etc. and of course, lettuces, have been pricked out into individual pots. I find a small table fork (which has become a part of my gardening kit) is fantastic for pricking out plants, mind you I complain pretty volubly if Bill borrows my potato peeling knife for any reason - but hey - this is different, isn't it? All plants and the peas (still in their guttering) are ready to start being hardened-off, but what could possibly want to go outside for a few hours a day in these conditions? However, there really is no choice, they are growing too big to stay in, so I'll have to find a sheltered spot and put them out for a while every day to take their chances. Fingers crossed.

All lettuce, beetroots, radishes, white turnips, carrots and various other salads in the tunnel are growing quite well - and so are the weeds. Lots of ventilation is now required daily, but I do wish it wasn't so windy, as I hate opening the doors in these conditions.

The front or ornamental garden, is now weeded and the plants tidied up. All the best books tell you to tidy perennials and shrubs before winter; in my experience this has caused too many borderline hardy plants to just curl up their toes and die. Instead, I now leave them with their flower heads intact and find that although untidy it certainly gives them that extra protection to see them through the worst weather. It does mean quite a bit of catching up to do in spring though.

Bill has been cutting down the Eucalyptus hedge bordering the vegetable garden. It is now five years old, but even two years ago it was looking good and six foot high. We have a few different varieties growing there which I think gives a pleasant colour variation. They are very hardy and even when growing as trees can take whatever our weather throws at them. But the trees can get to look a little gaunt. Last year at this time we cut down, to about two feet, two rather leggy and top heavy Eucalyptus; they have quickly regenerated to become multi-stemmed and stronger trees.

The Buddleias (butterfly bushes) have been cut down to about two feet, they will reward us with three or four feet of growth this year and, bigger flowers too. The various Hebes also needed trimming and tidying up as the frosts and winds had burned them rather badly. A couple of Brooms have also been lightly trimmed, as have the tree Lupins. These will both have to come out and be replaced after this year, as they are well past their 'sell by date' and don't look very attractive anymore.

Our compost bin had become inaccessible once the second tunnel went in and so compost has been sitting in various bins since. Bill built a new, rather large one over the area where there is a large rock outcrop, this now holds some inverted top sods followed by layers of kitchen waste, peelings, teabags, leaves etc. (basically anything other than cooked food or meat) grass mowings, paper, more grass mowings and, of course, anything finished with in the garden. This needs turning over occasionally, it will then all go into one end and Bill will put a wall down the middle so that fresh waste can be put in there allowing the original mass to finish rotting and then be used. To hurry the process along a bit I have put some 6X on it as an activator. The original bin now contains some very large plastic tubs each holding Raspberry plants, a wonderful way to keep them in check.

Hopefully it will be a while before they break through and start sending out suckers, ugh. At least in the Falklands we don't have to stake or tie them up in any way, the wind ensures they grow 'hard' and not too tall.

Friends of ours offered us some canes from their stooled willows. I've always been fascinated by the idea of living sculptures and at some time would like to plant a seat or chair in the middle of the lawn, but for now we have built a 'fedge' on a frame. The willow cuttings were put in diagonally and tied in where they met, so far there are no signs of growth there but they do look alive. On one of the other plots and just for fun, I've had a go at building a wigwam, our garden sits on rock, so am not too sure this structure is well enough anchored to grow but, we will soon see. Will use the rest of the cuttings to make some obelisks.

Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A better week this week with the EMI closing at 1.160 cents/kg clean (753GB p/kg) only down 4 cents on last week. All Micron ranges saw a positive increase in price and the change in exchange rate improved this further for the Falklands with the actual EMI index increasing by 22p/kg clean when converted to Sterling.

Chinese buyers were back from their holiday which has had impact on the improved price situation. Clearing at sales were still normal at 85%, the Australian market analysts would like to see these improve before they forecast further outcomes in price increases. However sales in South Africa had clearance rates of 96% with Modiano as the second biggest buyer with 1,873 bales this week.

Skirtings are still selling well indicating manufacturers are blending to keep costs down. Coarse wool has continued the trend of stronger prices this season. Indications that this micron could be limited has prompted early buying at good prices. With the skirting market doing well it is important that we categorise and class fleece well with financial gains being possible from 'A' pieces and skirtings.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category

Rally the troops... we need a tow rope

IT was a perfect day on Sunday, as 22 vehicles and 23 motorbikes left Moody Brook for a rally to Long Island Farm.

The convoy left Moody Brook at 10am and the first bogging was not too far from the road with Fudge Smith proving it wasn't going to be an easy day ahead.

The boggings soon came thick and fast, and some of the less experienced off-roaders were having problems. We lost our first vehicle to a breakdown but with extra passengers for some, we drove on.

It was a small swampy patch which caused the first big challenge, and after pulling all the stuck vehicles, and one quad out, (not going to forget that Curly) we had a smooth, but brief, track ahead.

Next up was Corner Pass, not too hard for most people, and Curly and Ryan both had a mud shower on their quads.

One rover had a wheel changed after a tyre popped off the rim, but we carried on with the trickiest ditches still to come. With a few bogged in the valley, and a couple more in the buffalo ditches, the difficult terrain had left only Lucille McMullen and myself without a bogging.

We lost a rider as Rodolfo Tellez fell off his motorbike into a pond and the day continued to take its toll as we lost two more rovers to bent track rods.

So, with more people cramming into the remaining vehicles, we challenged Turner's stream. Mine and Lucille's squeaky clean records didn't last, but in our defence, we weren't the only people to get stuck in the stream.

I lost a nut off a shocker and then the spring popped out but after some quick fixes we were back on track to reach the top of the mountain.

With Long Island house in sight the bikers headed back towards town via the Murrell while the rest of the vehicles challenged the steep slopes of the down hill section. The long beach was a lovely end to the rally and the younger generation off-roaders raced along the slippery sand.

To make it a true flying finish, Bono McKay and Corey Bagley, raced up to the bank on the motocross track to end the day with a bang (admittedly Corey's jump was a little better than Bono's).

It was close to 4pm when we arrived back in town with a healthy total of 111 boggings for the day.

Over the whole day, we managed to raise a total of £381 for the FI Motocross and Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund.

Big thanks to everyone who turned up for the day and we hope you enjoyed yourselves. Also a huge thank you to Neil and Glenda Watson for the use of their land.

Sealions today but what would Hamilton have had to say?

IN 1939 JE Hamilton published his second report on Falklands' southern sea lions.

The report* contained a short note on the winter migration of southern sea lions and was based on his observations of the Cape Dolphin colony between 1935 and 1937. His summary suggested part of the Falkland Islands population might migrate away from the Islands during winter.

His idea stuck. A quick internet search on southern sea lions reveals statements such as 'the Falkland Islands are largely abandoned during the winter', undoubtedly in reference to Hamilton's salient work. However, while some females move to different haul out sites with their pups over winter and males disperse from breeding beaches, do sea lions really leave the Falklands entirely?

A glance at Sealing on the Falkland Islands by local author JR Allen suggests that at least some sub-adult and adult males actually remain at the Falklands year round. A fact that I am sure many land owners would also attest to.

In light of this conflicting evidence, what are the at-sea movements of sea lions during winter?

Do they migrate to mainland South America? Do they spend the winter months at sea and only intermittently return to land, or do they remain in coastal waters perhaps moving between sites around the Falklands?

Phrased more succinctly, the question is how 'connected' are the Falklands' population of sea lions to mainland South American populations?

To shed light on the ecology of this iconic marine predator, Falklands Conservation in partnership with the British Antarctic Survey deployed satellite tags on six juvenile male and female sea lions over winter as part of the Darwin Southern Sea Lion Project.

We would like to think we are picking up where Hamilton left off 72 years earlier. Fortunately, we have the added benefit of readily available hi-tech wildlife tracking solutions that can help us answer some of these long standing questions.

Data from the tags revealed that all six juvenile sea lions tracked from Cape Dolphin remained at the Falkland Islands. While juveniles repeatedly returned to the same areas to forage, they also travelled widely. All sea lions hauled out at numerous islands for varying periods.

A good example is the winter travels of one juvenile male sea lion.

We followed his movements for 160 days, during which time he travelled over 8,000 km, including stops at the most northern and most southern Islands of the Falklands archipelago (his winter movements are the somewhat messy yellow lines in the picture presented).

The connectivity of the Falkland Islands sea lion population has potentially far reaching implications for the management of sea lions, both locally and internationally.

Pending further funding, the next step of the Darwin Southern Sea Lion Project will involve additional tracking and some pretty fancy genetic analysis to determine just how unique the Falklands sea lion population is.

We thank land owners for their unrivalled hospitality and access to sea lion colonies throughout the 2010/2011 season, local volunteers for assistance with field work, and FIG archives for access to the Discovery Reports.

The Darwin Southern Sea Lion project is funded through the Darwin Initiative Overseas Territories Challenge Fund, a UK government initiative.

Protection at a time of change

THE Falkland Islands Protected Areas Strategy aims to develop a plan to guide the "establishment, management and monitoring of protected areas," explained Project Officer Clare Cockwell this week.

"This seems to be a good time to be thinking about it because we may well be on the verge of a time of great change in the Islands. The changes will put pressure on the Island environment that we know and love and this project will give us the chance to talk about what we most value about our home and how we can preserve and pass that on to future generations."

Mrs Cockwell emphasised, it was not about preventing economic development "or stopping anyone from doing what they are doing at the moment."

"It's more to do with making sure that development doesn't occur at the expense of other valued qualities of the Islands. The project aim is not to produce a network of specific sites that should be protected. It is more about pulling together existing knowledge and research to find a way of recognising important areas, and managing them once we have identified them."

The project also aims to look at existing protected areas and fit them into a strategy that makes their management and function easier to understand.

She said, "There has already been a huge amount of work done on habitats and individual species. There are also many individuals, especially land-owners, out there looking after the environment on a daily basis. If we can recognise and share all of that good work and find a way of taking it forward into the future, we will really have achieved something."

Key lessons learned from the Strategy will be shared among UK Overseas Territories, and supported by practical training and mentoring.

Most of the funding will come from Overseas Territories Environment Programme (£124,300 in total over three years from OTEP) with further funding from Falklands Conservation and also the Falkland Islands Government and Tourist Board as well as The Royal Society for Protection of Birds, Shallow Marine Survey and some members of the Falklands community and land owners.

First win for FSR1

THERE were only two matches last Sunday in the Falkland Islands Premier League T12 competition.

The first of the evening was played between Johnny Foreigners and Fire Service Rescue 2. The Fire Service won the toss and elected to field first. Johnny Foreigners could only manage 49 runs in their 12 overs after penalty runs were subtracted. After a shaky start for the Fire Service, losing three wickets in the first two overs, runs started to flow easily and they scored a total of 85 runs, winning the match by 36 runs.

The second match took place between STDs and Fire Service Rescue 1. STDs batted first with Axel Rodriguez-Reid and Torin Harte opening for their side. Both batted sensibly at the start and after the side had batted their 12 overs, a total of 69 runs were put on the board for the opposition to chase. Fire Service Rescue 1 took no time in scoring quick runs. After the first four overs they had scored 53 runs, only losing one wicket. The Fire Service managed to score 121 runs after they had batted their 12 overs, winning the match by 52 runs.

Three Ball Alliance 2011

STANLEY GARDNER, 10, of 1001 1/2th St., last Sunday, was the youngest member of the nine-team, 100-yard relay race. He was the little whiz who won the first leg of the best two boys' relay team. He was also playing lawn tennis.

The golf club was purchased from MPA and hopes that the club will be more competitive financially.

Last time the club had a handicap competition consisting of Ten, 18 holes, and the winner was to prove no handicap was needed to win by 5 points (and a 100% score) over the runner-up and Ric Nye). The 10th place finisher was the 9th for All, who did not have a handicap greater than his handicap. Bob Smith, the 11th place finisher, scored well over 100.

Opinion divided on single constituency

ALMOST 1,600 people (those on the electoral roll) will have the opportunity to vote 'yes' or 'no' on Thursday in a referendum that asks 'Do you want a single constituency for the whole of the Islands?'

Currently the Islands are divided into two constituencies, Camp and Stanley, with five Legislative Assembly Members representing Stanley and three representing the Camp. There are 262 voters in Camp and 1,315 in Stanley thus one member for every 87 voters in Camp and one member for every 263 voters in Stanley.

The single constituency would only be introduced, however, if two-thirds or more of Camp votes and two-thirds or more of Stanley votes say 'yes'.

Stanley businesswoman Cheryl Roberts told Penguin News, "Yes I agree there should be a single constituency."

"This would be a much fairer approach ensuring all constituents, Camp or Stanley, have an equal say, whilst ensuring a larger pool of candidates for all to choose from."

East Falklands farmers Elaine and Arthur Turner disagreed, saying farmers concerns were very different to those of Stanley residents: "Our needs are better served by having a Camp Member of Legislative Assembly who understands the importance of issues involving farm matters."

West farmer Raymond Evans will also be voting 'no': "In the past and up until the present the rural sector has received some very good support from some of the Stanley councillors and they are to be thanked for this, but in not too many years to come there will be a lot more people from Stanley eligible to stand for election who may not have the knowledge of rural life that people of today have."

Mr Evans added, "I could, however, agree with comments all ready made by some people that maybe a split of two Camp six Stanley."

Stanley businessman Roger Spink, like Mrs Roberts, intends to vote 'yes'. He said he views the current system as divisive, and in the past he would have liked to have voted for some Camp candidates.

He said, "I believe we would still get a balanced and representative council from a single constituency."

John Birmingham, also a Stanley man, agreed, claiming the present system was out-dated and, "has given some people an excuse to not follow through with a problem brought to them because that person is not in their own constituency."

West farmer Ian Hansen said he will be voting 'no' because he believed the issue of representation would, "not be resolved by a single constituency," and that it could be detrimental to the Camp.

He added, "I believe there are more options to create a better balance. If everyone voted for everyone, but there was a stipulation to say that there would have to be - for instance - two assembly members in any current assembly who earned a living in either Stanley or Camp, then I believe that the issue of representation would be as fair as one could expect."

Rosemarie King, although a Stanley resident, was not happy with the idea of a single constituency. She said: "To be honest, the only thoughts I have are that it ought to be something like 7-1, or 6-2."

"I'm not actually ready for a single constituency as I think it is a good thing to have farmers coming into Stanley to join the business of a council, thereby hopefully more dissemination of information out of Stanley."

She added, "On the other hand, I'm not so sure it would be progress to have seven farmers being voted to represent Stanley (in the unlikely event). I'm not expecting the farmers to vote two thirds to go with a single constituency so therefore not expecting any change with this 'yes' or 'no' vote."

Amelia Appleby believes the Camp needed to be represented by "people who live in Camp and experience Camp life."

She said she could not see how Stanley based MLAs "can understand the repercussions of decisions they make regarding Camp if they do not live there and vice versa."

Potential by election candidate Norman Clark said: "I fully understand the concerns of Campers, however, the current system in my view is a divisive one."

He asked if that was really necessary in such a small population.

At yesterday's meeting of the Legislative Assembly, MLA Dick Sawle, who is in favour of a 'yes' vote, noted in his Speech to the Motion for Adjournment, "All of us are elected to represent the Falklands."

"We work a portfolio system which takes no account of constituency boundaries."

MLA Gavin Short, in favour of a 'no' vote, felt he personally did not have a true understanding of the problems the agricultural community faced because he had never lived there, adding that he relied heavily on Camp candidates for their input on rural issues.

MLA Mike Summers who is against a single constituency concluded, "I would urge voters particularly the Campers, not to support what I regard as a poor compromise, but call for a proper discussion about representation, and what would be in everybody's interest, and I think we would have to look at all of these factors before we decide."

Andy honoured at Buck House

ANDY Brownlee, a captain in the Falkland Islands Defence force, proudly wore his blues uniform to Buckingham Palace to receive his MBE on Wednesday.

Mr Brownlee, who was awarded for 'services to the community' was accompanied by his wife Lynn and daughter Samantha.

December 15 by election

DECEMBER 15 will be the date for the by election to fill the vacancy arising from the resignation of Member of Legislative Assembly, Emma Edwards. Norman Clark who stood unsuccessfully at the June 23 by election has confirmed he will again stand for election. Steve Vincent, who took second place in June said he had "not made a firm decision yet about standing." John Birmingham, another candidate from the last by-election also commented that he had not come to a decision whether to stand again.

The Executive

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly Dick Sawle (Stanley) Sharon Halford (Camp) and Jan Cheek (Stanley or Camp) were elected to Executive Council for one year at yesterday's meeting of the Legislative Assembly.

Comment by Managing Editor Lisa Watson

DEMOCRACY is a concept we bandy about with some confidence in the Falklands; and yes, we should celebrate a system that allows us to freely exercise our right to shape our own government.

On November 3 that right is offered to us in the form of a referendum on a single constituency; and if you will forgive me for stating the obvious, my point of view is no more and no less important than yours, or that of the person standing next to you, however, whether you agree with the following or disagree to such an extent you'd like to drop kick me over the sea wall, your opinion is, by default, pretty unimportant if you don't make the journey to the ballot box.

While no one would suggest that proportionally the population of Camp is not over represented within the Legislative Assembly, to expect Campers to skip joyfully to the polls and vote for a system that might entirely dispose of representatives that understand on a practical level the needs of a population that often has quite different priorities to the Stanley population, seems optimistic.

Yes, all candidates should and presumably do generally work for the good of the Falkland Islands as a whole, that is how a national government should work. And I do not suggest that a single constituency is not ideologically fair, but will the majority of Campers presume that theory will always equal reality? Will they be entirely convinced that without a group of people specifically answerable to their (and only their) approving vote, that they will receive the same appreciation of the singular obstacles that impact on their lives and businesses?

Still, if those in favour of the 'yes' vote find things don't go their way, they may console themselves that the debate has now put enough pressure on the agricultural community that a good few of them are nervously suggesting they would, instead of a single constituency, accept lesser representation.

Personally I wouldn't be so eager to relinquish governmental advantages, well not without a damn good fight anyway.

Director of Health and Education
David Jenkins

EXECUTIVE Council this week considered a paper by the Director of Health and Education which advised on issues the KEMH had experienced in their quest to recruit a chief medical officer (CMO) and general practitioners (GPs).

David Jenkins recommended that in the short term FIG should not follow the UK market trends and pay exorbitant GP salaries and that independent specialist advice should be sought regarding the suitability of potential candidates as applications are received.

When re-advertising for a CMO as well as long term GPs he said registration with the GMC

Quest for new GPs and CMO costs £134k since January 2010

(General Medical Council) or equivalent national body should be included although the clinical competence of any non-GMC registered practitioners should be closely monitored.

While recruiting GPs had been a challenge for a number of years, the issue had become particularly acute since January 2010, from which point reliance had been on a large number of locum GPs to cover staffing, Mr Jenkins explained. Since January 2010, £134,400 has been spent on CMO and GP recruitment.

Mr Jenkins said he would be content if one of the full time GP positions was covered by a locum, but there was a need to have the other three posts filled by GPs who worked a two or three year contract, which could be longer if the right person for the job and for the Islands was found.

Meanwhile this week word on the street was that a potential CMO candidate had been lost because of delays in recruitment after interview and that a potential candidate for the role of head teacher at FICS had also withdrawn for the same reasons.

A joint statement from the Director of Health and Education and Human Resources said it was correct that the process to fill the CMO position was on going, but this was because FIG had selected to broaden its search to a wider applicant pool.

"However, FIG can confirm that one applicant from the first stage of the process has selected to withdraw from the exercise and instead has chosen to continue to work for us on a locum basis. Their decision to take that step cannot be wholly attributed to the timeframe for the exercise," the statement said.

In the case of the Head Teacher appointment, Mr Jenkins and Human Resource's Hilary McFarland have confirmed that an offer had been accepted by a "first class candidate" who is expected to take up post in January.

MTO policy to be reviewed in early 2012

FOLLOWING enquiries about the policy for funding relatives to accompany patients needing medical treatment overseas (MTO) and particularly for the parents of babies, the hospital manager Michael Poole has confirmed that the policy is to be reviewed in early 2012 to go to the January Executive Council meeting.

Currently the hospital will only pay for one family member or friend to escort a patient if the patient is a minor (child under the age of 18), critically ill with an immediately life-threatening condition or for the birth partner of women undergoing a high risk pregnancy.

Mr Poole said that in special circumstances, funding would be considered for an escort for people who are so ill, either mentally or physically, that they are unable to cope with the tasks of daily living. This however is subject to a separate medical assessment.

Health and Medical portfolio holder MLA Sharon Halford said she had been assured that all cases in the past had been treated in the same manner, and in accordance with the current policy, which she added was in much need of the scheduled review.

Figures presented at Thursday's Legislative Assembly meeting revealed that 686 patients have been referred to Chile in the last five years and 568 to the UK at a total cost of just over £5.5 million.

'Air of secrecy' in FIG unnecessary

ADDRESSING the issue of access to information within government, MLA Mike Summers said on Thursday that he was of the opinion there should be more transparency and more openness within government, adding that there was an "air of secrecy" around at the moment. MLA Summers said he did not think it was necessary.

Access to information was an interesting subject, said MLA Summers as he addressed his colleagues during his speech to the Motion for Adjournment at Thursday's Legislative Assembly meeting.

"Not only is it interesting, it is also exceedingly difficult. Every government struggles with this issue and we are no different," he said.

"I think every government thinks it is as open as it could possibly be and we've had many comments from members around this table that perhaps this government was more open than any of its predecessors," said MLA Summers, adding, "Frankly, I don't think it's any different."

The problem was a lack of suitable mechanisms for getting information out and that was an issue that needed to be addressed, he said, adding he was not looking to place the blame on anyone in particular.

"But, we must recognise it's a real problem. Let's not be in self-denial about this. We do not get sufficient information across to the public about what we're doing and how we make decisions, and we have to find ways of doing it, I have no instant solutions, if I had I may have applied them prior to the last election," he said.

The new access to information thoughts are about to come out for consultation and the thinking should be more transparency and more openness, not less, he said.

The role of the media was "absolutely critical," as is the way the access to information ordinance is developed, he said.

"We have to have a serious think about the number of committees that we now have, that have grown in the last two or three years, that are not subject to the access to information ordinance but where some very serious business takes place which people don't know about. And that's not good."

"So let's be open minded about it, let's think about it and let's try and be progressive because more transparency and more openness leads to better government," concluded MLA Summers.

'Angel of Death' Astiz jailed for life

TWO notorious former Argentine navy officers Alfredo Astiz and 'Tigre' Acosta were sentenced to life in prison on Wednesday night after being found guilty of kidnapping, torture and the forced disappearances of many detainees in the former Navy School of Mechanics (ESMA) during the dictatorship of 1976 to 1983. Known as the Blond Angel of Death, Astiz was captured at South Georgia during the Falklands War in 1982 by British forces, but was later repatriated to Argentina.

Career steps

A FOUR month pilot scheme, the FIG Leadership Development Programme, has been launched as part of the government's localisation programme which includes the Career Development Scheme. Hilary McFarland of Human Resources said it was, "aimed at enhancing management and leadership skills of those who have been identified through the appraisal process, and as supported by their Directors, as having great potential to take on the most senior roles within government in the longer term." She said, "if it delivers all that it is expected to, the hope is that it may be expanded to a wider intake in future so that the Islands can benefit from a ready made base of leadership talent, well able to take on key roles further down the line as and when needed."

New contract

EXECUTIVE Council have approved Templars Medical Agency (TMA) as the new surgical and anaesthetic contractor.

TMA were short listed along with the current contract holder Island Health Services (IHS). TMA will now be the subject of due diligence checks by FIG. Director of Health David Jenkins said this would involve TMA undertaking a scoping visit to the Islands in the near future and confirmation of their potential ability to deliver the required service. Dependent upon results of the process a final decision is expected to be made at the February ExCo, said Mr Jenkins.

Schools safe

CONCERNS that any further schools in the Camp were to be closed were allayed on Thursday when MLA Jan Cheek said in Legislative Assembly that there were no plans to close either of the settlement schools. The information was provided in response to a question from MLA Gavin Short.

Legislative Assembly Diary

I HAVE already expressed my view on a single constituency a number of times so feel no need to be neutral on the subject even though I now have a foot in both camps. We have had clear indications in recent elections that some constituents in Camp felt that their choice was fairly restricted. I would happily put my voting record on issues that affect Camp up against anyone's, whether it be on expenditure on roads, the abattoir or keeping Camp schools open anyone who alleges I have worked against camp is wrong. Others have made the point but I'll reiterate: we are all elected to the Assembly of the Falkland Islands and do our best to represent everyone in the Islands regardless of where they happen to live. There has been a five to three majority of Stanley members for many years but there has been no reduction of support for Camp. I'm convinced that good candidates from Camp, as long as they demonstrated a willingness and ability to do the work, would get votes from Stanley. We need more than ever the widest choice of strong well informed candidates.

WITH a by election probably only six weeks away I think we all hope for a good field of competent candidates who have an understanding of what is involved in serving on the Legislative Assembly. If they have the energy and motivation for the job they will have researched the Constitution and FIG structure and process and be politically aware. If they need to be 'spoon fed' that information then they probably have not got what it takes to represent us. Candidates have to be able to commit a great deal of time to constituents queries and reading papers and researching matters as well as participating in meetings. They must understand that to carry forward their policies they have to convince at least half the other MLAs by their arguments. I should also mention a sense of humour is required for when they lose the argument and the will to move on to the next item without feeling aggrieved.

Montrose sails south

LEAVING her home port of Devonport, Plymouth, to sail to the Falklands on Monday, HMS Montrose passed Devil's Point to the sound of a lone piper.

HMS Montrose is due to arrive in the Falklands in mid-November.

A large number of families and friends braved the adverse weather to wave goodbye to their loved ones, while the crew lined the decks to bid them farewell.

This deployment marks a major milestone for HMS Montrose having returned from a successful counter-piracy deployment ten months ago, and after an intensive period of operational sea training and maintenance.

A busy programme over the preceding months has prepared the crew, making sure they are ready in all respects for whatever they may face, said a spokesman.

Sunday picnic at the Lighthouse

THE Cathedral congregation invite everyone to join them for a picnic at Cape Pembroke lighthouse on Sunday.

Meeting noon at the Parish Hall, with a picnic lunch, drivers with spare seats in their vehicles are asked to give a lift to anyone without transport.

The intention is to drive out to the lighthouse, dropping off anyone who wants to walk from the end of the road.

Reverend Richard Hines said that hopefully the key to the lighthouse would be available for anyone who would like the opportunity to see inside.

If the weather is bad, there'll be games in the Parish Hall for children and the young at heart.

Isolated Emma steps down from Assembly

IN view of bad feelings that had filtered through the ranks of the Legislative Assembly following former MLA Emma Edwards' removal from the Tourist Board, she said the longer she had stayed the more isolated she would have become.

Miss Edwards resigned last week (October 21), saying she would be sorry to go, "but I have a new chapter in my life opening up and want to have the time to enjoy this." She is getting married on January 7, and is moving overseas in August 2012 to join her future husband Mark Brook RN who has been posted to the UK.

The atmosphere between MLAs had been strained since Miss Edwards publicly objected to her removal from the Tourist Board, of which she was chair, because the Assembly felt she was opposed to official policy in some areas. She denied this, saying she had merely questioned the due process and dissemination of information.

Miss Edwards said she had stood for an open government and in view of a recent meeting she had attended was not convinced that she was representing one.

At a meeting to discuss the moving of the Museum to the Dockyard site, there was not a Museum and National Trust member present, a situation which she felt was wrong.

"There was nothing in that meeting that couldn't have been discussed in front of a museum representative and I feel they should have been present," she told Penguin News.

"A lot of the stuff discussed in meetings is not particularly sensitive, it's just that they prefer to keep it that way," said Miss Edwards.

By resigning now Miss Edwards said it would give the successful candidate from the by election a two year period to find their feet and get a better flavour of what goes on within government.

Governor Nigel Haywood thanked Miss Edwards for her work as an MLA.

"I am genuinely sorry that you will be going. You have contributed a lot to the Assembly, and your warmth and humanity – your sheer niceness – and gentle sense of humour have made you a pleasure to work with. I have watched with considerable admiration and respect the way you have handled three very serious jobs with considerable skill and distinction. The energy you have put into all of them is remarkable, and, as each of the jobs is of such considerable benefit to the Islands, everyone here has so much to be grateful to you for. You have worked hard as an Assembly Member, handled some tricky portfolios, and have been a real asset to ExCo on those occasions when you have been a member."

In some ways Miss Edwards said she was sad to be leaving. "I found the work interesting and I really liked being able to help people," she said, adding that

No TV for MLA Halford

MLA Sharon Halford left the Public meeting before it started at 5pm on Monday, because the monthly event was being filmed for the first time by FITV.

MLA Halford had voiced her objection to the meeting being televised on several occasions however the activity had been approved by the other MLAs following a public vote while she was out of the Islands.

"My reason for not wishing to be filmed by FITV is that they do not offer coverage to people living outside of Stanley (except in the form of a disc which you can purchase and play later) and until such time as they change this then I will maintain my stance as my constituents only get coverage of these meetings by air."

having housing on her portfolio had enabled her to help several individuals, although unfortunately not all, simply because there was not enough houses to go around.

At Thursday's Legislative Assembly meeting, MLA Jan Cheek said Miss Edwards' departure had highlighted the difficulty experienced by civil servants in the MLA role and the issue of civil servants serving as MLAs was one that needed to be addressed before the next election.

MLA Roger Edwards said his comments on the poor treatment his daughter had received had already been well documented and thanked those colleagues who had mentioned the work she had carried out on various parts of her portfolio.

MLA Sharon Halford told Penguin News that she personally did her best to disseminate as much information as possible and for the committees she chaired only necessary items were restricted to the closed section.

"As to Emma becoming more isolated within the Assembly, I am sorry if she felt that way but I would not agree. We are all individuals within the Assembly and were elected as independent members, this does mean that from time to time you will not always have the full support of all of the members. Does this make you isolated? No, you have to move on and try and gain support for other areas you are trying to further," said MLA Halford.

Rockhopper spuds eighth

ROCKHOPPER Exploration spudded its eighth well on the Sea Lion feature in the North Falkland basin this week.

The well is designed to investigate reservoir presence and hydrocarbon charge within the Sea Lion main complex towards the southern edge of the company's acreage.

It will also serve as an exploration well on the eastern side of the Casper prospect which Rockhopper previously stated has the potential for a reserve of 90 million barrels.

The well is being drilled by the semi-submersible drilling rig Ocean Guardian about 5.9 kilometres south-west of the 14/10-2 discovery well and is expected to take about 33 days to complete.

Leiv Eiriksson

The oil rig Leiv Eiriksson finishes drilling off Greenland's west coast next month and will set sail south to the Falkland Islands.

Upstream online writes that the month-long voyage from top to bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, at a cost of about $500,000 a day, exemplifies how the world's drillers have never spent so much searching for oil and gas in so many places, spurred by crude prices above $100 a barrel and depleting reserves at existing fields.

Entertainment from Gojo's?

GOJO's Ltd, a company newly formed with the aim of operating a family and community entertainment centre in Stanley is currently conducting a survey to ascertain enthusiasm for the facility. The centre would include an integrated indoor playground, a two-lane bowling alley, a cafe and an arcade games area.

A spokesperson for the company said the results would provide support for their business plan by "showing the need for and potential use of the entertainment centre."

The survey will run for two weeks and can be accessed via Facebook or by typing into your browser www.surveymonkey.com/s/GoJos_Ltd

The survey asks how often people might use such a facility and how much they might be prepared to pay to use it.

£90k package for Police boss

THE Falkland Islands Director of Emergency Services post is currently being advertised as a three year contract along with a £90,000 package. Applicants should bring 'experience at command-level of inter-service emergency planning and response.'

Closing date is November 4.

Phil: Don't insult me or the artist

LOCAL philatelist Phil Middleton incensed by government's refusal to pay a local artist for design work for a stamp issue made his feelings known at Monday's public meeting

Mr Middleton was also furious he had not been officially informed that he had not been accepted onto the Stamp Advisory Committee before the information being made public.

In his application to have his place on the committee renewed Mr Middleton said he had mentioned the need to have a more transparent arrangement, whereby local artists and photographers were encouraged to become more actively involved in the design and production of stamps and first day covers as well as the need for a clear policy of remuneration, law of copyright and contractual agreement between the Post Office and artists.

He said one artist had never been paid even though her design concept had been used which was a breach of copyright.

Mr Middleton said he had emailed the relevant officers, but the response paraphrased had pretty much been, "life is tough, would you like to do some more art work."

MLA Dick Sawle who is chair of the Stamp Advisory Committee

The debated stamp design

said there was doubt whether the concept provided was the actual design used, which he said to his recollection had been "scribbled on the back of a Malvinas menu."

Mr Middleton replied, "do not insult me, and do not insult the artist."

He said he had consulted a legal representative who had assured him it was up to FIG to prove copyright for the design had been given in writing and suggested MLA Sawle read the minutes of the September meeting which he had chaired.

Chair of the meeting MLA Roger Edwards assured he would raise the issue at the General Purposes meeting (on Tuesday) and someone would be appointed to look into it.

Derek Clarke, Jen Hines and Kristina Vincent have been appointed as the new lay members on the Stamp Advisory Committee.

Canache plan for debate

THE Canache Management Plan is now out for public consultation until November 25.

Fiona Wallace-Nannig gave a presentation at the Public Meeting on Monday evening, explaining that occupiers and users as well as other interested parties of the area at the east end of Stanley Harbour were invited to comment on the proposed management and planning policies.

There was currently no approved plan for the Canache and consequently the FIG owned area had been developed incrementally with tenure decisions made on a short term basis to ensure any decisions government might wish to make had not been fettered, she said.

The Environmental Planning

Department put together proposals for the area in early 2011 which was then put out for consultation during March/April.

21 returns with comments were received on the draft plan, which was then presented to the Planning and Building and Lands committees where members were generally content with the recommendations made.

The plan covers a wide range of issues including the provision of moorings, public access to the waterside, leased areas and charging policy.

To obtain a copy of the Canache Management Plan or to lodge your comments contact the Environmental Planning Department on email Fwallace-nannig.planning@taxation.gov.fk

Say NO or the Camp is in jeopardy

ON November 3 the electorate will decide whether or not they wish to live in a democracy consisting of one single constituency.

If the answer is yes, the interests of a minority representing a small part of the population, but around 99.9% of our land mass, will be put in jeopardy.

Those with rose-tinted glasses might like to believe that the interests of one are the interests of all and that there is such a fondness for Camp amongst the Stanley electorate that the development and economic viability of Camp will always be held dear to everyone's hearts. This plainly is not the case. Many proponents of the single-constituency argument quite vocally bemoan the imbalanced influence of the Camp minority on government policy-making and view that investments in Camp roads, the Abattoir and Camp communications - to name a few - has represented a 'frittering' away of government funds on uneconomic projects which should have been better directed towards more worthy Stanley interests.

Until now, most councillors have had some connection with Camp - either they grew up there or had close family who lived there - which has led them to have some understanding, however outdated that might be in particular cases, of the challenges and pressures of Camp life. But much fewer people now have those links with it and in 10 or 20 years time, when the councillors of the day have no more experience of Camp than a week-end trip to Port Howard lodge or a North Arm two-nighter, it is hard to see how any except the most dedicated of Members will be in a position to understand the complexities of it or the challenges it faces. Already most Campers will object that very few of our councillors make any effort to make themselves acquainted with the realities of Camp life and it is likely that this will only get worse once Councillors have no historical or emotional connection to it.

Under such circumstances it is not hard to imagine the interests of a minority becoming marginalised and unprotected. The perceived interests of the Falklands could amount to no more than the interests of Stanley. Politically this is unacceptable: the Camp largely sustained the whole community of the Falklands for over 150 years and this history underlies much of our cultural heritage and sense of identity. Many people have died in order to protect the uniqueness of the Falklands Islands which includes everything from Weddell Island to Cape Pembroke. It is romantic but dangerous to believe that the Stanley electorate of tomorrow will hold this as a number one truth in their minds at the polling station and once Camp loses its political flag the will to invest in its development and viability could vanish altogether.

Under the current system there is nothing preventing a Stanley member standing for Camp or vice-versa. At least under the current system Camp members are ethically obliged to bear in mind the best interests of their Constituency and it keeps those issues alive and on the table. Once this is no longer the case,

Camp might well find itself abandoned and left to its own devices.

Of course, then the inhabitants can all move into Stanley and there will be no pesky Campers to be 'frittering' away Government funds - and we can re-brand ourselves as a new nation called - 'Stanley'.

Charlene: I'm a pupil of Egg

I'M a pupil of Egg. Richard Dunn taught Richard, Sheila and I on West Point and Carcass. I'll always remember the day Dad pulled a huge tarpaulin up on the green at Carcass where hundreds of grasshoppers sheltered. Mr Dunn was terrified of them. Richard thought that during smoko in the afternoon he would let a handful of the grasshoppers out on to the table; they hopped everywhere as you can imagine. Mr Dunn went white and almost fainted; something I will never ever forget.

Half the size but twice the zest for life says Gary

HE might be a mere shadow of his former self, but the former Royal Marine and current SAMA82 chairman says he now has twice the energy and zest for life he had just over a year ago.

Gary Clement (55) weighed in at 22½ stone and was suffering with type two diabetes, taking 160 units of insulin a day, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, aching joints and acute sleep apnea (a serious disorder that causes an individual to stop breathing as they sleep) and had started to feel as though everything was too much effort.

You don't get to be a Royal Marine by being a slouch and even though his weight had crept up over the years, Gary had led an active lifestyle and could be seen out on the Stanley Golf course most weekends and even leading the pack (and puffing less) on the notoriously steep Clippy Hill course at Port Howard.

When Dr Roger Diggle (the then Chief Medical Officer) told him he wouldn't be surprised, "if he was a sudden death tomorrow," he knew something had to be done.

Prompted by media coverage which claimed dieting was not really an option for people with a body mass index over 40 as it only resulted in yo-yoing, he decided a more sure-fire method was the answer.

Dr Bernadette Payer was supportive and helpful of Gary's situation and together they researched and came up with a hospital in Charing Cross which offered bariatric surgery. He said he was very grateful for all her help.

At his own expense, he travelled to the UK and had a consultation with top surgeon Mr Ahmed Ahmed who has performed more than 1,000 laparoscopic bariatric procedures and trains other surgeons in the field of bariatric surgery.

With Gary's list of ailments Mr Ahmed said he was a perfect case and recommended the gastric sleeve procedure which basically removes part of the stomach.

The operation was undertaken successfully using keyhole surgery on October 19, 2010, although Gary readily admits that as the premed was administered he sincerely questioned whether he was doing the right thing.

Ten days later he was still wondering, as the necessary protein packed, liquid only diet left him vomiting and feeling weak. "I just didn't like the stuff," he said.

It took the best part of eight months before he had incorporated all food types back into his diet and is now a "grazer" eating little but often.

He will have to take vitamin tablets as well as a tablet to help break down food for the rest of his life, but for him that is a small price to pay. "At least the rest of my life is going to be a lot longer than I expected a year or so ago," he said.

In the early days when asked about the operation he said he would only have recommended it for medical reasons, but now as the full benefits have become apparent he says it is a suitable solution for any-one who finds their lifestyle is becoming restricted by their size.

"I'm just so full of life and want to get out there and do things now," a seriously happy and fit looking Gary, declared.

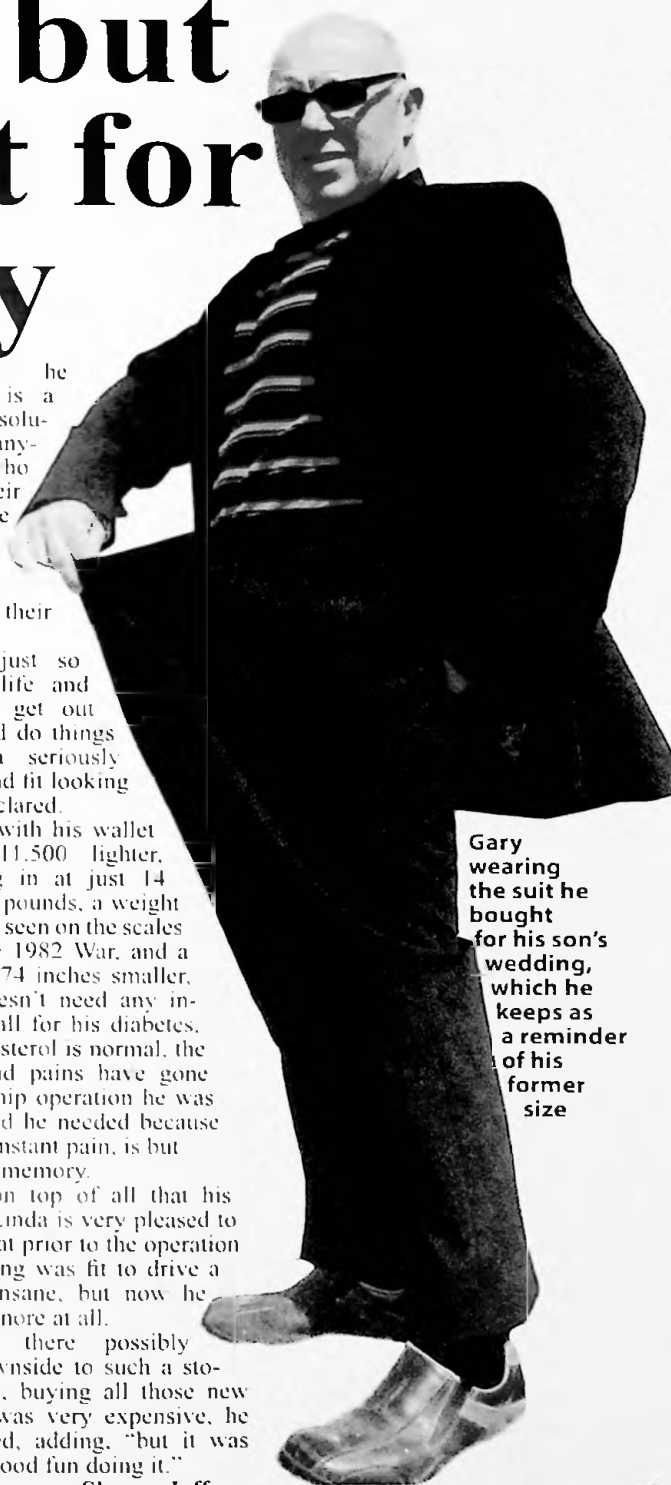

Now, with his wallet some £11,500 lighter, weighing in at just 14 stone 10 pounds, a weight he hasn't seen on the scales since the 1982 War, and a massive 74 inches smaller, Gary doesn't need any insulin at all for his diabetes, his cholesterol is normal, the aches and pains have gone and the hip operation he was convinced he needed because of the constant pain, is but a distant memory.

And on top of all that his partner Linda is very pleased to report that prior to the operation his snoring was fit to drive a person insane, but now he doesn't snore at all.

Could there possibly be a downside to such a story? Well, buying all those new clothes was very expensive, he bemoaned, adding, "but it was bloody good fun doing it."

Sea Spirit marks the start of cruise season

NINETY-four cruise ship passengers flew in on the LAN flight on Saturday and enjoyed two hours free time in Stanley before joining their ship Sea Spirit and sailing for South Georgia.

Sea Spirit (owned by Quark with FIC as Falklands agent) was chartered by Zegrahm and not only was this the first cruise ship visit of the season and passenger exchange, it was also a very special journey for Zegrahm.

This particular trip was originally meant to take place last season to celebrate Zegrahm's 20th Anniversary, unfortunately the Clipper Adventurer ran aground in the Arctic last year so the trip was cancelled.

The name Zegrahm incorporates the initials of the six founders of the company, and four of those founders still lead expeditions.

The next passenger exchange for Falklands agent Sullivan Shipping is scheduled for November 12 when the Polar Pioneer, with a capacity for 54 passengers, will be in Stanley to drop off as well as receive new passengers.

Two new ships to SG

TWO cruise ships, L'Austral and Island Sky, will make their first ever visit to South Georgia this season, confirmed South Georgia News.

Fifty-one cruise ship visits are booked, bringing a potential 6,350 passengers though actual passenger numbers are likely to be nearer 5,000; this is marginally lower than last season.

Last season, although South Georgia continued to be a popular cruising destination, there was also a decrease in passenger numbers and that was believed to have been due to the effect of uncertainties in the world-wide economy.

There were 17 less visits last season and passenger numbers were down 26 per cent, compared to the previous season, which continues a downward trend since the peak of the industry in 2007/8.

Forty-six cruise ship visits were made to South Georgia by 18 different vessels during the 2010/11 tourist season, bringing a total of 5,354 passengers. Most cruise ships continued to carry 150 passengers or fewer.

All vessels were required to call at Grytviken, the centre of administration, at some stage of their visit, and after that the most popular visitor sites were: Gold Harbour and Salisbury Plain.

There were three new cruise ships during the season: Le Boreal, Sea Spirit and Marina Sve-taeva.

Passengers came from 52 different countries: 25 per cent USA; 20 per cent Germany; 12 per cent UK; 11 per cent Australia; with between 2 and 5 per cent from Switzerland, Canada, France, Netherlands, China and Austria.

Fourteen yacht visits were made during the 2010/11 season by 13 different yachts. Nine yachts were engaged in charter work supporting expeditions, film crews and passengers, the others were private visits.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication is available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800.....Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

Another better week this week with the EMI closing at 1,158 cents/kg clean (752GB p/kg) only down 2 cents on last week. Fine micron was stable with a small decrease in price and coarse wool continues its positive price trend. Medium micron saw the biggest dip in prices this week.

The latest Market Intelligence reports are suggesting that the EMI is expected to average around 1200 cents/kg clean for the financial year 2011/12, which while representing a 6% increase year-on-year and extremely strong in a historical sense, implies that there will not be any more significant price rises on the horizon.

Supplies of Australian wool are likely to increase by around 3% year-on-year, but declining production by competitor supplier nations means that global supplies will remain tight. Despite the uncertainty on global financial markets, demand for wool is expected to be marginally stronger over the coming year.

Horse tales and farm yarns

PENGUIN News online features page has been running a story of life on a busy farm (with an eccentric husband) by Elaine Turner. This week by popular request we've made an exception and offer readers a hard copy sample of the popular feature 'Farm Yarns'. To keep up with Elaine's stories go to www.penguin-news.com and click on the 'features' button.

AS many people will be aware Arthur and I spend a good deal of time training and then racing horses. What they might be less aware of is just how unbelievably competitive Arthur is when we're training together. On more than one occasion he has cut me off, pinned me against the fence, and even false started in order to beat me.

We have these little bets in order to make it interesting: one day he challenged: "if you can beat me in a 300-yard gallop, you can have Trapalanta for the Governor's Cup at Hill Cove."

Fine, thought I, so off we cantered to the beginning of the gallop, me riding Princess, an excellent gymkhana mare, and him on the much quicker racer Eldorado.

Princess must have been in the mood for a win because much to the shock of both of us she whipped Eldorado roundly. Not unexpectedly Arthur suggested, "best of three;" so off we went again, him on Tarkan me on Trapalanta. His plan didn't quite work out and ultimately I took my spot in the Governor's Cup on Trapalanta.

Years later in 2004 I was privileged to be asked to race the brilliant Capizana in the Governor's Cup in Stanley.

Arthur was riding our own Whirling Fireball an American quarter horse mare, and prior to the race he quipped, "good luck dear, just enjoy yourself, at least you're providing another entry in the race."

Well lo and behold I won the race - a fantastic feeling in itself, but not the best part. No, the really good bit was watching Arthur eating humble pie and having to congratulate me afterwards. Not that I was going to let it lie of course; for years afterwards I've suffered countless convenient moments of amnesia and ventured, "now who was it won the Governors Cup in 2004 dear?" as I gazed adoringly at my trophy in its pride of place in the cabinet.

Seriously though we are very fortunate to have such wonderful horses and visitors often comment on their gentle personalities. But then we do treat them like part of our family, and as such they act it; they aren't scared of anything, including motorbikes, gun shots, or even Arthur throwing a tantrum, they take it all in their stride.

Little Dude doing his thing

Watcho my Chilean thoroughbred mare was a very bright girl. When she was in foal the first time, like so many horse owners would, I acted like a clucky hen, fussing over her constantly, and of course she was clever enough to take full advantage of the situation.

She would come home at 1am or sometimes 3am, stand outside my bedroom window and neigh. I would get up, put on my boots and go outside. Together we would walk to the stable, where she would happily accept a back massage and a feed. When she was finished eating we would wander back to the house together and then off she would pop, happy as Larry.

The day finally came on December 5, 1999, and with a little help from me to haul the shoulders out, she delivered a beautiful filly, that I named there and then, Kool Q Baby. Watcho's face was a picture of pride as she watched her baby struggle to stand but then things got confusing. Watcho wanted to clean me and not the foal. Arthur sensibly marched me out of the stable leaving mummy and baby to bond.

When I went back everything was how it should be, the foal nursing and Watcho calm and collected. A week went by and I walked Watcho up to the top settlement, a mile away, to put her and Kool Q into the lovely gorse lined paddock complete with stable.

We had to stop a few times for Kool Q to have a drink, but eventually made it to the stable. Kool Q was so tired she lay down straight away in the hay to sleep and I sat on the manger to watch her.

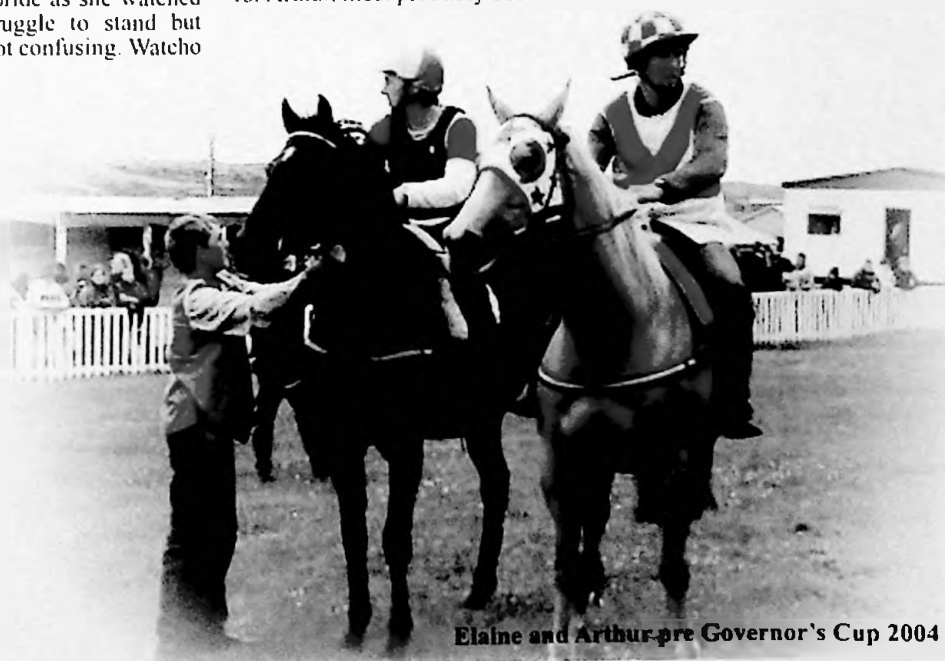

Watcho wasn't happy with this at all, she shepherd me over to the foal in a very bossy manner: I obliged and knelt down next to Kool Q, and Watcho stood over us much happier that she had us both on the one spot.

Watcho had a few little quirks and one of them was her dislike for Arthur, most probably because he appeared to take up far too much of my time. One day she decided to take a chunk out of him in the stable - she attempted a hearty bite in his direction and he smacked her smartly on the ribs. Not defeated Watcho waited a few weeks and then one day as he walked past her while carrying a bucket of food, she kicked him in the thigh. He hopped around for a while but honourably accepted that they were even. (Obviously I picked up her hind leg to check she hadn't bruised her hoof kicking him.)

It's not the first time I have been on the horse's side; one night to surprise me Arthur decided to ride from the corral to the kitchen window on my little half bred gelding aptly named Little Dude. I had been on and off him bareback since he was a two year old, so he was pretty much bomb-proof. Little Dude didn't want to play nicely that evening though. Arthur had only geared him loosely and climbed aboard; Little Dude helpfully doubled up bucking like a wild thing. Arthur knew he'd better press the eject button so he pushed himself neatly over the back of the gear and landed on his feet right behind Little Dude, who put in one final buck catching Arthur square in the middle of his chest with both hind feet. The first I knew of the caper was when Arthur came stumbling in to the house gasping for breath. My sympathy knew no bounds (for the horse) and I ran outside reprimanding Arthur for allowing my boy to run about with his gear still on.

All was well with both of them and Arthur decided he wasn't going to be beaten, although I did notice he tightened the cinch firmly before giving Little Dude another ride that evening.

Sodexo awards 2011

ON the 10th anniversary of Sodexo Defence working for the military within the Falklands, the company held their annual awards at a formal dinner on October 22 followed by a dance.

Chefs of 120 facility provided a superb meal and the awards were held within the contractor's facility on Mount Pleasant complex.

Mr Niall C Monaghan MII (Contract Manager) hosted the awards and each department manager gave a brief outline of the exceptional contribution of their nominated employee based on their performance over the year, before awarding plaques and a gift.

Mr Monaghan said, "It was given the glitz and glamour of a very special evening due to the paparazzi photographers provided by the Mount Pleasant photography club. This is a unique evening for the staff of Sodexo and everyone makes the effort to dress up and make the evening a huge success."

Awards for five year service were presented to Cecilia Azocar, David Benjamin, Delraye Bennett, Mark Moyce and Virginia Richards.

Ten year awards were presented to Ian Leo, Juliette Thomas and Natalie Williams and 15 years service awards to Sonya Furniss, Lester Green, Fenwick Thomas and Christina Williams.

Sodexo employees Genna Joshua, Raquel Augustus, Teresa Troncoso, Gemma Glanville, Patricio Rojas, Sally Morrison

Aubrey George and Heather Joshua received awards for 20 years service.

Departmental Employees of the Year were George Thomas, Sara Bowers, Charlene Henry, Catherine Benjamin, Annabel Phillips, Candice Leo, Robert George, Mark Moyce, Latham Joshua, Dave Crowie, Perry and Vanessa Henry and Colin Duncan.

Manager of the Year was Ivy Williams-Newman and Employee of Year, Martin Williams.

The Sodexo awards are an annual event to celebrate the long service and outstanding contribution to the Sodexo business by individuals and departments.

Sodexo employ one hundred and ninety people within Mount Pleasant Complex to provide soft services to the military.

These can be as diverse as catering, hospitality, lifeguards, administration, refuse collection, pest control, postal services, library and welfare facilities for all ranks and grades within Mount Pleasant Complex.

In the hen house

with Mandy McLeod

dunvegan@twimail.fk

I'VE actually been in the duck house and incubation room over the last couple of weeks. Here at Dunvegan Domestic Fowl we have some mixed breed ducks. They are pretty good layers of an average 130 eggs each a year. I set a batch (70 is a bit big to be called a clutch) of their eggs early each season. Some of the girls come into lay around March, so in theory, I should have duck eggs all year round. Some that I gave away last year did, but guess what? The one I kept for myself didn't come into lay until this season. Anyway, I'm trying again this year, so had an exciting time whilst the ducklings were hatching. We had a 60 per cent hatch which isn't bad, but I've had better. Hatch watching is fascinating. The struggle for life and getting out of the shell takes a lot of hard work from the youngsters, and they emerge exhausted. Hatching is like labour. Some pop out in an hour, others take 40 hours. It's very tempting to 'help' those that seem to have been trying for ages or given up. I do sometimes succumb and have saved a few, but the majority end up having problems and need to be put down later, so I guess nature knows best, not Mandy.

I have several incubators, but they are fickle pieces of equipment. Many are sold with the promise of making life easier, taking the guess work out of humidity control, etc. with fancy digital readouts and alarms. They lie. I end up using my own thermometers and humidity gauges anyway because they are all different. You'd think three of the same type would be factory set the same wouldn't you? WRONG. Be warned. If you are looking to buy an incubator, stick to simplicity.

The ducklings are doing well and growing fast. They are easier to look after than chicks because they are tougher, but Oh Boy! ARE THEY MESSY! It's twice a day cleanouts. We have cut the numbers down a little by culling some obvious boys. We are getting better at vent sexing now, although I'm sure the ratio of ducks to drakes isn't as high as we have it, so I guess a few more drakes will show themselves at around five weeks old when we do the 'Squeak Quack Test'. More on that in a month.

Clara's blooming cherries

CLARA McKay told Penguin News that in her fruit garden "spring has sprung" quoting Penguin News gardening columnist Ginge Kidd.

Clara, who kindly provides cherries to the hospital and family and friends said she thought those who get to enjoy the fruit will be happy to see her cherry blossoms blooming.

Juniors beat Fire 1

THERE were three matches last week in the Falkland Islands Premier League.

First to play were Royal Challengers Stanley and Fire Service Rescue 2. The Royal Challengers won the toss and elected to bat first. After a steady start, Royal Challengers put a decent score of 112 on the board after their 12 overs, David Hewitt top scoring with 41 runs not out. Good bowling and fielding resulted in FSR2 losing 5 wickets in their first four overs. After their allotted 12 overs, FSR2 could only manage to score 62 runs after penalty runs were subtracted. Royal Challengers Stanley won by 50 runs.

The second match took place between Johnny Foreigners and Saints Plus One. The latter won the toss and chose to field first. Good bowling from SPO restricted the runs and resulted in many wickets falling. Johnny Foreigners put a total of 10 runs on the board after wicket deductions. Frank O'Sullivan was the pick of the bowlers with 6-13 off his three overs. With such a small total to reach, Saints Plus One were always going to win, and eventually did by 67 runs.

The final match of the evening was played between Falkland Islands Junior Cricket Club and Fire Service Rescue 1. FIJCC won the toss and chose to bat first. Daelyn Peck (19 runs), Ieuan Ford (22 runs), Ross Stewart (26 runs) and Ryan Poole (40 runs) all scored well for FIJCC and after their 12 overs managed to score 105 runs. 7 wickets fell in the first four overs for FSR1 putting them on the back foot for the remainder of the match. Alex Pearce top scored with 25 runs, batting 6 fours, and a six. Fire Service Rescue 1 scored 63 runs in their 12 overs after penalty runs were subtracted, resulting in FIJCC winning the match by 42 runs.

Sarah is Sullivan's champion

STANLEY Golf Club welcomed a large field of golfers for the second Sullivan Shipping Tournamant on Sunday morning. 26 signed in, including five from MPA, and it was great to see so many members.

Conditions were not easy with a blustery northwest wind punishing any shot not well struck. Scoring was decent, especially considering the conditions, but only one golfer managed to play to their handicap. Sarah Bowles returned a level handicap score of 36 points to be two clear of the field and prove that she is one of the best players in the club when conditions are difficult. The win also resulted in a handicap cut for Sarah who now has a single figure handicap of nine, a big achievement for any golfer.

Second place went to new member Stuart Bennett with 34 points. Some of you will have seen Stuart in FITV's coverage of the Island Games earlier this year when he caddied for Sarah in the Isle of Wight.

Third place went to Tony McMullen with 34 points as well but was edged out by Stuart on a count back. There was a logjam of players on 33 points, but one of note was Ieuan Ford playing in his first senior tournament. Ieuan has a handicap of 16 and, like Declan Bonner, is one to watch.

Best Front Nine was won by Marcus Dean from MPA and Best Back Nine went to Gordon Lennie. Nearest the Pin on 7 was Wayne Clement and nearest on 17 went to Alex Fleming, another of the visiting MPA players. Ric Nye won longest drive. There were only eight birdies, but Alex Fleming was the only golfer to have two.

The Golf Club would like to thank Sullivan Shipping for their kind sponsorship of this event. Special thanks to Amanda Forster of Sullivan Shipping, for coming up to present the prizes.

This Sunday the Golf Club will be hosting a Member/Non-member competition. The format is Texas Scramble, working on the best shot form the pair, so there is no pressure on the non-member. The idea is to give non-members an opportunity to play golf. If you would like to play ask any members of the golf club or give Troyd a call on 22976 for details. Anyone turning up on the day will be welcome. There will be a prize of one season's membership for the highest placed person who is not a member or has been previously, as well as other prizes.
