FIH: £10M to invest in the Falklands

FALKLAND Island Holdings (FIH) Managing Director John Foster is currently in the Islands looking at options for the £10 million recently raised to invest in the Falklands

Mr Foster told Penguin News the company was well placed for property development in the Islands and had recently recruited a property specialist to come to the Falklands.

"We own land so we can build offices, warehouses and accommodation," said Mr Foster adding that the possibility of forming a syndicate or local partnership to progress port development was also being investigated.

FIH Chairman David Hudd said earlier this week that he believed further investment now in the Falkland Islands was in the best interest of shareholders, "to enable the company to participate in what we believe could be an explosive period of growth," expected to follow recent hydorcarbon discoveries.

FIH holds a significant investment in oil exploration company Falklands Oil and Gas Ltd. The Falkland Islands Company Ltd (FIC) conducts the company's business activities in the Falk-

Beef up herd meet

THE national beef herd could be doubled to meet current and potential markets, farmers heard at a Falkland Islands Meat Company meeting this week

General Manager John Ferguson told farmers on Wednesday that up to 100 more beef animals were needed per year to meet the current local market alone

An agreement with the NAAFI to supply all the beef burgers for Mount Pleasant and the inability to fulfil orders from the Liev Erikssen rig currently carrying out oil exploration in Falklands waters meant the earlier risk of over producing had been eliminated, he said.

The demand from the oil industry looked set to increase, there was the potential to explore other products to Mount Pleasant, the cruise industry had yet to be explored and in addition there was now an export market for beef, Mr Ferguson said.

The disappointing news for the farmers who historically have learned of price increases at this meeting was that although the price for mutton for the local market had been increased by five per cent as from this month, the price for beef and pigs would remain the same. Prices for animals for the export market are to also remain the same.

Although the Meat Company was predicted to make an operating loss of approximately £55,000 this year, no Government subsidy was required as there were funds in reserve from last year's profits. Mr Ferguson said.

The main causes for this was the Euro-crisis affecting the market, a lot of small new season lambs and too many yearling lambs below the minimum quality resulting in a loss of yield and having to downgrade cuts.

Mr Ferguson said he appreciated it had been a tough season for finishing animals but warned that in the forthcoming season below standard animals would not be paid for and anything below nine kilos would only be accepted by prior arrangement and the price paid would be relative to demand.

60 farms supplied 49,324 animals to the Meat Company this year of which 29,939 were lambs supplied by 39 farms. In 2003 just 2,953 lambs were produced by six farms.

While farmers this year earned a massive £1,074,000 for their animals, Stanley businesses and suppliers were also significant beneficiaries making £521,000. A further £474,000 was paid to staff (full time and seasonal) and £284,000 to Government. Turn to page 9 for news of RBA Expo

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

HAVING spent the past few months chuntering away to journalists about the utter fabulousness of the Falklands, our high percentage of returning students, healthy economy, excellent health and education system, and making many other cheerful and mind-numbingly repetitive statements, it's something of an anti-climax now that things have quietened down, and reality has started popping up in the form of rather less optimistically worded establishment policy papers.

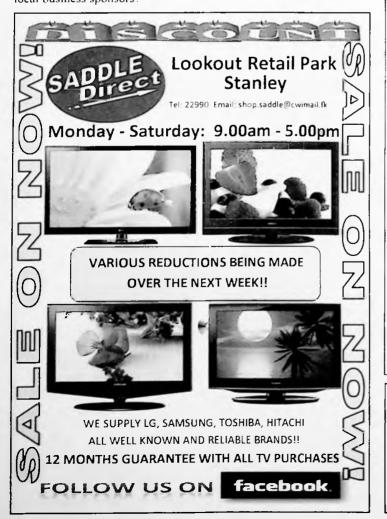

Because if, as we have been busily persuading the world press, the Falklands really is Utopia, then it seems neither the police, the hospital, nor the schools, struggling with recruitment problems, and increasing demands on their budgets, seem to be swallowing the spin.

Trawling through the various papers outlining the difficulties of persuading persons to perform for a pittance, along with comments from MLAs that a boost in one department's staff might be to the detriment of another's, it isn't difficult to see the conundrum from all sides. At the same time it did strike me as a little odd that if a major problem faced by FIG departments, and likely the private sector too, is in relation to human resources and recruitment, that the legislature did not consider a post relating to examinations and careers in the Education Department somewhere near the top of the list in the funding stakes.

The KEMH idea of opening up recruitment of nurses from countries other than the UK is a perfectly sensible one (and in fact it seems odd we've limited ourselves this long to recruiting from a country that can't fulfil it's own nursing needs). At the same time it seems logical to strike at the source of the problem, that is, the requirement to nudge our own young resources towards careers in the spheres where there are likely to be openings in the future.

Students of course should be free to take up further education in the areas that most suit their natural talents, but as someone in the far distant past who opted for at least one entirely unsuitable A level, I'm all for a dedicated individual in the school available to offer practical advice in terms of both academic and vocational training, as well as taking up the role of an examinations officer.

And if full funding for the post is truly impossible to procure from the FIG pot then perhaps a liaison between Human Resources, the Education Department and the Chamber of Commerce might succeed in accessing at least partial finance for the post from a combination of local business sponsors?

Answer to Argentine offer on airlinks and fishery

THE Falkland Islands Government last Thursday responded to a letter to the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) from the Argentine Government that offered discussions on airlinks to the Falklands and fisheries co-operation

Member of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly Mike Summers said: "Given that these issues are the responsibility of the Falkland Islands Government the FCO sought the advice of the Assembly. We responded to the FCO in a letter dated 6th June, and this has been forwarded to the Argentine Government under a cover of a letter from the FCO dated 7th June."

The letter from the Falklands' Government notes that the proposals set out in the original letter from the Argentine Ambassador Alicia Castro, "are made not within a context of amity and friendship towards the Falkland Islands people but against a backdrop of increasing hostility."

The letter outlines that back-drop including ongoing attempts to target the Falklands fishing industry through the harassment of vessels and the denial of port access to ships flying the Falklands flag, and also outlines the value of the Chilean LAN flight to and from the Falklands.

It continued: "A welcome first step would be for the Government of Argentina - if it is sincere about improving air links to the Islands - to rescind its unjustified and illegal ban on charter flights overflying Argentina which, since 2003 has impeded access for tourists, business travellers and other visitors. This would be the sort of confidence-building measure which would allow discussions of other proposals, both those from the Argentine Government and others which we might wish to table

On the subject of fishing the letter notes among other things: "We would welcome the resumption of scientific exchanges under the auspices of the South Atlantic Fisheries commission. It is a matter of profound regret that the Government of Argentina walked away from the SAFC."

The letter signed by the Hon Sharon Halford MLA concludes saying. "the Falkland Islands Government hopes these offers from Argentina herald a more positive and constructive approach to the Islands than we have experienced from them recently."

The Argentine Government acknowledged receipt of the letters but has not responded. Full text of the letters can be found on www.penguin-news.com

MOUNT Pleasant personnel, Falklands Conservation and volunteers pulled and planted tussac tillers along the south coast of Cape Pembroke on June 30. The group pulled the tillers at Hadassa Bay in the morning and then planted at Cape Pembroke in the afternoon. The reason for this latest conservation effort was to re-establish endemic plants that were disrupted during the clearance of mines in the Cape Pembroke area and also on land that has been denuded over time by burning or other erosion.

'A bully' Judge tells Briones

STANLEY man Claudio Augustin Lautaro Briones Sepulveda (50) was sentenced to a 240 hour community service order to be completed in a year and told he was, "a bully," in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Mr Briones pleaded guilty to causing racially aggravated intentional harassment, alarm or distress towards a police officer on June 8, when the case was adjourned for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court the police had been called to Mr Briones home on May 18, by his wife who wished to make a complaint about criminal damage to property. The complaint was later withdrawn.

Mr Briones was found to be intoxicated and after he enquired as to where one of police officers came from, became abusive calling him an "English pig" among other more profane terms.

He continued to be abusive when arrested and taken to the vehicle and spat towards the front of the vehicle once inside. At the station he refused to comply with custody procedure and continued his racial abuse in front of several other officers. Mrs Inglis listed several previous convictions which included disorderly behaviour, assault and common assault, one of which was subject to a conditional discharge.

Opting to legally represent himself, Mr Briones took the opportunity to read a letter from his employer telling of his good work ethics, which he described as, "the other part of me."

"If that was the only part of you, you would not be here now," said Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley, adding that he was more interested in the part of Mr Briones that ended up with, "beating your wife, being racially abusive to police and spitting at them."

Mr Gumsley said the pre-sentence report indicated that Mr Briones thought the charge, "ridiculous," although he had claimed not to remember anything about the incident, adding that it appeared to be part of Mr Brione's psyche that everything was everyone else's fault.

In sentencing Mr Gumsley said an aspect of Falklands life the community could be most proud of was that different nationalities, "get on and live harmoniously together." The court will ensure that continues, he added.

He told Mr Briones he was unable to face up to what he is, "a bully," saying that he found it extraordinary that someone who had attended university and taught at a school before coming to the Islands would behave in such a manner. He urged Mr Briones to consider that while he might work hard when sober, when drunk he was an, "unpleasant, violent bully."

Mr Gumsley requested a monthly report from the Welfare Department on Mr Briones' progress and ordered that he pay prosecution costs of £85.

Stop loans to Argentina

TWENTY-NINE British MPs have called for Britain to vote against Argentina receiving any more money from the World Bank.

The group signed an early day motion in Parliament that was put forward by Conservative MP for Romford, Andrew Rosindell, who had previously visited the Falklands.

The motion appealed for the Government to follow the example of America and vote against the World Bank lending any more money to Argentina.

The early day motion read: "That this House notes that despite repeated attacks on Britain and the right of Falkland Islanders to remain British, Argentina receives substantial loans from the World Bank.

"It is an organisation in which Britain is a major share-holder, and that the Government does not use its votes to oppose those loans; further notes that, as of March 2012, total outstanding loans to Argentina from the World Bank were $16.2 billion, of which Britain's share amounted to over 200 million.

"We welcome the decision by President Obama's administration in the US to adopt a policy of voting against any new loans to Argentina on account of its failure to respect its obligations to earlier lenders; and call on the Government to vote against any new World Bank loans to Argentina."

More staff or less hours for pharmacy

MEMBERS of the Health and Medical Services Committee yesterday approved the health department resubmit a request for an additional full-time permanent staff member for the Pharmacist/ Dispensary team on the basis that it can be, "cost-neutral and incorporated within the current year's budget."

A paper on the subject noted that should the post not be agreed, cost saving alternatives would need to be implemented. One of these would be to reduce the hours for the collection of prescriptions from 16.25 hours currently to a lower level of around 10 hours a week. The pharmacist would also reserve the right to close the pharmacy if it was felt that practicing would be unsafe to patients under General Pharmaceutical Council requirements.

Alternatively, to ensure the pharmacy could perform its core functions fully it would no longer sell over-the-counter drugs, however, this would result in around £10,000 of lost revenue. Repeat prescriptions would be available for collection after 72 hours rather than the 48 currently and repeat prescription orders over email and the telephone would be stopped for all Stanley residents.

Camp patients would be asked to order theirs' by fax or post. Developmental work with the wholesalers would also need to stop, although this would potentially mean a loss of £30,000 in projected savings per annum.

Overseas advertising for a current vacancy in the pharmacy Pharmacist will take place in July.

The hospital's new Anaesthetist is now in the Islands and in post.

Tax concession

MONEY received from oil company 'buy in partners' will not face capital gains tax for five years as a result of a concession passed by the Falkland Islands Government

The effect of present legislation means that any monies paid by a, 'buy in partner,' would be treated as a capital gain and taxed as such and could mean that a company could actually be bankrupt before the proceeds of extracted hydrocarbons started to come back into the company, explained MLA Gavin Short.

The concession, examined at ExCo last week, means the company would not have to pay the tax for five years or until monies were received from the sales of extracted hydrocarbons, whichever happens the soonest.

The Government said this was not waiving any taxes that were due but giving companies a period of time to have revenues coming in before capital gains tax was demanded.

Designation decisions planned

PROMPTED by comments made by Her Majesty's Coroner during a recent inquest, Executive Council have asked when there would be a paper before them on the designation of Camp roads.

Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek told Penguin News it was her understanding a paper would be put before ExCo in the next few months and anticipated it would put forward various options for designation, including the question of whether designation should be undertaken as an amendment to existing legislation, so that it could be implemented relatively quickly, or whether it should wait until next year for progress on the long running Bill.

The matter of designation also involved questions such as to what geographical extent the road traffic law should be extended into Camp (ie including settlements), and to what extent should the law be applied (ie with or without exceptions).

"Whilst some consideration has been given previously by Executive Council to these issues, no binding decisions were made, so I anticipate the paper which Members have asked for will need to re-examine all the options," said Miss Cheek.

Nurses needed

THE King Edward Memorial Hospital in Stanley is struggling to recruit nurses and as a result will be expanding advertising for nurses to countries other than the IIK

Family reasons and pay level were the primary reasons that applicants had not followed up initial requests for information packs, during the last recruitment round.

Care vouchers

BACKGROUND work has commenced on the examination of a childcare voucher scheme, confirmed the Director of Health and Medical Services yesterday. This issue is to be discussed with Members of Legislative Assembly on July 17 as part of larger day-long meeting with Directors.

Amendment

REFERENCE last week's story entitled 'Budget decision challenged' (page 5) it should be noted that there were in fact 39 new posts applied for throughout the FIG departments not just the Education Department. The Education Department actually applied for 13 new posts.

SAMA raffle

THE SAMA Wales 30th Anniversary Raffle first prize was once again won by Falkland Islanders. Mandy Ford and Cristal Smith will be the delighted recipients of the £300 between them.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

TRYING my hand at a few weeks of single parenting as well as juggling meetings and work etc (not to mention school holidays and now the dreaded lurgy) makes me even more appreciative of what single parents have to grapple with day after day and I have to say I really do admire them. Things certainly cannot be easy for single parents and indeed those in general who are at the bottom end of the pay scales. I do believe in some cases employers most certainly could pay better than they are, but with the individual contract system that many people are on they can all too easily get picked off. I am still hopeful that the minimum wage legislation can be enacted before us eight shuffle off, but it is going to be a tight run thing Minimum wage though, is exactly what it says on the box, the very minimum that a single person with no other responsibilities needs to get by on. Those with a child or children and indeed couples who are both on low pay and maybe renting are another issue that must be addressed and I am very much looking forward to see what comes from the work we requested at the time of the budget session.

I still very much want to see statutory sick and holiday pay as some people don't even get that plus also a definition as to how long someone can be casual or temporary. All these issues and more need addressing in amongst the myriad of other issues that will be bubbling away and I hope the next eight that come along have a strong social agenda.

I GUESS by the time this is printed (but probably not read) Farmers Week will be coming to an end. An outdated anachronism or an important opportunity for farmers to come together? Well. for what it's worth, I believe it is the second. Sitting on the abattoir oversight group as I do. I have nothing but real admiration for what people are doing in the camp, the improvements they are making and the hard graft that nearly all are putting in, not just with the abattoir in mind but also tourism etc. It speaks volumes for the Falklands spirit and determination of the population to build a stronger and even more wonderful country than we already have.

Windpower spreads across the Islands

ELECTRICITY generated from wind is spreading across the Islands as on the back of good wool prices Goose Green and Fitzroy prepare to be the next large settlements to have turbines, inverters and batteries installed.

Executive Council last week noted that £300,000 was to be allocated from Falkland Landholding's profits from the previous year for the purchase of the equipment for the two East Falkland farms

In October 2011 a system costing £110,000 was approved for the third FLH farm, North Arm, which is soon to be installed. FLH General Manager Owen Summers explained that the masts for the turbines had been constructed at North Arm and with the recent arrival of the inverters and batteries it was hoped the system would soon be up and running

The approved funding for Goose Green and Fitzroy was provisional and the equipment ordered would be dependant on how the system at North Arm performed, he said.

FLH made profits of £97,000 in 2009/10, £660,000 in 2010/11 and is on track to make a profit of not less than £500,000 in the current financial year.

Mr Summers said the profits of the last two financial years were excellent, but they should not be taken out of context as wool sales over the last two years have not only benefited from higher market prices but also currency, with the Falklands wool industry receiving excellent prices through the combination of the two.

However, he warned that three years ago FLH had received approximately £550K less for the same amount of wool

FLH both as a limited company and as a statutory corporation recorded losses on its accounts from the late 1990s until 2009/10 when the first profit in over ten years was recorded.

Give money back?

At the FLH Board meeting of April 26, 2012 the Acting Financial Secretary Nicola Granger noted that a reserve policy had never previously been set for FLH and because it had made a significant profit in 2010/11 and was on track for a similar profit this financial year, the Board should consider an appropriate reserve level.

Given the past subsidies from the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) and the profits now being made, consideration needed to be given to whether any funds should be returned to FIG, said

Mrs Granger.

Grenadier fishery

THE setting up of a Grenadier Fishery was approved at the most recent meeting of the Executive Council.

Assembly Member Gavin Short said it would initially be a licensed fishery to allow time to see how it works before it is brought into the ITQ system. He said there would be a permanent fishery observer on the vessel taking part in this fishery. "We wish to monitor closely how it goes, and also any by catch, especially that of Toothfish, which is a high value species that overlap the grenadier fishing ground in places," he added.

The fishery observer will be paid for by the company that holds the licence for the Grenadier fishery and as such will not be a financial burden on the

THE 2012 annual Variety Show had its usual surprises in store including a touch of the comic, not to mention the exhibitionist, along with a few musical numbers that got the fascinated audience's hands clapping

The children of the Infant and Junior School and Community School choirs were the first to display their talent, including an exclusive premier performance of the FICS 30th anniversary song.

Soon the crowd were chuckling along to the well prepared sketches, the highlights including FICS teachers insisting, "if you like it then you should put a

Host for the night was the irrepressible Geoff Pring, who worked hard to keep the show going between stage and costume changes. #### Politicising Olympics a mistake

FOREIGN and Commonwealth Office Minister of State Jeremy Browne has told Argentina that politicising the Olympics would be a mistake

Mr Browne recently visited the Islands as part of the Falklands 30 commemorations and learned first hand from the population about their way of life and aspirations for the future.

In an interview with the Financial Times, Mr Browne, warned Argentina against the politicisation of the London Olympics, set to begin on July 27.

The UK's government had previously expressed its fear Argentine athletes would use the games to call attention to the Falklands sovereignty cause.

"If the Argentines were minded to use the Olympics as a platform to try and make wider political points, or to sort of air, in an inappropriate way, their disagreements with Britain, I think that would be a mistake. I think it would be regrettable," he said.

In addition, he said he expected no political statements to be made during the Olympics, adding, "We are very much hoping that Argentina and everybody else enjoys the Olympics as the magnificent spectacle that it is."

Killing Mercusor

BRAZILIAN businessman Rubens Barbosa, head of the foreign trade council of the Sao Paolo Federation of businessmen said on Sunday that in the last six months, the Argentine presidency of the block had implemented measures that practically killed the Mercosur.

"Argentina will be responsible for the end of Mercosur," he predicted.

Mr Barbosa said he was not speaking on behalf of the Government but of the private sector, and restrictions had affected companies with Brazilian capital and Argentine productions. He said he was not surprised that Brazil was implementing measures against Argentine imports.

It was best for Mercosur to open the block to business, said Mr Barbosa.

FALKLANDS veteran Terry Bedoes on a break with Holidays for Heroes Jersey, over the liberation weekend, took the opportunity to make a request to lay a wreath at the Jersey Cenotaph on the anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands.

Terry told Penguin News: "This escalated into a multi media event with interviews on BBC Radio Jersey the day before and radio and TV Interviews on the day.

"I was also lucky to find three other Falklands veterans, one who was also with Holidays for Heroes and two more who live on the island.

"It was interesting learning about Jersey's liberation and also their relationship with the Falkland Islands post 1982."

Terry will visit the Islands with his wife in November along with other veterans on their Falklands 30 pilgrimage.

Asphalt road in stages

IT is very clear that many people feel strongly about having the Stanley to Mt Pleasant Road asphalted to a good standard such as the Mare Harbour Road (look at the very good condition that is still in after 25 years of use). If we are to progress and develop for the future this should be one of our primary improvements.

With the amount of traffic increasing steadily, the current unsurfaced road is only going to deteriorate more quickly than it does already, making it even more dangerous and vehicle damaging than it is now.

With respect to the guys who do their best to maintain it, clearly the task becomes more difficult all the time, not to mention considerably more expensive.

Various figures have been quoted for the cost of asphalting the road, approximately 30 million pounds very recently.

Most people also know it is nonsense to say this cannot be done in several phases. If a budget of 10 million per phase was allocated over a period of five years, as an example, then at least the road would be gradually improving and becoming safer rather than the reverse which is happening now.

respected, and as a little country we would like that also.

Have you not read all of the rubbish coming from your side lately? If I was an individual under all of that pressure and bullying I would have collapsed long ago. As a country, we stand together against our common enemy; we don't even trust Argentines who come and say they are our friends, unless of course we see what they have been doing over there, in your domain, to help us.

Having said that we don't hate all Argentines. We try to see the difference between people like yourself, who don't seem to understand our problem with your country but try to offer us the concession of recognising ours as a proper one, and all of the rest who keep claiming the Islands for themselves and denying the fact that we exist. At least we try to make that difference.

Embarrassed by dictator

I AM an Argentinian citizen living in the UK and I would like to share with you the letter I sent to Alicia Castro, Argentinian Ambassador in the UK, and also the letter I wrote to the Prime Minister Mr David Cameron regarding the Islands.

I sent the letter to 2,000 people in Argentina (including press, foreign companies, schools, hospitals, TV& radio), radio and press in Spain. Uruguay, Chile and the UK and also Argentinians living abroad (20 different countries).

I want to say sorry to you, Kelpers. I feel embarrassed to have a dictator as a President who is using the Islands just to cover up all the money she is stealing. Her feelings over the Islands are NOT the feelings of my nation, Argentina

Big hug and all the best Kelpers!

Letter to the British Prime Minister David Cameron

Dear Mr Prime Minister,

I am an Argentinian citizen living in the UK and I am writing to you regarding the incident at the launch of the Foreign Office's annual report on human rights last Wednesday.

Unfortunately, my Ambassador failed to adjust her behaviour befitting the environment and situation, lacking respect for Mr William Hague and the people at the conference. And I must say, I felt embarrassed as an Argentinian.

And I strongly believe the UK and Argentina can have a good relationship, and might be a matter of focusing on a different subject than the Islands.

Thank you for your time. Respectfully yours,

An Argentinian living in the UK

One side first

CAN I suggest that the Public Accounts Committee also ask MoD and contractors at MPA what their vehicle maintenance bills are because of the current road - as compared to costs on vehicle maintenance on a sealed road? They are part of the road users population as well.

Also ask MPA what is the social and 'quality of life' cost, that is, the number of people who do not/can not often get into Stanley because of the damage the road does to MoD vehicles - and the subsequent loss of business to Stanley retailers such as pubs and restaurants because of this?

Forget about oil 'ifs' - that road is our principle artery and connects approx 4,500 people together and 90 per cent plus of the Islands' internal domestic and business traffic goes along it.

All FIG needs to do is seal properly ONE side of it for now. That will allow at least 80 per cent plus of journey time each way to be made on a sealed surface. Other countries have done just that- and then sealed the other side when justifiable.

Perhaps also don't just rely on OTT UK/EU regulations spees. Chile builds good roads in the same climate; are they cheaper designers and suppliers?

The state of the 'track' is the fault of MLAs past as well as present; all have gone for short-term 'affordable' rather than looking instead at 'justifiable'.

Well done though to the folks for getting out now, when possible, to do what they can to repair it.

Big salute

THIS year's Big Salute radio auction raised a staggering £3,110 confirmed organiser BFBS Radio Station Manager Nigel Rennic.

The funds from the auction will benefit forces charities including Combat Stress, FAB, Veteran's Aid. BLESMA and Blind Veterans UK.

The auctions took place on Friday June 22 and Monday June 26 and the resulting funds, added to contributions over the year, will total £13,000.

If you would like to add your support to The Big Salute, check out http://www. bfbs.com/bigsalute/

March team gift to Falklands RBL

A CHEQUE for £355 has been presented to the Royal British Legion Falkland Islands by a small team of military chefs and drivers who marched from Mount Pleasant to Stanley carrying 10 kilos of kit in weight.

The 33.5 mile march was completed in 9 hours and 43 minutes.

The march team comprised Capt Moloney, organiser Sgt Stoncley, Lcpl Gurank, Pte Johns, SAC Ford, SAC Evans Pte Pun and Lcpl Kurank.

Wanted! Reports of wing-tagged Turkey Vultures

Falklands Conservation and Hawk Mountain Sancturay (Pennsylvania, USA), with the support of the Falkland Islands Government, wing-tagged 54 Turkey Vultures at the Eliza Cove trash dump in 2007 – 2010.

Since then, we have received numerous reports from Falkland Island residents regarding the whereabouts and activities of these birds. We have now decided to summarise those reports for publication.

Keith Bildstein, the Hawk Mountain scientist who initiated the survey, Brandon Breen, the graduate student who carried out much of the work on the species, and their associates in the US and at Falklands Conservation will start work on the write-up this autumn.

Keith will be in Stanley for several days in July and August.

If you have any information about the whereabouts of these marked birds and have not yet reported it to Falklands Conservation by telephone @ 22247, please do so as quickly as possible so that your important observations can be included in our study. Any and all reports, even if they are repeat observations on several days, are valuable to us.

Everyone reporting a sighting will be credited in our report and will receive a copy of the report.

Thanks in advance for your help Keith L. Bildstein (bildstein@hawkmtn.org)

Business-like start to Farmers Week

THE Rural Business Association launched Farmers Week 2012 with its popular local business Expo and big breakfast on Monday RBA Secretary Sarah Clement confirmed that a host of businesses attended including health representatives, the Department of Agriculture, the Education Department, Work Boat Services, the Museum, Jaytec, the Tourist Board and FIDC said, "We served over 126 breakfasts, so it was well attended and it was great the children attended."

Approximately 50 farmers travelled to Stanley for Farmers Week attending five days of meetings and presentations along with evening social events. Included in the presentations was an FIDC update and information about import substitution, while Lewis Clifton gave 'Reflections on a trade mission to Aberdeen and Shetland

- oil development'. The Department of Agriculture dominated Wednesday and Thursday with a variety of sessions and the week will end today with a talk by the Training Centre and DoA on the Agricultural Learning Centre, a three hour long question and answer session with Members of the Legislative Assembly, a Workboat Service update, a presentation on the Rural Development Strategy and an FCO Session.

The Training Centre's vision for the future of Beckside

AN EDUCATIONAL transformation for Beckside Farm was presented by the Training Centre at the EXPO on Monday. The vision is for the land to become a facility dedicated to training in agriculture, complete with polytunnels, chicken coops, shearing shed and even a cafe.

Apprentice Scheme Coordinator Marcus Morrison and Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday are presenting the concept in full to the farming community and general public today, Friday July 6.

Mr Morrison told Penguin News it was still in the concept stage: "We are doing market research and trying to gauge an interest.

"Its only a proposal, being put to farmers to see if they are interested and if they would like to support the idea. If they do then a full business case will be provided to FIG and FIDC."

Susan Whitley Memorial Exhibition

A STUNNING array of art and craft work created by the students was exhibited the Falkland Islands Community School and the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education over last weekend.

The show is held annually in memory of art teacher Sue Whitley who was killed during the Falklands War of 1982. This year's winner of the top prize, the Spinning Wheel Trophy, was Be-than Callaghan with her octagonal box with chessboard inlaid in the lid (see above), the Romeo Pauloni landscape prize was won by Amanda Hill-McGhie.

The Hilary Pauloni Textile Award for US was won by Katalina in Year 4, the Hilary Pauloni Textile Award for Camp by Talia in Year 2 and the Alice Keenleyside Art Award was won by Harriett in Year 6.

A KEY part of the Highways Asset Management plan started earlier this year was the categorisation of the roads network into A, B and C roads. The policy agreed upon by the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) in May was 'to maintain a network that is categorised and maintained to meet the reasonable demands of all highway users within the annual budget allocation provided'

Penguin News now provides a summary of the report and publishes the diagram of classified roads around the Falklands.

It was proposed that a Highways Roads as B Road: 10%. Percentage Asset Management Programme (HAMP) was started to develop a number of key items that would form the process for improved management. Those were:

1)Develop our goals and objectives Understand our inventory.

3)Assess the condition of our inven-

4) What are the aspiration demands 5)Identify options for improvement of the inventory 6)Budget the improvements 7)Develop a forward work pro-

8)Measurement of the inventory following improvement 9)Develop a strategy for dissemination of the HAMP A new working group was formed to develop the HAMP with oversight and guidance provided by

To help understand the inventory the highways network was split into classification categories. This breakdown would help develop the level of service for each category. the aspiration demands and forward looking programmes.

The categories can be viewed on the diagram published and relates to the following:

Class A Road: Primary Link Road between major population centres; Primary link road between major national assets; Greatest traffic use by volume and weight.

Class B Road: Link road between all Class A and C roads; Major Tourist destinations; Major supply route to the Abattoir

Class C Road: All Other roads This can be further identified as a percentage of the whole network as follows: Total length of Road East Falklands: 489. Total length of Road West Falklands: 373. Percentage East Roads as A Road: 14%. Percentage East Roads as B Road: 23%. Percentage East Roads as C Road: 20%. Percentage West Roads as A Road: 9%. Percentage West

West Roads as C Road: 24%.

The plan was that a working group would help define a baseline for aspirations which might be based on: safety, condition, performance and importance. Those are likely to be weighted to highlight the most appropriate condition for each asset class.

The report notes that any surveys and testing undertaken on the network needed to be accurately recorded, as well as the option analysis and works undertaken so that a thorough understanding of the network could be developed over time. This would be done through the use of a computerized asset management system or through a simple paper based system.

The report continued: 'Much more work is required to develop the Asset Management process and further budgeting will need to be developed as each of the steps in the HAMP is developed further with buy-in and understanding from all concerned.

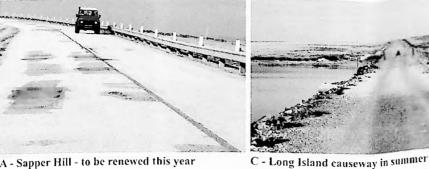

Recording the work undertaken, the cost and the time taken to complete the works would also help to refine and define future option estimating, budgeting and future work programmes.

Information would have to be disseminated to the public so that expectations would not be unrealistic.

In conclusion it is noted that a better definition for the policy of PWD Highways would make it clear to all that the whole network would not be funded to a high or even the same standard but would be targeted for improvement based on category, funding, aspiration demand and its current condition.

With better information available and 'forward looking programmes' the public and those making recommendations and taking decisions, including MLA's are likely to be much better informed for the future.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.
VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area 146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band

147.825 (Duplex 9.04)....Mount Ance repeater, covering the state of the Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
1.82 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 29th June 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator rose to AU$1,076 making it 699/kg, clean, its highest level since the beginning of the month. This is £702 in GBP. The last 2 weeks have seen the prices staying the same or rising slightly which has encouraged farmers.

European buying was a bit more encouraging this week and better prices were seen for the fine end of the market. A total of 33,243 bales are forecast for sale during the penultimate week of the season and there are no sales in New Zealand next week.

The increasing global economic issues and new supplies due to come to market in August does not create much positivity in terms of wool prices for the first part of next season.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

HAVE you noticed just how much quicker days, weeks and months seem to go by as your own age advances?

I find it hard to believe the shortest day (not to mention the longest night) has been and gone. We have always celebrated this because it was my grandparents wedding anniversary. I guess they knew how to do things in those days! They, sadly, are long gone, and now I know what the season is just by my plants, and these, at the moment, are once again the hellebores, they are truly delightful, known as 'Christmas roses simply because in Britain much effort goes in to ensuring they flower at that time. Even glass covers are sometimes being put on them to keep the dampness off and keep them looking at their best for the festive season.

Here, we have a six(ish) month difference in the seasons, and so they are coming into their own now, and their lovely white flowers, though sometimes flushed with a bit of pink, are really very pretty. They will soon be joined by other members of the same family which start flowering a little later but have a variety of colours. All will flower for many months once they get started.

The ground is still frustratingly cold and hard: it doesn't seem to affect the weeds in the least. though, in all fairness the rest of the plants are not minding the break either, most of them will. I hope, be building up reserves ready for spring. It always amazes me how even with quite a bit of snow on the ground, the area around a plant will clear quite quickly, proving that plants generate quite a bit of heat for themselves.

Meanwhile, we are being very careful not to step on the bits of lawn which are in good condition. It can be badly damaged as the grass is liable to be killed by being stepped on when it is frozen.

I've had a lot of fun going through the boxes of seeds in my little fridge, it's quite surprising how they build up every year. I'd like to think I'm going to sort them and throw some away but who am I kidding? Instead I've planted masses of different ones in trays outside simply because I could not bear to put them in the Seeds of various bulbs sitting in pots outside are popping up, as are many tree seeds and even some rhododendrons. I have never managed to get them past seedling stage but will persevere and hope for the best.

A sneaky bit of reversion taking place within a variegated hebe

Some more seeds of Hellebores are also germinating, these are supposed to have double flowers Seeds tend not to come true when they are from hybrids but it's nice to take a chance, who knows what might appear when they eventually flower.

I guess it pays to keep checking plants as on one of my wanders around the flower gardens yesterday I came across a variegated Hebe suffering from a spot of reversion; in fact there was a whole branch of pure green. Eve removed the offending part because left to itself the whole plant would revert to green and that beautiful shrub would be no more. Talking of Hebes though, I have one with pink flowers. It is not thought to be as hardy as the rest but. I must say, it seems to thrive in our country, so much so that it is still flowering now While wandering around 1 make mental plans for moving this plant or that one; it is only when they are at their best that I realise just how badly I placed them at the time, and in a few weeks should be able to move them. I also want to cut down on maintenance so will be popping in more shrubs and plants such as Hostas, Geraniums and so on. They quickly fill up spaces and, if they don't stop weeds, they at least hide them.

The greenhouses and tunnels require every bit of heat they can get, but they also need ventilation. They can really suffer from mildew and all sorts of other diseases. if they fail to get some Iresh air every day.

Talking of indoor plants, now is a good time to cut down indoor. pelargoniums; tidy them up by cutting down to about six inches. a change of the top inch or so of soil for new compost and they can be left alone to fill out again. The evelamens which are now flowering nicely on a cool window-sill. use quite a bit of water just now. They are best watered from the bottom to stop the corm rotting. I find it quite simple to do this by putting the whole pot in a suitably large container full of water and leaving them in there for 10 minutes

The grapes also need a spot of pruning now, the easiest way is to just lower the rods, trim back side shoots and laterals and then tie them back to the roof with string to enable even growth in the spring. If they are quite elderly it pays to remove any loose bark which might be harbouring pests.

Talking of tying, any conifers large or small might, at this time of year, benefit from being tied all round lightly as this will stop any large snow falls from breaking branches.

Ice plants add a dash of colour

Help us to make your Christmas holiday special

THE Stanley Sports Association (SSA) is in the planning stages of its 100th meeting this year, and is hoping to make it a bigger and better family event than ever.

The Annual General Meeting for the SSA will take place at 6pm on July 20 in the Chamber of Commerce building and the committee would like to encourage as many people to attend as possible.

The Christmas sports meeting has been a major social event in the Falklands calendar for more than a century and this year we want to mark the occasion with a meeting that embraces Falklands culture and social history.

T-shirts carrying a centenary logo are being designed and a centenary coin is in the process of being minted for sale and while we do not have the volume of horses enjoyed by spectators in the past with your help we can make it an event you and your family will remember.

As with many local associations there is a very small team of dedicated people that ensure your Christmas is a truly Falklands celebration. With three days of horse racing, gymkhana and foot events already on the programme we are looking for ideas to make it even more entertaining for the spectator and welcome fresh suggestions.

We have space and provide a fun outdoor environment to meet up with old friends, while making a few bets at the tote and enjoying a burger and a beer or two.

We are not asking that you give up three days to work at the race course, just for your feedback on previous meetings and how we can work to make this year more enjoyable for everyone.

If you would like a copy of the 2011 AGM meetings or would like to make suggestions by mail please contact the committee secretary Elaine Turner on email address fasthorses@cwimail.fk

CABLE and Wireless South Atlantic Ltd made a generous donation of £10,000 to the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association (FIOGA) on Wednesday.

The funds which bring the telecommunication company's donations up to £25,000 over the last three years were gratefully received by FIOGA Chairman Mike Summers who said previous donations had played a big part in helping sports compete overseas that do not have any Commonwealth assistance.

There was a lot of work to be done to ensure the Islands were well represented overseas in the next few years and the contribution made by Cable and Wireless was most appreciated said Mr Summers.

Chief Executive Justin McPhee said FIOGA as a sporting institute fitted in well with the Cable and Wireless corporate and social programme, adding that funding was also planned for future years.

He said it was his personal view that it was also a good way to raise the Falklands' profile overseas and particularly with the current political climate, helped to show who and what we are as a country.

Cable and Wireless also provides support by hosting the FIOGA website and links for coverage of overseas events, including the substantial football television coverage aired on FITV for the first time last year.

This had been hugely important during the Isle of Wight NatWest Island games, said Mr Summers, adding that he was hopeful it would be equally effective at the Bermuda games in 2013.

Falklands showcase

THE FI Museum and National trust is creating an opportunity for local photographers to showcase their work and the Falklands this summer with an exhibition during the tourist season.

To achieve this, the museum staff invites the submission of photos for the different categories on their Facebook page where those with the most 'likes' will be printed and displayed at the Museum.

"We want these photographs to show off our wonderful Islands and also our many talented photographers," said event organiser Andrea Barlow.

There will be five categories with each one running for a period of two weeks. Falklands Heritage is the first category, and people can begin to upload their images on Monday July 30.

If individuals are not on Facebook they can send or take their photos to the Museum and staff will upload them.

"Unfortunately there are no prizes but your photos will be viewed by thousands of people so be sure to like us on Facebook," said Mrs Barlow.

Rockhopper signs Premier in billion dollar farm-out

ROCKHOPPER Exploration ple has entered into a billion dollar conditional farm-out agreement with Premier Oil ple which will acquire 60 per cent of Rockhopper's interests in its North Falkland Basin licences.

The deal provides that Premier become the operator of the Sea Lion development, while Rockhopper will take the subsurface lead on exploration activities.

A report from Premier Oil ple confirms that it will:

 Pay an initial cash sum of $231 million recognising past costs incurred by Rockhopper Fund up to $48 million of

 Fund up to $48 million of Rockhopper's share of three exploration wells • Fund up to $722 million of Rockhopper's development expenditures, subject to approval of the field development plan.

In addition, Premier will make available a standby financing facility. If Rockhopper chooses to draw down on that facility, Premier will take an enhanced share of entitlement production and cash flows from the Sea Lion and related fields.

The enhanced share will continue until Premier has realised a 15 per cent post tax internal rate of return (IRR) on its investment.

Beyond that cash flows will be shared pro-rata to equity interests.

The proposed acquisition is expected to be completed in September after customary closing conditions, including the approval of the Falkland Islands Government.

Rockhopper ple has stated that their Board believes the transaction with Premier delivers on its key objectives.

These include:

• Rockhopper will be fully funded on its share of the Sea Lion development through the development carry and standby financing arrangement provided by Premier - with the option to secure third party financing in place of the standby financing arrangement, if Rockhopper so chooses.

· Rockhopper gains an aligned and experienced partner and operator in Premier with significant experience in analogous operating environments and developments utilising FPSOs.

• Rockhopper retains significant exposure to the upside in the North Falkland Basin through its residual 40 per cent interest.

Premier has dismissed political concerns in relation to Argentina: "I don't want to sound flippant, but the oil industry deals with this type of political risk, of border disputes, of disputed territorics all around the world, frankly," Premier's Finance Director Tony Durrant said.

Oil is expected to start pumping in the Falklands in mid-2017, said the partners.

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE Penguin News staff should probably create the impression that the first minutes of our working day fire into action with a hearty brain-storm of burning issues and potential news stories, in these darker mornings it's rather more likely to comprise a mutual grumble over how long it takes to de-ice a car, or alternatively this morning, an in depth analysis of precisely what Krysteen Ormond's Bampy meant by the lovely saying, 'dont mutter about the butter' (See Give us Two Minutes page 5).

While its actual meaning might have been rather more literal than our extended theories. I have convinced myself it compares to one of my own favourites, coined by writer Shirley Conran 'life's too short to stuff' a mushroom', or, don't waste valuable time on petty things.

Still, much as I agree with Ms Conran's advice the reality is that deep down most of us far prefer the petty stuff; after all it's a whole lot easier to understand, gives us the impression of having a degree of control and is most often something upon which we can confidently offer an opinion. And this could go a long way to explaining why the subject of time change has created more discussion over past months than any other issue since the great 'dog excrement on Surf Bay' debate of 1996. Cards on the table, personally I don't give a stuff about the time

Cards on the table, personally 1 don't give a stuff about the time change, and am greatly relieved that the issue seems to have been settled, at the same time, the recent obsession with the subject does support the argument that if we are confident we have the facts, we will far more readily debate the subject. In turn, without available facts a more natural inclination is to speculate wildly, or ignore entirely; neither action particularly helpful to either the public or even the government.

So with that said, why were we only this week presented with an ExCo paper on the vital issue of improvement of the highways network, that was apparently penned in April? Not the best example of dissemination of information, and so who could blame the public should they speculate on why it has taken so long to make it public-friendly, and in turn, what was left out to make it so?

FIH Chair David Hudd is so confident in the future of the Falklands in terms of hydrocarbon discoveries he's looking at options for a £10 million investment. The company's undertaken a bit of research right? I mean you would before flashing that kind of cash. So how do we equate that kind of long term approach with the palpable fear of commitment emanating from some parts of Gilbert House?

You're confusing the kids guys.

Enduring appreciation says Scottish Minister

SCOTTISH Parliament Minister for Housing and Transport, and Falklands War veteran Keith Brown, who visited the Islands during liberation week, told Penguin News this week: "One striking aspect of this visit was the enduring appreciation of Falkland Islanders."

He said. "At various commemorative events, individuals would sidle up to veterans and say, 'thank you for coming, and especially, thank you for what you did 30 years ago'.

"In turn I would like to thank the people and the Government of the Falkland Islands for their warm hospitality."

Mr Brown said it was interesting to note the description by one newspaper in the UK that the visit was an 'enjoyable five day jolly' "I don't believe that any of the participants saw it that way. Two days were taken up by the 18 hour flights both there and back. Immediately upon landing we were driven to Fitzroy to commemorate the Welsh Guards, merchant seamen, medical staff and engineers who perished there during that awful attack, 30 years ago. Over the next two days, visits to battlefields like Two Sisters, to San Carlos Bay (by planes taking the same flight path as the Argentine Mirage and Super Etendard aircraft, that turned that beautiful Bay into 'Bomb Alley'), and the moving (albeit freezing) 'Liberation Day' commemorative event, all made a poignant visit anything but jolly

Mr Brown described how during the reception to mark Falklands 30, he slipped away with Islander, Mike Rendell (former SBS) who offered to take him to the site of the tragic 'blue on blue incident where four of his colleagues in 45 Commando's Mortar Troop, were killed. "These included married father, Sgt Bob Leeming, young corporals in their twenties, Andy Uren and Pete Fitton, and 20 year old Marine Keith Phillips. Having been a 20 year old Marine with Mortar Troop and called Keith, I contemplated the seemingly random basis upon which fate decided who falls and who does not. I quietly toasted their memories along with Mike in the open ground between Mount Kent and Two Sisters."

Mr Brown said that while visiting the site on Two Sisters where, on the night of June 11, 1982, he had tried to sleep, in freezing conditions, "after successfully having re-taken what now appears to me to be a virtually impregnable peak, I was asked by a BBC journalist if I thought the efforts of all concerned, and the death and injury of hundreds of individuals, were 'worth it'."

He said he tried to express as best he could, why he thought that it was without question 'worth it'. "However, this was done much more cloquently than I could manage when, on the way back to Stanley the car radio informed us that the Falkland Islands Government had decided to have a referendum, through which the Islanders could freely express their decision on how the Islands should manage their future.

"In 1982 the invasion was controversial, as were the alleged actions and inaction of previous governments in not making sufficiently clear to the Argentinians that any aggressive action would be wholeheartedly opposed. However, the right of people to take the decisions on their future themselves was and should, in my view, remain paramount."

He said the prospect of the Islanders exercising their democratic right to determine their own future is, "at least to my mind, the prefect expression of the legacy won for them by the likes of Marine Keith Phīllips, who died on June 10, 1982, and the veteran I met almost exactly 30 years to the day, who is still fighting his own battles on a daily basis."

Heartfelt thanks from Chilean village

THE Chilean village of Lolol, in the Colchagua region, has sent its heartfelt thanks, in the form of a plague, to the people of the Falklands and the Chilean Community in the Islands for their very generous support following the devastation of buildings in the area as a result of the earthquake in 2010.

Falklands resident and Chilean born Celia Short, who organised the raising of a massive £26,600.19 shortly after the February 27 earthquake, told Penguin News that during a trip to Chile to visit her family she was taken on a surprise visit to Lolol.

Mrs Short had in fact earlier been invited to visit the village. and FIG had offered to pay, but she explained she preferred not to accept funding for the flight, "it was never the idea to take money from the government for that. However, much later, having become concerned about rumours that the LAN flight might be withdrawn as a result of Argentine political pressure, she decided to fund a private trip to see her sister and other family members

During the visit her sister suggested they take a journey to the Santa Cruz area. On arrival she took a phone call from the Alcalde of Lolol, Marco Antonio Marin Rodriguez, and discovered the trip had been pre-planned by the Alacalde and her sister, as a surprise, so that she would have the opportunity to view the buildings repaired or rebuilt as a result of money sent from the Falklands.

A government vehicle was sent to Santa Cruz and one hour later she found herself the guest of the Alacalde: "He was so happy to see me he couldn't thank us enough for all of the money sent so delighted and happy."

Mrs Short had initially written to a number of towns in Chile in order to research a specific place in most need of the funds; eventually with help from her sister who works for the Chilean Air Force the village of Lolol was decided upon. The village is situated in a very rural area and as a result of the disaster most residents were devoid of basic conditions.

She explained that when the appeal was launched in the Falklands it was a very touching time for her. Companies in the Islands gave thousands of pounds, "and sometimes pensioners would come and give £20 it was so kind and generous, and one school teacher gave £1000, but whether it was £20 or £2 it was all so kind.

Mrs Short is now looking into a place where the plaque might hang, "where the Falkland Islands people can get to see it." however, she is still uncertain where that should be, "we don't really have a public place where things like that can go." She said she would be open to suggestions with regard to a suitable venue.

Lolol spans an area of 596.9 km2 (230 sq mi) and has just over 6,000 inhabitants.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I AM not a creature that enjoys public appearances, not because of the public, it's just that I have never got used to being in front of people. That said. I have recently been in front of two diverse groups of people and thoroughly enjoyed the experience. The first was the three hour session with the farmers. What a wonderful experience. Far from being confrontational I found there was a very lively discussion and exchange of views and although we may not be able to see eve to eye on everything or make all wishes come to fruition (immediately) I wandered away from the session with some things to mull over, in the positive sense.

THE other group was those doing their transitional week before leaving the Community School and entering the big wide world (I can remember that moment very well. Exciting but scary as you were leaving all that had been familiar and were stepping into a whole new world). Mike and I wandered down to talk about Government, self determination and anything else that might crop up. Far from being a dry session where a couple of grey haired old fogies waffled on and on to a group who would probably rather have been doing double trigonometry, we actually had quite an interesting and engaging session and it was a pity (or maybe a blessing for us) that it only went on for an hour. The group really started to fully engage towards the end, and another half an hour might well have found Mike and I getting a hot time. I am not complaining at all, because this is what I like in youngsters. They all have an important part to play in our future and my dream to see Falkland Islanders in all jobs from the CE down before I am carted off down east in my wooden overcoat. Whether you go away and study or stay here and enter the work force is not important. We need each and every one of you and every one of you will, in some way make a great contribution to the future of our wonderful country. Just remember, a ditch digger is just as valuable (maybe even more so) than an MLA. YOU are the future.

MERCIFULLY. Jan will be back in charge of the column as from next week and I am extremely happy to go back to being a reader rather than the writer.

Iconic Vulcan opens show

THE Famborough International Airshow opened on Monday with a joint flypast of the Red Arrows and the world's last airworthy Avro Vulcan bomber XH558 commemorating the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War.

A relic of the Cold War, the historic aircraft was the first of its kind to be delivered to the RAF. in July 1960, took part in the historic Black Buck bombing raid on Stanley Airport in 1982 and was the last Vulcan to leave RAF service in 1993

Now, the bomber named 'The Spirit of Great Britain' is a favourite with aviation enthusiasts everywhere and is the result of the work of a dedicated team determined to keep her in the air.

The engineering staff of the Operating Company worked to return the Vulcan to flight, with the first test flight taking place on October 18, 2007

On August 1, 2006 it was feared the project was in danger of being abandoned due to lack of finance. But the target of raising the remaining £1.2m was achieved 30 days later, thanks to a high-profile publicity campaign orchestrated by the supporters club, Vulcan to the Sky Club.

Time had almost run out for XH558 when Sir Jack Hayward, a British philanthropist, donated £500,000, which topped up the £860,000 already raised by Vulcan to the Sky Club and friends.

Sir Jack Hayward was also a benefactor of the Falklands soon after the War when he donated funds towards the restoration of the hospital

The funds were used for building the sheltered accommodation on Thatcher Drive which is named in his honour.

Roads policy revised to meet reasonable demands

THE policy for PWD Highways has been revised to read: To maintain a network that is categorised and maintained to meet the reasonable demands of all highway users within the annual budget allocation provided.

The policy for Highways had formerly been: To maintain and improve roads within the funding allowed.

Providing information to Executive Council a paper stated that the former policy had not provided any defined goals and objectives over the long term by which the Highway network could be maintained and improved with targeted funding. "It also does not define the network by usage or demand that can be reasonably met, which therefore implies that the whole network should function at the same standard Given the variable nature of build and the uneven usage demands on the network it would be, and is, unrealistic for the Falkland Islands Government to provide the necessary funding to achieve this.

The paper said it was likely the current network of roads constructed by FIG was highway maintainable at public expense under the provisions of the Highways Act 1980 (applicable in the Falklands) and under which the Government was under a duty to maintain the highway. See below

Roads go public

AN April Executive Council paper with the purpose of providing new direction for the management, maintenance and improvement of the highways network outside of Stanley compiled by Director of Public Works and the Roads Engineer has now been made public.

Members opted not to approve the resurfacing of the entire MPA road due to a lack of funds, but did approve the removal of the existing surface at Sapper Hill and replacement of asphalt during the 2012/13 season.

Surfacing the entire MPA road was a major undertaking and a recent increase in the price of Bitumen had added to the uncertainty of costs, it was stated in the paper.

Bitumen had increased from £750 per tonne to £1,280 per tonne and further research suggested this may worsen as the market trend for the road sealing product was upwards. The net effect of this increase was an additional cost of approximately £94,000 per kilometre and shifted the total estimate from approximately £29.5 million to £34 million.

An offer from Colas had indicated that if committed to, they would hold the price for two years if it were done over a two year period, given the resource issues there would be for PWD to produce the aggregate which equated to a full years production. This was clearly impractical, it was noted in the paper.

"Balancing this though is the stark fact that if the project were committed to with Colas, there would be no going back other than by negotiated settlement if there was a reversal of fortunes. There would also be need for additional staff to be engaged – a contracts manager and a technician for the period of the project to ensure the works were undertaken to specification."

The paper stated that at some stage without further significant investment, sections of road would deteriorate to such an extent that they would be dangerous for road users, but as a last resort it was possible to close a road, although this may require legislation.

To read the full paper go to www.falklands.gov.fk and access paper 39/12 in the public ExCo papers section or call in at Gilbert House for a hard copy.

The Highways Act in the Falklands

APART from sections 131 and 137, all of the Highways Act 1980 applies to the Falklands, placing a duty on the Government as the highways authority to maintain, publicly maintainable roads, although there have been necessary modifications to make it applicable in the circumstances of the Falklands.

Section 36 of the Act makes provision for highways to be maintainable at public expense, and Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek confirmed that essentially this means most of the roads in the Falkland Islands, on the basis they were built by FIG as the highways authority.

A highways authority does

A highways authority does however have a special defence incorporated within the Act in relation to a claim for damage resulting from a failure to maintain a highway.

Miss Check said the defence is that it is for the authority to prove that it had taken, "such care as in all the circumstances was reasonably required to secure that the part of the highway to which the claim relates was not dangerous for traffic."

So, in the first instance, this provision introduces an element of reasonableness, which means that the duty to maintain the highway is not absolute.

The section (58) also goes on to specify the following areas the court must have regard to when considering whether the highways authority can rely on the defence:
(a) the character of the highway, and the traffic which was reasonably to be expected to use it:

(b) the standard of maintenance appropriate for a highway of that character used by such traffic; (c) the state of repair which a reasonable person would have expected to find the highway;

(d) whether the highway authority knew, or could reasonably have been expected to know, the condition of the part of the highway to which the [claim] relates was likely to cause danger to users of the highway;

(e) where the highway authority could not reasonably have been expected to repair that part of the highway before the cause of action arose, what warning notices of its condition had been displayed.

Exactly what the duty to maintain amounts to would depend on a number of factors in the circumstances of the particular case, Miss Cheek told Penguin News.

As an example, she said that while a pot hole on a UK motorway which the highway authority had been aware of for some time might be found to be in breach of a duty to maintain the highway, a similar sized pot hole on a different road might not be found to be in breach of the duty to maintain even if the highway authority had been aware of it for some considerable time, eg because it was a minor road, or perhaps because there were signs to warn of the likelihood of uneven road surface.

Behind the scenes with Falkland Islands legal eagles

granted a behind the scenes look at Legal Services in order to uncover the roles of the Crown and the prosecution function.

Starting at the top with the Attorney General Mark Lewis, whose directorate is split between Regulatory Services and Legal Services. Mr Lewis has overall responsibility for everything and gives advice to the Chief Executive, the Governor and Members of Legislative Assembly (MLAs) as necessary:

Principal Crown Counsel Rosalind Cheek has responsibility for the management of Legal Services and also works on South Georgia and fishery legal matters as well as drafting, query control and deputising for Mr Lewis as needed.

Crown Counsel Allison Carter works primarily on land matters and contracts, she also sits in an advisory capacity on the Planning and Building Committee and the Lands Committee undertaking the practical side of things by drafting documents based on decisions

Also working within the Legal services remit is Legislative Drafter Ronnie Maclennan Baird and Registrar General Beth Reid.

All staff work hard and flexibly to keep the department running smoothly and systemati-cally reviewing their peers files. However PA and Admin' Officer Barbara Steen has been dedicated to her post, that has included publishing Gazettes for four Attorney Generals and two office relocations. "The biggest change has been email, we'd type up everything dictated on tapes and be at it for weeks. Everything's faster now," she said.

As well as delivering legal advice, the team also get involved in wider corporate matters. For example, Miss Cheek said: "I'm working on presenting an information paper back to ExCo as part of the Review of the Review of FIG to examine the decision processes and dissemination of

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis focuses on criminal law

and explained that prosecutions in the Falkland Islands follow the standards of the Crown Prosecution Service in the United Kingdom: "It offers the best practice to guide sensible prosecution decisions," she said

Human rights are fundamental to all of their decisions; Section 6 of the Constitution is integral to the whole prosecution process: "It's not the decision of victims to prosecute or not, but we always take account of their views," said

Mrs Inglis.

The route to prosecution has three steps: Does it pass the evidential test? Is it in the public interest to prosecute? If yes, is it appropriate to offer them a citeable caution instead? The third would not be considered in a more serious case but cautions are preferred in cases of minor offences and offending children: "We do our upmost to keep them out of

All crimes are investigated by the police initially. Mrs Inglis explained: "If they come to the conclusion that it's clearly not criminal or there isn't any evidence we won't hear anything about it.

Senior Crown Counsel's time is spent 40 per cent on criminal prosecution. Legal Services as a whole spend 13 per cent of their time assisting the police: "Sometimes in complex matters they may ask for our advice early on; equally we can know nothing about it until the police file lands on our desk.

Although a lot of the principles of English law are applicable in the Falklands, in some cases the Islands' has its own area of law, such as the Road Traffic Ordi-

"A lot of the latest sentencing legislation doesn't apply down here, not because we don't think it's a good idea but because it's for MLAs to set the legislative priorities.

The pace of UK legislation is so fast drafters in the Falklands cannot keep up, but Mrs Inglis reassured that this did not mean a person could not be prosecuted, just that they would be dealt with under older legislation.

Earlier this year the law on time limits for the commencement of prosecution was amended to rectify the issue identified in the Mac-Donald case, and there is now no time limit for any sexual offence. regardless of the victim's age.

It just didn't occur to the English barristers that there were any time limits because there never have been any in England and Wales, except for minor offences, so that's how it came to be over-looked." Mrs Inglis said.

In addition, she said the Attorney General would be looking at time limits generally and reporting on them to ExCo later in the year.

She explained that the antiquated system of researching in a library of legislation and law drafted in Gazettes dating to the early 1900's was very time consuming and the pool of information was ever-growing. "You can see it in the books that the law between 1915 and 1950 roughly doubled in size, then through 1950 and 2000 it multiplied by a factor of about six and it just keeps getting faster and faster in the UK and it's just the pressure on resources of trying to keep up with that," said Mrs Inglis.

Approaching the task of digitising the wealth of information is Rosalind Cheek who realised the need for a comprehensive compilation of the legislation and secured funding from ExCo to address the issue: "Funding was provided for the appointment of a consultant to suggest the best way forward," said Miss Cheek

Publication of a consolidation of the laws is problematic. The department has to look how best to publish the laws, not as they are set out in the Gazette, but also looking at UK laws and how they apply. "so we can know to what extent we rely on English law."

They hope to start publishing next year, but admit it will be an ongoing project that will not be back dated fully for several years.

Road worthy viewed as a joke

I HAVE read with interest the comments from various sources as to the black topping of the roads. As a contractor at MPA and managing a fleet of vehicles, I wholeheartedly agree with Tim Miller, Tony Smith and the editors' comments on the roads. I have issued instructions to reduce the trips to absolutely essential travel only and this obviously has a detrimental effect on trade with local business.

More importantly for us is the safety factor, it is undoubtedly very dangerous to travel the road in its present state, and even more so during adverse weather conditions. I will not repeat the criticism of past letters I'm sure we are all aware of the problems, but would like to share an observation.

Before I came to the Falklands three years ago, I spent a week on Ascension Island. On the very first evening during a social function it was observed to me that the road from MPA to Stanley was a, "nightmare," only worthy of a, "third world country," and I should avoid travelling into Stanley, this view was shared by the majority. This gave me a very poor first impression of the Falklands. The important fact is that the road system here is seen as a joke, and therefore reflects badly on, and does not truly represent, the Falkland Islands and its people.

I sincerely hope that a permanent solution is found to improve the infrastructure and reputation of the Falkland Islands.

Feeling like the invisible man

HAVING first met Richard Fogerty in 1971 on the RMS Darwin when he was a slim young lad heading back to the West Falklands for a second stint of Camp teaching and I was heading to Darwin Boarding School for the first time, I would like to add my congratulations to those he has already received, and perhaps my commiserations on his redundancy.

Some elements of Teslyn Barkman's article in a recent Penguin News left me feeling like the invisible man however.

I am sure Phylis Rendell will not mind me pointing out that I was Superindendent of Education both during the Falklands War and for two difficult years of rebuilding after it ended.

Two of the things that I am proud of from that time are persuading government to allow Richard Fogerty to go away to Sussex to become a fully qualified teacher and setting up the first Camp Education radio network, with much technical help from Michael Smallwood.

Before I left the post in 1984 it had been one of my objectives to make sure that every one of the many more children then in Camp could have daily contact with a qualified teacher. I am proud to say that this was achieved and though Michael may have at one time converted some bit of Argentine kit for use as a repeater, the radios used for the childrens' lessons were not left-over from military use, but brand new two metre sets: Yaesus, I think, Tony Jaffray would know because I remember unloading them with him from off a lorry at the back of Stanley House.

(I hasten to add that they were purchased and not 'fallen off the back of a lorry') ln those days being head of a government department was sometimes very much a 'hands on' business.

THE Training Centre would like to clarify, with reference to last week's article on the Farmers Week EXPO, that its idea of using Beckside Farm as a possible site for an Agricultural Learning Centre/College for the Islands was merely a long-term vision for the future and was in no way set in stone. We appreciate that this site is not available in the immediate future and will be looking at alternative sites as we discuss the concept of an Agricultural Learning Centre/College with key stakeholders over the next few months.

15% increase for tourism

TOURIST arrivals to the Falkland Islands are expected to increase by nearly 15 per cent in 2012 according to the latest Tourist Board 'Falklands' Forecast'. This includes a significant 28.8 per cent mercase in the number of leisure visitors mainly driven by the 30th Anniversary of the war. In total, 7,635 overnight tourist are expected to visit the Islands in 2012, spending over £4.8 million.

The forecast says cruise passenger arrivals are likely to remain unchanged in the 2012/13 season, totalling around 35,000 day visitors. However, the sector is highly vulnerable to the weather, with almost 10,000 passenger arrivals lost in the 2011/12 season due to eruise cancellations.

Domestic tourism is forecast to grow in 2012, albeit at a moderate rate of 3.5 per cent and will generate 14,300 trips and £1.25 million in expenditure.

Overall, visitor arrivals in 2012 by inbound overnight tourists, cruise passengers and domestic tourists are expected to total over 57,000 spending over £7.3 million

Looking at 2012, compared with the same period in 2011, there was a 16.7 per cent increase in tourist arrivals in January to March of 2012. Arrivals in January 2012 were down by just over 10 per cent compared to 2011, however February was up by 14.5 per cent and March up by a huge 66 per cent. This was mainly boosted by large increases in leisure visitors (up 222 per cent) and business tourists (up 95 per cent). During this period 2,812 tourists (overnight visitors) travelled to the Falklands, compared to 2,409 in 2011 (up 16 per cent).

Leisure tourist arrivals grew by 28.8 per cent in the first quarter of 2012 (compared to 2011) to 783 arrivals. There was also a considerable increase in business tourists (up 51.1 per cent). However there was little change in visiting friends and relatives and transit arrivals.

Interestingly, while tourist arrivals from the UK grew marginally in early 2012 compared to the same period in 2011, the surprise increase was the rise in the number of arrivals from 'other' countries, mainly driven by arrivals from Argentina (up 266 per cent) from 64 in early 2011 compared to 234 in early 2012.

There was a decline in tourist arrivals on the airbridge in the first quarter of 2012 (compared to 2011) however, there was considerable growth in arrivals on Lan and other air routes (mainly the fortnightly oil flight). There was a significant increase in arrivals by sea.

Strap-fern Grammitis poeppigiana

Yellow Lady's Slipper Calceolaria biflora

Searching for rare plants

IN recent years there has been a move to locate the rarer native plants of the Falklands and accurately position their location with the aid of Global Positioning System (GPS) which gives a position accurate to within a few feet, some of these plants have not been seen for nearly a hundred years and then only recorded as being in a ten kilometre square or a farm, settlement or camp.

Two of these plants have been relocated in the last two years; Comb Fern Schizaea fistulosa, after a 190 year gap and Magellanic Saxifrage Saxifraga magellanica, 100 years from when it was last seen.

However, there are still a few species to be relocated from historical records such as Fuegian Whitlowgrass Draba magellanica last recorded in 1914 and Skullcap Scutellaria nummulariifolia last recorded in 1916.

In the summer I undertook a four day survey on Pebble Island for two plant species which are also considered very rare. The first, Strap-fern Grammitis poeppigiana of which there was a record in the Marble mountain area on Pebble from about 30 years ago. This is a very small fern (leaves approx one and a half inches long) and grows in shady moist areas in rock crevices generally at higher altitudes in inland rock overhangs. It has been found on both East and West Falklands but only from four known sites.

The search of an area of what I considered to be suitable habitat for this plant proved to be unsuccessful, but there was consolation in being able to find and record the presence of the now endemic Lady's Slipper Calceolaria fother-gillii and the rarely seen Antarctic Hawkweed Hieracium antarctium.

The other plant I was looking for on Pebble was the Yellow Lady's Slipper Calceolaria biflora. This was from a more recent record possibly ten years ago and with a more precise location. The only other record in the Falklands is from 1909/1911 in the Roy Cove area. A search of the coastal area to the north of Pebble Island settlement resulted in no plants found, and not having seen this plant in the wild it was difficult to know what its preferred habitat would be. I have the same species in cultivation in the garden and it seems to germinate easily and have an extended flowering

It is possible that as the summer was very dry, plants didn't flourish or are not tolerant to grazing as this area is mainly made up of coastal greens. I did widen the survey to the east of the island, still to no avail, but was rewarded with a find of Gillie's Dandelion Taraxaum gilliesii which is a native Dandelion.

Yellow Lady's Slipper should not be confused with Lady's Slipper Calceolaria fothergillii which most people would be familiar with and on occasion does produce a yellow form (an all yellow flower head as apposed to the normal yellow and red), plus C tothergillii only has a single flower head on the stem and C biflora has two or more flower heads on a stem and has a more bulbous shape to the flower with minute red speckles on the inner throat.

I wish to express my thanks to Arina and Raymond for all their help and to Allan and Jacqui on Pebble, plus the Environmental Studies Budget for making this survey possible.

Farmers week fun

'WE'RE all in this together' was the theme of a visits and activities Camp Education get together in Farmers Week

A record 13 children were involved with their settlement teachers, travelling teachers and telephone teacher.

The children took part in PE activities, both in the swimming pool with Abbie Heathman helping out, and with the Falkland Islands Community School PE teacher Ruth Kemp. They also had an art session with FICS art teacher Layla Salt, and produced some beautiful penguins.

All the children went to Stanley House for lunch over the week to introduce them to the idea of the hostel and how and where Camp children live when they come to Stanley. They also visited the West Store cafe and the Seaman's Mission.

Introducing them to other aspects of town life that they hear about, but do not normally get to experience, they also visited the Veterinary and Agriculture Department, the radio and TV stations and had health checks with the dentist and other professionals from the hospital.

Richard Hines kindly showed the children around the Cathedral, where they drew some features of the building. There was even time to have a look around the 1982 exhibition in St Mary's Hall.

The last day of the week was spent in classes in the IJS with their peers.

Staff and pupils told Penguin News they wished to extend, "a huge thank you to everyone who helped, showed the students around, and in every way made it a superb week of learning and fun." The staff also wished to say well done to all of the children for superb behaviour, and enthusiasm.

FIDF rack up the medals at Bisley Ranges

Major Peter Biggs reports on the performance of the FIDF at the Central Skill at Arms Meeting in Surrey

ON the final day of the Territorial Army (TA) Operational Shooting Competition a shoot was held to establish the top shot in the TA. This event, known as the TA 50 gives all the shooters who achieved a high enough score to qualify, a chance to add to their existing scores and to win the coveted Queen's Medal.

Three members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) team qualified to take part in the shoot and at the end of the day Dustin Gilson-Clarke was in 43rd position. Derek Clarke was in joint 25th place and Daniel Biggs was in 21st place. All the TA 50 contestants lined up on the firing point and were awarded their TA50 bars. The winner of the Queen's Medal was then carried off the range by his team mates, to the accompaniment of a band and followed by all the contestants.

Prize-giving followed, with General Parker, Commander of Land Forces, presenting the prizes. The FIDF were called up first to receive the prize and medals for winning the falling plate competition. Derek being the highest scoring officer in the TA 50 preliminary shoot and the whole FIDF team were called forward to receive a trophy and medals for winning the 51st Highland Volunteers Quaich (moving target) event. Silver and bronze medals were not awarded at the prize giving due to time constraints, however the exception was the Alexander Trophy (international match) in which the British TA received gold, the Canadian Reserve forces Silver, and FIDE Bronze. Samantha Brownlee qualified as the second highest scoring female competitor in the TA preninary shoot.

Following the prize-giving the team immediately began preparation for the Regular Army Rifle Association (ARA) competition, although unfortunately some of the matches had already taken place because of the overlap in the TA and ARA events. The FIDF are allowed to take part in the ARA matches on an 'honours only' basis. The following day saw a very Clarke received a cup and medal for early start on the ranges and some new matches the FIDF team had not seen before. One of these, called the Forward Operating Base (FOB) shoot, was designed to replicate the reinforcement and defence of a forward operating base that was under attack.

The first fire team, consisting of Andrew Brownlee, Daniel Biggs, Dustin Gilson-Clarke and Zoran Zuvic went forward (receiving quick battle orders, running through trees and undergrowth, occupying a building and engaging a series of moving and static targets).

They were told they had scored the highest so far on the event, although they had missed one target. The second fire team, consisting of Derek Clarke, Kyle Biggs, Sam Brownlee and Dion Betts then went forward. They pushed the previous FIDF fire team off first spot, hitting all the targets.

This great effort in a shoot in which neither of the teams had seen before gave them 1st and 2nd place (Honours only) in the ARA International Competition. The FIDF team achieved good results throughout the ARA competition but because of the overlap between events they were not able to compete in some of the team events. Daniel and Kyle Biggs took part in the Gun Match (light machine gun competition) and Daniel took top score in the international part of the event, for honours only.

Because of range lane constraints the team were unable to take part in the final ARA Queen's 100 event, instead taking a rest day. The following day saw 24 teams assembling on the Century Range at Bisley for the Methuen Čup, a service rifle event open to international teams and traditionally used by military units for teams of their best shots (six man teams) to compete for the massive Methuen Cup.

The FIDF Methuen Team consisted of Captains Derek Clarke and Andrew Brownlee, Cpls Dustin Gilson-Clarke, Daniel Biggs and Zoran Zuvic, and Pte Kyle Biggs. Sam Brownlee and Dion Betts kindly supported the team by taking on marking duties in the Butts. In the first shoot it became apparent that Andy Brownlee had a problem with the zero of his weapon. During one of the ARA matches Andy had taken a spectacular dive over an obstacle and it now became apparent the impact on the ground had knocked his rifle off zero. This was an unavoidable setback for the team scores as Andy tried to re-establish his aim

Despite this the team achieved a good score in the event, coming out II out of 24 teams. Final scores: D Clarke 193, A Brownlee 159, D Gilson-Clarke 199, D Biggs 208, Z Zuvic 183 and K Biggs 195. The profile of the Falkland Islands was considerably raised during the prize giving due to the presentation of the prizes by His Excellency the Governor, Mr Nigel Hayward. The Governor and Mrs Hayward had attended the event to support the FIDF team

In the FOB match the FIDF(B) achieved 1st and (A) 2nd in the international competition.

The Wool Market Report - 6th July 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator rose to AU$1,077 which was a 1 cent change making it 713/kg, clean.

A fairly good pass rate of 94% was seen this week. The sales started well and although it is predicted that most of the big buyers have already purchased their requirements needed before the industry has recess at the end of next week, demand continued to be reasonable.

Wool trading is winding down now in the Southern Hemisphere but the UK had its first sale of the 12/13 season.

Next week will be the last set of AWEX figures before a 3 week recess.

Black-browed albatross no longer endangered

THE conservation status of the Black-browed albatross could be downlisted from endangered based on ground and aerial surveys carried out in 2010, ACAP* Coordinator Anton Wolfaardt reported to the Environmental Committee on Wednesday.

Falklands Conservation's Chief Executive Officer James Fenton said. "All recent surveys indicate the Falkland Islands population of black-browed albatrosses is increasing, which indicates the species is no longer endangered. As we host the largest populations in the world this is especially good news. The significant reduction in the number of birds caught as a bycatch of the fishing industry in recent years illustrates wildlife conservation benefits from everyone working together.

An application will be made to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) to downlist the Black-browed albatross globally.

An assessment of the population trends and conservation status of Black-browed Albatrosses in the Falkland Islands, led by Mr Wolfaardt, has backed up reports based on aerial surveys by Ian and Georgina Strange carried out in 2011, that the population was on the increase.

The Black-browed albatross has been classified as endangered since 2003 in the IUCN Red List.

The endangered threat status, which indicated that the species faced a high risk of extinction in the wild, was applicable to the global population. With approximately 70 per cent of the global population breeding in the Falklands, the status of that population has significant bearing on the global conservation status of the species.

Mr Wolfaardt plans to submit the findings to relevant periodicals once further work has been carried out on the data. Some estimates may change slightly, but not significantly, he told the committee.

Committee member Sally Poncet agreed the findings were indeed a good news story for the Falklands, but added that numbers were still going down in South Georgia.

Mr Wolfaardt, explained

the most recent archipelagowide surveys of Black-browed albatrosses breeding in the Falkland Islands were conducted in 2010, five years after the previous census.

He said different methods, principally aerial and ground-based had been used independently to census the population in the Falklands. Previously these census initiatives had reported contrasting population trends. The aerial based surveys indicated an increase in the population between 1986 and 2005 and the ground based surveys a decline between 2000 and 2005, and using historical data an inferred decline between 1995 and 2005.

However, the aerial and ground-based surveys conducted in 2010 both revealed an increase in the Black-browed albatross population of at least four per cent per annum between 2005 and 2010.

Current estimates for the annual breeding population in the Falkland Islands range between 475, 500 and 535,000 breeding pairs.

The exact reasons for the increase are not entirely clear, but efforts to reduce seabird bycatch and favourable feeding conditions are likely to have contributed, said Mr Wolfaardt.

said Mr Wolfaardt.

He added: "Efforts should also continue to further improve seabird bycatch mitigation, both to buffer the local population against possible future changes, and to improve the conservation status of other populations and species."

Trawlers pose the biggest risk to the Black-browed albatross although the introduction of tori lines in 2004 bought an estimated 90 per cent reduction in fatalities. While long lining claims fewer birds this has also been further reduced with improved mitigation measures.

*Agreement on the Conservation of Albatross and Petrels - is a multilateral agreement which seeks to conserve albatrosses and petrels by coordinating international activity to mitigate known threats to their populations. ACAP currently has 13 member countries and covers 30 species of albatross, petrels and shearwaters.

Olympic torch arrives in Falklands

OLYMPIC gold medallist badminton player Rebecca Pantanay was scheduled to arrive in the Falkland Islands yesterday complete with Olympic torch.

Rebecca had arranged to visit in order to provide coaching to Falklands children and the Badminton Club and as an official torch carrier offered to bring it with her. Falklands badminton coach Doug Clark said it was planned that Rebecca would take the torch to Stanley schools, the Olympic Spirit event on July 28, a farm and if permission was obtained, to Volunteer Point.

Rebecca is an ex England badminton player and achieved her gold medal at the 1998 Olympic Games. She currently plays professionally in France. In contrast with Argentine policy the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office have asked the torch not be paraded through the streets or past war memorials as they only wish for it to be associated with sport and not politics.

Penguin) News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

OFTEN, and even more so on a slow news week, the bread and butter of this particular publication emerges from the occasionally excruciating task of figuring out the precise meaning of the reports, covering letters, annexes and studies that preceed FIG committee meetings, in order that we can then reduce them into reader friendly chunks.

Two little gems that this week piqued my interest, for entirely different reasons, came courtesy of the environmentalists.

The first of these, the Falkland Islands Environmental Economic Evaluation Studies Note by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (yes that's just the heading) generated a growing sense of panic as the jargon-filled sentences began to blur together in my brain. And by the time I had figured out the IEEP, the POG, the TEEB, the BAU the CDB, development scenarios, quantative terms and stakeholder engagements, the aims of the paper were lost in my AIS (Acronym Induced Stress). Don't get me wrong: the premise that ecosystems should be taken into account when policy decisions are made seems entirely logical, and no doubt it has been ignored in the past in the quest for short term achievement. But, as government committees are quite rightly primarily made up of 'lay' members of the public. it follows that at least some of them are going to find this type of report as bewildering as I did. Then again, perhaps the aim of the paper was for readers to be so paralysed with fear their instinctive reaction would be to simply nod obediently?

With the greatest respect to the hard working people who form the reports for committees, please try to bear your audience in mind when placing fingers on keyboard.

At risk of further upsetting our well meaning conservationists, and potentially losing a very good pal, the prize for the most entertaining study results recorded in an interim report must go to one on the subject of the Foraging Ecology of Rockhopper Penguins (equipped with GPS loggers) breeding at Rookery Valley in Berkley Sound.

OK so this is a little tongue in cheek because I'm perfectly aware that detailed analysis of the five penguins' movements is ongoing, but according to the results, penguins that live in Berkeley Sound forage in... wait for it... Berkeley Sound. Who'd have thought it eh?

IT'S unfortunate that as a result of Argentina's despicable use of the olympics for political purposes that the Falklands has been advised not to display the Olympic torch in the streets. Avoiding accusations of similar behaviour is arguably sensible but it is extremely sad that politics will deprive our community the chance to enjoy such a unique display.

Building award for Doug

ISLANDER Doug Clark (35) has been awarded the Elliot Johnston Lt Prize for Best Student on Foundation Degree Building Surveying from Northumbria University.

Doug, who is currently back in the Falklands on holiday, will go on to begin a Second Year Entry Level Honours Degree in September. The three year course will include one placement year, "hopefully in Vancouver or Australia, he told Penguin News.

His degree includes working alongside estate management teams, building law, practice and procedures and contracts. He eventually hopes to utilise the degree in the Falklands.

In May he also passed a Level 2 Badminton Coaching Course and during his holiday has been coaching senior members of the Badminton Club in preparation for the Sao Paulo International

Your questions answered

WITH the recent announcement from Rockhopper about their new partners and therefore definite income from oil in the future, and given the £19M surplus, are MLAs finally going to start the process of looking for the right contractor to tarmae the MPA road this coming season?

AMLA Dick Sawle respond-ed saying: "During the last budget round, the Assembly considered this and decided not to tarmac the MPA road. This policy has therefore already been set. We are however, aware that there are many infrastructure tasks that are required to meet the expected oil development, and this is but one of many

I Tow these will be funded (ie Thy FIG, by the private sector or in partnership arrangements of one sort or another) is something that we are actively looking at. Rebuilding and resurfacing of the MPA road will form part of this planning exercise and will be competing with many other pri-

SSA and SAMA benefit from ball

THE Stanley Sports Association is pleased to report that funds raised at the Liberation Ball have resulted in a total of £960 being paid into the SAMA FI account with the same amount being creditied to the SSA account.

At a recent committee meeting Barry Neilsen congratulated all involved in the organisation of the event especially Mandy Ford who worked extremely hard to make the event such a success. The SSA are holding their annual general meeting tonight (Friday) at 6pm in the Chamber of Commerce and would like to invite as many people to attend as possible. "We're looking for new input to make our 100th meeting this year bigger and better than ever," said secretary Elaine Turner.

Argentina threatens Premier oil

THE Argentine government said this week it has taken legal actions against the British company Premier Oil. The company last week signed a billion dollar deal with Rockhopper Exploration, purchasing a 60 per cent interest in Rockhopper's interests in the North Falkland Basin.

Since then the Argentine Government has informed Premier it had taken legal action against Rockhopper's, "illegal" oil exploration activities on what it describes as the, "Argentine continental shelf."

A statement from the Argentine Foreign Minister said the government, "will initiate administrative, civil and penal action against it with regard to these activities."

A copy of the letter addressed to Premier Oil was delivered to the British Embassy in Buenos Aires. In the letter the Argentine Foreign Ministry indicated that similar actions had begun against Argos Resources Limited, Falkland Oil and Gas Limited, Borders & Southern Petroleum PLC also involved in hydrocarbons activities in the South Atlantic.

The Foreign Ministry also pointed out to Premier that as with the other, "clandestine," companies, the illicit activities would be reported to the New York and London stock exchanges and requested the regulatory bodies make a statment that those companies had been omitting information or providing erroneous data to markets.

A copy of the letter will also be distributed among members of Mercosur, Unasur, Celac and the Argentine courts

Leiv Erikssen rig

Also this week Borders & Southern Petroleum announced disappointing results from its latest well, finding neither oil or gas. The statement pushed the companies shares down 71 per cent.

Borders & Southern chalked up an initial success in April, when it found gas condensate at its first well, however, analysts have now said investors should not give up on the southern area: "This is clearly a disappointing result, but one that we believe does not completely write-off the southern Falkland basin." Numis analyst Sanjeev Bahl said.

"The fact is that they have "The fact is that they have found hydrocarbons in both wells. In the worst case, it's going to be a very gassy basin, but if we're looking at multi-trillion cubic feet discoveries in terms of volumes, it's still very commercial."

Borders has said it expected the results of tests in August on the discovery it made at its Darwin well.

Mount Pleasant worker admits assault

MOUNT Pleasant worker Mario Clint Youlde (27) admitted to a charge of assault occasioning actual bodily harm and two charges of assault by beating, in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday. The case was adjourned for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis giving the facts of the case said that on March 31 the victims colleague had taken her to the medical centre after Mr Youlde had become angry, trashed her room, threw a suitcase at her head and locked her out of her room. A week later on May 8 he had again become angry and punched the right side of her head and following another visit to the medical centre it was discovered that as well as abrasions she had a burst eardrum.

On May 30, after visiting a bar together at Mount Pleasant Mr

Youlde had become angry with the victim and assaulted her in the car park as she made her way home, saying she had made comments in front of friends which had, "disappointed and belittled," him

On this occasion a Police corporal assisted her and contacted the police. The previous two incidents had not been reported to the police although medical centre staff had advised they should.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said his client had pleaded guilty at the earliest opportunity and noted that the victim did not want her complaint to go further and had written to the police to explain the current situation.

Mr Watson said two of the incidents had been alcohol related, that Mr Youlde had acknowledged this and had, "not touched a drop," in six weeks. He suggested a deferred sentence, adding that over a period of six months Mr Youlde could demonstrate he could mend his ways.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he was not attracted by Mr Watson's deferred sentence suggestion, adding that he had a duty to the public to show that domestic violence would be treated seriously.

He said Mr Youlde who had a previous caution and conviction for violence towards another partner in the UK in 2008, had been given a chance to mend his ways and had not taken it. "The court is not impressed with your attitude that things have been blown out of proportion." he added, concluding that a custodial sentence had at this stage not been ruled out.

Mr Youlde was released on unconditional bail to appear for sentencing on August 15.

Public survey on waterfront

THE Stanley Waterfront Master Plan project will enter a second phase of public consultation on July 23, which will end on August 19.

The public have been invited to complete an online survey that can be found on the FIDC website.

The purpose of this consultation, Michael Betts told Penguin News, "is to obtain the public's views regarding the suitability of the scheme for the redevelopment of the Stanley waterfront."

This phase will concentrate on one particular scheme chosen through a scoring process approved by Executive Council. The scheme that received the highest score was Option 2.

Information, descriptions, images and drawings of that project and the chosen master plan can be found on the website, along with the survey, at www.fidc.co.fk/waterfront. Mr Betts said: "If you are unable to complete the survey online FIDC can make arrangements for you to receive a written questionnaire."

Duke of Kent to open Dockyard Development

THE first foundations of the dockyard development should be laid, or at the very least the site cleared, in time for an official opening by the Duke of Kent during his visit in November, confirmed Dockyard Projects Manager Gwen Thomson on Wednesday.

The first tangible changes on the site are likely to be the demolition of three buildings of no historic interest. It is planned there will be a new extension constructed in place of the buildings that will replicate the current facility at Britannia House, she explained to the Historic Buildings Committee.

During construction Unit 4 (a garage) would be retained as storage during the construction and there would be external works to the Central Store as well as refurbishment of the old Blacksmiths shop.

Eventually, in Phase 2, once the garage is demolished it is likely to become a site for the RT Building currently located on St Mary's Walk.

It is planned this later phase will include the internal refurbishment of the Central Store, as well as the removal of internal partitions and the external stair which is considered dangerous. A new stair will be put in place as well as a balcony, flag poles and a new internal stair. A platform lift is likely to be installed and the sail loft reinstated.

Speaking later of the sail loft, Historic Buildings Committee Member Richard Cockwell said the committee was "very excited by the idea of the sail loft." Visitors will be able to look up into the rafters and observe the graffit left by sailors over many decades.

A new entrance and exit is also planned.

In Phase 3 the gaol will be re-

In terms of the overall look of the Dockyard Project wriggly tin and weatherboarding is likely to be used, in keeping with much of the rest of Stanley.

Timber gutters might be a unifying feature between buildings and roof colours are likely to be green.

To draw attention to the traditional shingles on parts of the original structures, wall colouring will be neutral and not unlike that used on Gilbert House.

The Projects Manager noted that she did not yet have a date for vacant possession of the buildings on the site, although two of the units were virtually guaranteed.

Vacation of the Central Store is Vacation of the Central Store is dependent on date of relocation of the PWD Municipal Services who will move to Megabid, east of Stanley, once a new building has been erected.

Forces exercise

BRITISH forces in the Falklands will conduct a number of low level training exercises over the period July 22-28. The exercises will take place around Port San Carlos, Bombilla Hill, areas to the west of Teal Inlet and within Onion Ranges. The public might see and hear the activity.

Any questions regarding this activity should be directed to the Range Safety Officer on 76012 or mobile 53433

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

IF there is a lesson to be learned from the recent consultations on time change, apart from keeping the question simple and unambiguous, it is that it is worth trying to hear the voice of the usually silent majority. While some enjoy voicing their opinions at public meetings, there are many more reluctant to stick their head above the parapet for fear of verbal attack by those who disagree with them. One of the first and most valuable lessons I learned is that you win some and lose some but it is counterproductive to nurse a grudge or grievance. I just move on and choose my next battle with care

While thinking of silent majorities. I would be very interested to know if the calls to spend a large proportion of our precious and hard won reserves blacktopping the MPA road are truly indicative of how people want that money used. Do we yet have a satisfactory method of improving roads in general and the MPA road in particular? I know that the roads deteriorate sharply in winter and sympathise with those who use them on a daily basis, but before we increase funding further I want to be satisfied that whatever is done will be a lasting solution and not an expensive fiasco. I believe that where we spend on roads will to some degree be dependent on the decision on a port development. The figures being bandied about in the road debate could arguably buy all manner of state of the art equipment for the hospital and pay people to operate it. I wonder also if some people have a clear understanding of the independence of action and decision making guaranteed by our reserves which differentiates us from other less fortunate territories which have their budgets dictated by those granting aid.

Good and bad news on oil this week, I'm sure there will be many more metaphorical bumps and troughs along the way, but we can now pull out the stops on all the preparatory work we are initiating as a government to ensure we have everything covered.

Picking up the prizes at Bisley

REPORTING from the Bisley Ranges in Surrey, Gareth Goodwin of the Falkland Islands Rifle Team told Penguin News, "everyone is shooting well with good consistent scores, we are up against just under 900 other competitors so we're doing well."

He said Christian Berntsen appeared on the prize list for the Century Competition with a score of 98 with 9 v bulls and Ken Aldridge was on the prize list in the Admiral Hutton competition (900 yds) with a maximum score of 50 with 4 v bulls.

Gareth too picked up prizes in the Lovell Competition (1000yds) with a maximum score of 50 with 6 v bulls and in the Donegall Competition (300yds) with a maximum score of 50 with 4 v bulls.

At the time of speaking to PN Christian Berntsen had reached the second stage of the St George's and had won the Falklands Competition. The Falklands Trophy which runs concurrently with the St George's is open to overseas competitors shooting in the Imperial Meeting. The trophy was presented by the FIDF Rifle Association in 1978 to mark the 50th anniversary of the first official team from the Falklands to compete at Bisley.

Christian becomes the second person from the Falklands to win the competition in the last two years. Gareth won the competition in 2010. Both Mark Dodd and Derek Goodwin reached the second stage of HM the Queen's Prize with scores of 102.9v

The team shoots were scheduled for yesterday. Friday and Saturday.

New housing project underway

MORRISON (Falklands) Ltd have started works on the Sapper Hill housing development.

Regional manager Mike Butler said that on behalf of the Government infrastructure works had commenced on the first of four phases to increase the potential housing stock for Stanley.

"The initial phase is to provide a six metre wide spine road from Sapper Hill in a westerly direction approximately 340 metres long, and a 420 metre long, five metre wide horseshoe shaped housing plot development road to the south west of the spine road," he told Penguin News.

The first phase will provide 43 serviced housing plots with a further 28 in phase two of the development

A biodisc sewage treatment plant is also to be installed to the north of the development.

The current work involves the spoil from the road excavation being spread and levelled to the north east of the site, to form an area for future sports pitches to be constructed, explained Mr Butler.

Plans for the development are available from fwallacenannig.planning@taxation.gov. fk or for viewing at the Planning Office at Stanley Cottage.

Beginning of end for earwigs?

THE biological control of earwigs and the funding required for the project will be the subject of further research with the aim of putting a paper to Executive Council in the future.

Earwigs cause huge damage to garden crops in the Falklands as well as pose certain health hazards. They have been found hiding behind rubber sealing in oxygen masks in the hospital, and also in asthma inhalers. Children have also been treated in hospital when found to have earwigs in their noses

It was explained in a paper placed before the committee by the Environmental Officer that permission for the release of control agents would be considered after the detailed research findings had been presented to FIG. The paper should also •Request a more detailed proposal from scientific organisation CABI on the control of European Earwigs including details and costings on the research into related species

•Request that CABI contact the Chilean authorities to explore species research in South America concurrent with CABI research

Dr Norbert Maczey presented a summary of the CABI workshop on Biological Control Options in the Falklands to the Environmental Committee in March 2012. The priority species identified at the workshop were European Earwigs and Calafate. Two biological control concept notes have been provided to the Environmental Planning Office for onward consideration.

The European Earwig Biological Control Concept Note reported that the overall cost related to the biological control of the European Earwig is estimated at £69,000 subject to further research

A covering paper put to the meeting noted: "This represents good value for money, although it should be noted that the effort is only likely to suppress the insect population rather than eradicate earwigs altogether.

'Any decision to introduce biological control agents to the Falkland Islands will only be made after further detailed studies to ensure no secondary impacts on other native insect or commercial plants species

Calafate control

The problem of calafate control was also examined at the meeting, however costs were much higher with initial investigations budgeted at £35,000 and follow-up releases of biological control agents budgeted at a further £150,000 -£250,000.

Trials into the control of calafate are being undertaken by landowners this winter with support from the Department of Agricul-

It is recommended that when the current trials have progressed enough to assess costs involved in manual clearance of Calafate the figures can be compared to biological control costs.

Sorry, your call Unfortunate cannot be taken time decision

YES, Lisa (PN editor) is correct; I suspect that many folks were not fussed whichever way the vote went on the question of

But to quite a number of us all those whose lives and jobs depend on working with daylight WE'RE fussed which way the vote went! That is why a lot of us had signed a petition which the Secretariat conveniently 'lost' for a long time. It was perhaps not what they and a few MLAs wanted to hear?

So then we had the confused four way question added to the census. It's accepted worldwide that if you want a particular result, then word the questionnaire accordingly, and don't ask for a simple answer to the question, that is: Summertime - or change the clocks2

Last time I went to school 52 or 53% was not a substantial majority either! It was a narrow majority - take out the no votes because they were probably not fussed either way so left it to those who were - and you could have easily got a majority for leaving it as change the clocks.

Yes I (and I guess others) reluctantly accept that the question has been settled - for a while Anyway - it's not yet Executive Council ratified though Secretariat folks

Meanwhile my business needs natural daylight so in midwinter any Government office that phones earlier than 0900 before August 1 - when we can start at 0830 - your call goes unanswered. Tim Miller Stanley

I HAVE just read the press release regarding the decision on summer time all year and have to say this is an unfortunate decision when you consider it results in darker and icier conditions being forced upon drivers and passengers transiting to early arrivals and departures at MPA 2/3 times a week (as well as all of the regular commuters) throughout the winter months.

Given the recent policy decision not to seal the MPA road and given the almost complete absence of safety features on the road (reflectors, barriers, signage needed for the entire length) the decision to remain on summer time further compounds the risks to lives and the economy.

Clearly this risk was not even considered for if it had been I cannot believe that it was placed as a lower priority than evening walks in the light as stated as being a reason for remaining on summer time all year, during recent public discussions.

I was under the impression that the views in the census were not binding and that all factors would be considered, perhaps they were.

Furthermore given this new precedence set for decision making I expect the next census to have a question regarding the MPA road resurfacing, that way you will have no problem following the wishes of the public in that instance also.

Stanley Waterfront Master Plan Project - Public Consultation

The Stanley Waterfront Master Plan project will be entering the second phase of public consultation from the 23rd of July 2012 until the 19th August 2012.

Members of the public are invited to complete an online survey that can be found on the FIDC website. Information, descriptions, images and drawings of this project and the chosen master plan can also be found on the FIDC website.

This link for the survey and the master plan information is:

If you are unable to complete the survey online or require further information, please contact FIDC on 27211.

Answer to the question?

GIBRALTARIAN Joe Bossano. a knowledgeable and experienced friend of the Falkland Islands, said while here recently that our forthcoming referendum question(s) needed to be well thought-out, so as to make sure that the result is not misinterpreted. Without wishing to pre-empt what the question(s) should or should not be, it is clear that he made a very good point, as borne out by the apparent result of the clock times questions in the recent census.

According to the clock times press release of 10 July, the majority of Falkland Islanders and Status Holders (i.e. those who have to live with the outcome as the Falkland Islands is their permanent and only home) stated a preference to remain on summer time. But 14% of this same segment of the population expressed a wish to remain on winter time -if this 14% is added to the 37% in the same population segment who voted to return to changing the clocks twice yearly, this means that the 49% who want to remain on summer time all year round are in the minority.

Initially one might speculate that the winter time option 'muddies the waters', because without doubt it splits the votes of those who don't want to remain on summer time all year round. However, when it comes down to it, that 14% plus the 37% that did vote for winter time in the winter means that in the winter at least, more people want lighter mornings than want lighter evenings. Surely this is the answer to the question that was asked?

Furthermore, given that the clock time question gave several choices, wouldn't it have been sensible to see what the publics' view was regarding the length of the winter time period? Maybe there would have been substantial support for changing to winter time a month later than was usual (thus allowing the Queen's Birthday and Landing Day to have more morning light), and perhaps even changing back to summer time a month earlier than was usual?

It has been stated that Executive Council has yet to make the final decision on this issue, so if this is true hopefully it will consider carefully what the answer to the question is, and, most importantly, what the best solution is for us all.

Mike Rendell Stanley

Half the road twice mileage

A BIT belatedly, but I read with interest a letter by Tim Miller in PN July 6, about sealing one half only of the roads in the Islands. As a global geriatric backpacker I have come across many places in the world where traffic density is relatively low, maybe less than 40 vehicles an hour, and one half of the highway is hard-topped and the other side gravel surfaced... or in some places little more than mud.

What becomes immediately apparent is that regular users adapt amazingly easily, and whilst head to head traffic in both directions seems to be committed to a disaster, the vehicle on 'the wrong side' slows and moves to the less acceptable side with no problem, and traffic flow is imperceptibly affected

Of course, I appreciate that everyone in the Islands would like pristine dual carriageways, but with relatively low density of traffic, there is a terrific case for tarmacing half the roads and thereby surfacing twice the mileage.

But what do I know?

THE new managing director of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board Tony Mason says the Falklands needs a 5 star hotel, "Given that the focus on travelling here is based on exploration we see a need to increase the infrastructure. We need to boost our style of offering; there are several three and four-star hotels so have recognised the need for a five-star product."

Speaking to Travel Daily UK he said: "To increase the number of visitors we will reach out to niche markets including senior citizens, single travellers and groups."

He added: "Cruising is the biggest part of the market but we want to boost our land-based product. This will be part of a lucrative travel agent incentive programme which will provide agents with packages to sell and offer training and development too. There has not been a product to sell for travel agents so this will be available with incentives and prizes throughout."

Mr Mason wants to expand potential travellers knowledge on how to get to the Falklands and the costs involved. He said: "There is already an agency sales team in the UK and I am thinking about putting one more person here to help our partners. We will also set up fam trips with me so that agents get that educational experience, possibly taking them from one island to the next. I have worked on the agents' side myself so I understand the benefit.

"Travel agents will also receive commission on what is sold while the client is here as we want to make sure they get the most out of it."

South Georgia fishing news

FIVE licensed longliners began fishing in South Georgia waters in early June, and one in the South Sandwich Islands zone.

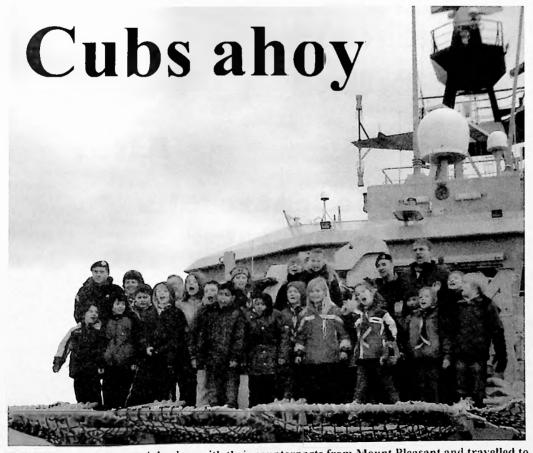

The SSI vessel soon re-joined the main fleet bringing it up to the full complement of six for the season

Poor weather in the second week of the month hampered fishing efforts and reduced catches, although catches improved along with the weather.

Several toothfish vessels sailed to the Falklands to make midseason transhipments and to take bunkers and resupply before returning to the fishery.

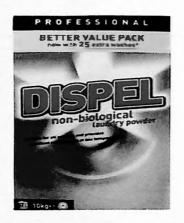

Two other vessels called into Cumberland Bay on June 25 to tranship bait. By the end of the month all six vessels were fishing in the SGMZ.

The first krill trawler of the season was inspected and licensed on June 15, with another trawler licensed on June 22. Early krill catches are reported to be very good.

FALKLANDS cub scouts joined up with their counterparts from Mount Pleasant and travelled to Mare Harobour for a tour around HMS Clyde on Saturday. Cub Scout Leader Jan Miller said they spent time on the bridge, sat in the Captains Chair, looked at and had a go with the fire fighting kit and were treated to drinks and biscuits.

A lively little lot at the Jelly Tots Fancy Dress tries for the Jelly Tots annual fancy dress party held in the Town Hall on Sunday, with many others enjoying the fun, one of the organiser, Jo Turner told Penguin News.

She said: "The standard of entry this year was exceptional with lots of amazing costumes in all age groups which meant that the judges had a very difficult job choosing the winners. There was a very lively atmosphere in the hall with not only the fancy dress competition, but party food. crafts, balloons and dancing for the children and drinks and home made cakes for the adults.

She added: "The committee would like to thank C&W for their continued very generous sponsorship of the event which covers the cost of all the prizes for the children; FIODA for the loan of the equipment; the judges Emeke, Joanna and Louise from KEMH; the companies and individuals who provided fantastic prizes for the raffle; all the voluntary helphave done without and everyone who came along to make the party so enjoyable. We raised almost £500 from the day which ensures that Jelly Tots can run throughout the year, regardless of any fluc-tuations in numbers."

First time winners Chris and Jackie take top spots

THE Governor's Cup darts tournament was held in the Town on their feet when he took the Hall on Saturday July 14. Eight boards were in play and kept in steady use throughout the evening but even so it was 1am before the prize giving was com-

Sixty-nine men entered the competition this year (2011: 66) including some non-league players and a couple of entries from MPA. As always the draw produced some major clashes in the first round, eq James Lang v Roy Shepherd (Roy won 2-1), Richard Bonner v Toot Ford (Toot won) and Colin Smith v en Ford; unfortunately illness prevented defending champion Len from playing (hope you've recovered now Len). Another first round match that caught my eye was the FIC directors meeting on board number 1 where Retail Director Paul Lewis beat Finance Director Graham Mc-Manus 2-0: Director & General Manager Roger Spink marked

Former Cup winner William Whitney was beaten by Ken Snape 2-1, and Elvis McRae beat Paul Bonner, another former winner, by the same scorefirst leg off Jonny Ford but Jonny recovered and took the next two legs in steady style; he went on to beat John Smith in the next round before overcoming teammate (and uncle) Toot in the last 16, and Joe Clarke in the quarter finals for a semi-final match against Colin Smith.

Also making their way to the semi finals were Paul Lewis (with victories over Graham Mc-Manus, Geoff Pring, Neil Clifton and Alan Bonner) and Chris Lloyd who had beaten Shane Blackley, Ken Snape, Martyn Clarke and Matt Henry (the MPA Misfit) on the way.

The semi finals were the best of 5 legs; Chris Lloyd beat Paul Lewis 3-2 and Colin Smith beat Jonny Ford 3-1 to take their places in the final. Chris and Colin played in the 2010 final of the FIC Tournament when Colin won 4-1; on this occasion Chris turned the tables and beat Colin by the same scoreline, proving to Colin that Governor's Cup final number 13 was indeed unlucky for some.

Ladies Rose Bowl 38 ladies entered the Rose noticeably absent was Maggie Goss, 7 times winner of the Rose Bowl. There were some very good, and close, games in the early rounds and making it through to the quarter finals were Michelle Minnell v Cherry Robson; Leann Ford v Lisa Jaffray, Jackie Thomas v Cathy Jacobsen Jnr, and Lizzy Newton v Kristy Buckland. The first semifinal was Cherry v Lisa, the second between Jackie and Lizzy. Winning through to the final were defending champion Lisa and debut finalist Jackie, her previous best having been joint 3rd in the 2011 Victory Bar Cup. The standard of darts in the final was perhaps not what we would have expected of these two players but it was a very close match all through and eventually went to the 5th, and final, leg which Jackie won, making history as the first St Helenian to win the Ladies Rose Bowl

Thanks as always to the Darts Club for their organisation of the tournament and to Acting Governor Ric Nye for presenting the Natalie Smith

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VIET Theore Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625. Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz IF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands
Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 12 July 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

- The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator dipped to AU$1,062 which was a 15 cent change. In Stirling this dropped the price by 20 pence making 693p/kg clean.
- · This week was the final sale before the 3 week recess. A large offering of wool meant that the sale rate was flat at 89%. Most of the big buyers had covered there stocks in the last few weeks so sales were slow and a large offering of high vegetable matter reduce sales and prices down further.
- Southern Hemisphere trading in general was slow with little trading in Uruguay and New Zealand, resulting in both own, market indicators dropping
- . The wool report will return after the three week break.

Archers bull up for a game of darts

ON July 8, members of the Archery Club met up for a competition with a difference. Darts using 60cm dart board faces and shooting arrows instead of darts made this a challenge for all

The draw took place pitching junior members against the older archers with the juniors getting a pass into the second round as there were too few to make up the numbers. Shooting got underway with initially three rounds of 301 double start and finish with Junior members having the advantage a straight start

It soon became evident that three rounds of 301 would take too long (oh, those double starts) and was changed to one round of 501 double start

The semi final was shot the following Sunday (15th), and was between Mark Lewis and Jo Lazo and Paul Ellis and Michaela Clifford A good fight was put up by the girls but unfortunately for them, the final was between Mark and Paul.

Mark finally won by two straight rounds of 301 double in and out. There were no prizes, the glory of being hailed Top Archer was thought to be enough.

This was deemed by all to be a good competition and one to be repeated- and maybe a challenge for real darts players to take up?

Congratulations to Mark for winning, and Paul - runner up. and well done to Michaela for getting to the semis. Also thanks to all who turned up or helped in

ATTENDEES AT THE COMMONWEALTH YOUTH PARLIAMENT (EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST)

The Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly is seeking expressions of interest for nominations of two people to represent the Falkland Islands at the 5th Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP) in London, United Kingdom, 4-8 December 2012.

Interested parties must be 18 to 29 years old and be able to demonstrate an interest in the Commonwealth and parliamentary affairs and have potential leadership qualities. Good communications skills are also essential. The attendees will be expected to take an active role in the debates and proceedings of the Youth Parliament.

The 5th CYP will focus on governance, looking at the concept from a local, national and international perspective. It will be hosted and organised jointly by CPA UK and the CPA Secretariat to mark HM The Queen's Diamond Jubilee. The historic and ornate surroundings of the Palace of Westminster will provide an inspirational setting for this exciting and exremely important programme.

Please submit your CV and written application (explaining why you wish to be nominated) to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly at Gilbert House (cprior@sec.gov.fk) not later than Friday 3 August 2012.

Olympic moment for tiniest resident

THE Falklands youngest resident Abigail Charlee-Rae Yon born on July 20, 2012, might not remember her meeting with Olympic Games torch bearer Commonwealth Games UK gold medallist Rebecca Pantaney, but courtesy of Falklands photographer Norman Clark she will have the moment recorded for posterity.

Mum Donna has a rather more difficult task than Rebecca however, because at 7lb 2oz at birth, Abigail was at least 5lbs heavier than the super light weight aluminium alloy torch.

Each torch has 8,000 small holes to represent the number of torch bearers. The circles which run the length of the body of the torch make it lighter to carry and also offer a level of transparency, allowing people to see right to the heart and view the burner system that keeps the flame alight.

The circles also help ensure heat is quickly dissipated without being conducted down the handle. More images of Falklands residents' encounters with the London 2012 Olympic torch on page 5.

MLA Hansen: State of roads is impeding development

THE condition of the road network is invariably raised in many forums and particularly during farmers week as the main impediment to progress and development, Assembly Member Ian Hansen said on Thursday.

He said he supported the concerns, adding that the Rural Development Strategy, the continued support to FIMCo and the overall future of rural development relied heavily on the road system. He believed some aspirations could not physically happen without improvement to the roads.

He wondered at the durability of the Fitzroy Ridge tarmac section and questioned what it had been built with and why the exercise could not be repeated. "Do we really have less money to release on the road network than we did back then?" he asked. MLA Hansen said it would be interesting to see if there was a marked difference next winter after the extra funding put into the capital programme for this season, and if there was not, the resource issue would need to be addressed.

Time to prepare for oil income

A PUBLIC debate on the future of the Falklands in the face of income from oil exploitation is required rapidly, according to Member of Legislative Assembly Gavin Short in his speech to the Motion for Adjournment at the meeting of Legislative Assembly yesterday.

He said, "we as a government and society have to start making things happen."

He said the Falklands Islands Government was hiring specialists to give advice: "We must get the best advice on fiscal matters that we can. There must and will be a socioeconomic study done so that we can get a handle on just what the impact will mean to our community."

In terms of infrastructure required he drew attention to funding having been allocated, into the alternative water supply, adding, "we may have to beef up roads and areas for dumping spoil environmental protection."

MLA Short described government and the private sector as being, "a bit tight-fisted," the result being that local workers had moved to the oil industry.

He said, "Even if government does the correct thing and ups its wages it looks like we will need to import labour."

MLA Dick Sawle said: "The future is a bright one for the private sector who as we have already seen are ready to invest amounts that the government simply doesn't have, take risks that the government simply can't take, and assume a far larger role in our society as has ever previously been the case."

He said: "Just like the private sector we will have to increase capacity and skills within the government to deal not only with things like legislation and regulation but also the capacity to deal promptly with policy making, ensuring that we have the right information and frameworks in place to deal with matters like immigration, on to inward investment to mention but two of many."

MLA Jan Cheek also noted that taxation legislation had already been examined by a specialist, but cautioned that the government should not be, "railroaded," into rushed changes to legislation.

Data goes mobile

CABLE & Wireless South Atlantic Ltd has announced the launch of their new mobile data service which will begin at 8am on Wednesday August 1.

Now in addition to calling or texting (SMS) customers will be able to access the internet, send and receive emails and MMS messages (picture, audio or video clips), providing they have a mobile phone that is data capable and are using a local SIM card.

Chief Executive Justin McPhee explained: "As well as data features being available to 'pay as you go' mobile customers, we have put together some new mobile packages for 'Premium pay monthly' customers. Existing Premium customers will automatically receive additional data features at no extra cost. For those who anticipate using data services regularly, we have two larger packages to choose from.

"For the features to become available customers need to configure both the data and MMS settings on their handsets. We will post a leaflet to all customers and further instructions are available on our website."

Justin added: "Mobile data offers 'on the go' access to the internet and your emails. It is not designed to replace your home broadband package but allows you portable access. Although large and complex sites may take a while to load, the service is handy for internet browsing, e-mail and social networking. It also offers customers without a broadband package access to the internet and will be particularly popular for 'pay as you go' customers. We look forward to launching and receiving customer feedback."

Visit www.cwfi.co.fk to find set up instructions for configuring the internet and MMS settings for your handset, full details of the service and charges. Alternatively you can contact Customer Services on free phone 131 or email info@cwfi.co.fk

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

I REMEMBER when I lived on the West, roads were just being built, and our lifestyle seemed to be changing at a rapid rate. Anything and everything seemed possible and there were plans afoot for development in many areas. In a nutshell, I was young and hopeful and I couldn't understand the reasoning of our good friend and southern head of state down at Port Stephens, who declared at every available opportunity: "Well, I won't see it in my life time.

It would seem that I have now reached that age where I too have spates of throwing up my hands in despair as I see things go round in circles and get no further ahead.

Take for example the concept of a deep water port. Ten years ago possible sites were whittled down to Navy Point or the Camber; Conservation was happy with the choice as sensitive areas such as Gypsy Cove and Port Harriet had been ruled out and it seemed that part of the process was all done and dusted.

A decade later we are no further ahead, and I felt a rush of panic that at the present rate of progress that was certainly a project I would not see come to fruition, "in my life time." The despondency wasn't helped by the idea that any decision to seal the MPA road could well be influenced by where the new port is sited. Arghh! It would seem I am doomed to a lifetime of a clay encased vehicle being rattled to bits each time I want to venture outside of town.

I am hopeful however, that I may live to see the relocation of the Museum to the Dockyard, although given that in 2002 councillors assured this would take place in the 2007 financial year, it might be a close run thing

We now have the waterfront development plan doing the rounds and while I admire the idea of development if it is vital to the economy and particularly when private sector investment is encouraged, given a million pounds has been allocated for the upgrade of the public jetty. the impact of the Museum being in the Dockyard is not yet known and cruise tourism numbers could continue to dwindle, I suspect report writers and consultants are rubbing their hands at the idea of at least another ten years income before any decisions are made

My vision of a Falklands Utopia is to ensure what we already have is maintained to a high standard and our lifestyle and culture secure. But, I have a horrible feeling, "I won't see that in my life time," either.

Splashing fun at the FICS gala

FALKLAND Islands Community School swimmers take some time out to pose underwater at the Swimming Gala on Wednesday. Overall winners of the event were Ross house.

Capital Programme goes public

EXECUTIVE Council approved on Wednesday that a redacted Capital Programme which would ensure more transparency whilst not detailing specific budgets for works to be tendered should be released publicly.

For the years 2009/10 the Capital Programme was published in full in the budget book and contained each scheme, a description and the funding approyed.

Financial Secretary Acting Nicola Granger said that since 2010/11 the Capital Programme had been published on an economic head level only at the request of the 2010/11 Budget Select Committee.

This was to ensure that tenderers for work were not aware of the budget available therefore preventing tenders being received exactly at budget level.

Consideration would need to be given to the level of detail disclosed for economic heads with only one scheme to put out to tender, said Mrs Granger.

Minimum wage to be set at £5.05

EXECUTIVE Council have discussed a policy paper on the minimum wage and proposed that the adult minimum wage be set at £5.05 per hour and that the minimum wage for those aged between 16 and 18 be set at £3.10.

MLA Dick Sawle said those amounts would be reviewed after one year and in due course there would be legislation to allow it to be enforced.

Exemptions would include those serving prison sentences or carrying out community service orders, but it would apply to short term contract workers, part-time workers and casual labour.

The paper is available to view; the details of the policy and further detail will emerge once legislative drafting has begun.

The MLA team soon to be televised

MEETINGS of Legislative Assembly are soon to be televised and broadcast on FITV, MLA Barry Elsby announced during his Motion to the Adjournment speech on Thursday.

He said the majority of Members had accepted his proposal and he expected it to take place in the not too distant future.

Free DVD copies of the meetings would be made available to those in Camp and who are unable to receive FITV, said MLA Elsby.

Cost of Posts

THE new posts of Director of Health and the Director of Education (formerly a combined post) will bring increased annual costs of £22,833 each to government, according to a paper submitted to Standing Finance Committee yesterday. The actual salary for each starts at £67,012 with effect from July 1, 2012.

The restructured post of Chief Inspector RFIP will add up to an estimated increased annual cost of £34,014, while the new post of Statistics and Performance Officer in the Policy Department will mean an increased cost to government of £25,296.

C&W discussions

DISCUSSIONS with Cable & Wireless are ongoing and due to conclude in early September, MLA Dick Sawle noted at Legislative Assembly yesterday. He said on the table for discussion were: a price cap mechanism which will reduce the cost to the consumer over time; mereased data allowances which will continue to increase over time; increased download speeds: an immediate reduction in package costs.

Pension increase

EXECUTIVE Council agreed on Wednesday that the four per cent increase in pension payments should take effect as from July of this year and not January 2013 as previously indicated.

Assembly Member Dick Sawle said this would mean that a weekly retirement pension increases from £123 to £128 and the married couple's supplement increases from £69 to £72

CRYSTAL Smith and Fernando Cordiero Hernandez were married on Saturday in a civil ceremony conducted by Crystal's aunt, Avril Bonner.

The couple who live at Port Howard on West Falkland chose an elegant white and gold theme for the wedding which took place in a transformed Town Hall.

Crystal's sons played important roles on the day with Temis (8) having the honour of giving her away while Kevin-Joe (3) was a very proud ring bearer. Fernando was supported by his nine-year old nephew Vecient as best man.

The celebrations got underway soon after the ceremony attended by many family members on Crystal's side and boosted by the very welcome presence of Fernando's family who had made the journey from Chile especially for the occasion.

"It was a really fantastic day and everyone had such a good time," said Crystal.

Reserve policy set for FLH

STANDING Finance Committee (SFC) approved yesterday (Thursday) that a reserve policy of 2.5 times Falkland Landholding's (FLH) administration and staff costs be retained and that FLH be permitted to negotiate, as part of the annual budget process, for higher retention to meet capital or previously unforeseen expenditure.

Last month FLH submitted annual budget proposals to Executive Council (paper 174/12) for approval which included proposals for a Reserve Policy, however Executive Council chose to defer consideration until such time as it had been discussed and agreed by the FLH Board.

FLH General Manager Owen Summers, said the major difficulty for FLH was the amount of cash required to fund its cash flow.

The opening cash position for the statutory corporation which farms some 25 per cent of the total Falklands farm land in 2012/13 is anticipated to be £1.223 million.

Mr Summers said however that between the months of July 2012 and Jan 2013 it was expected cash reserves would diminish by almost £660,000 in what is considered to be a normal trading year.

"The first wool income is forecast for January 2013 however as has happened on more than one occasion in the past, if wool income does not materialise before late March/early April then the cash flow requirement increases by a further £156,000; therefore the actual reserve available to FLH after providing for its cash flow is between £407,000 and £563,000," Mr Summers explained.

The FLH Board had expressed concern that if the reserve was set too low, FLH would not have the cash reserve to counter fluctuations in the markets for both wool and meat which are inevitable at some point in the future, said Mr Summers.

He added, "there would also be criticism from the public if the reserve was set too low and FLH had to ask for more funds."

The FLH Board were content to accept a reserve policy of 2.5 times administration and staff costs if the Corporation were permitted to negotiate the retention of funds over and above the reserve for capital and other projects, subject to Executive Council approval as part of the budget process.

Over the period of low wool prices and losses incurred by FLH a number of infrastructure maintenance projects had been given low priority due to the lack of funds, for example a replacement roof for the wool shed at Fitzroy which is estimated to cost in the region of £60K for materials alone. Mr Summers said it was this type of project that FLH wished to be able to negotiate the retention of additional funding for as labour would be a major component and would need to be contracted out.

Fortuna website tells story of Falklands fish

FALKLANDS fishing company Fortuna launched their new website this week.

Spokesperson for the company James Wallace said the aim of the seafood marketing site, "is to expand the company's marketing network and emphasise the improvements to product quality and logistics that being able to ship product in temperature controlled containers direct from the Islands creates for customers."

Mr Wallace explained, "In addition to providing basic product specifications visitors to the site can learn about the different fisheries in the Islands through an interactive map, which provides information on fishing seasons and offloads and explains the habits of local and migratory species of Falklands fish."

He said the Sustainability section gives a detailed breakdown of the fishery's credentials and an explanation of how when the world is focused on fishery management problems in Northern Europe the Falklands can be proud to be internationally recognized as one of the best-managed fisheries in the world.

Customers can access material for marketing promotions that explain the link between the unique environmental conditions that exist in the Falklands ecosystem and the prime quality seafood for which the Falklands brand is famous.

A Fish Guide describes the tastes and textures that consumers can expect.

Veteran hosts still needed

BEDS are still needed for the November pilgrimage of 1982 veterans, SAMA Chairman Gary Clement told Penguin News this week.

More than 50 veterans are visiting the Islands for a week, arriving on November 9 to attend Remembrance Day services and visit various places around the Islands, but so far only beds for 23 have been sourced.

If you would like to host one or more veterans please email Gary on clem@horizon.co.fk or call 52910.

"This is a good chance to demonstrate the Falkland Islands hospitality we are all renowned for, and they don't expect to be waited on hand and foot," he said.

"The best thing we can do for these guys is to welcome them into our homes and help them understand the Falkands and how it has developed over the last 30 years as a result of their efforts during the War," he concluded.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE week began with a workshop on potential protected areas. This was well attended by a large group including representation from the Chamber of Commerce, RBA, relevant FIG departments and NGOs as well as private landowners. There is much more work to be done before formal proposals are put forward but the workshop made everyone think, and realise what a complex subject it is, albeit one which must be addressed as fragile sites come under increasing pressure.

The remaining days are taken up with the monthly round of GPC. EXCO. SFC and Legislative Assembly with additional meetings fitted in where possible around them. All require some reading and preparation, although this month's EXCO is lighter than some. Having said that, Murphy's law dictates that we will spend hours debating one of the papers I thought straightforward. In the same way we do have a laugh at ourselves during the budget process when, having easily agreed to the spending of several millions, we then wrestle for ages over a relatively unimportant ten thousand somewhere else.

The meetings in Camp early in August to give the same budget presentation that we had at this month's Stanley public meeting will be a good opportunity to gauge feeling in Camp. Unfortunately I missed Farmers' week so I am eager to learn what the main issues are, whether they differ between East and West.

I share the Editor's disappointment that the inappropriate mixing of politics and sport in the infamous Argentine commercial put out by their government has made us hypersensitive to the risk of appearing to do the same. However, I'm sure with a little imagination and no political involvement there will be a number of opportunities for people to see the baton and share the celebration of sport that has accompanied the baton's journey up and down the UK. In my recent visit I observed an interesting contrast between the media seizing on every hitch in the planning, and the general public, intent on enjoying a once in a lifetime event as the baton passed through growing crowds in every town and village.

Your questions answered

Why are the highways gang placing more of the Port Harriet clay on the MPA road surface, when it has been proved beyond any doubt by everyone who has driven on it that it is not fit as a road surface? Why are they not using the Fitzroy material from near MPA as a temporary surface?

Response from Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside...

The material used to fill pot holes on the MPA road has come from our stock of processed capping materials. The mobile crusher used to produce the capping is in our Port Harriet borrow pit and therefore the material has come from there, but is not as the writer suggests, clay. We do not use clay as a capping material on any road - it does not meet any of the criteria for a suitable capping material.

The choice of material has in the past been based on local knowledge of potential sources and trafficking trials and the variability of materials to be found has produced mixed results.

We are processing mudstone at Port Harriet which requires drilling and blasting prior to processing through our mobile crusher and the materials must conform to certain criteria such as the grading (proportions of different particle sizes) and plasticity index (which affects how well the material binds and the extent to which its susceptibility to rutting varies with moisture).

Earlier material extracted from Port Harriet appeared very susceptible to moisture and was subject to heavy rutting when wet but the material currently being processed from there is from a deeper level and has a lower plasticity index when processed so should not be so affected by wet and therefore be less prone to rutting.

The March Ridge material, whilst very hard on extraction appears to be very susceptible to frost resulting in it breaking down too quickly: it is also a very sharp material when just processed and tends to corrugate on the road. Due to those characteristics no material has been processed there recently and there is no stockpile of that material.

A balance has to be struck between durability and cohesion, and the optimum capping material breaks down at a rate just sufficient to replace the fines lost to trafficking and weather but not so fast as to cause the capping to become too plastic and therefore soft when wet. For instance the material from Pony's Pass is very durable but does not break down and produce fines at anything like a fast enough rate in situ so over time only the larger sizes remain – and I am sure many longer term residents will recall the difficulties in driving on a road surface which was covered in loose gravel as being rather greater at all times of year than the current materials used provide.

The options are relatively limited in terms of sites where suitable material for capping can be found and extracted and a balance has to be struck not only on the characteristics of material from each site but also the distance it has to be transported, with the associated goest of bouless.

We do continually seek to improve the road surfaces and have sent samples to the UK for petrological testing to help us to optimise materials used for capping and thus help reduce problems such as rutting, slippery materials and reduced life through material breakdown.

Referendum plans begin

ARRANGING a referendum and deciding upon the precise question was not a simple matter when the aim was to send a message to the international community, Falkland Islands Government Chief Executive Keith Padgett told the public meeting on Monday.

He said because of this the question on the political future of the Falklands must be "unbiased."

He said the referendum was an opportunity to show the world, "we are responsible and we know what form of governance we want," however, he warned if things were badly managed there was the potential for "disaster."

Independent observers are being sought to oversee the referendum. Mr Padgett said FIG had no intention of, "going overboard," but if the result was to be recognised internationally then a specialist was required to reassure the rest of the world.

He said the referendum would not be cheap as internal resources would be required as well as paying for the flights and potentially the wages of observers.

Campaigning would be needed on both sides and the question should be positive, that is voting for something rather than against.

Eligibility to vote would also need to be examined, although most likely this would include all of those on the electoral roll.

Getting into the Olympic swing

FALKLANDS residents were able to get into the swing of the lead up to the Olympies this week when one of 8,000 Olympic torch bearers. Commonwealth Games badminton gold medallist Rebecca Pantaney (36) carried a torch to the Islands.

Rebecca, who has given training to the Falklands badminton team annually since 2007, in preparation for both the Island Games and the Commonwealth Games, said, "people love it, it really brings home that the Olympics will start soon."

Children at both schools, the beavers and scouts, and the ACORNS group had a personal visit, while others were able to have their photo taken alongside Rebecca and the torch at the West Store Cafe on Wednesday. Others will have the opportunity tomorrow night at the Olympic Spirit event at the Town Hall.

The England Under 19 age group coach told Penguin News she has a busy schedule while in the Islands, not just as a result of her torch carrying duties: "I'm coaching while I'm here, both younger players and the small squad heading to Brazil."

Rebecca will join three other members of the Stanley badminton club team in Sao Paulo at the end of September when she will play doubles with Islander Mike Brownlee at the event which is part of the International Badminton Federation circuit. Other team members comprise Doug Clark and Laura Minto: "it will be a great experience for them all," she said.

Scouts and beavers line up with Rebecca and the torch

Rebecca, who began playing badminton when she was ten years old, officially retired from badminton in 2003 and immediately took up coaching. She is currently one of only 2 level 3 coaches in the UK and the only female. She most recently returned from coaching in Belgium

she told Penguin News

Asked how she came to be part of the torch bearers group. Rebecca explained that her family, and another badminton coach had nominated her last year. She found out she had been chosen last December, but was asked not to release the news until March.

On May 23, her big day, she set out before 5am on a bus carrying 20 other torch bearers. They were dropped off along the route and when each one finished their part of the relay they re-boarded the coach and followed the next runner. Her day finished around 10pm, all for a 300 metre run; but a very worthy one.

EVER resourceful Camp education teachers and children pulled off something of a coup with their carefully constructed paper Olympic torches, when one was delivered to the Leiv Erikssen rig and taken on a tour of the facilities including the moonpool and the drill floor. The rig workers kindly took up the challenge with enthusiasm and utilised the 'flame', lighting up the mechanics' area and even sending it to the medic for a check up when it dwindled, before giving it a 'douse' of petrol following the doctor's prognosis. It was sent to the bridge to help steer the rig and then flown back to Stanley for a flight around the Falklands courtesy of the Falkland Islands Government Air Service. Finally it visited the North Camp and the school at MPC.

Pity the poor Argentines

WHEN it comes to leisure reading, I would rather hold a match up in the darkness to study the instructions on the side of a crate of dynamite, than settle down with a copy of the Readers Digest.

it's those stories of supposed inspiration that get my goat. How many times do I need to hear about people who were given 20 minutes to live, or faced decapitation by meteorite, but then, through the power of faith in God and the American Dream, went on to win triathlon gold at the Olympics? What tosh!

But, sometimes there is no crate of dynamite to be had, and you just have to pick up the infernal wad of twaddle. It happened to me last week, in a doctor's surgery, as you might expect. I looked furtively over both shoulders, then picked it up. I scanned the list of contents, and stopped at an article titled, "Report on Argentina." Could it be that there was an article in the RD that I wanted to read; that might actually tell me something I needed to know? I opened the magazine.

"The true Argentine," wrote the journalist (one John Lear), "thinks he can lick anybody, just because he is Argentine. And his personal rights come first. This applies not only to An Argentine vs Somebody else, but One Argentine vs Another Argentine [Lear's caps]. When it [the new and different government] happened, it had the full support of the people. After more than a year, the people still hope change will come, but they have lost faith. The present government is a band quarrelling among themselves over what they should do. They have no interest in world affairs, except as those affairs effect their personal futures.

The writer of the foregoing seemed to have a vague fondness for the Argentine people, but was profoundly puzzled by them. How could they always pull in different directions for personal gain rather than pull together for everyone's benefit? In a country so rich in natural resources, so vibrant, and with such strong origins in an enlightened Europe, they seemed to have no discernible direction. He had come up against the paradox of Argentina.

But here is the twist in my story. The copy of Readers Digest I had picked up was a dusty and dog-eared edition from March 1945. I say again: 1945. And I now utter this through gritted teeth: thank you. Readers Digest for showing me that the essence of Argentina has not changed much, if at all, in 67 years.

Fast forward from 1945 to last week, when I met with an Argentine friend, Florencia, over a coffee in London. We talked about her homeland's current problems. She had left currently chilly Buenos Aires for a few weeks in sunnier Britain. She was despairing and not just about the appalling British summer. After several years living in Europe, the intelligent, very well-educated, and liberal-minded woman had returned to Buenos Aires because she loved the city and wanted to raise her children there. But she was now disillusioned and contemplating leaving it again. Europe is having profound economic, even existential, problems, but these, she said, are far preferable to the putrid state of Argentine politics and economics.

Corruption had been notoriously bad in the 1990s under President Carlos Menem, but now, under Cristina Kirchner's government, the curse is as bad as ever. Furthermore, said Florencia, Cristina makes up policy on the hoof, particularly foreign policy. In this area, her obsession with the Falklands is irrational, and it is not helped by a foreign minister, Hector Timmerman, whom Florencia described as, "stupid". But at least Timmerman is known. The increasingly cultish government of Mrs Kirchner means that other key members of her cabinet must be virtually anonymous. She does not want ministers who could steal her limelight.

Then there is the economy. Government short-termism means that the minister for the economy cannot admit that inflation has soared to 35 per cent. Mrs Kirchner covered this up for a while by boosting public sector pay to match inflation, but that is no longer possible.

Private sector pension funds were long ago nationalised, their value swelling the coffers that funded short-term gestures to public sector employees. Quite how retired people now live is an unanswered question. But one thing is certain: they cannot benefit from savings in the stable US dollar. Recent legislation banned dollar savings, and all have been converted to the volatile peso-(which is, of course, inflating fast). Mrs Kirchner claims to have converted her huge dollar savings into pesos, but few actually believe she has done so. (Quite how she and her late husband acquired their considerable wealth. in the first place, is suspiciously

If there is one thing Argentine politicians hated back in 1945 and still abhor today, it is a free press. Florencia despaired about the strength and quality of independent journalism in Argentina anyway, but tame though it may be, the country's largest media body, Clarin, is fighting for its life. The President maintains it has a powerful monopoly that it should be broken up. If she succeeds, an already supine media will have

It is this drift towards authoritarianism that alarms Florencia most. If the government continues to attack fundamental freedoms, then she and her family will leave. If she does so, however, she will only be able to convert a tiny proportion of her peso savings into dollars, and every week Argentine pesos are worth less in the outside world.

Populism, short-termism and policy made on the hoof – none of which are novel in Argentina have also led to moves that erode international confidence. Quite apart from efforts to tie neighbours in the Mercosur into the "Malvinas" as a regional issue, provoking huge embarrassment in Uruguay and elsewhere. Europe was stunned when BA summarily nationalised the Spanish company Repsol's stake in the oil giant YPE.

Where does this leave Argentina in the eyes of the outside world? In a position very similar to that which was described by the American journalist John Lear in that 1945 edition of the Readers Digest. Then Mr Lear seemed to be saying that the Argentine people would surely rise from the volatile and shallow political system that he observed.

His optimism and generosity were misplaced, as my friend Florencia made clear. She sees even more trouble just around the corner. The ruling Peronist party is showing signs of schism. Worried about the rudderless movement of the government and Argentina. Factions within the party are polarising against Mrs Kirchner. So far, this internal strife is hardly being reported by the besieged media, but Florencia insists that when the Argentine parties enter such a phase, their time is numbered.

Would that be good news for Argentines and external stakeholders? No. Sadly not. As proven by the 1945 evidence of the Readers Digest, nothing fundamentally changes in Argentina. It's been a depressing story that has lasted at least 67-year, and there is no end in sight.

Tanker captains or jet ski drivers the Yacht Club will welcome you

THE Falkland Island Yacht Club has been running for two years now and is keen to recruit more members and expand their activities.

The main aims of the club are to promote boating within the Falklands, to promote sailing in the Falklands internationally and to provide a united voice for boat owners. "And of course to enjoy ourselves," said Ken Passfield.

He said a number of social events both on and off the water had been held and links with the Micalvi Yacht Club in Puerto Williams, Chile, had been formed as visiting yachts assisted.

Yacht Club representatives have also met with the architects of the Stanley waterfront project. Mr Passfield said the club was not about taking over the Canache or being in any way exclusive.

"The 'yacht' in our title is something of a misnomer as we are keen to promote all boating activites, so whether you drive a supertanker or a jet-ski."

The Annual General meeting of the club is to be held at the Narrows Bar on Thursday August 2 at 7.30pm, all are welcome and the there will be a social get-together afterwards.

More swimming for adults with extra hours at the Leisure Centre

ADULTS are now able to access the swimming pool for more than 50 hours a week.

Staff at the Leisure Centre have introduced a permanent, daily 'adults only' swim lane in response to requests from regular users.

"We recognised it can be frustrating sometimes for adults wanting to swim while having to share the pool with children playing. We introduced the adults only swim lane to give them space to do that, and have rolled it out across all of our opening hours.

"This means that, with the exception of private hires. Junior Games practice and school swimming etc, adults can now access the pool at any time of the day," said Kelly Fiddes, Senior Sports Attendant.

The change results in an extra 28 hours of swimming available to adults every week and is the first of several improvements planned by the Leisure Centre in coming months.

The adult swim lane will be reflected in the opening schedule published by Penguin News from now on.

Arrogance as usual

I WISH to comment on a public meeting held with councillors at the meeting before last, where a number of comments were made with regard to the MPA road.

Quite a number of years back now I used to grade the MPA road, and I quite honestly feel that tarmacing the MPA road would not be a waste of money, but it's not on the top of my list of things which need to be done

The first responsibility of any government is the defence of the realm and I feel very strongly that if there is a windfall from oil or gas products that our first responsibility should to be to aid Britain in the defence of this realm.

Quite often we get remarks form Kirchner (oh and Shaun Penn a known wife beater who at the end of the day is just an actor who is playing up to an audience) but what I found far more disturbing was a remark by quite an eminent writer for one of the major papers in the UK named Kevin McGuire who stated on Skye news 'why do we need to have troops in the Falklands, we don't need it, we don't want it, just give it to the Argentineans'. Although I am sure this is a minority view within the United Kingdom it is a view that should be taken strongly, I suggest, into consideration. I think if there is a larger amount of money coming to these Islands we should do our utmost to help pay for our defence before going on about tarmacing the MPA road. Without British Forces we wouldn't have an MPA road

When I was employed as a graded operator I used to beg for materials which I very rarely received because the government was too tight with their expenditure. One day the chief engineer Mr R Buckett said 'Ginge I've been told you can have 30, 0000 tons of material, you can do the whole length of the MPA road', at which point I threw my hat in the air. This was on I believe a Friday, the following Monday morning I went hop-skipping into the office. where Mr Buckett standing somewhat forlorn announced that the amount of material had been cut from 30,000 tons to just 13 lorry loads. Honestly readers, do you really think that 13 lorry loads was going to cap 33 miles of MPA road? All I could do was the worst parts; I did keep the MPA road up to a fairly good condition. The only complaint received was from Mr Eric Goss, who could not understand the 'stupid idea' I had of putting wind rows ie long piles, at the side of the road. The idea was to save what little materials I had from being kicked up by vehicles especially the fines ie the dust, which on a normal road would bind the metal together. You only had to ask Eric, and I would have explained it to you.

I have to admit at this point that 95 per cent of my work was dedicated to the MPA road; I would push the materials from one side of the road to the other, which did the job of filling in the pot holes. I unfortunately had to come off due to a medical reason, but I feel if there was a dedicated graded driver continuously grading the road, it would cost nothing like the amount to tarmac. From the grader I was transferred to the tarmac gang and we did indeed start off at Sapper Hill down to the second cattle grid. We started off giving four inches of capping but a senior official (no names mentioned) kept on telling Mr Buckett 'cut back, cut back. Cut back.' We had men there who were qualified tarmacers and we could not believe the stupidity and tightness of the government at the time, so now I understand as Councillor Edwards informed the meeting that it was a lot of wasted money and it's going to cost a lot of money to take it all up. I have to say councillor I don't think that you were a councillor at the time, but it is entirely the councillors' fault, looking at the condition of the road today. The government has not changed in 14 years, and poor Mr Buckett it was not his fault at all. He told this official time and time again of the consequences, but as usual arrogance prevails and Ron Buckett was sacked.

I believe whatever is in the pot of money we should spend at least five per cent of our gross domestic products towards our defence to the UK.

Albatross increase not a surprise

YOUR recent headline "Blackbrowed albatross no longer endangered" comes as no surprise to not only myself but many others in the Islands, especially to those landowners who have albatross colonies on their properties and many supporters of our findings. that the Falkland populations has not been in decline.

It is now over five years since evidence was presented to show that the Black-browed albatross population in the Falkland Islands was on the increase, and not as often reported by international bodies, that the population was on the decline.

Penguin News published our report on the 2005 aerial survey and more recently the results of our 2010 survey. Both surveys confirmed in hard to dispute aerial photographs that the Islands population was increasing annually by a figure which is now acknowledged in a recent report by ACAP. Ironic that my findings were first raised at the first ACAP workshop held in Stanley in 2006 and where it was diplomatically suggested I might shelve my findings as the results would not assist the greater good, a reference I took to fund raising and the PR behind this.

A lot of great work was carried out on mitigation; improved systems were introduced to reduce loses of albatross and other species by long liners and trawlers. A reduction in these loses will have played a part in the increase we see in the Falkland population of albatross, but in my view a very minor part. What we have seen in the last five years or more is what I would term a natural increase, assisted no doubt by the fishing industry itself through discards, although there will be other factors which are not clear. What are my predictions as a naturalist for the future of the Islands albatross population? Clearly this is good at the present, but in my view the rate of increase we are seeing can not continue and a downward trend is inevitable as part of a natural and controlling factor in a population.

The publication by "official" bodies of the increase in our albatross population is pleasing, although perhaps a little late in its acknowledgment of our aerial survey findings and that they form the major basis for present results. A lot of work went into these aerial surveys, not just in the logistics of carrying out this work, but in months of analysing the photographs which now form an undisputed data base confirming this increase.

Our surveys could not have been carried out without the major logistical assistance of the BFSAI, British International Helicopters, the Royal Navy and landowners. We were especially grateful to the Fishing Industry Association who financed a large part of the 2010 survey, assisted greatly by a European donor.

For those wishing to have details of the 2005 and 2010 aerial surveys the results have been published in CD ROM format. Discs are available at the Capstan Gift Shop and POD or direct from Ian or Georgina Strange.

Lunar Sea with Falklands flag

MY name is Strom Bolder a former Royal Marine. I arrived in the Falkland Islands on board HMS Superb in February 1953 and on our arrival 28 Royal Marines including myself were sent down to Deception Island to deal with some Argentines. They had built a hut and raised their flag on the British side of the island. We dealt with them without any problems and after that we returned to the Falklands

We lived at the old Wireless Station at Moody Brook until October 1954. During our time there I met a young girl, Noreen Peck, sister of Pat and Terry Peck. We were married on September 4, 1954.

The reason I write is to let you see this photograph taken at our 30th anniversary party with most of our family as well as the photo of a yacht, Lunar Sea, in Ramsgate Harbour flying the Falklands flag. We were unable to ask any of the crew why they were flying the flag as nobody was around at the time. Seeing our flag flying in Ramsgate Harbour was wonderful and Noreen was so delighted because it is the first time she has seen it flying in England, at least in Ramsgate Harbour.

Terry's wife, Eleanor, sends us the Penguin news every week and we enjoy reading all of the news of home. Thank you.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

WHAT a glorious day! The temperature, according to our thermometer, did not rise much above six degrees but it felt so much warmer and it was such a treat to see the sun, that I went for a 'plant patrol'. Then I could not resist pulling out some weeds, mainly grass really. I just wan-dered along the path pulling out any weeds I could reach from there. The ground is incredibly wet and to step on it would do a lot of damage to the soil structure, however, another day like this one and I will grab a fairly long board to even out my weight and just get right into the borders to weed and maybe, if the soil is not too wet or cold, pop a few plants and bulbs in.

I've had a few lily bulbs waiting to get into the soil for a while now, also some lupins and poppies must go in soon, and of course any shrubs could go in as well. We are lucky that all shrubs come in pots, rather than bare rooted, and so they can go into the ground at almost any time except when it is very wet or frosty

During the rather cold snap we've just been through, the coldest it got to on our thermometer. was minus five. And, although some days with that freezing wind and sleety squalls, it felt a lot colder than that, it has made the plants sit up and take notice. Big fat buds have appeared on the rhododendrons, loads of bulbs are showing their noses also. Probably the most surprising plant though, is the perennial osteospermum (African daisy) that is bone hardy here. The clumps just get bigger every year regardless of conditions, but I've never known it to flower so early in the season before with its lovely lilac pink daisies; it's just what is needed to cheer you up!

The up-side of this very cold weather, with the ground freezing quite a way down, is that the earwigs might not all have survived. Here's hoping.

I've been surrounded by kiddies and a husband full of coughs and sniffles for a few weeks. I was feeling rather smug, as it seemed to have passed me by. Then last week I woke up to a very sore throat and feeling rather miserable. However, by the evening when we were due to go out for a meal, I felt reasonably bright even if rather cold. A drink or two later made me feel even better. It was a most enjoyable evening, celebrating Bill's and a friend's birthdays, and I woke up to no sore throat. Was the cold a false alarm or was the anaesthetic still working?

I've just put a heavy bucket over the top of one of the rhubarb plants outside. By keeping out the light we should get some very early, very tender stems. I usually also put one in a pot and cover it over in the same manner, but inside the tunnel. However, this year as it is a new bed, I did not dig a rhubarb plant out to overwinter. I would normally break the clump up before replanting the young fresh growth in nice rich soil and popping a piece into a pot for inside as well, job done.

This is such a miserable season (more so now that we wake up in the dark and rely on electricity for so many hours before you can see anything) that cooking, knitting and sewing have become very attractive pastimes. Especially if like me you find anything more than half an hour watching TV just too much. It also means that it is very tempting to have steamed puddings because your body feels the need for extra 'stodge'. In this household, we have quite a lot of soups, mainly broths, heavy with all manner of vegetables and pulses. Hike to make a good bone stock first but that means a kitchen full of steam for hours on end. I've discovered one of the joys of a slow cooker is that having put marrow bones in to cook overnight the job is done. Chicken carcasses I save in the freezer until I have two or more then treat them in the same way, wonderful jellied stock guaranteed. And of course, the marrow is delicious too.

While on the subject of cooking, I had another mini disaster the other day. We were having roast chicken and I thought I would make one of those magic chocolate puddings that the kiddies love, you know the one, it's basically a sponge but by the time it has cooked in the oven it has turned into a pudding with it's own rich sauce. Lovely, but I put it into too small a dish, and so the sauce on the bottom overflowed during the cooking and went on to the chicken. Too late to do anything about it and discovering it had been mainly the brown sugar and water that had overflowed, we had caramelised chicken and matching gravy with just a hint of chocolate; it wasn't too bad actu-

The other enjoyable thing at this time of year is browsing seed catalogues; they whet your appetite, and of course I long for a packet of each and every one of them. I then do the sensible thing and take my shortened list down to the garden centre and come back with my bag full of trophies, itching to begin planting. Still, unless you can provide heat and light for the next few weeks there is no point on starting vegetable seeds of any sort just yet. I'm off to prune the indoor roses now instead.

Closing date 31st July 2012

The future of the Falkland Islands

It's in Your hands!

ON the evening of Saturday July 21, about 260 people gathered to-gether in the FIDF half to enjoy a fabulous evening of music and dancing the Winter Ball 2012. The annual event – hosted in memory of Helen Mck ay by her mum Jeannie, aunt Kathleen, and a core group of friends proved as popular as ever, despite the lack of snow, with tickets selling out well in advance and desperate pleas posted on Facebook for any spare tickets in the last few days leading up to the Ball.

Upholding a key tradition of the winter Ball, many people generously utilized their ordinary prowess ously utilised their culinary prowess to provide a veritable feast for the revellers which was much appreciated by ated by everyone. Garry Tyrrell also provided his customary, and much encouraged encouraged, entertainment in the form of his spirited dancing to the YMCA. In contrast, the tradition of choosing the Belle of the Ball proved a much more difficult task as all the young girls were beautiful in their dresses and it seemed a shame not to reward them all! However, eventually, Chelsea Middleton, looking stunning in a full length white dress with black detail and clearly shocked by the result, was crowned by Mr Keith Heathman a result which, to judge by the enthusiastic congratulations, was well supported by Chelsea's peers as well as the rest of the hall. Choosing the, 'Beau', the outstanding young man of the evening was also a difficult decision but, in the end, Jack Ford's charm, shy smile and willingness to dance won through and he was presented with his gift, to thunderous applause from the whole hall, by Mrs Mandy Heathman.

Every year, proceeds from the Winter Ball go to the FICS Music Department - last year's funds were used to buy specialist recording equipment for Alex McGhie on West Falkland – but this year proceeds were split, with half of the money donated to the SAMA FI Trust, which runs a minibus for returning veterans. The money will be used to help cover the running costs of the service for the coming

A Proud to be British theme which permeated this year's decorations was appreciated by all and a given, by everyone in attendance, as a show of appreciation for our British Armed Forces, to whom we remain sincerely grateful for their efforts in restoring our freedom 30

Many thanks go to Jeannie, Kathleen and everyone else who so gen-erously contributed their time and effort to making the Winter Ball happen including, but not exclusively, the students who put together the display and helped to decorate the hall, Robert Rowlands for providing the music, those who staved behind to help clean up on Saturday night and those who came along on Sunday morning to finish off the tidying up process. Jeannie and the team would also like to extend their thanks to everyone who continues heartfelt round of applause was also to support the event and to everyone who came this year for respecting

Emergency Radin Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Rand
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area 146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice 147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland. Marine Band
2.182 MH2 HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Ieuan Ford wins Décor July medal

THE July medal sponsored by Decor Services was played for last Sunday and attracted a field of ten golfers all seeking not only a win but to improve their standings in the League and Eclectic competitions.

Three players mastered the cold and partially frozen conditions. David Beynon with a typically tidy round of 76 for a Nett 70, and Club Captain Troyd Bowles posted an impressive 73 for a Nett 68 and second place.

The Medal was won by fourteen year old leuan Ford who shot 78 for a nett score of 66. This is leuan's second win of the season and places him now top the league competition on 25 points.

Bernuda Shorts: It is 351 days until the Nat West Island Games hosted next year by the beautiful island of Bernuda.

There are generally no hire cars on the island and travel for visitors is by bus or taxi, scooters or mopeds are available for hire.

The golf course looks fantastic with the signature hole a 238 yard par 3 across water.

Grade up for Karate students

Back: Craig, Chloe, Mark, Glyn, Kirsty, Front: Celina, Dean, Luke, Theo, Connor, Regan, Ella KARATE Club celebrated members' improvement in the sport with a grading presentation last week. Rob Granger 1st Dan Karate Instructor, has been helping the students train for their grading and the following students improved to their new grades: Luke Gilbert, Regan Newman, Celina McLaren (white/stripe) intermediate; Ella Clement, Connor McLeod, Theo Duncan, Dean Ellis 8th Kyu (red belt); Mark Lewis 6th Kyu (green belt); Kirsty Lewis (purple belt), Craig Lewis (4th Kyu); Glyn Morrison 2nd Kyu (brown/ white stripe). Chloe Knipe 2nd Kyu (brown/ white stripe) was awarded a certificate of encouragement to recognise her hard work in helping other members of the club and training towards her (brown/ black stripe) 1st Kyu. Club Instructor Karen Rimicans commended all the students for their effort and commitment but encourages them to keep training for the next grading scheduled for January 2013 when Chief Instructor Dave Wilkins is hoping to visit the Islands again.

The club welcomes any new students, both adults and children. Those wishing to try this sport out, should come along on a Monday and Friday at 5pm to the Infant and Junior School.

ATTENDEES AT THE COMMONWEALTH YOUTH PARLIAMENT (EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST)

The Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly is seeking expressions of interest for nominations of two people to represent the Falkland Islands at the 5th Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP) in London, United Kingdom, 4-8 December 2012. Interested parties must be 18 to 29 years old and be able to demonstrate an interest in the Commonwealth and parliamentary affairs and have potential leadership qualities. Good communications skills are also essential. The attendees will be expected to take an active role in the debates and proceedings of the Youth Parliament. The 5th CYP will focus on governance, looking at the concept from a local, national and international perspective. It will be hosted and organised jointly by CPA UK and the CPA Secretariat to mark HM The Queen's Diamond Jubilee. The historic and ornate surroundings of the Palace of Westminster will provide an inspirational setting for this exciting and extremely important programme. Please submit your CV and written application (explaining why you wish to be nominated) to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly at Gilbert House (cprior@sec.gov.fk) not later than Friday 3 August 2012.

Public Meetings Fox Bay and Goose Green
Members of the Legislative Assembly and Officers will be holding public meetings at Fox Bay and Goose Green. The main topic will be a presentation on the budget: this will be followed by open question session.

Officers in attendance are Chief Executive, Ag Financial Secretary, Head of Policy, Road's Engineer, Senior Agricultural Advisor and General Manager, FIMCO. Meetings will take place as follows (Stanley time):
Tuesday 7th August, 3pm Southern Cross Social Club, Fox Bay commencing with a buffet lunch at 2pm
Tuesday 14th August, 2pm Goose Green Social Club commencing with buffet lunch at 1pm

Any questions that might require prior research are to be submitted by 1st August to Gilbert House on email to: assembly a gov.lk

Argentine cemetery vandalised

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police is involved in an active investigation into damage done to a glass screen at the Argentine cemetery at Darwin.

Earlier this week the Falkland Islands Government condemned. "any action of this sort," adding that the Families Commission had been informed and was working on arrangements for the repair

On Wednesday the police released an appeal, "requesting assistance from any member of the population in order to help establish an exact timescale for the recent damage caused at the Darwin Cemetery

The appeal requested that any person who visited the cemetery between Sunday July 22, 2012 and Saturday July 28, 2012, contact them.

It continued, "In addition, if any person has any information in relation to this incident, who did not visit the cemetery, we would also request they contact us to assist our enquiry.

According to British press reports the families of the Argentine war dead blamed British hostility for what they called an, "act of sacrilege," and sent letters to Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman and Britain's ambassador in Buenos Aires, John Freeman, demanding an urgent investigation.

We believe that reflects escalating hostility by certain British sectors who are influential locally," their commission said in a statement

The vandalism was discovered by Argentine national Sebastian Socodo, who lives on the Falkland Islands and maintains the cemetery.

He said: "It's basically the glass that covers the Virgin Mary. They just smashed the glass. I don't know with what or how.

"I was there a couple of weeks ago and there was no damage."

Images of the damage show the glass was broken by more than a dozen sharp blows.

The Virgin figure has been removed to protect it from the elements until the shrine can be repaired.

Mixed response to 'expensive' C&W mobile data packages

Wireless EDGE CABLE & mobile data package launched on Wednesday has had a very positive response from customers, Chief Executive Justin McPhee told Penguin News.

However, comments made to Penguin News on the subject of the prices of the pay monthly or pay as you go packages on offer were mixed, with one reader suggesting the cheapest package offering only 25mb would be, "almost impossible to achieve."

Invited to comment Mr McPhee said: "The provision of the mobile data service required a complete network upgrade to support data, this is a significant investment for a very small community and has even seen the provision of these services introduced on West Falklands which is good news for all users of mobile. The majority of our customers are pay as you go, however, for prepaid customers we have included a data allowance at no extra charge and an increase in minutes and texts. Heavier users on higher packages see a reduced data unit costs as with other services and we have put in safeguards to ensure these customers are informed as they exceed their packages.

Another customer, Stephen Luxton said his initial reaction was that while he welcomed any progress in new services, he too thought it was, "quite expensive for what's on offer.

Mr Luxton added he originally hoped there would be some integration of the home and mobile allowance, "so that, for example, if you had a Gold home package, you could use that data allowance on the mobile network as well as at home or on a wi-fi hotspot. That hasn't happened, and 12p a megabyte adds up pretty quickly. I don't think the higher packages are at all attractive with a high fixed cost and low data allowance, so I'm glad it's available on PAYG or I wouldn't use it at all. It's a sobering thought that you can now spend over £2,000 a year on home communications (monthly charges of £60 for mobile, £99.99 for Gold broadband and £8 for line rental) without picking up a phone."

He said he understood the reason behind adopting EDGE, rather than a modern 3G level of service was probably the cost of the hardware, "but I question the long term wisdom of installing a system that I think I'm correct in saying is already two generations out of date at its launch.

Mr McPhee commented, "We continually review the prices we charge our customers on all products and the same will apply for mobile data services. The prices have been agreed with the FIG regulator and we have agreed that we will review the performance of the service and the prices with FIG in 12 months. If take up in the service is good prices will be reviewed in the future.

TEAM GB might be winning the medals in the northern hemispehere but Team Falklands certainly lost the PR battle worldwide this week following the vandalism at the Argentine cemetery

Despite FIG's quick response in condemning the action, waves of censure from the rest of the world will undoubtedly haunt us for quite some time; and for us all to have worked so hard to present ourselves as a reasonable community, worthy of the respect and consideration of the international population, it's pretty galling to have had it undermined by such an insensitive act.

In a world tired of conflicts generated by the actions of religiously motivated groups, for any citizen anywhere to attack a religious icon would, in itself, be viewed obtuse and self defeating, however, to have attempted an attack on a religious icon in a cemetery of war dead is imbecilic - oh and indefensible.

After all we could come up with all sorts of excuses; 'pushed to the limit by Argentina', 'its never happened before', 'it's a conspiracy by Argentina to make us look bad', but while that might make us feel momentarily better, it won't make the slightest difference to how Islanders are viewed around the world by those watching the story on TV, reading it in the newspapers, hearing it on the radio, or viewing it online.

A thorough investigation and the eventual discovery of a culprit might claw us back some kind of dignity, but ultimately the only answer is to suck up the castigation and hope for the sake of our community's reputation that it never happens again.

ON a more positive note we hope you will enjoy our Olympic themed

The Falklands' quirky and colourful response to the Olympics with the Badminton Club event (see centre pages) and this week's play by some of our youngest students (see page 13) is an appropriate little reflection of the superbly idiosyncratic opening ceremony in London which offered up a fantastic theatre of many of the best things Britain has to offer to visitors, including two of my favourites, its history and

Students score higher than English average

THE percentage of Infant and Junior School Year 6 students who achieved level four in their Key Stage 2 SATS was higher than the England national average, reported IJS and CE Head teacher Tom Hill

88 per cent achieved level four in English, six per cent over the English average and 85 per cent in Mathematics, which is five per cent above

This was great news for the students as it was predicted that any student that scored the national average or above would achieve the national curriculum expectation of five GCSEs grade C or above in Secondary school

"To get the National Average would be considered good and we've surpassed that," said Mr Hill adding that it was, "as good or better that any school I've worked in the UK.

Mr Hill believed the school's success was due to consistency of teaching: "Over 50 per cent of our staff are local and this means the kids get to know their teachers very well," he said, adding that it was policy to recruit as many local teachers as possible.

Mr Hill considered the school lucky to have such a strong focussed education with staff who take the time to track students that might benefit from additional learning and input.

The exams showed the children had the aptitude to progress well and the basis was set for Secondary School attendance in September this year.

Year six students Dwight, Sian, Caprice and Oliver told Penguin News they had been studying for exams in school with lots of Maths lessons on fractions and essays every Wednesday: "The exams started easy but got harder and harder," said Caprice. But they are all excited to start at FICS after having experienced the transition day.

"I can't wait until I go." said Dwight, and Sian added that she liked the idea of having a tutor but might struggle at first getting to know all the new teachers and faces: "I know a lot of the big kids so it's not so scary.

Oliver is leaving the Islands soon and his school mates agreed they will miss him and the comedy he brings to lessons, "I'm just hoping my next school appreciates haiku poetry," he said.

Mandy's 400km ride for charity

WEST Falkland farmer Mandy Alazia is getting on her bike and taking positive action in the fight against breast, ovarian and cervical cancers as she joins a group of women in a 400km charity cycle across Cuba next October

Mandy spotted the event in a slimming magazine and as she has been successfully losing weight for some time thought it would be an ideal incentive to reach her goal while raising funds for a worthy cause

In the lead up to the big event Mandy is in training for sponsored bike rides on both East and West Falkland, while husband Tex has bravely suggested that with the current price of petrol she should take up gathering their sheep on her mountain bike.

Mandy also hopes to join Andy Brownlee on an East Falkland cycle he has planned for later this year

In October 2013 Mandy will cycle around 400kms over five days, both on and off road experiencing rural Cuba away from all the usual tourist trials and cycling up to 100kms in one day.

It is expected to be a journey full of fun, friendship and incredible support as women of all ages and from all walks of life join together to challenge themselves for a great cause

As well as training hard Mandy needs to raise a minimum of £2,900 to support the work of Women V Cancer charities and is asking local people and companies to help her reach that target If you would like more information about the event or to sponsor Mandy give her a call on 42010 or email mrmg@cwimail.fk

Fruit imports

TRAVELLERS on the airbridge and LAN flights are now permitted to import a wider variety of fruit with their personal luggage.

Pineapples, avocado, lychees, mangos, guavas, coconuts, papaya and figs have now been added to the already extensive list of fruits, but, Biosecurity Officer Shona Strange stressed they must be carried with your luggage, you must have a purchase receipt and the items can only be purchased in either the UK or Chile

A maximum of five kilos per person is allowed but you should check that the fruit is free of soil, insects and other organic matter and declare the produce on arrival.

Bananas, apples, pears, kiwi, grapes, stoned and citrus fruits can also be imported without a permit as a personal import, but all are subject to inspection and may be confiscated if all criteria is not met. For more information email imports@doa.gov.fk

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THIS week is a little quieter for me with only the Planning. Health and Medical Services monthly meetings, a meeting of the education accommodation working group and the routine weekly meetings with the Chief Executive and Governor.

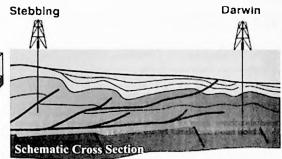

September involves most MLAs being overseas at some point for regular commitments involving the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, political party conferences and the EU This fact and the additional overseas work we are doing has made me suggest to colleagues that we should perhaps be discussing increasing the number of Legislative Assembly members to ten. Remuneration also needs to be reviewed in recognition of the additional workload that most now carry. It has normally been agreed that it would be improper for MLAs to vote themselves more money, so there is an independent review which can be implemented for the next Assembly.

AS important, is clarification of who in FIG may stand for election and how their posts can be backfilled when necessary if they are to attempt to do both their job and Assembly duties. An alternative is to offer a four year unpaid sabbatical if a civil servant is elected, but current MLA allowances would not make that a very attractive proposition for anyone. It would also put potential candidates from outside FIG at a distinct disadvantage because few private employers could afford to hold posts open.

WHATEVER the outcome of future discussion I hope we have a good turnout of candidates in fifteen months so that democracy is seen to be alive and appreciated in the Islands. In the meantime potential candidates can keep themselves well informed by getting all the available open minutes and papers via the Secretariat and Gilbert House. All new legislation can be accessed in the Gazette and as I have advised previously it is worth studying the Constitution to understand why we are bound by certain rules. Government process often seems cumbersome but that is in part because there have to be safeguards, for example to ensure that taxpayers' money is properly managed. To be able work effectively within the system, you have to understand it.

Darwin well could stand alone

FOLLOWING on from the Borders & Southern Petroleum plc announcement that their latest well project Stebbing had been plugged and abandoned. Chief Executive Officer of the company Howard Obee, gave a presentation to members of the public last Thursday night on the reasons for abandoning Stebbing, and the potential for the Darwin well, where gas condensate was discovered in April.

Fluid analysis results from Darwin well (100 miles south east of the Falklands) are expected near the end of August when the company will be able to characterise the reservoir fluids and, "any nasties," that might impact on the programme, said Mr. Obee. He said the gas condensate should be simple to produce but as yet they had only an estimate of recoverable reserves. This is thought to be somewhere between 300 million and 760 million barrels.

He said near a market this would be highly valuable but, "as we are here it is more of a challenge," adding, however, it was possible Darwin could be a 'stand alone' prospect or other wells nearby might be tied in with it.

Close to Darwin exist a number of other prospects which appear to have similar geology, including those now named 'Covington' and 'Chaffers'.

Two other areas now named 'Bute' and 'Burgess', he said were, "higher risk but very large." Placing the size of the prospects in perspective he explained while Darwin was 26 square kilometres, Covington covered 37 square kilometres. Bute 89, Burgess 47 and two other sites, Sulivan 132 and Stokes 47.

Gas condensate, which is a valuable raw material for the production of motor fuels, as well as for chemical processes, is a low-density mixture of hydrocarbon liquids present as gaseous components in the raw natural gas produced from the gas fields. It condenses out of the raw gas if the temperature is reduced to below the hydrocarbon dew point temperature of the raw gas. Mr Obee explained that condensation occurred when the component was brought to the surface and the gas itself could be pumped back into the well and retrieved at a later date.

He also noted that gas condensate was a less well known component than crude oil and as such attracted less attention, however, was very valuable.

With regard to the Stebbing well, Mr Obee noted they did not believe the well to be commercial, however, they might return to it again in the future once geological and engineering data had been assessed. He said drilling had reached a point, "where it wasn't safe to go on," so many of the questions about Stebbing were as yet, "unanswered."

Borders and Southern's next exploration phase will begin in January/February.

The Leiv Eiriksson rig has been assigned to Falkland Oil and Gas for its two well programme after which it will be demobilised.

Despite her flaws London is putting on quite a show

Our man in London, Islander James Marsh, takes a look at how the city and the people are coping with the 2012 Olympic Games...

I DON'T know about you but I remember exactly where I was when London won the right to host the Olympic Games back in 2005. I was working in an office in Coventry and was doggedly ignoring someone who was repeatedly and rudely (in my opinion) trying to ring me as the announcement was being made on the radio. After the kind of delay which talent show presenters have come to extend beyond all measure in recent years, it was finally announced! London had won the right to host the 2012 Olympics.

I'm not saying the fact that Paris (and hence the French) lost out made the result any sweeter. but it certainly didn't seem to hurt. There was a distant cheer throughout the building when the announcement was made, and suddenly it was clear that I was not alone in surreptitiously listening to a radio in the middle of the working day.

Seven years later the games are now in full swing. The opening ceremony itself brought in more viewers to the BBC than any event of the last ten years and the coverage ever since seems to be all encompassing. The BBC website offers the opportunity for visitors to watch any event which is happening at the time, although it must be said that once you're down to the fifth or sixth ranked sport of the day the commentary teams are seemingly less experienced and knowledgeable than those detailed to the main events. I was watching one event at the weekend when the co-commentator was literally reading the rules of the sport on air to try and understand why someone had been deducted points. It was nice though, I felt like we were learning together.

The day after it was announced that London would host the 2012 games was July 7, when terrorists struck at the heart of the London public transport system and in just 24 hours the country went from a mood of jubilation and celebration to one of shock and mourning. London is one of the most varied and multicultural cities in the world, so the 52 innocent civilians were inevitably made up of a wide variety of faiths, nationalities, backgrounds and ages. London has a reputation as an unfriendly place, and it's generally accepted that everyone is in a hurry and lord help you if you stand on the wrong side of an escalator in a train station and delay someone for 30 seconds. This reputation is at least partly borne out of fact, but it's also a city where the shared environment often helps to form temporary bonds and kinships. Many hundreds of thousands of people commute to work each day on those crowded and often unpleasant tube trains which can be swelteringly hot during the summer months, and in a strange kind of way this situation actually helps to unite people. This is most often demonstrated by the commonplace catching of a stranger's eye and the simultaneous universally known commuter signal of the 'dismayed shaking head' motion as the train driver announces another failed signal ahead of us or (my favourite) that he doesn't know when we'll be moving again, but he hopes it'll be soon. On that terrible July day in 2005 that kinship I speak of was demonstrated in far more telling circumstances than our everyday inconveniences. Many complete strangers on the London underground that day delayed getting medical help for themselves or making swift escapes from wrecked tube trains, to try and comfort or treat those who were clearly in worse conditions than themselves. I recall one mother during the inquests that followed telling a man who'd stayed in a darkened tube carriage and comforted her mortally injured daughter, holding her hand for her final minutes of life and speaking to her, that it meant everything to her that her daughter had not been alone at the end. Many of those people knew they were putting themselves in more danger than they had just survived by remaining in those horrific situations, but they chose to stay to try and help complete strangers. I don't know about you but I find that fairly inspirational.

In the midst of the opening ceremony of the games on Friday night the announcer asked the audience to take a moment to remember the 'Absent friends and family', as a lone performer hauntingly delivered the hymn 'Abide with me'. Photos of all those innocents who lost their lives on July 7, were shown on the big screen as the hymn rang out across a silent and mostly darkened stadium. It was a beautifully understated, appropriate and moving way of remembering those who lost their lives. The ceremony as a whole seemed like a triumph to me. I recall that when I saw the incredible opening of the Beijing Olympics four years ago

I wondered how we as a nation could possibly compete with it. It was a show of unity and strength which I found to be as unnerving as it was impressive. The London games by comparison opened with what seemed like an exhibition of the British character and quirkiness which I found to be as entertaining as it was moving. I've read a lot of coverage of the opening ceremony in the foreign press since and they were generally charmed by the Britishness' of it. How can you not love a ceremony opening with the Bond theme and involving the Queen parachuting out of a helicopter?

It's very easy to be cynical about the games, and in particular the corporate aspects of it. I've certainly heard plenty of complaints in the months, and even years, leading up to now about the money that's being spent, the transport "chaos" which is going to ensue and basically any form of inconvenience which will (or possibly could) happen. What was telling for me though was that as soon as a visiting American politician, Mitt Romney, suggested London was unprepared for the games, he was roundly turned upon by the same British public who had, up until that point, been saying very similar things. It seems like a very British thing to me, that we can complain about the way we're doing things, but nobody else has the right to do it.

For me, as a sports fan, the Olympic games are fantastic. I will freely admit to getting far too emotionally invested in sports which I only care about once every four years. At lunchtime today Lactually found myself punching the air in celebration as a British show-jumper completed their round unscathed. Our trains are certainly more crowded at present, and my journey to and from work is taking me longer than normal, but the Olympics being in London is worth it to me. I don't know how many 'extra' people are visiting the country for the games but from what I have seen London as a city is doing everything it can to make them welcome

I'm going to be watching some volleyball with family on Friday. It's not a sport which I can claim I've always held close to my heart, and I don't know as yet which countries will be represented, but I cannot wait.

For me it seems that London, in spite of her many flaws, is putting on quite a show for the rest of the world to enjoy, and I am excited to experience it first hand.

FIPASS action needed to meet future demands for shipping

SOME immediate action is required in terms of survey work, design options and priorities to keep FIPASS operational, said MLA Dick Sawle following the July Executive Council meeting.

The weights the oil industry are talking about in the near future are more than FIPASS can currently cope with and a solid structure is needed to the west of the barges, MLA Sawle told Penguin News

A paper compiled by the directors of Natural Resources, Central Services and Projects noted that work to identify provisional costs for the preferred new port location had begun and would continue over the next 12 plus months, including the assessment of the detailed environmental studies and conducting of marine and land based geotechnical surveys. But it was anticipated that any new port project would not be ready to operate until at least January 2018.

Industry feedback was that at present FIPASS was coping; but that with any escalation of containerisation or oil and gas traffic, this situation could well change.

Executive Council were asked to approve the interim development of FIPASS; the detailed design and costing for remedial and developmental work to FIPASS as identified in the paper, and the implementation of the remainder of the FIPASS Action Plan 2012-18 also as set out in the paper.

Government had recently been approached by two organisations.

about the future provision and management of port services to the Islands and there were a number of options available to Government, it was noted in the paper.

The interest from the local private sector in future port development was welcomed, but was as yet untested and consideration of options was needed to provide clarity to Government, it was stated in the report.

The FIPASS management team had identified a number of current operational concerns regarding FIPASS today which require review including point loading limits, safe load limits for all sections and management and security of the entire dock Anticipated future throughput at FIPASS has been projected working on an average turnaround time of 1.5 days per vessel. The current FIPASS management team, oil operators and FIFCA (Falkland Islands Fishing Company Association) feel that this turnaround figure is realistic.

Oil exploration company Rockhopper PLC has indicated, subject to its operations developing along current timescales, a 15 per cent rise year on year in vessels needing to use FIPASS through to 2014. From 2014 onwards they have further indicated more than 400 port visits/vessels annually with a further 15 per cent rise year on year. It was also noted that oil and gas projections are currently based on a single field, Sealion.

and should other fields develop it was highly likely that oil and gas traffic would increase further. A five per cent annual increase in other vessels (fishing/tourism etc) had been estimated, using previous years averages.

With the current three berths in operation and an average turnaround of 1.5 days, FIPASS could potentially fail to meet requirements in terms of berthing space by 2014, it was noted, adding that extending FIPASS to enable a five berth scenario for example, would delay this potential fail point until Potential losses incurred through vessels having to wait to come alongside for a berth had also been assessed, and although indicative only, a figure of US$30,000 per day had been utilised as a realistic cost. Director of Mineral Resources John Barton estimated that in the worst case situation of a drilling operation having to cease due to the unavailability of berth space for resupply, the cost of rig downtime was in the region of $1 million per day.

The paper noted that, in order to support oil and gas development over the next few years before a new port is delivered, there was a need to develop FIPASS and failure to do so could have significant financial consequences for the industry and for the Falkland Islands Government.

Regardless of oil and gas development however, the study equally showed a requirement to improve FIPASS due to its on-going wear and tear and improvement required to support the development of containerisation.

Should oil and gas not develop as anticipated, it was unlikely a new port facility would be affordable and in this scenario a permanent port at the FIPASS location was the likely outcome with any investment now to increase its working capability not wasted, the authors had noted.

The announcement last month that Rockhopper PLC had entered into a conditional farm-out agreement with Premier Oil created an additional urgency to undertake the work on design and costing of remedial and developmental work for FIPASS. The need to ensure the design detail and costings for the remedial development were completed by the end of September 2012, required the work to be commissioned swiftly, said MLA Sawle. The paper noted that Morrison (Falklands) Ltd was the Government's preferred contractor in this area and as such had been approached and indicated they could complete the work to this timeframe.

The Executive Council paper 125-12P entitled FIPASS Action Plan2 (with some figures edited) is available on the FIG website www.falklands.gov.fk under Public Executive Council Papers or from Gilbert House

Taking the first step

IT is 12 pm on Friday (March 3rd, 2012) and I just read the editorial response of Mr John Fowler, entitled "Why we can't accept Cristina's 'kind' gesture" (published in the Penguin News).

If anything is now clear to me it is that we have not done things well from this shore. Obviously we owe this to the successive failures in the policies implemented by the Argentine governments through history

I have to tell you that at school, all teachers told me that we went to war in the 20th century to, "recover our Islas Malvinas". They also told me, with a mixture of pain and shame, that those who took that decision were the dietators who ruled the country at that time and the war only served to shed blood on both sides. And of course, without the expected result (which is logical because in war everyone loses, even the "winners").

Since then, I was interested to know more about this 'story' (the full history to be fair) but above all, to know about the people who

Who are they? What do they think? What were their experiences in the war? How do they live today? What is their opinion about us? Unfortunately I know now that the answers to all my questions cannot be very auspicious and believe me. I really understand your reasons.

I cannot lie, I have often dreamed of being able to see our flag (Argentine) with the Falklands', waving together in the Islands. But that is something that must be earned and could not be achieved overnight. I sincerely believe that in life, trust is earned with every step taken but also is lost with every misstep, and ironically we have worked hard for the latter. That is why I think we should respect what the people who live there (all of you) want. And this respect means accepting that people should be free to choose how to live and under which rules. The so famous and often mentioned: 'self-determination' of the peoples.

I will not bore you with my interpretations about historical facts that you know perfectly well. First, because surely there will be points where we will not agree, and second, because I personally believe that 'history' is always told from the viewpoint of the writer, and often ends up being more subjective than realistic (especially if there is controversy over the object of focus). Of course it is clear we would have different views about the issue, although I now know this does not mean that all what I think is the right thing and all what you think is not.

In my opinion the most important thing is to start talking between us and above all, hear each other, to communicate respectfully and know better who we are. That is essential because beyond a sovereignty dispute, exists the people and their legitimate desires. It is my hope that in the future Argentine governments will come to understand that when we talk about Falklands (or 'Malvinas'), we are not talking about a wasteland but, about a land that belongs to those who live there.

Argentina is basically a land of immigrants and it was not until the nineteenth century that our true national identity was completed, with the arrival of millions of immigrants, from all around the world. This mixture of races has given a great cultural richness to the country, but also some difficulties to unify ideas. The point is, based on that, we, the Argentines, may look at you, as a community of similar origin to ours, which has the same desire to build their own identity; just as we built ours in the past.

It is also true that I would like to think about the possibility that you could ever take us into account as an option in your lives. Just as the UK is today, But I know, in the present context, to think the people of the Falklands could want to be part of Argentina, is nearly or totally unrealistic.

I have heard many say that the wounds opened by the war of '82 are impossible to close. But, I am among those who prefer to think that with good deeds from our part and with the help of time, we could possibly transform present reality into a new and better one for all. And I sincerely believe that, such as was our responsibility to lose your confidence, should be from now on our duty, to work hard to restore those lost feelings. I encourage you to think that we could generate a mutual affection between our peoples to help us to build a strong and stable relationship.

I may sound like a dreamer, but honestly I would like to give us this new opportunity. The wisdom of the people, the effort and good intentions, can change the history some day, I know it.

Obviously I must say that to achieve this, Argentina must be willing to accept that your opinion may not ever change. But if we achieve, as a people, that you change your mind about us, thinking of us just as good people, we will have torn down the wall that now separates us. And that is something invaluable.

Today is Friday night again (but on June 29th) and as you can see, I have taken my time to finish this letter. This has an explanation. Since I started writing I had the pleasure of meeting several people via Twitter (some of them even live in the Islands) with whom I shared ideas and clarified some of those initial concerns.

Over the days, my letter took shape and mutated several times into these lines that I finally decided to send. Today, I can say I know (among many other things) you like to be called Falkland Islanders and you are very proud to be British. I know that you only seek to be recognized as a people and live in peace on your way; but above all I know you have that right, and it is totally legitimate. On the other hand, I learned that in life, all our steps are important, but when you want to change something, the first step could be undoubtedly the most difficult but also the most important. So here I am, as a simple and common citizen, just trying to take that step.

Thank you very much for reading these lines. Best regards to all,

from Argentina!

Question of clay

IN the last PN Vol 24 No 8 a guestion was asked about the clay being used to cap roads and the Director of Public Works stated that no clay is used on road capping at

I wonder how then he can explain the thick layers of clay that prevail along 90 per cent of the Islands' camp road network. Most as a result of poor material cap-

There is high quality tillite both at the March Ridge and Hope Cottage area that does not turn into clay when laid. Some of the best road surface exists just outside Hope Cottage that has never eroded away since it was put down.

It does seem that the FIG are sourcing inferior material cheaply which is contrary to Mr Keenleyside's statement that they do not use clay. What we see on the roads in winter is sticky clay that one could easily build pottery out of if fired in an oven. Maybe he should take a trip along the entire ring road on east and west then he will be aware of what we mean when we say it is clay.

On another subject in the same issue regarding the referendum, I think once again we are going to see a very over the top questionnaire coming out when a very low cost simple single question could be asked like, 'Do you want to remain British?' With the answer either YES or NO in a box. This referendum has been proposed to include all those on the register but if that is what is planned it will not represent the whole of the Falkland Islands Community. This question should be directed to everyone of all ages who either have full Falkland Islands Status, are born Falkland Islanders or have changed their nationality to become a Falkland Islander. Any other persons not normally resident, or contractors, should not be included. That way we would have an absolute politically correct answer. If any other temporary worker is allowed to vote it will never show the true feelings and wishes of genuine Islanders who have made this place their home. All persons of school age should be allowed to cast a vote because many youngsters have strong feelings as well. It will be interesting to see the referendum outcome, because if the recent one on the time change is anything to go on the likely answer will be inaccurate, because those questions were designed to get the outcome certain people wanted. There should never be an offer to say they are undecided. A simple yes or no is all that is required.

Also, will there be provision made for those Islanders temporarily outside the Falklands on the given day of voting to be able to vote by proxy?

Dog trial results

THE Dog Handler's Association (DHA) intends to hold it's annual trials at Port Howard later this year. This is, of course, subject to agreement from Port Howard management and residents.

The DHA committee has asked me as secretary/treasurer to put together a list of prize winners 1st 2nd 3rd and 4th from the DHA's beginning in 1986.

Although I do have many of these at hand I have to admit there are certain years I have lost track of. So, to get me out of trouble and avoid possible dismissal by the committee would any dog handler who has worked in the DHA trials over the years and won 1st to 4th please contact me or Critta Lee with the place and the year they won a trophy. This would be very much appreciated, and give us the chance to put something in place for a programme before next tri-

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who have continued year after year to give prizes, in particular Peter and Emily Short who have been so supportive since the very first

Bisley trophies for Rifle team

THE Falklands Rifle team (Ken Aldridge, Derek Goodwin, Christian Berntsen, Mark Dodd and Gareth Goodwin) have achieved excellent results at the 2012 Imperial Meeting at Bisley in Surrey

The first few days involved shooting in monsoon like conditions with the wet weather continuing for most of the meeting apart from the odd day when we were greeted with a little sunshine, but wind that was a tad playful, veering either side of the post and towards the shooters.

This situation tests concentration and the premium applied to quick shot release once the shooter has decided on sight correction Christian Berntsen shot well in the Century competition on the first day and got a placing of 71st from around 900 competitors. Only the top 100 competitors including all possibles are included on the prize list and therefore eligible for prizes. Ken Aldridge shot well in the Admiral Hutton at 900vds with a possible 50 and 4 y bulls and a placing on the prize

The second day included three competitions, however, during the Lovell (1000yds comp) the heavens opened before the second detail was due to start and Stickledown (the range used to shoot 900 and 1000yd competitions) wisely delayed the shoot. They were not so lucky on Century (the range used to shoot 300 to 600yd competitions) where the Donegall shoot had just progressed and then was forced to halt. Rain got everywhere with many strange shots arriving in far flung places on the targets. We also saw 60 or so cards returned by shooters on that detail on Century having decided that enough was enough and a return to the clubhouse was preferable. Gareth Goodwin had a fine day with a 50.6v in the Lovell at 1000yds giving a placing of 31st followed by another full house with 50.4v at 300yds in the Donegall at 300yds and a placing of 127th.

The Grand Aggregate started the following day with something of a rarity - no rain but with tricky winds. Gareth, on for a good score in the Duke of Cambridge at 900vds cross fired a central V Bull onto the neighbours target and came away with a disappointing score of 41.3v.

The Falklands Trophy which runs concurrent with the St George's is a competition open to overseas competitors shooting in the Imperial Meeting. The trophy was presented by the FIDF Rifle Association in 1978 to mark the 50th anniversary of the first official team from the Falklands to compete at Bisley. Christian had a fine shoot in the 1st stage scoring 74.8v to make the prize list in 213th (top 300 progress to the 2nd stage) and win the Falklands Trophy. Mark had a fine shoot to score 73.5v and Gareth scored 73.7v, both Ken and Derek had a pair of 72's

On Queens I day Christian scored well in the Conan Doyle at 900yd in tricky blustery conditions to score 49.5v and creep onto the score list in 99th place. The HM The Queen's prize is the most prestigious competition in fullbore rifle shooting and is shot over three stages. On a day which seemed to encompass all seasons both Mark Dodd and Derek Goodwin progressed to the 2nd stage which again comprises the top 300 shooters with scores of 102.9v. Mark shot consistently with three scores of 34 while

Derek, after a slow start at 300vds with 32.2v and leaving himself a lot of hard work, went clean at the following two ranges with scores of 35.5v and 35.2v. The cut-off point was 101.13v so Gareth with 100.9v, Christian with 96.8v and Ken with 93.1v were some way

The final competition of the Grand Agg was the Prince of Wales, Gareth shot well to score 74.9v and a placing of 72nd. The final Grand positions were as fol-

Mark Dodd: score 668.59v -405th

Derek Goodwin: score 667.58v

Gareth Goodwin: 666.58v - 431st

Christian Berntsen: 658.55v - 513th score

Ken Aldridge: score 647,48v -

With Mark's finish in the Grand Aggregate he won the Kenya Trophy which was presented by the Kenyan National Rifle Association in 1979 and became the first person from the Falklands to win

Now the main individual competitions were finished it was onto the 2nd stages of the St Georges where Christian scored a very credible 71.4v giving a total of 145.12v but unfortunately not making it through to the final Mark and Derek competed in the 2nd stage of the HM the Queens prize scoring 141.12v and 140.10v respectively. Conditions were testing with a distinct wind changes with temperatures plummeting and the wind swinging from 11 to 1 o'clock. The 2nd stage was notable for Mark as he scored his first ever 50 at 600vds. The scores were very high this year with the cut-off for the final being 147 14v with the top 100 competitors making it into the

The team shoots started with the Junior Overseas with the team consisting of Derek who followed up his good shoot the previous day in Queens I with a score of 101.10v, Christian 98.8v, Gareth 97.9v and Mark 94.6v to give the Falklands 3rd place. The next team shoot was the Junior Kolapore with the team being Christian who shot well to score 147.16v. Gareth 142.12v. Derek 141.12v and Ken 137.11v, to leave the Falklands team 3rd. Ken had the misfortune to cross fire at 300yds but followed this by putting in a possible 50 with 7 v's at 500yds. Christian also managed to get all his shots in the bull at 500yds for a possible.

The final team shoot was the Junior Mackinnon shot over the long ranges of 900 and 1000yds on Stickledown. A tricky wind greeted the team and our coach Eddie Brice who is a Falklands War veteran and has helped coach the team for many years, he is more familiar with the intricacies of the wind at Bisley and a fantastic help.

Unfortunately at 1000yds Mark experienced issues with his elevation zero and struggled to find the target with the Falklands finishing in 4th position. Notable teams in the Junior competition include much larger countries such as Germany and Holland.

Members of the team also received placings in some other concurrent competitions including Ken in the sighters aggregate, Mark, Gareth and Christian in the Faunthorpe and Gareth in the Munro Memorial wholeheartedly entered into at the Stanley Badminton Club's Olympic Event on Saturday. Groups of teams representing the major nations competed against each other in several events including frying pan badminton, tugof-war, a pub style quiz, netball, hula hooping, athletic sheep racing and propelling bean bags across the Town Hall venue into a bucket Fuelled by canapes from Malvina there was no lack of Olympic spirit on the night, but craziness had to settle sometime and while the judges tallied the results the raffle was drawn and artwork auctioned, before it revved up again with live music scooting the crowd into a dance. Team Greece were then crowned winners of the games and claimed their trophy and Cadbury medals in true Olympic style.

One of the organisers, Rosemarie King told Penguin News she had been uncertain if the night would be a success, but as she stood on the entrance steps and watched the crowd as the badminton began, "the scene was quite amazing as without exception everybody was totally into the spirit of the night.'

Stanley Badminton Club hope to have raised between £2500 - £3000 the target required to strengthen their ambition of sending another junior member to the Bermuda Island Games next year. The club is also looking at other international play for the upcoming hopefuls in the sport and exploring realistic dates and options through the Badminton World Organi-

Stanley Badminton Club members say they were overwhelmed by the support for the event, both in attendance on the night and sponsorship and support from companies and

Multi-talented IJS singers put on a dance spectacular

THE values of the Olympic Spirit were themes of a solid gold performance by children of the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education this week.

In a spectacular, touching and humorous show, an athlete and coach travel in time to see the origins of the Olympics and realise the event is about taking part and not the winning.

Scheming Hades is tired of Zeus always having the best athletes so attempts to trick the Athenians and Spartans into a war to stop the games from happening. Foiled Hades realises, as Zeus explains, that the Games will go on for thousands of years as a testimony to what humans can achieve as a result of the striving spirit of the enduring Games.

The performance was full of jaunty songs and positively fizzed with energy

IJS Head teacher Tom Hill told Penguin News the students have been learning about ancient Greece in school, and, "we thought it was an excellent way to link in with the games."

Mrs Tench, who said she was sad to be leaving the school next month, organised the play from beginning to end in just four weeks.

Community School swimming gala 2012

ON Wednesday July 25 2012 the Falkland Island Community School hosted its annual swimming gala. As the final major sporting competition in the school calendar it was the last opportunity to gain vital points in the house competition. With over 80 students participating in 47 races, including the medley and freestyle relays, a float race and of course the staff versus student relay - the competition was fierce.

The event was a great success with fantastic individual and team performances, the spirit of camaraderie evident throughout the morning and an enthusiastic crowd of supporters made it feel like the Olympics! There were a number of outstanding performances with Sorrel Pompert-Robertson winning all of her four individual races. Amber Goss winning a hat trick in her events and also solid performances from Daniel Clarke, Ryan Watson, James Tyrrell. Ophelia Ellick and Callum Boyce winning two races each. The newly appointed Head Boy Scott Thain and Head Girl Amy Guest led by example winning their individual races.

It was a very close scoring

Positions House Point Scores 1st Place Ross 2nd Place Shackleton 105 3rd Place Fitzroy 104

This year it was Shackleton house which won the staff versus student relay and so the staff will be starting training ready for next year in order to regain our title.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the students who participated in the gala and also the FICS and SLC staff who such an enjoyable and successful day. Also thank vou to the parents and family members who came along to support the children in their races

Miss Ruth Kemp, PE teacher

FOGL's Noble news welcomed

THE Falkland Islands Government has welcomed the news of a farm-in agreement between Falkland Oil and Gas Ltd and Noble Energy which was announced on Monday.

Noble Energy are acquiring a 35 per cent stake in FOGL's interests in the Falkland Islands under a farm-in deal that will assist in financing the development of FOGL's future exploration programme.

Director of Mineral Resources for the Falkland Islands Government Stephen Luxton said the government welcomed the entry of Noble Energy as a new partner in Falkland Islands licenses. "Another significant international energy company has given its vote of confidence to the many interesting opportunities available in the Falklands," he said. MLA Jan Cheek said the announcement was another clear indication as to how positively the industry viewed prospects in the Falkland Islands.

This farm-out brings in another significant industry partner for FOGL whose interests and expertise complement those of Edison International Spa and substantially improves FOGL's financial position. In the event that the Loligo and Scotia exploration wells are drilled within budget, it is estimated the company's cash balances will not be less than $200 million which will provide significant funds for additional exploration work Given suitable encouragement from the 2012 drilling results, this could include two 3D seismic surveys in the northern and southern licences commencing in early 2013. Further exploratory drilling is then anticipated to commence in late 2014 and may include a programme of up to four exploration wells.

FOGL spudded their Loligo exploration well located some 200 km east of the Falklands on Friday. FOGL holds a 75 per cent interest together with joint venture partner Edison, who hold the remaining 25 per cent. It is the first of a two well exploration programme using the Leiv Eriksson with the operation expected to last about 60 days.

Rockhopper Premier: Oil in 2017 and beyond

TO get the Falkland Islands, "to first oil," the current time line indicates the middle of 2017, visiting Premier Oil and Rockhopper Exploration executives told Penguin News this week

Chief Executive Officer Sam Moody of Rockhopper, and Chief Executive Officer of Premier, Simon Lockett both expressed the hope, however, that oil would be up and running ahead of that date.

The biggest difference between exploration phases and an exploitation phase in terms of what the Falklands will see is. "consistency," said Mr Lockett, because, "when you've got an oil field that will be there for thirty years you can actually plan for it. So that will be one of the key elements."

Next for the partnership will be to move forward with the development and the next phase of exploration.

To get them there it will take approximately £5 billion dollars worth of investment over the field life with, "a couple of billion dollars to get us up and running to first oil," said Mr Lockett.

While the Rockhopper team will continue to take the exploration lead for the project on the existing licences, one task for Premier will be to source a rig for the next phase. Mr Lockett hoped this will be achieved by 2014.

Major pieces of equipment are likely to begin arriving in the Falklands in 2016 and cash does not appear to be a problem. Mr Lockett said, "Premier are fortunate in that the projects we have in other places around the world are generating cash at the moment and we do not need to raise any new incremental money to be able to do the project.

"We as a company have always consistently tried to ensure we have high levels of liquidity to be able to do this kind of thing. So when a great project like Sam's team has built, comes along and you can work together for the next phase, you go and do it."

Mr Moody said he had, "no doubt that Premier will operate a very safe, efficient and effective development of Sealion; and there's probably quite a lot more oil to find in this basin it's not just about Sealion we've already got multiple discoveries of which Sealion is the biggest."

Asked how the visiting team of seven, that includes a Group Drilling Manager and Operations Manager, viewed the local infrastructure in relation to the oil industry, Mr Lockett said, "everything is doable in the Falklands and there isn't anything that we have seen that offers any major concerns whatsoever."

He said there was, "an ongoing conversation" concerning port facilities which had done the job very well for the existing drilling campaigns. "We may need a little bit of upgrading of that facility but 1 don't think it is anything major."

He added, "We need to talk in more detail with the local government here and with people in general as to how they want to bring local content into the project. You've got try and get the right balance for local people and participation in it to the extent that they want to do it."

Asked how the partnership felt about threats from the Argentine government to sue oil companies participating in Falklands' waters, as well as the country's decision to ban British flagged vessels from docking in Buenos Aires, Mr Moody said: "We've been here since 2004 so I think this political background is something we are very used to as a company in all of those years, and we have done a lot of operations both seismic and drilling, it has never stopped us from doing anything."

Mr Lockett added that the oil industry had many, "complex risk issues to handle," including the environment, safety, financing projects through to execution, engineering and sub-surface risk.

He said: "When you look at the whole of that spectrum you get very comfortable with this particular project because it is a quality project. It is a large oil field that Sam and his team should be very proud of and is a good opportunity to deliver some significant benefits to everybody involved, so we looked at that and we looked at all the risks and benefits and decided quite clearly this was a project we wanted to

The group attended a reception at Government House on Wednesday evening at which His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood emphasised: "It's very good to see a major oil company come down here to join in with the hydrocarbons industry; it's a real sign of confidence in the future of hydrocarbons in the Falkland Islands."

He said: "It has been a very good period for all of us with the news on the hydrocarbons front. We now also have French, Italian and US companies participating in our industry down here. Again, this is a huge vote of confidence in us, it's a real sign that the industry is being taken seriously down here; anyone who wanted to operate in the oil industry has had the full support of the British government in writing to them and saying the Falkland Islanders have their right to exploit their own mineral resources and we, the UK Government, will support that right. That has also been valuable in showing the UK's commitment to supporting the Falklands' oil industry.'

IN seeking light relief when things become a little heavy-going in the office, there's nothing quite like a quick scan of the comments on the mercopress.com stories to lift the mood.

Apart from the pretty horrific cat-fights between the 'Malvinistas' and the 'Piratas' as the Argentines and Brits colourfully refer to each other, there's always a little gem, and this week's favourite was a response to the announcement that the Argentine President had banned British flagged vessels from entering the port of Buenos Aires, under the so called Gaucho Rivero law.

According to an individual known only, and rather mysteriously as Ahab: "Knowing the CFK government and their current grip on reality, they will probably soon issue a decree banning all British flagged vessels from docking at the FALKLANDS..."

Were it not for my self-imposed ban on the use of popular internet abbreviations I might have been reduced to simply responding 'lol'.

Not of course that we know for certain that the Argentine President doesn't have a long term and carefully crafted plan (cunningly disguised as the precipitous acts of an unsound mind) but it was some small crumb of comfort that there are others in the world just as bemused by her peculiar actions many of which appear to back-fire on her own people.

The Gaucho Rivero decree is the very same that when enacted in the port of Rio Gallegos some time ago, caused the local Chamber of Commerce President to start ripping his hair out when large cruise vessels, their port fees and their souvenir seeking passengers, were sent packing.

Presumably this latest action then, which surely wouldn't appeal greatly to the BA port authorities (and bearing in mind the oil industry never really planned utilising ports in a blatantly hostile country anyway) is simply another part of the PR campaign to keep the issue under international scrutiny.

In which case, choosing an Olympic week has to have been something of a miscalculation; after all, when it comes to attention seeking it has to be a fact that CFK's hysterical gesticulating didn't have a chance in hell when set against the supreme coolness of the sign of the Bolt.

Further evidence that she's not really thinking it through?

Lively discussion at Fox Bay

A PUBLIC meeting held at Fox Bay this week was well attended, attracting a good turnout from across West Falkland with people travelling from Port Stephens in the South. Manybranch in the North and Dunbar and Hill Cove in the West.

Following a brief presentation on the budget from Acting Financial Secretary Nicola Granger, Chief Executive Keith Padgett discussed the forthcoming referendum and some of the current thinking in terms of format, content and presentation.

This generated a lively discussion about Islander's rights to self-determination. The floor was then opened for general questions and Roads Engineer Simon Catton fielded a range of questions about prioritisation of road works on West Falklands this season.

Dick Sawle talked about the lack of progress on the Immigration Review and the need for more political leadership on this matter in order to move it along.

The meeting was told a review of FIGAS flights would be undertaken in the near future in order to review the cost of flights.

Concordia Bay's schedule was raised to assess whether there was any capability to deliver fuel to settlements that were not currently serviced.

While that suggestion gathered reasonable support some scheduling and logistical questions remained unanswered.

The meeting finished with a presentation from John Ferguson on the new crates the Falkland Islands Meat Company plan to purchase to improve livestock supply. All of the guests stayed the night in Fox Bay which gave some further opportunity for questions and discussions once the meeting had formally closed.

Don't blow this chance, says Judge

STANLEY man David John Hill (31) pleaded guilty to a charge of criminal damage and another of disorderly behaviour in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Carter gave the facts of the incident which occurred in the early hours of July 15. Mr Hill had been to the Governor's Cup darts competition and later to several pubs before making his way home on foot. He had described his condition as "steaming" and said he was not sure of the exact route he took home but assumed it would be the usual way via Snake Hill and past Lookout Camp. Arriving at Scoresby Close he had attempted to gain entry to the house next door to his, become abusive when the occupants turned him away and broke a pane of glass at the front door

ley reminded Mr Hill that he was still under a community service order for another situation relating to drink, and as such was in a, "precarious position."

After adjourning to consider sentencing with JPs Andy Brownlee and Janet Pompert-Robertson, Mr Gumsley said Mr Hill had the JPs to thank for being given another chance, adding "I was minded to lock you up today."

The case was adjourned for four weeks for an all options report from the probation officer to be prepared and to give Mr Hill a chance to attend the alcohol rehabilitation course currently being offered. "If you are serious about stopping drinking this is your chance to prove it," Mr Gumsley said. Referring to another conviction earlier this year, he said, "I give you a chance in March and you blew it, don't blow this one."

Your questions answered

How many privately owned sheep are there on Falklands Landholdings, and how much are they charged for sheep grazing per animal per year?

Falklands Landholdings General Manager Owen Summers provided the following response.

A There are no privately owned sheep on FLH, although there are a number of pets originating from orphaned lambs and other waifs and strays that employees have saved when they have been of poor health. These animals tend to get referred to as the individuals own but in actual fact they remain the property of FLH and FLH receives any income derived from them.

Survey shows high parental approval for Stanley schools

BOTH Stanley schools have received high approval scores in the results of their annual survey of parents.

Among other pleasing ratings at the Falkland Islands Community School 100 per cent of those surveyed believed the school kept their children safe, while 92 per cent felt the school was, "led and managed effectively."

94 per cent said their child enjoyed school and the same amount of parents said, "overall, I am happy with my child's experience at this school."

The school scored marginally lower, but still very well, in response to, "the school helps me to support my child's learning," with 78 per cent agreeing, while 85 per cent believed, "the school helps make sure my child is well-prepared for the future."

Head teacher David Tongue told Penguin News, "We are very happy with the results of the parental survey, which are a testament to the hard work of all the staff at the school. We received very high approval ratings in all categories and we would like to thank all of the parents who took the time to return the survey.

"The response rate was well above the UK national average for secondary schools: however, we would like to encourage all parents to return the survey in future. As a result of the survey we are further developing our mechanisms of helping parents to support their child's learning."

All parents of FICS students received a copy of the parental survey which asked them to provide a response to illustrate their feelings towards thirteen statements. The possible responses were: strongly agree, agree, disagree and strongly disagree, 29 copies of the questionnaire were returned representing 36 students at the school. This equates to just under 25 per cent (23.68 per cent) of students currently on the school's roll. By adding up the percentage of parents that either strongly agreed or agreed with each statement an overall approval rating for each of the thirteen statements was obtained. This was done for parents of all students, parents of students in Key Stage 3 (Years 7-9) and parents of students in Key Stage 4 (Years 10 & 11).

Results released by the Infant Junior School showed 100 per cent of respondees of the opinion, "school helps my child to develop skills," while 95 per cent felt their child was safe at school.

97 per cent said they agreed their child was making good progress while 91 per cent felt there was a good standard of behaviour at the school.

With regard to bullying 83 per cent felt the school dealt with any problems effectively and 93 per cent believed the school kept them well informed.

Initial comments received in response to the Stanley House parent's survey, which had a closing date of July 31 have also been positive. "Overall, I'm very pleased," Director of Health and Education David Jenkins told the Education Board on Thursday.

In readiness for oil development

AS part of its work to make the Falkland Islands Government 'development ready' the Department of Mineral Resources and the Policy Unit have been working together to commission a range of legislative reviews covering a wide range of issues to identify concerns with tax, marine, health and safety and environmental legislation, Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton told the Mineral Resources Committee yesterday.

He said: "Three tenders have been awarded covering the various legislative areas, and work on this has already commenced with the results expected over the next few months."

Concordia back from dry dock

CONCORDIA Bay arrived back in Stanley last night after a successful dry dock in Punta Arenas. Chile.

The Workboat Services' cross sound ferry and outer islands vessel left the Falklands on July 20, and arrived in Punta on schedule but was delayed by a week accessing the dock.

Concordia Bay called at Fox Bay to pick up containers needed for the outer island work and was cleared by Customs and Immigration officials on Thursday morning. No cargo was carried on the return voyage. The vessel is expected to return to New Haven on Sunday when the published schedule will be resumed.

Shipping ban: who will it affect?

THE Buenos Aires Province Senate passed a law last week banning British flagged vessels associated with activities in Falklands waters from calling at Argentina's largest ports.

"This law is a tool in place to continue advancing step-by-step in the fight for sovereignty of natural resources in the Malvinas Islands," lawmaker Patricia Cubria said on Thursday.

But, Falklands Marine Officer Captain Malcolm Jamieson said banning some of the safest and cleanest ships in the world from ports, "flies in the face of international attempts at improving safety at sea, exposing the decision as largely irresponsible from a safety and pollution prevention point of view."

Capt Jamieson said the Red Ensign was synonymous with maintaining standards and the Red Ensign "brand" was recognised within shipping circles as being one of the most trusted and respected flags to register a ship under.

"Ship owners are generally attracted to Red Ensign registries as any ship flying the 'red duster' is recognised as a well run and safe ship. This in turn facilitates trade internationally by a ship not being liable to be hindered or delayed by port state inspections or other related problems. Indeed, the UK fleet in particular is currently ranked fourth best in the world in terms of safety, pollution prevention and working and living conditions and currently amounts to around 1,500 ships," he told Penguin News.

"A ship owner does not normally have to concern himself with another country's politics unless during periods of war, threats of terrorism or some other security issue. Therefore, a ship flying a Red Ensign that may go to Argentine ports is a concern to the ship owner who only wants his ship to travel freely without hindrance as per International Conventions as this is how he earns his money," explained Capt Jamieson.

Some ship owners have side tracked this problem already by leaving the UK Registry and there is a risk that this may get worse, he added.

"Ironically, the Falklands should not be affected too much by this latest development. It remains to be seen if the latest 'law' passed by Argentina is enforced or indeed legally enforceable and who is going to be affected most in the long run," said Capt Jamieson.

The first in a spate of attempts to create problems for shipping came about in 2010 with the issue of Presidential Decree 256/2010 that required, "authorisation" for vessels travelling to or from the Falklands and South Georgia.

The UK firmly rejected the legality of the Decree but this was followed in December 2011 with a decision by Mercosur to deny access to member ports for ships flying the "defaced" Red Ensign of the Falklands.

The UK response was made by the Foreign Secretary in January 2012 pointing out that this decision had no basis in international law and amounted to an economic blockade of the Islands.

Dauntless moored at MH

FINALLY after a great deal of publicity surrounding the deployment of HMS Dauntless to the South Atlantic the vessel is scheduled to be docked at Mare Harbour on the weekend.

One of the 200 strong crew onboard the modern Type 45 destroyer is a Falklands veteran the BBC reports. Weapons engineer Steve Collins was just 18 and on his first deployment when he was on HMS Amelope, sunk by the Argentine air force in San Carlos Sound.

School progress

THE temporary classroom for Pre-School is still progressing, Director of Health and Education David Jenkins informed the Education Board yesterday.

The main structure is complete, however, the outside grounds work still needs to be finished and the electrics installed, he explained.

"I'm pleased to report that PWD has worked very hard and the building should be ready to move in this week," he said.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a alimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

ON Monday I had just two meetings, including an introduction to the new Civil Military Liaison Officer designate, here on a familiarisation visit prior to taking up his post in the next couple of months. On Tuesday we headed off for Fox Bay to hold a public meeting including a presentation on the budget. We will be accompanied by a number of senior officials including the Chief Executive so should have an opportunity to answer lots of questions.

BACK in town I have several oil related meetings with Rockhopper/ Premier regarding the proposed oil development. We look forward to seeing the report from the group who did a socioeconomic study for Rockhopper in advance of their development phase. Once we have seen that we can make progress on commissioning our own to look at the broader issues rather than just one group's development. It will give us an opportunity to consult with all interest groups in a professional and objective way. I hope we can ensure that individuals also have their say and are not fobbed off with a superficial on-line survey which cannot be accessed by all.

GOOD news on the education front, the Infant Junior School has had some good results recently and their prize giving on Monday was great fun. I'm sorry to miss the secondary presentations on Tuesday because of the Fox Bay meeting. The PWD hope to finish the new preschool building in time for next term to free up some valuable space for our expanding population. Other good news is the retention of the services of most of the teaching staff giving important continuity of policies and practice. Even better we have two young men recently qualified and currently getting essential teaching experience overseas before they return to take up posts here and several more part way through, or about to start teaching qualifications. There are many opportunities for those moving into further and higher education and I encourage those young people to use the internet and talk to those already working in their chosen area to research the best routes and courses

The big one that didn't get away

THE future didn't look bright for the l thousands of sea trout at the aquaculture site near Moody Brook a month ago, but we are pleased to report this week that they are thriving in the care of local business man Simon Hardeas-

The Development Corporation made the decision at its June board meeting to close the aquaculture project down as it was felt it had the sea trout a year ago been progressed as far as possible without private investment. With the future of the thousands of sea trout of various sizes in the tanks at the site at risk. Simon stepped up and offered to look after the fish in the hope that a business arrangement could be agreed.

A month later he has confirmed he has a temporary lease on the site and equipment with financial backing from a local fishing company and is excited about the future prospects of farming sea trout in the Falklands.

"We have a product and a mar-

have the processing side of things sorted out we can look at importing cages to grow fish to a marketable size in the sea," he told Penguin News this week. He added that the business could potential possibly extend to others who wanted to get involved in growing fish and was ideally suited to Camp development.

Simon has considerable experience in aquaculture in the Falklands having in the mid 1980s managed the Development Corporation's salmon farming project at Fox Bay where the fish were grown to a marketable size in sea cages in the harbour, but was not progressed past the export market stage. He has also grown and harvested mussels and oysters locally in the past and currently processes fish fillets of numerous deep sea fish species for local market as well as fresh and smoked mullet through the company Falklands Fresh Ltd.

SCB rejects DFS claims of laundering

STANDARD Chartered PLC (SCB) has strongly rejected the position and portraval of facts made by the New York State Department of Financial Services (DES)

On Monday the US regulator claimed that SCB had illegally, 'schemed' with Iran to launder as much as $250bn (£161bn) for nearly a decade.

A DFS spokesperson said the international banking group had hidden 60,000 secret transactions for Iranian financial institutions that were subject to US economic sanctions and labelled UK-based SCB a, "rogue institution.

The group has been threatened with having its US banking licence revoked

SCB responded on Monday with a press release saying that in January 2010, the group had voluntarily approached all relevant US agencies, including the DFS, and informed them a review of historical US dollar transactions and their compliance with US sanctions had been initiated. This review focused primarily on transactions relating to Iran in the period 2001-2007, and in particular, "compliance with the f-turn framework established by the US authorities to enable ongoing US dollar trade with Iran by other countries," it was stated in a press release.

A SCB spokesperson said the group had ceased all new business with Iranian customers in any currency more than five years ago and presentations had been made to the DFS and other US agencies concerning the strength of its global sanctions compliance programme during the period under review and through to the present day

The SCB group did not believe the order issued by the DFS presented a full and accurate picture of the facts with well over 99.9 per cent of the U-turn regulation compliant transactions relating to Iran disclosed. The total value of transactions which did not follow the U-turn was under $14m, said the spokesperson.

SCB is engaged in ongoing discussions with the relevant US agencies. Resolution of such matters normally proceeds through a co-ordinated approach by such agencies and said it was a surprise to receive the order from the DFS, given that discussions with the agencies were ongoing. "We intend to discuss these matters with the DFS and to contest their position," said the spokes-person, adding: "The group takes its responsibilities very seriously, and seeks to comply at all times with the relevant laws and regulations. It is in this spirit we initiated this review and have engaged with the US agencies.

RFIP update

IN the July 27 edition we briefly reported that the restructured post of Chief Inspector with the Royal Falkland Islands Police would add up to an estimated increased annual cost of £34,014. This was based on information provided from an Executive Council decision.

Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden has since explained that several changes within the RFIP results in a much lower increase.

Superintendent Marsden said: "There has been no reduction or increase in the number of overall supervisory / management posts and there has been no reduction in the number of constables (in fact the MLAs have approved for an increase in establishment of two more)

"The Chief Inspector (Head of Service post) has been created by reducing one sergeants post and downgrading a leading constables post to a constable. These changes modernise the supervisory and management structure to better define roles and responsibilities and the overall net cost is £1.517,"

Fruit update

Maintenance was the key

I WAS amazed that following the publicity given to the future of FIPASS, it drew no letters of response regarding the ignorance of our government.

As with a lot of the new machinery government acquires, maintenance and repairs are kept to a minimum. They are run until they stop or break, and then dumped before new replacements are purchased; similar to FIPASS. Initially the barges were cleaned and painted annually, well until our government got hold of them, then that almost stopped. Now they are worried that the barges could be beyond maintenance and repair.

When FIPASS was established, visiting surveyors told a group of us that providing the barges (in particular) were looked after and maintained annually FIPASS would be good for many years.

With all the thousands of square acres of rock surrounding the town, why import the brains of Britain, when a lot has been tried out here, and there are plenty of blokes with such skills about—we just need to ask them.

solve. But, not impossible that it was actually done by a person at the request of Buenos Aires; they have been losing the international political argument this year, and have scored some own goals, including their own state sponsored desceration of our 1914 war memorial. BA can see the need for some PR propaganda of their own, but unintelligent as CFK and T'man are, they have missed it by dragging in all the fantasy of alleged militarisation and colonialism.

South Georgia fishing news

JULY was a busy month for fishing in South Georgia beginning with all six longliners licensed to fish for toothfish in the SGMZ. Catches remained reasonably good and on June 8 one longliner sailed for Stanley to make a mid-season transhipment, returning to the MZ on the June 14.

Two longliners entered Cumberland Bay on July 9 to transfer hait between the vessels. Towards the end of the month two of the longliners completed their Total Allowable Catch and sailed to Stanley for eatch verification.

There were two trawlers fishing for krill at the beginning of the month and catches were described as very good.

Two more trawlers were inspected and licensed, one for krill on July 8 and one to fish for krill and icefish on July 21.

Also on June 21 one trawler completed fishing and sailed for Punta Arenas.

A reefer arrived in Cumberland Bay on July 4 to tranship krill from two of the trawlers.

The reefer remained in harbour for most of the rest of the month taking regular loads from the trawlers and then sailed to the Falklands for bunkers and a crew exchange.

Albatross increase not reflected further south

AN increase in the population of the Black-browed albatross population on the Falkland Islands, as reported in Penguin News on July 20, is not currently reflected in South Georgia say scientists.

South Georgia has the second largest population of the Blackbrowed albatross in the world next to the Falkland Islands.

Data that showed the Falklands population of the species has been submitted to BirdLife International for use in the Red List assessment process. Although the South Georgia population appears to be in decline, because the Falklands' population constitutes such a large proportion of the global population, this is likely to result in the global conservation status of the species being changed to a less threatened category.

The South Georgia Newsletter reports that by-catch of Black-browed albatrosses in South Georgia fisheries has through the effective implementation of a range of mitigation measures been successfully reduced to negligible numbers.

It says given the wide ranging nature of the species, and the lack of evidence for threats at their breeding sites, the ongoing decline in the numbers of Blackbrowed albatross breeding at South Georgia is likely due, at least in part, to the impacts of external fisheries, those operating on the high seas and in the jurisidictional waters of other countries.

Dr Cleo Small, a coordinator of BirdLife International's Global Seabird Programme at the RSPB, said "When 17 out of the world's 22 species of albatross are listed as threatened with extinction, it is hugely encouraging that Black-browed albatross colonies in the Falkland Islands are now known to be increasing.

"There is still some way to go, with the UK Overseas Territories' other major black-browed albatross population on South Georgia continuing to decline, but this result gives us great hope for turning around the fortunes of other albatross species.

"By-catch in fisheries is the main threat, and efforts are underway in many longline and trawl fleets worldwide to reduce the number of albatross killed. If we can keep this up, there is real hope that the Black-browed albatross will set a trend for the

Extraordinary things on the world stage for Team GB

AS a Briton the Olympic medal table makes pretty satisfying reading at this moment in time. China and America lead the way as you would expect, but Great Britain sits comfortably, and perhaps a little surprisingly, in third place. This may well change as the games go on but far from seeing this as a reason to not mock anyone, I think we need to get our jibes in now before we lose the chance. You can bet that if our Australian friends were in the same situation as we currently are then by now we would be wearily rejecting their phone calls as we know that they ve just thought of another joke about the British performances. I read last night about a number of Australians being afflicted with a condition known as 'Olympic Finger', which occurs when you have to keep repeatedly scrolling down the screen of your tablet device to try find your country on the medal table. It is also difficult to resist noting that our Argentine neighbours have actually fared much worse than our antipodean brothers, with a solitary bronze to their name as I type this. I don't know much about their team but I'd certainly have a look at their training circumstances in the run up to the games if I were them.

Many of our medals thus far have come either on the water or on the cycling track. The Australian team were actually moved to complain about the noisy support the British team had received during the rowing events as they claimed their crews could not hear each other give instructions. How the British crews seem to have managed to hear each other despite this noise was not disclosed in the article I read, but I imagine it's along the same lines as the ability I have developed to not hear someone speaking when a key moment of football commentary is occurring.

As a married man, I believe there's rarely a more high stakes gamble than the moment when you have done this and suddenly realised that your wife is staring at you and waiting for an answer to the question she's just asked. One option in this situation would be to confess immediately that you were not listening, apologise and move on, and one day I hope to meet a man who has chosen this option rather than just guessing what an appropriate answer would be and going with that. On the other hand I am pretty sure that Amy has actually used this to her benefit as well, I certainly feel like I have attended a number of events at her work and with her family which she swears blind se asked me about and which I apparently agreed to. Like most men. I married someone far smarter than me so the feeling that I am being 'nudged' into decisions which I believe I am making of my own free will is never entirely absent, and if that is the case, then I must take my hat off to her.

We went to a couple of Olympic volleyball sessions on Friday afternoon at Earls Court which was fantastic. The first match was a high class and tightly fought affair between Turkey and South Korea. The second was, sadly, a much less exciting match between Great Britain and The Dominican Republic. The support for 'Team GB' (a phrase which still refuses to roll easily of my tongue) was fantastic and each time they scored a point the noise was incredible. The rarity of them actually scoring these points meant the celebrations never seemed to diminish, as it surely would have had they been scoring freely. I believe that the Dominicans had almost reached double figures by the time the British girls troubled the scoreboard for the first time. They were pretty thoroughly thrashed in three straight games and the best compliment we could offer was that they seemed to be trying hard. To be fair it was the girls second ever match of volleyball at this level so it would be harsh to judge their long term prospects on this performance alone, I hope.

I realized afterwards that this, technically, would be the first proper sporting event that our unborn child ('Dragonbaby') will have attended. In the midst of what has been a pretty great Olympics for the British team as a whole. I quite like the fact that his introduction to British sport was a team of amateurs who, although hopelessly outclassed by their opposition, chased every ball and never stopped trying, as clear as it was that they were on a hiding to nothing. I also like the fact the support for them never wavered. Given that his first 'real' introduction to professional sport in a few years time is likely to be watching a bunch of highly talented but equally highly overpaid mercenaries on a football field, this offered a nice contrast

The difference in the support evident on Friday compared to that which I am more familiar with was also marked. I once took Amy to a football match between Arsenal and Blackpool (Because I know how to treat a lady) and after about 30 seconds an Arsenal player gave the ball away to the opposition. A number of Arsenal fans around us were immediately on their feet screaming obscenities at their own player and letting him know exactly how rubbish they thought he was. Amy was confused as to why these people would abuse their own players in such a manner, or indeed why they would pay so much money for tickets when they clearly are not enjoying the experience.

London has been transformed for the games. Legions of volunteers in their brightly coloured uniforms steer people cheerfully towards the venues from each relevant tube stop and from everything I've seen, they're brilliantly representing both themselves and London as a whole. The soldiers who have been bought in to bring the security levels up to an appropriate level have been doing the job brilliantly, and I'm glad the organisers have been giving any unused tickets to them whenever possible. I am of course biased but I can honestly say I think the Olympics have been great thus far. I understand many people do not care for them of course, and I know of certain members of my own family who begrudge having to reschedule their watching of Eastenders' due to the amount of sports on TV right now. Personally though, as a sports fan, I love it. Bizarrely, Amy is currently as keen as I am on watching the various events as they unfold. She rang me at work the other day and asked me to tell my Spanish friend (Roddy) that Spain's representative in the tennis match she was watching had been very unsporting and thrown his racket on the ground when a decision went against him. From the way she was talking I think she may be waiting for an apology from Roddy on behalf of the Spanish nation. I don't want to suggest that part of the reason is she's currently in the midst of her dissertation for her Masters at the moment, but she certainly seems more susceptible to being distracted than usual.

It's difficult for me to pick one highlight of the games thus far, but I think perhaps the best measure of it's universal appeal would be to base it on what has drawn in people who don't normally watch sports. I spoke to someone on the train this morning who described themselves as 'Not a sports person'. They spoke of their bafflement in the aftermath of watching Mo Farah storm his way to an Olympic Gold in the 10,000 metres on Saturday night, as they realized they'd been on their feet for the last 30 seconds or so of the race yelling at their TV and screaming encouragement at a man they'd never heard of half an hour before. That, for me, summed up the whole Olympic experience for a lot of people I know. We live in a society which is, at times, seemingly obsessed with celebrity, but for a few weeks every four years the people our kids see on TV's and root for are athletes who have worked and trained for years to try and achieve extraordinary things on the world stage. Quite frankly I'm going to be immensely sad when the Games are over, but I guess it's the fact they only come round once every four years which makes it so special.

Open mic hits the right note with local musicians

good use with musicians of all ages and genres getting together at the Trough on Friday for an evening of pleasant surprises.

Organised by Stanley House's guitar strumming, young at heart house parent Dae Peck at the request of her toe-tapping wards, the open mic night was a great way for them to showcase their latest songs and enjoy the music of others at an event not restricted

Stanley House band drummer Bethan Callaghan took up her sticks and provided the beat for many songs and wowed the crowd as she sang Elkie Brooks' throaty song Pearls a Singer.

Almost stealing the show, however was Declan Bonner, Ciaran Nye, Sam Toolan and Dean Dent (aka FI Peas) as with a change of tempo they bopped their way through The Time (Dirty Bit) and had the girls on their feet shouting encouragement and vying for best position for photographs.

The Stanley House Band all delivered solid performances with Dae providing backing music on guitar before she took centre stage herself for a few good old country songs that drew the more energetic to the

THE long winter evenings have evidently been put to chance to kick back and appreciate his effortless style which at the same time always leaves this queen of the three cord country song feeling a tad embarrassed to inflict a less gifted style upon the audience - but I did anyway

Boot scooting line dancer Nial Evans confirmed his allegiance to the country scene with Alan Jackson's Tall Tall Trees and Dylan Berntsen even had this tough old bird feeling a bit gooey as, barely able to see over the drums he beat out a rock solid rhythm full of promise

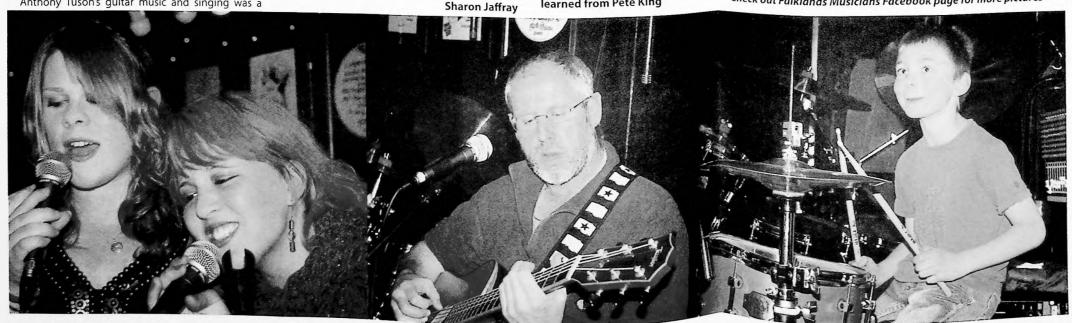

Paul Howes, whose distinct voice is always a firm favourite with me sang his signature tune You Don't Know What It's Like, a song no longer attributed to the Bee Gees in Stanley's music circles and then teamed up with Sorrel for a moving rendition of the Oscar winning song Falling Slowly from the movie Once.

Such was the quality of the music and the relaxed atmopshere of like-minded souls sharing their pastime that three and a half hours of music disappeared in what seemed like the blink of an eye.

Dae said she was surprised at how popular the evening had proved, with so many musicians turning up and being so willing to perform. The next one is already being planned - see you there.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

1 DO believe the snow is moving on at last and it does not seem quite so wintry. Or maybe it's that there is a slight change in the amount of light in the morning. isn't it depressing to wake up in the dark? Whatever, it certainly has started to feel as though Spring might be on the way

I remember my Dad, well, my step-dad really, though it never felt like that with him; he was always such a great guy, used to tease me saying that the 1st of August was the beginning of Spring. He knew full well that I would rise to it every time and point out that Spring did NOT arrive before the 21st of September, Well, this year maybe he will be right after all. I hope

Having shifted a few more weeds from the edge of the paths. I can see the snowdrops are about to flower. They and the winter aconites are usually the first bulbs to flower. There are some miniature daffodils showing buds as well though, which is for me anyway, quite exciting.

Removing some of the easy, closer weeds and the dead annuals from last year has uncovered a lot of bulbs and small plants which have been sheltering under them. For all that I complain about weeds they do a wonderful job of sheltering in the winter and little damage in terms of taking all the food from the plants as neither need much during that time.

The woodier parts of the dead annuals go into the trailer together with the weeds, the soft parts and any non-flowering annual weeds get thrown on the compost heap

Some years ago I was given an indoor plant called a Kalanchoe, it's a hybrid named 'Tessa' and it's one of those that hang over

Rooted indoor fuchsias and below: rose cuttings undercover the pot and cover themselves in flowers, which are orangey/red. This one is really covered in buds this year so I have started feeding it, and any other plants which are starting to make growth inside, with a weak solution of Phostrogen, wonderful stuff at this time of year. Later on I will change over to a tomato food but just now this one is perfect for

It was only when I started to feel the need for a spot of Spring cleaning that I realised just how many little plants and cuttings in soil and in water I have managed to fill the window sills with. It is much too cold to take them out to the greenhouse yet so they will have to stay in a while longer. Meanwhile sometime in the coming week, unless we have a very cold spell again, I shall clean out the electric propagator and get it going somewhere not too warm but with plenty of light, a South or West facing window perhaps. I'm itching to start some seeds into life, but it is just as important to keep the seedlings warm and well lit even once they have been pricked out so staring them off too soon would just lead to crowding and disappointments.

The frosts have loosened a lot of plants and seedlings, I spent a long time a couple of days ago putting the roots of tree seedlings back in the soil (my index finger is now suffering) and gently stepping around loosened shrubs and small trees. At this time of year most of them are dormant so as long as you don't break the roots that is all that is needed.

This afternoon I thought I would try to trim the cherry tree, the top could do with removing by a couple of feet but for today

I just trimmed off any crossing branches and cut back those which looked old as well as those growing too low on the trunk and likely to be troublesome when weeding around it.

Our windows are placed very high up on the wall, in fact, if I was any shorter I would need a box to stand on to look out.

Every cloud has a silver lining though and the high windows mean the radiators are well below, just perfect for propagating purposes giving some bottom heat whilst not cooking the plants. I had placed two pots full of fuchsia and pelargonium cuttings, left over when trimming the plants in the porch, on the window-sill. Checking today I saw that the pots were full of roots and so went and filled some small pots with soil and, when the soil had warmed up indoors went to work (on the kitchen table) in the warmth, potting them on, and trimming off the leggy tops. They will quickly fill the pots with roots now and will then be moved to their final pots.

The rose cuttings that have rooted in the tunnel are now in pots just big enough to suit their root balls. They will now await better weather to begin the hardening off process; there are many more rose cuttings to root yet but they will catch up with those earlier ones very quickly.

One plant, grown from seed, which looks very nice at all times but is particularly lovely just now is an Ozothamnus shrub (kerosene bush) it used to be lumped with the shrub Helichrysums (curry plants) but now has it own name. It is a small evergreen bush, it has never flowered for me yet but it has lovely yellowish leaf buds at the ends of each stem which is covered in lime green leaves.

David wins August medal

FOURTEEN golfers signed in for the August Medal sponsored by Decor Services on Sunday. A bitterly cold wind from the south west made conditions challenging but good scores were possible with the greens running fast and true.

David Beynon continued his good winter form with a solid round of 75 for a Nett 69 to secure the win. Tony McMullen took second on a count back from Ric Nye. Ric has taken the lead in the League and Medal League standings and also tops the eclectic standings.

Bermuda Shorts: This season, the Stanley golf course will host eight Island Games qualifying rounds. To qualify for Bermuda, players will need to complete a minimum of five qualifying rounds.

For the men; the top four players with the lowest aggregate scratch score qualify automatically. Should one of the top four opt out, alternates will also need five rounds and a handicap of 14 or less.

Motivated for a triathlon challenge

IF you are feeling inspired by the Olympic achievements of Team GB's Brownlee brothers, Stanley Swimming Club is holding a triathlon on November 4.

The Club is hoping to send two young athletes to the Bermuda Island Games next year and is organising the sporting event to support their fund raising efforts.

It has been many years since the last triathlon was held in the Falklands and organiser John Carlin believed there was an "appetite for another" ignited by the Olympic gold Britain claimed in the sport.

"We're hoping for people to start training soon and by emailing fi.triathlon@gmail.com they can get hold of the maps so they can start preparing for the routes," said Mr Carlin.

The gruelling event will test fitness and endurance to the maximum with the adult course combining a 1.5 km swim (60 lengths of Stanley swimming pool), a 20km bike ride and 10km run over undulating roads.

Depending on the number of entrants the triathlon will be run in group stages, separating individual and team entrants, determined by the pool's maximum lane capacity. The changeover from swim to cycle is hoped to be swift and Mr Carlin is appealing for volunteers to help the entrants with their bikes and to marshal the roads

After the main events of the day there will be a celebratory prizegiving at the Narrows Bar in the evening with prizes for teams and individuals to be confirmed.

There is a shorter junior course provided for those under 16 but teams with an adult will be required to complete the adult course.

Entrants need to email fi.triathlon@gmail.com by October 28 for more details of the event and payment of entry fee.

First Citizens Advice Bureau for Falklands

A CITIZENS Advice Bureau (CAB) manned by a group of volunteers will be freely accessible to the people of the Falklands from September 3, 2012 onwards.

The brainchild of Attorney General Mark Lewis in April this year, he contacted Keith Watson of law firm Pinsent Masons, who agreed to help set up the CAB which will offer advice on a range of issues including legal queries and debt advice through to form filling.

Mr Watson, who has nineteen years of experience with a Citizens Advice Bureau in South Shields said: "The purpose of the CAB is to give initial free advice to those who may be unsure of their rights, or may need help with sorting out their finances, or help dealing with officialdom. The CAB can give free preliminary advice and point them in the right direction and help with completing paperwork. We believe there is a demand and need for this service in our community."

He told Penguin News it was not expected that the CAB would involve many costs, however its creation had been supported by Stanley Services Ltd who provided start-up funding.

Cable & Wireless have provided the telephone number and will cover the cost of calls and the Falkland Islands Development Corporation will provide a meeting room available for appointments.

Mr Watson explained that although not a charity as such, the CAB would also not be a profit making organisation

Sharon Middleton a volunteer advisor and also a member of the Falkland Islands Human Rights Group said the need for the service was identified in the Human Rights National Action Plan. "We hope that it will be of real benefit to the community. We already have a bank of core volunteers but would love to hear from others who are willing to offer their time, knowledge and skills."

Dick Sawle has also offered his services to the CAB, as have Alison Barton of Consultancy Services and Karen Lee of Wilkins Kennedy, in terms of offering taxation advice.

All advice offered will be in confidence and, "in the interests of those people without influence of an outside body," states the recently drawn up constitution.

People will be able to contact the CAB on tel: 55355 between the hours of 4pm and 6pm on week day evenings, or can leave a message at anytime said Mr Watson. An appointment will be arranged for them to see an appropriate volunteer advisor.

Steeple celeb

LEAD singer and songwriter of Texas folk band Shearwater, Jonathan Meiburg (36) has returned to the Falkland Islands to spend time on the island of Steeple Jason in search of album inspiration. An avid bird lover his Masters Degree thesis was titled The Biogeography of the Striated Caracaras, and he spent time on the Jason Islands some years ago. Meiburg will remain on the island until September 6 before leaving the Falklands two days later.

Desire news

DESIRE Petroleum plc, the exploration company wholly focused on the North Falklands Basin, announced yesterday that the volumetric assessment of the total Elaine and Isobel prospects indicated gross prospective resources comparable with the size of Sea Lion (Rockhopper Exploration licence) and had a 30 per cent geological chance of success.

The Elaine and Isobel prospects are located wholly within the PL004a licence in which Desire has a 92.5 per cent interest.

Penguin News

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

As a regular user of Stanley Common I joined others in their dismay at the ditches recently excavated at Whale Bone Cove. Not because of the quality of the work, which is neat and tidy I hasten to add, but because of the long term impact this indiscriminate action will have on the area.

The question seems to be why there was a need to hack away at the area to the West of the road when adequate drainage could have been achieved on the top side of the road and via the existing ditches. Roads Engineer Simon Catton has endeavoured to explain the reasoning (see page 3) and 1 appreciate some of his points, but having drawn on the opinion of some people who have been draining in the Falklands for many years, 1 am not entirely convinced ditching to that extent was necessary.

I'll bet my last fiver that a lush and flora rich area will become an at best, mediocre piece of land and sadly. I am reliably informed that up to 200 metres on either side of the ditches could deteriorate quite drastically, so I doubt those making the early morning dash for mushrooms later in the summer will have much luck.

A trip around Cape Pembroke in perfect spring weather on the weekend compounded my theory that the Falklands in general is becoming so dry that any form of drainage, let alone in sensitive areas requires serious consideration well before a ditching bucket swings into action. Water holes I would normally think twice about entering with my Land Rover I swept through on my bike without so much as a splash up the trouser leg. Not exactly scientific evidence I know, but when backed up by a recent Farm Business Water Survey conducted by the DoA which showed 67 per cent of respondents already had limited water supply for stock and crops in the Summer and two thirds believed water was becoming more scarce. I think it is fair to say that care needs to be taken to maintain a water supply in vulnerable and environmentally valuable areas.

It's so frustrating that the public and user groups can endeavour to protect the Common from being abused when "the Crown" can come along and without any prior consultation with relevant departments or an impact assessment, carve damaging ditches spoiling not only a local recreation area but also one visited by a large number of revenue generating tourists each season.

Surely it's just a simple matter of policy and not complicated legislation that could prevent a repeat of this?

Krysteen and Stacy head for youth parliament

TWO young Falkland Islanders, Stacy Bragger and Krysteen Ormond, have been nominated by the Legislative Assembly to represent the Falkland Islands at the 5th Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP) in London between December 4-8 2012.

This year's CYP will focus on governance, looking at the concept from a local, national and international perspective. Representatives are chosen for demonstrating an interest in the Commonwealth and parliamentary affairs and potential leadership qualities. Good communications skills are essential. The CYPs will be expected to take an active role in the debates and proceedings of the Parliament, which is hosted at the Palace of Westminster.

Member of the Legislative Assembly. Hon Mike Summers said. "Experiences gained at last years CYP by Nadia Smith and Pippa Christie, and by the younger generation of Islanders that accompanied MLAs to Washington and New York earlier this year, not only enriches their experiences but also helps disseminate the Falklands message to a wider audience. These generations will represent the Falklands at home and overseas for many years to come; the people they meet now and the experience gained will stand them in good stead."

Krysteen Ormond commented: "I feel honoured to have been chosen to attend the Youth Parliament as a representative of the Islands. I had a wonderful time in the United States earlier this year assisting MLAs Edwards and Summers, so the chance to go out again and share the Islands' message with the international community will be really exciting, not to mention the insight I will get into governance and the Commonwealth countries will be invaluable."

Stacy Bragger said: "I am delighted to have been selected to represent the Falkland Islands at the Commonwealth Youth Parliament. It should be a fascinating experience and a great opportunity to learn more about parliamentary affairs and the Commonwealth. I am looking forward to being able to continue the recent work of other young Falkland Islanders in promoting our messages internationally."

Probation not prison

MARIO Youde (27) of Mount Pleasant was on Wednesday sentenced to serve an 18 month probation order and pay £85 costs for two charges of assault and one of causing actual bodily harm.

Mr Youde had admitted to the charges on July 18, and a presentence report had been ordered which raised concerns about domestic violence, anger management and alcohol. The report advised a programme to help correct his behaviour. Whilst in the UK in 2008 he was convicted of battery and ordered to attend an anger management course which he had appealed to have changed to a fine so he could take up employment in the Falklands.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said Mr Youde had, "blown," his chance to get help and told him, "you were aware of your partner's vulnerability and still you used physical force to beat out your frustration on her."

Mr Gumsley said: "You have the problem. If your partner annoys you, end the relationship." He stressed he was not sending Mr Youde to prison but should he fail to comply with the probation order, "there are no prizes for guessing what will happen."

Also on Wednesday Melvyn Clifton (32) was refused an application to end his driving disqualification. Mr Clifton had served 30 months of his 36 month disqualification for drink driving. Senior Magistrate Gumsley pointed to his, "quite considerable," list of previous convictions and said, "drink-driving is a scourge on this community," and that only in exceptional circumstances were disqualifications overturned.

Roads Engineer: ditches are to drain FIGAS area

A SERIES of ditches on the west side of the road at the Lady Liz has caused consternation among the general public who enjoy the area for a variety of recreational activities.

Several expressed concern that work could be carried out without any permission given that it was Common Land, but the Environmental Planning Office has confirmed that "Crown works carried out on Crown land" do not require any prior authorisation.

Roads Engineer Simon Catton explained that the ditches had been cleared to help drain the landscaping recently carried out to the north of Stanley Airport as well as water build up around the road culverts and to assist drainage at the airport, which said Mr Catton, "has serious drainage issues."

He said existing ditches had also been cleaned out while maintaining the old routes wherever possible, however in a few areas the ditches had been straightened to ensure the water flowed at a steady rate, or by-passed the existing crossings.

"We found whilst cleaning out the ditches that any interruption in the steady flow, such as bends, rapidly caused a blockage as there is a lot of sand being moved by the water and this settles quickly,"

Newly constructed bridges over ditching at Whale Bone Cove said Mr Catton.

He said the existing crossings had been by-passed because they were so full it would have been next to impossible to adequately clean them out; removing the pipes allowed the water to flow more steadily and because some of the old culverts had old pipes in them, adding, "some of which we think were used for helicopter refuelling, so didn't want to take the chance that any fluids were left in them that could leak if we broke them."

The Lands Committee following a request from a member of the public had requested pedestrian bridges for a number of the ditches and Mr Catton said this had been carried out.

Planning Officer Payne said information he had received from Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside was that with regard to crossing points, PWD would prefer not to reinstate the vehicle crossing points (pipes/culverts) as they eventually fill up. With a good road alternative to access Gypsy Cove there was no longer a need for vehicles to access the route and the removal of pipes/culverts should reduce the vehicle damage to the Common in that area, he

Invasive Species Officer Brian Summers however commented that the works had not improved the area as far as the horses grazing in the area were concerned. "The old ditches meandered around and created pools whereas the straight ditches empty the water directly into the sea."

He said the ditches without crossings would deter the recreational off-road drivers, "but not the dedicated who will just plough through creating more mess."

New livestock crates for East and West

John Ferguson

LIVESTOCK haulage should become easier in the forthcoming season with the introduction of suitable sized crates and equipment for both East and West Falkland

Getting livestock hauliers and the right equipment in place has been a challenge in the last couple of years, with regard to a steady supply to the Falkland Islands Meat Company (FIMCo), so the Board agreed the company should become more involved. General Manager John Ferguson gave an update at the Public Meeting held at Goose Green on Tuesday saying that a mid-sized crate was needed on the West to allow cost effective haulage to the ferry, and a similar one for the North Camp

Many farms have been using the small Ifor Williams type stock trailers which are now suffering from the multiple trips on the roads which are also time consuming.

We were also relying on commercial hauliers to provide the right type of trailers for the six Suttons crates, used in pairs," he said, adding that as hauliers change from time to time, and because it can be difficult to get hauliers when there is a lot of other business around, it was decided that FIMCo needed to protect itself and its supply chain. It was therefore agreed to purchase a 30 foot crate for the West (capacity approx 200 sheep), to feed from farms to the 40 foot rig; a 28 foot crate for the East (capacity approx 160 sheep); three 40 foot tandem axle skeleton trailers and a 6x4 tractor unit. The tractor unit is mainly for a back-up and extra runs to NewHaven, and FIMCo related work to and from Stanley, explained Mr Ferguson.

Standing Finance Committee approved the use of some savings made on completing the Phase III Sand Bay Upgrade within budget to partially fund this and FIMCo has taken out a normal commercial loan to pay for the balance.

No extra money is requested from FIG.

The crates and trailers will be hired out to DoA approved livestock hauliers on a per load basis. "The charges will be based on full cost recovery plus maintenance, whilst trying to keep the charges as low as possible for farmers," said Mr Ferguson.

Genetic programme triumph

SALADERO Farm, home to the National Stud Flock, has achieved, "brilliant results," from its Embryo Transfer and Artificial Insemination programme this year, Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday told Penguin News this week

This is part of an ongoing Department of Agriculture genetic programme.

Ms Thoday explained that 160 Polwarth ewes were artificially inseminated with Merino semen shipped in from Australia: "In the last century the ability for ram semen to be frozen and shipped all over the world had been a huge leap forward for farm livestock breeding programmes. On a small Island like this it has benefits for us in terms of sourcing new genetics, maybe of different breeds or better versions of the breeds we already have."

She said the team also carried out an embryo transfer programme using local ewe genetics to create fertilised embryos to implant in recipient ewes. Those ewes were rented from Falklands Landholdings (FLH), "as they can be any breed as they are just the oven, the bun is made up from Saladero ram semen and Saladero ewe eggs. Artificial insemination allows us to source genetics from all over the world and embryo transfer allows us to utilise our own genetics but more efficiently; using these renta-mum FLH ewes means we can have more lambs on the ground than we could from our own ewe flock."

The embryo transfer and artificial insemination was carried out by Mic and Hayley from Allstock (Australia) Ltd who many residents will already know as they have been visiting the Islands for several years.

Ms Thoday said, "The results we expect from these processes is not as high as natural mating as the procedure is surgical and semen and embryos are very delicate and temperature sensitive, so they don't suit on farm environments. However, over the years the system has got pretty slick and everyone in the team takes turns to 'observe' what Mic and Hayley are doing in the lovely warm room with all the heaters.

"We can usually expect up to 50 per cent conception rate for embryo transfer (ET) and 65 per cent for artificial insemination (A1). This year we achieved 88 per cent for ET and 113 per cent for AI. You can get over 100 per cent due to the twins, so there is more than one lamb per ewe on average."

She said results were also good in the naturally mated group of ewes which had achieved 102 per cent conception rate. Results are known because the department pregnancy test the ewes. This gives valuable information in order to plan lambing paddocks based on the number of ewes.

She added, "We also draft off our twins so they can run together as they will need more food and we can draft off our drys so they can be grazed out the way, and not take up valuable food that the pregnant ewes can be eating.

"In total on the farm this year we could have 114 sets of twins and 915 lambs. It will be a busy October."

She said the record success with the breeding programme had been a mixture of team work from everyone at the DoA, and the continued success from using Allstock.

"We are looking forward to the lambing and subsequent work that goes toward growing the ram and ewe lambs on for selection, and of course for the ram lambs a future out on farms across the Islands, improving the wool quality," said Ms Thoday.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

OLYMPIC withdrawal symptoms are setting in after too many late nights catching up with each day's events. Apart from the obvious Bolt, Ennis and Farah moments, my particular favourites were David Rudisha's elegantly fluid running style as he demolished a world record. matched by the steely determination in the eyes of the Ugandan marathon winner as he overtook the last of his rivals. What stood out overall is the amount of hard work needed to hone natural talent

APART from Education Board and the selection of two candidates to attend the Commonwealth Youth Parliament in December, all my meetings last week were oil related as I am second on that portfolio and the only one available at the time The visit by representatives of Rockhopper and Premier has been well reported and they met many people to discuss their plans. Of course everything they are doing just relates to their areas and we await results from other companies' areas which could change the whole picture going into the future. Assembly members and senior officials will have a full afternoon this week dedicated to oil readiness discussions, much preparatory work has been done but that is really just a beginning.

OUR meeting at Fox Bay last week was very useful with some good discussions and we go to Goose Green this week. I believe that there should be financial provision for MLAs from the Camp constituency to visit several parts of their vast constituency on a regular basis, in addition to the occasional meetings with all available members. This would put their constituents on a more equal basis with Stanley people who can attend regular public meetings as well as arranging meetings with individual members - or buttonholing them at the meat counter.

EXTRAORDINARY that in Argentina the wheeling out of a new military aircraft was used to reiterate their Falklands propaganda. Is it just ineptitude and a genuine failure to understand how this would be seen by others, or is it a desperate ploy? As always it is difficult to discern what their policies are, or if they have any.

Tyler Grange contracted for port impact study

MACCLESFIELD based environmental consultancy Tyler Grange has been appointed by the Falkland Islands Government to undertake a landscape and visual impact assessment for a new harbour development near Stanley.

Paul Higham of the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (which is currently providing Project Management services to FIG) confirmed that prior to leaving government the former Projects Manager Steve Dent commissioned, "some environmental services via the Shallow Marine Survey Group (and Falklands Conservation) to look at the potential impact of a new port development on the immediate land around the potential port site in Port William."

He said in addition. FIG would be, "carrying out a number of environmental surveys, to collect data which may inform the design and location of a new port in the Stanley area. This information will possibly take a year or so to gather and collate."

Mr Higham said: "Tyler Grange are obviously a preferred subconsultant to the Shallow Marine Survey Group, and will be carrying out some of the work on their behalf as I understand it."

Jonathan Berry, partner of Tyler Grange, said: "This is fantastic news for TG and our first overseas project since the practice was established in 2010.

"Our assessment skills are transferable to any project location, but clearly a visit to the Falkland Islands will provide us with a privileged opportunity to observe the dramatic landscape and associated wildlife."

Involvement on the project is due to start in November 2012, with survey visits planned to the Islands in early 2013.

Marjorie is honoured

THE Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour has been awarded to Marjorie Hayward for her voluntary work in the community particularly in helping the elderly with their everyday needs.

A reception for the formal presentation by HE the Governor has yet to be arranged.

The Queen's Certificate and accompanying Badge of Honour is a local honour, approved by Her Majesty the Queen in 2010, to allow the Falkland Island Government to recognise those having connections with the Falkland Islands who have, by their loyalty and meritorious conduct, provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands.

The Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour are awarded by HE the Governor acting on the advice of Executive Council. It is awarded annually on or near to Falkland Day (14 August) which commemorates the first recorded sighting of the Falkland Islands in 1592. The number of recipients will normally be no more than three a year. The names of Queen's Certificate recipients will be published in the Official

Number 1 trip

THE spring 2012 Traveller's Guide produced by Zegrahm Expeditions places the Antarctica, South Georgia & Falkland Islands trip as number one in its top five expeditions list.

In the guide a tourist couple describe the trip as, "one of those trips of a lifetime that require you to experience it in the first person. No amount of words can adequately describe the variety, majesty, tension and unparalleled beauty of land, sea, ice, mammals and birds."

The far south trip is followed by Ultimate Galapagos at number two and Central America at number three.

The Norwegian fjords and Scottish Isles is fourth popular according to Zegrahm, and Wild Alaska is fifth.

Nobel visitor

ALWAYS wanted to meet a Nobel Prize winner? Now you can, on a cruise to Antarctica.

Tour company Abercombie & Kent said Nobel Prize winning geophysicist Henry Pollack will accompany passengers on its December 17 sailing to the white continent aboard Le Boreal, a small luxury expedition ship.

The 19-night voyage to Antarctica, South Georgia and the Falkland Islands will also feature experts on marine mammals, geology, birds and the region's history who will give talks and lead informal discussions on shore excursions, the company says.

THE imposing figure of the Type 45 Destroyer HMS Dauntless could be viewed berthed at Mare Harbour on the weekend, and up close by many Falklands residents who either attended a reception onboard on Saturday evening or a family/media day on Sunday.

The second of two T45 Destroyers, Danntless joined the fleet in November 2010, shortly after being the first of class to fire the new Sea Viper missile. Since then she has proved her capability helping to 'protect' the USS Carrier Battle Group in Exercise Saxon Warrior as the American units approached the UK in May.

After an annual exercise with France, Russia, UK and US and in the company of Russian Destroyer Admiral Chabanenko she moved to deployment near Africa.

There she called first to Sekondi, the port to Ghana's fourth largest city, Takoradi, then 100 or so miles along the coast to the capital Acera, during an eight-day double visit to the country.

In Sekondi the ship embarked

Royal Marines who provided training for Ghanaian Naval personnel focussing on the maritime security aspects of naval operations — a key part of Dauntless' Auriga 12 deployment

The Portsmouth-based warship then spent three weeks at Cape Town, allowing the ship's company to let off steam with their first extended break since sailing back in April. It also gave the ship's 815 NAS Lynx Flight the opportunity to decamp to Ysterplaat airbase to work with the South Africans who also fly the agile helicopter.

Engineers spent their time overhauling the ship's machinery after the exertions of the 8,000-mile journey to the foot of Africa, and ready the Type 45 for the lively South Atlantic weather.

The vessel also made an unscheduled stop at Tristan da Cunha for a medical evacuation of a patient, as well as assisting in flying a radio rebroadcaster 200 ft up a mountain to improve radio coverage on the island.

Dauntless is captained by keen sportsman Will Warrender. With a BA in Maritime Defence Studies, Management and Technology and a masters degree in defence studies he has served on HMS Cromer. Type 42 Destroyers Glasgow and Newcastle, Hunt Class Mine Countermeasures Vessel HMS Chiddingfold and her sister ship HMS Cattistock as well as most recently HMS Montrose. He was promoted to Captain in April 2011 assuming Command of HMS Dauntless in July.

Currently the Accounts Officer at the Falkland Islands Meat Company she spends most of her time with her children and plays darts and enjoys sports in her spare time.

The Falkland Islands Museum & National Trust Historic Dockyard

As the Dockyard development progresses a number of opportunities will arise for local businesses or individuals. The project team are keen to receive first expressions of interest for works including, but not necessarily limited to, the following:

- Phased construction of new museum building (eg foundations, superstructure, services etc)
- Phased conversion of listed and other existing buildings for museum use
- Various other work packages, for example groundworks, electrical, plumbing, decoration etc.

Anyone interested is invited to visit the Project team in the Central Store for an informal discussion about the project in the first instance. Contact Gwen Thomson or Darren Plato on telephone 27427 or e-mail museumproject1@horizon.co.fk

Stallion Thyer no longer able to work and is handed over to devoted carer

THYER, the Stanley Sports Association's (SSA) 23 year old stallion has been officially handed over to Owen Summers to care for, for the rest of his life.

Thyer was a gift from Sheik Maktoum al Maktoum in 1993 although the cost of his importation was met by the SSA and private sector funding.

A son of the legendary Nijinsky, Thyer has sired some 95 foals contributing greatly to the blood-lines, the competitive edge of the open races and the future of racing in the Falklands.

At the SSA's recent AGM Vice Chairman Bobby Short made the suggestion that as the stallion was no longer able to work and had become a drain on limited Association finances. Owen's generous offer to become responsible for all feed and veterinary bills, should be accepted.

Referring to an assessment of Thyer carried out by veterinary surgeon Zoe Luxton, Mr Short said that due to an injury to the right hind limb he could no longer service mares and because of his age it was not advisable to castrate him.

The committee were asked for their views and it was agreed that Owen, who has cared for Thyer since his arrival in the Islands and inevitably become very fond of him, should become his official owner.

The committee thanked Owen for his commitment to the stallion's wellbeing in the past and his ongoing care.

Thyer will remain in his familiar surroundings at the race course.

When Sheikh Maktoum learned the Islanders were seeking to upgrade the bloodstock of their horses, his response in donating the prestigious stallion was considered very generous, as Thyer was valued at £500,000.

Formerly trained by Jim Bolger, Thyer won several races as a two-year-old and finished 13th in the 1992 Kentucky Derby, when Dr Devious and Arazi (also from the Sheikh's stables) were also among the trailers.

Sheikh Maktoum ruled over Dubai for 15 years from 1990, a period which saw the tiny Gulf emirate blossom into the main centre of commerce in the Middle East. At the same time, Dubai, through a host of sponsorship and promotion deals, became a household name around the world. In short, Sheikh Maktoum put Dubai on the map.

Job's not finished but the paper work is all done

EXPECTATIONS for a new toilet block at the Jetty Visitor for this season have been dashed with work not expected to take place until after the season.

Plans were put together by the PWD Design Section early this year, presented to the Planning and Building Committee in March and works put out to tender to construct the block to the east side of the main building near the exit from the car park.

MLA Mike Summers, chair of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board confirmed this week that when the work was put out to tender no bids were received.

He said PWD had planned to talk to Morrisons (Falklands) Ltd to see if the job could still be done before the start of the season, and added that if it could not be completed before then, work would not be started until the following winter.

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside said the intention now was to put the work out to tender again, with construction to take place out of season.

Morrisons Falklands Ltd Regional Manager Mike Butler said his company had not submitted tenders as the work was outside their normal scope for government and the company are often criticised by the smaller construction companies if seen to be carrying out works they feel they could do.

He added, "To date we have had no correspondence or discussion with PWD in respect of the construction of the Jetty Centre toilet block."

It's all about the shelf says Argentine delegation to UN

ARGENTINA has once again raised its 'continental shelf' argument in order to lay claim to the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands.

The country last week made a technical presentation before the UN Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (CLCS) on the exterior limits of the Argentine shelf in which the aforementioned territories and 'Argentine Antarctica' were included, reported Mercopress.

Argentina made the new presentation before the CLCS, which had already created a sub-committee that will begin analysing the Argentine exterior limit.

A delegation made an audiovisual presentation with images and cartography of all the coastal extension of what they termed 'Argentine territory' that they claimed protected, "its continental shelf resources and reaffirming sovereignty," over the territories. The CLCS sub committee

The CLCS sub committee began analysing the Argentine presentation on August 8. The subcommittee includes experts Dr Galo Carreras (México). Jair Alberto Ribas Marques (Brazil) and president of the subcommittee, Martin Vang Heinesen (Denmark) Isaac Owusu Oduro (Ghana) Mazlan Bin Madon (Malaysia); Lawrence Folajimi Awosika (Nigeria) and Yong Ahn Park (Korea).

Argentina argued that as a coastal state, "it possesses and exercises sovereignty rights over its continental shelf, the maritime space which includes the sea bed and subsoil of the submarine areas extending beyond its territorial waters and along the natural prolongation of its territory up to the exterior limit of its continental margin."

When the exterior border of the continental margin is beyond the two hundred miles from the baseline, as is the case with Argentina, states acting on the UN Law of the Sea must present scientific reports to support the extent of their claims.

Argentina made a first presentation before the CLCS in April 2009.

Jets and threats

ARGENTINA'S minister of Defence called on the UK to discuss the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands early this week, and warned that the British military presence in the South Atlantic was, "the only element that upholds the usurpation of that part of our national territory."

Changes in fishing gear could reduce by-catch

FALKLAND Islands Fisheries Department scientists are currently investigating whether changes in fishing gear used in the finfish and loligo fleets can reduce by-catch, Fisheries Scientist Alexander Arkhipkin told Penguin News.

Reducing the amount of unwanted by-catch in fisheries, especially those of juvenile rock cod, is one primary conservation goals of the Department. Rock cod is a relatively small fish (30-35 cm length) and in the last five years has become a major resource in Falkland waters with annual catches between 60 and 77 thousand tonnes – of which an estimated 10-15 thousand tonnes are discarded at sea as undersized by-catch with little chance of survival.

For finfish fisheries, a series of research cruises have been undertaken to evaluate how different mesh sizes in trawl codends can reduce bycatch while sustaining fishery efficiency for commercial-size rock cod and other species including hake, kingelip, skates and Illex squid.

Preliminary results indicate that the use of larger codend mesh sizes retain more commercial-

size rock cod whilst effectively reducing numbers of undersized juvenile fish in the catch. There was only limited impact of larger mesh sizes on fishery efficiency for Illex squid. Therefore, increasing codend mesh sizes in commercial trawl fisheries may maximize fishery efficiency and minimize discards of small fish and skates. A third research cruise is scheduled for October 2012.

For loligo fisheries, a research survey was recently performed and preliminary results indicated that catches of rock cod by the two types of rigging were not statistically different. Further work is required to reduce rock cod by-catch in the loligo fishery, which currently does not have mesh size restrictions.

Clyde meets FIDF

Lt Cdr Mark Anderson

THE new Commanding Officer Of HMS Clyde Lieutenant Commander Mark Anderson, met with the Officer Commanding the FIDF, Major Peter Biggs on August 3, "to discuss and develop the close relationship already enjoyed between the two forces," according to a release from HQ British Forces Falkland Islands.

The visit gave the new CO the chance to widen his knowledge of the capabilities of the FIDF, and to discuss with Major Biggs the responsibility that HMS Clyde has whilst patrolling in the Islands.

Lieutenant Commander Mark Anderson said: "The FIDF clearly plays a vital role in the Falkland Islands, and I have been impressed with their professionalism and enthusiasm. I look forward to working alongside the FIDF and developing the connections that HMS Clyde has with the force and the wider community."

Defence force open day

Combatant granny Sutcliffe teaches Private Hoyles some manners

THE Falkland Islands Defence Force open day went off with a resonating bang on Saturday

The HDI armoury was on display showing the weight of their new and tested weapons and various tactical assault ve-Inches

There was a great show of unarmed combat skill, well choreographed with a surprise contribution from the crowd as a seemingly elderly women, looking remarkably like Michael Sutcliffe of the FIDE put the unarmed combat display 'A-Team' in their place with some high flying moves and a couple of whallops from her handbag

It was a tough act to follow but the crowd were moved up to the FIDF classroom to view an exciting mock rescue of a captured soldier complete with blank grenade fire, tactical assault clothing and rifles

The group then moved to the range to watch live fire battle drills demonstrated on foot and by assault vehicle.

The FIDF are currently seeking new recruits. If you are interested in obtaining further details about participation in the Force

Four-a-side and future stars

THE Falkland Islands Football League (FIFL) indoor four-a-side league has finished its first round.

This year teams were selected by the Stanley Manager and Stanley Captain. This has resulted in six balanced teams competing over six weeks.

One of the teams is predominantly made up of the future stars 11-15 year olds and their coach Troyd Bowles. The youthful team put in some very credible performances, a testament to the hard work and dedication put in by Cleggs Ross, Tom Whistler and Troyd Bowles who coach football from four to 15 years.

To keep things interesting the first league was run for six weeks and a league cup was played for last Sunday. The cup involved all the teams playing eight minute games and the finalists playing a 20 minute game.

The winners of the first indoor league were Portugal - Dan Biggs, Doug Clarke, Toby Poole, Dominic Jaffray, Renzo, Carlos Fajardo and Jordan Phillips

The winners of the first league cup were Holland - Cleggs Ross, Rafa Sotomayor, Michael Pool and Shuppi Chipunza.

Highest goal scorer was Wayne Clement with 42 goals

Highest young goal scorer was Declan Bonner with 13 goals.

Scott Thain was voted as best young player.

Andrew Newman

The second indoor league will start this weekend. Teams are:

SOUTH KOREA	GREAT BRITAIN
Michael Betts	Bill Chater
Rafa Sotomayor	George Elbakıdze
Ben Hoyles	Cody Betts
Alex Pearce	Karl Manners
Danial Carcamo	Nico Conejeros
Kalon Jaffray	Ryan Poole
HONDURAS	BRAZIL
Martyn Clarke	Wayne Clement
Shuppi Chipunza	Scott Thain
Gareth Goodwin	Dean Dent
	Michael Betts Rafa Sotomayor Ben Hoyles Alex Pearce Danial Carcamo Kalon Jaffray  HONDURAS Martyn Clarke Shuppi Chipunza

More info on the FIFL Facebook page at Falkland-Islands-Football. Also the FIFL pools start again this Saturday, coupons available at K1, K3 SSL, Bread Shop, Pod. Victory Bar and Deano's Bar.

Thankyou from the Community School

The Falkland Islands Community School rely on the help of a fantastically supportive community to help us deliver our programmes of study. We would like to publically thank all those who have helped to improve the aspirations of our pupils this academic year through a full and varied programme, which has been of great benefit to the young people we teach. We would like to especially thank:

Bluff Cove Farm JACS Bakery KEMH & Social Services Fitzrov Farm Goose Green Farm Leisure Centre Community Library Port Howard Farm Megabid Port Louis Farm MPC Bowling Ally MPC Climbing Wall 1435 Squadron MPA Department of Agriculture MPC Cinema The Bread Shop MPC Gym MPC Meteorological Office Cable & Wireless RFIP FIDF MPC Paintball Museum FIODA Penguin News FIRS FITV Saddle Computers SeAled PR LTD The Gift Shop Falkland Islands Tourist Board Government House The Training Centre Hillside Training Camp HMS Clyde

We would also like to thank all those who supported the 'Penguin Parade' including: Stanley Services, Studio 52, Harbour View Gift Shop, Post Öffice, Standard Chartered Bank, Shorty's Diner, FIC, Lighthouse Seamen's Mission, Penguin News, Falklands Conservation and Government House. The Penguins will be on display for the final time at the Conservation Ball to raise funds for Falklands Conservation and ourselves, and we would warmly welcome bids. As well as this additional thanks must go to all FIG Departments and local businesses who exhibited at the careers fair or who offered work experience placements to our students.

Many thanks to all those who have volunteered time, services or goods and on behalf of the pupils we hope to work with you all AGAIN in the next academic year.

85 per cent of farms have 24-hour power from renewable sources. The six Sand Bay wind turbines provide around 38 per cent of the islands' needs although on windy days can be 50 per cent or more.

Picture: Electricity and travel leaving no carbon footprint

Clean green Islands

GREEN House Gas (GHG) emissions from the Falkland Islands have reduced by slightly over 10 per cent from the 1990 baseline.

This is largely thanks to improved efficiency in domestic heating systems, the wind farm and the reduction in farmed animals (sheep notably) producing reduced emissions, according to a recent report to Executive Council from the Environmental Planning Office and Head of Policy.

The Falkland Islands is currently included in the UK ratification to the first commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol which seeks to limit and reduce greenhouse gas emissions from signatory countries.

The Falkland Islands Government last month agreed in principle for the Islands to join the second commitment period of the Protocol. This would be non-binding on FIG and subject to a second consultation when the formal ratification process opened.

An implication for joining the second period would be that FIG would be required to continue to provide information on GFIG emissions for inclusion in the UK's annual National Inventory report, which is prepared by the UK Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) as well as continue to provide information on the development and implementation of measures to mitigate emissions and adapt to climate change.

Another implication would be that emissions associated with offshore hydrocarbon exploration, appraisal and development will be likely to be included in future FIG emissions figures.

The paper noted that emissions were already being affected by more shipping movements and onshore activities during the current exploration phase.

The Environmental Planning Officer (EPO) commented in the report: "We will need to consider how future hydrocarbon activities may impact on GHG levels and discuss with the UK Government how the development of an oil industry should be accounted for in the emissions inventory."

Also if oil revenues arrive the Islands are likely to see an increase in GHG emissions associated with development and activity; for example through construction projects, more people living and working in the Falklands, more homes to heat and people driving more miles. This again will impact on greenhouse gas emissions, "and should be discussed further with the UK Government prior to joining the binding ratification," noted the EPO.

It was also noted that FIG should continue to examine the scope for expanding renewable energy production or energy reduction initiatives. The greatest potential will probably involve developing renewable energy storage facilities.

The EPO said, "Oil revenues might help fund such development and a storage facility could therefore offset the GHG increase anticipated in this sector. FIG is not obliged to develop renewable energy projects and is only likely to do so if such investments are economically sound and beneficial to the future of the Islands."

Annual emissions estimates are produced for the Falkland Islands, based on figures the Environmental Planning Department provide to the National Environmental Technology Centre who calculate emissions figures for the DECC.

Borders' shares on the rise

SHARES in Falklands oil exploration company Borders & Southern soared almost 20 per cent yesterday as it revealed positive findings from the analysis of condensate fluids from the Darwin discovery well.

The company is estimating Darwin could have between 130 and 250 million barrels of recoverable gas condensate - the 'mid case' estimate being 190 million barrels.

Borders & Southern believe the findings have 'exciting implications' for its prospect and lead inventory, and is now planning its next drilling programme to further appraise the discovery.

Borders & Southern's prospect inventory contains further relatively low risk structural prospects of a similar size to Darwin along with stratigraphically trapped fans of slightly higher risk but larger scale. Some of these prospects will be targeted in the next drilling phase with the objective of adding to the discovered resources of Darwin and building a core development area, it was stated in a Fluid Analysis.

Discussions are underway with a seismic contractor regarding the acquisition of additional 3D seismic and it is planned to have a vessel in the Falklands at the start of 2013 to commence the survey which will focus on similar prospects to Darwin currently outside the existing 3D area.

BOOING, hissing, or on a good day offering up constructive criticism or provocative comment, is on the whole the closest the majority of the media get to contributing to the running of a country; and for that I don't doubt many journalists, particularly in the better run nations, are secretly thankful.

After all it's arguably less stressful to be obliged to probe and dissect decisions already made by the leaders, than to actually call the shots. At the same time, without any kind of opposing political party available to scrutinize or query governmental decisions, as exists in the Falklands, the media here likely does have an additional responsibility to keep at least one eye on the work of the policy makers.

With all of that said, after having spent some years picking and sniping, or encouraging others to do the same, at what have appeared the more bizarre strategies undertaken by the legislature, when general election time rolls around again and fewer and fewer individuals offer their services to the nation, I occasionally feel a twinge of concern that our regular reproaches have contributed to the wholesale reluctance of any new guys to pop their heads over the parapet.

Of course it's a pretty short-lived twinge; bearing in mind the key characteristics of a good leader include strength of mind and a positive attitude, in the extremely unlikely event they're put off by a bit of belly-aching from (as a good friend likes to refer to me) a freckly short-arse, they're probably not cut out for the job anyway.

But if prospective candidates can handle the heat, which I suspect most people here are quite easily able, what is putting them off, and how can we solve the problem over the next fifteen months before the next election?

As one gentleman commented to me in a phone call last week, there's no point waiting until the last minute and then bemoaning the lack of candidates – we've got to make changes now.

Do we turn being a Member of the Legislative Assembly into a real career prospect for a potential pool of aspiring politicians, by making it fulltime and adequately funded? After all we generously compensate overseas contract workers to take up vital posts in the community so why are we not taking this increasingly critical and locally manned role more seriously?

Over the next few weeks PN want to hear your thoughts on the subject. Give us a call or email us on editor@penguinnews.co.fk

Levelling out land to the West of Stanley Services

SSLtd plan for and invest in the future

ANYONE who has been to the Royal Show at Stonleigh Park (near Coventry) and witnessed the amazing display of the 'Dancing Diggers' could have been forgiven for slowing on the By-Pass Road near Stanley Services in the hope that this little line up was going to swing into action.

But no, as skilled as the operators are, they are merely levelling out the site for future use by Stanley Services. Turning heads and slowing traffic on the other side of town is the same company's extension to the Malvina House Hotel on Ross Road. From just across the road, the Penguin News staff have witnessed the growing public interest in the project as the 100 seat restaurant extension takes shape.

To the rear of the hotel further improvements and extended parking areas are also under construction.

Argentina's lost dreams

A NOVEL, 'The Islands' inspired by the Falklands War and written by Argentine author Carlos Gamerro has been published in English. According to arts writer Charlotte Higgins for the Edinburgh Book Festival, the book first released in 1998 and then transformed into a stage play in 2011, "aside from being the work of one of Argentina's most significant novelists, the fascination of the book, on both sides of the Atlantic, is its singular vision of an event that continues to vibrate unsettlingly in the recent history of both nations."

For Argentina, said Gamerro, the Falklands have, "come to represent nationalism, anti-imperialism anti-colonialism: they represent all the aspirations we couldn't fulfil: they have become a kind of icon of Argentinian lost dreams or pipe dreams."

In his novel, a veteran of the war, a computer hacker called Felipe Félix, sets out to destroy the records of the witnesses to a crime, which he manages by distracting an intelligence officer with a computer game that endlessly replays the Falklands war as an Argentine victory: a kind of counterfactual playing out of, "those lost pipe dreams," said Higgins.

The game offers a further metaphor too: for Gamerro, it conveys something of how the war was experienced in Argentina through contemporary news reports. "We were winning, winning, winning – and then suddenly we lost."

Labour scheme change?

A DEPARTMENT of Agriculture Labour Scheme, which has in recent years had a high take-up by farmers may be amended following a meeting of the Agricultural Advisory Committee on Monday, August 27.

The scheme that began in 2001 to provide financial assistance for fencing, some pasture improvement and for major building or development projects, was originally under utilised, thus the criteria was broadened in 2005 to allow farm owners/managers and their spouses or partners to use the funding on their own farm.

However new recommendations include:

- A deadline to be set for applications, allowing all farms equal chance to apply for funds.

- Farmers and spouses/ partners be prohibited from utilising funds on their own property, or property that they currently manage.

- Prohibit the use of funding for repairs on dwellings.

- Retrospective claims for 2012/13 season only, for projects completed after the 1st July 2012.

It will also be recommended the eligibility criteria be reduced to allow smaller farms to participate in the scheme where their main income is from the farm.

The committee will consider whether there should be a priority matrix established that favours the following applicants:

- Farmers that have recently acquired a farm.

- Farmers that financially require assistance more than others.

- Farmers that have utilised less labour scheme funding over the lifetime of the scheme.

- Farmers that are investing large amounts of their own funding into materials.

Many of the recommendations are the result of viewpoints given by farmers at the RBA Farmers Week meetings this year.

The paper presented by the Senior Agricultural Advisor notes: "Not all farms wish to utilise funds. Some established farms feel they should not call on FIG money and FLH does not qualify. The DoA to date has received 31 applications to utilise labour Scheme funding in 2012/13."

Good grades will further education

Caitlin Burston

THE Education Department is pleased to report some excellent A-level examination results from Peter Symonds College this year.

Students Sonia Arkhipkina, Caitlin Burston, Kyran Evans, Leigh Robertson, Barbara Short-Pardo and Julian Yon took 24 A Levels between them with 75 per cent A* - C grades.

Leigh Robertson's top two grades of an A in Art and a B in Communication and Culture secured her a place at the Arts University College in Bournemouth, however, during her time back she took up the opportunity of a management post with FIC, and so has decided to stay in the Islands for now.

She is excited for the future: "Two years training all around the FIC, UK office included," she told Penguin News.

Kyran Evans is very happy with his B, B, C, but has decided to hold off on applying for University or making plans until he has decided which direction to take with his future.

Caitlin Laura Burston achieved A, B. B. grades, in Geography, Art, Environmental Science and has already planned how to use them: "I am very happy with my result. I achieved the correct grades to get into the university of Kent, which is where I am planning to go after a gap year to study wildlife conservation," she said.

The Education Department annonced: "we wish each student every success in the future."

GCSE results

Director of Health and Education David Jenkins said yesterday: "This year seven students who wish to study further abroad have the required points for that desire to be supported."

Five other students have achieved enough points to also be supported however, they are either going to the UK anyway or not eligible for government funding, said Mr Jenkins.

Five of the students will go to Chichester College of Further Education; one will go to Peter Symonds College in Winchester and one to New Zealand. Mr Jenkins added, "We wish

Mr Jenkins added, "We wish all students every success in their chosen studies and careers."

One happy student Jess McPhee told Penguin News, "I'm amazed that I passed everything so far, and I'm really happy with all my results."

Jess will attend Chichester College and study A-level Photography, Media Studies, Combined English Language and Literature and Biology and Biology.

Caitlin Whitney was also delighted with her grades in particular an A* in Spanish.

Fiona for Minerals

FIONA Wallace-Nannig, will take up the role of Projects Officer at the Department of Mineral Resources in October. According to the department she will bring, "experience of FIG, from her current role in the Environmental Planning Department."

Sam Cockwell the current Projects Officer is to leave the department at the end of August to pursue a Masters degree in Petroleum Engineering at Imperial College.

He has also been awarded the prestigious Chevening Scholarship, a first for the Falkland Islands.

Speaking of his role at the Department of Mineral Resources he said, "it has been a very fulfilling and challenging role for me, and especially exciting during this time as the oil industry in the Falkland Islands continues to grow. There is an excellent team at DMR, I wish them the very best, and hope to work with them again in the future of the Falkland Islands oil industry."

Martin's five year walk

MANCHESTER man Martin Hutchinson has spent five years and 11 months walking from Mexico to Argentina in an effort to illustrate that, "material goods do not define you," and, "we can make the world a better place."

Mr Hutchinson, a fireman by trade, whose journey has been regularly recorded by South American media, contacted Penguin News to say, "I have walked across seven states in Argentina so far flying my Union Jack." He has also visited many schools in the country to tell his story and carry his message.

If you would like to find out more about him he can be contacted at martinhutchinson99@

MPA craft fair

THE Craft Fair held at Mount Pleasant on Saturday August 18 was, "enjoyable and well attended," reported one of the organisers Leila Griffiths.

The fair included stalls with soap and other products by Mandy McLeod, embroidered and applique items stitched by Joanne Turner, Falkland mosaics made by Mrs Griffiths, Phoenix cards by Lindsay Symons, handmade cards by Jo Vallance, embroidered fabric items by Natalie Simpson, felted cards by Simone Simpson and hand felted floral table runners by Andrea Lovejoy. There were also cake and plant stalls to raise money for the Families Polytunnel on the base and £115 was collected for this. Another fair is planned prior to Christmas.

FIH trading 'in-line'

FALKLAND Islands Holdings announced this week that its trading in the first four months of the financial year was at a similar level to last year and in-line with the company's expectations.

In a statement to shareholders, Chairman David Hudd added that it was the board's intention to maintain, "at least the current level of dividend on the enlarged share capital as the group pursues its plans for the long-term expansion of its business in the Falklands."

Mr Hudd said a weaker illex squid catch and limited onshore oil activity meant trading had been flat. While retail profits had increased slightly thanks to the expansion of the store at MPA, Mr Hudd said that this was largely offset by reduced profits from support services and at the fishing agency.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE meeting at Goose Green was useful in highlighting some issues that we can address, but unfortunately two of them we cannot, mobile phone coverage is a matter for Cable and Wireless and FITV coverage for that company, as a private company initiative. The turn out was quite good but in proportion to population in the area lower than that on the West.

THE recently announced Advanced level results are, as mentioned on the radio, very pleasing with A and B grades achieved in a wide range of 'real' subjects. It has taken a long time but serious commentators on education in the UK are almost unanimous in wanting to uphold decent standards rather than churn out easy options that look good in league tables.

This week brought the GCSE results and we await news from those who have completed degrees and other courses in the last academic year.

We also learned that apprenticeships are over subscribed which is better than some previous years when there has not been full take up of those on offer, but begs the obvious question of whether we should be funding more.

I believe that if the demand is there we should, there will be even more opportunities for good tradesmen in the future.

APART from routine meetings this week we had one with the Director of Public Works and one of his section heads.

We are doing this on a fairly regular basis and it gives us excellent insights into the complexity and range of services they provide and of the challenges faced in expectation of developments in the next few years.

It is too easy to leap to judgements and ill informed criticism when not knowing all the facts. Putting aside other requirements for public relations information, FIG could do a much better job on its own PR.

Assembly members are sometimes caught out by questions because we simply have not been told why something can or cannot be done within the resources available to the various departments.

We do our best to be well informed but sometimes fail.

Leisure centre holiday smiles

THE Holiday Programme is in full swing at Stanley Leisure Centre with three weeks of exciting activities taking place in both Stanley and Mount Pleasant.

Weekly trips to the bowling alley and cinema have proved particularly popular said staff and there is a waiting list for the highlight of the programme, a full day at Mount Pleasant, including a visit to the Dog Section, to Hercules and VC-10 aircraft and the Fire Section

A member of staff told Penguin News: "We are hoping that there will be an activity suited to evetyone

"Many of our sessions, including baking, still have spaces available and more information can be found by asking at the reception desk or calling on 27291."

Senior Sports Attendants Abbie Heathman and Kelly Fiddes asked that their thanks be passed on, "to everyone who helps us make each Holiday Programme exciting for the children

"We would like to say a huge thank you to Keith Heathman who has willingly driven the children to Mount Pleasant each week so that we can get out and about, and also to the children who provide us all with lots of entertainment and take part in each activity. If anyone has any ideas for future programmes please get in contact with us."

CONSOLIDATED Fisheries Ltd (CFL) has announced that the Falkland Islands longline Patagonian Toothfish (Dissostichus eleginoides) fishery has entered full assessment for Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) certification.

This fishery will be the first fishery in Falkland Islands waters to seek certification and, if successful, will further increase the number of MSC certified toothfish fisheries around the world.

The assessment will be conducted by the independent certification body. Intertek Moody Marine, who will evaluate the fishery against the MSC Standard for well-managed and sustainable fisheries which assess the sustainability of the fish stock, the environmental impacts of fishing activity and the management systems in place.

In preparing for the assessment, CFL has been working closely with the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department - the Falkland Island Government department responsible for the management of the fishery, the scientific research and development which underpins the good governance of all local fisheries in the Islands and the overall guardianship of the Falkland Islands Conservation Zone.

CFL is a local company, established in 1994 and owned by a number of Falkland Island fishing companies and individuals. It owns one vessel, the CFL Gambler, and operates exclusively within the Falkland Islands with Patagonian Toothfish being the sole targeted species.

Chair of CFL. Tom Blake, said: "The company has every confidence in the high standard of fisheries management and environmental measures practised within the Islands and we look forward to achieving international recognition, through MSC certification, of the sustainability principles promoted by us in the local fishing industry, the Falkland Islands Government and the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department."

MSC Fisheries Outreach Manager, UK, Claire Pescod, said:
"I'm very pleased to welcome the Consolidated Fisheries Ltd toothfish fishery into full assessment.

"There is a strong demand for MSC certified, demonstrably sustainable toothfish and I wish CFL a swift and successful assessment."

Islands to UK war effort was five aircraft not three reveals museum

A DISCOVERY by the Museum and National Trust has revealed that not only did the Falkland Islands donate Spitfires to the British war effort in World War II but also three aircraft to the Royal Flying Corps in 1914

Curator Leona Roberts told Penguin News: "Those aircraft were one FE2d and two FE Bristol Fighters

"The photograph is of the FE2d aircraft named Falkland. The Royal Aircraft Factory FE2 was a two-seat Pusher aircraft operated as a day and night bomber and as a fighter by the Royal Flying Corps during the First World War and was instrumental in ending the 'Fokker scourge' that had seen the German Air Service establish a measure of air superiority on the Western Front from the late summer of 1915 to the following spring.

The FE2 was a two-seater with the observer sitting in the nose of the nacelle and the pilot sitting

The observer was armed with one .303 Lewis Machine Gun firing forward. Later, another Lewis was added, mounted to fire backwards.

arrangement was de-This scribed by Frederick Libby, the first American ace of World War I as follows

"When you stood up to shoot, all of you from the knees up was exposed to the elements. There was no belt to hold you. Only your grip on the gun and the sides of the nacelle stood between you and eternity.

Toward the front of the nacelle was a hollow steel rod with a swivel mount to which the gun was anchored.

This gun covered a huge field of fire forward. Between the observer and the pilot a second gun was mounted, for firing over the FE2d's upper wing to protect the aircraft from rear attack ... Adjusting and shooting this gun required that you stand right up out of the nacelle with your feet on the nacelle coaming

You had nothing to worry about except being blown out of the aircraft by the blast of air or tossed out bodily if the pilot made a wrong move. There were no parachutes and no belts."

The Museum intends to add a display featuring this donation to the Royal Flying Corps when the new Dockyard site is opened.

If anybody has any further information of this donation the Museum and National Trust would be pleased to hear of it.

Pigs fly in to boost pork supply

PROVING that pigs do fly, and in fact travel very well, Swan Inlet's newest residents have passed their quarantine period with flying colours and are now set to boost the supply of quality pork available to the consumer.

The two Hampshire sows, two boars of the same breed and the Large White boar which landed in the Falklands on June 12, none the worse for the 8,000 mile flight have settled in well, owner Andrez Short told Penguin News this week.

Charles Dickson who entered into the scheme with Andrez took his Hampshire sow and boar home to Brookfield last week once they got the all clear.

Andrez and Ali took up ownership of Swan Inlet near Mount Pleasant in 2002 and have boosted their farm land from 273 hectares to a total of 400 hectares through renting surrounding land.

They have concentrated on sheep in the past and invested some £15,000 on the importation of dual purpose embryos. "I don't get hung up on particular breeds, I'm just looking for a good money sheep," Andrez said.

By Falklands standards Swan Inlet is indeed a very small holding and even by using intensive grazing management systems it is not a financially viable unit. An-drez utilises computer software he and Nikki Buxton have spent some seven years creating which allows grazing to be calculated to the exact kilo of grass available to each animal and enables a higher production from land than otherwise expected in the Falklands. With so little land to play with, they have to get as much as possible out of a small area and with Island-wide pig production fall-ing well short of demand, a few calculations led to the conclusion that pig farming could provide more production per hectare of farmland.

The breed of pigs in the Islands was slow finishing and with no recent imports there was an element of inbreeding. Andrez and Charles experimented with the artificial insemination of pigs without success, so it was on with the thinking caps to find a solution if pig farming was to become a real-

The first step was to approach the Department of Agriculture's veterinary staff to find out what the protocol for the importation of live animals was and they were soon researching the situation and getting everything in place. "Zoe Luxton and her colleagues worked really hard to make it all happen and we can't thank them enough for their efforts," said Andrez

Meanwhile the Falkland Islands Company were on board and had agreed to act as agents while Chiltern Airways had agreed to carry pigs once they were sourced.

So how exactly do you go about shopping for pigs? Andrez contacted the British Pig Association (BPA) and gave his and Charles' basic criteria: Must be close to Gatwick; finish quickly and be able to survive outdoors.

He was soon in touch with Bedfordshire farmer and vice chair of the BPA Guy Kiddy, who happened to have pigs of the right age and breed on his farm.

After a quarantine period in the UK the pigs were issued their passports and boarded the south bound flight with Falklands vet Zoe and Chiltern man John Jeffrey (JJ) tending their every need.

official name on the BPA register is Withersfield Meflannel, has become affectionately known as JJ at Swan Inlet and he is destined for a hot date next week.

It will be a year before the results reach the chiller shelves, but Andrez is hopeful the new breed of pigs will finish in five months with two litters of approximately 10 piglets per sow each year.

He sent 34 animals to the abattoir last year and anticipates it being 70+ by the end of this year and all being well 120 the following.

"Pork is never going to be a boreful we cheap option, but I'm hopeful we will be able to provide a premium product with the right levels of fat and good flavour," he said. It's not a 9 to 5 job and there is a fair bit of manure to be shifted between farrowing pigs and delivering them to market but if the animal lovers among you are feeling concerned about the welfare of the pigs let me reassure you. As I write, Andrez is keeping an eye on a sow about to farrow. He knows it will be soon, she is practising the same nesting instinct women do. All day, despite her distended stomach, she has been carrying grass into the farrowing hut to build a soft bed for the new arrivals. It's a freezing cold day with about 50 knots of wind, but there is a Rayburn stove keeping the farrowing hut warm. Farmers might seem like a hardhearted bunch sometimes, but you really do have to like your animals to work with them day in day out.

On the road to 2013

GRADING teams have roared into action during the recent spell of dry weather on the MPA and Port Louis stretches on East Falkland.

Giving an update at Monday's Transport Advisory Committee Road Engineer Simon Catton said it was the aim for the 2012/13 season to ensure that all roads on the East which required grading were attended to.

In addition 10 km of the MPA road was to be capped using material from Port Harriet, he said, adding that the Pretty Banks (Teal Inlet) area would also be capped.

Five cattle grids are to be replaced, concentrating mainly on the Greenfield farm area and 10 areas where culverts need attention had been indentified.

The Estancia causeways are to be tackled in two sections with new culverts installed and the old ones removed and collapsed before the main haulage season for the abattoir begins and the rock armour being added later in the year. Mr Catton said this was mainly due to a shortage of dump trucks.

On West Falkland it is planned to have one grader team in place at the start of the season, however Mr Catton said it was unknown how much of the network would be graded with priority being given to the East.

The new road to Westley Farm was also to be constructed and it was currently planned that PWD would carry out the works, confirmed Mr Catton. MLA Roger GENERAL maintenance has been taking place on the Stanley roads with the most noticeable activity at the bottom of Philomel Street by the POD gift shop.

Roads Engineer Simon Catton said that while it was hoped the works carried out would be final, he expected that some areas of it would break up again. He reported to the Transport Advisory Committee that the cement slabs under the tarmac had been in a very poor condition.

The works had cost £9,800 he said, responding to an enquiry from committee member Owen Betts.

Chairing the meeting, MLA Sharon Halford said that if all roads lasted as well as Ross Road had, life would be considerably easier. Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside confirmed that Ross Road had been constructed in 1957 for the Duke of Edinburgh's visit.

Sound Ridge, short listed for worl this season Picture S Hansen

Edwards asked for it to be noted that he had always fought hard for that particular road to be built and at no point had he referred to it as being adequate within TAC as had recently been suggested to him by a member of the public.

Six cattle grids are to be replaced on the Port Howard/Fox Bay road by JK Contracting as per the four year term contract and signage is also to be put in place at all junctions.

Subject to Executive Council (ExCo) and Standing Finance Committee approval eight areas on the West have been identified for capping this season. Mr Catton said the original programme was to progress the capping of the Port Howard road, which had been accepted by ExCo prior to the budget being finalised, however further consultation had led to a proposed redrafted programme with the following areas being identified: Carew Harbour, Wall Stream, Sound Ridge (6 km approx) Dunnose Head (1 km), Dunbar (3 km), areas by Stoney Ridge and Leicester Falls houses and the Spring Point Junction.

Mr Catton said £220,675 was previously approved for capping the Port Howard road (category A) and by not undertaking the work the funds approved for the 2012/13 season would cover a significant part of the revised programme, but another £63,330 would be needed to cover the additional work.

MLAs confirmed at the Goose Green public meeting that the new seatruck for the Concordia Bay had cost more than £200,000.

The Falkland Islands Government has purchased the vessel and Workboat Services has overseen the construction.

Workboat Services General Manager Adam Cockwell said the funding had been agreed based on several options and it was expected to arrive in late January or early February.

There had been a slight delay with the construction, as the original overall weight of 3.5 tonne had been exceeded to 5.0 tonne, explained Mr Cockwell.

This had been rectified with aluminium cutting and the overall weight was now an acceptable 3.8 tonne, he added.

Apart from obvious restrictions on lifting the vessel at 5.0 tonne it would have been somewhat, "exciting," to handle on the beaches and landing areas it was required for.

With a ramp width of two metres and the ability to carry approximately four tonne of cargo the outer islands will once again be able to land vehicles and even some light plant to improve ramps and landing stages.

TAC snippets

WORKBOAT Services representative Adam Cockwell raised his concern as to why the Executive Council paper (39/12) entitled Priorities for Roads Maintenance, Increased Funding for Grading, Capping and for Surfacing the MPA Road had not been presented at the Transport Advisory Committee before going to ExCo.

He said it was not that he disagreed with the content of the paper which set out options for resurfacing the MPA road and other issues, but that he was shocked it had gone to the April Executive Council, and even when the TAC had met on May 4, its existence had not been mentioned. The redacted paper compiled by Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside and Roads Engineer Simon Catton was made public on July 9 and was reported on in Penguin News.

MLA Sharon Halford said the relevant pieces of the paper had been discussed within the committee, but that staffing issues, "were not for this body," adding that it was an exercise primarily for the budget.

Mr Keenleyside said the paper had started out as an Asset Management document. He said he had also been preparing a paper on staffing and had then been asked to put forward some costings on resurfacing the MPA and to combine all the information.

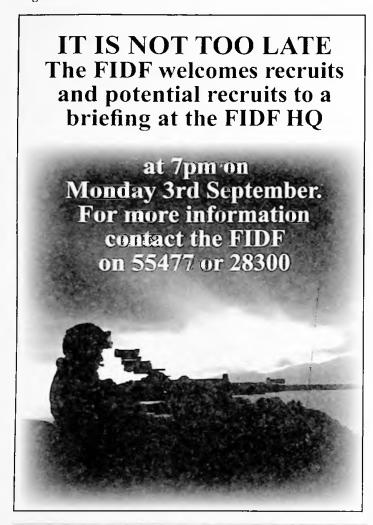

Mr Cockwell was receptive to the points but insisted that the aim of the TAC was to deal with all things relating to transport.

The Memorandum of Understanding had recently been discussed and clearly stated that the TAC should be consulted on all policy matters, he said.

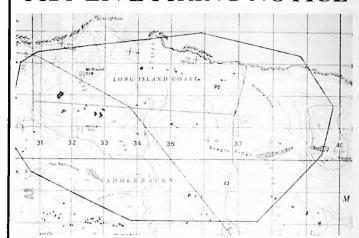

He asked whether it was made clear to all MLAs and those attending GPC that this sort of paper had not been to TAC and asked who decided whether a paper was brought to the committee or not.

Mrs Halford said Mr Cockwell had questioned whether TAC was fit for purpose and asked if he would like to see it disbanded. She added that she had wondered why there were so many members and suggested that Workboat Services and FIGAS representatives could attend only when matters concerned them directly.

MLA Roger Edwards strongly disagreed with this option, stressing that the transport system was combined and representatives from air, road and sea needed to be in attendance at all meetings.

In memory of a Falklands jockey: Mick McCarthy

FORMER Falklands jockey Michael (Mick) McCarthy passed away peacefully at his home in Wellington, New Zealand on August 11, 2012.

Mick as he was always known was born and raised at Danson Harbour, the last survivor of ten children of the late Mike and Mary McCarthy.

He worked for many years at North Arm before he, along with his younger brother Phil, emigrated to New Zealand in 1950 where he undertook the work of a 'wharfie' in Wellington docks and there he stayed until he retired in 1984

Mick was a quiet and even tempered man, who rarely raised his voice and was well respected by the hard nosed and bolshie dock workers.

He was always interested in people and as his health deteriorated his world became smaller and smaller but he always enjoyed a visit from anyone from the Falklands.

He especially enjoyed meeting Patrick Watts when he called in on a visit to Wellington a couple of years ago and they both enjoyed a good Falklands talk of horses and jockeys and old race meetings.

He loved hearing and telling stories about the Falklands and had a fantastic memory for facts and figures; he was a well known jockey on Stanley Racecourse where one of his favourite rides was Epica, a Chilean horse imported by his father.

His favourite racing trophy was placed on his coffin at the funeral.

Mick is survived by his wife Edna, two sons Ken and Jamie and three grandchildren Christopher, Jennifer and Harriett.

Project for peace from acapella groups

RESPECTED British capella group Swingle Sisters has teamed up with Argentine group Voxpop in a video collaboration project, 'We only ask' which is aimed at, "peace and understanding," singer Javier Diez told Penguin News.

He said the project was conceived by both groups in 2011, and is meant to commemorate 30 years since the war in the Islands, "while at the same time carrying a message of peace to the world."

The video shows all 13 singers performing an acappella mashup of British and Argentine 'anthems' of love, peace and freedom, such as Imagine (John Lennon), All You Need Is Love (Lennon/ McCartney) and I'm Free (Jagger/Richards) Himno de mi Corazón (Abuelos de la Nada), Sólo le pido a Dios (Leon Gieco), Inconsciente Colectivo (Charly Garcia),) and was recorded in Buenos Aires, Argentina and London between January and June of

'We Only Ask', the song from the video, is available on iTunes and both groups have decided to donate 100 per cent of its sales to the humanitarian help organisation Doctors Without Borders.

Thanks from cancer research

CONSULTANT for Paediatric and Adolescent Oncology Dr Q Campbell-Hewson of the North of England Children's Cancer Research Fund has written to thank Joyce Allan for further donations to the fund.

Mrs Allan raises funds for the charity from within the Falk-lands and asked that the doctor's thanks be passed on to those who donate.

Dr Q Campbell-Hewson said, "We now have one of the largest and most effective children's cancer research units in Europe and one to rival most in the world.

"This is mainly down to the fantastic support that we have had over the last 25 years from our local people raising money for local causes. However it is not just for local benefit and the treatments that we have developed here are being used to help children all over the world. Thank you once again."

Design for new ship revealed

THE latest design of the Royal Navy's Type 26 Global Combat Ship (T26 GCS), the next generation of warships, was unveiled last week. The Ministry of Defence has released images showing the basic specification of the T26 GCS, which is a significant milestone in the development of this program.

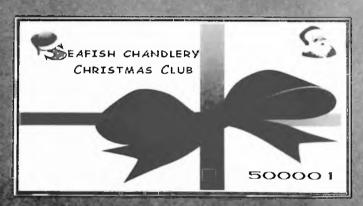

The multi-mission warship, is due to come into service after 2020.

Exciting finds in South Georgia

waters The Shallow Marine Survey Group shares the beauty below the waves

THE Shallow Marine Surveys Group completed what they described as a, "highly productive expedition," to South Georgia earlier this year, exploring the subtidal and intertidal habitats along the island's north coast. Great weather, fantastic support aboard the MV Pharos and at King Edward Point research station, and an enthusiastic team of divers resulted in many exiting findings and valuable baseline biodiversity data collected.

Although there have been various localised studies in the past, not since the Discovery Expeditions of 1925 has the island's marine habitats been explored in such detail and over such a wide geographic extent.

The team surveyed 25 sites between Bird Island in the northwest and Cooper Bay in the southeast, and three depth zones at each site, totalling over 64 hours spent in the zero degree Celsius waters.

4,347 specimens of marine invertebrates were collected including 120 sponge samples and 160

seaweed samples.

They gathered quantitative photos for species and habitat diversity analyses, macro-photographs for future guidebooks, and could not resist taking some amazing photos of the playful and inquisitive fur seals that accompanied the team on every dive.

At most sites, forests of bladder kelp (Macrocystis pyrifera) and the large, trailing Himantothallus grandifolius algae dominated the seabed, providing multi-storied habitats for a huge array of striped topshells, giant red sea spiders, giant isopods, limpets, sea cucumbers, colourful sea slugs, and a variety of starfish.

Beautiful overhangs and rock walls were also encountered, covered in a vibrant array of sea squirts, anemones and sponges. Intertidal surveys of seaweeds and animals also proved interesting, recording many previously unreported species.

A spokesperson for the groupssaid: "These data will greatly improve our understanding of the

South Georgia marine habitats; they will aid in future planning, managing, and monitoring of South Georgia's natural resources, and have already generated interesting questions for future research in the region."

Visiting scientist Dr Emma Wells (algae, Wells Marine) and Dr Claire Goodwin (sponges, National Museums Northern Ireland) joined the group for the expedition, and noted many interesting new and potentially endemic species of seaweeds and sponges.

Claire was particularly excited to encounter the 'volcano sponge' Rosella sp. in shallow waters, belonging to a group of sponges called glass sponges that are normally encountered only in depths over 200m, but due to the fjordic nature of the South Georgia environments were found in only eight metres of water.

The Shallow Marine Surveys Group exists to coordinate and conduct assessments of the status of inshore resources around the Falkland Islands. Headed by a core group of experienced biologists and divers and assisted by volunteers from the local community they have been collecting, identifying and photographing marine animals since June 2006. The scope of the work includes the splash zone, inter-tidal and subtidal environments on sandy, pebble and rock beaches of Falkland Islands' shores.

The group's activities can be followed at http://smsg-falklands.org/

The Wool Market Report - 16 August 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE season has started slowly, with further drops in the benchmark. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator dipped to AU$1,000 which was a 62 cent drop in its first week of trading. This last week has seen a further drop to AU$949 cents/kg clean a drop of 51 cents. This corresponds to a drop of 76 pence in the first two weeks of trading, to 632p/kg/clean in Stirling.

The opening offer of wool was very high at 50,603 bales, the highest since April this year. This was followed by a smaller offer of 43,170 bales and next weeks forecast of a lower offering again of 38,230 bales. This drop in offers is a direct indication of the poorer prices which have come about due to a lack of demand, with clearance rates between 75 and 80% in the first few sales.

Demand is low from key players and this has been proven in recent export figures published by AWEX. China, India, Italy, Czech Republic and Taiwan all reducing their volumes considerably in the last season, some of them dropping by nearly 20%.

Darts and dicing Fox Bay fun

RAG and Tracey Macaskill of the Rose Bar in Stanley were the lucky winners of the top prize of £1500 in the West Falklands Sports Association Sweepdraw held at the Fox Bay two-nighter on the weekend.

The weekend of socialising began on Friday with dicing for tickets for the draw as well as a hotly contested darts tournament Robin 'Snoozer' Smith won the mens competition with Sheila Jones picking up first place in the ladies.

Last minute gambling for tickets also claimed Saturday morning with the draw held at 3pm that afternoon. Happy winners of the prize Tracey and Rag Macaskill shared their good luck by putting £200 behind the social club bar.

Visitors to the West function were also treated to finger food buffet later in the evening.

A spokesperson for the twonighter said, "Thank you to everyone who made the effort to come and to all of the normal supporters; see you all again next year."

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

BILL was coming back from the garage last Saturday night when the very high winds that evening caught his glasses as he came around the corner of the house. It sent them hurtling into the 'stumpery'; anyone going past at that time could be forgiven for thinking I was doing a plant patrol' by torchlight, and those who know me well probably thought I had finally lost it. The truth was much simpler. With the aid of my own glasses I expected to see his glasses glinting in the torch light. No such luck! With his threat to get out there first thing in the morning looking for them, I was busily weeding early, no way were his size 8's going anywhere near the borders

I was delighted to find that the wind had dried the ground quite well and spent a very pleasant day (having found his glasses first) weeding that border and making a start on the next. Oh joy! Although, after such a long period without bending, my back was killing me that night, however, it was great to be getting on with it again.

I've managed to do a bit more since but there is still quite a lot to do and it's rather cool out there still, even on the sunniest days. One of the nicer things, apart from greeting old friends in the borders, is meeting strange new ones. I think I've mentioned before that after a couple of years any pots or trays of seeds which have not germinated get emptied on the borders. The labels go in with them of course but these have long since faded so I shall have to wait a while to identify them, I find that a wonderfully exciting part of gardening.

I think I've also mentioned before that I'm not big on TV and certainly not on sport, and so all this coverage of the Olympics was, to me anyway, rather boring, in fact I would rather watch paint dry. So, for some of that time I had to make do with some housework instead, which I also find rather boring but is one of those things that must be done but not too often, (except kitchen and bathroom) however, there was a programme that Bill taped for me to watch and enjoy later, the coverage of the dressage was beautiful, what wonderful horses.

On some of those bright but cool days I've worked in the tunnels, cleaning up and generally making space available for the coming season. The various pots with cuttings, or young plants, have been put in one corner, and I've turned the remaining soil over ready to put in a few of the early spuds. I've never saved the dahlia tubers (outside) instead I keep the parent plants growing in a border in the tunnel. I've just put a clear, plastic cover on them now to bring them on a bit, then I will take cuttings off them to plant outside later when the plants are a reasonable size and have been hardened off. It saves lifting them and I'm putting them to dry and hoping the tubers won't get too wet or cold and rot, or be too warm and dry out. I've had very few losses over the years by doing it this way.

Having pruned the cherry tree and cleaned up underneath it I then fed it with fish, blood and bone fertilizer. As I clear the other fruit trees and bushes they will be treated in the same way and once the soil warms up they will receive some home-made compost as well.

I felt it was probably quite safe to cut down some shrubs and also some of the perennials; the pinks are looking very straggly now but many others are as well. The sap is rising and most things are starting to sprout. I cannot resist putting a few bits of this and that into pots, most will probably root and nothing except space has been lost if they don't.

Around the garden outside there is a lot happening now (which probably means bad weather will soon hit) the paeonies are sending up red shoots, some delphiniums are showing through also. The roses are sprouting well as are the bergenias and hellebores and the rhododendrons are looking great. Also the primroses are really coming into their own now and they will be even better as time goes on; the snowdrops are in full flow at the moment and will last a couple more weeks yet. After that I will lift the clumps, break them up and replant some in other places as I just can't get enough of them, they are so cute.

So far only a couple of the smaller daffodils are flowering but there are plenty more waiting to show off; puschkinias too are delightful with their pale blue flowers, only about four inches tall but they pack quite a punch. Not much taller than that but a much deeper blue, almost purple in some lights, are the little irises just starting to open. There should be some small yellow ones also but, either I've lost them or they flower a little later. Crocus are everywhere and in every colour imaginable, little and large ones depending on whether they are species crocus or hybrids. They are all gorgeous.

The kiddies are quite excited with their avocado pears growing inside in water. They have started to root and there is a competition as to who will fill their glass with roots first; quite a talking point.

Stanley Leisure Centre offers a Spring workout for all

THIS month Stanley Leisure Centre is offering a twelve week fitness challenge to help customers 'get in shape for Spring.'

Join up for a Step Aerobics, Aquarobics or Boot Camp course in August and pay half of the price for the first four classes and save 20 per cent on each additional course taken up.

The classes usually cost four pounds a session so the savings add up for people wanting to workout regularly.

Using the offer one course will cost £40 for twelve weeks of exercise, saving eight pounds.

Taking two lwelve week courses will cost £72 saving £24 overall, and to take all three courses will cost £104, saving £40.

Each class improves overall fitness but each has specific advantages.

Aquarobics has a low impact on the joints because water displaces bodyweight meaning the workout form is beneficial for people of any age, size or fitness level and you don't even have to be a swimmer

You will shape and tone up faster as muscles work harder due to the resistance offered by water, and the workout improves flexibility and balance through the wide range of motions that can be performed in the pool.

Step aerobics is one of the highest energy burners of Aerobic activities, depending on speed of movement and step height.

It provides endurance training, strength training and increases cardio vascular fitness whilst improving muscle tone, balance and flexibility.

The popular Boot Camp course is essentially calisthenics circuit training combining a mixture of exercises that work a large number of muscles.

The sessions add variety to a work out and improve cardiovascular fitness, strength training and muscle tone all over the body.

Also on offer at Stanley Leisure Centre is the option to have a half hour gym session or swim session at a reduced price of £2.50.

They have a lane marked off in public swimming sessions to encourage more adult lane swimmers too.

Call the Leisure Centre on 27291 for more information or to book a place on a course.

Stanley Cup tournament

THE last of the season's Hockey competitions, the Stanley Cup is coming soon and fixtures are set to run a little differently.

The six Dek Hockey teams - Buffalos, Panthers, Penguins, Hurricanes, Coyotes and Flyers, will be divided up into two groups, Group A and Group B. Placement in these groups will depend on how and where the teams finish up in the Cable and

Wireless League

The Cup competition is a play-off style tournament, and winners of group stage games progress to compete for a final Stanley Cup winning match.

Competition will end with the bottom two teams being eliminated, with the third place decided by a play-off and the top two teams will play in three finals to decide the overall winner.

Splash September with swim school or private lessons

STANLEY Leisure Centre Swim School is currently looking for new students to join their swimming lessons which will start again in September.

To accommodate children age 6 weeks to adults, there exists a great deal of assistant in order to help everyone become water confident.

Each child will be assessed to correctly place them into a suitable swimming group and they will grow from there.

At the end of each academic term, children will be assessed to STA swimming standards and certificates and reports for each child will be issued.

All swimming groups have their own individual teacher who will work with them each week to help improve their swimming and confiwater dence.

Swim School also offers one to one lessons for anyone who would like lessons on their own with a swimming teacher.

If anyone would like any further information or to sign up, please do not hesitate to contact SLC reception on 27291.

Sapper Hill housing development fast tracked

ADDITIONAL funding to take in phase two of the Sapper Hill housing development has been approved by Standing Finance Committee.

£1.3 million was approved for a further 27 housing plots on Wednesday.

It was previously envisaged that phase two would be progressed in 2013/14 but it had been indicated by the oil developers that housing will be needed at an early stage for staff, Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside informed Executive Council in a paper. "It also appears likely there will be other demands for accommodation for local support activities and there is a need to provide for that potential early demand," he said.

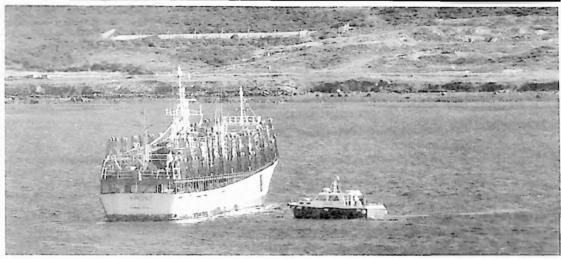

The layout and outline design have been completed for the overall project and planning permission obtained, with detailed design having been completed for the first two phases.

The first phase of 37 plots is currently being progressed.

Plot size was typically about 800m2, but ranges from about 680m2 to 1600m2 which provides variety to meet differing needs. Mr Keenleyside explained, adding that plot frontage was typically 20 metres, but this again varied so as to permit semi-detached or terraced units to be located on some sites.

There would be no recurrent costs initially but these would increase steadily as electricity was used by street lighting and Biodisc, and maintenance and cleaning would be needed on roads and other services. First year of costs is projected to be 2016/17 when Biodisc and street lighting would need to be brought into use once the first house was occupied. Costs might be expected to steadily rise to perhaps £5-£10,000 per annum for routine maintenance, he said.

Argentine environmental terrorism will backfire warn FIFCA members

ARGENTINA has no interest whatsoever fisheries 111 conservation, Chair the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association (FIFCA) Cheryl Roberts stated this week, and Director of Natural Resources John Barton believes an Argentine action aimed at undermining the Falklands fishery is likely to have a negative impact on their own fishery

They responded to news from the Argentine finance media, and reported on by Mercopress earlier this week, that the Argentine Federal Fisheries Council resolution to allow the registry of 20 additional Jiggers in Argentine waters (with straddling fish stocks with the Falklands) was a political move against the Falklands and that local Argentine fishing chambers have in fact protested against the additional Jiggers.

Mrs Roberts said: This follows on from their totally inappropriate decision to open the Argentine 2012 squid season early. I said then that such a decision had scant regard for potential impact on conservation in our fishing zone in Falklands' waters, or their own in Argentine waters."

She said to then go on to add another 20 vessels to their illex fleet proved their interest was political, saying it highlighted to the rest of the world, "the difficulty we face when having to work alongside such neighbours. Whether the inclusion of additional vessels will have an effect will be unknown until it is too late of course."

FIFCA Vice Chair Hamish Wylie described it as "environmental terrorism," adding, "we already know from the Argentine media, that the main objectives behind licensing the premature fishing of illex is to decimate the stock. This is in order to make the Falklands fishery less attractive to the foreign fishing vessels on which our Islands economy depends.

"That the Argentines should engage in such environmental terrorism for political objectives should remind the world of how little their country has really changed in the past 30 years," he said

John Barton commented: " I think the key point is that there are a number of initiatives which could improve the outlook for illex squid. These include some of the actions which used to happen ten years ago under the auspices of the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission (SAFC) and prior to process.

Argentina's withdrawal from that

"At that time fisheries data was exchanged between the Falklands and Argentina allowing a better understanding of the illex squid stock, there were joint surveys of the illex resource, and there was the option for co-ordination of conservation measures. Conservation and management of illex could also benefit from a regional fisheries management organisation; something which was also on the SAFC agenda."

He said it would depend on the illex season whether there was much impact on the Falklands fishery. He warned, "the bigger impact may be on their own fishery."

Another Falklands fishing industry insider said he too was not sure what the impact would be but, "I doubt that it will have much impact on what happens in the Falklands fishery but of course it is completely irresponsible of them to seek to increase the effort on the migrating illex regardless of the state of the stock simply for political ends.

"They seemingly take no account of their ecological and environmental responsibilities at all. In all probability it will be the Argentine fishing industry that suffers."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

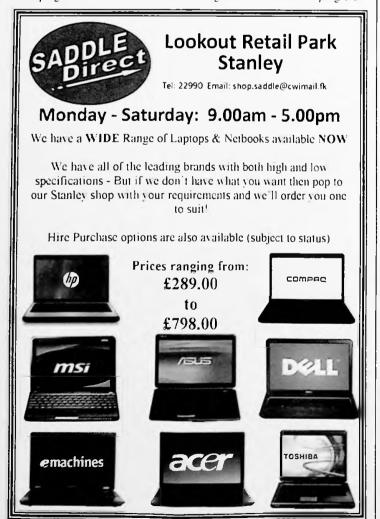

NEWS that according to a poll, 71.1 per cent of the Argentine people wish to see a change of government in their country, and that only 23.9 per cent would like to see Mrs Kirchner re-elected may not be whole-heartedly welcomed on this side of the water. After all, much as we'd love to see her irritating Evita-style pretensions trampled underfoot, there's no denying that her wildly unpredictable style of governing has not only reduced her country's credibility on the world stage, but also to our advantage, inadvertently promoted the Falklands cause to an extent that would have been impossible for our own modest PR machine to achieve.

As such I'm not entirely certain that we shouldn't be setting up some kind of Save Cristina Appeal, it would seems appropriately grateful to make a least some small effort to head off the potential for a CFK weary Argentine population to elect anybody too level headed.

On a non sarcastic note the Falkland Islands Tourist Board will be delighted to welcome their boss-man in plenty of time for the summer season. Lalways feel a pang of sympathy for the new guys who are most often dropped into the middle of some overseas tourism get-together or other prior to their arrival. It can't be ideal being obliged to represent a territory they've never visited; and there has been at least one case where a newbie (I should specify not the current one who was ably supported by our own birding types) has, perhaps not through any fault of his own, blundered embarrassingly in the face of clients that clearly know more about the subject of the Falklands than himself.

On the subject of potential gaffes, there's a part of me not entirely convinced that the current fancy for five-star accommodation scattered around the Falklands is one bound for success. We've been assured there is a market for monied travellers preferring to view 'the wilds' from luxurious accommodation, and I am trying exceedingly hard not to doubt that we have enough equally luxurious facilities and activities to keep them occupied for the week they may need to stay. Still I suppose if we don't attract enough private investment to build the hotels in the first place it becomes a moot point.

And then perhaps it is a too old-fashioned part of me that rails at the idea of the Camp offering anything other than facilities that reflect traditional homeliness and the local culture? And if the plans don't detract from the current accommodation on offer, and equal energy is put in to developing those facilities too, who am I to grumble in the face of progress?

FIG approves new road works out West

THE £63,330 of additional funding to carry out road works on eight areas on West Falkland (listed on page 7 of last week's PN) has been approved by Executive Council and Standing Finance Committee.

The revised programme placed higher importance on shorter areas across the West network that posed particular concern and difficulty for users and reduced the free flow of traffic, particularly in winter and should be treated prior to the continuation of the original programme, said Roads Engineer Simon Catton.

The original programme, to cap the highest categories of road first, should however be reverted to in 2013/14, he said, as there is still a clear need to undertake works to these roads, especially around the Harps Farm area.

Although there is need to deal with some localised problems on B and C category roads, if the A roads are not adequately maintained little will have been gained in ensuring those on other roads can reach them," said Mr Catton.

Adjusting the works to address expressed user concerns on more minor roads and further increasing the amount of capping done, over that which can be currently undertaken with existing funding would appear likely to potentially reduce the overall risk of claims, he concluded.

anadian support

THE Canadian government reaffirmed its support for the Falkland Islands and their right to self determination, according to a report from the Canadian edition of The Wall Street Journal

According to the report Barrick Gold Corp has lobbied Ottawa over its support for the Falklands Islands, "wading into a centuries old controversy and highlighting the increased complexities of doing business in Argentina, the country that claims sovereignty over the south Atlantic Islands.

The Canadian government supports the Islanders position and at April's Summit of the Americas in Colombia, Prime Minister Stephen Harper thwarted an Argentine request to move the Falklands issue onto the meeting of heads of states concluding communique.

Foreign Minister Baird told reporters that Barrick, which has two gold mines in Argentina, had, "raised a concern" about the government's position among other

The lobbying appears to have had little effect in Ottawa.

The issue of Canada's policy does not change, we support the self-determination of the people of the Falkland Islands, as we do people everywhere around the world." Mr. Baird said, according to a transcript of the comments.

appropriation Supplementary

SUPPLEMENTARY appropriation of £2.4 million was approved at Standing Finance Committee on Wednesday

Acting Financial Secretary Nicola Granger said that at the conclusion of a financial year there are usually a small number of expenditure areas where the financial year-end restrictions do not accommodate actual spending profiles.

This can be due to projects crossing financial boundaries or late invoice presentation. Carry over is not awarded however, where a department is purely seeking to use up excess finds from the previous year.

Departments would, however, be allocated any approved carryovers as required, because the current contingency warrant only permits the allocation of a maximum of £1 million before the next Assembly in October, said Mrs Granger, MLA Roger Edwards commented that this had been the case "forever" and in view of the increased budgets dealt with should possibly be changed.

Five requests amounting to £27,600 were received this year which the Treasury did not feel met the criteria for carry over and included training within the Courts, repairs and equipment for the Police.

Electoral Commission to assist with Referendum

EXECUTIVE Council has officially approved that a referendum be held on the question of the political status of the Falkland Islands and announced that the Electoral Commission has agreed to assist with developing the form of the question and the wording and give a bespoke advisory service including providing guid-

Planned for March 2013 the specific date will be determined by the Chief Executive in consultation with MLA's

In a paper on the subject it was recommended that qualifications to vote will be the same as qualifications to stand for the Legislative Assembly

These are

He/she has attained the age of

He/she is a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen or a British overseas citizen and has Falkland Island Status; or

His/her name appeared on the register of electors for a constituency in force on the date the

Pay review

January 2009); and, he/she was resident in the Falkland Islands on the qualifying date in relation to which his or her entitlement to be registered as an elector falls to be considered and had on that qualifying date been so resident for the qualifying period

Once the votes are verified, votes from both constituencies will be mixed and the outcome be announced as a 'whole Islands'

It was also recommended that the election be independently observed by a panel of representatives from a number of different countries including from South America; also that a suitable person be invited to select and Chair a diverse and independent panel of observers and set out its terms of reference.

With regard to referendum arrangements Executive Council approved an option that

(a) static polling stations on polling day at:

(i) Town Hall, Stanley;

(iii) Fox Bay; and

(b) mobile polling stations: (i) to the hospital and sheltered accommodation on polling day;

(ii) to all settlements with registered voters present on East and West Falkland, including outer Islands accessible by FIGAS (but excluding Beaver, New Island. and West Point - this is due to costs)

Under 'campaigning' the paper notes: "It is recommended that the government makes clear that to facilitate a full and open debate it will provide equal access to public facilities and take the necessary steps to ensure that the right to freedom of expression is respected.

Funding for the referendum consists of £12,000 for the administration £15,000 for Executive support and £50,000 for other costs including observers

Catch limits similar for 2013

catch limits for 2013 will be largely the same as in 2012, it was agreed at the Fisheries Committee Meeting yesterday

Director of Natural Resources John Barton explained the background and noted that a presentation on the 2013 Fisheries Advice paper was given to Falkland Islands Fisheries Company Association members in June with the opportunity for discussion and questions. The paper was circulated to FIFCA on July 4 with the opportunity for FIFCA members to provide any comments

A paper presented to the committee yesterday noted that because catch limits and effort were similar to 2012; "As such most fisheries will see no or only minor adjustments in fishing

It was also agreed at the meeting that access conditions for the 2013 illex fishery would be on substantially the same terms as the 2012 fishery, with a modification to the refund policy. The 2012 fishery was reasonable with around 87,000 tonnes of illex caught. License uptake was good with approximately 100 jiggers involved from Korea and Taiwan.

Mr Barton said: "Whilst catches did not reach the threshold catch level which would dictate no refund, adjusting for the value of the catch ruled out for MLAs £ 5,000 has been approved by the Court on Wednesday. Standing Finance Committee for Ryan Anthony Humphrey (22) a review of pay for Members of the Legislative Assembly The independent panel reviewing the package will have regard to the role of MLA's and the scope of their responsibilities together with the scheme of remuneration and allowances. In addition to the general nature of the review, elected members have requested that two additional areas should be particularly

RAF driver fined

- Determining whether there were any financial hindrances to standing for election and suggesting options that would maximise the pool of potential election candidates

Although the review will be independent, it is expected that MLAs will make submissions to the panel to present their views and evidence on an appropriate remuneration scheme

The Attorney General has advised that any such review should be commissioned by Executive Council and that those undertaking the review ought to be appointed in an open and transparent way. It was therefore suggested that expressions of interest should be sought from the public and that the Governor would make appointments from those who make an application.

AN RAF man was fined £300 after he admitted driving without insurance in the Senior Magistrates was stopped by Military Police just before 11pm on June 15, when they noticed a vehicle with no lights being driven on the Mount Pleasant Ring Road.

Not having the relevant documents requested by the officers with him, he was instructed to proceed to his accommodation to get them and it was established he was not insured to drive the Falklands registered vehicle F264G.

Mr Humphrey said he had been approached by a man who asked him to drive a vehicle for him because he had been drinking. He said the man, "seemed to be a Senior NCO," and in his mind he had no reason to believe that by carrying out the request he would be doing wrong

When told that the name of the officer was not available to the Court, Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley, warned Mr Humphrey that the Court, "wasn't born yes-terday," and put it to him he was protecting the officer, adding that he hoped the NCO was fully aware of what it had cost him.

Giving a character reference for Mr Humphrey, his commanding officer said he was fresh from training at the time of the incident and had tended to, "follow orders unquestioningly.

Mr Gumsley advised Mr Humphrey that if in the future he was given an order to do, "something stupid," by an NCO, he should

Knighted in 1997 he retired at the 2001 election.

Arrogant UK?

THE Argentine Ambassador to the United Kingdom Alicia Castro said on Tuesday that the UK's "arrogant" approach to Julian Assange's case, "was similar," to its approach to Argentina and particularly, the sovereignty dispute over the Falklands. Assange is currently taking refuge inside Ecuador's embassy, which granted the former Wikileaks owner asylum; a measure rejected by the UK government that wishes for him to be extradited to Sweden for accused crimes.

Dishonesty charge adjourned

KAYLEE Heen Simone Smith (20) had her case adjourned without plea until next Wednesday to seek legal representation.

Miss Smith faces a charge of using a forged transfer form to dishonestly obtain a bank transfer to the sum of £300.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he was very concerned about allowing Miss Smith who is currently on a probation order, to plead guilty without legal advice when in fact she may not be culpable.

The charge relates to an incident when Miss Smith is alleged to have obtained goods on a Falkland Islands Company account which was not her own.

She said she had not pretended to be anyone she wasn't when she had carried out the transaction and had intended to speak to her relative whose account she had used to apologise and repay the money

Referring to the Prosecution's case, Mr Gumsley said a lot of it was implied and there were also massive gaps in the evidence.

The case will resume on September 5 at 10am.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

AS reported GCSE results received last week were very close to predictions made by subject teachers and show a slight upward trend. To get a clearer idea of progress we need to look at a rolling average over several years because year groups can vary greatly. The performance of individual students is measured against their potential achievement level to calculate 'value added'. Students, staff and parents should be congratulated on the successes. I mention parents because their support and encouragement is crucial, as is the value they place on education and the work ethic they instil by example.

I WOULD like to add my compliments to those voiced at the public meeting about the much improved condition of the MPA road. Having driven on it the same day in a fierce gale 1 can vouch for the improvement. It is good when praise can be given to those who have earned it. In any case I believe good drivers always drive with regard to the prevailing conditions which include variables like wind, weather and the road surface.

THE new pre-school premises have been completed in good time and I understand look good, so PWD are to be congratulated on meeting another difficult challenge. The space freed up in the IJS will enable the school to handle increasing numbers for now.

MLAs are anxious that the question of remuneration of future Assemblies be settled in ample time before the general election next year and that anomalies relating to civil servants standing for election be cleared in order to allow those who wish to stand be free to fulfil the role properly if elected. We are moving into busy times and the workload, which many agree has increased substantially in the last few years, will become even more demanding in future. If we want people to put themselves forward for what will become a full time responsibility we need to ensure that they can support their dependents and pay their mongages. I'm not suggesting making it too easy, simply that we open it to more able and committed people, thus increasing choice.

FITB's Tony draws breath before season onslaught

NEW Managing Director of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB). Tony Mason, was welcomed to the Islands with a reception at Government House on Tuesday evening. If E the Governor Nigel Haywood described the evening as giving Mr Mason time, "to draw breath," before the "onslaught" of the summer tourist season.

Prior to his arrival, Mr Mason represented FITB at Birdfair 2012, alongside local birding expert Alan Henry as well as Weddell Island lodge managers, Martin and Jane Beaton.

This was the fourth year the Falkland Islands exhibited at the show in Rutland, Leicestershire. Birdfair encompasses the whole spectrum of the birdwatching industry whilst at the same time supporting global bird conservation.

Under Mr Mason's supervision, this year was the first time the Falkland Islands had a lecture slot at the show, providing a significant platform for promoting the Falkland Islands as a world-class birding destination. Martin Beaton's talk on 'Birds of the Falklands Where What and How' was well received and inspired visitors to come to the stand and find out more about what the Islands have

Mr Mason also enlisted help on the stand to collect stand visitors' details with a total of 300 entries gathered. He intends to use this database as the basis for a regular communications programme.

FITB also participated in a silent auction, donating a bronze plated penguin, which helped generate further awareness about the destination.

Commenting on his appointment, Tony Mason said: "My first priority will be to go and see as much of the destination as possible and meet as many people as I can to ensure I'm in the best position to promote and sell the Falkland Islands. I can't wait."

Tony joins FITB from a London-based travel services group, Lycafly, where he worked as Managing Director.

Extra tax income

WITH the drill rig anticipated to be present in the Falkland Islands until December 2012 resulting in personal tax payments being received by the government until January 2013 and seismic survey work expected from January to March 2013, the Tax Office now projects an increase in revenues of £3.2 million. That is, the total revised projection is £20.3 million from personal and corporation tax and MST as opposed to the original estimate of £17.1 million

A cautionary comment accompanying the projections indicates people should not get too excited, however, because due to additional proposals, "proposed in-year through ExCo and SFC," the surplus funds have already been allocated.

Frozen pensions

THE problem of British National Insurance Pensions being frozen when individuals move to the Falkland Islands and other countries, is a 'live' one and the Falkland Islands Government continues to put representations to the British Government it was confirmed at the Public Meeting on Monday. The issue was raised at the Overseas Territories and Commonwealth meetings said MLA Summers but the, "UK has declined to move on this," he added MLA Jan Cheek said, it was, "very much a live issue," but results had not been satisfac-

Question of gas

EXPLOITATION of gas condensate is unlikely to require greater onshore infrastructure than exploitation of oil, it was confirmed at the public meeting. Exploitation of gas itself would potentially result in a greater impact onshore, however there are currently no plans for this by Borders & Southern who announced the discovery of gas condensate at their Darwin well in April.

FLH units

FALKLANDS Landholdings will retain a General Manager until North Arm and Goose Green are being run (like Fitzroy) as, "individual units," MLA lan Hansen told the Public Meeting on Monday. In 2009 it had been planned this would be achieved by 2011 but MLA Hansen confirmed there had been a small amount of, "slippage."

FIPASS funds

FUNDS have been allocated to upgrade FIPASS over the next three years say MLAs. The latest round of discussion in relation to a new deep water port involves talks between the Falkland Islands Government and oil businesses on the subject of what they might require.

'Multi-purpose' breeders question future of the National Stud Flock

FARMERS on the Board of the Agricultural Advisory Committee this week questioned the emphasis on wool sheep in the National Stud Flock (NSF) as opposed to multi-purpose (wool and meat) sheep.

The discussion about the future of the Saladero flock followed a presentation to the Board on Monday by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday, of a Detailed Action Plan for Saladero, the home of the stud flock and National Beef Herd. (NBH).

Ms Thoday explained that the continued emphasis on wool was the result of a survey of farmers who had been virtually, "unanimous" in their opinion.

Farmers Ben Berntsen and Andrez Short referred to the increasing value of having animals that produced both good quality wool and meat, due to the influence of the Falkland Islands Meat Company. MLA Summers described the discussion as "valuable," and at his request Ms Thoday agreed to collate figures providing a comparison between the national economic benefits of farming multi-purpose sheep compared to wool sheep.

The Action Plan itself outlines future targets for both the stud flock and the beef herd.

THE Department of Agriculture will add a £1 charge to every bale of wool cored in order to cover the cost of a trained individual to undertake the task.

In a paper to the Agricultural Advisory Committee on Monday it was noted; "Due to the often erratic nature of wool coring schedules, having the ability to call upon a trained individual or individuals on a casual basis would provide essential back-up."

The approximately £6,000 per season revenue would pay the wage (£10/hr) and administration of a dedicated corer over the entire season and the training before the season commences.

Current net Stanley prices paid for a 180kg good quality wool bale is about £1,000 while lower quality wool would command a £400-£500 price per bale.

Ten spitfires

WITH regard to last week's article 'Islands to UK War Effort...' it should be clarified that in 1940 Legislative Council voted £50,000 from colony funds for the purchase of 10 Spitfires for the Royal Air Force and money for a further Spitfire was raised by the Fellowship of the Bellows.

By 1945 the local branch of the Red Cross had raised over £20,000 for the War Effort.

Polwarth mature rams at Saladero

It is aimed that the NSF which originated with the purchase of 500 Polwarth ewes and 25 Polwarth rams from Tasmania in 1992, will have a fleece micron of 22.0 by 2022 (thus maintained micron with a small downward pressure) while ewe greasy fleece will be 5.kg by 2022 maintained with a slight pressure on increasing weight). It is also an aim that average hogget liveweight for rams and ewes will increase to 31kg at first shearing by 2017 and 32kg by 2022. Artificial Insemination and Embryo Transfer programmes will continue when necessary.

The NBH which was assembled in 1997 and which has now evolved into a line of performance tested purebred Angus beef cattle has progeny targets of the calf being two thirds of the mothers live weight at weaning with a weight

Breeding herd targets include yearly mating of all breeding cows selected for the programme; 80 per cent overall conception rate and two thirds of the herd to calve from the first mating or artificial insemination.

Over the years, unsuccessful trials have left unproductive cropping and pasture areas, thus the plan also includes an aim for unproductive areas to be brought back into production through cropping and pasture reseeds between 2012 and 2017. There will also be an investigation into water conservation and provision to livestock

A Saladero Management Guide also covers specific jobs that need to be carried out to keep with genetic deadlines and goals and also, "holistic and veterinary management deadlines."

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST: TRAVEL AND OVERSEAS ACCOMMODATION BOOKING

As part of St Helena Government and Enterprise St Helena policy, there is an objective to divest non-core services. Enterprise St Helena is therefore seeking Expressions of Interest from interested parties for the management and operation of travel and overseas accommodation booking services currently undertaken by St Helena Tourism.

This could form the basis for a private sector business on St Helena offering travel services to a wide range of customers beyond the current base.

The requirement is likely to be for interested parties to undertake –

- The recommendation and booking of airline flights for government staff and other persons;

The recommendation and booking of hotel and other accommodation for government staff and other persons;

Booking of transfers and any other necessary services.
 The service may extend to the booking of ship passages.

Parties should provide written Expressions of Interest, detailing their experience in this field and any appropriate licences held, no later than Friday 14 September, 2012 either in writing or electronically to Michael Dean, Tourism Development Executive, Enterprise St Helena, The Canister, Jamestown, St Helena, STHL 1ZZ / email: mike.dean@tourism.co.sh.

Further details and information will be provided to interested parties in due course, but any requests for information regarding the submission of Expressions of Interest can be obtained from Michael Dean on +290 2158 or the email address shown.

Would like to rent out a spare room or set up a guest house? Read on...

WITH the tourist season looming several members of the public have enquired at the Planning Office about providing accommodation to paying guests.

So, in an attempt to clarify the current situation and ensure consistent advice is being offered, Building Advisor Ken Snape has obtained information from the relevant authorities for a range of scenarios. The following advice and guidance relates to a bungalow or a traditional 1.5 domestic dwelling.

What do I need to do to let out one or two rooms in my house?

Check your existing smoke detectors work and if your budget allows buy a few extra to place in the bedrooms.

Ensure you have at least two exit routes from your home - normally the front and back door and ensure all the windows on your home open fully, is the advice from the Chief Fire Officer.

However the income is liable to Income Tax and MST, although you may be allowed to claim some expenses. Visit the Tax Office for further details.

What if I want to open up a B&B/ Guest House?

The Chief Fire Officer flagged up that there are two scenarios in this case.

If it is an existing house then generally an L1 fire alarm system is required. This requires smoke detectors in every habitable room and a heat detector is strongly recommended for the kitchen.

Some of the modern alarm systems, with the exception of the panel, are wireless which are slightly more expensive than a wired system but cause less disruption when installing.

The modern alarm systems come with an addressable panel which is fitted just inside the front door of your establishment. This indicates to the fire brigade exactly where the concern is—some even automatically dial the fire brigade for you!

Fire Exit signs are required clearly indicating the route(s) out of your establishment and some basic but essential fire fighting equipment — fire extinguishers and a fire blanket for the kitchen area for example will be required.

Protected routes: The walls and ceilings within the rooms and the general circulation areas (hallways, stairs etc) in all areas will need to be fire resistant normally plaster board is fitted over the existing surfaces or the original finish is removed and then replaced with plaster board.

The doors and door frames to all the habitable rooms must be 30 minutes fire resistant; there are some instances where it could be agreed to upgrade the existing doors. These simple measures above give you and your guests a safe route out from the premises in the event of an emergency which can be safely used at all times – day or night.

Two routes out of the property when guests have reached the ground floor are required. Sorry, but escaping through a window as a first line of escape is not acceptable, said the Chief Fire Officer.

Basic safety instructions, as seen in any hotel and guest house must be prominently displayed in all habitable rooms, normally pinned to the back of the bedroom door.

The Planning Office has an interest in car parking proposals. Accepting that many guests will not have their own cars, there will still be the additional traffic flow to consider, said the Planning Officer, adding, "come and talk to me about your proposals."

With a new, or more modem, building you will only need to address the Alarm System, signage and fire fighting equipment aspects.

All the other "passive" fire/life safety measures discussed above will be included into the design and approved by the relevant departments.

The hope is that this short article gives an insight into the business possibility open to many within our community, said Mr Snape. "However, and with respect, as a word to the wise, if you think running a B&B or guest house is easy, you could not be more mistaken. It's very hard work and at times very nearly 24 hours a day."

If you want to sell alcohol on your premises you will need to be licensed through the court system and you will need in most cases, third party insurance to cover your guests and your own general home insurance will need to be reviewed.

If you are thinking of specifically a B&B / Guest House there will be a need to talk to both the Planning officer and the Building Adviser – initially, should you wish to, contact Ken Snape on 28484 or email ksnape@planning@taxation.gov.fk for an informal and confidential chat.

Oil offers an exit strategy from the dispute

The discovery of a large field of natural gas beneath the seabed south of the Falklands received appropriate coverage in the UK press. Rockhopper Exploration's agreement with Premier Oil, which is likely to involve an investment by the latter of up to £750m, has also been noticed.

In fact, I am downplaying this. I think a wide band of people in the UK have been simply amazed at the news coming out of the Falklands. I believe most media-reading people in this country are now convinced that the Islands will soon become a hugely rich oil producing territory.

The commonly held view here is that the war of 1982 was all about oil, which I am sure most Islanders and Argentines know not to be true. But it would be right to say that oil is changing the dispute. The key to this is a surprising degree of corporate confidence and commitment There is no sign at all that Argentine threats have succeeded even slightly in dissuading rich oil investors. And London is to thank for that Had Whitehall issued anything less than cast-iron and categorical expressions of support for the corporations which invest there, BA's threats might have succeeded

A socio-economic impact study will soon tell us of the likely effect of an oil industry, and my guess is that both good and bad visions will come from it. But I don't think a study is necessary to confirm that the discoveries of oil and gas are anything other than good for the political future of the Falklands. As long as wealth and strategic importance are promised, then no government will take a weak and compromising position on sovereignty.

Within a few years Argentina will realise that crude aggression and sanctions are a waste of time and only make them look immature. They will then begin talking more pragmatically about cooperation, and secretly request face-saving concessions. My guess is that the Falklands and the British Governments will feel secure enough to welcome this and satisfy Argentina's need for an honourable exit from its hard-line strategy.

I would not like to guess what form a concession might take, but it is likely to be politically symbolic but economically significant. In any case, it does seem to me that prosperity from oil and staunch support from Britain may enable us to close the book on tedious dispute that has stymied the Falklands and Argentina for more than six decades.

The Siege of Notting Hill

OUR part of London has once again been brought to a state of paralysis by the Notting Hill Carnival. As I write, the glass in our windows is reverberating to the sound of 1,500 kilowatt "sound systems" based on flat bed trucks, and the cacophony of Caribbean steel orchestras and Brazilian drum bands.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of the Penguin News

It sounds like fun, and for the West Indians and other cultural groups who take back once working class Kensington from the gentry, it surely is. But for the middle classes whose house buying power drove Caribbean people out and transformed "Shocking Hill" years ago, it is anything but. Crime soars for two days, parking becomes impossible and every second garden becomes a latrine.

Defensive preparations across an area of about five square miles, began almost a week ago, as the wealthiest residents began boarding up their house fronts. Shops and restaurants left it to the last minute, but by Friday last week, most of them had also closed and boarded-up up their frontages.

Today, our posher neighours have blocked their drives with Range Rovers and hunkered down behind their high fences, preparing to ride out the carnival with ample stocks of polenta and champagne.

TV and radio tend to give the impression that this is a festival that unites London in a frenzy of tolerance and goodwill, but it's not. Wealthier middle class white Brits, indeed even the poorer ones, are happy to leave West Indians and tourists to dance, sing, eat, drink and occasionally stab each other.

This attitude does, of course, offend my sensitivities. I think we should all embrace carnival. Determined to put this principle into practice, I joined a Brazilian samba band. The Tribo band, lovely folks to a fault, practice all year for the big weekend in August, having a great time along the way, entertaining crowds at lesser events. I did too. For a while, I could beat hell out of a big bongo with the best of them, but eventually I had to accept that the piercing headaches I suffered throughout our practice sessions and often into the next day, were entirely caused by the beat of the bongos. Furthermore, drumming while walking and swaying one's hips would leave me (with my very inadequate pins) unable to move comfortably for days afterwards.

I was looking forward to marching around Notting Hill shirtless and wearing a grass skirt in a — literally — pale imitation of an Amazonian indian, but reality had to be confronted. About two months ago, I sheepishly returned my tambor to the band leader. He was sorry to see me go, if only because I was one of just two middle class, pasty skinned, native English speakers.

I think I can hear the Tribo band approaching now. Or rather I can feel them coming. The headache that has been grumbling away at a low level all day is becoming more intense. So I say take back the streets, my multi-cultural friends, but, like the reluctant middle class type I am, I'll, shut the gate, stay in the house and watch you on TV.

Steady the Buffs

PICTURES of the buck-naked third in line to the throne partying with similarly starkers people in Las Vegas is just tacky, but it has prompted two rather pointless debates here. Firstly, is whopping it up in the buff normal behaviour for 27-year-old men?

It's been interesting to see establishment defenders choking back their starchy prurient principles to argue that it is, while the liberal majority are saying, "Do what you like in private, but this wasn't in private."

More importantly, the old issue of press freedom surfaced again. The Palace apparently tried to stop the print media publishing the photos, and most obliged. But Murdoch's tabloid did not. And neither did almost anyone on the web. A google search threw up the pictures in no time flat (so I'm told).

Neither suggesting this was acceptable youthful exuberance or trying to silence the press was wise. There is no hint that the Army has been pressurised to overlook the incident, and one wonders what Prince Harry's commanding officer will have to say. This kind of behaviour would normally lead to (at the very least) what soldiers call, "a chat without coffee."

Most people with whom I have spoken find the whole matter distasteful and regret that the photos had to surface. The new generation of princes are popular, partly because their mother was the much-loved Diana, and partly because William and Harry lack the social rigidity of other Royals. But, in truth, butt-naked adventures in Vegas are going a bit far. There would be great pleasure in seeing the Prince settle down.

Water worries

1 AGREE with the Deputy Editor's comments about ditching.

Having lived in the Camp most of my life it is very worrying now to see how dry the camp is getting in spring and summer.

I have also noticed that big puddles and lower areas on greens that would normally fill up during winter now stay dry. When travelling round the Camp via the road network the amount of diddle-dee that has taken over nearly all of the white grass areas (even on farm land that is scarcely stocked) is going to create a major problem for farmers soon as present stock numbers will have to be reduced further

I suggest that the ditches along the roads are filled in to a sensible level so water gets a chance to seep back into the ground and not lost out to sea which is happening. If we don't start soon we are going to be left with one large clay patch East and West.

Drink and dance

WHY is it so difficult to buy a drink and have a dance in the same room?

Community halls in Camp have been doing it for generations so why are there so many obstacles in Stanley?

With a license application refused your only option is BYOB—is this really seen as a better option by the licensing authorities? It almost certainly increases the risk of under 18's consuming alcohol, with no bar staff to oversee who can or cannot be served.

Too many events these days involving a dance have great music with an almost empty dance floor and a small packed bar, just next door

Dancing foxtrots, quick steps, sambas, circassian circles etc, what I would call a 'Campers bash' is part of our culture and is now practically lost. Mostly due to the many obstacles you face when trying to organise one of these dances.

Precious metal addition to Julie's passion for design

JULIE Halliday's pasion for photography and design, so clearly reflected in her studio adjacent to Victory Green has been taken a step further since completing a Diploma in Silver Metal Clay from the Mid-Cornwall School of Jewellery. Julie opened Studio 52 in its

Julie opened Studio 52 in its present location in August 2010 to showcase her photography and design creations all of which have a definite Falklands theme

To add to her range of products Julie recently travelled to the UK to complete a Diploma in the most thorough and comprehensive metal clay qualification in the world. She applied to Stanley Services for a Scholarship to help with her funding "I was delighted and very pleased that they chose to give me a scholarship. I have always wanted to learn how to make silver jewellery and been thinking about it for a while."

The course was an extremely intensive ten days, working through foundation, intermediate to advanced techniques.

"I hadn't actually done any work with silver before I went, so I had to do a beginners class before the Diploma course. The Diploma was a fantastic course, Examples

themed

works'

"Usually people do the different levels spread out over a year or more!" Now Julie says she can create local silver and bronze jewellery, even create pieces on commission: "There was also a teaching component to the course so once I get my confidence up I may run some local classes providing there is enough interest."

She is eager to create jewellery designs with a Falklands theme: "I have been experimenting with ways to include the local pebbles I have polished, and use local flora and fauna."

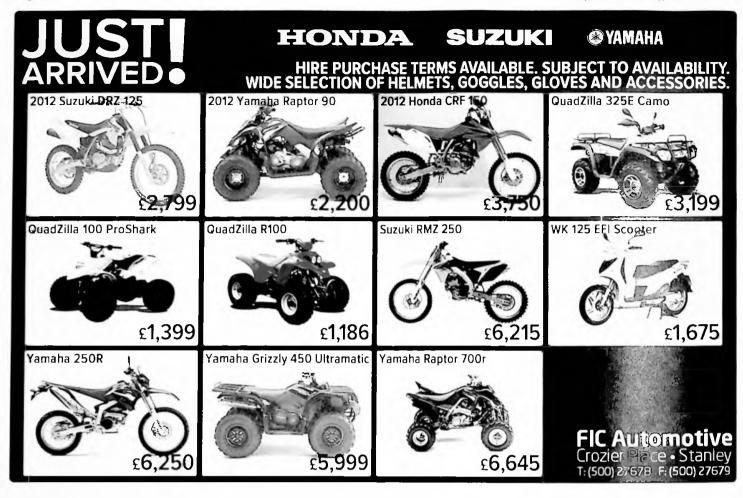

While she was away she also took the opportunity to do some research for her newest handmade skincare range. Julie said: "I have been making from scratch and selling my hand-made soaps, lotion bars, lip balms, and bath fizzies for 3½ years now, they have been very popular.

"People really appreciate an all natural, gentle product that is great on your skin. I really wanted to be able to produce a natural range, cleanser, toner and moisturisers for your face as well. With a bit of experimentation and lots of research. I have come up with my own skincare range called 'Chey', hopefully it will become many peoples' friend."

Julie's hand-made jewellery, soaps and skincare range will be on sale at the Art Crafts and Local Produce Fair on September 16 organised by Tansy and Nigel Bishop. The products will then be available from her Studio.

The Wool Market Report - 23 August 2012 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The third week of the season has seen some more stability after things saw a sharp drop. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator dipped to AUS941 cents/kg clean just a small drop of a drop of

The lower offering helped stead the price dip but next week sees another larger offer which may affect the price again. 38,230 bales.

A new New Zealand shearing accreditation scheme has been introduced shearing contractors signed up who cover 70% of the national clip. The scheme will offer a more professional service and subsequently lead to a higher quality product. Check out ShearNZ on www.shearnz.co.nz

Sunrise over Stanley as the road base goes down

Sapper Hill takes shape

In the beginning there was nothing but white grass and profile markers to lead the way

With peat and deep clay (see below) to contend with there has inevitably been a few Volvo boggings

WORK got underway on July 14 on the first phase of the Sapper Hill housing development and the shape of the finished project is becoming apparent from the air, although is difficult to determine from the road in passing.

Morrison (Falklands) Ltd's Regional Manager Mike Butler confirmed that the work is progressing in line with the construction programme, with the first phase consisting of 41 housing plots due to be complete by mid-April next year.

The initial excavation and sub base construction to the road and lootpaths is now 95 per cent complete, explained Mr Butler, adding that the next phase of works will be the installation of the Biodisc sewage treatment plant followed by the surface and foul water drainage systems.

A massive 23,000 tonnes of peat and clay has been excavated from the site with more than 10,000 tonnes of primary subbase delivered from the Pony Pass quarry to date.

Sub-base refills the excavated road

Other works being undertaken by Morrison (Falklands) Ltd

Works to enable the Relocation of Property & Municipal Office and Workshops up to Megabid, to provide space for the museum development. This is a 1600M2 steel frame structure with office and workshop facilities built inside the main envelope of the building. Work commenced in the middle of July and the steel frame is very prominent on the skyline when travelling on the By-Pass Road towards Surf Bay and the Airport

MFL has also been working with the Public Works Department engineers and Arch Henderson consultants to develop a design for a replacement to the Public Jetty. Works will be starting later in the year and will be planned around the visiting tourist ships.

The New Fisheries Office is now nearing completion, said Mr Butler, "with the valued assistance of local subcontractors Décor Services, Energise, SAPS and R&B Painters."

Pleasant cricket win at MPC

Winning MPC Team

MOUNT Pleasant Complex cricket team defeated Stanley Cricket Club by 13 runs in a 20 over friendly match on Saturday.

Umpire SAC Gus oversaw the match as MPC Team Captain Cpl Chris Wilee and Vice Captain Cpl Dave France led their team Sqn Ldr Em Rogers, Sgt Brian Woodcock, Cpl Keith Cupid, SAC Aaron Ward, SAC Baz Stroud, SAC Paul Ingram, SAC Anthony Goddwin, SAC Mike Ackerman and Pte Pushkar Saini against Stanley Cricket Club's line-up Craig Paice, David Hewitt, Steve Fowmes, Jamie Punter, Ian France, Toby Poole, Kalon Jaffray, Martin Collins, Kevin Clapp, Rhys Clifford and Amy Guest

Stanley bowled the MPC side out for 88 in the 16th over. Craig Paice took one wicket caught behind by Ian France, Kevin Clapp took one wicket. David Hewitt took two wickets, Martin Collins took four wickets and there were two run outs. Stanley was next to bat and scored 75 for eight in our 20 overs with Jamie Punter and Steve Fowmes top scorers with 20 runs each.

Public note - Trout fishing in the Falkland Islands Brown trout can be fished from September 1st until April 30th. Do not need a fishing licence but the daily bag limit is 6 brown trout for all waterways, except for the Murrell River, which has a daily bag limit of 3 trout and each fish must weigh over 1.5lb or 0.5kg. The native zebra trout can not be fished.

The Environmental Planning Department wishes to remind fishermen that you need to ask permission before fishing on private land. On the Murrell River, you can not fish off the culverts or within 100m of the culvert crossing on either side or upstream of Drunken Rock Pass, and these areas are marked.

The Falkland Islands is free of all invasive freshwater alga and fish diseases, and we want to keep it that way! So, if you are bringing in fishing gear in to the Falkland Islands that has been used elsewhere, you must Check, Clean and Dry. Fishing gear should be cleaned in dishwashing detergent or household bleach.

For further information, please contact the Environmental Planning Department on 28480.
