Not cricket

THE Argentine government has released a 90 second pre Olympic television advert showing an Argentine hockey player training in Stanley and claiming, "to compete on English soil, we train on Argentine soil."

Member of Legislative Assembly Ian Hansen stated he was disappointed to see the advert and that it was filmed without knowledge of the Islands' authorities.

"It is deeply sad to see Mr Zylberberg clambering over a war memorial, especially in this anniversary year. Sadly, this illustrates the disrespect the Argentine authorities have for our home and our people. Unsurprisingly, at no stage does the video feature any Falkland Islanders – a clear reflection of Argentina's policy, which is to pretend that the people of the Falkland Islands do not exist."

Full statement from MLA Hansen on penguin-news.com

Reefer aground

A REEFER ran aground west of Doctor Point in Port William yesterday morning, but was safely back at anchor by just after mid-day. Fisheries Officer St. John Payne confirmed the vessel had been adversely affected by wind, but a tanker anchored in Berkeley Sound, owned by the same company, came to the assistance of the reefer.

Heads to Fox Bay

THE Director of Health and Education and Head of the Infant Junior School/Camp will travel to Fox Bay as part of the Rural Development Strategy group on May 7. They will discuss potential developments for education and training in the Camp.

Explosions

BRITISH Forces will be conducting a number of low level controlled explosions within Onion Range over the period May 8 – 10. This will involve the disposal of life-expired munitions, "which the public may hear," said the Civil-Military Liaison Officer.

Review passed

THE implementation of the Government Review of the Review has been approved by Executive Council who commended Chief Executive Keith Padgett for the speed with which he had produced an, "excellent plan."

Korean jigger fined for breaching fishing laws

THE Master and company owners of an illex (squid) jigger, escorted into Stanley Harbour by Falkland Islands Patrol Vessel Protegat on Sunday, each pleaded guilty to charges in court yesterday of 'Failure to give notice to leave Falkland Islands Waters' and 'Failure to make fishend report'.

The company, U and Sea Company Ltd was ordered to pay £10,000 for the first charge and £6,000 for the second. The Master Choi Chang Gil was ordered to pay £1,200 for the first charge and £800 for the second.

The company was also charged to pay £120 court costs and the vessel, Bada 103, will be detained in Stanley Harbour by the Director of Fisheries until the company has paid the fines.

Record season for FIMCo £1m to be paid to farmers

DESPITE logistical issues in the early part of the season the Falkland Islands Meat Company, (FIMCo) completed a record breaking high season on April 27, with 47,200 sheep and lambs processed and over 540 tonnes of meat and offal produced, earning farmers more than £1million for their animals.

Manager John Ferguson when asked whether reports were accurate that the company had suffered through payments from overseas buyers being delayed, explained there had been difficulties with, "the first couple of shipments, which meant a delay in the customers receiving the product, and hence farmers being paid," however, he confirmed, "all is back on track now."

At that time the company was granted an extension of its overdraft to assist in the short term.

He added: "During the 2011-12 financial year, it is expected that over £1million will be paid to farmers for the first time also."

Mr Ferguson said although

lamb volume was slightly down on projections due to the very dry summer, "overall numbers were better than the 46,000 total budgeted, with over 50% being lamb."

He said productivity was increased by over 40% per day on average rising from approximately 550 in 2011 to 750-800 plus in 2012.

43,800 (93%) of the skins were salted and shipped to Hong Kong in China and 46,500 (98%) casings and small intestines were processed and shipped to Egypt.

"The completion of the major Sand Bay upgrade has made all the difference to productivity and efficiency, as was planned," said Mr Ferguson.

He said: "Export sales have been more difficult this year, because of the euro crisis, but most of the product has been sold and shipped, with only three containers left to sell, which we expect to confirm shortly."

The Falkland Islands Meat Company operates from Sand Bay, south west of Stanley, which is an EU accredited export meat plant (designation FK-01) and is approved for mutton, lamb and beef exports.

Export production is carried out between January and April/May and the local market is supplied with lamb, mutton, pork and beef.

The plant undergoes regular audits; from export customers, veterinary authorities and EU inspectors. Company quality control procedures are utilised.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

WELL. I'm back at the deputy editor's desk for the next six months, refreshed and ready to take on whatever you'd like to throw at me (metaphorically) and of course, just as willing to stick my head above the parapet and have my say as I've always been.

May is a good time of year to slink back to the office. Winter is upon us, memories of hazy summer days of horsing around or taking off on an Antarctic adventure are fading as rapidly as the hours of daylight and the fact that the boss doesn't have too much meat on her bones and likes the heating turned up, means I can keep warm while saving on fuel at home.

Unfortunately May is also the dreaded budget month, and I along with many others in the lower wage brackets, start to worry about the decisions our elected members will have no doubt burned the midnight oil making (hopefully sourced from Falklands waters in future budgets), and how those decisions will affect my day to day living.

I've got my fingers crossed the tax threshold will be raised again – reducing it from £14,000 to £12,000 was a punch way below an already tightened belt for the lower paid and had little if any impact on the wealthier tax payers. But, we took it on the chin, then turned around and coughed up another penny in the pound for a devious medical services tax which in turn resulted in the annual budget for that most valuable of departments being reduced rather than increased. Enough to make anyone sick really.

The nasty part of the medical services tax was that at every public meeting where its introduction was discussed there was support for it, "so long as it goes into the medical services budget." And gullible fools that we were, we believed that would be the case, or at least that the departmental budget would reflect the additional contribution.

But with the £19 million surplus from last year's budget along with the unexpected addition of £14.5 million in the first nine months of this year already in hand, I'm sure it's safe to let the guard down a bit. This time around the punches are bound to be aimed at far less vulnerable areas and people than in recent years.

The budget is the talking point of the month in our office and we would be really interested to share your views on what you would most like, or not like to see come out of it, on our letters page. Write to us at editor@penguinnews.co.fk and let's see who has the most accurate prediction and/or the best ideas for the use of capital funds.

One year trial for eye condition

A ONE year trial of treatment for those suffering from wet macular degeneration of the eye was approved at yesterday's meeting of the Health and Medical Services Committee.

The Director of Health and Education David Jenkins said, "the benefits of preventing blindness and maintaining independence far outweighs the cost of the treatment."

A report to the meeting noted that at the recent visit of the Consultant Ophthalmologist, 100 appointments were filled. Some patients were referred to him with low vision due to macular degeneration (MD).

MD is caused by a problem with the macula in the eye. The macula is the spot at the centre of the retina (the nerve tissue lining the back of your eye). The main symptom of macular degeneration is blurring of the central vision. The peripheral (outer) vision is not affected. Central vision loss affects the ability to see fine detail, colours, small distances and the ability to see less well-defined objects, such as faces, clearly.

Sufferers of MD have blurred central vision even when glasses are worn. The treatment of Lucentis injections to halt MD is 90 per cent effective.

The cost of each injection is £1,100. Initial costs would be £3,300 per patient with additional injections depending on the result of the first course. This would be assessed by visual acuity which is currently available in the Falklands.

Additional study time and training for two GPs (or a GP and nurse) on their annual training or leave would cost £500.

Chief Nursing Officer Mandy Heathman said in her report: "This would establish the principal that this service becomes available in the Falkland Islands. There would therefore have to be a GP available throughout the year to give the intravitreal injections, monitor the eye pressure and provide the treatment of any complications. This means at least two GPs/nurses would have to be able to continue the treatments year round. Patients would have to be explicitly made aware that the back up facilities for this complex treatment or its complications are not readily available in the Islands."

Non treatment of the problem would cause sufferers to meet the criteria to be registered as blind if they lived in the UK.

P&B: Common not suitable for building

EIGHT planning applications were considered at Thursday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee with just one being refused.

Mr S Clarke's application to site two caravans for full time residential use for two families on the south bank of the Murrell River on Common Land was turned down.

The Environmental Planning Officer Anthony Payne said the proposed use would conflict with the predominant use of the land and the siting within the Stanley Common National Nature Reserve was not in the national interest.

Applications approved with conditions were: the siting of a caravan for use as accommodation for Mr P McKay to the rear of 9 Villiers Street, an outline application for erection of a dwelling at the back of 6 Pioneer Row for Mr A Stewart, the demolition of dwelling at 20 Davis Street and outline application for erection of a new one for Miss T Clifton.

Retrospective approval was given for the re-siting of dog kennels to the west side of the Department of Agriculture and permission to demolish a garage to provide off street parking for the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute at Stanley Cottage on Ross Road was given. Approval to SAERI for residential area at the same address to be changed to offices with retention of sleeping accommodation, was also given.

The next meeting of the Committee will be on June 7 at 8.30am in the Liberation Room.

£3,000 for Jubilee events

THE Falkland Islands Government has set aside £3,000 for Diamond Jubilee events. Some of this funding is available to people who wish to organise community events and £500 has been allocated for events on the West.

A special set of four stamps accompanied by a souvenir sheet showing images of the Queen taken during each of her special anniversary years will be released on May 10, in honour of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee.

The May Ball on May 25, will also pick up the Diamond Jubilee as well as the Falklands 30 theme this year. At the end of May, a congratulatory message from the Legislative Assembly and people of the Falklands will be sent to Her Majesty.

On June 3 at the Thames River Pageant, thousands of boats will be joining the Royal barge Gloriana in one of the largest flotillas ever to assemble on the Thames which will be attended by MLA and Mrs Sawle. On that day in the Falklands a Service of Thanksgiving will be held in Christchurch Cathedral at 11am followed by a drink and light buffet lunch in the Parish Hall.

On June 4 there will be a Public Holiday in the Islands and the same day, the Islands will join in with a network of over 2,000 other celebratory beacons to be lit across the world. The lighting at Surf Bay will be carried out by the Sea Cadets, to coincide with lighting the national Beacon in London by the Queen at around 6.20pm local.

There is intended to be a bar and refreshments with plenty of undercover shelter and music to add to the party atmosphere until approximately 11pm.

Man jailed for six months

MICHAEL Barry Hirtle was sentenced to six months in jail and banned from driving for five years on Wednesday. The sentences came as a result of two charges: failure to provide a specimen of breath to a police officer and for breaching the conditions of a suspended sentence he was serving by failing to cooperate with the police officer. He received a three month sentence running consecutively for each charge.

Ricardo James Williams also appeared in court charged with assault by beating. The case was adjourned until May 24, so he could seek legal representation.

Stamina of six creates cash for charity

CAPTAIN Gormley, WO2 O'Donnell, Fof S Healy, Sgt Booth, LCpl Higgins and Sig Fearn begin an arduous 34 mile endurance run from Mount Pleasant to Stanley.

The individuals completed this impressive task in aid of the charity Blind Veterans UK.

Captain Gormley said: "If any readers would like to donate they can do so through the website www.justgiving.com/MPA2Stanley."

Priority moves to stop import of legal highs

MEMBERS of Executive Council have instructed that counter measures against the importation of psychoactive substances (legal highs) including any necessary legislation, be given the highest priority, above all existing priorities.

Concerns had been raised by the Director of Emergency Services in connection with numerous recent imports of what appear to be new psychoactive substances; largely in the first quarter of 2012.

The total number of consignments intercepted by the Customs & Immigration Service between 10 February 2012 and 09 April 2012 was 16 packages.

During that period nine importers were responsible for importing 256 legal highs at an estimated cost of £6,076. One of these importers imported 97 legal highs, in a one month period at an estimated cost of £2,285. March 2012 has seen the largest amount of imports, 13 packages containing 209 legal highs at an estimated cost to the importer of £4,870.

These figures show items discovered by Customs during mail examinations at Stanley Post Office. Examinations are random so therefore these figures may not indicate the full extent of the problem.

The Acting Chief Medical Officer Mr Cheema, said there had been several admissions of young people into A&E and the ward, who had taken legal highs and had adverse responses to them. Patients had been anxious, suffering with paranoia, tremor, nausea and more worryingly palpitations and dangerously high tachycardias and raised blood pressures. So far medical staff had managed to treat these patients symptomatically and after several hours their symptoms settled. "Unfortunately we have had some patients admitted more than once with the same problem," he said.

Mr Cheema said there had been at least four admissions who openly admitted they were in trouble as a result of legal high use, but up to a dozen or more, "suspicious," visits to A&E, where the youngsters between the age of 15 and mid 20s had not admitted to taking anything, but the attending physician had been quite sure of drug use.

Commenting after the Executive Council meeting MLA Jan Cheek said the volumes and cost involved in the importation of psychoactive substances indicated an intention to supply rather than to be just for personal use.

MLA Cheek said they had noted the information provided by Customs and Health departments and encouraged its dissemination so that parents and others responsible for the young and vulnerable can be well informed.

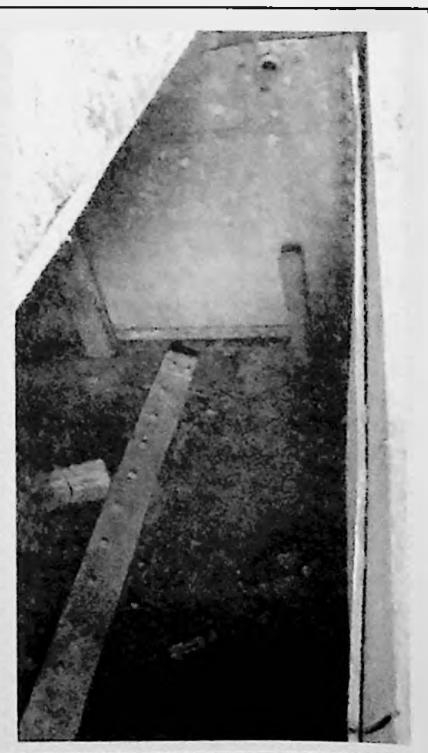

Reece Harris searches under the Tabernacle floorboards

Foundation of history

A POOL of history was uncovered at the Tabernacle when the original baptismal bath was unearthed during the historic building's recent floor refurbishment.

In the 1800's and 1900's the Tabernacle was an integral part of community life being both a baptismal church and a school-room. CE Lawson Good wrote in the 19th century of the building of the tabernacle from a kit that arrived in 1890: "The building was to cost £300, which was loaned by a local friend, M Dean Esq., at the ordinary percentage. The ground was bought by Mr G Natt, at a cost of £40, and generously given." In the document he thanked the congregation for their support, the building committee and their secretary Mr Jas. Smith, and treasurer Geo. Short as well as the Governor Roger Goldsworthy and his wife.

Little is known of who, or how many, were baptised in the bath since the church was opened in Easter 1891, and though no longer in use it still plays an important role supporting the church's structure by acting as a galvanised foundation.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

LAST year members discussed naming the planned new housing development in honour of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee just as the Jubilee Villas were named last time there was a diamond jubilee, Queen Victoria's. The development in the Sapper Hill area will be phased to meet housing plot requirements for individuals and FIG for years ahead. This will continue to fulfil one of the priorities of the remaining five originally elected members of this Assembly to address the need for additional housing. The Jubilee Estate, or whatever we name it, will also give scope for using names with royal connections. Accession Avenue springs to mind, although I am less sure about Coronation Street suggested by someone else.

The Executive Council paper titled New Psychoactive Substances is one of those made public (see the advert in last week's PN) so I would urge those responsible for the welfare of young people, their own or other people's, to obtain a copy. It is important that they are able to recognise some of the signs and symptoms of abuse of these substances that have already been observed, such as unexplained behaviour or mood changes, persistent nosebleeds, nausea, tremor, palpitations, raised blood pressure, dangerously high tachycardia, depression, anxiety and paranoia.

***

With only eighteen months to the next General Election it would be helpful for individuals thinking of standing to familiarise themselves with the structure and processes of Government and get hold of available copies of papers, the estimates and FIG accounts as they are published later in the year. No-one can teach you political instinct but you can learn to understand the system and make it work for your constituents. I'd advise you to talk to present members and get an idea of the workload and commitment required and weigh up whether you feel strongly enough about the future of your country to pay the price of being a member in terms of time, energy and year round commitment. We can all learn from history to avoid the mistakes of the past, otherwise we can waste valuable time trying things that have been proved unworkable.

Falklands fishing in Brussels

FIFCA representatives at the exhibition Jo Ellick, Alex Reid, Alison Nye, Paul Freer, Janet Robertson, Tom Blake, and Cheryl Roberts

THE Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association recently attended the 20th European Seafood Exhibition in Brussels from 24 to 26 April.

Representatives from six fishing companies along with the Secretary of FIFCA promoted the Falklands fishing industry to buyers from all over the world.

It was felt particularly important to attend this year given that it is 25 years since the first fishing licences were issued for Falkland Islands waters.

The Brussels show was first held twenty years ago with 230 exhibitors. Now 1600 companies from over 80 countries exhibit at the show which covers 34,000 square metres of exhibit space.

Running alongside the exhibition was a separate exhibition of companies promoting Seafood Processing equipment and services.

The FIFCA stand featured panels showing all the species caught in Falkland waters along with photos of the islands and fishing vessels operating in our waters. The photo of a jigger attracted a lot of attention with several visitors to the stand asking about the method of fishing shown.

The show was a truly international event with visitors to the stand including people from Ukraine, Russia, Slovakia, Latvia, Poland, Moldova, the Faroe Islands and the Far East.

The main species of interest seemed to be squid (both loligo and illex), kingclip, rock cod and hake. The strangest request must have been for kingclip bladders from a Malaysian company!

Our promotional material was well received.

A FIFCA leaflet showed company details along with the species caught and CDs provided statistics since 2002 along with licence types and scientific work undertaken by the Fisheries Department.

The show provided a great opportunity to promote the success of our fishing industry and inform buyers about our high quality product and well managed fishery.

Adding up the scores and giving to the community

ALTHOUGH only in the Islands for nine weeks working for the Falklands Development Corporation, Nick Tennant became a familiar figure sailing around the town on his bicycle and taking part in a wide range of activities across the community, and if all goes to plan he hopes to be back in a professional capacity in the not too distant future.

Nick has appreciated the friendship extended to him from members of the Bridge Club, the Cathedral congregation, the rambling group and his work colleagues, through to his Victory Bar darts team the Misfits and the many other local people who have made him feel so welcome.

From day one he said he was sold on the Islands, and the view from the bedroom of his flat overlooking the Cathedral and Stanley Harbour was the icing on the cake.

Looking back on his all too brief time in the Islands, Nick said his most embarrassing moment took place one windy day when he was cycling in a westerly direction from the Chandlery and a pedestrian friend actually overtook him. But that's just life in the Falklands, he joked.

Nick playing for the Victory Bar darts team the Misfits

Nick is keen on amateur dramas and really enjoyed the recent FIODA production "A Night at the Musicals." When he returns to the Falklands he hopes to work backstage.

He celebrated his 54th birthday on April 14 with breakfast and table games at the Seamen's Mission before walking up Mount Tumbledown with friends for the very British feast of sausage rolls and trifle overlooking Stanley. While a pub crawl was planned for the afternoon the pool table, darts and drinks at Deanos kept everyone so entertained they never made it any further and rounded off the night with a fantastic curry cooked by friends. "That was one of the best birthdays ever," he told Penguin News. Nick and his friends are quite partial to curries and have been frequent visitors to the Stanley Arms Friday night curry evenings.

With his tea berries now sorted out from his diddle-dee berries and able to knock up a mean fritter, Nick is kicking his heels to get back to the Falklands.

A qualified Chartered Accountant with a diverse range of experience across all sectors he would like to hear from anyone who would be interested in having accountancy or business planning work carried out. Please email him on nicktennant@horizon.co.uk and he will be happy to discuss your needs with you.

As a way of putting something back into the community he plans to offer five per cent of any income he makes from work generated by this article to the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. "It's a really worthy charity," he said.

Give us two minutes...

Ted Jones

1. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? Life is a journey, so enjoy the journey, as you never know when it will end.

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea with? The current President of Argentina. I would use the time for a quick history lesson from my perspective as a descendant of the Jones who first landed on these shores 10th August 1855 aboard the Carleton.

3. What is your happiest moment? Watching my family and friends when they spend time at the Head of the Bay Farm and just lately the grandchildren with their endless energy for exploring the farm.

4. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? A hotel with a Chinese restaurant on the ground floor. This is unlikely to happen as Shelia and I are busy running the current farming business.

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? The one sided view from the Argentine President on how we should live in our country, people with no patience and those that lose their temper, and having to catch a long haul flight to visit a Chinese restaurant.

6. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Laurie Butler - I like his style and his direct approach to life.

17. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Mongolia with wife Shelia.

8. What is your favourite TV programme? The Deadliest Catch. When things get a bit tough on the farm I feel Shelia and I have an easy job in comparison.

9. What would people be surprised to learn about you? My real name is Michael and I was once a member of the church choir.

10. What is your happiest childhood memory? Collecting penguin eggs on Weddell Island with my sister and parents.

Ted was born in Stanley and spent his early years on Beaver and Weddell Island which could qualify him as a Wester? He is happily married to Shelia most of the time, and they live at their farm Head of the Bay. He enjoys following various sports from his armchair, reading, music and of course spending time with the wife, children, grandchildren, friends and sampling the latest gin and tonic that has arrived on the farm with all the aforementioned.

Uganda's 4th reunion

THE P&O Cruises ship MV Aurora is today hosting the fourth Hospital Ship Uganda Reunion for the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War.

Approximately 100 people accompanied by partners who served on board the hospital ship will be marking the anniversary with a commemorative luncheon.

Islander Saul Pitaluga on behalf of The Falkland Island Association is also attending.

Uniquely, some of the most severely injured survivors from the Falklands War, who were treated and cared for on board the hospital ship in 1982, will also be attending the event.

SS Uganda was requisitioned by the British Government on April 10 1982 and a hasty conversion to Geneva Convention/Red Cross livery took place in three days in Gibraltar. She sailed south on April 19 and returned to Southampton on August 9.

More than 700 severely injured servicemen were treated on board the hospital ship which included more than 100 Argentine soldiers.

The team of forty Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service personnel were the only female military personnel working within the Conflict Zone and QARNNS junior ratings the first female RN ratings in history to serve at sea.

Back row: Tim and Tony Taylor, nephew and brother of Nick Taylor, Harrier pilot shot down at Goose Green on May 4, 1982, and Alan Thompson who was with 40 Commando in 1982. Front: Liberty Lodge manager Ellen Davis, Lidda Luxton and Liam Shelbourne, treasurer of the Royal British Legion (FL)

Singing and dancing for local charities

LIBERTY Lodge and the Falklands branch of the Royal British Legion have each received a generous donation from the Falklands Opera and Dramatic Association (FIODA).

Lidda Luxton presented cheques of £130 each to the charities on Monday at Liberty Lodge which is run by SAMA82 as a Falklands home for visiting 1982 veterans. The funds were collected at Mount Pleasant when FIODA took their recent show "A Night at the Musicals" on the road.

The popular production which played for three nights in Stanley at the end of March, was transported to the military base where entry was free but the audience was asked to make a contribution if they wished to the two charities.

Taxi drivers to be licensed

EXECUTIVE Council Members have agreed that taxi drivers should be licensed.

At last week's meeting MLAs Ian Hansen (standing in for Dick Sawle), Sharon Halford and Jan Cheek noted the summary of the public consultation on the proposals to regulate driving for hire or reward and agreed that the work on licensing taxi drivers go ahead, but that any decision on tour drivers should await more information from a tourist survey to be conducted during the forthcoming season.

A period of public consultation took place between February 2 and March 1 2012, with Inspector Len McGill being the main point of contact. The consultation was given publicity in the media along with a presentation about the proposals during a Public Meeting in February.

Attorney General Mark Lewis said in his paper to Executive Council that more than 50 per cent of those who had responded expressed views in favour of a "taxi only" permit scheme that would apply to taxi drivers but not to tourist drivers; he added however, that it may be significant that many of those who expressed this view most vocally were those who would be affected by a scheme that applied to tourist drivers but not one that only applied to taxi drivers.

As such it is fundamentally a move to protect passengers, particularly the young, and is not intended to be a restriction on those drivers who carry out the work in a responsible manner, Acting Chief of Police Len McGill told Penguin News.

Anyone with a serious criminal background such as theft, violence or sexual offences will be prohibited from driving taxis. "We can't protect the public completely, but it does add another layer of protection," said Mr McGill adding, "if customers know drivers have gone through checks it should give them more confidence."

Stand together

FOR the 30th Anniversary of Liberation Day, Lindsey and I feel it would be nice if all civilians who risked their lives to help assist the British Forces in 1982 were to stand together at the Liberation monument on the June 14.

We would also like to ask one of the group to lay a wreath (perhaps the oldest or youngest member - yet to be decided) and finally we think it would be great to get a photo of the whole group together after the service has finished. This is an opportunity to show your children, grandchildren and the rest of the world that you helped in the liberation of the Falkland Islands. Be proud of what you did. For more information please contact Carol Phillips on 31113 tephillips@horizon.co.fk or Lindsey May 22828 c.l.may.ltd@horizon.co.fk

There is a group formed on Facebook called - Falkland Islanders assisting the British Forces in 1982. Some names have already been collected on there and those people do not need to re-contact us.

Thank you to all who have already come forward and to those helping to collect more names. We really look forward to seeing you all there.

and Lindsey May

Give back to us

WITH reference to the front page of last week's Penguin News describing the surplus budget of £14.5 million from oil and fishing. Will this week's front page be equally pleasing for the residents of the Islands? Oil lubricates our machinery to earn such wealth. Fish give us food for energy to operate such machinery. The tax man gives us indigestion (nothing personal Mr Tax Man).

Isn't it time to give a little back to the population of the Falklands. Perhaps I have written this in haste and will be surprised to find on this week's Penguin News front page stories of tax reductions for residents or maybe subsidised fuel costs for heating; or maybe if none of these suggestions attract the wheels of motion in the treasury then the Falkland Islands Government will have to purchase a bigger filing cabinet to sit its new wealth in along with the £19 million found last year.

Frozen pensions

ISLANDER Thomas Biggs and myself, as overseas members of the Canadian Alliance of British Pensioners, have been contacted by fellow member Tony Bockman who is also Chairman of the International Consortium of British Pensioners (ICBP).

He is currently working with a UK-based media relations company on a number of press releases related to frozen British State (N.I.) pensions to coincide with the Jubilee Year activities in the UK.

Mr Bockman also makes the point that as 2012 is the 30th anniversary of the Falklands conflict he would like to use the opportunity to make the British public aware that, although Britain values its sovereignty of these Islands enough to go to war, it still does not uprate the state pensions of those pensioners who live

Anyone is welcome to submit a letter to the Editor for publication, however letters may be edited for reasons of length or for legal reasons there. He understands that there are 70 such pensioners living in the Falklands, with only Thomas and myself members of the Canadian Alliance.

Mr Bockman is looking for assistance with this project for, as he points out, the UK general public are totally unaware that we pensioners living in the Falklands are treated so unfairly in regard to their British state pensions. The ICBP is trying to make the British public aware of what he calls this outrageous and discriminating pension freezing policy.

If the other 68 pensioners would like to help they can contact him by e-mail at tony.bockman@primus.ca and he would be delighted to hear from you.

Be sceptical

MY wife and I had the opportunity to visit the Falklands for a short holiday in 2008 and have since followed events through the Penguin News.

I refer to the article in last week's paper on page 3 'Argentine flights offer presented by London Embassy'.

As the current Argentine administration seems determined to choke the Islands economically this offer must be met with a great deal of scepticism. Far from 'an opportunity to enhance the Islanders' quality of life and their communications capabilities' this is an opportunity for them to control the flow of people and goods to and from the islands via the air link. They may also attempt to set up a small community along the lines of the Chileans thereby trying to establish some sort of foothold.

Extreme though it may seem would you want to be opening the doors of the plane to find a couple of hundred Argentine Special Forces with the intention of neutralising the Typhoons and Rapier missiles long enough for assistance to arrive from the mainland. As we all know if the airfield is lost it is game over as the UK no longer has the ability to launch another task force!

Falklands focus at Kent conference

THE remarkable recovery of the Falklands Islands from the 1982 invasion and the Islanders' impressive achievements since have been given valuable publicity at a three-day conference at Kent University in the United Kingdom marking the 30th anniversary.

It was attended by a distinguished group of academics, military commanders, journalists, and three former governors, Alan Huckle, David Tatham and Howard Pearce.

A retrospective look at the invasion night by former Falklands Director of Broadcasting, Patrick Watts was one of the most impressive representations, standing out among many given by distinguished historians.

Delivered with panache, it was a riveting minute-by-minute account of his marathon night invasion broadcast, illustrated by extracts of the broadcast itself, including phone-in eye-witness contributions by Islanders themselves monitoring the advance of Argentine soldiers and armoured vehicles and the calm, authoritative voice of the Governor, Rex Hunt, describing the unfolding drama and giving advice to Islanders for their safety.

But the conference organisers did what Argentine guns pointing at Patrick's back failed to do – cut him off in full flow through time limitation.

The progress of the Islands as a vibrant, prosperous democracy and promising projects for future development were outlined with detailed analysis and statistics by Legislative Assembly Member, Dick Sawle.

Professor Jim McAdam praised Lord Shackleton's post-invasion economic report for paving the way to prosperity as its recommendations were carried out. And he drew students' attention to the opportunities offered by Shackleton Fund Scholarships.

In a brief intervention, London Representative Sukey Cameron, attending as an observer, told the conference what a valuable information and morale-boosting channel the BBC 'Calling the Falklands' programme had been but now defunct.

Former BBC broadcaster Harold Briley mentioned the rapport the Islanders had with the BBC and their continuing bond with and hospitality to the South Atlantic Medal veterans in gratitude for liberation.

The conference was opened by the Defence Secretary at the time of the invasion, John Nott, who hinted that if he had been Prime Minister he would not have sent the Task Force to liberate the Islands. That would have been in line with his pessimistic advice that the Islands could not be retaken, a view rejected only when the head of the Royal Navy, Admiral Sir Henry Leach, said the Task Force could sail within days to retake the islands.

Mr Nott also said he had no idea where leaks to the BBC about Task Force deployments came from, yet it was widely accepted his own Ministry was the source.

Presentations were given by three outstanding Task Force commanders whose actions were a vital contribution to the campaign. Major General Julian Thompson and Commodore Michael Clapp, who gave a detailed account of the amphibious landing and the land campaign, and Captain Chris Wreford-Brown, with a modest matter-of-fact account of how his submarine, HMS Conqueror, sank the Belgrano.

Brigadier David Chaundler described his fraught experience of parachuting in to replace Lieutenant Colonel H Jones, killed at Goose Green, one of the two Victoria Cross winners.

Among the academics, Professor Sir Lawrence Freedman told how he wrote the official history of the conflict. Professor Klaus Dodds emphasised the Britishness of the Falkland Islanders and their affection for the Queen.

Doctor Celia Szusterman, an Argentine with British citizenship, spoke about, 'monitoring the struggle for the Malvinas and its role in Argentine life.'

Her criticism of the Falkland Islanders for what she regarded as a biased account of the sovereignty dispute went unchallenged with no mention of Argentina's distorted version. She made the bizarre claim that if the Argentines had won, the consequence would have been invasion by Guatemala of the other former British colony, Belize, which was strongly defended by British infantry, artillery and Harrier aircraft.

She ignored what Argentina said it would have definitely done – invade Chile so creating a much wider regional war.

A media panel chaired by BBC correspondent Alan Little included a former senior BBC executive, Dame Jenny Abramsky and three correspondents giving personal reminiscences of their experience with the Task Force, Robert Fox (BBC), Michael Nicholson (ITN) and John Shirley (representing newspapers). A presentation about BBC World Service was axed from the media programme.

Kent University at Canterbury is a modern, forward-looking university which has focused on the Falkland conflict and encouraged its student to study it. The conference was organised by its Professor of Modern History, Mark Connolly, and Professor of Journalism, Tim Luckhurst.

Fastest time ever for the cadet challenge

YOMPING in the footsteps of 45 Commando Royal Marines in 1982, five Falklands cadets marched the tortuous route from Port San Carlos to Stanley as part of the youth organisation's annual cadet challenge on the weekend.

Harrison and Megan Law, William Tench, Christopher Stenning and Ashley Reeves began the walk on Thursday morning having bivouacked overnight at the start point.

Supported by Royal Marine Trevor Law (FIDF) and his wife Claire, Simon Isaacs, Frank O Sullivan, Ruth Kemp and cadet leader Ken Newton the entire march comprised four days and 25.5 hours walking time; the fastest time the cadets have ever completed the route.

Overnight stops included New House, Teal Inlet and Estancia Farm.

Ken said: "We had great support as always from the Falkland Islands Defence Force with vehicles and equipment. Also we'd like to thank the farmers for allowing us to cross their land as well as to British International for treating the group to a helicopter ride.

Money was raised for both SAMA (821) and the Sea Cadets, however a final count up of funds has yet to be completed.

Hague ambush

ARGENTINA'S new ambassador to London ambushed William Hague over the Falklands Islands on Monday, asking him at a public meeting whether he was ready to, "give peace a chance," by opening talks on the future of the Falkland Islands.

Alicia Castro, formerly Argentina's ambassador to Venezuela, took up the London post in March. It had been left vacant since 2008 but is now part of a drive by Buenos Aires to push the Falklands issue back up the international agenda.

Setting aside diplomatic niceties, she tackled the Foreign Secretary on the subject as he launched Britain's annual world review of human rights at a ceremony attended by diplomats, journalists and rights activists in the opulent surroundings of Lancaster House in London.

"Seeing that the United Nations and the international community and a large group of Nobel Prize winners urge both countries to (start) negotiations in order to find a pacific and permanent resolution, my question is: Are you ready for dialogue? Are we going to give peace a chance?" she asked as Hague took questions from the audience.

A flustered Mr Hague, sensing that Ms Castro was about to make a long statement, interrupted her several times, pressing her to ask a question before cutting her short with: "Thank you. That's enough. Stop."

Answering Ms Castro, Mr Hague said: "Self-determination is a basic political right of the people of the Falkland Islands ... You can count on us always, permanently, to stand by that right."

Ray Dixon

FORMER Commander British Forces Falkland Islands Ray Dixon has died age 63, following what was described as a very brave and dignified fight against Leukemia over the last two years.

He joined the RAF in 1970 and after fast jet training flew Phantoms with 43 Squadron at Leuchars. He also fulfilled tours at Wattisham and Coningsby and attended RAAF Staff College in 1984.

He served at RAF Mt Pleasant between 1994-95 before becoming Chief Plans Branch Allied Forces Central Europe HQ between 1995-97. After a tour as Senior Air Advisor NATO Forces Bosnia Herzegovina in 1997 he became Commander British Forces Falkland Islands between 1998-99. He was an Upper Freeman in the Guild of Air Pilots and Air Navigators; FRAeS.

After retirement he enjoyed fly fishing in the rivers around his home in Devon and sea fishing from a boats some of which he Skippered on the coasts around Devon and Dorset.

Fishing, fund-raising and cash prizes at North Arm two-nighter

Onwards to the two-nighter - Nuala Knight assists Violet Clarke and Carli Sudder feels cold weather calls for decent measures FISHING, fund raising and dancing added up to a lively and well attended 'two-nighter' and Darwin Harbour Sports Association sweep draw at North Arm on the weekend. A Friday night dance kicked off the weekend, with around 100 visitors to the farm, confirmed resident Emma Reid.

The following morning the gang dragged themselves out of bed in order to enjoy the fishing competition at the pretty bridge near the Big House. Happily for those feeling a little worse for wear the day was calm and sunny with the odd hot rum on offer to those needing extra motivation. Ted Jones won both 'heaviest' fish and 'smallest' fish prizes while the prize for 'most hungover fisherman' was a triumphant win for Stephen Jennings. Chris Lloyd won 'most fish' in the adult category and Molly Jaffray took the children's prizes for 'heaviest fish' and 'most fish.' Heather and Snoozer Smith and Marvin, Trudy and Rudy Clarke picked up the top prize in the draw on Saturday afternoon following a lunch of bangers and mash at the club. Saturday night included prize giving and the ever popular novelty dancing.

£326.76 was raised and split equally between the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. Some funky hairstyling transformed farmer Joe 'Windy' Newell into a windswept Jedward and collected £220 alone at Ian and Eileen Jaffray's home as well as generous donations for the scrumptious bangers and mash lunch.

Emma thanked all those who had helped organise the weekend's activities as well as those who just turned up and helped to make it a really good weekend for everyone.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6) ...Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625 - Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6) ...Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band
156.800 - Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFI may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 26th April, 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week unchanged at AU$1,165 making it 747/kg clean in Stirling, down 5 pence. One of the lowest offerings of wool since September 2011 came to auction this week. 38,103 bales with a good clearance of 88.8%

Finer micron lots are still in high demand, even though the amounts are starting to diminish because Australia is entering the later stage of the season. There is a low clearance rate for Merino skirtings, it is thought that the majority of the wool is affected by discolouration and coting. Next week there is expected to be an offering of 45,132 bales.

The Wool Centre - Rediscover the Wonders of Wool will be a major feature of this years National Sheep Association Scotsheep which will be held in the UK in June. The demonstration will tell the story of wool from "fleece to fashion" and will be of interest to both sheep farmers and the general public attending the event.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

WOKED up last week to a white world, wasn't it lovely? It was a bit cold but that crunching sound underfoot was very satisfying and everything looked so clean and bright. The borders were still showing a bit of colour above the snow while the weeds lurked unseen, beneath it. I liked it, but a weekend of gardening or picking up manure was just not possible. Instead, I thought I could probably do some 'pricking out' inside a tunnel but it was much too cold on the fingers and I find gloves are no good for that job. So, here I am, cake tins full and mind empty.

What a difference a full stop can make eh? When I've written my 'bit' and sent it, that is IT. I never read the printed article, why would I? And so I did not realise until I had a couple of confused people on the 'phone, that my article of the 30th March on preserving sweet peppers had a 'life changing' full stop in it. It should have read: grill to remove skins, marinate in lemon juice for a day then put in sterilised bottles and cover with oil heated with the marinade. My apologies to you all.

During the weekend before last I was able to get into the veg garden and remove some more potatoes; in their place I've put a row each of 'normal' thorny gooseberries and a row of thornless red ones. In between each row I have planted some 'flower of Spring' cabbage to supplement the winter greens put in three weeks ago.

With some bone-meal in each hole, lots of water and a sprinkling of ant/earwig killer all over I'm hoping they will get their chance to grow unmolested for a while.

I have cut down the 'resident' swede tops for the last time.

Those that were in the ground and required for other things, were lifted, peeled, cut into inch cubes, microwaved for 4 to 5 minutes, cooled and put into the freezer. They are such a great vegetable I think no soup or stew should be without them, and wonderful roasted with potatoes to serve with a roast too. But possibly, my favourite use for them is with a beef roast; I like to put an inch thick slice as big as the roast itself under it, with enough water underneath to cover half an inch or so of the pan. While the meat cooks slowly the juices from it cook the swede, as well. It takes very little then to mash the cooked swede within the gravy which, once thickened is so deliciously rich and tasty that the meat is a bit superfluous really.

Talking of cooking, I've had a disastrous two weeks within the home. I opened a cupboard door above and to one side of the ceramic hob and a small spice jar fell out on to the worktop.

I didn't realise until I went to cook the evening meal that it had actually 'bitten' a small piece out of the hob, this in turn had caused a crack right across it, rendering it unusable and dangerous. Fortunately our oven is separate and our microwave though old (20 years) is one of those combination ones and we have accumulated various other electrical cooking aids, so we could manage till we got a new one. But, barely a week later, when making a Scottish broth in a large pyrex bowl in the microwave, disaster struck again! When I took the, by now quite heavy three litre bowl, out to stir and season it, I did not notice the glass turntable was stuck to it until it came off and shattered on the tiles, bah!

When the snow clears away, the lawns will need taking care of before winter. We have a couple of areas that are quite compacted and not really 'greening up' properly anymore, these will need spiking either with a machine or, as it is quite a small area, by making holes with a garden fork. This will allow water and food in, and, as they were not fed in Spring, they will now be given a low nitrogen snack and it will get them off to a good start next Spring.

Now is a very good time for sowing sweet peas. Root trainers or the cardboard inserts of toilet rolls are ideal. Filled with soil and held upright with one or two seeds in each they don't take long to germinate undercover and are ready to plant out, cardboard and all, in the spring.

I was asked the other day why I use Latin names on my plant labels. It's quite simple really. I find it hard to remember the common names. Latin names remain the same anywhere in the world, whereas even within different areas of the UK plants will be known by different names. For example, hippeastrum are often known as amaryllis which is a totally different plant, indoor geraniums are actually pelargoniums.

But probably the most confusing one is the Sorbus, known as mountain ash by some and rowans by others. The various whitebeams also belong to the Sorbus family; they are all bone hardy and very worthwhile growing. Their berries are useful for the store cupboard too but probably their best function is feeding all our little birds, not that they last that long! I have seeds of various others of that family; they will produce pink, white and even yellow berries, which should extend the visual and the feeding period as they will eat all berries but leave non-red ones until last. Anyone growing Symphoricarpos (snowberry) will keep them well into winter.

THIS month's golden arrow competition was put on hold due to a large number of the club's regular shooters not being available. Instead a 'crazy' individual 120 arrow shoot took place on FITA 18m three spot faces, which only have the inner five scoring zones - six through to ten.

Two each of three spot target faces were fixed in random ways to each boss, with each archer shooting an arrow at each target spot. Rules were simple, it would be an 18m shoot, six arrows to an end, one arrow to a target. If two arrows from the one archer or more hit the same scoring zone, the lowest would count. Each archer would shoot on the five different bosses four times but move on to the next boss once that end of six arrows had been completed.

The shoot got under way after a rapid target face change. It proved as difficult for the more experienced archers as the less so of the eight shooting members taking part. Each arrow was aimed at a different target, so there was no chance of getting comfortable off the line. Each had to be aimed as if your life depended on it. The first 60 arrows passed by so quickly it was decided to shoot another 60. Unfortunately John's arrow rest broke half way through the second 60 and he had to withdraw. By the time everyone got to 90 arrows, arms were starting to hurt and it was much more difficult to hold the aim, but sprits were high and all the remaining shooters completed the round. All enjoyed the challenge of a very difficult and different shoot.

The 120 arrow shoot proved so popular that it was decided to shoot a double Portsmouth next Friday. Also, registering the club's interest in taking part in future Small Island and Commonwealth Games may have spurred members on to start with fitness training and shoot more arrows.

Members would like to thank Margaret for being the range officer and line judge once again.

The club welcomes new members from the age of 10+ and anyone wishing to have a go may do so by popping along to the Leisure Centre on a Sunday morning 9-10, first two sessions are FREE!

We will be having a field 'Shoot for Life' on Sunday May 13 club members have been asked to wear something pink and money raised will go towards the 'Run For Life'.

NINETEEN

seconds into the first match Martyn Barlow took the lead for Flyers but it didn't take long for Ian France to even things out for the Panthers, and Duane Evans soon gave them the lead. With 14 minutes to go the scores were evened again by Martyn and five minutes later Nick Rendell put the Flyers ahead. Flyers are currently trailing in the Energise Shield competition and Panthers are sitting comfortably as top cats; and with six minutes to go the rivalries began to show. Exhausting to even watch due to the amount of passing and every shot belted with intent to hit the goal or harm anyone in the way.

Ian drew things level again in the second half but Nick forced Flyers back in to the lead with a shot trickling in off the back foot of Panthers' goalie Melvyn Clifton. Martyn then completed his hat-trick to push the lead to two goals ahead. Then a fight broke out, punches were thrown between Panthers' Nick Francis and Flyers' Antoine Daille which ended in the pair being pulled apart and penalised for five minutes each. The game restarted warily with 12 minutes left to play, Ian scored another but Martyn kept the Flyers clear in the lead. Final score Panthers 4, Flyers 6.

Following that act would've been tough but the Coyotes and

Team	GP	W	L	D	GF	GA	GD	PTS
Panthers	9	7	2	0	48	25	23	21
Hurricanes	9	5	2	2	43	22	21	17
Penguins	8	4	3	1	45	41	4	13
Blackhawks	9	4	5	0	31	38	-7	9
Coyotes	10	2	5	3	24	47	-23	9
Flyers	9	2	7	0	32	56	-24	6

Hurricanes threw themselves into the next match as if it were a final but save after save from goalies Stuey Duncan and Marcus Morrison made it hard for the outfielders on both sides. Eight minutes passed with no goals, then twelve, then fifteen, just as I was wondering if the scorekeeper had fallen asleep Sam Miller broke the stalemate for Hurricanes, and soon after team mate Dan Biggs scored another. Despite the rising smell of burning stick tape and puck plastic from the gym hall no one could find another before halftime.

The second half almost mirrored the first; it took nearly 18 minutes for someone to score again and it was Sam Cockwell who got to raise his stick in celebration, igniting the hopes of the Coyotes. Eight minutes left on the board the game turned frantic; Sam Miller had a golden opportunity, but through intuition or reacting to the desperate shouts of his team mates Coyote goalie Marcus dived backwards to lie on the puck just in time. With less than two minutes left to play Andrew Miller hooked in a glory shot. Final score Hurricanes 2, Coyotes 2.

Well qualified for funding

BROADCASTER and journalist Patrick Watts who is preparing a history of the Stanley Sports Association was the first Islander to receive an academic scholarship for some time from the Shackleton Scholarship Fund confirmed a spokesperson for the fund who added: "This year's applicants for Shackleton Scholarships were exceptionally qualified and the Committee made an additional £4,000 available for two extra academic awards." The other four academic scholarships will cover hairy sea worms, brown algae seaweed, sea-cucumbers and the southern Sea Lion. Under 'Quality of Life' funds were awarded to the Stanley Netball Club and the Falkland Islands Archery Association. Both will bring coaches to the Islands. Folk singer and songwriter Marc Block will also be funded to visit. Full story www.penguin-news.com.

SAMA bed plea

FIFTY Falklands War veterans under the auspices of the SAMA (82) charity will require accommodation in the Islands for the November Pilgrimage. However, many more self-funded veterans would also like to visit between November and December if more beds were made available. If you can help with an offer of accommodation, email Gary Clement on clem@horizon.co.fk or call 21767.

Celebrity visit

CELEBRITY chef Phil Vickery, star of ITV's This Morning programme arrived in the Islands yesterday to film with Andrew Giddens of Red Lion Foods; a company dedicated to helping UK armed forces charities. Phil who will cook breakfast for veterans at Liberty Lodge on Sunday will leave the Islands on Tuesday May 15.

FALKLAND Islands Community School students enjoy a two-week exchange visit to Punta Arenas Chile. The group has now returned to the Islands. Full story on page 2

Tourism figures static but better times ahead

VISITOR arrivals in 2012 by inbound overnight tourists, cruise passengers and domestic tourists are expected to total 57,000 spending around £7 million.

Cruise ship passengers are forecast to make up 35,000 of the 57,000 in the 2012/13 season.

This is similar to last season (35,159) but has been revised down from a previous forecast largely due to an increased estimate of the number of cruise cancellations because of weather, health and mechanical failure reasons. In 2011/12 there were almost 10,000 passenger arrivals lost due to cruise cancellations, over half of those by the cruise vessel Veendam.

In 2008, a massive 62,000 cruise passengers visited but this slipped steadily over the next three years. According to the analysis published in Falklands tourism statistics for the fourth quarter of 2011 (Falklands Forecast) however, a yearly growth of cruise ship passengers of 7% has been predicted for 2013/14 and 2015.

Also on an optimistic note, overall tourist arrivals to the Falklands in 2012 are expected to increase by 12% with a significant 15% increase in the number of leisure visitors mainly driven by the 30th Anniversary of the Falklands War. In total 7430 overnight tourists are expected in 2012 spending over £4.5million.

Domestic tourism is forecast to grow in 2012, albeit at a moderate rate of 3.5% and is expected to generate 14,300 trips and £1.25 million in expenditure.

In 2011, while the UK dominated as the key generating market for all tourists and leisure tourists, visitors from Argentina were the second largest leisure market in 2011, followed by the United States and France (this figure does not include cruise passengers).

For leisure tourists Lan remains the most popular route to the Islands, with 844 arrivals in 2011, compared to 221 on the RAF Airbridge and 30 using other flights.

The arrival of oil workers in the Falklands continues to grow and is driving the overall trend of increased tourist arrivals in the Falklands. According to 'Falklands Forecast': "Following UN-WTO definitions of tourism, these are bona fide business tourists and contribute to the economy of the Islands."

Fox Bay future as rural enterprise zone

FOX Bay is likely to be the focus of a rural enterprise zone with any physical development such as housing to be focused there, it was noted at a Rural Development Strategy (RDS) meeting held there on Monday evening, and chaired by Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers.

Education Department Representatives David Jenkins and Tom Hill briefed the meeting on health and education provision in Camp, and discussed the 'Moodle' system. This is an interactive computer system (similar to video conferencing) and is proposed as an opportunity to allow Camp children educated at home to interact more fully with their teachers and other pupils.

The system might also have some application in the provision of Camp health services, allowing doctors or nurses to interact with patients more fully. Following the closure of the Steering Group meeting, RDS Project Officer Nuala Knight delivered a short presentation on the proposed RDS Action Plan.

She told Penguin News: "Questions focused on proposed actions such as the rural enterprise zones, improvements to water and power in Camp and the creation of new employment."

A similar meeting to be held on the East is planned for the future.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

YEARS ago during the early part of my first stint as Editor and when the paper was still funded by government, we were as a result of that relationship occasionally accused of being influenced by the establishment. To be entirely fair to the councillors at the time it wasn't in fact true, and I recall only one occasion when an attempt was made to censor information we had obtained – an attempt that failed and one we immediately reported on in the next editorial. Happily for the paper, and for the government for whom the funding situation caused almost as much discomfort, we were eventually able to dispense with it entirely and that situation stands today.

Oddly enough, and despite our complete financial independence, we still face the very occasional accusation of taking a government line: recently though that accusation more often comes from across the water when our stories or comments upset Argentine extremists who will not accept that the subject matter reflects the political views of the populace, albeit one that at this present time in terms of our foreign politics is very close to that of our government: a coming together not influenced by pressure from the Falkland Islands government, but ironically enough, as a result of the people's frustration at the Argentine government.

The feeling experienced at being accused of such a pernicious crime even if it comes from outside of the Islands, has of course generated a little teeth-grinding at PN, but far more discomforting over past months was the experience of viciously worded social network and email attacks, many of which were likely to have been generated by the Argentine President's paid 'online troops' (according to tip-offs from both tweeting and visiting Argentine journalists). If I was initially inclined to sit on the fence with regard to whether this phenomenon was fact as opposed to speculation, the growing and blatantly aggressive attitude by the Argentine government towards any members of their own press who dare to do anything less than toe-the-government-line, has pretty much confirmed it likely that we were, and are still, being prodded by the same tentacles.

As it happens the Argentine government denies the existence of CFK's 'online army' despite damning evidence from such top journalists as Jorge Lanata. And, while in the past the President might have got away with shrugging it off with claims of 'press paranoia', taking into account her growing dictatorial style (see YPF take over) her lack of support for the freedom of the press (accusations against Clarin of being anti-government) her complete lack of respect for international bodies (the Olympic Committee) and her obvious pride in underhand methods (obtaining the Falklands footage through deceit) I'm not sure anyone would now consider it beneath the lady to pay a gang of bullying little minions to slither around the internet.

FICS students return from Chile exchange

Students from the Chilean exchange school

STUDENTS from the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) have returned from a two-week exchange visit to Punta Arenas in Chile.

"The visit gave the students the opportunity to see some of the friends they had made when a number of Chilean students visited the school back in October of last year," FICS Headmaster David Tongue told Penguin News.

Eleven students from the school made the trip accompanied by their teacher Michael Barton and former teacher Veronica Fowler. The group comprised: Axel Rodriguez-Reid, Byron Stewart-Reid, Clodagh Stewart-Reid, Kate Stenning, Jake Buckett, Kirsty McLeod, Michaela Clifford, Pilar Castro, Laois Bishop-Newman, Shannon Alazia and India Clarke.

The students stayed with host families and attended school during the first week of the visit. In the second week, the students stayed in a hostel in Puerto Natales for two nights, ate out together, went to Torres del Paine National Park and saw Milodon Cave. Student Kate Stenning said: "It was interesting to see the difference between school here and the school in Chile. It was great to meet so many new friends and it helped me to improve my Spanish."

Michaela Clifford added: "It was amazing! A great experience! Before I went I knew very little Spanish and now I have learned quite a bit."

Jake Buckett also enjoyed the experience: "It was wonderful to see some of the friends I had made when the students came here."

Mr Tongue said it was great to see how the students had valued the experience: "The opportunity to spend time and make friends in a different country, and immerse themselves in that country's culture, is an excellent part of their extra-curricula education. We have made some important links which we hope to explore further in the future."

Stevens' charges dropped

A CASE against Stanley man Geoffrey Arnold Stevens (52) has been discontinued with a verdict of not guilty recorded on Thursday.

Defence lawyer Michael Hayton said the move by the Attorney General's Chambers to drop the charges was, "no surprise," and asked that Mr Stevens' costs of £800 be reimbursed and any legal aid contributions paid back.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said that in this case the payment to Mr Stevens should be made from legal aid, however, the situation needed to be looked into closely and provision made for payment to be made from elsewhere in the future.

Mr Stevens pleaded not guilty to charges of indecent assault and sexual assault in the Magistrates Court on January 11, 2012.

Registered sex offender admits 19 new crimes

STANLEY man Simon Gus Reid (25) is to be sentenced today for a series of sexual offences against three young girls.

Mr Reid, who in 2006 was placed on the sex offenders register for seven years after he was convicted of two counts of sexual activity with a child, has pleaded guilty to a total of 19 sexual offences involving three victims under the age of 16.

Prosecution and defence counsel travelled from the United Kingdom to the Falklands for the trial which began on Monday and was scheduled to run for one week.

However, after a delayed start Mr Reid altered his plea to guilty on seven charges of possession of indecent photographs of a child, six charges of taking an indecent photograph of a child another of taking an indecent video of a child and of meeting a child following sexual grooming.

Earlier this year on March 7, when he appeared in court, Mr Reid pleaded guilty to sexual activity with a child, two counts of sexual activity involving penetration and meeting a child following sexual grooming, but denied the remaining charges.

He has been remanded in custody since that date.

The trial was adjourned until today (Friday) for presentence and psychiatric reports to be considered by the Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley.

On Monday, Mr Gumsley said Mr Reid had, "sensibly and finally," pleaded guilty to the charges, adding that while credit would be given appropriately for this, he should be in no doubt his sentence would be a lengthy custodial one.

Advert condemned by Olympic committees

THE CONTROVERSIAL advert that showed an Argentine hockey player training for the Olympics in the Falkland Islands has been condemned by the International Olympic Committee, the British Government and the Falkland Islands Government.

As reported in last week's Penguin News, the advert showed Fernando Zylberberg running through Stanley, and most controversially, doing step-ups on the WW1 monument. It ended with the words: "to compete on English soil we train on Argentine soil."

The International Olympic Committee denounced the advert this week saying the Olympics should not be a forum for political issues and, "the IOC regrets any attempts to use the spotlight of the games for that end. The IOC has always striven to separate sport from politics and honour the spirit of the games and all those who take part."

Argentine Olympic committee president Gerardo Werthein said in a statement on Tuesday that using the games as a platform for, "political gestures," was not acceptable but defended the right to freedom of speech for his athletes. "The Argentine National Olympic Committee is fully committed to the Olympic Charter and the best practices of the Olympic movement," said Werthein.

Screen shots from spoof version of the advert

Argentina President Cristina Kirchner defended the advert commenting: "Creativity cannot be censored," and applauded the piece.

The advertising agency that created it, Young & Rubicam, has apologised for the making of the advert by its branch in Argentina, saying the spot was deeply offensive to people around the world and to the Olympic spirit: "We strongly condemn this work and have asked the Argentine government to pull the spot."

Despite the condemnation the Argentine Government continues to air the advert.

Zylberberg, who initially claimed he did not know who had paid for the filming, but later admitted he knew it to be the Argentine government, has not been included in the 18-man squad for the Sultan Azlan Shah Cup in Malaysia in May and June; a warm up events for the Olympics.

Last week Member of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly Ian Hansen labelled the advert as, "cheap and disrespectful."

Spoof

To the obvious delight of Falkland Islanders on social networking sites this week, a spoof version of the advert was released on YouTube that included additional footage of the FIC owned London Bus used in the Falklands in the tourist season. The spoof version gave the impression that Zylberberg was attempting to catch up with the bus and the piece ended with the words, "to catch a bus on Falklands soil, we don't advise you use an Argentine time-table."

Yachties give thumbs up for Falklands

A TURKISH yachting couple on a three year sea journey called into the Falklands this week, "because other sailors we met said how friendly and trustworthy the people are," Osman Atasoy told Penguin News.

He and Sibel Karasu on their yacht Uzaklar II have most recently sailed from Antarctica to Chile and Argentina and then on to the Falklands. Osman funds their journey by writing for a Turkish yachting magazine and a documentary about their adventures around the globe has been screening in Turkey for 30 weeks. "We spent the winter in the Chilean Channel which was amazing and we have been most excited about getting to see Antarctica."

The Uzaklar II is anchored at the Canache and the couple intend to leave in the middle of next week depending on weather conditions.

Oil mission

A 30-strong Falkland Islands delegation will hold talks with a number of North Sea companies and visit Aberdeen's oil port next week. The trade mission will explore the opportunities arising from the Islands' fledgling oil and gas industry. The trade mission will then spend two days in Shetland, where delegates are due to tour Sullom Voe oil terminal. The visit to Aberdeen has been organised by Aberdeen & Grampian Chamber of Commerce (AGCC) in association with the Falkland Islands Chamber of Commerce.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

APOLOGIES for the wrong jubilee - I should have checked the date as I drove past. The Jubilee Villas marked Victoria's 50 years Golden Jubilee, not her Diamond Jubilee. Another attractive idea for the Diamond Jubilee is to call the public jetty the Jubilee Jetty when it has been suitably rebuilt and refurbished.

The suggestion is that a timeline of key dates since the discovery of the Islands be included in the design so that visitors can literally walk along our history as they come ashore. While the design is yet to be finalised I'm sure that with a little imagination this suggestion could give a very powerful message.

MY mission this week is to discover the full breadth of training funds available from FIG through multiple schemes. At the moment people are unsure where to apply, unclear about what are the qualifying criteria, and when turned away because one pot is empty, uncertain where to go next. We invest large sums in training annually and I want to be satisfied that the money is being well spent and that people have a level playing field with qualifying criteria clearly defined and fairly applied. I would also like to see unused funds from an under-spent scheme being applied to another area of training rather than being swallowed up in general departmental costs.

*****

I THOUGHT Argentine diplomacy and propaganda hit rock bottom weeks ago, how wrong I was. Their latest combined display of ineptitude, the disreputable attempt to politicise the Olympics, the ill mannered and ill judged behaviour of their ambassador in London and the rambling Timmerman tirade all suggest a new level of desperation. The BA Herald sums it up perfectly asking 'Whatever happened to diplomacy?' I'm on record saying that when Argentina matures sufficiently as a country and a democracy to recognise and respect the rights of their neighbours we could be just normal friendly neighbours. Recent events indicate that time may be so distant that we may never see it. I wonder if there is any coherent policy or if the country is as chaotic as it appears.

Tourist industry reps attend IAATO

Cruise ship Expedition at Port Chareot

Picture S Jaffray

A STRONG Falklands contingent attended the annual convention of the International Association of Antarctic Tour Operators (IAATO) in Providence, Rhode Island.

Samantha Marsh of Sullivan Shipping, Sam Davies from FIC, Richard McKee for the South Georgia Government, Mark Boucher and Tim Cotter from the Development Corporation and Adam Cockwell from Workboat Services all made the journey north for the four day event.

Founded in 1991 to advocate, promote and practice safe and environmentally responsible private-sector travel to the Antarctic, IAATO now has 111 members of which 54 are tour operators/organisers.

"It's vital for us to attend as it is really important to meet with our clients, and also to keep up to date with Antarctic tourism," Miss Marsh said.

Nearly all visitors to Antarctica arrive by ship with a peak of 46,265 during the 2007/08 season. This number has reduced to 26,519 for the 2011/12 season, due to the world economic crisis and the ban on heavy fuel.

Mr McKee said that from the Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) perspective, the meeting was an important opportunity to engage with all IAATO members, particularly so as they are the only commercial passenger vessels permitted to visit sites other than Grytviken.

"The GSGSSI presentation is an opportunity to recognise successful aspects of last season and also discuss any concerns and how the management of landings can be improved," said Mr McKee.

IAATO operators were also briefed on the upcoming South Georgia habitat restoration projects to eradicate invasive species and how visits will need to be managed during these busy periods.

"As this restoration work progresses it is also crucial to recap and reinforce to IAATO members the importance of their staff and passengers rigorously implementing GSGSSI's biosecurity measures," he said, adding, "in all respects it was a successful meeting."

Over the last eight years IAATO members and passengers have contributed more than $2.5 million in cash donations to Antarctic-related charitable and conservation causes.

In addition, IAATO operators annually transport scores of scientists, station and national program personnel gratis or at a minimal expense to and from Antarctica.

Cleared land now open to the public

THE 370 hectares of Stanley Common south of Sapper Hill recently cleared by BACTEC, is now open to the public.

Environmental Officer Nick Rendell said it should be noted however that five smaller minefields remain in the area and are clearly marked.

The accessible area contains the Stone Corral, an exquisite piece of early Falklands history as well as Eagle Rock, a notable landscape feature. It also includes the two largest ponds in the Stanley area, Mile Pond and Round Pond. The latter attracts interesting waterfowl and rare vagrant bird species have been reported there in the past.

It is not possible to walk around Mile Pond as its western end remains within a minefield. Further south Lake Point Beach can be reached and is an attractive area for walkers to explore, with two old FIDE gun emplacements located just inland. A three kilometre stretch of coastline is now accessible from Goose Green via Lake Point to the entrance to Mullet Creek, where a further two kilometres of shoreline offers additional fishing opportunities.

Mr Rendell explained that the best point to gain access to the Stone Corral is via the old Pump House track, and then by foot or vehicle through an access gate into the released area. "As the corral is an important historic feature please refrain from climbing on or removing rocks from its walls," he added. The best vehicle access point to reach Mile Pond, Round Pond and the south coast is through the gate in the north east corner of the released area by the Sapper Hill water tanks although the area around the gate is quite damp and may become difficult to pass as it gets wetter over winter.

A temporary fence has been put in place between Mile Pond and the minefield to the east to restrict vehicles from travelling further south. This area is also very wet and has been fenced to prevent damage to the ground. For access to the south coast the public should leave their vehicles at the gate, from which it is a 500 metre walk to Lake Point Beach and Round Pond. A key for the gate is available from the Environmental Planning Department for people with mobility difficulties. It is intended to remove the fence and gate when access to the coastal strip has been improved following further land releases.

A map of the area showing vehicle access points is available from the Environmental Planning Department on telephone: 28480 or by email; nrendell.planning@taxation.gov.fk and on the Environmental Planning Department website; www.epd.gov.fk

Bee hive shipped in on base of container

FALKLANDS biosecurity have reported the discovery of a honeycomb and dead bees found at the SAAS (shipping service) container yard.

Biosecurity Officer Shona Strange told Penguin News: "Masses were found dead on the ground. At this point we had no idea where they had come from. A sample of bees were collected and sent to FERA, DEFRA, UK for identification. A few weeks later whilst SAAS were moving containers about for destuffing, a honey comb was found on the underside of one of them."

The container had arrived from the UK via Brazil and while the bees on the outside of the honeycomb were dead, "there was no guarantee that nothing had survived inside. The honeycomb has since been removed and will be destroyed," said Ms Strange.

The bees have since been identified as the honeybee Apis mellifera: a breed deliberately introduced by humans to many areas of the world as a beneficial insect in terms of being a pollinator, and for its honey production. It is not classed as a plant pest.

Ms Strange said: "Although this incident perhaps would not have been a bad thing had the bees survived, the key message here is how easily the bees, complete with home, arrived into the Islands without anyone's knowledge."

Stray cat in the cockpit

A SOURCE of amusement at the Spring Point airstrip on Tuesday was a cat which had managed to escape the sturdy box used for shifting feline passengers and had taken up residence under the pilot's foot controls.

For more than an hour West Falkland farm owners Donna and Mike 'Dog' Evans helped Chief Pilot Troyd Bowles try to tempt the cat belonging to the Woodward family at Little Chartres out so he could be reboxed.

Milk and Whiskas cat food were offered but was having nothing of it, although he did sample a small taste of Dog himself rather than the offered treats.

Eventually safely back in his box Black Cat completed his journey to Fox Bay. "I don't think he was at all traumatised, but the rest of us were," joked Donna.

Seen anything strange lately?

PUTTING a smile on the faces of drivers on the By-Pass Road this week has been this rather forlorn and slightly underweight inhabitant of the newly sited dog cages at the Department of Agriculture.

DoA staff members say it turned up with the Morrison (Falklands) Ltd gang constructing the new Fisheries Department building and had been seen lurking around the site in a variety of positions until one morning it was spotted 'hanging out' in the cages. One is left wondering if it is a former employer who didn't pull his weight or possibly one who literally worked his fingers to the bone. Either way he is now living a dogs life in the newly built cages, but there may be a need to relocate when a canine inmate takes up residence.

C&W gifts enjoyed by special needs children

Alex

CABLE & Wireless has gifted two Ipad with covers to the Alex McGhie Fund for use by children with special needs in the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education.

Realising the learning benefits of Ipad teacher Wendy Reynolds said they had approached Cable & Wireless for a discount but that the company had kindly agreed to make the donation in total.

"One Ipad is being used in the BASE in IJS and one is providing Alex with a lot of stimulation and enjoyment at Port North," she said and thanked C&W for the welcome gifts. The fund still has a considerable amount of money to use to enhance the quality of life of any children under 16 with special needs. If you are a parent or friend of someone with special needs, and you would like some help purchasing a piece of equipment, contact trustees: Wendy Reynolds on 21491 or Jodie McGhie on 41104.

Donny Osmond off course

3. If you had a motto, what would it be?

Don't bite the hand that feeds you

4. What is your happiest moment?

Being at the birth of all my babies I wouldn't have missed it for the world

5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be?

A clothes shop for us big ladies, it's so hard to get nice clothes here for us plump beauties

As the Town Cryer

7. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

People trying to tell me how to run my business

8. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

It would have to be my Ally because he would not let the people across the water into our beautiful Islands

9. What is your nickname and why?

Boo-Boo because I am big and very cuddly so if anyone out there is in need of a cuddle just come to the Vic, they're free

10. What would people be surprised to learn about you?

I used to like ice skating. Ask Teddy Summers, we took him skating once and he nearly broke my arm

11. What's the best book you have read recently?

The Boy Called It. So sad to read how this little boy could be treated so badly by his mother. I can't understand how people can be so cruel to kids I love them so much

The familiar smiling face at their family pub the Victory Bar, Cathy was born in Southampton in 1958. She met Islander Ally in a chip shop in 1974 and married him four years later. They have lived in the Falklands since 1984 and have been running the Victory Bar ever since.

Cathy has three daughters, Cathy, Tanzi and Toni and two grand children Kevin and Amber and is hopeful there will be more to come. No pressure then girls?

Tax threshold

I HAVE a thoughts on what might or could be done with some of the millions of windfall revenue the government has received.

First of all a couple of years ago a councillor publicly stated that £25,000 per annum was considered a reasonable standard of living. We all know that the vast majority of workers do not get that kind of salary. Now given that it is not likely anyone in the lower paid bracket will ever get this annual amount would it not be great if the current Council were to set the tax threshold at £25,000 personal allowance before tax on earnings. This would not break the bank but would put many struggling families in a more financially secure position. It would very likely even get people to spend more of their earnings so a win win for the treasury.

Not a bad prediction don't you agree.

Sport exploited

HITLER exploited the Olympics. Argentina's cynical and infantile exploitation of the Olympic Games for political purposes is a reminder, if any is needed, of its persistent failure to abide by accepted standards of honesty and decency. The whole episode demonstrates again just how untrustworthy and deceitful Argentine governments can be. Argentina's own Olympic competitors say it has been damaging to their morale, already deflated by their government's import restrictions forcing customs delay in releasing equipment they need.

The President's ploy is counter-productive and aids the Falklands cause. It is an affront to thousands of athletes who compete in the spirit of the Olympics and in the belief that politics have no part in sport.

It is a pity that a country that produces many fine sportsmen and women does not accept this. Its conduct illustrates that it has not grown up as a nation. The athletes who foolishly featured in the futile plot to produce a propaganda film should be ashamed not just for lending themselves to the government's malevolent manoeuvres but also for their disrespect of a monument to British war dead.

Contrast this with the respect that the United Kingdom showed to the Argentine war dead and their families, permitting a fitting memorial and cemetery at Darwin and freedom of access to relatives and friends.

Hardly had the guns fallen silent than the Argentines were exploiting their own dead for political purposes. The British offer to return the bodies of Argentina's war dead home was rejected with the cynical argument that they were already buried in Argentine soil. The Falklands Roman Catholic priest justifiably remarked that the British had treated the Argentine dead better than their own officers had treated the conscripts when they were alive, starved and inhumanely punished.

It is not the first time the Olympic Games have been exploited for political purposes. The most notorious were the 1936 Berlin Olympics, used by Hitler to mask the true nature of a vicious, racially-vindictive, anti-Semitic regime. Why does that sound familiar? Argentina supported Hitler, gave sanctuary after 1945 to thousands of Nazis, and imbibed Nazi tendencies, as exemplified by the dictatorship which invaded the Falkland Islands.

President Christina Fernandez de Kirchner has facilitated trial and punishment of the Junta leaders. A democratically elected leader should not need to stoop to such stunts as the Olympic propaganda ploy. It is a poor substitute for mature rational argument over sovereignty. It shows the paucity of Argentina's case and all the more reason to keep the Falklands free.

Camp construction matters

LAST month, in the first of a series of articles, new Building Adviser Ken Snape looked at the consents required to build or extend a house in Camp. This week Ken looks at the requirements relating to building or extending a domestic dwelling.

Reassuringly the requirements for building a dwelling in Camp are as straight forward as they are in Stanley. It's the logistics which get interesting and I would like to thank local builders and other service providers who have found the time to discuss these, at times complex and important, matters with me.

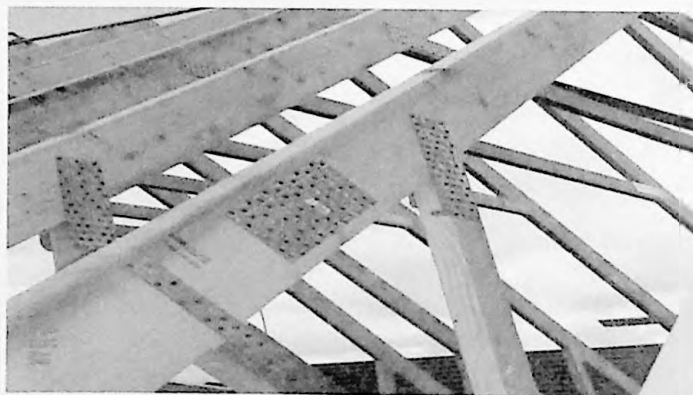

It's important to remember that in many instances you will not require planning permission as you are building in Camp - but do check with Fiona Wallace-Nannig in the Environmental Planning Department first.

So just what is it that we, here in the office in Stanley, need a prospective house builder to do initially to help us assist you?

- Firstly, you, as the client / customer must be clear in your own mind as to exactly what your end goal is: it can be awkward to ask if the builder can add another window or power plug points, for example, when the project is nearly finished.

- Next, you will need to complete an application form for a Building Permit which can be accessed on-line (www.epd.gov.fk) or we can post you a copy. By the way, we also have lots of standard construction details/handy hints on the website which you can also download - all free of charge.

- Prepare a drawing showing

Putting a lid on it

the overall shape and size of your proposed dwelling. This should also detail the sizes of your proposed doors and windows. If you can do this to scale (1 to 50) that's great. If not, a straight line drawing giving the sizes / dimensions is sufficient, as I or Fiona will be able to help "polish" the detailing with you.

- Download a Google Earth photograph which should show the actual location of your proposed building - so that we in the office can find the proposed site.

- If, like Rob McGill on Carcass Island or Hulda Stewart at San Carlos, you are building an extension to an existing house a few photographs are always greatly appreciated.

I and your chosen builder will also need to know at an early stage:

- The proposed type/design of building foundations.

- How you intend to secure your home structure to the foundations.

- What the roof design is - pitched or flat?

- The design of the external walls (simple timber cladding will usually do).

- Where the foul drains are going to discharge (will you need a septic tank for example?).

- How you are going to heat your home or extension.

- The fuels are you going to use to cook with - and heat the water.

- Proposed insulation (the requirements are reassuringly the same as in Stanley). As an aside, I normally see Mineral Fibre quilt rolls used. Floor insulation = at least 50mm. Walls = 100mm and Roofs = 150mm.

- Details of windows and doors. I strongly encourage you to have double glazed units fitted as a minimum.

- And don't forget to provide details on smoke detectors - at least two please!

Can I dwell just for a moment on the insulation standards detailed above? These are the current minimum requirements (sorry folks but it is a legal requirement). However, in the office I am often asked if thicker layers of insulation can be used and the answer is a clear "Yes" and I actively encourage you to do so, but do keep an eye on the cost of these types of insulating materials - they are expensive.

That's it as far as the bureaucracy goes as you should now have more than enough detail to submit your application for building your dream home or extension in Camp But PLEASE don't buy anything or start works until you have had a chat with me. I am here to help, and remember, my advice and time is always free.

This article has been written assuming that you are going to "stick build" (you buy all the materials here and you and your builder construct it). The alternative is to buy a "kit house" or a "log cabin", where your house is pre-ordered, arrives from abroad in a container and is delivered to your site to be put together. If this is your preferred choice I'd be more than happy to help double check that nothing has been missed off the order list, before you confirm it. This offer applies to all domestic construction projects in Camp whether the dwelling is a "week-end" retreat or not.

Please note that using a dwelling as a holiday home or Bed and Breakfast/Guest house have slightly different requirements that will be covered in a future article. I hasten to state that these are quite undemanding but there is, understandably, a higher emphasis on life safety for you and your guests.

In the next article I will look into why insulation is so important and will give examples as to how you can save money with some simple DIY steps.

No nay never to Argentine airlink

I AM pleased that in the majority of instances our councillors are sending out the right messages to Argentina. There also seems to be at last a clearer understanding by the UK Government of why we do not trust the Argentines.

Yet I was disappointed at the statements made by some councillors regarding the recent proposal by Argentina to reopen the Buenos Aires to Falklands air route. Instead of a comment like, "we don't anticipate any meeting to address the issue" (Sharon Halford, Mercopress 25th April 2012) and "FIG would be unlikely to view such an approach with favour while the charter flight ban remained" (Mike Summers Penguin News 27th April 2012) I don't know about the views of the people, but I would have liked to have heard a more robust message from our councillors the total rejection of such a proposal with the two words NO and NEVER emphasized for good measure.

Some ideas for the next budget

Income Tax and Medical Services Tax:

Readers might recall that the income tax personal allowance and the lower rate tax band were reduced at the Budget Meeting of the Legislative Assembly in May 2010. The reason given by the Financial Secretary for those adjustments was on the basis and I quote, "that the income tax regime in the Falklands is generous compared with many countries." In my view this was a wholly unjustified reason for making our regime less generous but it wasn't challenged at the time. Was this trick simply missed or are other taxpayers happy with the reasoning? To my mind a justifiable reason would have been if the government needed the additional revenue from those adjustments to balance the budget which it obviously didn't and still doesn't. I wonder how many other countries look at our tax regime before adjusting their tax allowances and rate bands? Unless there is a change in policy it follows that we'll have to wait until the income tax regimes of "many countries," become more generous before those adjustments are reversed to reflect the recent improvements in our economy.

With a £19m budget surplus last year and a revised budget surplus this year of £14.5m it was clearly unnecessary for government to increase the tax burden by extracting another £1.3m a year from taxpayers. As well as the suggestion in the Editorial last week for the reduction in the income tax personal allowance to be reversed, the reduction in the lower rate tax band could also be reversed, tax rates could be reduced and the rates of Medical Services Tax could be reduced to zero to further decrease the tax burden.

Retirement Pension Contributions (RPCs)

Like Medical Services Tax, RPCs are a form of tax on employment. The current weekly rates are £28 for a self-employed person, £14 for an employee and £14 for an employer for anyone between the ages of 17 and 64 earning over £180 per week. This means, for example, that a self-employed person earning £181 takes home £153. Eams £1 more but takes home £27 less - not a great incentive. The weekly earnings limit threshold of £180 could be increased but this would have the potentially adverse affect of reducing the pension for the contributor. Following the high increases in RPCs in recent years I believe the time has come to consider replacing the flat rate with a percentage rate on earnings. This would avoid the sudden impact experienced by contributors on the border line of the threshold. In advance of any review of the way RPCs are charged they could be reduced by say £4 per week and the shortfall to the pension fund could be made good by increasing the pension subsidy accordingly. An increase in this particular subsidy would not have any affect on government's balance sheet since the Retirement Pension Fund is a separate pot of money belonging to the government. As well as HM The Queen's Diamond Jubilee, this year marks the Diamond Jubilee of Old Age Pensions. What better way to celebrate the latter than to reduce the rate of contributions along with a higher than inflationary increase in pensions.

Domestic Property Service Charge

Despite it being mentioned in annual budget presentations I wonder how many people realise that this charge recovers the cost of water supply and refuse collection and some of the cost of "other community services," such as street lighting, street cleaning and maintenance of open spaces. The annual charge is not linked to how much or little services are used but just for access to them. It is therefore not a user-pay charge but is more akin to a household tax at one rate regardless of the size of the household, currently £426 with a 50% concession for pensioners. A small bed-sit or mobile home is charged the same as a large house with 3 or 4 bedrooms. There is some logic in recovering the cost of water supply and refuse collection from households that have access to them although the one rate fits all charge can be regarded as unfair. However, the same logic cannot be applied to the other community services as these services are not only enjoyed by householders but also by anyone else who cares to walk under the street lights on clean streets or on the maintained open spaces. It appears that it would be more appropriate for the cost of these particular services to be met from general revenues in the same way as community services such as Police, Fire & Rescue are met from general revenues. There is arguably a need to review the one rate fits all charge but in any event the cost of the "other community services," could be removed from the charge as another measure to reduce the tax burden.

House Rents

The case for increasing government house rents every year by more than the rate of inflation is made on the basis that they are lower than in the private sector. I would challenge this notion as government is not in competition with the private sector. How many houses in the private sector are left vacant because government rents are lower? I doubt if there are any for that reason. As far as I'm aware government housing policy has two main priorities for the allocation of houses: first for officers recruited from overseas and second for social housing. The ever increasing rents cannot assist with overseas recruitment and this does not appear to be getting any more cost effective despite the adoption of management initiatives for better value and continuous improvement.

It has to be recognised that some employers both here and overseas offer rent free housing as part of their remuneration packages and higher government rents must help to drive up demands for higher salaries and/or gratuities.

For many tenants of social housing an increase in rent means an equivalent increase in rebate and a paper transaction for no gain. It should also be noted that unlike many activities of government the housing account makes a profit even after depreciation is taken into account on assets most of which tend to appreciate in value. Rents are therefore a user-pay plus charge! Let's try freezing rents for a couple of years to see if this helps recruitment and retention of staff from overseas.

MPA Road

After those taxes and charges ideas I've just got one more suggestion and this time for an investment in infrastructure. Not a new capital project but to finish an existing one, the MPA Road. I would prefer to see it sealed properly by continuing the black topped surface used to seal the Fitzroy Ridge area as this method appears to have stood the test of time. Alternatively the clay infested capping material used for many years could be replaced with a cleaner material as used in the original construction if the annual replacement of the road surface is preferred by the majority.

Tell me your experiences

THIS week (May 2nd-May 4th) I had the great privilege of attending an international conference (closed from the media, I might add) to discuss the relationship between Britain and Argentina over the last 30 years. The privilege comes from being able to meet scholars from the many universities present, including the Universities of Nottingham, Manchester, Leeds, Salamanca and Madrid, and from war veterans from either side, and finally from a Norwegian expert in Trauma Studies, and Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder amongst war survivors.

What quickly became apparent was the lack of the Falkland Islanders' voice, or the limited examples of this voice. The mothers and widows of fallen servicemen were discussed in terms of their own trauma losing loved ones, and the view of Argentine politicians, through Ambassador Alicia Castro and British intellectuals were discussed. No one but me had anything to say about the lasting effects of trauma on the civilian population of the Islands, or what our view is for the future.

In the closing speeches I drew attention to this lack of Islanders' voice - in terms of over-looked stories, of war-time experience, of resistance to one army and co-operation with another, and with the effects of the trauma of war.

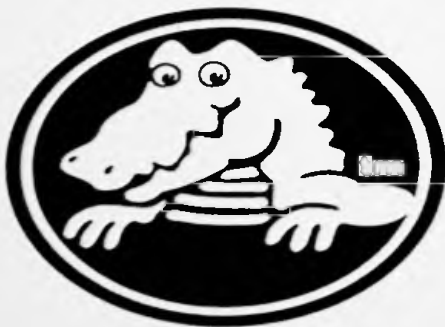

On May 24th I'll be home in the Islands, and anyone who feels that they would like to share their story, no matter how big or small they think it may be, should get in touch with me at krysteen@hotmail.co.uk or on 51771, and we can have a cup of tea (or coffee) and talk about the things that matter most. I would be honoured to hear your stories, and forever grateful.

Our voice, as the people of the Falkland Islands, needs to be heard, and I hope that this will be a step towards making people listen to us. I look forward to hearing from any of you.

An exciting April break

Trying the thermal imaging camera

"THE Stanley Leisure Centre Holiday Programme proved very popular and opened up some exciting new opportunities for children during the April break from school," said Head of Leisure Services Louise Taylor.

More than 40 children took part in over 30 different activities on offer, many being repeat customers.

Activities included children being taken out-and-about around Stanley, experiencing VIP treatment from a variety of local businesses and enjoying bowling, wall climbing, the cinema and a visit to HMS Clyde at Mount Pleasant.

Louise said: "Within the Leisure Centre, they had a chance to try their hand at sports and fitness activities including badminton, short tennis, step aerobics, dancing and swimming - a mini-gala and the aqua-run being particular pool favourites.

"Slightly more sedate pastimes on offer were creating amazing pictures and picture frames, making Easter egg baskets and hunting for Easter eggs and other goodies.

"The Leisure Centre staff would like to say a very big thank you to everyone in the community who contributed to the holiday programme in any way."

She said plans would soon be underway to arrange activities for the June half-term holiday: "We are always pleased to hear ideas of places to visit and things to do so let us know if you have any thoughts."

Brother remembered with 'yomp'

A MAN whose brother died during the Falklands war is to retrace his footsteps during this 30th Anniversary year.

In 1982, Royal Marine Gordon MacPherson was killed during the battle for Two Sisters, and now his brother David plans to make the 75-mile journey past the spot in tribute.

Mr MacPherson was 19 when he lost his brother, who was 20 and had been a Royal Marine for just a year.

Gordon MacPherson, from Oban, Argyll, died alongside comrade Corporal Frank Spencer during the battle. Both served with Zulu Company, 45 Commando, Royal Marines, which is based in Arbroath.

David MacPherson and Mike Cole, who was the company commander in 1982, are now about to travel the original 75 mile route across East Falklands and will pay their respects at Two Sisters.

The men will be laden with heavy kit for the long journey and will cover 17 miles each day in wintry conditions.

When the pair reach Two Sisters, on their way from Port San Carlos to Stanley, they will stop for a ceremony in honour of the fallen Marines.

A piper from The Highlanders,

Gordon and David MacPherson at their home in Argyll in March 1982

4th Battalion, The Royal Regiment of Scotland (4 Scots), is expected to play Nam Anna Le Mo Smaointe, a Gaelic song which means 'Alone With My Thoughts' and was written for Gordon after he died by family friends Erik Spence and the Reverend John MacLeod.

It will be the first time Mr MacPherson has visited the Falklands and the second time Mr

Cole has returned to the battlefield since the night of June 11, 1982.

The idea for the yomp came from Cpl Spencer's son Simon, but he and his brother, Gareth, are no longer able to take part for family reasons.

The pair, who will be joined by Colour Sergeant Trevor Law, a Royal Marine serving with the Falkland Islands Defence Force, are now gearing up for the challenge, which starts on May 13.

They will be carrying equipment weighing about 20kg and raising money for the Royal Marines Charitable Trust Fund during the challenge.

They have had a royal seal of approval from the Duke of Edinburgh, who sent them a letter of support last week.

Mr Cole, 64, from Dorset, said he is taking part in the trip in memory of his two fallen comrades but that the most important thing for him is to support Mr MacPherson.

He recalled his last memory of Gordon MacPherson: "Gordon wasn't very big physically but he was very determined."

The men have already raised more than £18,000. To donate, please visit: www.virgin-moneygiving.com/yomp2012

Black buck vulcans on display

BRUNTINGTHORPE'S Cold War Jets will commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War with an open day at the Leicestershire UK airfield.

Bruntingthorpe's collection of aircraft, which were in action during the Cold War, will be on display at the event.

Aircrew who took part in the famous 'Operation Black Buck' missions will take part, including the Captain of the Vulcan, Martin Withers, who flew the first bombing mission to the Falkland Islands in May 1982 and Victor Captain Bob Tuxford.

One of the Victor aircrafts, which took part in these missions, will be carrying out a 'fast taxi' run as part of the show. She will be operated by the crew who flew her in the South Atlantic to support the 'Black Buck' missions.

The day will feature high-speed runs by the other resident aircraft including the Nimrod, which played an important role in the Falklands in 1982.

In memory of Sheffield

A MEMORIAL service for HMS Sheffield was held this week over the exact site where it sank on May 4, 1982 after being hit by an Argentine Exocet missile.

The Service was held on the Royal Fleet Auxillary (RFA) Ship Gold Rover, and was led by British Forces South Atlantic Islands Padre S Holland and Royal Navy Commander Rob Curry.

The service was a typically sombre affair, with the congregation looking out over a much calmer scene than that experienced by those involved all those years ago.

During the war HMS Sheffield was part of the British Task Force dispatched to the Falkland Islands and had just relieved her sister ship HMS Coventry, who at the time was suffering from minor technical problems with her radar. During radio chatter between the two ships HMS Sheffield suddenly stopped communicating, until an unidentified message was heard to say, "Sheffield is hit." The Flagship HMS Hermes quickly dispatched the escort ships Arrow and Yarmouth to investigate, and a helicopter was launched. Confusion reigned until Sheffield's Lynx helicopter unexpectedly landed aboard Hermes, confirming the disaster.

Sheffield had picked up the incoming missiles on her radar but the launch had not been detected. It was not until smoke was sighted that the ship confirmed incoming sea skimming missiles. Five seconds later, an Exocet impacted Sheffield amidships.

Ironically, the Exocet that hit Sheffield did not detonate but the missile severed the high pressure fire main on board, and the resultant fierce fires caused the damage.

Orders were issued to shore up the hole in Sheffield's starboard side and tow the ship to South Georgia, however, during a slow trip through high seas flooding throughout HMS Sheffield finally sent her to the bottom of the ocean.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 4th May 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at AUS1,170 making it 745/kg clean in Stirling, down 2 pence. A total of 42,540 bales came to auction this week with a clearance of 88%.

The estimate of the 2011/12 clip has been reduced to 345 million kgs, down from 350 million kgs, which would present unchanged production from last season. The figures have been altered to a lower volume despite expectations of higher sheep numbers and highlights disappointment over fleece weights.

The end of coring season over here is immanent with another record year for farms and numbers of bales now being cored. Full figures will be published shortly and it is so encouraging to see more and more coring being done here on the islands with farmers realising the value.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Dauntless familiar name down south

IN anticipation of the arrival in the South Atlantic of HMS Dauntless, local historian and author John Allan writes that her predecessor was posted to the Islands in the 1930s.

John explained: "Unfortunately during this time Leading Seaman Arthur Reginald Fairburn died age 27 on November 6, 1933. The photograph right shows the ship's company moving down Ross Road East to the Stanley cemetery where he is buried in grave K1047.

"Being only one year old at the time I obviously don't recall the sad occasion but Dauntless would have had a ship's complement of 550 to 600 officers and ratings."

Five ships and one Shore Establishment of the Royal Navy have borne the name HMS Dauntless.

The first was an 18-gun sloop launched at Hull, England in November 1804. In 1807 she ran aground during a battle in the Vistula River and was forced to surrender to the French.

A second was a 26-gun sloop launched in 1808 and sold for breaking in 1825, while another a 24-gun (from 1854, 33-gun) frigate was launched in 1847 and sold for breaking in 1885.

A Danae-class light cruiser launched in 1918 was also named Dauntless. She was used as a training vessel from 1943 before being sold for breaking in 1946. The name was also used for a WRNS Training Establishment at Burghfield, near Reading, Berkshire, from 1947 until 1981.

Currently sailing to the South Atlantic, HMS Dauntless is now a Type 45 destroyer launched on January 23, 2007 at the BAE Systems Govan shipyard in Glasgow, and commissioned in June 2010.

'Falklands' landing crafts reunited in Guernsey

BUILT for the Royal Navy in the late sixties Brecqhou Warrior and Normandy Trader pictured left in Guernsey were used in the Falklands War as landing craft to ferry soldiers and armoury from HMS Fearless and Intrepid.

Guernsey resident Mark Harrison, married to Falkland Islander Sandie, told Penguin News the two vessels can be seen again together on June 14 when a Falklands War 30th anniversary open day will be held on Brecqhou Warrior and will include a flight simulator made by the couple's son. This will allow visitors to "fly" over the Falklands with very good visual imaging of all the Islands said Mark, "just as I did with Bristows from 1983 to 1987 - you can nearly see Sandie's family house at 7 Philomel Hill where her sisters Myriam Booth and Nancy Jennings live."

Missing Link

LOCAL historian John Smith popped in to the Penguin News office this week with a picture taken in 1927 that even he had failed to explain what was taking place.

He said he had wondered if the line up in front of the old Senior School which had burned down (the old Beauchene shop site) had been the cast from a theatrical production adding that it was also interesting that the young ladies wore uniform.

If you can enlighten us as to what or who are involved in the picture call 22684 or email newsdesk@penguinnews.co.fk

Panthers win the 2012 Energise Shield but it's a new ball game

THE last game of the 2012 Energise Shield was played on Tuesday. With Panthers already crowned champions the game was used as an opportunity to test the new International Street and Ball Hockey Federation approved D-gel Pro hard ball, which will be replacing the puck used by the club before their international credition with the ISBHF.

Penguins and Panthers both had only a few minutes to practice with the ball before the game started and the game took on a new dimension. The increased manoeuvrability and speed that can be achieved with the ball instantly affected the pace of the game. It's more sensitive to hockey stick movement and players had to adjust quickly to a different and more agile game.

Panthers - Energise Shield winners

Penguins' Ricky Leyton was first to score, and followed his goal with another shortly after with a skilful assist from David Hewitt. David soon put Penguins three goals ahead minutes later. Duane March closed the gap for Panthers with a quick one and then two. As the game restarted Nick Francis took a shot from across the hall and drew the score level.

All players seemed to enjoy the fresh speed injected by the use of the ball and David weaved in another goal, but the score was soon evened out again by Duane Evans, ending the half at four goals each.

Penguins' Callum Middleton was first to score in the second half, demonstrating the ease of recovering the ball before shooting. Ricky claimed his hat-trick soon after but the two goal lead didn't last long as Duane March scored another for his hat-trick. Nick finished the scoring with an energetic run in the last five minutes. Panthers 6 - Penguins 6.

The second Hockey competition this year, the Cable and Wireless sponsored Russell Smith Memorial Trophy 2012, starts this Sunday.

Zoran tries out London's new Olympic Stadium

ISLANDER Zoran Zuvic took the opportunity to fly the Falklands flag at the new Olympic Stadium in London this week as he competed for the Oxford Brookes University Athletics Team for the British Universities & College Sport Outdoor Athletics Championships.

It was a special event this year as it took place at the brand new Olympic Stadium as part of the London Prepares Series, said Zoran. He represented his university in two field events, shot putt and javelin, both of which are new disciplines for him. "It was an experience that will last a lifetime, competing in front of 40,000 spectators on the same track where our GB athletes will be soon competing for the London 2012 Olympics," he told Penguin news.

BARN DANCE

Christ Church Cathedral are holding another of their popular Barn Dances on Friday 11th May in the Parish Hall from 7pm to 11pm.

This all-age event led by Derek Howatt and friends will feature the Falklands' favourite dance-floor numbers with lots of Scottish country dances and hopefully some line-dancing thrown in too.

Entrance costs £3 per adult and £1 per child. BYOB welcome, but hot & cold drinks and sweet & savoury snacks will also be on sale.

For more information please ring Lidda (21717) or Alison (22817).

SAPPER HILL MAST

The Falkland Islands Government wishes to advise that preparation work to remove the 72m tall mast on Sapper Hill will be commencing on site this coming weekend, 12th and 13th May. An exclusion zone to a radius of 150m will be marked out but not activated until nearer to the date the mast will be brought down. Once weather conditions are forecast to be suitable for the actual drop of the mast, the date will be notified directly to stakeholders and to the public via the media, also a notice will be placed on the gate leading to Sapper Hill.

The general public are reminded that there are concerns over the safety of the mast and are encouraged not to go too close to it whilst it remains in place and especially whilst removal work is being carried out.

Anyone requiring further details should contact Lynn Brownlee in the Secretariat on 28430 or e-mail: lbrownlee@sec.gov.fk

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

The Falkland Islands Company - Vacancies

The Falkland Islands Company Limited are looking for graduate trainees for new and exciting positions in retail management.

These are new positions for local applicants who have been educated in the Falkland Islands and who hold A level to degree level qualifications.

These new roles will involve training within the Company and learning about retail management within all retail parts of the business, including some work experience within the UK office and with leading UK retailers. The successful candidates would be expected to take up full management roles once trained.

We are looking for individuals who want to develop careers in retail and to play a key part in helping cultivate the future of the Falkland Islands Company.

Attractive salaries would be offered to the right applicants. For further information please contact Paul Lewis, Retail Director on 27660 or submit a CV and covering letter by email to pllewis@horizon.co.fk

Private Sector Training Grants 2012/2013

Applications are invited from private sector individuals and companies in Stanley and Camp for training grants for the 2012/2013 financial year. The grants cover up to 50% of the cost of overseas training or secondments, distance learning or local courses such as QCF Certificates and Diplomas. Consideration will also be given to applications to bring trainers from overseas to run courses locally from which a significant number of individuals or local companies will benefit.

Application forms are available from the Training and Development Manager, Training Centre. Please e-mail edavies.training@sec.gov.fk or phone 27133 for further details. Please submit applications by 10th June 2012 for consideration by the Vocational Board on 20th June.

For further information or an application please contact:

Manager tourism

THE new General Manager of Falkland Islands Tourism Tony Mason is scheduled to arrive in July. Originally from Atlanta, Georgia, USA, he has worked in the UK for around 10 years, confirmed Tourist Board Chair MLA Mike Summers. Mr Mason was most recently employed as managing director of a company involved in marketing tourism to niche destinations. He also has marketing experience in luxury travel, hotels and resorts, and the cruise industry. He has broad corporate strategy and business management experience. Further information will be released from FITB in the near future.

Forces exercise

BRITISH Forces in the Falklands will be conducting a number of low level training exercise over the period May 21 – 25. This will include blank firing of weapons and controlled explosions in and around Onion Ranges, San Carlos Bay and Teal Inlet. The public may see and hear this activity. Any activity will start much later than the San Carlos Memorial Service, also on May 21.

BRITISH celebrity chef Phil Vickery and Malvina House Hotel Restaurant chef Matt Clarke admire what Phil described as, "fantastic," Falklands lamb during his visit last week. An ambassador for Red Lion Foods, and former chef on ITV's This Morning programme, he was filmed cooking Falklands produce at a barbecue at the Jetty Centre on Saturday and provided breakfast for Falklands War veterans and their spouses at Liberty Lodge on Sunday morning. Phil met a host of Islanders and members of the British Forces during his flying visit. Full story on page 9. Picture Matt Clarke.

Eminent scholarship for Sam

ISLANDER Sam Cockwell has been awarded a scholarship aimed at future leaders and decision-makers whose famous alumni includes the Prime Minister of Antigua and Barbuda and former Prime Ministers of Columbia, Bulgaria and Poland.

This is the first time the prestigious Chevening Scholarship has been awarded to a Falkland Islander.

Sam Cockwell (27), who achieved an Environmental Science Bachelor's degree from the University of Manchester and is currently working as Projects Officer at the Department of Mineral Resources, learned on Tuesday that he had been awarded the scholarship which will fund his Masters in Petroleum Engineering at Imperial College in London. Sam's application was submitted and supported by Government House.

Sam commented: "I'm honoured to be the first person to achieve this scholarship for the Falkland Islands and I'm really looking forward to going back to university before embarking on a new career.

"Fundamental to my application was very strong support from Phyl Rendell and Stephen Luxton, the former and current directors of my department, as well as the overall support of friends, family and colleagues. I hope the Masters will put me in a strong position given the potential for growth of the oil industry in the Falkland Islands."

The scholarship was advertised locally and Sam said: "I was quite interested and after I'd spoken to Government House I decided to go through the process." This involved, "fairly standard," application forms and an interview at Government House.

He said questions generally involved the subject of leadership as well as the main issues facing the world today.

When asked the secret behind his successful application he said: "I think you'd have to ask Government House that, but I've been lucky here with plenty of opportunities to exert myself professionally and personally; but as with all things I suppose I was in the right place at the right time."

Sam who is a member of the Falkland Islands Defence Force the Fire and Rescue Service and a keen hockey player and surfer said his course will begin at the end of September.

After completing the Masters Degree he anticipates joining the Falklands private sector and hopes to return to the Mineral Resources Department in the longer term: "My passion is the Falklands and that's where I intend to settle in the not too distant future."

Acting Governor Ric Nye said he was delighted Sam had been selected for a scholarship:

"This is a highly-prestigious and truly global award, with nominations being submitted by British Embassies, High Commissions, etc. from all round the world.

Competition for places is extraordinarily high and Sam's success is very, very significant - he has done fantastically well to win a place in the scheme, which we see as an investment both in Sam personally but also in the future of the Falklands more widely."

Sam is the son of former Member of Legislative Assembly Richard Cockwell and artist Grizelda Cockwell.

The Chevening Scholarship is run by the Foreign & Commonwealth Office, and offers funding to outstanding graduates to study at one of the many British Universities that subscribe to the Chevening programme. The scheme was only recently extended to include Overseas Territories.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

AN old sixth form pal from many years past, recently enquired why I had neglected to pursue a career in art, she having recalled it as one of my favourite courses at that time. Unwilling to admit that an unromantic and practical side had nudged me away from such a financially insecure calling, I jokingly suggested, that for an artist of any kind to be truly inspired, at the very least they should have suffered an angst ridden, miserable upbringing, and at most, a life that had included some degree of poverty, abuse or discrimination.

After all, what's so interesting about pouring your emotions onto a canvas, or into a poem or piece of prose, if your greatest disappointments on a day to day basis involve an inability to consistently beat your iPhone app at Scrabble, or sticking an overly hot iron to your favourite work trousers. Presumably that sounds like an excuse for lack of motivation, but in all honesty, who would want to buy a piece of art that couldn't accurately be entitled anything more passionate than 'a bit grumpy this week' or 'furious I've run out of L'Oréal bronzer'?

Having established a shockingly shallow depth of personality it's probably timely to amble towards an actual point, that being, as a single person with an adequate salary and a grown up son who occasionally remembers he has a separate income to mine, life can hardly be described as bumpy. The danger of that, however, is to go on to smugly assume that a similarly largely angst-free day to day existence is the same for everyone else in this community.

The truth is, in financial terms it simply isn't. It is a source of wonder to me precisely how larger families on average Falklands salaries (not high as Robin Goodwin pointed out last week) and bearing in mind the inflated price of food, added to the usual fuel, rent or mortgages, electricity, gas and phone bills, not to mention child care, make it through the months here without acquiring a horrific amount of debt - or perhaps they don't?

In response to another unexpected budget surplus and in anticipation of soon to begin budget meetings there have been a number of thoughtful letters and an editorial by the Deputy Editor in the Penguin News on the subject of exactly where money should be spent, and after next week I hope we will be able to report that the government took into account those residents, who even in the safe environs of this small community, increasingly struggle financially to provide a secure and comfortable home-life. MLAs may observe that as a rather obvious statement, but unfortunately it's a common phenomenon that when your personal financial circumstances are relatively relaxed it can lead to an underestimation of the difficulties faced by others, and it is also a fact that those in a position to make important decisions are normally those who are marginally better off.

Micky's raptor man

ISLANDER Micky Reeves has been employed as the new Falklands Conservation Raptor Officer to run the project for the next three years.

In 2010/11 Sam Cockwell initially led a short pilot project to determine 'best practice and effective implementation to reduce conflicts with raptors' and after the project's completion an application for further funding was approved in March.

The three species to be studied will be turkey vulture, southern caracara (carancho) and striated caracara (Johnny rook). The results of the scientific data gained will be combined with the information on people's attitudes to produce a 'Plan of Action for Managing Conflicts between Raptors and Rural Livelihoods'. It will also result in a 'Species Action Plan for the Striated Caracara', one of the rarest birds of prey in the world.

According to a spokesperson for Falklands Conservation: "The end result will be a better understanding by everyone on the impact of raptors on rural livelihoods, together with an agreement on the way forward, both to manage the problems and conserve these important species."

The project is mainly funded by the Darwin Initiative, and partnered with many organisations:

namely Falklands Conservation, FIG Environmental Planning Department, Department of Agriculture, Rural Business Association, Royal Zoological Society of Scotland, Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, Hawk Mountain Sanctuary, Wildlife Conservation Society, Boise State University, and EDM International Ltd.

Anyone wishing for more information on the project is welcome to contact Micky at Falklands Conservation on tel 22247, email raptors@conservation.org.uk or call it to the office at 41 Jubilee Villas on Ross Road.

South Georgia shipping news

TWO longliners fished for toothfish at the beginning of April in the South Sandwich Islands Fishery.

Both vessels later moved up to join the South Georgia toothfish fishery which opened on April 16. Two further longliners were inspected and licensed on April 14 and 24. Toothfish catches at the beginning of the season were reported to be good.

The disabled cruise ship Planicus was at King Edward Point for most of the month.

Cruise ship Ushuaia and the tug Otway arrived to assist on April 18.

The BAS ship RRS James Clark Ross arrived at King Edward Point on April 20 for the end of season relief.

Sarah and Luke take their vows in Hong Kong

ISLANDERS Sarah Lam and Luke Clarke were married in a scenic setting in Hong Kong on Saturday May 5.

The couple took their vows at Cotton Tree Drive marriage registry. Many of Luke's family members had travelled to Hong Kong including his twin sister Leah, sister Sasha and mum Petula to join Sarah's family for the celebrations. His nieces Caitlin and Jordan Smith were bridesmaids.

After the wedding there was a lunch followed by a traditional Chinese style dinner at a Michelin star restaurant.

Arriving back in the Falklands yesterday with their one year old son Niko, a happy Sarah said, "we were basically married anyway, but now we are a proper family with a certificate to show for it."

False reporting costs Korean jigger £44,000

THE owners and master of a Korean jigger were fined a combined total of £44,000 in the Senior Magistrates Court on Monday.

The owners of the 21 Hae In and its master, Kim Whi Gon both pleaded guilty to eight charges of furnishing false catch reports over a two month period from March to May 2012.

This is the second Korean jigger to be fined this month for failing to comply with fishing laws.

Principal Crown Counsel, Ros Cheek told the court how the Master had deliberately sent incorrect catch figures via radio transmission to the Fisheries Department on a number of occasions.

She said that the explanation he had given in interview for doing this was because he didn't want to alert other vessels to the good stocks he had found by transmitting the true figures over the radio. The master had kept the true figures in his own personal log.

Miss Cheek told the Court that the Fisheries Department kept vital statistics relating to catches to ensure that the fishing stocks were properly managed and so would be sustained for the future. If incorrect figures were provided which showed diminishing catches this might lead to the early closure of the season and the requirement to refund part of fishing licence fees.

Pinsent Masons lawyer Keith Watson, who was representing both the Company and the Master said there had been co-operation with the authorities, that there was an early plea of guilty and that both the master and company had operated in Falkland Islands waters for some years without any previous infringement of the rules.

The Senior Magistrate, Carl Gumsley said it was clear the Master had made a deliberate decision to give false figures and that this had continued over a sustained period of time. He said that the Falkland Islands relied on their fishing industry and it was vital that figures provided were correct. He fined the company £5000 for each offence making a total of £40,000 and the master £500 for each offence culminating in a total of £4,000. The company were also ordered to pay £120 prosecution costs.

Budget session on Wednesday

THE Legislative Assembly will meet in the Court and Council Chamber on Wednesday at 9am when his Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood will deliver his address to the nation.

Assembly Members will then offer a motion of thanks to the Governor before the Acting Financial Secretary delivers the finance bill which allows for changes in allowances, benefits, charges and fees in the forthcoming year.

The Assembly will again meet on Friday at 2.15pm for the final stages of the appropriation and finance bills as well as to make motion for adjournment speeches. Members of the public should be seated ten minutes before the meetings begin.

Silver award for BFBS

BFBS's Sitrep has won a Silver Sony Radio Academy Award for the Best News and Current Affairs Programme.

Sitrep is BFBS's weekly in-depth defence and international affairs programme, presented by Kate Gerbeau, and broadcast to the Forces Community across the world, and on DAB Digital Radio in the UK.

The Sony Radio Academy Awards are the UK's most respected and coveted radio honours and judged by industry and media professionals. Sitrep Editor, Josella Waldron said: "The Sitrep team is delighted to receive this Silver Award. It's great to have this recognition from within the radio industry."

The Judges praised Sitrep for being: "Supremely well targeted at its audience, but equally enjoyable and entertaining for those who are not in that target group. The judges were especially impressed by how the reporters were not cowed by military hierarchy, holding them to account in a serious, direct and penetrating manner."

Sitrep was up against four other entries in the Best News and Current Affairs Programme category, with BBC Radio 5 live Drive taking the Gold Award. The winner was announced at an awards ceremony at London's Grosvenor House Hotel.

SSVC Chief Executive Nick Pollard welcomed the award saying the programme had consistently provided high quality and insightful coverage of the defence world.

New seatruck on the cards

EXECUTIVE Council has approved, subject to funding being available through the budget setting process, the replacement of the sea trucks used in conjunction with Concordia Bay.

The sea trucks are used when the ferry and coastal shipping vessel Concordia Bay visits outer islands and make accessing some of those islands easier.

Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher said Executive Council's decision would see the two existing sea trucks, which have been in service since the early 90's, replaced with a new, purpose built one which should come into service early in 2013.

The new sea truck will remove the restrictions currently in place, and will have a significantly increased payload of 4500kgs, meaning it will be able to transport land vehicles and small items of plant to islands which are currently inaccessible to the Concordia Bay.

Workboat Services manager Adam Cockwell said the company was glad that a decision had been made on the way forward to overcome the issue with the old seatrucks. "We look forward to being able to provide an enhanced service to those islands which are not suitable for the Concordia Bay to work directly ashore."

Politics scare oil company off

THE "geo-political situation" surrounding oil exploration in Falklands waters has caused the second-largest oil and gas exploration and production company in India to back out of a farm-in offer.

After having to abandon its oil and gas assets quest in Vietnam off the South China sea, the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) asked ONGC Videsh Limited (OVL) not to go ahead with its acquisition of hydrocarbon assets in Falklands' waters.

The advice came after OVL had sought clearance from the Foreign Ministry to make bids for two oil and gas blocks up for offer in the Falklands which had been termed as attractive assets.

The OVL had got a farm-in offer from Falkland Oil and Gas Limited (FOGL) through its advisor Stellar Energy for divestment of up to 35 per cent participating interest in two of its exploration acreages located in Falklands waters. OVL's technical team as well as Fugro Robertson Ltd (FRL), technical consultant engaged by OVL found the blocks attractive in terms of their large resources but also risky on account of being a frontier basin and the prevailing geo-political situation.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

A BUSY two weeks ahead with regular meetings and meetings with visiting journalists and a senior military visitor. Next week we have the normal monthly meetings in addition to the main annual budget session of the Legislative Assembly. I also attend a meeting of the group investigating future accommodation needs for the Education Department. We seem to have experienced a bit of a baby boom in recent years so that the last of three major extensions to the primary school is already only just coping with increasing numbers thanks to taking out the pre school class. The secondary school, which had its original plans cut back by a change of councillors after a general election, has, after over twenty years, also run out of useable space. In addition, some of the specialist areas no longer satisfy modern health and safety standards. Given the inaccuracy of past predictions of numbers and how quickly they have been overtaken by actual growth we need a crystal ball to arrive at a figure.

DEPARTMENTS across FIG have responded speedily and efficiently to the concerns expressed about the importation of new psychoactive substances and I hope we should have concrete progress to report shortly. We will, of course, have to work hard in future to remain a step ahead of those who would happily peddle untested substances to very young people.

FOLLOWING discussion with some of those tasked with administering the various training and development funds it is clear that there has been inadequate co-ordination and that there is no clear path for some training if it does not follow the normal route of further and higher education or come under the aegis of the Training Centre. One of this Assembly's early priorities was education and training combined with succession planning in FIG. While there have been notable successes and good work done, some are still being told there is no funding available in spite of a sizeable underspend. Where an application does not fit existing criteria I would like to see funds available, possibly through FIDC if the proposed training is relevant to the Falklands.

Four year sentence for 'sexual predator'

ON Friday the Senior Magistrate, Carl Gumsley sentenced Simon Gus Reid (25) to a total of four years and eight months imprisonment in respect of 19 offences, including meeting a child following sexual grooming, sexual activity with a child, and the possession and making of indecent images of children.

Mr Reid carried out the offences while he was between the ages of 18 and 24, said Mr Gumsley, adding that he would strike up friendships with the girls, which would include the exchange of large number of text messages between them, and would then take them "spinning" before he engaged in underage sexual activity with them at various locations.

In one case, he had kept indecent images of one of his victims, for six years.

Delivering the sentence Mr Gumsley said Mr Reid had been given a suspended sentence in 2006 for almost identical behaviour but had not heeded the warning.

"Quite simply you are a sexual predator – you seek out your victims, you groom them, you use them for your sexual needs and then when that relationship ends you move on to the next," he told Mr Reid.

He said that until the message got through to Mr Reid he would continue to pose a risk to young girls, a view, he added, that was shared by the psychiatrist and the probation officer who had provided reports to the Court.

"The law is there to protect children. The law will do just that," said Mr Gumsley.

High standard evidence brought case to Court says Insp McGill

POLICE Inspector Len McGill said the Reid case had resulted from a well planned and focused search of Mr Reid's premises and property after his arrest on suspicion of sexual grooming of a 13 year old girl.

Much of the evidence was obtained from items discovered and seized during the search including computers, telephones, SIM cards and data storage devices which were all examined in a laboratory overseas. Meticulous examination locally of text messages and social networking sites provided further compelling evidence, said Insp McGill adding that officers had to work methodically through vast quantities of images and data, including over 13,400 text messages.

"Evidence was obtained, collated, classified and presented to a high standard by my officers who identified four victims of Mr Reid. He was charged with offences against them all.

"The standard of evidence ensured that he pleaded guilty to a number of offences against each of them," Insp McGill told Penguin News.

Antarctic oil debate in Aberdeen

THE prospect of finding oil in Antarctica was discussed at an event in Aberdeen on Wednesday. Professor David Macdonald from the University of Aberdeen's School of Geosciences examined the fact and fiction surrounding claims that oil and gas reserves could exist in this area.

Professor Macdonald is an expert on polar geology, having worked for the British Antarctic Survey for 14 years and completed seven Antarctic expeditions. He also worked for the Cambridge Arctic Shelf Programme for seven years, including expeditions to Svalbard and Siberia.

Professor Macdonald said there was a vast amount of misinformation surrounding the prospect of oil and gas reserves being found in Antarctica.

"The possibility of exploration in this area first came to the fore up to 70 years ago and was given further precedence in the media spotlight during the Falklands war, when there was speculation around areas of the Antarctica which fell adjacent to the Falkland Islands.

"In truth, we actually still know very little about Antarctica and what could lie beneath the ice. What is happening here is what I call the Eldorado complex – the idea that unknown lands will be a treasure trove of resources.

"We are perhaps as humans, hard-wired to be optimistic and there is certainly a build up in public perception that there are vast oil resources hidden in this area of the world, but in actuality this location might be the least prospective continent due to its geology.

"What we know at the moment suggests that any oil and gas would either be under kilometres of ice, or in areas of the continental shelf that are constantly scoured by giant icebergs. The task of uncovering the resources would be mammoth and unlikely to be economically viable.

"At the moment there is a ban on searching beneath the Antarctic for oil and gas under the international Antarctic Treaty. I suggest this political protection is all very well, but a hard, sober and rational economic view should also dictate that oil exploration in this area is not a wise option."

Boarding fees on the rise?

THE Acting Director of Education has proposed a ten per cent increase of boarding fees for pupils at Stanley House Hostel at a recent meeting of the Education Board. The board however were keen to debate the idea with the Rural Business Association (RBA) and the Camp population before a mechanism for increase could be identified.

The current annual expenditure for the Hostel which provides a home from home for children normally resident outside of Stanley is £330,098.60 (excluding vehicles, fuel and maintenance) which equates to £68.68 per child per day however the rate charged for a child with Falklands residency is currently £2.04 per day.

On average there are 37 children in residence at Stanley House which includes full time and weekly boarders.

Education Department representative Lucille McMullen recently visited Falklands students in the UK to assess how they are settling in to college life.

Five out of eight students interviewed at Peter Symonds College in Winchester had no complaints, but there were 14 complaints from 18 interviews at Chichester College, reported Miss McMullen. Chichester College students were concerned of the focus on fried foods and high prices in the school canteen as well as poor accommodation. Symonds students had concerns about fatty canteen food, and one felt they could have been better prepared for the amount of independent work they would be required of them. Miss McMullen also visited boarding and administrative heads at the colleges and returned with useful advice on how to encourage better integration of first year Falkland students to the UK colleges.

Neil Hopkins, Principal of Peter Symonds College, and Chief Executive Vice Principal Sarah Stannard of Chichester College will both visit the Islands during the 30th Anniversary celebrations in June, when further discussions on any issues can take place.

On the Westley road to 2013

A LINK road to Westley Farm on West Falkland has been approved for next season.

At Monday's meeting of the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) Roads Engineer Simon Catton assured West Falkland representative Bill Pole-Evans that the road was included in the 2012/13 road programme.

East Falkland representative Dave Roberts also voiced concerns on behalf of livestock hauliers at the condition of the road at Sussex Mountain in wet conditions. Mr Catton asked if anyone had complaints or concerns about the road network that they should be directed to him, which could then be fed in through the road programme working group.

Road works are now concentrated on the Stanley to Mount Pleasant road with grading, capping and some spot capping taking place. Planned works for the season have been completed, said Mr Catton, with the exception of the Estancia culverts because of lack of time.

Delegation talk oil in Scotland

Falklands oil industry talk to Aberdeen business people

THE fiscal, legal, environmental and regulatory frame work in place in the Falklands relating to the oil industry was the focus of a week of presentations and site visits in Aberdeen and the Shetland Islands undertaken by a large delegation of the Falkland Islands Chamber of Commerce between May 8 and 12.

Presentations were given by MLA Sawle, Andy Morrison of Rockhopper and Roger Spink, President of the Chamber of Commerce.

FIG policy regarding private sector participation was also covered in more detail as well as Rockhopper development plans and their experience of operating in the Islands; an overview of the infrastructure and range of services available in the islands, and the capacity of the existing private sector to support the Oil & Gas Industry.

A total of 32 delegates covering a wide spectrum of Falklands business attended, with 26 of that number visiting Shetland. The delegation was one of the largest received by Aberdeen and Shetland for many years and attracted a lot of interest from companies within the UK Oil and Gas sector as well as Regional and National press. Included in the delegation were MLA Dick Sawle with portfolio for Trade and Industry, and Marc Boucher, General Manager of the Development Corporation.

A range of presentations relating to the impact of Oil and Gas on Aberdeen and Shetland were received by the group, as well as a number of site visits including Aberdeen and Lerwick harbour tours and a site visit to Sullom Voe.

The information gleaned from this will be presented to the Oil & Gas Working Group which will report to FIG with its findings and recommendations, said delegation member Hamish Wylie.

Following the presentations and buffet lunch delegates networked with Falklands delegates making valuable contacts from which business arrangements will develop.

Mr Wylie said: "There were a number of key messages received, and a priority will be to impart to the wider community a clearer vision of what the future could look like and how to manage it to the maximum benefit of the whole community."

Presentations were received from various speakers from Shetland Islands Council, Shetland Charitable Trust and Lerwick Port Authority. These were followed by presentations from MLA Dick Sawle, Roger Spink and Matthew Vincent of Byron Marine who presented in place of Rockhopper.

"The whole visit would not have been possible without the support our major sponsors: Byron McKay, FIDC, Pinsent Masons LLP, and Morrison (Falklands) Ltd," said Mr Wylie. Visit www.falklandislandschamberofcommerce.com for a copy of the programme.

Give us two minutes...

Vicky Chater

1. What is your most prized possession? My wedding ring. But then again, I really like my leather jacket...
2. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? Don't eat yellow snow - especially if it's disguised as a "lemon snow cone" by a dodgy man in a market stall
3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? David Attenborough - he's getting on a bit now and I reckon I could trick him into thinking I'd discovered a new species by taping a third wing onto an albatross
4. What is your most embarrassing moment? I once walked around at a friend's birthday party for about 10 minutes until someone told me my skirt was tucked into my pants. 10 whole minutes!
5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? A cute fuzzy animal cuddling business for the cuddling of cute fuzzy animals
6. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? The amount of times I walk right into door frames, when I know exactly where they are. I expect to need funny bone transplants in 5-7 years' time
7. What is your nickname and why? Trixie Belle, because my family apparently hate me. Alternatively there's Treacle (my favourite), Vixen, and... Barry. Yes, Barry
8. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? I plan on travelling everywhere (I'm hoping that stem cell research will really kick in when I'm older so I live long enough to do this)
9. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I can make a wookie-type noise. It's a real skill
10. What would your 'Mastermind' specialist subject be? Kittens! I love kittens...

Despite 'Barry's' busy schedule to keep track of everything cute, geeky, cuddly and/or furry she also finds time to paint beautiful water colours, work as court assistant and last year eloped to America to marry Bill Chater in Las Vegas.

Barn dancers trip the light fantastic

CHRIST Church Cathedral held another very successful Barn Dance in the Parish Hall on Friday evening.

More than 70 members of the community gathered from 7 to 11pm to put their dancing shoes to good use.

The dancing was led by Derek Howatt, who talked and walked the participants through a number of Scottish country 'set' dances such as the Riverside and the Oxo Reel, which were much enjoyed by children and the young at heart.

There were also enough waltzes, sambas and quicksteps to keep the older dancers happy.

Marlene Newman led two sessions of line-dancing, which particularly appealed to residents of Stanley House.

The kitchen staff were kept busy all night selling a variety of refreshments, occasionally escaping to join in a Palais Glide or Virginia Reel.

The organisers would like to say thank you to Derek and Marlene, and to everyone who turned up to make it such a good night out.

School's 'big books' mark Falklands 30

TWO super sized books created to mark the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War are the product of an Infant Junior School and Camp Education project.

Working with Falklands Conservation's Protected Areas Strategy, the Falklands Museum, the Fleet Air Arm Museum in Yeovil, Standard Chartered Bank, Ilchester Primary School and Hazlegrove School in Somerset, the young students spent a week earlier this year working exclusively on the project and the books will be central to the Falklands 30 exhibitions in both museums.

Islanders will be able to view the books and a wealth of other materials during an open day after Liberation Day this year.

Last Friday the finished books were delivered to the school by Mike Cole who is in the Falkland Islands to undertake a yomp from Port San Carlos to Stanley in aid of the Royal Marines Charitable Trust. He was involved with the project and spent time with the children of Hazlegrove School.

One book is entitled 'All about where I live' and is an introduction to the Islands for readers overseas. The second is called 'The Falklands Conflict' and describes how different areas or people were affected by the Falklands War.

Journalist visit recalls mother's history

AMONG the countless press visitors that have already visited the Falklands during the early months of 2012, freelance journalist Carolyn Waudby has a closer relationship with the Islands than most.

Carolyn is the daughter of Mary 'Kate' Atkinson who taught at Stanley Infant School from 1960-61. While in Stanley she met Bryan Waudby who worked as a forecaster in the Met Office between 1958-61.

They married at Mary's flat on Ross Road (where the Harbour View Gift Shop now stands) before a reception at the then Ship Hotel. Their first home was Lupin Cottage on Fitzroy Road. They left the Islands when Mary was expecting Carolyn.

Mary, who has just made the news in her home town of Wellingborough, Northants, by gaining a degree aged 78, recollects: "I called the Falklands the Island of many coloured houses. The red and green roofs and whitewash against the rocky coastline and peat bogs made a great impression."

Before landing in Stanley she had been advised to take reading glasses as houses were lit with oil lamps and riding clothes in case she had to ride into Camp.

"I bought a pair of jodhpurs from an Army Surplus store and was given a book on how to ride a horse by a family friend. But then I met a girl who had worked in the Falklands and she said, what a load of rubbish. What you need is cocktail dresses as there's a very active social life."

After returning from the Falklands to live in South Yorkshire, Mary said she missed the sea.

"When I was out in the Falklands, I missed the trees, but when I was in Bawtry I was about as far away from the sea as I could get."

Carolyn, 50, is now a lecturer in Journalism at Sheffield Hallam University and a freelance writer living in Sheffield, Yorkshire.

She grew up surrounded by Falklands objects such as whales' teeth given to her parents by Norwegian whalers before whaling became illegal, model penguins, sheepskins and maps of the Islands. Her parents would give talks to schools, and stage family slide show evenings relating their

Her father died in 1980 and her mother was unable to make the trip back to the Falklands with her for health reasons.

Carolyn said: "I'd always wanted to visit the Falklands and decided a couple of years ago to finally realise the dream. It was coincidence that my trip coincided with the 30th anniversary of the Conflict. Despite being interested in that, I knew there was so much more to life here."

Carolyn stayed in Stanley, Darwin and on Bleaker Island. She also visited Stanley Infant School and met up with Hulda Stewart (nee Watts), who was 16 and a trainee teacher working alongside her mother.

Carolyn said she was taken to Gypsy Cove and the Lighthouse and enjoyed a lunch at the Malvi-na House Hotel and some Stanley history with Nancy Jennings.

She added: "People have been incredibly kind and generous."

"The story of the Islands and its people is a fascinating one and it has been a privilege to hear it from the mouths of Falkland Islanders themselves."

"There are so many aspects that are special about the Islands. Yes, the weather is extreme - I experienced hail, torrential rain, gales and dazzling sunshine on Bleaker Island - but the skylines are so beautiful they moved me to tears."

"And there were a few firsts for me - seeing penguins, dolphins, and an elephant seal and sea lion in their natural habitat. My photographs are stunning, but the scenes are imprinted on my mind's eye and they will never go away."

Frustrating carrier debate

I'VE been watching the news from the UK with frustration regarding the asinine ideas about our future carrier replacements ie the Queen Elizabeth and the Prince of Wales.

The argument going on about the aircraft to be used on the carriers (F35C and F35B) has resulted in a huge waste of money.

The F35C is a conventional take-off aircraft using catapults for take-off and arrestor gear for landing.

The F35B has a short take off and vertical landing, similar to the Harrier which was used before.

The arguments about the aircraft has made the project two years delayed, costing £250 million for redesign. The original design was to use the F35B, but ministers decided to change the design to the F35C giving spurious reasons but ignoring the cost, which anyone with a modicum of sense could see would be huge.

Reasons for the F35C were: greater range, greater lift capacity and compatibility with US and French Navy's.

Converting to a catapult ie American electric linear induction system adds strain to the airframe which results in it having to be strengthened adding an extra 500 pounds which alone means a reduction in range armament capability as well as round the clock training of air operations.

With a ski-ramp system the aircraft doesn't have to have the extremely expensive catapult system described above and more importantly the aircraft pulls alongside the carrier and lands the same as a Harrier. This leads to much safer landings and hence less training.

The whole point of this letter is to show that a conventional aircraft such as the F35C can actually take-off from a ski-ramp, the same as the F35B. How anybody in the MoD has not understood this beggars belief.

Obviously a conventional aircraft needs to land with arrestor gear, so it still needs the fuselage strengthened and there is still danger involved in landing, especially at night with only 14 inches of square view to see the landing equipment.

Russia with the Admiral Kuznetsov, India with the Vikramaditya and China with the Shi Lang all have MIG29s taking off from a ski-ramp, which proves that conventional aircraft can use this system. If they can do it, why can't the Royal Navy using the F35B? In other words why did they spend so much money looking to redesign the carriers to use the F35C in the first place?

Heroes at home

REF Penguin News dated April 27, 2012.

Further to Patrick Watts' letter regarding the disproportionate amount of space afforded to the Argentine veteran Reuben Gleriano (PN April 20), I fully agree with Patrick's views on that article and support his suggestion that maybe a little more focus, praise and public recognition should be afforded to both Trudi McPhee and all the other exceptionally courageous Falkland Islanders that rallied together in and around the Estancia Farm location, providing whatever support and assistance they could regardless of the very obvious risks to themselves throughout that particular period of the war.

I first met Trudi McPhee (and the late Terry Peck) on Mt Longdon during the visit of HRH Prince Charles to the Falkland Islands in 1999. It was obvious from that very first meeting that Trudi is, and remains to this day, a very formidable and patriotic lady who was, and remains unafraid to pin her colours to the mast when her personal freedom and that of her fellow countrymen is threatened. However, very few of us are ever required to demonstrate our patriotism, bravery and commitment in the same way that Trudi and all the other Falkland Islanders did during that period. So why is it, that in this year of the 30th anniversary, none of these individuals have, as far as I am aware, been afforded greater public recognition for their efforts and personal contribution during a genuinely turbulent period of their country's history.

Furthermore, am I alone in wondering why all those who willingly volunteered, and in doing so placed themselves in very real danger on a daily basis, have never been awarded the South Atlantic Medal or any other form of notable public recognition? As someone that originates from very close to the Armed Forces National Arboretum in Litchfield, I note that Trudi's personal contribution has recently been recognised and recorded in the UK. How disappointing it is then, that both Trudi and all the others appear to have been forgotten or ignored in their own country. I would therefore like to take this opportunity to publicly ask why these individuals (volunteers) have not received either the South Atlantic medal or any other award from their own country for their truly outstanding contribution. Maybe someone from within the corridors of power could enlighten me?

Unfortunately, it remains a fact that there were some servicemen that never ventured any further south than the Ascension Islands, but were still awarded the South Atlantic Medal (less the rosette) for their contribution, unlike Trudi and the others who more than did their bit in what can only be described as very challenging conditions for their country.

Whilst I am acutely aware this subject has been discussed, debated and decided upon in the corridors of power (UK Government, MoD, MLAs et al) many times before in the past, maybe now is the time to resurrect this matter, reconsider past judgements and publicly demonstrate the appropriate level of appreciation and gratitude to all these individuals referred to in Patrick's letter.

If however, those that occupy the corridors of power feel this particular group of individuals do not qualify, albeit belatedly, for the South Atlantic Medal or any other form of reward, it would be a sad reflection upon their judgement, and a missed opportunity to say a very public thank you to these very courageous, determined and modest home grown heroes who knowingly and willingly put their lives at risk for their country in 1982.

I note that BFBS recently reported on ex-servicemen who upon leaving the Armed Forces and working for private security firms, for their own personal financial gain I might add, are being awarded a medal for working in Afghanistan? Finally, at a time when the Argentine government appears to be having it all their own way in the publicity arena (despite the obvious recent own goal!) what better way to respond to Mrs CdK than to very publicly honour the Falkland Islands' very own Band of Brothers? It's never too late...

Medical matters: how the system works

Michael Poole
KEMH Manager

WE are all aware that due to the limited medical facilities we are able to offer in the Islands, there is often a need for patients to be referred overseas for diagnosis and treatment.

This 'medical treatment overseas' (MTO) policy and process is without doubt one of the most questioned and challenging functions of the hospital. However, it is also one of the most widely praised.

This brief series of articles attempts to clarify how the system works and to answer some of the most commonly asked questions. This first article covers the process up until the point where you are transferred overseas.

A referral for treatment overseas begins with your GP. They will review you and if they feel there is a need for further investigation or treatment overseas then they will, with your permission, discuss your case with their colleagues in their weekly MTO meeting.

Your case will be discussed and different options for your care reviewed, with the Chief Medical Officer making the final decision on the best course of action.

The care of the patient comes first in these discussions and financial considerations are then discussed and the most cost-effective course of action is then selected that meets the clinical need of the patient.

This may result in your care continuing to be managed within the Islands. However, on occasion it may result in a patient being referred overseas, generally to Chile or to the UK. When this occurs your GP will contact you to inform you of this.

The decision to send a patient to Chile or to the UK will weigh all of the following factors (in no particular order):

- Clinical needs
- Cost
- Physical ability of the patient (e.g. can they cope with a long flight?)
- The wishes of the patient

Once the decision has been taken to send a patient overseas the admin team and, if going to the UK, the government office in London then get involved. Unless you are due to go on holiday anyway, they will organise the relevant appointments, book flights, accommodation and transfers.

This practical side often involves FIC and ITT, two key partners to KEMH that do an excellent job, sometimes above and beyond what could be reasonably expected of them.

Referrals to Chile are on a private, paid basis. For those going to the UK, whilst a reciprocal health agreement does exist with the UK, Falkland Island patients are still at the mercy of NHS waiting lists and appointment processes.

This can mean that patients may often have to wait some time for appointments to be confirmed. KEMH try their best to minimise this through the large number of informal contacts it maintains and the goodwill a lot of NHS staff show the Islands, however there is understandably a proper limit to this.

Next week's article shall detail the flights, accommodation and financial support patients can expect to receive and the rules surrounding these issues.

Fishing fun in a 'messy' church

Ethan and Eileen go fishing

A BUSY 33 adults and 26 children attended the second ever 'Messy' Church held in the Falklands on Sunday at the Town Hall, including friends from St. Cuthberts at Mount Pleasant.

Alison Inglis said: "Like the previous Easter session, it was organised by members of the three Stanley churches."

"The theme was 'Jesus: Fisher of Men', and craft activities included making fishing boats, fish mobiles and translucent window fish all to take home."

A large collage in a variety of materials was produced to illustrate the bible story. Adults and children alike had fun painting their feet to produce a colourful foot-fish wall display.

Both large pieces of art will be put on display in the Seamen's Mission.

For the younger children there were also puzzle sheets, colouring pictures, a playdough table, and biscuits to decorate.

The first hour of crafts was followed by a time of celebration, during which Kathy Biles retold the story of how Jesus first preached on the shores of Lake Galilee before setting sail with James, John, Andrew and Simon Peter.

As the men's nets immediately filled with miraculous numbers of fish, Jesus explained to his first disciples how he would make them 'fishers of men' rather than just fishermen.

The story was accompanied by several rousing songs, with lots of energetic actions.

After prayers and grace, a team of helpers served supper in the refreshment room; appropriately it was fish pie, kedgeree, and fishfingers for the youngsters. Friends and new acquaintances lingered together over tea and cake to chat and enjoy a relaxed end to a busy afternoon. Several adults commented how 'chilled-out' they felt after being creative and letting loose their inner child.

Everyone is welcome to the next Messy Church session (Jesus the Good Shepherd) on Sunday 10th June from 4-6pm in Stanley Town Hall.

Photographs from the last two events are available on Facebook at Messy Church Stanley.

Carol Phillips claims a snuggle at Liberty Lodge. Preparing breakfast for resident and visiting Falklands war veterans and wives

Fantastic Falklands says celeb chef Phil

FALKLANDS produce is, "fantastic," and the people are, "very warm, kind and generous," according to celebrity chef Phil Vickery, a former star of ITV's This Morning programme and married to television presenter Fern Britton.

Phil flew in last week in his new capacity as an ambassador for Red Lion Foods at the invitation of the company's Managing Director, Andrew Gidden, who accompanied him.

Andrew, who first visited late last year, aims to put Falklands food, "on the map," so that, "people in Britain can see how great the food is."

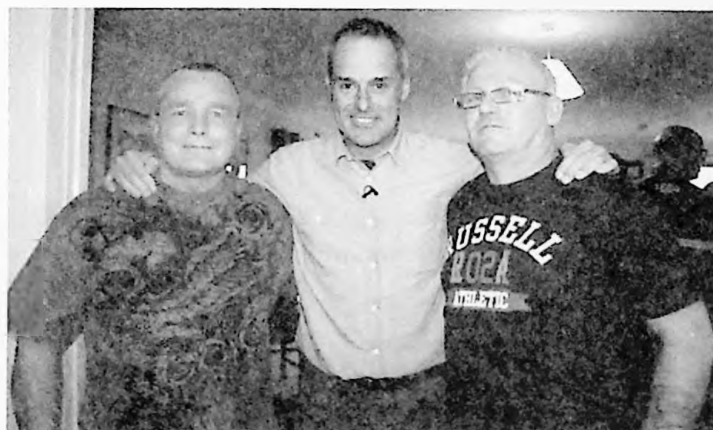

Red Lion Foods is dedicated to helping UK Forces charities and last year the company funded the Falklands veterans' lodge, Liberty Lodge, to a total of £30,000.

Phil explained: "We did a deal where we would come and make some films for my website and possibly go into broadcast and he (Andrew) would bring his foods down. I didn't realise what I was letting myself in for really because all you ever hear about the Falklands is politics."

It's a small world, said Phil: "two or three of my friends who are cooks came down on the QE2 (during the Falklands war) and my next door neighbour Kevin is friends with a guy I have just bumped into down here."

"Once I knew I was coming I started doing a bit of research about the Islands, so going to see Fitzroy and Goose Green was really moving - all you ever see is grainy pictures of the war so it's been great to come here and see what it's about. Gary (Clement) drove us around and all the names just started to come back to me; it all slotted into place, so I've bought a book about the Falklands to learn a bit more."

Phil who provided a fish barbe-

cue to passers-by at the Jetty Centre on Saturday has enormously enjoyed the Falklands produce: "We've had some cracking food including a penguin egg; if I'm being honest with you I quite liked the white but the yolk was a bit fishy; I didn't mind it though, although Matt (Malvina House Hotel Chef Matt Clarke) wasn't too keen. I've really loved the toothfish and kingclip which has been fantastic, and the flavour and colour of the lamb is just outstanding."

He was unprepared for the size of the Islands: "I hadn't realised how vast the Falklands was. When we drove from San Carlos to Hope Cottage Farm I didn't see any cars and then from there on the way back to Stanley we only saw two cars; amazing. I also didn't realise how beautiful it was, although it's bloody cold and that wind..."

Being a keen fisherman he would, "like to come back and do some fishing. We had dinner at Sheila's (Stewart) last night and she had a 12lb trout; you'd never eat that in England, you'd frame it and put it on your wall."

Apart from checking out the North Camp and filming with Matt at Malvina House Hotel, Phil has seen the penguins at Bluff Cove ("my daughter said Dad you have to get me a picture of a penguin.") cooked breakfast at Liberty Lodge, posed for hundreds of photos with star-struck Stanley residents and ended his visit with a cooking demonstration for chefs and military wives at Mount Pleasant Airport.

He told Penguin News: "When they asked me to come I just thought I have to go. I can't miss that opportunity. I'd like to bring Fern down although she'd grumble about the long flight, but she'd like it here; she's fit and cycles all over the place, she'd enjoy cycling here."

Apart from the food, what did Phil like best, "I love that everyone waves to you here."

A new friend for the Falklands, Andrew Gidden is just as keen to return again: "When I was here last time I was blown away by all the people that I met, they were absolutely amazing and I think they are the real story of the Falkland Islands, and I was also blown away by the quality of the food. The seafood you've got here is amazing."

Andrew explained that after his last visit he did a bit more digging on the subject and was really helped by Sheila Stewart and the Fisheries. He said he was astounded by the level of excellence that is exerted on the fishery here. "In UK I think this is an untold story; so I got in touch with Phil Vickery and said 'be an ambassador for Red Lion Foods and come with me to the Falklands to cook up some of the food and let's see if we can get this on ITV's This Morning during liberation week'."

He said the bigger plan is to get Falkland Islands' produce on sale in British supermarkets:

"My dream is to see Falkland Islands' lamb with the Union Jack flag behind the outline of the islands on sale in Tesco, Co-op, Waitrose, Sainsburys, all year round so British people will know how great your produce is."

His primary aim, however, is that a contribution will go to military charities, "so Red Lion Foods has pledged to spend £30,000 a year on the running costs of Liberty Lodge and if we can do more than that then brilliant, and if we can do more than that with sales of Falklands produce then even better again."

The next step, said Andrew, is to obtain samples of the seafood from Vigo and, "get it out to supermarket buyers. If we persuaded Waitrose, for example, to take the squid as one of their brands they would have to send an auditor down here."

"There's not much point them spending that kind of cash if they are not going to buy the product, so we have to get the sample and prices to them first."

He's confident, however, that, they will be able to do some good things, "not just as a one-off but as a year after year sustainable business that is mutually beneficial."

THE gala ball and awards organiser Sarah Clement of Sealed PR said she was really pleased with how the inaugural event went.

Next year's ball will be earlier in the year to coincide with the end of the season, she said.

"Also, we will be having open votes for all categories with a voting box in the Jetty Visitors Centre throughout the season."

"A big thank you to everyone who helped make it a successful night."

"Thanks to all the sponsors, the Pushers for the live music which got everyone on the floor and Derek Howatt for taking care of the entertainment and keeping the party going."

"We hope to see everyone at next year's ball."

Pink cheeks for a worthy cause

RUN Together Falklands raised over £3,000 this year with events happening in Stanley, Fox Bay and Hill Cove in support of either Cancer Research UK or the Falklands own Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

The damp and blustery weather on Sunday morning didn't deter 175 Stanley residents from getting their pink on for the five kilometre run/walk/pushchair race, and cheeks were soon suitably rosy for the cause. There were plenty of speedy young runners in town: Ciaran Nye was the first male back, eight-year-old Hamish McKee was the first junior back with a very good effort that put him fifth overall and Lynsey Sutcliffe was the first female. £1,981.66 was raised with more still to come said organiser Barbara Bates.

It was a lovely sunny day on West Falkland as Fox Bay walkers tied on their trainers raising £605 with a great individual effort from Dave Dunford who raised £185 of their total. Four Hill Cove residents also took part with Jen Harvey taking it quite a few steps further completing a 10 kilometre walk across Hill Cove Kitchen. "We've raised over £50 but there's still more to come from sponsors" said Susie Hansen.

Also raising money on Sunday morning was the Archery club which donated £56 giving a total so far of £2,692.66 to be donated to Cancer Research UK, the UK's leading cancer charity.

A raffle was also held in the Sports hall raising £352 for the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust. Barbara would like to thank everyone who turned up on the day and those who helped out or donated money and prizes, and if anyone still has any sponsorship money could they please contact her on 21034.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band
156.800.....Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF
In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 11th May 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at AU$1,155 making it 722/kg clean in Stirling, down 23 pence. Another small offering of wool this week. A total of 33,168 bales, which also had a clearance of 85%

The overall downward turn in the global economy has been blamed for the poor prices seen this week. The Eurozone crises was a focus this week with elections taking place. The 25 and 26 micron ranges held their prices better than other micron, more losses were seen in the coarser micron which has not been the case in the last few weeks with the finer micron losing most value.

Predictions are very uncertain for the coming weeks with some saying the prices will maintain based on good demand and others saying they will be controlled by global economic shifts and the $US exchange rate. There is an overall sluggish market in textiles and clothing currently, and wool is now expensive in comparison to other fibres.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Andi launches Flying Full Circle in Scotland

ANDI Neate played to a packed house at the Jazz Bar in Edinburgh on April 26, to launch her Folklands' inspired album Flying Full Circle.

She said it was a successful launch, and joked that it was not as much fun as the Malvinas House Hotel one she had enjoyed in February.

Album sales were good, Andi reported and there were a couple of support acts in also.

"I thought attendance would be low due to adverse weather but all was good on the night."

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

THERE are advantages to modern communications after all. My sister-in-law called to say someone on 'Chay- Bay' was giving away, to any good home, a ceramic hob. Yippee!

We are once again cooking on electric as it were, and I'm so delighted with this hob that when the new one gets here, that one will be the one to go to the attic, hopefully we will never need to use it.

The potatoes are finally all out of the ground, and manure spread all over the plot, bliss!

I have sorted all the seed potatoes as well, and they are all sitting in trays in the shed awaiting next season. I am feeling rather smug about it all which probably means some disaster will be just around the corner, or I will discover the potatoes have rotted or have been eaten, think positive eh?

This damp muggy weather is awfully depressing, the ground is rather damp and, if not sheltered from the wind, it's quite cold out really; maybe I just feel it more and ought to re-classify myself as just half-hardy?

Just as long as I can call myself a perennial for a while longer. Either way, it is very frustrating to have to wait till after nine in the morning to have enough light to work outside. As it can only get darker yet, I feel sad for all outdoor workers who have to hang around wasting time.

My little mates have been helping me both collecting and spreading manure. They don't mind, in fact rather enjoy, having a legitimate reason to get dirty and smelly.

One of the plots in the veg garden had become so impoverished that all that grew (but grew very well) were clumps of grass. It is much too late for my trusty weed killer spray, I would just be throwing money away. Instead, I took the organic, and in this case lazy, route and grabbed any bit of cardboard I could get my hands on, laid it flat on the plot and topped it off with a thick 'coat' of manure.

The darkness and lack of oxygen provided by the cardboard will stop the weeds in their tracks, the winter wet and the manure will keep the cardboard from flying off and by the spring it will all have disintegrated ready to be dug in with the manure. I believe it is called a win-win situation?

I've just finished clearing the middle raised bed; the new beet-roots were rather disappointing and so I will go back to good old 'Boltardy' beetroots.

I will plant some more of these seeds in one of the tunnels this week, also transplant some lettuce

Ginge's band of little helpers get busy with winter preparations in there and of course, left over cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower plants.

Both tunnels are now empty, dug over and fed, and so have planted some early potato seeds in one, some shallots saved from last year and some Japanese onion sets bought this year will also be put in, inside, this week.

The garlic, outside, is already about three inches tall.

Spreading manure on cardboard will kill the weeds

Winter warmers for vulnerable young plants

All the tomatoes are finished; the last few kilos of them are spread around windowsills and fridge, depending on the state of ripeness. Most will be used raw but many will make it into sauces to freeze or just be frozen as a tomato pulp. In the area the tomatoes have vacated are pots full of various rose cuttings, it looks a bit like a miniature forest in there, and my dreams of a rose garden might just come to fruition if even half of them take!

The latest cuttings in arrived from Pebble Island (thank you). Some of the earlier ones have rooted well and are growing on in their own pots, the rest will, hopefully, all root over winter and early spring.

My thanks to all who have contributed, please let me know which plants or cuttings/seeds you would like to swap for them.

Little by little the various shrubs are being pruned, either by letting Bill loose with a hedge trimmer or by trimming with secateurs myself.

Many shrubs are best trimmed in spring but the bone hardy ones, that is the Loniceras (honeysuckles- both shrubs and climbers) Sambucus (elders), outdoor fuchsias, Philadelphus (mock orange) and not forgetting willows and poplars of course.

In fact anything that has put on a lot of growth over the season is usually quite safe to trim at this time. As most of the growth has hardened almost any part of the shrub cut into cuttings a foot or so long will root if put in a trench leaving two to four inches on show, in a reasonably sheltered spot.

While in the mood for pruning, (it's very hard to stop once you get going) I trimmed the red and white currants and the gooseberry plants.

These are very simple to do, as all you are trying to achieve is a fairly open bush, it pays to remove completely any branches close to the ground, not only might they root, they are also a nuisance when it is time to pick the fruit.

For the rest just aim for an 'open' bush, removing any crossing or damaged branches and cutting any that are too long down to an upward facing shoot. Job done.

But, it is cold out there today and so I'm going to tidy up and trim the regal pelargoniums in the front porch. I'm very fond of them, to me they look like small azaleas and have more character than the zonal ones, which, although they seem to flower for a longer period, are not to my liking at all.

Archery shoot for life

WEATHER conditions were poor last Sunday but failed to stop 12 members of the Archery Club wearing an item of pink (some declined to prove it which maybe just as well) and meeting up for a field shoot. This was something completely new for most members and possibly the Falklands.

What is a field shoot, most of us were asking ourselves along with a quick sanity check given how cold and wet it was. "It's for charity," could be heard muttered under competitors' breaths from time to time.

A field shoot involves walking around a course of targets set out between 8 and 50m with some slightly higher and some a lot lower than the shooter.

This event had 12 animal targets of various size and types, artificial hunting! Each archer had three arrows to shoot per target. If you missed with your first arrow, you moved to the next shooting line closer to the target and shot again. If unlucky, you moved to the third and last line to shoot. Moving closer did not always make it easier. The further away you were from the target when you hit it, the more points you scored, but once you hit it, you did not shoot again at the same target, but moved onto the next.

The group split in to three smaller groups and the competition began. It proved to be much harder than expected for some with others using their rifle shooting experience to great effect and scoring well. Strong cross wind at some targets and cold hands made it even more difficult, but not a single arrow was lost which is a credit to all.

After round one of the course and a well earned hot drink and food had been partaken, the keener shooters and maybe the less sane did it all again.

Many thanks to Steph, Cherie and John for once again providing the excellent refreshments. Ladies - 1st Jo Lazo 84, 2nd Kathryn McGeachie 80, 3rd Steff Thain and Cherie Clifford 56. Mens - 1st Justin McPhee 132, 2nd Mark Lewis 124, 3rd John Clifford 116. Juniors - 1st James Tyrrell 80, 2nd Michaela Clifford 44, 3rd Tamsin McLeod 40.

Entry money and donations of £56 will be donated to Run Together Cancer and Awareness Fund. Thanks to Mark for his suggestion of having a field shoot. Steph for the cakes, Cherie and John for the hot drinks and rolls and Mike, Justin, Paul, Jo, Jav and James as well for the hard work and time in setting out the course and putting it away. Next outside event for the club, (possibly) a Frostbite Mid Winter's shoot.

Hard ball adjustment

Pool player Aturo Tellez was let out of the box for Flyers for the first time this season and was promptly sent back after committing a two minute penalty in the opening moments of the game.

It was both Flyers' and Coyotes' first game with the ball and the confusion was showing with the ball conceding either way. Aturo redeemed himself with a goal for Flyers and with just enough time to restart he scored another within 15 seconds. Flyers were adjusting to the game and it was Stacey Budd who flicked in another for the team in the opening minutes of the second half. A hyperactive ball belted blood from Bono McKay's hand and another encouraged fellow Coyote Caris Stevens to receive a two minute penalty for high sticking.

Flyer Nick Rendell had been bombarding Coyotes' goalie Marcus Morrison with shots the whole game and finally got one past him with a shot from across the hall that Marcus accidentally hit backwards into the goal. Final score Flyers 4, Coyotes 0, a shut-out for Flyers' goalie Clayton March.

Aggressive play from the start followed when Panthers met Hurricanes and Lucy O'Sullivan slammed in a shot 19 seconds into play.

Hurricanes were defending well, so well Luis Quinto lost the top of his stick, but Panthers' Nick Francis was on the attack and finally got a shot past goalie Stuey Duncan.

Grant Budd and Gareth Goodwin both incurred two minute penalties for high sticking and unfortunately a wry shot from Grant caught Boy Miranda inside the substitute box and put him out of action but Hurricanes' numbers were soon bolstered with the arrival of Dan Biggs and an extra stick for Luis.

The second half started slightly calmer with Dan providing the opening goal followed quickly by Luis, the pair working well as a Hurricane team. But Ian France soon evened things out with two goals for Panthers. Duane Evans saw an opportunity to curve in another Panthers' goal and caught Stuey out of his goal box minutes later to push the lead again. Final score Panthers 5, Hurricanes 3.

Import of highs now illegal

AS from today the import of psychoactive substances (known as legal highs) into the Falklands is banned and will be seized by Customs officers.

In response to growing concerns about the increasing amounts of unidentifiable substances being brought into the Falklands packaged as 'legal highs' Executive Council this week approved an Order that prohibits the import of such substances.

Information from the RFIP, Customs, Health & Education on these substances indicated that they pose a significant risk to the health of individuals using them and that they were being made available to young people in the community.

These substances are designed to mimic the effects of illegal drugs. They are made from assorted herbs, chemicals or a mixture of compounds and have not undergone any research or testing as to their effect on humans. Taking into account all the information and concerns Executive Council agreed that the import of these substances should be prohibited.

From today Customs Officers are able to seize any substances imported that they reasonably believe to be a psychoactive substance. There is a right of appeal available and if the person importing the substances can show that it is not a psychoactive substance then the goods will be returned to them. If there is no appeal or the appeal fails the substances can be destroyed.

"The message of the Order is clear; the importation of legal highs is now banned," said a Gilbert House spokesperson.

Earlier this month the hospital reported at least four admissions who admitted legal high use, and a "dozen or more," suspicious visits to A&E by youngsters between the age of 15 and mid 20s which the doctor was sure was the result of drug use.

Governor Haywood addresses the nation

OPENING the budget session of the Legislative Assembly on Wednesday His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood said that despite increasingly desperate attempts from Argentina to deter potential oil investors, there was significant ongoing interest from major international companies in farming into offshore opportunities in the Falklands.

"We look forward to future exploration successes and are also extremely grateful for the unequivocal support from the UK Government for the right of the Falkland Islands Government to licence offshore exploration," he said.

The Government was working with the private sector to define policies that would encourage and maximise opportunities for local businesses to work with the oil industry, he said, adding: "The prospect of oil provides a real opportunity to boost the economic prosperity of the Islands." However, the future of the Islands was by no means dependent on oil. Government recognised the need to develop other economic opportunities and would continue to, "invest, improve and diversify our economy in furtherance of continued financial self-sufficiency," Governor Haywood stressed.

Turning to farming he said there was increased optimism in the industry with higher wool and meat prices which was stimulating investment on farms and the returns to farmers from meat production had provided encouragement to farmers to continue the development of the meat side of their businesses.

Renewed emphasis on the Rural Development Strategy, which was developed to facilitate economic growth and prosperity for Camp, should also encourage more people to live and work in Camp, said Governor Haywood. "Implementation of the Action Plan, incorporating a potential Rural Enterprise Zone will be pursued enthusiastically in the coming months and the Government has included significant funding in the budget for next year to allow the priorities in the action plan to be pursued," he assured Camp residents.

A key thrust of the Tourism Strategy was to increase the number of land-based tourists, said

Governor Haywood. "To achieve the aims of the Strategy, the necessary infrastructure, quality tourism product and appropriate transport links need to be in place. Progression of the Waterfront Masterplan, redevelopment of the public jetty and the relocation of the Museum will be vigorously pursued in support of the strategic ambitions. The potential for additional airlink capacity will also continue to be pursued," he added.

Turning to the local economy, Governor Haywood said that in contrast to many other parts of the world, the Falklands economy was booming. This he said was partly because of additional Government revenues from the oil industry but it was also the result of an excellent year for the fishing industry. "Illex squid returned in force, resulting in the highest catches for some years and the current season also looks promising. Whilst the Islands are not immune to the world economy, the Government has substantial reserves which are invested wisely and prudently," he assured.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THANKFULLY I opted to listen to Monday's public meeting on the radio, as there was a united gasp of horror in our household at the idea a sealed or Tarmac surface on the MPA Road would require such a high level of maintenance as not to be feasible.

Has anyone ever seen work being carried out on the Fitzroy Ridge stretch of Tarmac? I don't think so, because it was put down properly in the first place.

The truth is, a huge pot of public funds has been squandered on half-assed attempts to black top the road (and tear it up again), and finding alternative surfaces on the pretext of limited funds and a shortage of labour.

A single speculation at this stage has surely got to be preferable to the continued drain on funds for a second rate product which is an embarrassment to the country.

Former road engineer Bob Hancox often said the only thing which prevented the road being topped to a high standard was a lack of funds and political will.

It would seem the funds are now available but the will still needs to be rallied.

The lamest excuse of all for not sealing the road is that there would be more accidents. Perhaps we should inform the rest of the world of this remarkable discovery, obviously based on years of research, so they can dig up their motorways and replace them with the much 'safer' surface of tillite, clay and crushed rock.

The caution applied to building up reserves is appreciated, but for several years the taxpayer has accepted the funds were not available and I have even fought the Government's corner with rattled (literally) visitors to the Islands who expressed their horror at the roads. But, at the same time it appeared as though there was a bottomless pit of money when there was a favoured project and that political will kicked in.

Other countries are used as models for most changes brought to the Islands, but we seem unable to imitate a road building technique used successfully elsewhere for more than a century.

I wonder if the funds will be found to fly the 30th Anniversary visiting dignitaries in to Stanley from MPA, to save the humiliation of the journey along the road? It would certainly take someone with a thicker skin than mine to regale them with stories of how we have progressed in the last three decades as they bounce, splash and skid their way to town. That road is nothing to be proud of, and it's every visitor's first impression.

Governor's address

The past year had seen the achievement of several major Government objectives and notable amongst these have been the ban on the use of mobile phones while driving; the referendum on the single constituency; the census; the establishment of additional independent legal advice via 'Falkland Islands Legal Services'; the formulation of a revised and updated legal aid scheme; the establishment of the South Atlantic Research Institute and the facilitation of Human Rights training culminating in our first National Action Plan.

But, said Governor Haywood, the Government's policy priorities for the forthcoming financial year would result in an ambitious legislative programme.

Concluding his speech the Governor said Falkland Islanders are resilient and resourceful.

"They are used to standing up for themselves and they are steadfast in their resolve. For nearly two hundred years they have been meeting challenges effectively and they are practical and inventive in finding solutions to those challenges.

"The Falkland Islands has a modern society with modern aims, expectations and ambitions. The community has high standards and high moral obligations. It deserves a modern, efficient and effective Government to work with. There are some serious challenges ahead, as there are in many parts of the world. However, the Government will continue to work, to provide practical, imaginative and sometimes bold solutions in order that first class services can continue to be provided. This approach will enable the Islands to continue to have the bright future which they deserve."

Minister visit for June

MINISTER of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Jeremy Browne is scheduled to attend the Liberation Day ceremony on June 14.

Mr Browne said: "I hope the Argentines see the ceremony as what it is: that is an acknowledgement of the valour and sacrifice of the British forces and of the Islanders in the liberation of the Falkland Islands 30 years ago, and also a wider commemoration to the sacrifice that the conflict meant for so many families, British, Argentine and Islanders."

Gibraltar government minister Joe Bossano will also travel to the Islands for the commemorations. He will arrive shortly after attending the UN decolonisation seminar scheduled to take place in Quito, Ecuador.

Submarine is 'speculation'

RECENT news that a nuclear powered, although not nuclear armed, submarine, HMS Talent, has been deployed to the South Atlantic has been described as, "pure speculation," by the Ministry of Defence.

British Forces South Atlantic Media Operations in the Falklands also noted: "The MOD does not discuss the operational deployment of submarines."

Royal Navy Commander Mark Southorn is also reported to have said: "We can't make any comments on regards our military operations, though we can confirm that news about the sending of a submarine are media speculations as no journalist has discussed the topic with any member of the Defence Ministry."

Mercopress reported that in Montevideo Uruguay, Deputy-Defence Minister Jorge Menéndez announced that Uruguay, "will not welcome ships of that nature," following a report that HMS Talent will arrive in the Falklands on June 14.

Pinkies up for the Ball

THIRTEEN May Ball first-timers gathered for tea with HE The Governor Nigel Haywood on Wednesday. Rebeka Henry, Heather McLaren, Bethan Callaghan, Jo-Ellen Bone, Meghan Law, Kalon Jaffray, Hayden Mitchell, Declan Bonner, Bronwen Ford, Gareth McGhie, Bethan Parker, Tessa Davies-Berntsen, Emilia Amey-McNab and their Form Tutors Ally Ford and Byron Bowden-Graham shared tea, soft drinks and a fine spread of confectionary with His Excellency as he heard what preparations the students have made for tonight's May Ball. "Most dances are waltzes and two-steps" said Bethan Parker. Voted the most popular to learn was the aptly named "woo-hoo dance" also known as the Country Waltz.

UK trip for two FICS students

OVER half-term two Community School students (FICS) Vikki Williams and Tonisha Courtney, will accompany their teacher, Emma Brook, on a trip to the United Kingdom.

The students have been invited to attend an exhibition at The Fleet Air Arm Museum to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Falklands War. The exhibition is focussing on Falklands people and the impacts of the war. Contributions for this exhibition have been made by students at FICS and the students attending the exhibition will be taking further examples of work with them.

To select the lucky students, the names of seven pupils who had produced outstanding work for the exhibition were put into a hat and two names were drawn out. The runners up were: Shannon Alazia, Martine Gordon, Kayleigh Anderson, Tamsin McLeod and Echo Goodwin.

The students will visit the SS Great Britain, Pangbourne Memorial Chapel and Sexey's School. During the visit to Sexey's School they will give a presentation to their fellow students. Sexey's have been involved in the project as one of their former students was killed while serving on HMS Coventry in 1982 and the school has been looking into the role of the media in the 1982 war.

Tonisha told Penguin News: "I am very excited about the trip and pleased to have been selected, but I am a little nervous about the presentation."

Head Teacher David Tongue said, "It is an excellent opportunity for our students to show off their hard work in an arena that will be viewed by hundreds of thousands of people."

Opportunity to debate tax rejected by Assembly

THE Legislative Assembly rejected an opportunity at the Budget Session on Wednesday to publicly debate the issue of taxation thresholds and Medical Services Tax.

Member of Legislative Assembly Barry Elshy proposed: "The house believes that the electorate would welcome the opportunity of hearing the Legislative Assembly debate the reasons for the agreeing or disagreeing with the proposal of returning income tax thresholds to £14,000 and reducing or abolishing medical services tax."

He added that while most of the budget proposals enjoyed the support of the majority of Members, this proposal did not fall in that category.

MLA Elshy commented that when the tax threshold was originally lowered from £14,000 to £12,000, "all tax payers paid more tax but more importantly those earning between £12,000 and £14,000 found themselves paying tax for the first time."

He explained that since the year 2000 the rise in the cost of living had outstripped government pay and, "presumably the private sector," by 18 per cent, "so we are 18 per cent worse off than we were 12 years ago."

"Combine this with the reduction of tax thresholds and the introduction of MST and you can see we are even worse off but the lowest paid seem to be hit the hardest."

He said work by the Acting Financial Secretary showed those tax bands had fallen, "perhaps 40% behind inflation over the last eight years alone and tax thresholds of £12,000 in 2004 would be the equivalent of about £17,000 now."

MLA Elshy said any pay rise introduced to government employees in this budget session would be nowhere near the 18 per cent needed to bring people back in line with 12 years ago.

MLA Roger Edwards did not support the motion and urged his colleagues not to. He commented: "Taxation is only part of the overall budget and I do not believe that in this House we should stand and debate and admit to how we voted on every single item."

The motion was also rejected by MLA Halford who stated she had no intention of presupposing the outcome of the budget committee process.

MLA Mike Summers supported the motion saying, "no opportunity should be taken to forgo debate in public if the public would benefit from hearing that debate."

He added: "I'm not sure it is entirely fair to the electorate to try and hide behind a cloak of secrecy on issues."

He said he was a supporter of raising thresholds in tax, "and equally a supporter of doing something with MST to benefit the worse off."

MLA Gavin Short did not support the motion although took the opportunity to say "My instinct is towards raising tax thresholds."

MLA Hansen also supported the motion but said he would go to Select Committee with an open mind.

MLA Cheek abstained from voting on the motion.

MLA Elshy summed up by explaining he had not asked for his colleagues opinions on taxation he simply wished that they might have the opportunity to publicly debate the issue, "which I think is what every good democracy would do."

Buying advice

THE Falkland Islands Government is "buying in" independent advice on how to handle extra income from oil, "if and when we get it," MLA Jan Cheek stated in her Motion of thanks speech at the Legislative Assembly budget session on Wednesday. She added: "We welcome the investment and commitment of companies involved in exploration and looking forward to developments," adding, "we do not have a timeline for next and subsequent stages but we are about to buy in independent advice to ensure that we get it right."

Court news

AN assault charge was dropped against Mount Pleasant man Ricardo Williams (19) in court on Friday. Mr Williams had entered a not guilty plea before the decision was accepted by Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley.

Stanley man Claudio Ross (31) was fined a total of £945 and had his licence endorsed on Friday after admitting to two charges of permitting a driver to use his car when it was not licensed or taxed. The Senior Magistrate said the seriousness of the case should not be ignored: "If yourself or someone in your employment had an accident who would pay? Everyone but you I'd suspect." He said the, "deliberate failure," had the, "potential to destroy lives and leave society to pick up the pieces." The Senior Magistrate added that insurance was relatively cheap considering, "the state of the roads."

Jubilee party

A WINTER beach party celebrating the lighting of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee beacons will take place on June 4. There will be music, food and a bar and the party begins at 6pm finishing at midnight. Entrance fee is only £1

No surfacing but capping trials continue

COMPLETE surfacing of the Mount Pleasant Road would cost around £3.4million it was stated at the public meeting Monday, May 22.

Surfacing versus continued capping of the road was the subject of a lively discussion when Marilyn Grimmer suggested it should be surfaced, "a little bit at a time."

Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Mike Summers commented that such an approach was not as simple as it sounded because of high equipment, mobilisation and demobilisation costs.

He said the Director of Public Works had looked at the concept and if it had been considered affordable and reasonable it would have been done.

Mount Pleasant Road

Businessman Lewis Clifton also commented that the state of the road was costing a great deal to the private sector as a result of wear and tear to transport.

Director of Public Works in response to a question regarding routine grading of the road, (bringing back in of material which has migrated outwards) said: "There are significant sections of the MPA road which need re-capping as the capping material reduces in thickness over time and unless the replacement rate is high enough to renew material at the same rate as it is lost then it will inevitably reach a stage in some areas where it is not possible to grade the remaining depth of capping meaningfully and all that can be done is a combination of adding relatively small amounts to the worst areas - called 'spot capping' and bringing such material as has migrated out to the sides back in where this is possible"

He said the capping of the MPA road, and indeed the surfacing of the road had been recently reconsidered by MLAs and it had been decided to continue with the capping programme, which may be at an enhanced level, depending upon the outcome of the budget process this week.

Mr Keenleyside noted currently 'ecotrax' and 'Ottaseal' trials were examples, "of seeking to find better ways, but it first has to be established how effective they are before larger scale trials can be considered."

A question of roads priorities at public meeting

A NORTH camp farmer expressed concerns at the public meeting on Monday, that public money had been spent on what he viewed as unnecessary realigning of a boundary pasalibre, as opposed to more vital capping roads.

Mr Mitchell commented in a written question that the Wall Mountain to Estancia road served many farms in the north camp and, "many of those farms are trying to get animals to the abattoir and suffering costly maintenance to their stock trailers. This stretch of road must also see the largest number of tourists/visitors during the summer."

Chair of the meeting Ian Hansen presented a response from the Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside where he noted with regard to the pasalibre in question, "it was dangerous to traverse a grid on a bend due to loss of grip on the steel and the alignment and configuration of this grid across the road we felt increased the risk of this happening"

He also explained the grid was on a tight bend causing difficulties for articulated vehicles and the road widening was required anyway to accommodate the new grid even if placed in the same position as the existing one.

Mr Keenleyside added, "In order to avoid having to close the road completely during the works, it was going to be necessary to construct sufficient width for the new grid to be constructed adjacent to existing one, which would mean sufficient road length also needing to be formed at the ends of the new grid to achieve a sensible transition to the new grid."

Mr Keenleyside said: "Because of the location of the existing grid and the alignment of the road it was determined to be simpler and better to place the grid in a short separate section of road and improve the alignment at the same time."

Survey planned

SYNERGY Information Systems Ltd and Sealed PR will conduct a telephone 'confidence and satisfaction' survey on behalf of the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) and the Customs and Immigration Service beginning on Monday May 28. Results of the survey will provide information on public perceptions of the two services, identify any service delivery improvements that might be made, and allow targeting of resources at areas of concern identified by members of the community. It is intended to survey a large proportion of the population, spread evenly throughout as wide a cross section as possible.

The survey will take about nine minutes to complete and will take the form of a series of questions asked by the caller. All the information obtained will be completely anonymous and kept strictly confidential. The staff involved in this survey are all required to sign a confidentiality agreement. The final analytical report will be presented to the Director of Emergency Services by June 30, 2012.

This survey is an excellent opportunity for the community to provide feedback to two key services in the Falkland Islands Inspector Len McGill (RFIP) told Penguin News.

Mammogram

THE Falkland Islands Health Service is, "looking at the efficacy of mammography screening, what could be used in its place and the whole process of screening for breast cancer," it was noted in a statement from the King Edward Memorial Hospital at the public meeting on Monday. Similar work is also presently being undertaken in Europe, and the UK is awaiting the results due later this year. It was also anticipated that the Chief Medical Officer, who arrives in post on June 4, 2012, would be in a position to clinically evaluate the pros and cons of offering the mammography screening process again and that he would make public his decision. The statement was made in response to a question on the subject from a member of the public. The statement also listed the pros and cons of mammography.

Hall face lift

THE Stanley Town Hall is scheduled to have a 'face lift' this year.

It was noted by the Chair at the public meeting on Monday: "We have funding to replace the windows and once this is done redecorate the building. The windows are ordered and on their way and we should see the building getting a good face lift before the end of the calendar year."

New logo for Stanley Sports

MOLLY Jaffray (10) has designed a new logo for the Stanley Sports Association's centenary year and will present a rosette to the Champion Jockey at this year's centenary meeting.

The SSA's committee is already under starters orders with plans for a bigger and better than ever race meeting over the Christmas holiday.

The SSA's race meeting has been a family tradition since 1908 and the 2012 meeting will be the 100th meeting organised by the Association.

In celebration of the occasion, the Infant and Junior School students were invited by the SSA to design a new logo for use on t-shirts and other memorabilia.

Creative Molly of Year 5 who was presented with a copy of her stitched logo at a special assembly last week said she enjoyed drawing and had researched different shapes as well as horse riding on the internet to obtain inspiration for her design.

The SSA are having a special shirt with her name on it made for Molly and she will also be invited to present the rosette to the Champion Jockey at the second day of the meeting.

Head teacher Tom Hill said the children really enjoyed taking part in the project. "It's great for the school to be involved in the development of such an important local organisation as Stanley Sports," he said.

Year 11 shares the love with Miss Ford

AT Year 11's leaving assembly the pupils received some sound advice from teaching assistant Ali Ford who has been with them through thick and thin since they started at the Community School. "Stay on the right side of the law, do an honest days work for an honest days pay, and finally never use do -it-yourself wax strips," Miss Ford told the students as they prepare for life outside of school.

Head of the School Council Dani Curtis thanked the staff for all their support. "We all moaned and groaned about how we want to leave school, but now it's all gone too fast.

"Miss Ford you were always the teacher we came to", she said adding, "I'll never forget that sex education class." The whole class joined together in saying, "We love you Miss Ford," a sentiment obviously returned as a few tears were shed by students and teacher.

Mount Pleasant men fined in Court

SAC John Purvis of Mount Pleasant was fined £750 in the Magistrates Court on Tuesday after he admitted being incapable through drunkenness and assaulting a police officer.

The Court heard that Mr Purvis was found on May 5, by Police on Davis Street swaying and incapable of standing. An officer approached Mr Purvis to aid him home which was met with abusive language and an attempt to run away. Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said Mr Purvis was cautioned, arrested and taken back to Stanley Police Station where he became aggressive, abusive, threatened staff and rubbed his nasal excrement on a police officer.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said the incident was, "pathetic idiocy," and ordered Mr Purvis to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Rhys Stevenson was banned from driving for 18 months and fined £650 after he admitted being unfit to drive from the influence of alcohol on April 22. A roadside breath test gave a reading of 95 mg per 100 ml of breath, however, the Camic breathalyser at the Police Station failed to work which resulted in the unfit to drive charge.

Mr Stevenson's license was also endorsed and he was ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Medical matters: practical and financial support

CONTINUING from the lengthy article regarding medical treatment overseas (MTO) kindly published last week, this week details the practical and financial support that the existing MTO policy allows KEMH to offer patients.

For clarity I have split this article into 4 sections, covering Chile, UK, UK Holiday and Chile Holiday referrals. Clearly it is difficult to cover all possible eventualities in an article such as this, but if anyone has any queries please do not hesitate to contact KEMH.

The table right attempts to summarise the general financial support offered to patients. It should be noted that this support is only offered to patients that have been referred by KEMH, those that make their own arrangements without consulting KEMH will not be funded.

Understandably the existing MTO policy is not able to cover all eventualities. In these infrequent cases where the policy does not specifically cover something, the Director, MTO Clerk and CMO will usually make a judgement as to what is reasonable and then try to ensure any principle established is applied consistently in the future. KEMH looks at pa-

Whilst retaining the necessary degree of flexibility, work is currently underway on writing a more prescriptive MTO policy and it is hoped that Executive Council will have reviewed this before the end of the year.

Next week's article shall discuss the process expected of patients that are returning from a referral overseas.

Plastic posture

I WAS delighted to hear of the request to the International Red Cross from the next of kin of the Argentines buried at Darwin, to have the bodies exhumed and identified. No doubt this would be carried out in Argentina.

Presumably after identification the bodies would be reburied in cemeteries in Argentina where the next of kin would have easy access to the graves.

The Darwin cemetery could be dismantled and there would be no need for any more visits by next of kin or Argentine veterans.

No more of those very vocal Argentine veterans strolling around our streets which many people, especially local 1982 veterans, find very disquietening. Sometimes I think we don't count anymore.

But don't bet on it happening.

The Argentinians were given the opportunity to have the bodies repatriated soon after the war, probably within a year or two after the surrender.

The reply went pretty much like this: "The bodies of our fallen will remain in their Islands acting as sentinels until we recover our Islands."

Do you think old plastic face will change that posture?

Top tour guide

MAY I take this opportunity to thank everyone who cast their votes for me during the recent Tourist Board (FITB) Awards.

I am very honoured and proud to be recognized as the 'Tour Guide of the Year' and I was most disappointed not to be present in the Town Hall on the night of the awards ceremony. However, I had been asked some time previously to represent the Falklands at a three day conference at the University of Kent, where I was required to make a presentation about the role of the radio on the night of April 2, 1982 and during the following 74 days.

I wish to thank my trusted 'Lieutenant' Owen Betts for accepting the Award on my behalf.

While the 'Tour Guide of the Year' is an individual Award, I feel that it also recognizes the efforts made by my excellent team of driver/guides that I employ during the tourist season. Our aim is always to provide as much information about the Falklands, as possible, to our clients.

With reference to Major Davidson's letter in last week's Penguin News, I wish to add my total support to his proposal that all those civilians who were involved in assisting the British Forces in 1982, in terms of vehicle support, should be awarded the South Atlantic Medal and I trust that the local SAMA Committee will take this up as a matter of urgency and approach the appropriate body in Britain with their recommendations.

These drivers were actively involved in the War, and many came under fire, and their bravery and commitment deserves recognition.

Patrick J Watts

Your questions answered

Q NOW that the public has been informed that the review of the review of the review of the structure of government has been completed it would be interesting to know: Did the cost part of the cost and benefit analysis which must have formed part of this latest review include all the costs associated with the upgrading of the salaries of the corporate management team and all the costs of the redundancies of senior staff including the pension fund top-ups?

Chief Executive Keith Padgett provided the following responses

A The purpose of my latest report was simply to allow Members to consider the recommendations of the 'Review of the 2008 Review' Report produced by Irene Lucas. It did not contain any cost benefit analysis since it was not another 'review'.

Q IT is assumed that the value of the benefits will exceed the costs over time but how will these benefits manifest themselves, as it's not particularly clear to the man or woman on the street, and over what time scale?

A It must be said that the benefits intended to accrue from the original 2008 Review were largely intangible. The priority was to improve the efficiency of the Corporate management Team by reducing the number of direct reports to the Chief Executive and provide more strategic support for Members. It was about implementing a change culture; one which challenged long held views of how jobs should be done. However, Members were clear that the restructure should be cost neutral and the original Review report identified that financial savings of £200,000 per annum were anticipated from year four onwards. In practice, there have been many other staff changes within FIG in the last 4 years apart from those that came out of the 2008 review. It is therefore not surprising that the overall impact is not clearly identifiable. Ultimately any benefits will come from doing what we do better. That will be difficult to quantify in financial terms but I hope that the man or woman on the street will begin to see examples of those improvements.

Falklands flag meets Olympic flame

WHILE the Falklands are still a long way from taking part in the Olympics, Islanders living in the UK are making sure those involved in the build up to the London 2012 games are getting a glimpse of the Falklands flag at every opportunity. This week Annie Gisby and daughter in law Jane Chater along with sons Ben and Nick took to the verge with the Falklands and Union flags to cheer on the Olympic torch as it passed their home in Cornwall.

Former FIGAS pilot Tom Chater was behind the camera to capture the special family moment.

Cheque out Standard Chartered Bank's colourful commemoration

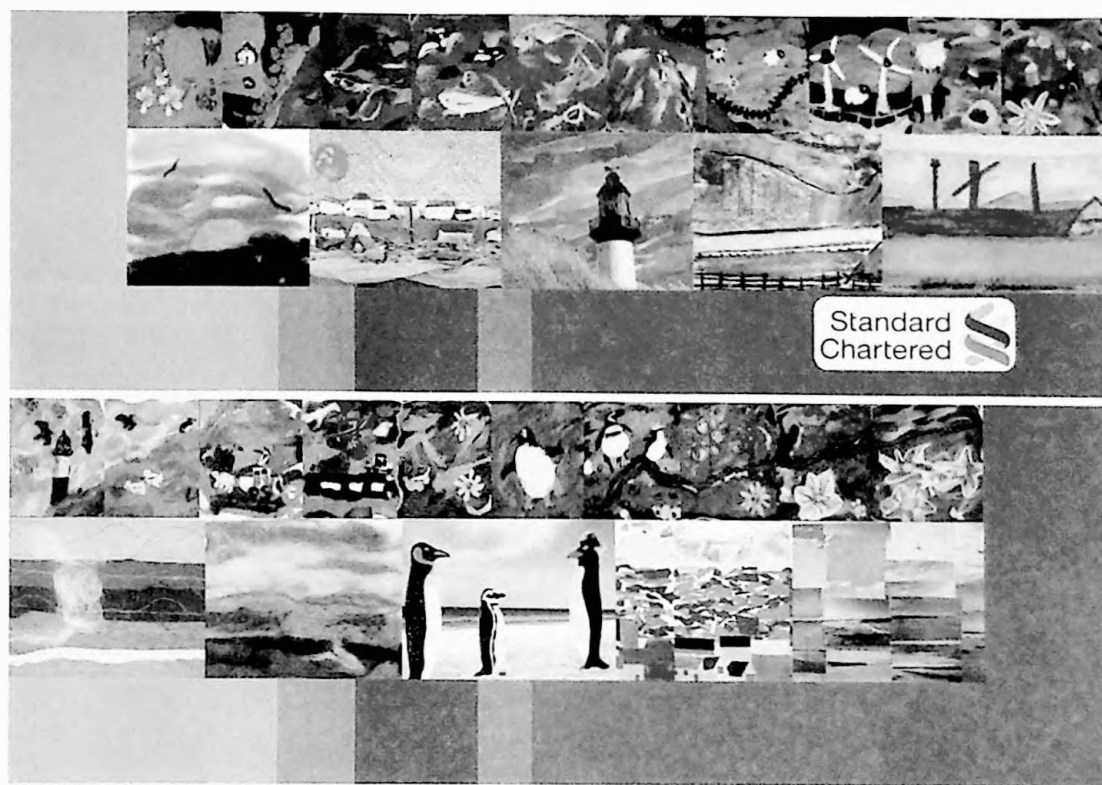

A FALKLANDS 30 commemorative cheque book displaying artwork by Infant Junior School and Camp Education is to be launched by Standard Chartered Bank on June 1.

Chief Executive Officer Binoy Caria told Penguin News the bank staff came up with the idea collectively, "and as a result of our close relationship with the school we became aware of an art project underway; we thought it would be fantastic to come together and take that opportunity."

He and Deputy CEO Barbara Keenlyside explained the school project (in conjunction with Falklands Conservation) was entitled 'What we love about where we live' and was part of the work undertaken by the children during their Falklands 30 week.

Visiting for the Standard Chartered Bank marathon in March, CEO for Europe Richard Holmes and CEO for Jersey Richard Ingle went to the school to view the artwork and chose those pieces to be included in the cheque book.

"The work is taken from the entire age range of the children," said Mr Caria adding that it would include ten cheques and people would be able to make a donation when requesting the cheque books. The resulting funds will be divided between

The front and back of the stunning commemorative cheque book

Falklands Conservation and the SCB chosen charity Seeing is believing. Donations will be a minimum of £2 but with the opportunity to give more. There will be a print run of 1,500 cheque books but if "they are a great success," said Mr Caria, more will be printed. "We are keen to see the response from the community."

Each cheque displays a washed version of an artwork piece shown in full colour on the front and includes a quote from the bank's Diversity and Inclusion Programme.

Special badge for bedtime Beavers

A cake for Akela: A bedtime story from Mrs Lee; Liam Williams and Kevin Hills make their promise

A DOZEN eager Beavers met at the Scout Hut for their very first 'colony sleep-over' on Friday night.

Accompanied by leaders Jan Miller, Karen Lee, Cynthia Williams and Tim Miller the boys were kept busy all evening with party games, craft activities, a skittles competition and making sandwiches for supper.

Mrs Miller said: "The surprise highlight for me was that Beaver Connor Betts had made a birthday cake especially for my birthday, and then another fantastic cake made by Susan Knipe was produced, so I felt very spoilt, especially when they all sang Happy Birthday twice.

At bedtime the Beavers listened to a Horrid Henry story read by Mrs Lee and tucked into their midnight feasts.

The following morning after cereals and a cooked breakfast, an investiture was held for Liam Williams and Kevin Hills to make their promise and become full members of the Beaver Scouts.

All the Beavers were then presented with a special Beaver sleep over badge before being collected by their parents.

Akela Mrs Miller said, "We would like to thank the Beavers for being so well behaved and making it such a fun event for everyone."

FIC Darts Tournament, Town Hall May 19, 2012

Special recognition for Julie's hard work

TOOTY Ford showed off some top talent holding off 82 competitors to triumph in the Falkland Islands Company Ltd darts tournament, while Maggie Goss took the ladies prize ahead of 36 enthusiastic rivals. Another Falklands champ Colin Smith claimed second place in the men's tournament with Lenny Ford and Martyn Gilson-Clarke joint third.

Cathy Jacobsen Jnr proved her worth in second place in the ladies game, never a disgrace against veteran champ Maggie. Experienced league players Lisa Jaffray and Jane Clement took joint third.

Lynda Buckland, who assisted in organising a very efficiently run tournament said: "Stanley Darts Club would like to thank the FIC Ltd for sponsoring the event and Paul Lewis for presenting the prizes, we'd would also like to say a special thank you to Colin Smith and his crew for helping get the boards ready and set up for the night, and all those that entered."

Other exciting moments in the tournament included Rochele Relgaldo achieving the first 180 of the evening and Roy Shepherd producing the highest check out with 150. Both received a bottle of whisky for their efforts.

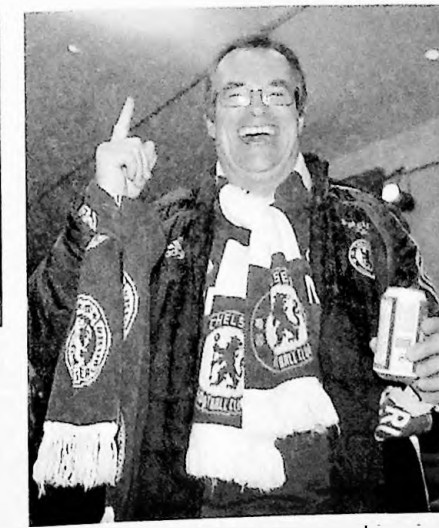

Two additional prizes (the most outstanding performances of the night) were presented by the FIC, neither of which had to be directly related to the playing of darts. The first was awarded retrospectively for 2011 to Peter Goss who had assisted his son Michael in providing the commentary for FITV, and having embraced the spirit of the evening later fell down the stairs, drink in hand, without spilling a drop.

2012's award was won by Julie Ford who was nominated by Richard Bonner for her contribution to the darts tournaments. Lynda said: "Julie consistently gives up her own evenings to score the games being played, and the darts committee and FIC Ltd agreed that recognition for her hard work and selflessness more than merited the award."

After the prize giving Gary (Boss) Thomas, Stanley Darts Committee member, kicked up the volume on the music and those that wanted to, finished the evening off with some dancing.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.125 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

146.625....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800....Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

THE 30TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LIBERATION OF THE FALKLAND ISLANDS PROGRAMME OF EVENTS 11-17 JUNE 2012

As the years pass, Veterans and Islanders alike who were caught up in the Falklands War, are getting older; many, regrettably are no longer with us. Age takes its toll, and sadly a number of potential guests declined due to failing health. This 30th Anniversary of Liberation is likely to be the last significant anniversary for some time; in 2007 the Ministry of Defence confirmed that it would only commit to supporting the 50th Anniversary in 2032, in accordance with UK policy.

The Islands receive increasing numbers of returning Veterans annually; the work of the South Atlantic Medal Association (both the FI and UK Trusts) and the Falklands Veterans' Foundation with appreciative utilisation of Liberty Lodge is supported by the Ministry of Defence providing affordable airfares for SAMA medal holders. During 2012 further generous reductions in airfare costs allow Veterans, close family and next-of-kin to visit. In November the Islands will host another Veterans' Pilgrimage, with more than 100 Veterans visiting for the first time since 1982.

While the Falkland Islands Government financially assists in underwriting Liberation Anniversary events, and supports the Veterans' Pilgrimage, the execution of these events would not be possible without generous support and assistance from the Falklands community who give freely of their time, and open their hospitality doors in the best of Falkland Islands tradition.

A number of social and community events are planned for our guests and, weather permitting, they should see a wide cross-section of the community both in Camp and Stanley. Official invitations will be issued for formal functions, but regrettably it is not possible to invite everyone to a function, save of course for the day of events on 14th June, which commences with the Thanksgiving Service in Christ Church Cathedral, the Act of Remembrance, the Civic Reception and the afternoon and evening of community events, co-ordinated by Sealed PR, in the FIDF Halls.

The Commander British Forces has kindly arranged for the Salamanca Band of the Rifles to be with us; the Band will also support the Liberation Songs of Praise on Sunday 17th June in Christ Church Cathedral.

The focus of the 30th Anniversary of Liberation Year has been to look forward while acknowledging and promoting the younger generation, who have proudly taken up the mantle of leadership and commitment to the economic and political development of our Islands. The foundation stones of our development are firmly constructed upon the legacy of human sacrifice to restore our Freedom in 1982. A twenty-four page colour booklet, Our Islands, Our Home, succinctly portrays how far our Islands have advanced in 30 years. We all have much to be proud of and grateful for.

We owe a huge debt of gratitude to serving HM Armed Forces personnel for their steadfast protection of our homeland, and to successive British Governments who, since 1982, resolutely support and promote our right to determine our own political future.

Lewis Clifton OBE (Chairman 2012 Committee)

To mark the 30th Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands on 14th June 1982, a Service of Thanksgiving will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 10:00. Members of the public are asked to be seated by 09:40.

His Excellency the Governor, Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, together with visiting dignitaries, Members of Legislative Assembly, representatives of the Falkland Islands Defence Force, youth groups and 1982 Veterans will be in attendance. The Salamanca Band of Rifles will provide musical accompaniment throughout the service. The Parade, consisting of detachments from the Royal Navy, the Parachute Regiment representing the Army, Royal Air Force, Falkland Islands Defence Force and Falkland Islands Defence Force Association, with musical accompaniment provided by the Salamanca Band of the Rifles, will march from the Cathedral to the Liberation Monument for the Act of Remembrance. The Royal British Legion, Royal Marines Association and FIDF Association banners will accompany the Parade, together with SAMA Veterans.

The Act of Remembrance at the Liberation Monument will commence at 11:00 immediately following the arrival of HE the Governor. On arrival, the official party will receive a Royal Salute. During the Act of Remembrance the names of all British service personnel and Falkland Islands civilians who died during the war will be read. Following the Last Post, Silence and Reveille, wreaths will be laid. The Act of Remembrance will conclude with a Royal Salute. Thereafter, the Parade will march west towards Government House, counter march east, giving an eyes right at the 1982 Memorial.

British Forces will thereby exercise their accorded Freedom of the Falkland Islands, supported by the FIDF. The freedom march will end at the Jetty Centre and troops will move (by bus) to the FIDF Headquarters in preparation for the Public Reception at 12:30. Weather permitting, there will be a flypast during the freedom march.

Youth groups will be represented at the Liberation Monument, and many of the civilian population that gave direct assistance to the Task Force in 1982 will congregate in a group and a wreath will be laid on their behalf.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to worn during this day.

If the weather is extremely inclement the reading of names and extended march past may be cancelled.

THE 30TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LIBERATION OF THE FALKLAND ISLANDS

COMMUNITY EVENTS & INFORMATION

Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust Falklands 30: The War, The People

The purpose of this Exhibition is to tell the story of the Argentine invasion and occupation in 1982 drawing upon the personal memories of individuals involved, and in particular focusing on the stories of Falkland Islanders. The Exhibition will include a feature on the modern Falklands, looking at how the Islands have changed and developed in the past 30 years. Local fishing company, Fortuna has kindly sponsored the Exhibition which officially opens on the 6th of June and will run until April 2013.

The Museum and National Trust has worked closely with the Fleet Air Arm Museum in Yeovil and shared material to create "sister" Exhibitions. As a result of this, the Museum Exhibition will also feature the Infant & Junior School's "Big Book" project.

For more information on the Exhibition please contact the Museum and National Trust on 27428 or email museum.clerk@cwimail.fk

	19:00	Southern Cross Social Club, Fox Bay
15 June	10:00	West Falkland Liberation Day Service at Fox Bay
17 June	17:00	Liberation Songs of Praise, Christ Church Cathedral

30th Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands Stamp Issue

This issue of postage stamps focuses on the Falkland's community and how it has thrived, grown and responsibly developed since 1982. Kate Stenning (14) is the artist behind the 30th Anniversary logo, the winner of a design competition launched by 2012 Committee Chairman Lewis Clifton and SAMA FI Chairman Gary Clement. Kate produced the winning concept with the final artwork being produced by Julie Halliday from Studio 52. Mrs Halliday said, "I love Kate's idea and the way it looks like we are being embraced and protected by the Union Jack".

The collection will be available from the 14th June 2012 from the Post Office and Philatelic Bureau.

Representative of International Media

Approximately 25 international media representatives will be present in the Islands to cover the Liberation programme of events. All members of the press (including local) will be accredited by the Falkland Islands Government and will be provided with badges for identification purposes. This is an important opportunity for the Falkland Islands to show the world how we have developed over the past 30 years, at a time when we remember the sacrifices made by those who restored our Freedom. The assistance, patience and cooperation of residents at this busy time would be greatly appreciated. The Public Relations and Media Manager can be contacted on 54343 or dchristie@sec.gov.fk

A full colour publication which illustrates the bond Falkland Islanders feel to their home is to be made available to the general public.

Our Islands, Our Home, which commemorates the Liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentine occupation focuses on how far the Islands have progressed in the past 30 years. It profiles a number of Islanders roughly aged from 30-40 and their livelihoods in the Falklands. Originally intended as a gift for visiting veterans and other invited guests during the anniversary year, the booklet will now have a wider distribution so that all households in the Falklands may have a copy. A limited stock is currently available, however a booklet has been given to every school pupil; further copies are due to be available in early July.

The booklet is available online at www.falklands.gov.fk/documents/30thBookletlr.pdf.

The Wool Market Report - 18th May 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its lowest value this season at AU$1,121 making it 696/kg clean in Stirling, down 26 pence. This week saw a new record low clearance rate of 76.8% from an offering of 39,478 bales.

Quality is an issue again, cotting and discolouration was again prominent in Merino skirtings, with a short supply of stylish lots. Prices have remained similar to last week across micron ranges. Cotton prices, which last year helped with the record rise in wool prices, has also fallen sharply over the past two weeks. It is thought that if situations are resolved with the Eurozone the wool prices will likely stabilise.

Mohair has seen an increase in interest due to the limited quantities expected over the rest of the summer season also despite the current uncertainty with Europe.

Community rally to Blue Beach for 1982 Landing Day service

MORE than 200 hundred members of the Falklands civilian and military communities gathered at the Blue Beach Cemetery on Monday to reflect upon the sacrifice and effort made by the British Forces as the first landings were made at San Carlos on May 21, 1982.

It seemed every available parking space had been filled within the settlement and the light wind caused the many Union flags to unfurl and create a splash of colour against the winter skies.

The service was conducted by representatives from the Islands' churches and wreaths laid by Army, Air Force and Navy personnel as well as many members of the civilian community; several of whom had been at San Carlos and welcomed the British troops arrival in 1982.

West Falkland residents made their way via the ferry to the service and Nigel Knight commented that it was the best turn out he had seen at Blue Beach.

On the back of the successful rally in Stanley in February, Norman Clark had arranged for vehicles making their way to Blue Beach to get together and travel in convoy.

"Bring a flag and a big smile," he said prior to the event as he encouraged drivers to join him.

More than 30 vehicles linked up at the base of Sussex Mountain and made their way into San Carlos, a number that Norman was satisfied with.

"It was a working day and we can't expect everyone to down tools," he told Penguin News, adding that he would like to see it as an annual event and possibly May 21 made a public holiday.

"May 21 is just as significant date as June 14," said Mr Clark.

Yomping from Port San Carlos to the Globe

A YOMPING group of three arrived in Stanley from Port San Carlos on Friday to the welcoming cheers of Infant Junior School students.

David MacPherson, Mike Cole and Trevor Law (FIDF) had passed through New House, Douglas, Teal Inlet, Estancia and camped on the Two Sisters to commemorate the spot where the two Royal Marines they were walking in memory of had died. Corporal Frank Spencer and David's brother, Marine Gordon MacPherson, Zulu Company, 45 Commando Group, were killed during a night attack on June 11-12, 1982.

Storming into town they were greeted by IJS children at the Liberation Monument where they paid their respects before heading to the Globe Tavern, the official finishing point of the 1982 yomp.

"Once we got to the top of the Two Sisters the wind dropped and the sun came out it was just magical," said David MacPherson, adding, the children meeting us at the end too was brilliant," but said it was the people they met on the way that really made it for them. The hospitality is outstanding and they all had stories to tell. I'd like to thank them all."

David is the first to admit he's not a hill walker but he was glad of the experience.

"It's filled in a lot of gaps for me," he said. "We've been able to smell the drink waiting for us from Moody Brook." Dave has done a fantastic job, especially for someone who's not done this kind of thing before, and Mike 30 years on and still yomping like a trooper," said CS Trevor Law.

Justin McPhee from Cable and Wireless presented Mike Cole with a donation of £1,000 from the company which Mr Cole said would be used to support the Marines and families of those who are returning from Afghanistan. "They'll have a lot to deal with," he said.

Memorial dedicated

A VULCAN bomber which launched air raids on Stanley Airport 30 years ago has flown over the peaceful countryside of central England to mark the dedication of a new Falklands Memorial to the 255 British servicemen and three women Islanders killed in the war.

The Vulcan was flown by the same pilot who led the raids on Stanley airport runway. A Chinook helicopter also took part in the flypast.

The memorial is located within the British National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire, along with 200 memorials to those who served or died for their country all over the world not just in major wars but all other wars.

The new memorial was commissioned by the Falklands veterans' organisation, SAMA 82, the South Atlantic Medal Association, which raised more than £60,000 to fund it. Designed to reflect the Falklands' landscape, it includes a curved stone wall and two benches, providing a restful space for contemplation.

The site also features several granite plaques on rocks from the Falklands, including one engraved with the names of three Islanders killed by a British shell, Susan Whitley, Doreen Bonner and Mary Goodwin.

Several hundred veterans of 1982 and family members gathered on Sunday for the unveiling of the memorial and for a service in the arboretum chapel by the Reverend David Cooper, a padre with the Task Force in 1982.

International recognition for FI hockey

FORMER English National Ice Hockey League player Grant Budd first started the Falkland Islands Dek Hockey club in 2006, when just four teams played street hockey for local competitions the Energise Shield, Cable & Wireless Russell Smith Memorial League and the Choice Fruits Cup (now renamed the Stanley Cup).

Because street hockey is so easy to play, it is quickly finding its way around the world in over 60 countries with more than thirty of them already members of the ISBHF and now the Falkland Islands join them.

Myself and Secretary Martyn Barlow believed the club needed to move forward and looked at the possibility of overseas competitions. Marcus contacted George Gortsos, President of the International Street & Ball Hockey Federation who was more than happy to assist with membership to the ISBHF.

Founded in 1993 the International Street & Ball Hockey Federation is a registered non-profit organisation, officially recognised as the governing body of the sport by the International Ice Hockey Federation, with many of its member nations officially recognised by their federal sports agencies.

International competitions have been held by the ISBHF since 1995, with Men's and Women's European, World and World Junior (under 20) Championship competitions.

Panthers and Penguins played the first game with the orange D-Gel ball on May 8 and it has provided plenty of entertainment since. The Energise Shield 2012, won by Panthers, was the last competition to be played with the defunct puck that was used since 2006 and club members voted unanimously last Friday to adopt the ISBHF approved ball for the next competition, the Russell Smith Memorial Trophy.

There could be a bright future ahead for hockey in the Falklands via the opening up of new links with ball hockey clubs and associations. There are also opportunities for members to travel overseas to compete. The development of the junior leagues is one of the major areas for the club to progress and it is hoped that with the attraction of international competitions membership will increase. George Gortsos is planning to visit the Islands in 2013 with a coach and a qualified referee to assist with the transition from puck to ball, referee training, youth training for IJS and FICS along with training potential coaches.

A Falkland Islands national team will be formed for the first time with the ambition to compete in the 2013 World Championships in St Johns, Canada with newly elected team coach Grant Budd leading the line. It is hoped further sponsorship can be obtained as well as fundraising events organised to generate the funds needed to send a team of 17 players to the World Championships.

Hopefully the Falkland Islands will be playing their heart and souls out in Canada this year, to show the ball hockey world that these small islands can compete with the best.

Dek Hockey in the Falklands

Due to the size of Stanley Leisure Centre gymnasium teams consist of 1 goaltender and 3 outfield players and are limited to 7 players in a team who wear ice hockey shirts, pads and sticks.

Ice hockey team names are also adopted; this year, the Blackhawks, Penguins, Hurricanes, Panthers, Flyers and Coyotes are all fighting to claim the top prizes.

The increasingly popular sport welcomes both male and female players to play in the league and the age range of members is from 15-30+. So far memberships currently stands at 50+ with more eager to join this new and exciting sport. The club is self sufficient with local companies Cable & Wireless and Energise helping to sponsor trophies for the annual awards night along with any equipment needed. Members pay monthly fees and meet every Sunday and Tuesday evening for competitive games or training sessions.

Veendam will visit Stanley

DESPITE rumours that cruise vessel Veendam intended to abandon the Falkland Islands as a destination in the coming season, Sue Luxton of port agents Falkland Islands Company confirmed the vessel yesterday made nine bookings to visit Stanley, weather permitting.

Mrs Luxton said prior to those bookings she had had no indication from the company that the ship would not include the Islands on its itinerary.

Veendam cancelled a number of visits as a result of bad weather last season and over past weeks stories had emerged that possible political interference from Argentina had led the cruise vessel company, Holland America, to decide to withdraw the Falkland Islands from its 2012/2013 season schedule.

GOOSE Green Manager Keith Alazia with 2 Para veterans of the 1982 battle for Goose Green, Alan 'Mouse' Walker, Kevin Ormond, Matt Baker and John Gartshore displaying the flag that John, "acquired," from the ferry Norland (requisitioned as a Task Force troop ship) and carried by him throughout the war. The flag has since been signed by all the veterans that visited for the 25th anniversary of the war as well as Goose Green residents and gifted to the settlement club.

John and Mouse, who are accompanied by wives Vivien and Wendy, arrived on May 23 in order to attend the commemoration service and celebration of the liberation of Goose Green.

On May 29, a number of those Islanders imprisoned in the Goose Green club by Argentine occupying forces in 1982, joined para veterans and once again spent the entire night in the club. More news next week.

Liberation day support from younger generation at C24

TWO young Islanders will accompany Legislative Assembly Members to a special session of the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonisation (C24) this month.

The C24 held its Pacific Regional Seminar in the Ecuadorian capital Quito, from May 30 to June 1. The seminar reviewed progress in the United Nations decolonization process, with the Falkland Islands represented by Member of the Legislative Assembly Roger Edwards.

The C24 declined an offer from the Legislative Assembly to host the seminar in the Falkland Islands this year, however, the Falklands is to have a special full day session before the Committee in New York on June 14. MLA Mike Summers and MLA Roger Edwards will form the Falkland Islands delegation accompanied by Andrew Pollard and Krysteen Ormond.

MLA Mike Summers said: "I am delighted that Andrew and Krysteen will be accompanying us to C24 this year. I feel it is very important to introduce the next generation of Falkland Islanders to the political realities of our situation at an early stage."

Andrew Pollard

Andrew Pollard said: "I am very honoured to be able to represent the Falkland Islands at the C24. There is a great need to increase the global awareness of the Falkland Islands. Whilst I am not a politician, I am a Falkland Islander who is passionate about my country and understands the social, economic and political strengths and challenges that we all currently face."

Speaking at the Pacific Regional Seminar in Ecuador yesterday, MLA Roger Edwards described Argentina's aggressive attempts to obstruct the Falklands economy and asked the Committee to recognise its own obligations under the UN Charter and, "respect our right to self determination."

Having addressed the Committee on the Islands history and progress since 1982, MLA Edwards said the United Nations did not enshrine peoples' universal rights into its Charter, only for member states to then negotiate those away."

He said Argentina appeared to have no desire to negotiate or respect the United Nations Charter, adding: "Argentina has included the full transfer of sovereignty in its own Constitution as the only acceptable outcome, ignoring our rights and the principles of the United Nations Charter."

In conclusion MLA Edwards reminded the Special Committee of the plea by the Secretary General of the United Nations on February 23 this year, "to make tangible progress in assisting those territories to achieve self-determination."

He said it was within the committee's power to develop innovative approaches and new dynamics to achieve that goal.

"Mr Chairman, every year we put forward arguments in support of our human rights, in order that this Committee will one day recognise its own obligations under the UN Charter and respect our right of self-determination. Hopefully this year, the Special Committee will recognise that the people of the Falklands will always be here, and as has been proven right across the globe many times before 'self-determination' is the only solution that will lead to a permanent, peaceful solution," he said.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

Despite (not always obviously) empathising, however, it doesn't follow that we don't have the right to make it abundantly clear to our representatives what we want from them: and when we do, we certainly don't anticipate being scolded like pestering brats for daring to make inconvenient demands on the grown-ups.

Heroes welcome

A RECENT survey of more than 9,100 servicemen in UK has disclosed that almost one in five military personnel has been refused service in pubs, hotels and shops because they were in uniform. Six per cent have been attacked in the street, while 21 per cent reported strangers coming up to them and shouting abuse.

In the Falklands these statistics are hard to believe, and certainly such behaviour against any member of the armed services would provoke outrage in the community.

A businessman based in Scarborough, Yorkshire, has started a project called "Heroes Welcome" which is a community based initiative involving local retail businesses and service providers.

The scheme is simple: it just requires a business to ensure there is no discrimination against serving or past members of the armed forces and that they will be assured of a warm welcome. Sometimes, even a small discount is offered.

Keith Biles and Andy Brownlee have agreed to act as the local co-ordinators for a "Heroes Welcome in the Falklands" scheme, and although the Falklands really does not need a badge to assure visitors of a warm welcome, it may help visiting veterans and serving personnel to feel at home here, especially if they have experienced some kind of discrimination back in the UK, or elsewhere.

The scheme costs nothing to join, and the approach of each individual enterprise is left entirely up to them. The costs of the window stickers and display units has been borne by sponsors in UK.

If you would like to show your solidarity with past and present armed forces, please contact Andy Brownlee (55891), or drop into Lifestyles to see him and get your free window sticker.

Flags and stamps

FIG has announced that Youth groups will now be overseeing the Flag Raising on Victory Green and at the Secretariat on auspicious occasions under the main supervision of Tim Miller, and the group leaders.

Tim Miller said it was, "a great way of involving today's youngsters in the meanings of our Islands history and heritage."

Executive Council also agreed this week that a First Day Cover commemorating the Diamond Jubilee of HM The Queen should be given to all children in the Falkland Islands up to the age of 16.

Malvina House Hotel Manager Carl Stroud, Jeff Halliday and Ray Williams

THE first pints of draught Maiden Bitter were pulled and savoured in the Malvina House Hotel on Friday evening under the watchful eye of local brewer Jeff Halliday. While ale is an acquired taste and has not been widely available in the Islands, Jeff had a successful day of sales at the recent Fitzroy sheep show and is hopeful it will soon become a local favourite.

Court news

A SERVICEMAN was fined £450 on Wednesday for what the Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley described as "drunken bullying."

Joshua Linton Grabovski admitted the charge of common assault, which took place on May 5.

The Court heard that Lance Corporal Grabovski had been involved in a brief exchange of words with another man while on a night out in Stanley.

Later that evening Mr Grabovski had met the same man again by chance and snatched his mobile phone and admonished him for making him feel foolish during their earlier exchange. The pair argued and Mr Grabovski punched the man in the face.

In sentencing Mr Gumsley said this was the second case in two weeks of what he described as, "drunken stupidity," of a serviceman and that the military might wish to address the issue. He said luckily the victim had not received significant injury. (FIRS)

Pay up or move out

GOVERNMENT rent dodgers could face eviction and prosecution if they continue the practise, MLA Barry Elsby said in Legislative Assembly last week.

Most tenants were hardworking and paid rent on time, but, said MLA Elsby, some have not paid rent for almost 12 months, despite the fact they were employed.

"If a tenant has a genuine problem with paying rent, the Housing Department will help out as much as they can," he said but, "blatant abuse," of the limited housing could, "no longer be tolerated."

He had held discussions with the Attorney General and Housing Department and those tenants had been told that if they did not make regular payments of their rent and make a real effort to reduce the debt, they would be evicted and legal action taken to recover the debt owed.

MLA Elsby

A common complaint he heard was the number of houses allocated to contract officers left empty for months at a time. One contract officer had just moved into a house that was empty for more than 12 months, he noted.

Although he did not have a long term solution to the problem as housing for contract officers was necessary, he suggested charging the department that was asking to hold on to those houses while they recruit someone. "It might actually stimulate the recruitment policy a bit more," MLA Elsby added.

In the meantime he is working with the Housing Officer so empty properties can be let on a short term basis for people in need.

"But, that might only be for a few months and won't change that person's place on the housing waiting list," concluded MLA Elsby.

Long service medals for emergency services

OF a total of 63 people eligible for long service medals, 51 were present at Government House on Tuesday evening to collect them in person from His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood.

The medals were awarded to members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force, The Royal Falkland Islands Police and the Fire and Rescue Department.

Captain Andy Brownlee of the Defence Force was also awarded an Efficiency Declaration for his long service and dedication to the force.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

WITH a very busy budget week behind us I hope we can now press on with work towards creation of a minimum wage and other measures to support the lowest paid. We have agreed an additional post in the policy department to enable this to be taken forward with all the other work that department does. We also need to address the fact, highlighted by me in the budget session, that the lowest paid do not reach either the previous tax threshold or the new one so do not benefit from the additional take home pay that those further up the earnings ladder will now have. Some of us were keen that we devise measures to concentrate help for those who most need it, in particular low income families. One example is the suggestion of nursery vouchers, perhaps means tested or targeted in some other way. You have only to look around the workplace to see how important working parents are in the workforce.

*****

IN addition to budget meetings I attended the working group looking at the best way of creating additional space for our expanding school population. Fortunately a large area West of the existing leisure and school facilities has been reserved for education purposes for many years so a staged development could be feasible once the immediate priority needs are firmly identified.

*****

WE can expect another flurry, or possibly a deluge, of press interest over the next couple of weeks with the anniversary of Liberation nearly here. That anniversary will also be commemorated by a group of special guests here for the occasion. It is sad to think how many veterans and others who played major roles in ensuring our freedom are either no longer living, or too frail or unwell to contemplate the journey. We will, as always, be working to get the facts of our situation well publicised to counter what is likely to be another wave of the Argentine false propaganda campaign. Similar opportunities will arise around the attendance at the Committee of 24 and the Honourable Roger Edwards attendance at the pre C24 meetings.

Monitoring of shipping radios comes home again

AN out of hours radio service which monitors marine radio frequencies will be re-established in the Falklands from the first week of June.

Harbour Master Malcolm Jamieson explained that Harbour Control using VHF radio is maintained by the Operations section of the Fisheries Department (FISHOPS) during office hours, seven days a week. Out of office hours, the service is handed over to Cable and Wireless who have taken entry and exit reports from vessels since 1994. The service was moved to C&W St Helena in 2008.

Mr Jamieson said that as maritime issues change, there are a number of options being considered that would be dealt with in due course, but as a more immediate step, C&W had been requested to return the service to the Falklands.

"There are a number of benefits to this move including the ability of the Fisheries Department to directly train personnel in radio etquette and procedures including the standard marine vocabulary and it should make monitoring the service more straightforward," he said.

"Although there will be an increase in the charges for returning the service to the Falklands, this is partly due to the significant proportion of harbour traffic that occurs out of office hours, especially FIPASS that has already become a true 24 hour operation," Mr Jamieson concluded.

Reviews necessary for repeat prescriptions

OVER the past few months the dispensary at the King Edward Memorial Hospital (KEMH) has become stricter when issuing repeat prescriptions and ensuring that the review date for the medication has not been exceeded.

If the medication review date has or is about to expire, then patients will be required to make a GP appointment as soon as possible, to have their medication reviewed, explained a hospital spokesperson.

"Whilst it may seem like an inconvenience at times, this policy exists to: protect patients from taking unnecessary medication, helps save KEMH money as fewer unnecessary medications are issued and ensures that the GP practice is up-to-date with your records and care and it also allows you to discuss your general health with a GP."

"KEMH would also like to note that, whilst we shall try to be as accommodating as possible, please allow a minimum of 48 hours (excluding weekends and bank holidays) for any repeat prescription to be prepared," said the spokesperson.

If you have any questions regarding this policy and its implications for you then please do not hesitate to contact the pharmacy on 28011.

- If you had a motto what would it be?
What goes around comes around and you reap what you sow
- What is your happiest moment?
The births of my children and 14th June 1982
- If a song or a book was written about you what would the title be?
"You're a dumpy wee thing, shame really" Which is what my future mother-in-law said to me when we met for the first time when I was 19. I was considerably slimmer then than now and I still married her son
- What is your nickname, and why?
Family and friends who really know me call me Toni Dee because they know I HATE being called Toni Donna
- What song makes you feel happy (or sad) when you hear it?
Ollie Murs Dance With Me Tonight, made me dance at the wool table each time I heard it this season (sorry Kimi - perhaps that should have been my most embarrassing moment!)

Toni lives at Port Sussex with husband Richard, nine dogs, three cats, two terrapins, a variable hawk and an assortment of other animals. Mother to Caris and Liam, they have informed her they will not be providing any grandchildren in the foreseeable future. She is making do with being granny to Caris's cat George W Puss and Arnold the Guinea Pig. She says: "In my ideal world I would have a troupe of palomino horses, a holiday villa in Crete and wool prices would stay nice and high."

New Falklands perspective for MPA students

THE Junior Class from Mount Pleasant Primary School have been extending their knowledge of the Falklands and the war of 1982 with a number of field trips around Stanley and the camp: the class takes up the story.

Our learning started three weeks ago on the barren battlefield near Darwin where we learnt many things about the battle for Goose Green from a soldier's point of view. Ken Greenland showed us around and described where events took place and where you could see the remains of trenches. We learnt how Colonel H Jones and Captain Frank Dent were killed, how difficult it was to see who was where and which side they were on and that you can have a cup of tea even when under fire! It really inspired us to keep on learning.

Later, when we were having lunch at Goose Green School Miss Adams, their teacher, showed us their old register. In April 1982 all the ticks in the register suddenly stopped because the children were locked in the hall along with the other residents of Goose Green. It must have been terrifying to be stuck in the middle of the fighting. We couldn't imagine how 114 people could fit in, especially when they hid under the floor to feel safer.

Our last visit that day was to the Argentine cemetery. Some soldiers didn't have names instead there were unmarked graves. There were about 230 graves and over 600 names recorded. We were overwhelmed by the number of names there were.

During our day in Stanley we visited the 1982 Liberation Monument where the names of the British and Falkland Islands people who lost their lives are displayed. The mural showed us how many different groups of people were involved in, and affected by, the conflict.

ing the conflict. As she recounted memories of hearing shouts and gunfire we really understood how hard life was for children at the time. In the museum we saw many pictures of soldiers, helicopters, ships and scenes from Stanley in 1982. They helped give us a clear picture in our minds of what it would have been like to be there at the time. The reconstructed trench helped us imagine what the dips in the ground at Goose Green would have looked like during the battle. We thought it looked cramped and hard to get out of.

Our final visit was to Government House where we were shown round by Brian Summers who was in the FIDF in 1982. He showed us the bullet holes in the wall from the fighting which we had learnt about in school. We were amazed when Brian showed us a picture we had used in lessons because he was in it!

Our trips have given us a wide range of perspectives on the conflict of 1982 which has helped us learn a lot and we feel really lucky to have had the opportunity to hear from people who were involved. Adventure Class would like to say a big thank you to everyone who has helped us.

PUBLIC NOTICE Anniversary of 30 years of Liberation 14 June 2012

To mark the 30th Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands on 14th June 1982, a Service of Thanksgiving will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 10:00. Members of the public are asked to be seated by 09:45.

His Excellency the Governor and Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, together with Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister Jeremy Browne MP and other visiting dignitaries, Members of Legislative Assembly, representatives of the marching detachments, youth groups and 1982 Veterans will be in attendance. The Salamanca Band of Rifles will provide musical accompaniment throughout the service. The Parade, consisting of detachments from the Royal Navy, the Parachute Regiment representing the Army, Royal Air Force, Falkland Islands Defence Force and Falkland Islands Defence Force Association, with musical accompaniment provided by the Salamanca Band of the Rifles, will march from the Cathedral to the Liberation Monument for the Act of Remembrance. The Royal British Legion, Royal Marines Association and FIDF Association banners will accompany the Parade, together with SAMA Veterans.

The Act of Remembrance at the Liberation Monument will commence at 11:00 immediately following the arrival of H.E. the Governor. On arrival, the official party will receive a Royal Salute. During the Act of Remembrance the names of all British service personnel and Falkland Islands civilians who died during the war will be read. Following the Last Post, Silence and Reveille, wreaths will be laid. The Act of Remembrance will conclude with a Royal Salute. Thereafter, the Parade will march west towards Government House, turn around and then march in an easterly direction, giving an eyes right at the 1982 Memorial.

British Forces will thereby exercise their accorded Freedom of the Falkland Islands, supported by the FIDF. The freedom march will end at the Jetty Centre and troops will move (by bus) to the FIDF Headquarters in preparation for the Public Reception at 12:30. Weather permitting, there will be a flypast during the freedom march.

Youth groups will be represented at the Liberation Monument, and many of the civilian population that gave direct assistance to the Task Force in 1982 will congregate in a group and a wreath will be laid on their behalf.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to worn during this day. If the weather is extremely inclement the reading of names and extended march past may be cancelled.

Reality of outsourcing

It was with great interest that I listened to HE The Governor's speech to the Legislative Assembly yesterday, and the responses from MLAs. I noticed a few MLAs expressed hope that the planned outsourcing of government services would reduce or eliminate bureaucracy.

Having some experience of outsourcing, I can say that most organisations going down that road start out with high hopes of ridding themselves of unwanted costs and bureaucracy.

The reality often turns out to be very different, mainly because those driving the outsourcing do not measure what is important to them, such as the time taken to obtain a decision. For example, if it is not accurately known how long this process currently takes within government, then it may be difficult to measure when it is performed by a new organisation. So, when citizens or MLAs wonder if a service has improved, they have no objective way of finding out.

The key to reducing bureaucracy (or costs), is to ensure that this aim is enshrined in the outsourcing deal, with penalties on the new supplier if they don't deliver. Otherwise, the (outsourced) process may just as well stay within the Government, and some effort be put into addressing why it takes weeks to get a decision, or why it costs so much.

It's a truism of the outsourcing industry, that you do not get rid of problems by outsourcing them: you merely transfer them to another body, who will charge you handsomely for looking after the problems.

Before outsourcing any problematic departments, services or processes - you must improve them.

Having done that - you may then find that the rationale for outsourcing has disappeared. You now have a less-costly or more efficient organisation, without having to pay a third party to run it for you!

However, the outsourcing could continue, if only for dogmatic or political reasons. But at least then, a good, efficient service will be outsourced, and not some vague, unmeasurable, "bureaucracy".

Bolivia talks Falklands

BOLIVIAN president Evo Morales has announced he will request the Falklands be discussed in conjunction with the Argentine claim, at the Organisation of American States OAS General Assembly, to be held in Cochabamba, along with the issue of a sea outlet for Bolivia, which it has claimed for over a century and is a standing conflict with Chile.

Mercopress reported this week that OAS will be holding its annual assembly hosted by Bolivia and representatives from over 30 countries from June 3 to 5. President Morales is reported to have said it would be, "an excellent opportunity to discuss the two issues."

Last week Mr Morales met with his Vice President for a Bolivian national celebration at Cochabamba, the same city where the OAS assembly will take place, and publicly thanked La Paz for its long standing position in support of the Argentine claim over the Falklands.

Regarding the sea outlet issue, Mr Morales said a year ago he would appeal to international courts to recover that which was lost at the end of the nineteenth century during the Pacific War.

Exco paper: FM radio for Camp

CAMP radio will be the subject of a paper presented to Executive Council by Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher at either the June or July session, he confirmed to Penguin News this week.

The paper will set out the policy and costs of, "rolling out FM radio to camp."

He said there was an existing budget for the project but this had not been released as a firm proposal from SSVSC had not yet been received.

It is intended there will be two channels and FIG is working with Cable and Wireless in terms of infrastructure including aerials. Mr Fletcher said it was hoped after the new financial year there would be the opportunity for Camp to express a preference with regard to channels.

Apart from finishing up this project FIG have no other plans in

Beavers and cubs say thanks

ON behalf of the 1st Falkland Islands Beaver and Cub Scouts I would like to thank everyone very much for attending the first night of the May Ball and making it such a great night.

We would like to thank Cable & Wireless for helping us to put on the event, Stanley Garden Centre for providing all the flags, Nikki Buxton for the lovely sash which went so well with our Falklands 30 and Diamond Jubilee theme, Jason Lewis of FIODA for his expertise in sorting out the sound and lighting for us, also thanks to The Globe and NCB Solutions and Stevie Burston for his acrobatic skills in getting our banners strung across the ceiling!

Thanks also to Lisa, Lee and Derek of Stanley Dance club who have spent many hours teaching the youngsters to dance so well and for the kind donation to the Scout Group Funds.

We would also like to thank Norman Clark Photography, FIRS, FITV and Penguin News for all coming along to cover the event. Also H E The Governor for kindly presenting the prizes.

Thanks must go to Richard Fogerty's brilliant bar team who were kept very busy and to all the parents who provided refreshments, especially to Jayne Miller and Leeann Harris who took the May Queen and Prince Charming entries.

And last but not least we would like to thank Myriam for coming along on the second night to play for us and our small group of loyal supporters who enjoyed the music and dancing.

Beach party is madness

I HAVE heard it all now. A BEACH party two weeks before midwinter, so much for a community party.

What was the public holiday all about? Most people will be finished work by 6pm, and then of course we must consider that all the children will be going to school in the morning and Mum and Dad will have to thaw out and be ready for work.

Oh well, I guess those who organised the party thought about all these things.

Back on the farm with Tex Alazia

A COLD weekend towards the end of April brought the reality check that a 'mostly warm' autumn could be about to end.

The championship sheep dog trials and two-nighter went ahead after a day's postponement waiting for seas to drop enough to get handlers and supporters from the East across on the ferry. The trials have already been reported on but it was certainly of the highest possible standard with all eight dogs penning the sheep and despite the cold day everyone enjoying a relaxing day with warm hospitality and lunch courtesy of Penni and Tex [you know - the one with more than his fair share of hair].

Hill Cove folk were also great hosts and two good nights were enjoyed in the club. I'm the world's worst dancer but still I made a few attempts, and was busy congratulating myself when at the end of the dance my partner said, "shall we do a dip?" I now know the male is meant to hold onto the female while she leans back - not drop her to the floor - sorry Nuala. Apparently it also pays not to be standing on her hair while trying to redeem yourself by hauling her to her feet - who knew?

Returning home to Port Edgar we gathered up our hogs and shearlings and eye locked them, making use of daughter Rhian who was home on a school holiday. This operation involves shearing wool, with three quick blows from any sheep that has too much wool encroaching above and below the eyes. (Reduced vision could cause them to fall into a ditch or hole, especially in snow.) As a result of careful breeding there are less sheep like this in the Islands now, but we still like to go through all of our young sheep and give them the best possible chance. Not wanting to work all school holiday we went to help Mandy and Simon Ford for a day at their holiday home at Port Stephens and celebrated wife Mandy's birthday with all the folk there.

On their way back to town the Ford family stopped off for a day at the farm and Simon kindly checked over most of our vehicles. The boys Brendan and Macaulay enjoyed a spot of fishing and general fun and both Mandy and Rhian counted and moved our rams. Another good day out was spent with the Evans family from Spring Point, visiting the far end of our farm at Esperanza [Spanish for Hope] where there are high and scenic cliffs. We watched the whales below, and explored a large natural crater in the ground. Taking advantage of Dale Evans' archaeological knowledge we examined some very old seal bones. Dale intends to return after his exams for further exploration.

All too soon Rhian had to return to school, and we turned to the task of putting rams out and getting on with fence repairs. Last Sunday we made the trip to Fox Bay for the 'walk for life' and a butchery course which was hosted by Helen and Leon. They provided two whole beef and mutton for Rikki Evans to pass on his butchering skills to a well attended group. So, many thanks to the organisers of the walk, including to Rachel for her cooking, and to Rikki, Helen and Leon for hosting the butchery course. I think everyone learnt something and now it's a case of remembering at least some of it! Talking of beef we spent an enjoyable day collecting half a beef from South Harbour, kindly given us by Mike and Donna and we also had the opportunity there to have lunch with Kerry Jamieson.

The darker evenings have meant more TV watching than normal and as a result I have acquired the incredibly useful understanding that the oddly spelt Will I Am of The Voice, is simply a version of William, and not Will 'I am the main man' or anything else as equally bizarre or trendy. Still doesn't change my opinion of him at all. If he wanted to change his name then why not call himself Bill or Willy like everyone else? No doubt this newly acquired knowledge will make me a better person and a more efficient farmer.

Off now for six days in the city so if I escape dentists, doctors and shopping then I may have more mishaps to report on, when I'm back on the farm.

Gosport remembers '82

SECRETARY of the UK Falkland Islands All Party Parliamentary Group, Andrew Rosindell MP and Caroline Dineage MP (who visited the Falklands under the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme visit in 2011) were guests at a Service of Commemoration for the 30th Anniversary of the Falklands War held in Gosport on Sunday May 27.

With temperatures around 27 degrees, hundreds gathered in Falklands Gardens for the special event.

Attended by around 250 Falklands veterans, next of kin of those who were killed, youth groups, civic dignitaries and military guests, the service was accompanied by music from the Band of Her Majesty's Royal Marines. A Sea King helicopter provided the fly past.

In a very moving ceremony, local students read out the names of all those who were killed, whilst three single yellow roses were laid to remember the Falkland Islanders who died and two hundred and fifty five single carnations to remember those killed in action, were placed at the Falkland Islands memorial stone by next of kin, students and invited guests.

Following the service, veterans marched down the High Street to applause from the many Gosport residents who had turned out to watch the event.

The salute was taken by Rear Admiral Chris Parry CBE MA (Oxon) with the Mayor of Gosport.

A reception was then held for all the participants in two large marquees in Walpole Gardens.

The Islands were represented by the Chairman of the local branch of SAMA (82) Gary Clement and the Falkland Islands Government Representative, Sukey Cameron MBE.

Crafty treat for Mount Pleasant

TINNED penguins and kelp earrings were attractions on display at the Arts and Crafts Fair organised by Natalie Simpson at Mount Pleasant on the weekend.

Service family dependents and Islanders joined to create the colourful exhibition and sale of crafts. Dunvegan Crafts from Elephant Beach Farm were present as were Fiona Didlick from Darwin House, artist and illustrator Leigh-Ann Wolfaardt, John and Louise Birmingham with their 'Two Sisters Crafts', Sara Marsh and Natalie Simpson.

Many homemade products were available including quilted handbags, Upland Goose wings for sweeping and dusting, felted soaps, locally spun wool, pasties and cakes. Captain Hall of SO3 J9 Media Ops assured Penguin News: "the goose pasties were particularly tasty."

A DIAMOND Jubilee and Falklands 30 combined theme for this year's May Ball was embraced by 2012's debutantes and their partners with a myriad of colourful ball gowns and accessories, one couple even displaying the Union Flag on dress and tie.

Pretty Bronwen Ford, (daughter of Julie and Jonny Ford) won the judges admiration with her dancing, dress and general demeanour to be voted this year's May Queen while West Falklands lad Gareth McGhie (son of James McGhie and Jennifer Hill) claimed the title of Prince Charming by popular vote.

May Princess Meghan Law did her Royal Marine Dad Trevor proud with her Union Flag adorned dress. Meghan had designed the dress herself last year and it was skilfully made by Tansy Bishop, "she wanted it to be a union flag theme because it was the 30th anniversary" said her mother Claire.

Declan Bonner (son of Timothy and Hayley Bonner) was the runner up Prince Charming in a stylishly tailored grey suit.

Organisers, sponsors and helpers had created a faultless stage for patriotic revelry.

Comper and long time May Ball organiser Phil Middleton questioned if it was even possible to count how many flags decorated the Town Hall.

For the first time there was an exclusively over 18s bar in the Hall's refreshment room, and the public reacted by cheerfully packing the dance floor aided by the intermittent refreshment.

It is only the Prince Charming prizes that are voted for by the public while the ladies are chosen by three objectives judges, but their decision seemed to reflect public opinion too as the screams, cheers and roars of congratulations filled the air for Bronwen and Meghan. All the ladies looked lovely and the energetic moves, smiles and good spirits continued after the crowning and enthusiastically into the small hours of the morning.

May Ball 2012 proved the event is still capable of drawing a crowd, the night was a rousing success for a proud national tradition.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).... Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625.... Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).... Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800.... Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 25th May 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its new lowest value this season at AU$1,104 making it 686/kg clean in Stirling, down 10 pence. There was an offer of 33,273 bales with a better clearance rate this week of 82%.

The Eurozone situation is still affecting the market with prices continuing to fall. The quality of wool is also an issue with the biggest price decrease being seen with Merino fleeces between 18.5 and 20 micron, the 23 - 24 micron gained value even though these were in short supply.

There is a large offering of 40,838 bales expected to be sold over the next three weeks.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Inside is a can of food surrounded by an outer can and in the space between the two cans is a water sachet and granular limestone (the same compound found in some toothpastes).

When you insert the spike into the three holes in the top rim of the can this pierces the water sachet, the water then flows into the limestone and a natural reaction occurs between the limestone and water which produces heat. This warms up the food inside the can and within 8-12 minutes it will be a perfect eating temperature of 60-70°C.

Final lap of the season for Falklands motocross

Top Clubman rider Nathan Lowe

MOTOCROSS supporters brought the FIDE hall alive on Saturday with a packed dance floor and riders taking to the podium to collect their prizes.

Jay Moffatt, Nathan Gemmill and Scott Henry-Roberts were the top Expert riders after seven competitions while Nathan Lowe, Jimmy Moffatt and Paul Joshua were the top Clubman.

Angeline Joshua maintained her lead over Sian Ferguson in the Ladies class while Kelly Moffatt slipped into third place.

Adam Dickson managed to stay ahead of the girls in the Pee Wee section with Regan Newman and Kyra Smith second and third.

Additional prizes on the night were Best Arse-Over-Tit which was jointly won by Arthur Turner and Scott Henry-Roberts. Most Improved Rider went to Rebecca Clarke. Most Entertaining Rider to Garry Tyrrell and Most Spills to Ben Hoyles.

While the weekends have been spent with the throb and scream of bike engines, Saturday night found the same fun loving crowd packed onto the dance floor dancing to the beat of Melvyn Lloyd's music.

Junior champ James Tyrrell stays laps ahead of dad Garry whose efforts on the track earned him the award of Most Entertaining Rider

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

It was bound to happen! Last week I was congratulating myself on having finished digging and manuring the vegetable garden and was really looking forward to finally getting into the flower beds. Hmm, well I guess not for the moment anyway. The ground, from being just a tad damp is now downright cold and solid.

The weeds can consider themselves quite safe for now, but I have been glancing at Hubby's electrical drills and screw drivers and wondering whether I should be pressing them into service. On the other hand it would probably require a pneumatic drill and with the temperature down to one at times, and a little above at others, (even the turkey vultures are warming their bottoms teetering on chimneys) I will have to go back to dribbling over the newly arrived seed catalogues instead.

Yes, I know you can get them all on the internet, but for me the joy of a catalogue is being able to sit comfortably with a gardening book (or maybe a few,) and check them out to get a few pictures and other details. It's just not the same on the net, besides it makes my eyes sore looking at a screen.

Surprisingly there are still roses showing proudly outside and quite a few other flowers too, enough anyway to make a 'plant patrol' worthwhile at least once a day before returning freezing to the house.

Our brussel sprouts have been very slow this year so to give them a better chance to form decent sprouts I have been removing the bottom leaves and will work my way up the stem as we remove the sprouts.

The sweet peas are up and looking quite perky in their toilet roll inserts. They are sitting in one of the tunnels on a tray and when three or four inches tall I will remove the top half and force them to fill out with more stems. They will then be left pretty much alone except for very small amounts of water now and then, otherwise they might rot or 'damp-off'.

Yet more rose cuttings have been given to me by friends; it's wonderful! The thing I'm finding hardest to resist is checking to see if there might be some rooting going on. I must resist though, well, maybe just a little check on the warmer days when it wouldn't cause too much damage to the roots? But I really should wait until I can see the roots coming out of the bottom of the pot. Meanwhile I will continue to put more cuttings into pots; our drainage is bad and so cuttings other than willows or poplars would probably just rot if put in the open ground.

A rather cool gladioli on rusty ground

Eucalypt seedlings ready for planting

The Phormiums (New Zealand flax) have really excelled themselves this year, even the very young plants flowered. I have now cut those flowering stems down and will be taking all the seed heads off the stems to plant in a sheltered spot once they have dried and opened up. Any frosts now followed by the warmth in spring should set them germinating quite well.

I have lifted some shasta daisies and some of the larger mallows, and split the plants up (using two garden forks back to back to do so).

They had grown very large and the middle was pretty bald. Replanted in newly dug and fed soil they should take-off quite happily in spring. Next, I must pop in to the borders the various pinks and primulas waiting in pots at the moment.

Normally I would at this time plant out some pansies too, but, having emptied a few packets on to the new borders last year there appear to be quite a few still there. All of the above should start flowering in the late winter or early spring; wonderful colours just when you need them most.

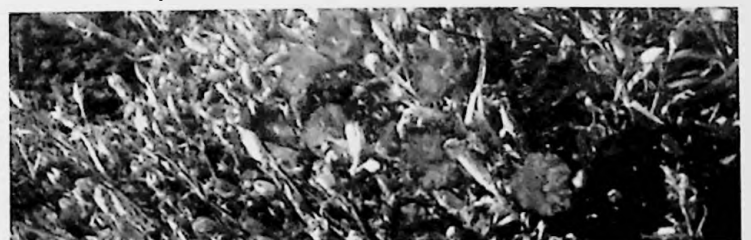

Half the vegetable plots are now covered in manure and should be steaming away nicely under all of that! In cleaning or doing a 'straggle gather' on the last potato plot to be dug, I discovered I'd left quite a few small ones behind so I guess the spring will show lots of little 'self sets' again. Bah!

The blackberry has finally gone into its new home in the lean-to greenhouse. Hopefully it will have more space to ramble there. I had to enlist the help of the 'man of the house' to lift the plant out and get it out of its pot. It now sits on cement so its roots should be contained.

As long as it is not frosty, this is a good time to plant new hedges. I have a few different hebes I intend to put out, also some of those lovely Rosa alba (usually called Chilean rose here). So wonderfully hardy and beautifully scented they are worth finding a space for.

With the willow hedge now well established I am, little by little, lifting the Montbretias that marked the row. They had become rather strangled with weeds anyway and so it's killing two birds with one stone.

These are not as eye-catching as their close relatives, the rather larger Crocosmias, but they are quite pretty, about fifteen inches tall and with light orange flowers, any takers before they get thrown out?

Mysotidium still looking good - and above right - pinks untroubled by the cold

Missing link identified

IN Penguin News 11.05.12 we asked if anyone could identify the ladies in this photograph from 1927 brought in to our office by historian John Smith.

We've compiled the findings below...

JOEY King named a number of the girls when some years ago he took a copy of the same photograph to Tansy Bishop at the Archives.

From his identification Mrs Bishop could say the crowd included Bessie Newing, Thelma Fuhlendorff, Phyllis Turner, Christine Hoare, Millicent Petersson, Dorothy Atkins, Ellen Berntsen, Irene Hardy, Daisy Betts, an unknown Redmond, Nancy Lellman, Ellen Lellman, Muriel Hardy, Joyce Turner, Gladys Carey, Vivian Gleadell, Minnie Pederson, Mary Browning and Frances Whitney but some were still unknown.

Jill Harris identified the girls as from the Government school by their tunic uniform and could spot Phyllis Goss, Maggie Jacobsen, Cybil Grace Luxton, Janice Honeymoon's mother, Irene Hardy, Hadassa Fulhendorff and Bessie Smith in the crowd.

Only Robin Luxton could offer up a full list of names for the troop.

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation invites expressions of interest from suitably experienced businesses interested in carrying out treatment of the wooden exterior of 2 separate buildings.

The first is Shackleton House which is the 2 storey office building of FIDC situated on West Hillside, Stanley. The second is 8 Biggs Road, Stanley which is a 2 storey residential property.

Full details of the work to be carried out is available in Terms of Reference documents available from FIDC. Prior to submission of any tender for the treatment of either building a site visit must be carried out, this should be arranged by contacting FIDC. All work must be completed by 30th November 2012.

The closing date for receipt of tenders is Friday 6th July 2012 at 16:30 local time.

Lay Member on Planning & Building Committee

Are you interested in the future development of Stanley and the Falkland Islands and would like to have some involvement in planning for this? If so, two places exist on the Planning & Building Committee for lay members to serve for a period of three years. Meetings are held on the first Thursday of every month. If you are interested then please submit an email or letter outlining your reasons for applying to the Environmental Planning Department, PO Box 611, Stanley by Friday 15th June 2012. For further information, please contact Fiona Wallace-Nanning on 28480 or e-mail fwallace-nanning.planning@taxation.gov.fk

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

COMMAND SECRETARIAT ADMINISTRATION SUPPORT

Subject to approval the Ministry of Defence is seeking to recruit a locally employed civilian (LEC) to provide support for the Command Secretariat team in Mount Pleasant.

Working Hours: We expect to be looking for support for between 25-37 hours per week, flexibility of hours can be negotiated prior to appointment.

The post will be initially for a 6 month period with the view to possibly extending it to a more permanent arrangement.

The post holder will be expected to provide support to the Command Secretariat team by carrying out general administration duties. Reporting directly to J8 Policy & Appointments the post holder will also be required to assist with a range of personnel related duties such as pay, tax returns and the maintenance of personnel information.

Successful FIH plans for future in Falklands

A STRONG trading performance for the Falkland Islands Holdings (FIH) Group for the year end March 31, spells increased capacity to invest in the Falkland Islands and its future the group's Managing Director John Foster told Penguin News yesterday.

Mr Foster who was part of the Falklands delegation to Aberdeen said: "We learned a lot about how oil might impact on the Islands and how we might get involved."

The company has set up a joint venture with Trant Construction, a company that has worked in the Falklands for the MoD for ten years, and their intention is to bid on government and private sector contracts that are likely to emerge as a result of oil exploitation, and the resulting revenues for the Falkland Islands Government.

Mr Foster stressed, however: "We very much want to work with other people, it's not about the Falkland Islands Company (FIC) trying to run the show or dominate proceedings. There are some very successful business people in Stanley and we're keen to work with them, there's going to be space for everybody, and we want to work closely with the government to develop the town and the country for the future."

In terms of larger projects that might be required in the future he listed the MPA road, the water front and a deep water port.

The FIC also has acreage within Stanley where the company intends to build longer term accommodation (executive housing) for oil workers, office space, warehousing and eventually, depending on government subsidies for home buyers, housing for local people, "and Trant will help us with all of that, along with local partners," said Mr Foster.

Many of these projects will begin to move forward once Rockhopper Exploration Ltd has outlined a timetable for future activities.

War exhibition open

"TELLING some of the personal stories behind the events we know so well," was how Museum Curator Leona Roberts described a fascinating and comprehensive exhibition of Falklands war memorabilia and stories currently on display at St Mary's Parish Hall.

The exhibition, which will run until April (in order to also allow later visiting 1982 war veterans, tourists and next season's cruise ship visitors to peruse the wealth of objects and information) depicts the 1982 events from the Argentine invasion to liberation by British Forces.

Mrs Roberts said: "There are a lot more stories out there and more to be said than we had space for." She particularly thanked Fortuna Limited for their sponsorship, noting the expense of having images printed for display.

She told Penguin News that museum staff had been working on the exhibition for only one month due to work taking place on future relocation to the Dockyard, "that's why this has been a bit of a drama for us."

On Wednesday evening His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood opened the exhibition

STANLEY resident, former Royal Marine and Falklands War veteran Martin 'Curly' Elstow and former chauffeur to 1982 Governor Rex Hunt, Don Bonner BEM, at the exhibition on Wednesday to invited guests, most of whom had contributed to the collection.

Mr Haywood described it as, an outstanding exhibition, that made, a very convincing point. He told guests that with the memories, "so very fresh in your minds," it must be, "disconcerting to see it as a museum," adding that it was, "clear and factual with personal touches."

Invited guest Don Bonner, who was chauffeur to 1982 Governor Rex Hunt was impressed with the collection. He told Penguin News he remembered making the request to the Argentine authorities after the invasion, that he be allowed to visit Government House every day in order to, "check on the house and the furniture," adding, "that's why I got the medal."

Don explained that having driven the soon to be exiled Governor Hunt to the airport, "I remember him saying to me, don't worry Don we'll be back."

A later memory involved telling Argentine troops not to, "dig in," around Government House because it would draw fire into the civilian community. Later that day the ADC to Argentine Commander General Menendez called on Don and passed the message: "Don't worry, when the British troops are three miles from Stanley we will surrender."

The exhibition will be open on Saturday and Sunday afternoons and some evenings, however, if residents are unable to make those times, "please call the museum as we are very happy to open up for you," said Mrs Roberts.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WELL what can you say? If Monday night is any evidence, it takes an awful lot to prevent the residents of the Falkland Islands from partying in honour of Her Majesty. Ice, snow, sleet and a minor flood and still they socialised on a beach in winter. Although, as a friend pointed out: "Not as brave as the Queen who spent a day on a barge in a skirt in the rain and then had to listen to Cheryl Cole; now that takes guts."

But while watching all of the pretty fabulous monarchical dazzle that enveloped the UK over the weekend, it still occurred to me to wonder with some amazement why British citizens have so much affection for an establishment that costs them so much money every year (billions when a royal gets married), despite the fact that 30 million British people live below the poverty line?

After all as one human rights activist pointed out: "Monarchs get the job for life, no matter how appallingly they behave." And it promotes class inequality does it not? Because: "According to the elitist values of the monarchical system, the most stupid, immoral royal is more fit to be head of state than the wisest, most ethical commoner."

But perhaps that's over-simplifying. Because if the head of state behaved appallingly would the British people support such an institution? And if she was as dumb as a box of frogs would they let her represent them around the world? Certainly not - in fact Britain would be a republic quick as you like.

It's probably more likely that the British people will "keep" the monarchy as long as they feel it's working for them and it's fairly obvious the majority still reasonably believes the constitutional monarchy is viable in the 21st century. And while republics might sneer at such an 'antiquated' system, the truth is Britain, even with a Buck House gang, has been continuously democratic rather longer than most countries.

And perhaps paradoxically, in the face of so many political changes in these busy, frightening modern times, the monarchy offers the people a degree of much needed symbolic timelessness and security; and if not the royal establishment itself, then certainly this particular, very well behaved, sovereign.

Look the truth is, I'm not a great follower of the doings of the royal family, but when you get down to brass tacks it's difficult not to admire a woman who works ridiculously hard, can blast a shot gun, ride a horse, control a pack of unruly dogs and grandchildren, and has managed to stay married to one man for decades.

All of my own mum's best attributes, what's not to like?

Giles inquest to close today

THE inquest into the death of Gilbert (Gil) Giles (63) who died as a result of a single vehicle road accident on January 22, 2011 was reopened in the Coroners Court on Monday.

Mr Giles was pronounced dead at the scene, known locally as Tingle Pass near the Roy Cove turn off, while Alastair Minto (52) sustained serious neck and spinal injuries and was medivacced to Chile the following day.

Taking evidence from witnesses who attended the accident scene and reading statements from medical and vehicle examiner experts, Her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley said it was his duty to, "fully, fairly and fearlessly," investigate the facts surrounding the event, stressing however that it was not his task to apportion blame.

Mr Gumsley concluded his enquiries on Wednesday afternoon and is to present his findings this morning (Friday).

The court heard that Mr Giles and Mr Minto had travelled from their home at Chartres on West Falkland to Hill Cove on January 22 and purchased two cases of beer each from the store. The storekeeper said both had had a drink but were, "not staggering."

Mr Minto and Mr Giles proceeded to Westley Farm, about half an hour away, where they visited with Juan Jose Hobman and Penni McKay and consumed two or three beers each. Mr Hobman said he and Ms McKay had offered the men to stay the night as they were always concerned about people being on the road if they had, "had a few beers."

Mr Giles was adamant, however, they should go home to feed dogs, fill peat buckets and cook the fish he had given them, said Mr Hobman.

A statement from Marie Paul Guillaumot told how she and her daughter were travelling to Fox

Bay and were first to arrive at the scene of the accident at approximately 7.45pm. They went to assist and found Mr Minto in the driver's seat, injured but able to respond verbally while Mr Giles was not responding.

She said her daughter returned to Hill Cove to get help and returned with Tony Hirtle who checked Mr Giles and considered him to be dead.

Further evidence told of how Dr Rebecca Edwards and trained first aiders arrived at the scene from Fox Bay, the care administered to Mr Minto and the consequent journey to Hill Cove for the patient and the deceased to be air lifted by helicopter to Stanley.

A blood test from Mr Minto revealed 343 mg of alcohol in his system (80mg is the legal limit) while a test on blood from Mr Giles gave a zero reading. Mr Gumsley questioned the reliability of the test given that differing print outs of the test with incorrect timings had been presented to the court. "I take it the computer can just spew out whatever it feels like," he said.

PC Richard Moorhouse inspected the 110 Land Rover after the accident and described it as dangerous. "It's the worst vehicle I have ever seen," he said, adding that none of the brakes were, "as the manufacturer intended."

Mr Minto was the final witness to give evidence. He had been friends with Mr Giles since 1977 and although he had driven on the West a, "fair bit" he was not familiar with some of the roads, he told the court.

Mr Minto exercised his right to not answer on the grounds it may incriminate him, questions relating to the condition of the vehicle, who had been driving and how much alcohol had been consumed on the day.

The Coroners Court resumes at 9.30 am today.

Biscoe Kid plays Diamond Jubilee part

ISLANDER Joan Spruce spotted a little bit of Falklands history in the Jubilee celebrations on the Thames on the weekend.

She said, "On SKY TV we were watching the Thames Jubilee flotilla tooting up river, and there was a little red motor boat keeping in line with the SKY News launch. It appeared quite often. It was the smallest motorboat belonging to the former British Antarctic Survey ship John Biscoe, and was called Biscoe Kid.

FIH plans

Mr Foster said that as a result of the FIH Group's successful financial year they now had, "the capacity to invest in the Falklands and that is very much the focus of our future plans. We will keep the ferry (Portsmouth Harbour Ferry Company is also operated by FIH) and Momart, (handling and storage company) ticking over, but our focus is on Stanley and we will take full advantage of the growth we see coming from oil. It's a special moment and it's very exciting."

The main financial growth over the past years comes as result of recovery at Momart, and further progress at Gosport Ferry. Last year FIC had a "great year" on the back of the arrival of the drill rig Ocean Guardian.

FIH also has shares in oil company FOGIL which will begin to drill in July this year.

FIH Highlights: Group revenue increased by 7.1% to £34.11million (2011: £31.84million). Underlying operating profit up 21.8% at £3.57million (2011: £2.93million). Underlying pre-tax profits up 18.3% to £3.23million (2011: £2.73million). Fully diluted earnings per share increased by 27.2% to 26.2p (2011: 20.6p). Bank borrowings at 31 March 2012 reduced to £3.0million (2011: £4.0million). Cash balances of £2.8million (2011: £2.1million). Increased final dividend of 7p per share (2011 5.5p). Total dividends for the year of 11p per share, up 15.8% (2011: 9.5p per share).

FICS remembers

FAKLAND Islands Community School students will be attend a special assembly to honour those who were killed during the 1982 war on Monday. After the assembly, and for the subsequent two days, students will be following a special timetable of commemoration activities. Headmaster David Tongue said the activities will be an "excellent opportunity for students to commemorate the 30th Anniversary of the Liberation and showcase the diverse range of skills they possess" by creating personal reflections on the War from a youthful perspective.

IJS arty day

INFANT Junior School and Camp Education are holding an open day on Friday June 15 to showcase their Falklands 30 exhibition.

Deputy Head of IJS Karen Steen said the day will be an, "opportunity to view the amazing artwork the children produced with Falklands Conservation's Protected Areas Strategy."

Everyone is welcome to view the Falklands 30 exhibition in the IJS & CE hall from 10am until 4pm on Friday June 15.

Tom Short and Ciaran Nye queue for a hot snack

Heartwarming spud fundraiser

"JUST what you need on a cold day" said Deborah Hollingworth, English teacher at Falkland Islands Community School. Ali Ford and her happy helpers were serving hot baked potatoes stuffed to the brim with chilli and cheese to very grateful students at FICS on Friday.

The break time treat raised around £100, and was organised in support of a staff member who will travel overseas for medical treatment.

Even with four ovens blasting out 49 baked lovelies the potato stuffers couldn't keep up with demand, "we're planning a cake sale next," said Mrs Ford.

FICS staff would like to extend their grateful thanks to Fitzroy farm for donating the delicious potatoes and Falkland Farmers for the serving boxes.

Planning update

OF twelve applications for planning permission put before the Planning and Building Committee on Thursday, nine were approved with conditions while one was deferred and two refused.

The erection of a garden shed north of the house at 24 Goss Road was approved for Carol Cant as was the siting for a lay-down area and excavations for warehouse foundations for Byron Holding Ltd at 1-3 Boxer Bridge.

Permission for two 40 foot containers to be sited on the road at 11 and 21 Mink Park (the latter retrospectively) while house construction took place was also approved with time restrictions and the condition that advice was sought from the Highways Section to prevent damage to the road surface.

Permission was granted to replace a garage structure with a building for storage and offices for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office at Government House and also for the change of use from dwelling to hair salon for Michelle Minnell at 1A Brandon Road with the condition two parking spaces be provided within two months.

It was noted the latter had been used as a salon in the past without any traffic problems.

It was agreed that a porch at Len and Jan Clifton's Wyseplan at 2 Murray Heights should be replaced with an extension to the north elevation, for the temporary siting of a Portakabin and container for storage at the Dockyard, Ross Road for the Museum and National Trust and finally for the erection of a shed and full planning permission to re-site a compression unit for Stanley Services Ltd at the Tax Office Car Park.

An outline application by Vladimir Sytchov to build a house at 1 Felton Court was deferred for more detailed information on the size, positioning and subdivision of the plot was received.

Donna Henry's outline application to build a house and site temporary accommodation during construction at land to the north west of the Old ESRO Station at Moody Brook was refused. The committee considered the application premature until such time as the potential for a housing development in this location had been assessed and evaluated.

A request for a temporary relaxation of a condition that only family members live at the Wyseplan at 1A Hebe Street was also refused.

New FIG posts listed

TWELVE of the 25 posts considered by ExCo and the Budget Committee recently are already on the current FIG establishment and are simply having either extensions to their term, being funded again or are having their hours increased to meet new levels of operational requirements, confirmed Hilary MacFarland of Human Resources.

Mrs MacFarland said that as a result she would not provide salaries, "for each and every post because, as noted above, nearly half of these decisions relate to existing postholders and we don't publish individual salary information. I can however provide the grades for newly created posts, where one currently exists."

In relation to the remaining 14 posts she said, "There are six full time, permanent posts which are new to the current establishment. These consist of: one Director of Health or Education (final grade yet to be established), one Maths/PE Teacher (Grade C), two Police Constables (Grade G/F), a Deputy Director for PWD (final grade yet to be established), and a Statistics and Performance Officer (final grade yet to be established)."

In addition to those permanent posts, five new fixed term posts have also been created. They consist of a Legislative Drafter post (final grade yet to be finalised), one GP post (final grade yet to be established), one Intervention Teacher (final grade yet to be established), one Youth to Young Adult Support Worker (final grade yet to be established) and one Learning Support Assistant (Grade G).

There are also two posts which are being considered further by their relative departments.

CFK's latest rant

ARGENTINE President Cristina Kirchner has claimed that oil companies Rockhopper Exploration, Desire Petroleum, Falkland Oil & Gas and Borders & Southern Petroleum are engaged in, "illegal and clandestine activities," by drilling around the Falklands. The British government has responded to the latest Argentine threat by saying it would work with any company that faces legal action. A Foreign Office spokeswoman said: "These latest attempts to damage the livelihoods of the Falkland Islands people regrettably reflect a pattern of behaviour by the Argentine government."

"From harassing Falklands shipping to threatening the islanders' air links with Chile, Argentina's efforts to intimidate the Falklands are illegal, unbecoming and wholly counter-productive."

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE lighting of the Diamond Jubilee beacon at Surf Bay was a wonderful opportunity to link with the UK and the rest of the Commonwealth as others were lit around the world celebrating the Queen's sixty years of devotion to duty. It is one of the events that grandchildren will be able to tell their grandchildren about. As sparks floated seaward and the tide splashed in, all the participants aged 0 to 70+, matched the stoicism shown along the Thames last Sunday as in our case sleet instead of rain drifted down. Even as the very high tide lapped into the beer tent enjoyment was undiminished. Congratulations to the Sea Cadets and all the other organisers of the celebratory events which, like the thanksgiving service at the Cathedral, have been enjoyed by a great cross section of the population.

*****

I HAVE a shortened week with the monthly portfolio meeting for Mineral Resources, normal weekly with the Governor and Chief Executive plus Planning, Lands and Medical committees. The CE brings other officers to brief members on current issues. On other occasions we request the attendance of one or more officers to answer questions or give additional briefings when needed. The requirement for members to spend more time overseas is creating some problems in making time to work on policies. It seems wrong for any member to be excluded from important policy decisions when their absence is on council business. In effect they and their constituents are disenfranchised.

*****

THE latest Argentine pronouncement on Falkland oil exploration claiming it is illegal and clandestine has caused some amusement as clearly they do not understand the meaning of clandestine and of course they ignore the fact that we have our own Government and the clear legal right to our own natural resources. I guess we can expect more of the same for the life of the present Argentine government which seems to place disproportionate effort on the Falklands given the very evident problems they have at home. Various independent assessments of their level of inflation show it is more than double their published official figures.

Licensed fishery for grenadier?

STEPS are being taken by the industry to establish a licensed fishery for grenadier for an initial period of three years.

In 2009 the option of converting the grenadier fishery from exploratory status to an ITQ fishery was considered, but not progressed.

Director of Mineral Resources, David Barton said it was now considered preferable to run the grenadier fishery as a licensed commercial fishery for three years, prior to entry into the ITQ system.

He said that despite the volume of survey work, some uncertainty remained as to the potential yield of the stock and how it would respond to more prolonged fishing. As a consequence, the total allowable catch may require some adjustment in the early years.

Mr Barton explained the Loligo fishery started with around 60 vessels and a five month season in the first part of the year. That fishery now operates with 16 vessels and for approximately seven weeks.

"We may know more about grenadier than we did about Loligo at the outset of the fishery, but there is still some uncertainty," he said.

Licensing for three years would allow more data to be collected, and a licence arrangement would provide more flexibility for amending conditions if that proved necessary, Mr Barton told Penguin News.

He said at Tuesday's Fisheries Committee meeting a range of conservation measures were proposed relating to grenadier, toothfish and deepwater coral among others.

One of the big issues to resolve was that of potential toothfish by-catch, a concern echoed by Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association (FIFCA) representatives on the committee, explained Mr Barton, adding that the next step was to try to resolve some of the issues discussed and submit a paper to Executive Council.

Exploratory fishing and surveys of grenadier have been undertaken using Byron/Nores Marine vessels since 2006. There have been seven surveys conducted to date with the last in May and June 2011.

New contracts for KEMH

THE surgical and anaesthetic contract for the hospital is to be taken over by Templar Medical Agency from July 1 2012, for a three year period.

At Thursday's meeting of the Health and Medical Committee on yesterday the Director of Health and Education David Jenkins noted his thanks to Island Health Services for the "fantastic job they have done over a number of years." A formal handover between providers would commence on June 26, 2012.

The radiography contract was recently re-tendered as the contract with the current provider of the service, X-Change Ltd, expires on July 31, 2012. The Tender Board is currently reviewing tender submissions and it is hoped an announcement would be made about this service in June 2012, said Mr Jenkins.

The opticians contract also expires on June 30, 2012. Expressions of interest in providing this service are being sought and it is hoped an announcement shall also be made this month.

Canada backs the Falklands

MOST participants in the Organisation of American States annual meeting in Bolivia on Tuesday backed Argentina's claim to the Falklands Islands and called on Britain to begin talks toward a peaceful resolution of the dispute.

Canada however, echoed Britain's position on the Falklands: that the Islands' residents have the right to decide their own future. The US took no position.

Canadian representative, Allan Culham said, "Canada believes that only the inhabitants of the Falkland Islands can determine their own future. We therefore do not support the resolution as it is drafted. Canada disassociates itself from the text and asks that this statement be read into the record of the meeting. Canada believes that we should use the General Assembly to address common challenges faced by our citizens by working to create a more prosperous, secure and democratic hemisphere."

Various foreign ministers from OAS member states read resolutions supporting Argentina. Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman said his government had extended its hand to Britain to, "start a dialogue and resolve this colonial conflict."

OAS British delegate Fiona Clouder said, "The future of the Islands is not in the hands of the UK or Argentina, nor any other country represented here at the assembly. It is in the hands of the people of the Falklands."

A crazy coronation adventure

WHILE more than 400 Falklands residents braved the elements to celebrate the lighting of the Jubilee beacons on Monday night, two men took it one step further sixty years earlier.

Islanders Finlay Ferguson and Bill Davis were in their late teens at the time of Her Majesty the Queen's coronation in 1952 and living and working on Weddell Island. Utterly determined to join in with the celebrations they decided to row a 14 foot heavy wooden dinghy from Weddell Island to Fagin Inlet and then on to Port Stephens.

Bill explained: "Just after lunch we set off and at the start all was going well, with a light wind from the West and the tide running with us. But by the time we got to Dyke Island Pass the tide had changed and was against us and running at around seven knots and that slowed us down somewhat."

They determinedly continued on to Fagin Inlet by which time it was getting dark, and followed by a long row to the Head.

"On the way we could see the flares going up," said Bill, "and once we hit the beach there was a one mile walk to the settlement of Port Stephens."

The pair had a night of celebrating and dancing before heading home the next day on board the Weddell Schooner.

It was worth the long haul said, Bill: "All we had to say was God Save the Queen."

Goose Green party marks thirtieth

THE thirtieth anniversary of the liberation of Goose Green was respectfully marked with a well attended service on May 29, and made even more poignant with the presentation of a Union Flag signed by the 2 Para veterans who liberated the farm and its 115 residents from Argentine occupation in 1982.

Veterans John Gartshore, Alan Walker and Mike Baker presented Farm Manager Keith Alazia with the flag, which John carried to the Islands in 1982 aboard the ferry Norland.

The imprisoned left their mark on history too by officially recording where they slept on a plan of Goose Green Hall, kindly drawn by Colin Shepherd.

An official party to celebrate the liberation of the Goose Green residents followed, "and the merry band who braved weather and road had a terrific time," Maggie Battersby told Penguin News.

She said: "All enjoyed the marvellous arrangement of food prepared in the Hall by Trudie Lee of the Galley Café, and it was a reminder of how our hot meals were prepared 30 years ago.

"Para veteran Kevin Ormond produced a cake of his usual incredibly high standards and his daughter Krysteen read out the names of absent friends.

"Accommodation was made available in the settlement for those who wished to not repeat their sleeping arrangements of 1982, but a few did stay on to sleep over either on the floor, chairs and more luxurious inflatable beds for old folk like myself. It was a happy gathering of veterans, and Goose Green residents past and present shared with the generations of the families of the interned."

Mrs Battersby explained that by holding the celebration at Goose Green: "The place and the people involved were not separated which is often the case, as the celebration is usually held in Stanley.

"The Goose Green Liberation Committee majority vote was taken last year that this celebration should always include the present population of Goose Green and the Hall is a vital part of their history and current life; long may it continue."

She said, "Huge thanks to the children of Goose Green who contributed wonderful pictures to decorate the hall for this occasion and to the residents for their hospitality."

Medical Matters by KEMH Manager Michael Poole

THIS week's article aims to summarise the process expected of the individual and of KEMH when a patient returns from medical treatment overseas. The process is the same for patients returning from UK or from South America.

Firstly, when a patient is coming up to their return date to the Islands, KEMH do ask patients to please get as much information from their doctor, surgeon or specialist as possible regarding their future and ongoing care. This may include scans, details of medications, referral notes and other medical feedback. KEMH do receive this information from overseas clinicians but it can often take some time to come through, so the more the patient is able to collect, the easier it is for their GP to plan their care once they return to the Islands. On some occasions if a patient has registered with a GP in the UK, results may be forwarded there, so if they can it is always helpful to leave KEMH's forwarding details with that GP's office.

Once a patient is back in the Islands then they are asked to attend an appointment with both casualty and their GP. The purpose of the appointment in casualty is to ensure that the patient is free from any hospital-acquired infections from overseas on their return. The appointment with the GP is to plan their future care. The MTO clerk will contact all patients to ensure appointments are made available as soon as is possible.

Finally, the patient may also wish to organise a meeting with the MTO Clerk to provide feedback about their practical experience and to organise any financial refunds due (see article last week). This feedback, whether positive or negative, assists KEMH in developing their service and improving the experience of patients in the future.

Next weeks final article regarding medical treatment overseas shall focus on the new £300 charge that is to be imposed on the 1st July as was announced in last weeks Budget. It shall also make reference to ideas KEMH have about how to develop the service in the future.

Life and times of Hank Williams

Don is Alistair Jacobsen's father and came to the Falklands in March 1951 on a five year contract to work at Port Howard aged 18. He lives in Westbury at his home named Mt Rosalie after a favourite spot at Port Howard. He returned to the Islands in 2005 and was welcomed with the same hospitality he extends to family and friends from the Islands.

I AM a lover of boats, but such was the foulness of the weather yesterday (I write this on the third day of the Diamond Jubilee long weekend) that I could not summon up the will to walk the mile or two from our London flat to the banks of the Thames. Instead, I settled down in front of the TV to watch the greatest river pageant since the 17th Century days of Charles II. You probably did the same in the Falklands.

I cannot say that I was impressed by every minute and every aspect of the spectacle. I was particularly irritated by the TV presenters: in the main, breakfast telly, reality show hosts and celebrities who knew precious little about boats and rivers. I pined for the Dimbleby clan and maritime historians who could actually tell us what we were seeing among the great throng of boats, and do so with a degree of gravitas.

"This is the kind of thing the British do so well," said someone who I believe had appeared on Strictly Come Dancing. This was a popular refrain, and I heard it, or something similar, an annoying number of times. If organising boats to motor down a river, much as they do every day, but this time all at once, is considered the apex of British achievement these days, then I worry.

I did not worry for the Queen

Veins of steel standing hour after hour

and the Duke of Edinburgh, however. As one of my friends said, they must have veins of steel, to stand hour after hour, smiling and waving. They did so first from the beautiful royal barge as they led the cavalcade past the throngs of people who were braver than me and watched five-deep from the banks of the river. And then they did so from a mooring near Tower Bridge, as the boats that had been behind the royal barge, now paraded past them. As far as I could tell, the Queen and the Duke had a couple of gorgeous ermine-covered chairs to sit on, but they did not do so. They stood to reciprocate the respect that was being shown them. I certainly do not know any octogenarians who could do the same.

The BBC commentators and celebrities were often downright silly, but their enthusiasm did, at least, reflect the huge popular admiration for the Queen. We don't need jubilees to know this. It is everywhere, it is obvious and it is genuine. Even many republicans – who may make up around 30 per cent of the UK population – admire and like the current monarch, although they deplore the anachronism of the institution. Everyone knows that Elizabeth Regina has been totally dedicated to her role for every day of her 60 years on the throne, and that she will go on being so until her final day.

She is, I believe, respected for not handing over to a less trusted younger generation, who may be prepared to use their influence to pursue their own agendas. The Queen never expresses her political views or indulges in gratuitous displays of vulgar wealth and hedonism. The image of the Queen in her private hours, warming her feet over a two bar electric heater and spooning food into bowls for the corgis was probably never accurate, but it still exists, and we believe the Queen is, therefore, not too different to us.

The Queen's personal involvement with the Falklands has, perhaps, not been great. She has never visited (and Whitehall would surely not allow her or the Duke to do so now for fear of the certain outcry in Buenos Aires). But most of her family have done so; notably the Duke of Edinburgh in 1957, and Andrew, who was a helicopter pilot during the war.

But I can tell you that the Queen is interested in the Falklands. When I was working at the Ministry of Defence's London HQ a few years ago, she visited the building where the Forces' global activities are administered. My boss in the Directorate of Media and Communications, Chris, decreed that the few members of his staff who would meet the Queen should demonstrate the directorate's ethnic diversity. Colleagues of Caribbean, Mediterranean and Indian origin were selected, and then Chris's gaze settled on me. "Graham: you'll do. You're from the colonies."

And so I was lined up to meet this surprisingly tiny and pretty lady as she was introduced to the work of the directorate. "And this," said Chris, as he led HRH down the short line of people, "is Graham. He's from the Falklands." He smiled, a tad smugly, I thought, at having produced such a rare creature.

Until this point, The Queen had smiled and uttered a few words to each individual. But, to my amazement, when she reached me, she wanted to talk. "My goodness! Are you really from the Falklands? How very interesting," she said.

We chatted about Andrew's role in the conflict for a full minute and then she beamed again and moved on. So there you go: she is interested in our islands.

I would say that the monarchy has survived mainly because of this woman. Whenever some embarrassing Royal headline made us wonder if the time had come for the House of Windsor to become a bike-riding European-style monarchy or to go altogether, the prospect of losing the second Queen Elizabeth makes us think again. The monarchy may not be as loved when other members of the family firm take on the top role. But as long as Britain has this Queen: this loved human icon of Britishness, the institution is safe.

Using our affection to good effect

This affection is of use to the Falklands in a very real way. When ordinary people in the UK see or read of Islanders demonstrating their fondness for the Queen, they instinctively know that Islanders are as British as they are. This proof of Falklands Britishness is powerfully political, and it can be – indeed is – used to good effect. The other political tenet of the Falklands' argument is self-determination. This right is still a good a basis for argument when engaging with South Americans, but it presses no emotional buttons among Brits. What matters to people in the UK is that Falkland Islanders share their love and respect British icons and institutions – and chief among them is The Queen.

I am sure that the Diamond Jubilee was celebrated in the Falklands, albeit on a much smaller scale than here in London. But I would hazard a guess that, as people raised their glasses to the monarch, they did so with the affection of British people everywhere. You have good reason to do so.

Fantastic madness

I APPRECIATE that a Beach Party in the middle of winter is not everyone's cup of tea. And I certainly agree that another function during the day would have been ideal.

It's just a shame that no one else stepped up to organise it, especially as financial help was readily available. Believe me I had more than enough to do without a second event. As for the timing, it was beyond our control, as one of the 4000+ official beacons worldwide our lighting time was allocated by the Pageant Master in London.

As it turned out we had a fantastic time, the beacon was an amazing spectacle, especially when the tide came in a bit more than predicted producing some fantastic views.

We even managed an impromptu water feature in the bar, and the heavens sent us a few snow flurries. All of which added to the event.

The crowd was fantastic, difficult to estimate, but we think about 400-500 with many more in cars above the beach.

The mood was happy with everyone enjoying themselves to the full.

A true display of British grit!

In closing, can I please thank the many supporters we had: those that supplied pallets/wood or other things we needed, the Public Works Department for the plant, Falkland Islands Tours and Travel for the bus service, the Falkland Islands Government for funding, the people that turned out to help on the night, Steve and Anna and helpers, Carlos and his team, 'Raffa' the DJ, and Sebastian and Ken and of course the public for its support on the night.

The Beach Party may have been Madness, but somehow I think that this won't be the last event of its type.

Blisters and bras for charity

MYSELF and a fellow university student and friend, Helen Darra-cott are taking part in a midnight marathon event in Edinburgh on June 9, the Moonwalk (yep the one in bras!) which raises funds for breast cancer awareness.

The funds go both to people with cancer and into research for a cure.

I feel very fortunate to have my health so a few blisters and the odd aching muscle seems to be of little consequence and if we can raise a little bit of money for our efforts then so much the better.

If you would like to support us we have set up a fund raising page http://www.walkthewalkfundraising.org/carol\_peck and would be very grateful for any donation large or small.

PUBLIC NOTICE ANNIVERSARY OF 30 YEARS OF LIBERATION 14 JUNE 2012

To mark the 30th Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands on 14th June 1982, a Service of Thanksgiving will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 10:00. Members of the public are asked to be seated by 09:45.

His Excellency the Governor and Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, together with Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister Jeremy Browne MP and other visiting dignitaries, Members of Legislative Assembly, representatives of the marching detachments, youth groups and 1982 Veterans will be in attendance. The Salamanca Band of Rifles will provide musical accompaniment throughout the service. The Parade, consisting of detachments from the Royal Navy, the Parachute Regiment representing the Army, Royal Air Force, Falkland Islands Defence Force and Falkland Islands Defence Force Association, with musical accompaniment provided by the Salamanca Band of the Rifles, will march from the Cathedral to the Liberation Monument for the Act of Remembrance. The Royal British Legion, Royal Marines Association and FIDF Association banners will accompany the Parade, together with SAMA Veterans.

The Act of Remembrance at the Liberation Monument will commence at 11:00 immediately following the arrival of HE the Governor. On arrival, the official party will receive a Royal Salute. During the Act of Remembrance the names of all British service personnel and Falkland Islands civilians who died during the war will be read. Following the Last Post, Silence and Reveille, wreaths will be laid. The Act of Remembrance will conclude with a Royal Salute. Thereafter, the Parade will march west towards Government House, turn around and then march in an easterly direction, giving an eyes right at the 1982 Memorial.

British Forces will thereby exercise their accorded Freedom of the Falkland Islands, supported by the FIDF. The freedom march will end at the Jetty Centre and troops will move (by bus) to the FIDF Headquarters in preparation for the Public Reception at 12:30. Weather permitting; there will be a flypast during the freedom march.

Youth groups will be represented at the Liberation Monument, and many of the civilian population that gave direct assistance to the Task Force in 1982 will congregate in a group and a wreath will be laid on their behalf.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to worn during this day.

If the weather is extremely inclement the reading of names and extended march past may be cancelled.

Your questions answered

Q On May 30 and on June 1, 2012, the roads appeared not to have been gritted despite the slippery weather. Is it correct that PWD staff are unwilling to grit until daylight? Can you offer an explanation to why the roads were/are not gritted?

The following response was provided by Roads Engineer Simon Catton:

A On May 30 we made a mistake, although the road conditions were checked, it wasn't checked regularly enough and we missed the snow fall.

On June 1, 2012, we had a mechanical breakdown with one of our trucks. Because of the airbridge flight the second truck was tasked with gritting the MPA road starting at 4am that morning and it arrived back just before 8am so that town could be done. Gritting gangs are fully staffed and willing to go at our agreed times.

Queen's Jubilee celebrated in the warm glow of the beacon

There's always time for a quick paddle

SEVERAL hundred people gathered at the beach on Monday evening as the massive beacon was lit to celebrate Her Majesty the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

Food, music and liquid refreshments were available, and an interesting tot of hot spiced rum ensured the extremities were kept warm.

For the children the opportunity to guddle in the water and evade the ever rising tide in the dark and then build sand castles in the warm glow of the massive fire will surely be an abiding memory of celebrating Queen Elizabeth's 60 year reign.

More than 4,000 beacons were lit across the world with the final one flickering to life at the end of the Jubilee Concert held in front of Buckingham Palace.

The Falklands beacon was lit by Ken Newton and John Clifford, the main organiser of the event, assisted by Sebastian Secodo with only one match being used, John was pleased to report.

The main expenses, such as machinery for organising the event were absorbed by the Falkland Islands Government. John explained adding that the profits from the event would go towards the Sea Cadets.

He estimated that at one point there was approximately 400 hundred people on the beach with many vehicles parked on the surrounding banks.

IJS Parents Association Queens Jubilee Ball June 2, 2012

A FANTASTIC night was enjoyed by happy guests at the Queen's Jubilee Ball on Saturday night.

Effigies of Freddy Mercury were as popular as the more patriotic interpretations but the night certainly didn't drag; the sold-out event raised well over £2,000 for the Infant and Junior School.

Prizes for 'best dressed' went to Queenly grouse hunter Roddy Cordiero and Queen Bee Andrea Stanworth. There were also pot-luck winners with prize tickets hidden under seats, as well as a sold out raffle.

The Queen themed quiz was won by the Royal Corgis and entertainment continued with the Pushers encouraging the royal subjects out of their seat and on to the dance floor.

Organiser Leeann Harris couldn't

thank sponsors and helpers enough:

"Argos limited sponsored the event so people could enjoy a three course meal courtesy of Malvina House Hotel, with wine donated by Seafish Chandlery and cava on arrival donated by Carol and Dave Eynon," she said, adding thanks to everyone who helped make the night such an enjoyable night.

IJS Head Teacher Tom Hill said: "It's fantastic to have the community come together and to have raised so much money for the school."

"It brought together everyone in the school community the parents and the parent association, staff, the Education Board and school managers to raise money and have a great time."

West knees up for Her Majesty

FOLK from Port Stephens, Port Edgar, Manybranch, Sheffield and South Harbour all joined with Fox Bay residents for a lively Jubilee evening including a barbecue, bonfire and dancing in the club. There was a crown making competition for adults and children, and an art competition for the children (Kia Alazia won first prize for her age group and Vikki Berntsen won the prize for the Stanley House children).

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625. Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.
Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)
2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RIFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 1st June 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its new lowest value this season at AU$1,096 making it 689/kg clean in Stirling, up 3 pence. There was an offering of 39,341 bales this week, with a clearance rate of 84% which is an improvement on the previous two weeks.

Mid-micron and oddment fleeces remained the same this week, whilst the finer microns had a decrease in prices. It is hoped that due to this weeks sales the market may stabilise itself. There is a small offering of 28,332 bales predicted for next week.

With only one sale remaining this season, there was a good demand for mohair. There was a 99% clearance rate of the 68,595kg that were on offer this week. There is an estimated offer of 120,000kg for the final sale this month.

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST INVITATION TO TENDER

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation invites tenders from suitably experienced contractors interested in carrying out external decoration works. The works are to be carried out to Shackleton House and 8 Biggs Road. Interested parties must contact FIDC in the first instance to receive the Specification of Work and Tender Documents. We envisage the works to be carried out between 1st September 2012 and 30th November 2012. The closing date for receipt of tenders will be Friday 6th July 2012 at 16:30. Further information or queries should be directed to Jackie Gumsley or Kerry McRae at FIDC, telephone 27211 or email business@fidc.co.fk.

Falklands Landholdings has vacancies for General Farm Workers in North Arm, the principal duties involve stock work which requires someone able to ride a bike and keep working dogs, successful applicants will also be required to undertake all other forms of farm work.

This position would suit either a single person or a married couple; North Arm has a full time school.

These positions require someone able to operate effectively in a small team. Further information regarding this post may be had by contacting the Farm Manager North Arm and written applications should reach the General Manager FLH no later than 4.30 p.m. on Friday 15 June 2012.

Applications are invited to fill the positions of dock maintenance/night security workers at FIPASS. Duties include one week on night security duties followed by two weeks of barge and dock maintenance work under the supervision of the Dock Engineer.

Applicants must be conscientious workers, of sober habits, trustworthy and possess a valid driving licence and a forklift operators certificate. Preference will be given to applicants who have relevant experience and a knowledge of shot blasting and marine paint systems.

Written applications should be sent to ByronMcKay Port Services, P O Box 729, by 12 noon on Friday 15 June 2012.

Please contact the Human Resources Department – telephone 28420, fax 27212 or email hrcrlerk@flics.gov.fk for Job Descriptions, application forms and further information regarding terms and conditions of employment.

The Falkland Islands Company - Vacancies

We are looking to employ a Foodhall Manager at the West Store Complex. The successful candidates will be responsible for the day to day running of the Foodhall, Cafe and Peacocks Departments. Key responsibilities will include ordering of stock, sales and customer service, stock presentation and management, people management, departmental operations and any administrative duties. This is the biggest turnover department within FIC and the salary will reflect the importance of the role.

Applicants should ideally have a passion for retail, be up for every challenge and be able to motivate and develop staff whilst going that extra mile to ensure good customer service. Preference will be given to the candidate who has experience in a similar role.

The successful applicant must be prepared to work evenings, weekends and public holidays on a rota basis. For further information, please contact the West Store Manager – Tara Francis on 27635 or email tyflic@horizon.co.fk

The West Store Retail Complex has an immediate vacancy for a Customer Services Assistant to commence work in the Capstan Gift Shop, however they should also be willing to provide cover in other departments, if necessary.

The successful applicant must be aged 18 years and over, should have good people skills, be confident and able to work as part of a small team as well as being able to work unsupervised. They should be physically fit and willing to work weekends, public holidays and be prepared to be flexible during the busy Tourist Season. Applicants will also be expected to be actively involved with stock control and the merchandising of products.

This is an exciting and interesting position, based in Stanley's busiest Gift Store on the waterfront, which would suit someone interested in retail.

For further details and application forms, please contact Stan Davies on 27661.

Lay Member on Planning & Building Committee

Are you interested in the future development of Stanley and the Falkland Islands and would like to have some involvement in planning for this? If so, two places exist on the Planning & Building Committee for lay members to serve for a period of three years. Meetings are held on the first Thursday of every month. If you are interested then please submit an email or letter outlining your reasons for applying to the Environmental Planning Department, PO Box 611, Stanley by Friday 15th June 2012. For further information, please contact Fiona Wallace-Nannig on 28480 or e-mail fwallace-nannig.planning@taxation.gov.fk

Eli Sheridan was 12 years old in 1982: It was not long after the invasion and I had gone with my Dad to help a woman whose house had been shot up the night before, move to a safer house. While my Dad was helping move her bags to the car, I wandered off to see where the bullets had hit her house. I followed a bullet hole, which had entered the front of the house after smashing through a concrete fence post. It went through the front of the house, through a bedroom wall, went through both walls in the stairwell, the kitchen wall, the cabinetry on both sides of the kitchen, exited through the other exterior wall and buried itself into the terraced ground outside the kitchen window. I remember distinctly sitting there thinking to myself we were in big trouble. I was terrified and every time I heard a gunshot after that I was convinced it was coming through the walls to cut us down. Above: Eli with his father Duffy at their home in the USA and above right Eli and friend Tyssen Smith in Stanley in 1982

Thirty years on

Trish Henry was 11 years old in 1982: I remember seeing all the British troops coming ashore, having never seen that many people before, and then the air raids at San Carlos, hearing the warning whistles going off and running for cover. Once being caught outside when the planes were going over and being grabbed and put in the back of a trench whilst they were shooting at the planes overhead. Also the night that the Antelope exploded in the Bay; the sound of that I'll never forget. Above left: Trish today and above in 1982 with Michelle Minnell.

Sukey Cameron (now Falkland Islands Government Representative in London): In 1982, I was working for the Falkland Islands Association in London; up until 2nd April our job had been lobbying for the rights of Islanders and educating people as to where the Islands were. Suddenly, everyone knew where they were. I recall the total shock and disbelief on hearing the reports of the invasion; the fear of what may happen to everyone and the overwhelming concern that a 'deal' might be done against our wishes. The office was manned, in today's parlance, "24/7" and we (two permanent staff, Committee members and a band of volunteers) did everything we could to 'Keep the Falkland Islands British'. Left: Sukey Cameron at No 10 Downing Street in 1981 home at around 1530 hrs on Tuesday April 27, some had pistols in their hands, demanding that they had come to take us all away immediately. They wouldn't tell us where we were being taken. My wife Marie and I had a quick conversation to decide if she should stay with our daughters and I should go alone. I was reluctant for us all to leave as my elderly parents were here in Stanley and I didn't want to leave them so we decided I would go on my own. Whilst all this was going on the Argentines kept shouting that we had to leave immediately. I quickly grabbed a change of clothes and toiletries and left with the military police probably less than 20 minutes after they had arrived. I was, together with 13 other civilians, taken to Stanley Airport loaded onto a Puma helicopter and flown to Fox Bay where we stayed for the remainder of the occupation. When we arrived at the airport an Argentine Air Force Hercules aircraft was loading passengers and I had an awful feeling that we would also be put on that aircraft and flown to Argentina and probably be disappeared as thousands of Argentines had

 to stay during the conflict because of all Mum's family being here and then we only ever went back to sell our house in Scotland. I remember the day the pilot ejected out of the Harrier over Stanley as everybody was outside yelling, "look at this." I wasn't going to look as I was in the bath. The Argentines came to our house twice and made us stand outside while pointing guns at us while they searched the house, the first time they took Grandad Eynon's binoculars as they said Dad had been using them to spy. The second time they turned up to collect our Land Rover (while driving in our Land Rover) and it took ages to explain to them that they already had it. Above: 1982 Leeann pictured

Please take time to read this letter

It may well be my last
 The enemy's approaching
 So very, very fast.

We sailed two weeks
 Until dry land came into sight
 We crept into San Carlos
 Prepared to go and fight

The hills were covered in our fox holes
 Packed tight with lots of men
 Waiting to attack
 From their small and secret dens

Please take time to read this letter

It may well be my last
 The enemy's approaching
 So very, very fast

Thirty years from now
 As I walk back through those fields
 The fox holes are overgrown
 And my blisters have all healed

But the flash backs still keep happening
 All night and all the day
 As I live my lonely life
 In sadness and dismay

Please take time to read this letter

It may well be my last
 The enemy's approaching
 So very, very fast

The invasion and the BBC

BBC Latin America Correspondent Harold Briley was in Buenos Aires and filed the first report telling the world the 1982 invasion was under way. This special 30th anniversary report for Penguin News is his eye-witness account based on his reports.

Countdown to invasion

Dateline, Buenos Aires. 30 March to 2 April, 1982: The fateful four days leading to invasion transformed violent public protest against the Junta to euphoric support.

Tuesday, 30 March: Defying the ban on demonstrations, I joined a mob of thousands of people in Buenos Aires main square, the Plaza de Mayo, attempting to storm the Presidential Palace, demanding justice and an end to mass abductions, torture and murder.

General Galtieri was hiding inside. Unknown to the demonstrators he had already given the order on March 26 to invade. His forces were mobilising and on the move.

The demonstrators were driven back by tear gas, water cannon, rubber bullets and helmeted riot police on horse-back with flailing batons. I leaned my short-wave radio against a tall building to get better reception of BBC World Service news. The building was a bad choice - the Interior Ministry where its ruthless agents had for years monitored my broadcasts. I was surrounded by police who thrust their rifles in my back and stomach, accusing me of directing the rioters on a walkie-talkie radio. No, I told them, I was just listening to the BBC five o'clock news! I made my escape to file my despatch.

Wednesday, 31 March: In a savage clamp-down, arrests reached 2,000 in Buenos Aires and hundreds more elsewhere. Many demonstrators had been wounded by rubber bullets and real bullets, and others badly beaten up in what newspapers called 'a brutal day of rag'.

Thursday, 1 April: I was back in the square for a different demonstration, the weekly gathering of the long-suffering 'Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo', demonstrating in silence and sadness, demanding to know the fate of their missing sons and daughters, kidnapped and murdered by the same military regime to which successive British Governments wanted to hand over the Falkland Islands.

Friday, 2 April: News of the overnight invasion filled the square with demonstrators, this time yelling their praise of Galtieri, shouting "Las Malvinas son Argentinas" (The Falklands are Argentine). He emerged onto the balcony enjoying the crowds' adulation, and barking defiance of Britain.

It was an astonishing change of

AUTHOR of the article Harold Briley was the BBC Latin America Correspondent between 1979-1983 and reported on Argentina's military repression of that country's people for many years prior to the Falklands invasion.

He first broadcast on BBC's Calling the Falklands in 1971, and many times during the war, and was the first journalist to broadcast news of the invasion worldwide. He was co-editor of the Falkland Islands Association newsletter magazine for 13 years and a founder member of the Shackleton Scholarship Fund. Harold is an honorary life member of the 'Gluepot' club in Stanley.

mood and reversal of fortune for the Junta, saved from imminent collapse. The euphoria was short-lived. I was back in the square, 74 days, three arrests and 300 BBC despatches later.

June 14: The summer sunshine of invasion day had turned to a cold winter's night and a small crowd were baying for Galtieri's blood. They threatened to beat me up as they had on 2 April but I could run fast in those days!

Calling the Falklands

British newspapers praised the BBC's unique ability to transmit, "messages of hope," to the beleaguered Islanders voiced by family, friends, government ministers and officials including Rex Hunt, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and even the Queen. Veteran newsreader, Peter King, was recalled from retirement as main presenter of 'Calling the Falklands', whose broadcasts were greatly extended. His rallying cry, "Heads Down, Hearts Up," raised Islanders' morale. Because I had many friends in the Islands, I made a practice of broadcasting a special personal 'Letter of the Air' to them every week. I abandoned formality with my first 'Letter of the Air'.

"I've been wondering how to start this letter and decided it should not be 'Dear Kelpers' because that is too formal for the kind of people you are. I'm often asked in Britain or here in Argentina 'What are the Falkland Islanders really like?' I always answer: 'Well they are the friendliest people I've ever met. I've told them how your doors are always open and there's always a cup of tea and cakes waiting. And a roaring peat fire to keep warm by in winter. And I keep saying if there are any people in the world who deserve to be left alone in peace, it's you. Sadly that's not happened.

"To me it's just so out of place to see all those Argentine soldiers on television with their guns and ugly vehicles churning up what few roads you have and the grass you need for the sheep. I've been listening again to some of your voices on tape from when I was last with you. Des Peck, for instance, singing his patriotic songs and reciting his poems. 'There'll Always be a Falklands' and 'This

Little Bit of Heaven'. You know how they go:

'Why are these Islands so peaceful

The answer really must be:

They really are part of Heaven

Which came tumbling down to the sea'.

"Well no one can say it quite like Des and no one, just no one, plays the guitar like he does. I wonder, Des, whether you are entertaining the Argentine troops with your songs about how the Royal Navy always beat the Germans to keep the Falklands free? I often think of you flogging all those British carpets and English china tea sets to the Argies as you called the tourists, and the T-shirts, the ones saying 'The Falklands are beautiful and British'. I'm sorry to say the shops here in Buenos Aires are full of T-shirts saying 'The Malvinas son Argentinas'. They're not really as attractive as yours. The ordinary Argentines here, unlike the generals, are really nice people. They all really believe the islands belong to them because that's what they're taught from childhood. But they all say to me they don't want any harm to come to any of you. I hope somehow a peaceful way will be found and think it will.

I would like to send a special message to you, Patrick at the radio station as a fellow broadcaster and the last Islander I managed to speak to on the telephone on the eve of the invasion. Remember when I last saw you we were stalking the penguins on the beach near the airport in the wind and wet, on our knees trying to get a picture and they weren't being very co-operative.

Well, I've heard what a great job you did reporting the invasion until the troops burst into your studio. People have said to me 'Patrick should get a medal'. I think you all deserve a medal. At least you can't say any more, as you often said to me, 'Tell them back home and in the rest of the world what we are as no one seems to know.' Now, everyone knows. I'm sorry it happened the way it did. Hope to chat to you again next week and to see you all soon. This is Harold Briley in Buenos Aires saying Goodbye and Good luck".

Not quite orthodox balanced BBC but special exemption was made for 'Calling the Falklands'. The programme was axed a few years ago after 64 years on the air. All its archives were lost, including its historic Falklands invasion coverage.

Because so little was known about the Falkland Islands, I broadcast a report for the long-running programme, 'From Our Own Correspondent,' comparing the two communities and their attitudes.

"The tranquillity of the Islands was far from the world's mainstream and that's how the Islanders wanted to stay. To them it did not seem much to ask. To Argentina's rulers it was an affront to their national pride. To Britain, it was a relic of Empire, once ironically a vital naval base, now an inconvenience, an embarrassment to better relations with Argentina. But, the British Government insisted, the Islanders' wishes were paramount. And to Britain it is people who matter. To Argentina's military establishment, people are not so high in their order of priority, as they have so often ruthlessly demonstrated.

Their human rights record is one of the worst in Latin America. You could not anywhere find such a yawning gap of incompatibility between two sets of people... the Latin American military with its macho, iron fist approach... and the simple life-style of the Falklanders - the shepherd alone on horseback except for his dogs and the sheep in the rain and the biting wind, his wife warming herself with the peat they dig themselves... baking their own bread, sometimes teaching her own children in tiny farm schoolrooms.

So often they tried to explain to me why they loved the life so much... the peace, tranquillity, a place where delightfully robust, red-checked children roam happily, and romp with the penguins without fear of harm or molestation. Now one set of people are trying to impose such an alien culture on the other. The military governor says there will be changes, replacing English with Spanish, driving on the right instead of the left, their colourful wildlife postage stamps, sought after the world over by collectors, have given way to the impersonal, ominous military rubber stamp.

The Islanders have been threatened with jail for showing "disrespect" to the invaders... a jail which until now hardly ever housed anyone except the occasional harmless drunk. The Governor has promised Islanders they will have the full rights of all Argentines under the Argentine Constitution.

The Petition at the Battle of Goose Green by a Christian Soldier

THEREFORE, take heed how you impugn our person.

How you awake our sleeping sword of war:

We charge you in the name of God, take heed.

For never two such kingdoms did contend

Without so much fall of blood, whose guiltless drops

Are every one a woe,

a sore complaint

'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords

William Shakespeare: 'Henry V'

The bitter abrasive Polar gale laced with snow surged violently over the mountain ridge, thrashing the stunted grass and stormed on down to tear at the bleak and desolate landscape below. This never-ending turmoil blinded the sight, stunted the voice, and looted the meagre heat; a wild will-eroding wind, wintering the flesh. Far out over the sea, a shaft of light pierced the overcast cloud and tinted the grey water-waste blue; an azure fragment of cold-warmth.

He looked across towards Darwin Hill. A paratrooper, bleeding from the head and heavy on a makeshift stretcher of corrugated iron, was being bundled down from the skyline, his friends hunched with effort; another suffering victim. Was this man his first casualty? Below, the grey smoke swirled over the gully where the confusion of command had been resolved in tragedy and virtuous courage. The Commander had died, but the intelligence of the subordinate commanders flourished, especially the unrewarded Mountaineer. Over the bay, another plume of white water blossomed up from the harassing artillery attack, the wind stealing the warning. Calling his commanders on the radio, he made the few decisions that would maintain the momentum of the assault; one commander holds the high ground, the other commanders courageously maintain the assault.

Grovelling up to look through the gorse hedged skyline, he snatched a glimpse of the Goose Green Settlement far out across the bland grass-land, stretching a bleak finger into the dark-blue Sound. Stark: boxed white and red, peaceful in the pale afternoon light; beyond grasp but not beyond reach. The bank suddenly throbbed with the in-coming cannon fire, the damp compacted earth swallowing the hammering impact. As he held the binoculars to his face a violent crack of bruising pain lashed his exposed wrist, the shock wave knocking him off balance, and he tumbled down into the peat. He slithered backwards with his radio operator towards the rusting strands of barbed wire, writhing over the vibrating spongy-wet peat. Then he was caught, ensnared by the Settler's fence and pinned down by razor-killing fire. Warily, he dropped his helmeted forehead into the soggy soil. There was no respite; in command and barely in control; bound by the task, caught in the network of promises to the valiant Para brotherhood he was leading, and deafened by the clamour of combat. Rolling his head round he saw his gallant Corporal, vainly attempting to elbow his own equipment free of the steel wire. Under the jarring crackling of the gunfire and the capricious mortar bombardment, their eyes met in humble laughter and silent mutual affection. In that moment, he realised that they were about to die. This soldier; this colleague; this kind of friend would be his last and local farewell. A surge of regret streamed through him, a dreadful sadness for his ignorance of this man, knowing the superficial but not the profound. In the fragments of still-time, he felt a penetrating anguish that he would leave behind this warrior-companion as a familiar stranger, separated by class, status, and convention, yet united in purpose, fused by affliction and entangled by wire.

Across the battlefield, the momentum was sustained. Everywhere each soldier, in concert, maintained their obedience to the overarching task, yet skilfully dissenting from the original plan, shattered by the chaos of combat. Even the very few radio orders he gave out after the Commander was killed, did not account for their sustained activity. He merely reinforced the original mission to capture the Settlement and placed the burden on each leader to achieve it. Rather, it was each man's courage, élan, and collaborative will to action, despite the constant nagging uncertainty and the fatigue, and the fear and the confusion that constantly assaulted their unity of purpose.

Later, the violent aerial napalm assault on the troops encircling the Settlement was answered by the devastating cluster bomb attack of the Harrier aircraft around the perimeter of Goose Green, which sucked the clamour out of the battle, leaving a troubled mood of suspension and muted apprehension: a breath-taking pause; perhaps an opportunity for the enemy to counter attack. As he stamped his cold feet, his boots crunched through the piecrust of ice into the spongy bog beneath. He looked down at the soggy leather streaked with white; they were beginning to freeze. His back muscles ached from the old parachuting injury as he swung the combat pack onto the ground. He was glad he could still feel the cold and have the wit to do something about it.

The gorse gully had filled up with dark shapes in the closing gloom around the remains of battalion headquarters and the regimental aid post that the brave medical officer had brought healing to the horror.

The paratroopers were scattered down the slope huddled over their weapons; their heads slumped forward in exhaustion. Someone was crying in his sleep. He stumbled down to the row of body bags and the Argentine casualties laid out amid the debris of medical wrappings; the bloody detritus of war. Thankfully, most of the battalion's injured had been evacuated by the outrageous bravery of the Army Air Corps pilots, brilliantly flying the land from the sky. They had ferried the logistics forward and taxied the casualties back with intuitive understanding and affectionate trust. Sadly, the priorities of pity had left some of the injured Argentine enemy still lying among their exhausted enemy; the inequalities of combat.

The smouldering gorse stung his eyes. He felt so tired. The start of the battle, forty hours earlier, seemed such an age ago, yet time had passed so swiftly. Now long-hours later, dusky forms were swimming inside his head with strange prickly images that muddled his mind: real and false impressions and soft-hard warm reassurances that were evaporated by the sudden darts of fear-filled reality. His thoughts went back to the Commander, his broken body lying-cold behind the Hill but his tenacious spirit on-fire in the Battalion's fighting-day. The leadership virtue of courage, the dedication in action to what is right and good had inspired his final act and enhanced his nobility of character. In both we could predict and so in both we could trust. In the perfect individual virtue would be effortless, in one less than perfect, virtue would be cherished, for valour!

He looked down at the crippled Argentine officer, who had waited behind to be evacuated last, mouthing a prayer in his peaty deathbed: 'Holy Mary, Mother of God, pray for us sinners now and at the hour of our death'. The man's warm life was slipping from his grasp in the darkening steel-cold night; his last lonely dying duty. The cold gripped him again. The snow flurry swept up the sparks of the burning gorse, spinning the polluted wood-smoke into his mind's fantasies. He sat down coughing; rolling back into the blackening burnt earth to lie still; alone; to think. 'Was he losing his grip?' 'What was real?' He mechanically pulled out his notebook, the pencil, and torch; all that remained of the battalion command post. He struggled to think. 'Where are we; what we trying to do; where to now?' The fuzzy imageries faded as he grappled with the paper.

The obvious foreword to the combat thinking process seemed impossibly elusive. He then remembered the first heading: Ground, but the mantra of the logic seemed meaningless. Ground? He repeated the word, clawing at the planning liturgy that everyone had learnt by heart.

Suddenly he was awake and clear. Ground - he began to write: 'bare-arsed corridor of land bounded by water, with no bloody cover.' 'So what; so there is little room for manoeuvre either side', he ventured mentally, 'except forwards or backwards! His mind moved to the second stage in the thinking process.

Enemy: 'The Argentine garrison was reinforced after the last-light Harrier attack, are still on the defensive, and have a three to one superiority'. 'What of their will to fight?' He sensed some weakness. 'We will not retreat and the enemy has nowhere to run.' His moral intuition cautioned restraint: 'if their will was broken, we could not continue to use violence; had they not as much right to live as we?'

Mission: 'What had changed? Nothing! 2 Para had not achieved the capture of the Argentine garrison at Goose Green!'

'The resources that had been inadequate at the start were now all most exhausted. One in nine of us are either killed or injured. We have a little belted-ammunition for the machine guns, no mortar rounds, the chine guns, no mortar rounds, the Navy has withdrawn, radio batteries are depleted and the proximity of the Settlers prevents the use of artillery. Our assault is dispersed across the approaches to the Settlement; cohesion has been fractured, and the polar wind has reduced the temperature to minus ten degrees wind-chill!'

'We are on our own'. 'It will be, as ever, a matter of will', he mused. 'Utrique Paratus!'

His sudden burst of clarity began to fade as his mind wandered into imagining what was happening across the battalion position; in the Settlement; back at San Carlos; in the Fleet; at home and his family; all beyond him, out there in the winter-dark. Time seemed to be suspended. It was as if the whole world appeared to be waiting. Were they waiting for him? They were out there, millions of faces looking over his shoulder; watching, lingering, eagerly knowledgeable and expectant; waiting for his decision. Across the water and high up, he thought he heard the distant clatter of a helicopter; RAF not Army; looking for our casualties? His eyes closed; it was warm again. The dancing shapes caught him up like a swing and spiralled him sluggishly, softly, to an inky down-there-world; safe and sound; quiet figures; recession. His thoughts seemed to smear across his understanding, like vapour trails of memory drawn on a dark sky-scape: clear and fading. He felt he was being called; softly yet urgently. He struggled upwards, pushing again against the drowning falling texture of the descent.

He awoke alone, cramped, aching cold. His bruised right arm ached. A moment later came the sickening call of the here-and-now truth. He rolled over and stood up, the wind pulling him into the night. He looked down at noise of the notebook's pages spinning over, waking him to his half-remembered duty. His stomach stalled as the awful dread returned; he was in command! He knelt down, rocked forward and began to write the word 'Ground' in the notebook again; forgetting his earlier thinking that seemed to have been blown away into the Polar night. The letters spilled down the page, blurred and crazy. Thought-shapes reeled and clouded with the letters. Slowly his helmeted head pitched forward into the warm ash, mixing the wood-smoke with his smudged words; the black-roots and the flickering torch-images; fantasy floating with form. He tried to write it again. 'Ground?' He looked at the word in puzzlement; another far-off part of him asked why he was writing, what for and for why?

With more determination, he wrote the word again as if its repetition would reveal its meaning. The oozy warmth returned, swelled, and embraced him as his helmet-head sank deeper into the charcoal gorse.

When he awoke, he was shivering. He felt anxious. He started to shake. He struggled to his feet and walked stiffly up the re-entrant to where he remembered he had left the company commander. He met him in the darkness. The man had the hooded anxiety of an exhausted prey; hunted down. He was buried backwards into the gorse, hunched and dirty-faced. The officer looked strained and tired as he whispered, "what the hell are we going to do now?" Other dark figures strained forward eager to hear the response.

Turning he slumped back into the bush beside him and looked vacantly at the officer's familiar pleading face. 'He wants answers from me and I have none', he thought. A spasm of fear jerked through his legs as he realised he had run out of ideas and had not the bravery to mouth his vacuous dread-ful thoughts. He felt the gripping vice of the psychological contract thrown up between follower and leader by the pathology of the crisis. He had to carry their anxieties and add them to his overwhelming sense of moral responsibility for his men's lives and those of the enemy in this wicked activity; he experienced the deep loneliness of command.

He struggled to his feet, turned away from the thicket of figures, and walked down the gully to be alone again; depression added to his exhaustion and fear. He thrust his gloved hands into the deep smock pockets seeking some warmth for his painful hands. His fingertips caught the edge of the buried plastic card. It was then he remembered the Prayer. He had laminated the short "invocation of abandonment" of Charles de Foucauld some years before and had carried it ever since. It is an awesome prayer; a prayer that needed a health warning; a prayer that called for God's Will to be done without reserve, with humility, in resignation. He knew the words by heart. He knelt down alone in the crowded burning gully, his acquiescent soul shivering in apprehension; uncertain yet sure; in his gethsemane moment. He contemplated the words of the petition:

My Father;

I abandon myself to you.

Do with me as you will.

Whatever you may do with me I thank you.

I am ready for anything.

I accept everything.

Provided your will is fulfilled in me and in all creatures, I ask for nothing more.

My Father;

As he concluded the prayer, the battlefield of despair fell away. Turbulence was replaced by tranquility, strain by serenity, and distress by determination. In place of the confusion, indecision and uncertainty arrived clarity; absolute clarity. He knew exactly, with blinding certainty, in perfect trust and absolute conviction, what action needed to be taken; an outrageous idea: full of authority, justice and peace! He felt warm, joyful, renewed. Inspired by the Holy Spirit, Hope flourished, and he felt the burden of command was now light. In place of the inability to manoeuvre came an outrageous idea. He would demand the surrender of the Argentine garrison at the Settlement of Goose Green and the release of the captive Settlers. He stumbled urgently back up the gully, framing the contours of the plan in his head as he went, full of understanding, excitement, and commitment.

After the Surrender, he replaced his steel helmet with his maroon beret and walked down into the Settlement. The Islanders were spilling out of the Community hall, laughing and crying with relief. Two little girls stepped out of the crowd of Settlers and shyly walked towards him, hand in hand; sisters ushered forward by their father.

The elder girl held up a miniature glass tankard containing a Falkland Islands' pound note, some coins, and a coil of paper. He knelt down, hoping his battle-filthy clothes and streaked-black face would not frighten the two children. They smiled at him as if he was a dear family uncle, as he un-wrapped the coil of paper and read the short mes-

To the Commanding Officer.

In appreciation for our Freedom.

The elder girl boldly looked him in the eyes and pressed him to receive their monetary gift, despite his resistance, adding a wise and powerful piece of reasoning, written on her young heart; 'our freedom is so precious, it is worth all our pocket money'. Looking up at the joyful Settlers he said: 'my men have been to hell and back and to hell and back again, but seeing the smiles on your faces we would do it again; for all of you'.

***

The Falklands conflict in 1982 was not just about who owned what rock in the South Atlantic. It is about liberty - the pursuit of the citizens' legitimate interests through their own self-determination. More importantly, it is about freedom - each person's capacity to make a moral choice for the Good; their own good; the others' good; the Common Good - without fear, duress, or coercion. Thus, the struggle not only freed the Falkland Islanders from a grotesque military occupation, but it also brought the collapse of the repressive undemocratic Argentine military junta, under whose jurisdiction eleven thousand men, women and children had their lives destroyed; tortured; thrown from aircraft; buried alive; to become the 'disappeared'. The awful fighting was as much about relieving the grief of the wailing widows outside the Casa Rosada, as liberating the traumatised Settlers inside Goose Green.

YES. Why do we all, seeing of a soldier, bless him?

Bless Our redcoats, our tars?

Both these being, the greater part, but frail clay, nay but foul clay.

Here it is: the heart, since proud, it calls the calling manly, gives a guess that, hopes that, makes believe, the men must be no less;

It fancies, feigns, deems, dears the artist after his art.

We place a very heavy moral obligation on the 'frail' and gallant warrior, ordered to do what is right and good through the proportional use of violence, with its profound absence of love, in a milieu that is wrong and bad by our principles of justice. Only the legitimate pursuit of peace can redeem the loveless outrage of the battlefield, absolve the Nation of any ethical guilt, and preserve the warrior's nobility of moral purpose for a just cause.

The values of liberty and freedom in the cause of a just peace is our British democratic legacy, which commands the defence of the Falkland Islander's claim to their homeland, for which the enduring sacrifice is the warriors' suffering and the families' sorrow.

Falklands War books

IN April 1982 Harry Benson was a 21-year-old Royal Navy commando helicopter pilot, fresh out of training and one of the youngest helicopter pilots to serve in the Falklands War. These pilots, nicknamed 'junglies', flew most of the land-based missions in the Falklands in their Sea King and Wessex helicopters. Much of what happened in the war - the politics, task force ships, Sea Harriers, landings, Paras and Marines - is well-known and documented. Almost nothing is known of the young commando helicopter pilots and aircrewmembers who made it all happen on land and sea.

AS the Falklands War got underway, the destroyer HMS Antrim, found herself steaming south through the Atlantic to spearhead the operation to recover South Georgia with 4.5 inch guns, anti-aircraft missiles and four Exocet missiles; she also carried one Wessex III helicopter, affectionately known as Humphrey, which was to play an extraordinary part in the subsequent action. Antrim's helicopter Observer, one of a crew of four, was 28-year-old Lieutenant Chris Parry who was soon in the thick of the action when the crew was ordered to land an SAS party on the forbidding Fortuna Glacier.

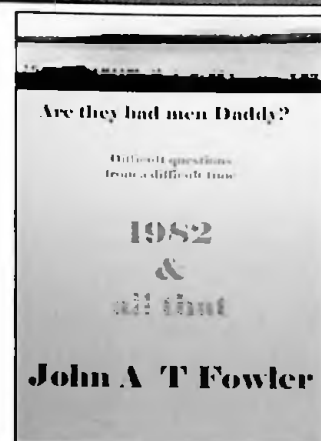

MORE than 70 merchant ships sailed with the Task Force in 1982. Some were Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels, but the majority were STUFT - ships taken from trade - and the officers and crew of those merchant vessels, all volunteers suddenly found themselves thrust into a war zone in the South Atlantic. The book combines personal accounts and documents to bring to life the events as viewed by the merchant ship crews who played such a vital role.

SEEN through the eyes of Section Commander George Thomsen, this inspiring first-hand account, tells of the tension-packed buildup, and the heroic stand, by a tiny band of brothers on South Georgia. They fought alone - besieged, isolated, and against an overwhelming invasion force - and yet had the enemy reeling on the ropes. This is the story of true British grit, sheer bloody-mindedness, professionalism and ingenuity.

Kindle books by local authors

THIS book chronicles the human response to being at home on the wrong side of a war, in a series of anecdotes which each deal with a different question: some difficult to answer, some humorous and some just plain mystifying. The author, John Fowler, was at the time Superintendent of Education for the Falkland Islands Government and it was in his house that the only civilian fatalities of the war occurred. This is John's account of what it was like to, "live in one of the most peaceful places on earth," when suddenly it became a scene of bloody conflict between the armed forces of Argentina and Britain.

Waking up to war

Lisa Watson tells a story of life as a twelve year old during the Falklands War

AIMED at the younger generation to explain how it is to be caught up in a war as a 12 year old, but equally enjoyed by an older generation interested in a brief taste of a long gone Falklands lifestyle, Waking up to war is written by Penguin News Editor Lisa Watson. Lisa uses themes of friendship and a love of horses and ponies to soften a traumatic experience, and to show how Falklands' parents attempted to keep life as normal as possible for their children. The story is a great way of learning both about Falklands life and the feelings of Falkland Islanders during the War.

The invasion and the BBC

He failed to mention it is a constitution contemptuously cast aside by military rule, denying Argentines themselves so many basic rights. What will the Argentines do with what they call their lost lands? They tell me they do not want to live there in the cold and the gales in the bleak South Atlantic. Perhaps they want the oil believed to lie offshore or the fish that teem in those same waters? The Argentines worship beef, not fish. So it comes down to obsessional nationalistic pride. The military have launched a repetitious propaganda campaign to condition the public's mind. Endlessly, snatches of television carry martial music and pictures of the armed forces in action under the blue and white national flag, warships, planes and troops shouting "¡Si Juro! Si Juro!" the Spanish for "I swear," the traditional reply to the Argentine military oath to swear to defend flag and country and to die if need be. The martial music is getting monotonous. Will that be enough to keep together a nation already split by so many deep divisions in the gravity of armed conflict and perhaps much bloodshed? The euphoria of invasion day and the epithets "glory", "patriotism", "victory" are giving way to sombre realisation of the magnitude of what may lie ahead. Many Argentines, ordinary, decent, humane people, as so many are outside the military, have voiced their misgivings to me. Their views echo what one Argentine acquaintance said to me: "El Presidente es loco!" "The President is mad. He is a general who has never been to war. He does not know what he has done."

My activities were kept under constant surveillance by six police special agents day and night and I was three times detained for questioning. Strict censorship was imposed on what journalists could report right down to the weather in the South Atlantic and the firepower of the British forces and any military information except from official sources. Journalists were warned they risked jail for reports causing panic, disunity or contradicting official information. The BBC was on a hiding to nothing.

I took no notice and continued reporting as accurately as I could even though Argentine officers were monitoring BBC broadcasts.

The BBC's freedom of the air waves gave it a long reach to all corners of the globe.

All of my several hundred despatches were broadcast worldwide uncensored and rebroadcast widely by other international media organisations.

Youth to United Nations

"REPRESENTING the Islands in any manner is a privilege," James Marsh, one of a group of young Islanders accompanying two Legislative Assembly Members to the United Nations, Special Committee on Decolonisation (C24) told Penguin News yesterday.

The youthful delegation, includes Senior Agricultural Advisor Andy Pollard, graduate Krysteen Ormond, KEMH Manager Michael Poole, Design Office Junior Technician Caris Stevens and Kelper Stores Manager Ailie Biggs. MLAs Mike Summers and Dick Sawle lead the group.

James said, "compared to some other members of the delegation my role here will be small, but I'm very proud to be able to play my part."

The aim of the group is to pass a firm message to Argentine president Cristina Kirchner, who will also attend the meeting, that Islanders want to remain British subjects and continue their current way of life.

The Islanders told the USA press that Argentina's dismissive attitude to Falkland Islanders is an insult to the generations of families who have forged a life there. The meeting was scheduled for today, June 14.

James told Associated Press: "We are sixth and seventh generation Falkland Islanders, our families forged a life in the Falklands when times were much less easy than they are now. It is an insult to those people that their endeavours, the 150 years we have been in the Falklands, are not recognised by the Argentine politicians."

He added: "I think the most important thing we can tell them is we are a vibrant, young, self-sufficient community who just want to be left in peace to forge our own future."

Ailie Biggs (29) also commented, "It is not often we are asked, a lot of the time it is discussions between Argentina and the UK. This is one opportunity, we really feel, where as Falkland Islanders we can say what we feel and we are the important ones in the equation - we are the ones who live there."

Referendum on Islands future

THE Falkland Islands Government is to hold a referendum on the Islanders wishes for their political future next year, "with the full support of the British Government," to eliminate any possible doubt about our wishes," Member of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly Gavin Short announced on Tuesday.

But any hopes it may assist in convincing the Argentine government of the Falklands population's views were immediately quashed as Senator Daniel Filmus of Cristina Kirchner's ruling party was reported in Clarin as saying it would not change Argentina's position which is always based on UN resolutions. The Head of the Commission for External Relations of the Chamber of Deputies, Guillermo Carmona, was quoted in La Nacion as saying: "This has no value as Argentina rejects the possibility of self-determination for an implanted population, as the British population of the Islands is."

FCO Minister Jeremy Browne and MLA Gavin Short

MLA Short said he had no doubt the people of the Falklands wish for the Islands to remain a self-governing overseas territory of the United Kingdom. "We certainly have no desire to be ruled by the government of Buenos Aires; a fact that is immediately obvious to anyone who has visited the Islands and heard our views. But we are aware that not everyone is able to come to these beautiful Islands and see the reality for themselves."

Penguin News asked several Islanders how valuable they thought holding a referendum would be.

John Ferguson said he thought timing was an issue, and a referendum held recently, and before the current C24 and 30th anniversary of 1982, "would have been more powerful than just announcing that it will be held next year."

He added: "We need to be clear to the international community about where we stand - not to us or the Argentines, we all know that the Islanders want to remain British."

Jacqui Jennings did not hold out much hope that the outcome of a referendum would do anything to persuade Argentina to alter its stance. "How we feel is obvious surely from all the media coverage, flag flying and support for the rally in February, but maybe an official message is needed," she concluded.

Roddy Napier had concerns about what other questions might be asked that could distort the final and most important question. "I can hardly believe they would go to all that effort and only ask one question," he said.

MLA Short said careful thought had been given to how best to convey a strong message to the outside world, "that expressed the view of the Falklands people in a clear democratic and incontestable way."

Visiting FCO Minister Jeremy Browne, said: "Only the Falkland Islands people can determine how they wish to be governed. So I very much support this initiative by the Falkland Islands Government. Indeed, I believe this referendum is a truly significant moment. It will give the Falkland Islands people the opportunity to send a clear message - not just to Argentina, but to the whole of the international community - that the Islanders, and they alone are masters of their fate."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

I WELCOME the idea of a referendum to demonstrate to the World how Islanders feel about the future, and it was great to have Jeremy Browne adding weight to the announcement on Tuesday morning. But being the old cynic I am I have no illusions it will change Argentina's or more precisely Cristina Kirchner's attitude, and I feel sure it won't stop her constant gnawing away at the Falklands issue, much like a dog with a bone, you could say.

One also can't help but wonder given the massive coverage and wide range of views shared in the media over the last year just how much it takes to get through with the message, but if it takes a referendum, then so be it. And I'm sure there is little or no doubt as to what the outcome will be.

AND so we are ready for Liberation Day. A day when we can proclaim our Britishness at every opportunity, while not forgetting the human cost of our freedom and our choice to live under the Union flag. This is a very special year, possibly the last major anniversary that both the military and civilian veterans will gather to share their stories, their hopes for the future and in our case express our gratitude. Freedom is a possession of inestimable value, and never more so than when you have had it taken away.

*****

IF like myself you have been lulled into an introspective mood, take a look at the findings of the inquest opposite. It made the hair stand up on the back of my neck to think how long we have got away without equally disastrous incidents taking place. Mr Gumsley rightly expressed horror at the idea of there being no law to prevent a drunken driver hurtling down the road towards you in a rickety vehicle. We know by the speed the ban on the import of legal highs came about that when there is a real need legislation can be put in place quickly. With a regular ferry service linking the East and West there should be no difference in the way the communities are treated and the designation of roads has been on the table for at least the last four years. Obviously I'm not suggesting a permanent police presence, but if the laws are in place there is a modicum of protection for innocent parties. And, when it comes to vehicle tax and insurance we would all be on a level playing field, even if we are driving on far from level surfaces.

Death result of injuries concludes HM Coroner

CONCLUDING the two day inquest into the death on January 22, 2011 of Gilbert Giles (63) on Friday, her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley found that he had died as a result of injuries sustained in the road traffic accident on the Hill Cove Road.

The evidence presented had caused him concern, said Mr Gumsley, adding that while he was satisfied that more than likely the alcoholic state of Alastair Minto, the driver of the 110 Land Rover owned by Mr Giles had contributed to the vehicle leaving the road and somersaulting, he was not satisfied it was unlawful killing.

Mr Gumsley found it was likely that the impairment of the driver through intoxication, the state of the road environment, and the condition of the vehicle had all caused or contributed to the accident.

He addressed the condition of the road, the lack of laws for drivers on West Falkland and parts of East Falkland and the lack of barriers on the section of road where the accident took place.

He said: "Although the lack of barrier did not cause the actual incident, once the vehicle had left the road I am satisfied that the lack of any form of barrier meant that the accident would be catastrophic and so caused or significantly contributed to death as a consequence". The Coroner also found that neither Mr Giles or the driver had been wearing a seatbelt which in his view, "was a factor in reducing the chances of survival."

Taking evidence from PC Richard Moorhouse during the inquest, Mr Gumsley had questioned the laws in place for driving on West Falklands roads. As public roads anyone could drive on them he established. "Is there any law which prevents someone who is paralytic hitting me?" No sir, replied PC Moorhouse. "Is there any law to prevent someone putting a heap of junk on the road?" No sir, replied PC Moorhouse. "Is there any road law on the West that seeks to protect anyone at all?" None, apart from the wearing of seat belts, PC Moorhouse responded.

Mr Gumsley said it was of very grave concern to him that because the roads on the West, and many of the roads on the East, were not declared to be roads under the Road Traffic Ordinance a person could drive along them whilst completely drunk, in a vehicle that was dangerous, at whatever speeds they wished and without insurance to assist those who might be left with the consequences of a fatality or serious injury if something were to go wrong, and that there was no law or regulation or procedure which sought to prevent this.

He said, "whilst it would be naive to suggest that enforcement would be other than a challenge, if a law existed which would mean that an offender would face justice if apprehended; this would both act as a deterrent and would express the collective view that such behaviour is not appropriate in a modern society."

The right to life as enshrined in the Constitution had been clearly interpreted to mean that there was a duty on the state, "to establish a framework of laws, precautions, procedures and means of enforcement which would, to the greatest extent reasonably practicable, protect life," he told the court.

Mr Gumsley said he would be writing to the authorities in accordance with his powers under Rule 39 of the Coroner's Rules to draw their attention to the evidence he had heard about the lack of road traffic laws on the West, and to the PWD about the evidence he had heard about the state of the roads on the West in general and the specific problems identified in this case.

He concluded the Inquest by saying he been reminded of the compassion, community and humanity of people by the impressive way the people of the West had responded, without hesitation, to the call for help following the discovery of the crash.

The Coroner offered his sincere condolences to Mr Giles' family and thanked PC Moorhouse as Coroner's Officer and the other officers of the RFIP for their help in the investigation of the case.

Welsh flag flown with pride at Fitzroy

WHILE the weather on Friday made it difficult for people to travel to Fitzroy to remember the events of June 8, 1982, wreaths were placed at the memorials following the service in Christchurch Cathedral in Stanley conducted by Reverend Hines. Marilyn and Keith Grimmer were travelling in the Fitzroy direction on the day and out of respect for the fallen and their families took the opportunity to raise the Welsh flag in memory of the Welsh Guards who lost their lives, while they placed the wreaths at the memorials.

Briones case adjourned

IN the Magistrates Court on Friday a case was brought against Claudio Briones and adjourned until July.

Mr Briones pleaded guilty to a charge of using racially aggressive words with intent to alarm and distress and was consequently charged with being in breach of a conditional discharge.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley considered the charge against Mr Briones and also his previous convictions before deciding to adjourn the case so that a pre-sentence report could be prepared. Mr Gumsley warned Mr Briones that he had not ruled out any options, including imprisonment.

Mr Briones was released on unconditional bail, to return to court on July 4, 2012. FIRS

New fisheries building opened by Minister

THE new Fisheries Department building adjacent to the Agriculture Department was officially opened by the Minister of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Jeremy Browne on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr Browne unveiled a plaque and gave a short speech in front of the Director of Natural Resources John Barton and representatives of the Falklands fishery including local fishing companies and vessel captains.

Mr Browne said although his visit was primarily related to the 30th anniversary of the Falklands war commemorations and celebrations, it was also a great opportunity to get a wider sense of the overall economy, and how people make a living here.

He said celebrating anniversaries was important but the big prize was, "a viable strong economic future for the people of the Islands."

He added: "What we would like, although we are not quite at that stage, is to have some wider agreement with our neighbours about the management of stock," adding that this was a, "somewhat elusive but desired prize, but in the mean time the fact that the industry here is well organised, well regulated and marshalled and is creating prosperity for the Islands as a whole and for specific people on the Islands, is something we are very welcoming of and supportive of, and we wish to continue that support."

Mr Barton thanked MLAs, FIG officers, particularly the Design Section, fisheries employees, Morrison Falklands and their contractors. He said he looked forward to its completion.

Her Majesty's Government and the British Foreign Office had provided, "a great deal of support to the fishery over the years," said Mr Barton, "certainly at the outset when it all started in 1986/87, during some of the difficult decisions such as the arming of fishing protection vessels and during 15 years of the SAFC" (South Atlantic Fisheries Commission).

He joked, "I suspect there are many diplomats out there who little thought they would be dealing with the intricacies of the spawning stock biomass of the southern blue whiting."

The Fisheries Department is currently situated at FIPASS, however the buildings have deteriorated over the years. The new building is expected to be completed at the end of July.

Winter wedding for Sian and Karl

SURROUNDED by family and friends Karl Nightingale and Sian Ferguson made their marriage vows before Reverend Richard Hines in Christchurch Cathedral on Saturday evening.

Karl was accompanied by his cousin Marvyn Ford as best man while Sian was assisted by her friend Sammy Marsh, making the wedding party a quartet of Westers.

Sian is the daughter of John and Stephanie Ferguson who formerly owned Weddell Island while Karl's parents Peter and Shelley Nightingale farm at West Lagoons near Hill Cove.

With the weather worsening, plans for photographs at the Whale Bone Arch were wisely abandoned and the churchgoers were provided with a party bus to go to the FIDE Hall where tapas and wine were waiting.

With photographs out of the way the guests enjoyed some lively and poignant speeches from the fathers and held their breath while Sammy and Marvyn drew on some favourite memories with the bride and groom.

More guests arrived for the reception complete with tables creaking with food prepared by family and friends.

With Mel Lloyd on the music table the floor was soon full of dancers complete with an atmosphere resembling a first night of sports on the West and more Westers than many had seen in one place for quite some time, the celebrations continued into the early hours of the morning.

Telegraph poll

THE Telegraph ran an online poll, soon after the announcement that the Falklands was to hold a referendum, asking readers if they thought it would put an end to Argentina's claim to the Falklands.

By 2pm on Wednesday 9,805 (94.86%) people had responded, "No, Argentina will always try to antagonise the Islands."

Only 531 (5.14%) said, "Yes, it will silence them once and for all."

British Prime Minister David Cameron, applauded the announcement from Stanley, claiming it would vindicate British support for the islands. "Thirty years ago they made clear that they wanted to stay British. That's why British forces bravely liberated the Island from Argentine invaders," he said.

"Now the Argentine government wants to put that choice in doubt again, by shouting down the Islanders' ability to speak for themselves and punishing them for exercising their own free choice."

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE referendum announcement this week will hearten those who have suggested that this could show the world how we exercise our right to self determination. It is intended to remove any opportunity for misunderstanding worldwide and to undermine Argentine attempts to portray us as an implanted population. With independent observers to verify the result we will have another opportunity to demonstrate how democracy works in a country, however small and geographically isolated. The message sent out will be one of the most important we ever make. The announcement coincided with the very important anniversary this week of the day our political freedom was restored. Our representatives at the C24 will undoubtedly deliver a clear message on Liberation Day; whatever the reason for the 'coincidental' timing of the meeting, it gives an opening for the self determination message

THE Independent newspaper recently likened the Argentine president's attending the C24 to the Queen arriving at a meeting of the organizing committee for a village fete. Unfortunately the C24 is increasingly discredited by the statements from members which show them to be anything but even handed, furthermore our invitations to successive chairmen of that committee to come on a fact finding visit have met with resounding silence even though the previous incumbent visited Argentina.

COMMEMORATION and reflection and celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of Liberation remind us how thankful we are for our freedom and much more, including the way we have been able to develop our country since '82. I hope that is the message all our guests will be taking with them as they leave tomorrow, air bridge permitting. The excellent Falklands 30 exhibition in St Mary's annexe recalls the best as well as the worst memories of that time and tells some fascinating stories for the first time. It is astonishing how fresh and raw some memories are, given the time that has passed. Possibly one of the reasons for this is the unremitting 'noise' from Argentina, each new pronouncement more far fetched than the last, reminding us how untrustworthy their government was, and, despite being a democracy, still is.

Falklands Birthday for Gibraltar Minister

GIBRALTAR Minister for Enterprise Training and Employment Joe Bossano celebrated his 73rd birthday at a buffet supper for visiting VIPs on Monday night at Malvina House Hotel restaurant.

The Minister is part of a group of guests of the Falkland Islands Government to commemorate the 30th anniversary of liberation of the Islands in 1982.

Also visiting, among others, are Foreign Office Minister Jeremy Browne, Shadow Foreign

Sea King alternatives

THE Ministry of Defence is examining alternative means of replacing the Sea King search and rescue capability in the Falkland Islands when all variants are withdrawn from service in 2016.

The Merlin Mk3/3a will replace the Sea King Mk4 role with the Commando Helicopter Force. The newly upgraded Merlin Mk 2 is capable of fulfilling several roles, including provision of the Airborne Surveillance and Control capability previously provided by the Sea King Mk7. Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence Equipment, Support and Technology Peter Luff told the House of Commons this week.

He responded to a question from Andrea Leadsom MP who asked whether he had decided on a replacement for the Sea King helicopters generally. Mr Luff said the Sea King helicopter delivered a range of capabilities and when all variants were withdrawn the Department would look to a combination of existing platforms and alternative means to replace it. The Department of Transport is currently running a competition for a UK-wide service contract to provide Search and Rescue services when the Ministry of Defence's (MOD) fleet of Sea King Mk 3, 3a and 5 Search and Rescue helicopters retire.

Reply to Argentina

FOREIGN Office Minister for Latin American affairs Jeremy Browne has anticipated that next week there would be a, "substantial reply," to Argentina's proposal for three monthly flights between Buenos Aires and the Falklands and the resumption of negotiations over fisheries conservation in the South Atlantic.

C24 is the legacy of a time when there was a programme to decolonise all over the world and which has been vastly completed, said Mr Browne.

He also said that President Cristina Kirchner's presentation before the UN Decolonisation Committee would not change the UK position regarding the sovereignty dispute with Argentina.

Mr Browne denied point blank that UK had received any request from the Red Cross to make DNA tests to help identify Argentine soldiers whose remains are buried in unknown graves in the Darwin cemetery.

Medical Matters by KEMH Manager Michael Poole

THIS final article regarding the medical treatment overseas process briefly outlines a planned new charge and goes on to suggest some ideas of how the service might be developed over coming months and years.

Firstly, as was announced in the FIG budget in late May, a new £300 Flight charge is to be implemented from July 1, 2012. This will mean that the majority of patients, whether they are going to UK or to South America, shall have to pay a contribution of £300 towards the cost of their flight. This charge will replace the £400 'elective' charge that is currently in existence.

Those under the age of 18, in receipt of welfare support and those that can prove via a means-testing form that they are unable to pay the fee will be excluded from paying it.

The fee will only be charged for the first referral for a particular condition, so if a patient is unfortunate enough to have to be referred overseas more than once for the same condition then they will only pay £300 in total.

It is difficult to capture all of the practical details regarding this charge in a brief article, so if you have any questions about it please do not hesitate to contact me on 28003 or manager@kemh.gov.fk.

To finish this series of articles I would emphasise that we value feedback about the MTO process and people's experiences. Whilst we unfortunately have limited time with which to develop the service we offer, we are currently working on the following items:

- More detailed patient information packs for the main hospitals we use overseas. These will include local transport links, amenities in the area, photographs, and feedback about the area and hospital from other patients.

- We are also looking at making a business case to Honourable Members regarding looking at the purchase of property in somewhere such as Southampton for use by medical patients. Work has been done on this in the past and we are building on that. It is currently very early stages but, if the figures add up, we plan to present a paper to Executive Council for their consideration later in the year.

"Getting the vets out with the locals is the thing that they enjoy most. It is humbling to work with them all," she said, stating her personal thanks to each and every one for their help in 1982. "You will never be forgotten and the ones who never made it God bless you all."

Forces survival

BRITISH Forces travelling to the Falkland Islands with the Task Force in 1982 were briefed on 'Survival on the Falklands' should they become separated from their unit.

Sgt D A Cornford explained in his 'Falklands Diary' sent to Penguin News, that while sailing on RFA Fort Austin in early April 1982, they were told how to find water and the types of wild birds and eggs that could safely be eaten.

It was explained that water was, "safe away from concentrations of sheep and cattle," and water could normally be found in springs near penguin colonies.

In terms of food they were told to seek, geese, seal and rabbit but not to eat kelp goose. Eggs of all birds were edible said the Major, but soldiers should not eat seabirds apart from cormorants and penguins.

They were told to slit open the stomachs for undigested krill. Mussels and limpets were fine to eat and seals' eyes were nutritious.

The offal of cattle and sheep should not be eaten and sea lettuce (light coloured seaweed) could be boiled. Mushrooms, potatoes, wild celery and rhubarb could be found near old settlements. Onion shaped tussac grass could be eaten but should be boiled if possible. Fish and eel could be trapped in tidal estuaries and diddle dee berries could be consumed but, "do not eat the poisonous red berry which has a fluted leaf."

Your Falklands

I AM an Argentine citizen and I believe that the Falklands belong to the inhabitants of the Islands.

The main issue that worries me is the fact that early in 1949, after London, Manchester, the Cathedral of Coventry and many English places were bombed by the worst dictatorship the world has ever seen, the UK and Germany became friends and forgot all the wounds.

We lived in a brutal dictatorship too, from 1976 to 1983, that tortured, disappeared and killed 30,000 Argentine people and launched a tragic war against you. But since then we have become a highly democratic country with freedom of speech and have become a world champion in the field of human rights.

Don't you believe that 30 years is enough to stop feeling hate to Argentina and the Argentines?

Respectfully

Jorge Schussheim

Road disgrace

WE have many things to be proud and thankful for here in the Falkland Islands, but there is one thing to be ashamed of and that is the main road between our capital and international airport. We've been hearing lately of every reason not to Tarmac it, even progressively. No disrespect to the teams who try their best to maintain it, but it is a national disgrace

I WAS so interested to read the Penguin News Editor's article on the Falklands in the Telegraph weekend section. I thought you might be interested to know that my father was Governor there in the 1920s and 30s. His name was Arnold Hodson, and one of the things he did I believe, was to introduce radio telephone communications with the mainland.

My mother Betty Hodson, really loved it too, and was very happy there, even though ships only came from England every six months. My father apparently put all the Times newspapers in date order and started reading the oldest ones first, one each day. When the Falklands war was on the only bit that mum enjoyed was seeing Government House looking basically the same.

Port Howard has 1982 stories too

MEMORIES of the last thirty years have been flooding our newspaper, radio and TV programmes and I always feel disappointed when I hear no mention of Port Howard and their trials during the conflict. Two things of significant importance happened during this time.

A Harrier was shot down over Port Howard which most people saw. The pilot Geoffrey Glover was captured and held prisoner in our social club, he was transferred to Stanley by helicopter and ended up in Argentina as their only prisoner of war. Geoffrey was able to return to Stanley quite some time after the conflict and took part in one of the golf tournaments during his term of duty. He won a trophy and was awarded with a piece of his crashed Harrier mounted on a stand.

The second thing of note was the killing of Captain Hamilton who was an SAS soldier. Captain Hamilton was even considered by the Argentines as a very brave and honourable soldier and should be awarded a medal. Captain Hamilton sacrificed his life for his companions to escape. Unfortunately one of the SAS soldiers was captured and held prisoner under the floorboards of one of the houses. This tragedy was unknown to us at the time. I can remember feeling very sad and ashamed when the Argentines required a Union Jack from us, they said to bury a British soldier. I refused as I thought the Argentines were up to something, not knowing of the awful event that had occurred.

We witnessed many of the dog fights between the planes coming in and out of bomb alley with much shooting with any weapon at the planes by our occupiers. They were more dangerous as they fired in any direction and even shot themselves in the feet at times.

Food was short and you could see the soldiers getting thinner, as there was no supplies getting in. Chickens disappeared, garden vegetables, even the bones were taken off the dogs as they were desperate. Banging on doors after dark begging for food was a regular occurrence and quite frightening. With the Royal Navy bombarding us every Thursday night at 11 o'clock everyone would know when to take cover, even the Argentines.

So we didn't live a quiet life during this time. Although we were not locked up in a hall, we did have a curfew. The late Robin Lee worked hard with the authorities to let us stay at home and we have him to thank for pulling us safely through this trying time. He put himself very much on the firing line for us.

So Port Howard and its people, although never mentioned much in all the programmes, do have

The times they are a changing

MY goodness how things have changed. I am Cliff Hale, and with my wife Hanna and two young children we lived and worked in Stanley from 1966 to 1968. Our third son was born in the then hospital.

I was with the Radio and Space Research Station, with field labs and offices to the West and top of Philomel Hill. In that period the ESRO space lab near Moody Brook was built. As you will know there were no papers or TV in those days, just the wired radio with a loud and soft dial, which jingled for local announcements (Des Peck in with a bucket of fish for sale), and canned BBC news and programmes. Phoning the UK was also an event, no emails or Skype then. Nowhere to go out for dinner of course, one pub, no roads to the Camp. Green Patch took quite a few hours, and Volunteer Point included an overnight stay at Green Patch, where we borrowed the shepherd's tin hut. The main social events and dancing were in the Town Hall, where the peat stacks afforded excellent hiding places for the liquid refreshments brought in.

We were the first residents on Racecourse Road, at number 3. Numbers 1 and 2 were later occupied by the two Cable and Wireless families. I played soccer and cricket for the Falklands. I also enjoyed badminton (with Patrick Watts amongst others) and use of the squash court we had then. I also joined the FIDF (the Penguin News' Editor's article in the Telegraph recently brought back memories of that) when we had a bit of excitement with the Argentinean invasion seeking to free the Kelpers, having hijacked a DC6 internal flight.

I recall seeing it coming in above the Sound thinking it cannot be there, because there is nowhere for it to land (we had no air craft or air strips then, just the two Beavers), but it did, just outside our bungalow on the racecourse. I recall Laurie Butler, the butcher, was very involved in the exercise to send them packing.

No cruise ships either of course, just the Darwin, and in Summer the Navy South Atlantic patrol (HMS Protector) and the BAS vessels; all of which we 'locals' enjoyed beating at soccer and cricket.

Times were I suppose more hardy then, and we had I recall about 950 in Stanley, and about the same number across all the other settlements. Running out of supplies, but sharing what we had literally until the ship came in, was what we did in those days.

We have not been back since, and have very fond memories of our time there, which was very special. We have mixed feelings about how we might react returning to visit a place which has undergone so many changes, but that is true of wherever one has lived.

It was certainly a unique and privileged opportunity for us to have lived both in Stanley and with 'the Chays' where amongst other things remoteness was part of the charm.

Well done Falkland Islands

WELI done.

I join with all other well-wishers in congratulating the Falkland Islands on this 30th anniversary. In 1982 Rex Hunt said to me that you Islanders would show not just by words but by deeds your gratitude to Britain and the Task Force for your liberation. You have done so magnificently.

I have watched you work hard to build a vibrant democracy and a prosperous nation many other countries would envy including Argentina. You have generously welcomed the 1982 veterans and supported many armed forces charitable institutions. All this despite the obstacles put in your way by Argentina by the civilian governments restored to power only by the UK's defeat of the military dictatorship which inflicted so much suffering on the Argentine people as well as on you.

Argentina's actions have been reprehensible, showing no gratitude for delivery from military rule. Throughout you have demonstrated the dignity, pragmatism and steadfastness you have always shown. You need never be downhearted. You have the support of millions of people in this country and elsewhere in your fight for freedom and self-determination with right on your side.

Personally, I thank you for your unfailing friendship, heartily reciprocated.

In the hen house with Mandy McLeod

dunvegan@cwimail.fk

I MENTIONED a few months back about a real problem we have in the Falklands with the Scaley Leg Mite.

It does just what its name suggests - makes the hen's legs go crusty by burrowing under the scales and raising them while it feeds on the flesh of the bird.

It is a horrible condition that must drive the hens mad having an itch that they can't scratch. If left untreated it can put the birds right off their legs leading to eventual death.

Some hens seem more prone to attack than others, but there's no hard and fast reasoning either. The experts say it attacks hens with feathered legs more, but I've had Silkies that haven't been touched by it, and smooth legged individuals that have.

It is indiscriminate and can be a big problem. I reported that I was trying out a new type of bedding and some plastic hen houses to see if it helped 'Fight the Mite'. It hasn't made much difference to Scaley Leg Mite, but it has reduced the Red Mite (blood feeders), so that's a plus.

However, this makes me think that the Scaley Leg beasts may re-infect birds from outside the hen house, so I'm now going to concentrate more on putting mite powders in their outdoor dust baths and just increase the preventative routine of oiling the legs of all my birds more often.

Hubby has a theory that because all our birds are free range and we have a lot of wild birds amongst them all year round, that they might be the carriers. He could be right!

If that is the case then I will just have to keep it under control as best I can, and, by keeping the legs regularly oiled, will at least give the hens some respite from that constant unscratchable itch!

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

ISN'T it lovely to wake up to inches of snow? Even the marks of cats paws as they try to get around (without getting their tums in the snow) can't mar the beauty of those virgin white expanses.

I look forward to having the children arrive; let's face it, gardening is a distant dream at the moment, so I shall give in to 'youthful' enthusiasms instead and build some snowmen or whatever takes our fancy. We were very fortunate in that Bill took it into his head to lag the outside pipes and turn off all water to the gardens for the winter the other day, there are still some more pipes to cover though, and I forgot to take one of the hoses in. I just hope it will be okay.

If this weather continues for any length of time I shall have to bring all empty pots and seed trays inside to wash, well at least I will be warm doing it. Half a cup full of bleach in the washing up water will get rid of all 'bugs'. Also hope to get into the greenhouses and carry out some winter-cleaning in there. Again, bleach or Jeyes fluid in a bucket of warm water will do a great job of disinfecting and getting rid of pests. There are so many nooks and crannies they can thrive in, in that environment that without a real clean-out they would get out of control. The glass will get a good scrub and I use a plant label, or something similar, to get into those awkward areas such as where the glass overlaps. It's not one of my favourite jobs but boy, do I feel virtuous when I finish it!

The snow has insulated the tunnels very well and having cleared the doorway to get into one of them I found it to be quite cosy inside. Everything in there is looking quite happy but quite in the dark. Unfortunately, for all my good intentions, I never did get around to digging out some parsley and some mint to pot-up and keep in the tunnel and so they remain under the snow until I can find them again. At that time I will also chop some of both of them up and put into ice cube trays to have them handy inside in the freezer. Having frozen quite a lot of the other vegetables we have not had a problem trying to find them but will prepare and freeze some more as time and weather permits. Much as I like getting outside, digging in the snow for veg is not my idea of a great pastime.

I have some more willow and poplar cuttings to put in, these are about 12 inches tall and sitting in a bucket of water while they wait for the snow to clear. When that happens, I will make a trench in the veggie garden about nine inches deep, put some coarse or silver sand in it to aid drainage then pop the cuttings in, leaving three or four inches on show. They will quickly root in the spring and will be potted up then, as they will grow on pretty quickly and should be ready to plant in their final positions next Autumn.

The rose cuttings in the tunnels continue to send out new roots but I was delighted to find on my kitchen window sill that some rose cuttings (that I've had no success propagating over the past four years and decided to try in an opaque glass full of water), have got masses of long roots on them, success! I must now make my way to the tunnel and get a few pots of compost, filled and brought in to warm up a little, then I shall be able to put the cuttings in to the soil, with great care as the roots grow very brittle in water and are very easy to break off.

I've lagged any plant pots outside which are either too big to carry or I've no space for inside. Sitting on top of the ground as they do, frosts can do a lot of damage or maybe even kill the roots, and so it pays to take care of them. I've always found that cardboard or bubble wrap or better still both, do a great job of insulating.

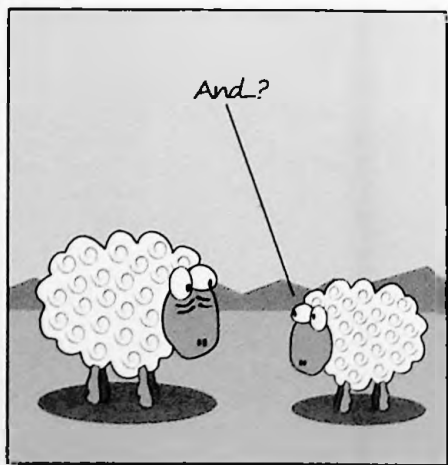

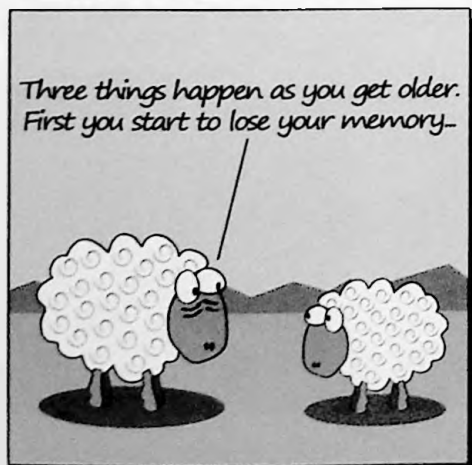

Meanwhile, rather than waste this cool weather I am going outside to plant some tree and shrub seeds. These will go into smallish pots and will sit outside letting the weather work for me as it breaks down all inhibiting factors and gets most of the seeds germinating as soon as there is some warmth. Come to think of it, it would be a great shame to waste this opportunity to plant some flower seeds as well, some of the tougher ones like the Paeonies, Hellebores, Aconitums and the like are really more likely to germinate having been left out for the winter.

Following the great winds and frosts over these past few days as soon as the snow has cleared I shall go out and check that all trees, shrubs and other plants, are still secure in the ground and not become uncovered, if they have been lifted I will carefully tread them down again and stake them if necessary, at the same time. I've always found old tights or stockings make wonderful ties for staking any plant as they are strong but have enough elasticity to hold the plant and let it grow without strangling it.

The generals and the dirty war

By Harold Briley

IN all the issues surrounding the Falklands War what has tended to be ignored is that the United Kingdom was negotiating to hand over 1,800 British Islanders to one of the most evil regimes in Latin America which was dominated by military dictatorships, as I and other journalists reported at the time and received death threats for doing so.

It has taken decades for the enormity of the regime's repression and inhumane crimes to be investigated and exposed. While I was based in Argentina, torture and murder was taking place in secret detention centres, some of them not far from the ministerial offices and luxury hotels where British ministers and officials secretly discussed how to surrender sovereignty for what they tried to persuade Islanders was 'a better life' in Argentina. Visits by the British Foreign Office Minister conducting the negotiations, Nicholas Ridley, to Buenos Aires were deliberately kept secret from me and everyone else by the British Embassy.

Argentina's Constitution in theory protected everyone's "human rights" but in practice betrayed them. The Islanders were not convinced. They voiced their fears to me and rejected the Foreign Office plan for them to become part of Argentina.

The Islanders were described by Foreign Office officials as, "ostriches with their heads buried in the sand," for failing to grasp the offer of a "better life," with Argentina. I found the Islanders pragmatic and prescient for shunning an Argentina which was not the promised paradise but purgatory for its persecuted people.

The UK Government naively insisted on, "safeguards," for the Islanders who would have the final say. But the record of the regime showed it had no scruples and could not be trusted. Similar promises that the Islanders would retain their way of life was abandoned as soon as they invaded.

As the BBC Correspondent in Argentina I reported the relentless repression by three successive juntas which subjected 30,000 of their own citizens to hideous torture and painful death. Most of the victims were innocent of any crime. They were cynically designated by the regime as the, 'unaccountable missing'. To us and their relatives they were, 'desaparecidos' (the disappeared), a terrifying new word in the lexicon of state terrorism. I never heard British ministers utter a word of condemnation publicly nor privately.

A series of laws and pardons were put in place to shield the military but were finally swept aside after years of civilian rule.

When civilian government replaced the generals, discredited and brought down by the British victory, Argentina instituted its own inquiry which it called the Argentine National Commission on the Disappearance of Persons (COMADEP). It was headed by the celebrated writer, Ernesto Sabato. Its report, entitled "Nunca Mas" (Never Again), quoted, in chilling detail, the testimonies of the comparatively few victims who survived.

Videla's terror campaign

General Jorge Videla, who seized power in 1976, launched the systematic kidnap and killing campaign and created 500 clandestine detention centres, from which few emerged alive. His public image was that of an avuncular church-going family man. It was Mass on Sunday but mass murder on Monday and every day.

He suspended Congress and banned political parties, free speech, human rights and trades unions and imposed press censorship. His National Reorganisation Process, as it was called, was a euphemism for what became known as the 'Dirty War'. The purpose was to crush 'subversives' and their sympathisers, in particular two left-wing guerrilla groups engaged in attacking and killing soldiers and the police, the Peronist Montoneros and the People's Revolutionary Army (Ejército Revolucionario del Pueblo or ERP).

That loose, ill-defined definition 'subversives and sympathisers' gave scope for indiscriminate killing. Specially formed paramilitary squads were deployed, roaming the streets in Ford Falcon cars with no number plates. They randomly snatched victims, including lawyers, students, trade unionists, academics, artists, writers and journalists.

The campaign cast a sinister shadow over Buenos Aires. It was a city with a split personality. Repression was accompanied by a severe economic crisis. On the surface, life was frenetic and crowded, with its residents going about their business.

Under the surface, sometimes literally, in cellars beneath crowded shopping centres, the torture chambers continued their gruesome activities. I shuddered as I hurried past where I believed them to be. The most notorious were prominently above ground, the Navy Mechanics School (ESMA) and the Campo de Mayo army base.

The clash of cultures stood out starkly. I described the pre-invasion Falkland Islands I visited as one of the most peaceful places on earth, a quiet, rural landscape full of sheep and penguins but sparsely populated with hard-working people. It would not remain that way for long.

The invasion, which several of us in Buenos Aires and the Islands predicted, was a desperate, ill-timed attempt to save the regime from collapse by realising a national obsession, acquisition of Las Malvinas they called the Islands. This was listed as their priority objective for 1982 in a Foreign Ministry document they handed to me several months before the invasion. It was dated August 1981.

Generals jailed for mass murder

After more than thirty years, justice and jail finally caught up with many of the instigators of the 'Dirty War'. Nine junta members of regimes with which the UK conducted sovereignty talks between 1976 and 1982 were jailed on charges of mass abduction, torture and executions. Here is what happened to the worst of them.

General Videla was jailed for life in 2011, aged 85, for crimes against humanity. He showed no remorse.

General Leopoldo Galtieri and Admiral Jorge Anaya cheated justice. Both had cancer and died from heart attacks awaiting trial for human rights crimes. Both had earlier been jailed then pardoned for mishandling the 1982 war for which they could have faced a firing squad.

Galtieri was involved in thousands of deaths. When he became Army Commander, the Intelligence Battalion 601, master-minding the tyranny, was under his direct chain of command. He lost his presidential pension when a judge ruled his presidency illegal as he was not elected. He died in 2003, aged 76.

Admiral Anaya, the driving force behind the invasion, served a spell as naval attaché in London. He was accused of implication in thousands of disappearances, many of them in the navy mechanics school (ESMA Escuela de Suboficiales de Mecánica de la Armada.). He died in January, 2008, aged 81.

Admiral Emilio Massera, navy commander-in-chief, in Videla's coup, was one of the most corrupt and reviled of all junta members as head of ESMA where valuables were looted from victims and from their homes and babies and small children taken from murdered mothers were trafficked for money. Massera, whose victims included many journalists, set up a newspaper of his own, Convicción, to promote his driving ambition.

He was jailed for life for crimes against humanity, and then pardoned. He suffered a stroke when facing renewed trial and died in 2010, aged 85.

General Reynaldo Bignonere replaced Galtieri as the last military president. During his brief tenure preparing for return of civilian rule, he ordered evidence of the 'dirty war' to be destroyed and declared an amnesty, later overturned. He was jailed for life in 2011 at the age of 83 for crimes against humanity.

General Luciano Menendez, an uncle of the Falklands Military Governor, was sentenced to life imprisonment, aged 83 for violent suppression of subversives and mass murder.

General Guillermo Suarez Mason, who advocated war against Chile, was head of several torture centres and suspected of involvement in the theft of 500 babies from murdered mothers. Galtieri appointed him director of the Argentine oil company YPF which made the biggest loss of any company in the world after he corruptly siphoned off oil for his own profit. He was jailed for life and died in 2005, aged 81.

Captain Adolfo Scilingo, also based at ESMA, was a naval aviator on death flights from which dead or drugged, naked detainees with their hands tied, were thrown into the Atlantic Ocean.

He faced so many charges of genocide and terrorism that he was jailed at the age of 58 in Spain for a total of 640 years in prison. Interviewed in custody, he said he felt no remorse as he bundled the bodies out of the aircraft.

Captain Alfredo Astiz was a naval commander who signed the surrender of the South Georgia garrison to British forces.

Using a false identity, he had infiltrated human rights organisations in Buenos Aires to single out victims, including a founder of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo, Azucena Villafra, two French nuns, Leonie Duquet and Alice Domon, callously called the 'flying nuns' because their bodies were dumped into the sea, and a teenage Swedish student, Dagmar Hagelin, shot in the back. Known to his victims at ESMA as the 'angel of death', the blonde, baby-faced torturer said he was not at all repentant for fighting 'anti Argentine Marxist terrorists'. He was jailed for life, aged 60, in 2011.

Abroad, about 150 senior officers were accused, in their absence, of murdering 400 citizens of Spain, Italy, Germany and Sweden, whose governments demanded justice.

Journalists targeted

My despatches reporting the atrocities were regarded by the British Embassy in Buenos Aires as not conducive to harmonious relations or the success of sovereignty talks.

My 'Dirty War' reports brought me harassment and death threats by telephone from the regime.

I and an American Newsweek correspondent received a warning from state security headquarters that if we carried out a plan to visit a beach where bodies were being washed ashore, our bodies would be among them. We did not go.

Among the disappeared were 80 journalists. Other journalists were forced to flee Argentina, including the respected editor of the English-language Buenos Aires Herald, Robert Cox, who came to me one night to tell me he was secretly taking his Argentine wife and children to safety in the United States.

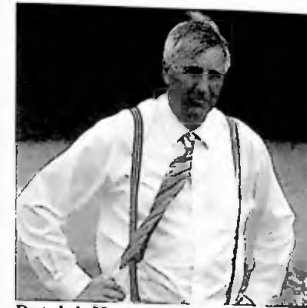

When he complained to the General in charge of the Home Affairs Ministry, his sarcastic response was: "If everyone who gets a death threat leaves the country, Argentina would be empty."

Another editor of the Buenos Aires Herald, Andrew Graham-Yooll, had a narrow escape through a back door of the building as a kidnap squad entered the front door. In Britain he became an international human rights campaigner.

Some journalists were jailed, including the father of Argentina's Foreign Minister, Hector Timmerman, appointed by President Christina Fernandez Kirchner. Jacobo Timmerman, a newspaper editor, described his ordeal in a famous book, 'Prisoner without a Name, Cell without a Number' written later in exile in Israel.

Before his release, I reported his maltreatment in jail with the help of his Rabbi, Marshall Meyer, the only visitor he was permitted in solitary confinement. The Rabbi offered me refuge from the kidnap gangs in his synagogue but we both knew it was not a safe sanctuary, daubed as its walls were with swastikas reflecting the sympathies of a country where so many wartime Nazis fled and also the anti-Semitism of the military against Argentina's large Jewish community.

No wonder the Islanders response to Argentina's renewed sovereignty campaign echoes the title of the repression inquiry - 'Nunca Mas'... Never again.

Patrick Watts

The march to Stanley in 1982

White flags over Stanley?

By Patrick Watts

AS the 30th anniversary of our Liberation is upon us I feel compelled to once more exploit the myth that 'white flags were flying over Stanley' on 14th June 1982.

Most people will recall the television pictures of Major Bill Dawson (Gurkha Regiment) a British Army officer crawling out of his bivouac on Two Sisters mountain and saying something along the lines of: "Bloody good news, there are reports that white flag are flying over Stanley." This statement even got as far as London and the Prime Minister Mrs. Thatcher, no less, echoed the words when she informed Parliament that the Falklands War had been won.

John Smith too, in his excellent diary '74 Days', writes of 'white flags flying in parts of the town' but in fairness to John at no time did he write that he had personally seen white flags flying. John, along with his family and 120 other local inhabitants spent most of the day sheltering 'underground' in the West Store, as the fear of street fighting in Stanley became a real possibility. In fact it was not until about 9 o'clock on the night of the 14th when I escorted Major General Jeremy Moore on a tour of the town, did the occupants of the West Store find out that the War was over and the surrender had just been signed.

As it transpired I was the only local inhabitant to attend this momentous event at the Secretariat and much to my surprise the Commander of the British Land Forces had asked if he could meet some of the civilians who had just been liberated. It was a great honour for me to be his escort although I was concerned for our safety as the town was in total darkness and the Argentines were still fully armed.

We knocked on the side-door of the West Store and announced the news and quite rightly General Moore received a rapturous welcome, and the celebrations began.

Later that evening General Moore sat in the kitchen of my home, drinking tea and eating my Mother's home-made cakes and scones, and as he left he declared: "Best damned cuppa I've had since we set out."

Earlier in the day, soon after the horrendous barrage of the 3 previous days had finally ceased, my curiosity had got the better of me and I walked from my home in the Police Cottages to the radio station on John Street. I looked at the three main flag-poles in town, those at Government House, Secretariat and the FIDF (now Infant & Junior school) and did not see a white flag anywhere.

The studio was in darkness as the Argentine civilians who had been sent over from Buenos Aires in early April had walked out, leaving behind all the radio and television equipment that they had brought with them. They jumped on a Red Cross ship that was berthed alongside the FIC jetty.

I walked further along John Street and then west up Ross Road, passing hundreds of retreating, despondent and defeated Argentines, all still fully-armed, and heading in an easterly direction. It was a weird and unforgettable experience and I resisted the temptation to utter so much as 'The Falklands are British'. I seemed to be the only civilian on the streets at that time of the day. There was not a white flag to be seen on the St. Mary's Church flagpole either!

Later in the afternoon accompanied by my brother-in-law Iain Stewart and Phil Summers, a senior Government officer, we walked to the Secretariat and spoke with Commodore Carlos Bloomer-Reeve who was in charge of civilian affairs, and asked him for an update on the situation. I then saw my first British soldier for 10 weeks, as the dark outline of a group of men from 2 Para could be seen standing alongside the wall of the 1914 Battle Memorial. They were later told to withdraw some distance west, hence the name Holdfast Road, where the Museum is sited.

Again I did not see any white flags on the prominent flag-poles in the town.

The 'white flags' scenario continued to be liberally quoted for the next 20 years, despite my frequent assertions that it was untrue.

Finally in 2002, I tracked down Major Bill Dawson (later promoted to Colonel) when he returned to the Falklands to commemorate the 20th anniversary.

In 1982 the Gurkhas were on Mt. William having secured the feature without any Argentine opposition. Major Dawson was further back on Two Sisters mountain with the Command H.Q. As we walked away from the Memorial Wood in the town I could not resist the temptation of asking him; "How many white flags did you see flying over Stanley, Major Dawson?" I had expected a defensive and perhaps negative response but instead I received a jovial reply of: "Not one mate, not bloody one." I was quite taken aback by his honesty.

He explained that a radio operator on Sapper Hill thought he could see what might possibly be a white flag flying in Stanley, and this information was passed back to the Gurkhas on Mt. William, where it was interpreted as being official. By the time it reached Two Sisters mountain, several radio operators later, it had been transformed into "white flags are flying over Stanley."

Major Dawson further explained that amazingly it took about six or seven 'takes' by the television crew before they were satisfied with the way in which he relayed the information. "I got fed-up going in and coming back out of that bivouac," he said.

A BBC reporter standing close-by immediately got the 'white flags' statement back to London and so it became one of the most quoted comments of the entire War.

Major Dawson confided in me that he had received a severe reprimand from Major General Moore, the Commander of the British Land Forces, who stated categorically: "There were no white flags flying over Stanley, were there Dawson?" The Major had to confess that indeed there were no white flags.

I was further heartened by the comments of Colonel (later Brigadier) David Chaundler who assumed command of 2 Para following the death of Colonel 'H' Jones on Darwin Hill. He made an excellent presentation during the recent Falklands War Conference that was held at Kent University in Canterbury. Colonel Chaundler fought the last battle for Stanley on Wireless Ridge, which was taken by 2 Para, and he walked triumphantly with his men into Stanley in the early afternoon of the 14th June. As he ended his presentation he told the audience: "Can I just emphasize that there was not a white flag to be seen flying anywhere over Stanley - not one."

So what had a soldier on Sapper Hill actually seen, I asked Major Bill Dawson? His reply was classic: "I think it was a piece of ladies white underwear hanging on a clothes line, mate," he chuckled.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625 - Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800 - Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 7th June 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its new lowest value this season at AUS1,079 making it 692/kg clean in Stirling, up by 3 pence. There was an offering of 27,601 bales this week, with a clearance rate of 88% which is an improvement on the previous three weeks.

The next two weeks offerings are relatively moderate at 33,296 and 24,965, which will still be higher than the corresponding sales from 2010/2011 season.

The wool market will probably not be immune to additional negative global economic developments. This seems to be the case, as domestic wool prices have not fallen anywhere near the extent of other fibre values. Cotton prices have fallen by 22.6% in the last year.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Nil draw score for late cancellation

A SUNDAY match between Blackhawks and league leaders Panthers was called off by the teams ten minutes before it was scheduled to start. In response the match was recorded as a nil all draw. This hampers both teams' progression in the Russell Smith Memorial Trophy and ends Panthers winning streak pushing Hurricanes to top of the table by goal difference.

Falklands Dek Hockey Committee member Martyn Barlow reminded the club that cancellations can only be done with advance notice to allow the referee, and the other two teams providing goal judges, to be informed.

"It also allows the rest of the club to know an unscheduled scrimmage is available so we are not lumped with a £15 charge for an unused court.

"Also at any given time there are usually pool players and often a few people interested in starting (as is currently the case) and this would have allowed those individuals the opportunity to sample hockey outside of a game environment," said Mr Barlow.

Young star Ieaun Ford scoops first season win

THE 2012-13 golf season got underway with the Decor Services May Medal.

The Medal was won by Ieaun Ford with a superb nett 61.

Sarah Bowles was second with a nett 65.

On the first Sunday of June the Decor Services June medal was held. It was a calm morning, but frost on the greens and some rain showers made conditions difficult.

Ric Nye ran out the winner with a nett 68 and Ian Stewart came second a couple of shots back.

The next competition will be the Decor Services July Medal on July 8.

The competition will not be on July 1 to avoid clashing with the Euro 2012 Final.

Players should sign in by 0930 for a 0945 start.

The competition will be followed by the Annual General Meeting of Stanley Golf Club at 1400.

Happy Birthday. Hope you don't get too drunk! Lots of love and kisses
Samantha + Jessica xxx

Karl & Siân Nightingale would like to thank everyone who helped make their wedding day so special, particularly our parents, chief ewe Sammy Marsh and best man Marvyn Ford, Jodi Poole and Stephen Aldridge for being great ushers, Tim Morrison & Kim Grayson for making the long journey to be with us, Uncle Kevin for the amazing wedding cake, Auntie Teena for the late night taxi, Bernie for keeping the bar running, everyone who helped set up the hall, brought along food and cleaned up afterwards, Richard Hines for the service, Sharon Jaffray for the photographs and finally everyone who came along on the night – we hope you had as much fun as we did!

Thanks from the Museum

A massive thank you is due to everyone who contributed to our exhibition "Falklands 30: The War, The People". First and foremost – to local fishing company FORTUNA Ltd for their generous sponsorship, which allowed us to do so much that would otherwise have been impossible.

Thanks also to:
- The Fleet Air Arm Museum for their magnificent Harrier canvas and use of their images
- Stanley Services Ltd for kindly donating their fantastic Montes wines and beer for our opening night
- St. Mary's Church for allowing us to use their hall for the next 10 months
- The Print Shop for pulling out all the stops to allow us to have some wonderful images and banners
- Tony Ellis of Tone Dog Graphic Design for all his assistance
- Christian Williams of Synergy / Gentoo for his advice and help
- Annie Muirhead, our oral history volunteer, who arrived in the middle of the chaos and then got stuck in.
I am also very grateful to His Excellency the Governor for officially opening the exhibition; to my staff for all their work, and to the husbands who also found themselves hauled onto the team or abandoned at home (or both!). Finally – but perhaps most importantly – to all those people who shared their memories, allowed us to use their photographs or borrow their artefacts – this was really what it was all about... I only wish that we had even more space to tell these amazing stories!
Leona Roberts, Museum Manager.

No takers for £250,000 ISP

A SCHEME allocated a quarter of a million pounds to encourage Camp residents to provide more fresh produce locally has failed to attract any applicants, and is to be revamped to also include Stanley residents.

The Import Substitution (ISP) programme was set up last winter to encourage rural businesses to increase their production and supply of fruit, vegetables and hen eggs. The Government allocated £250,000 for the programme and the Development Corporation was tasked to administer it at a time when disruption to South American shipping links was causing concerns over supply and demand.

The programme set out a minimum total debt, grant and equity value of £10,000 so as not to attract "keen gardeners or hobbyists," former FIDC general manager David Waugh said in a paper put to Executive Council in June 2011, and was restricted to individuals outside of Stanley.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Development Corporation Board, Falkland Islands Fishing Company Association (FIFCA) representative Hamish Wylie said the project had been politically driven at its conception, but he wondered now if it would be better targeted at people across the Islands growing their own vegetables and even allotments being utilised in the Stanley area. "Anything home grown, reduces the need for import," he said.

Chamber of Commerce representative Tim Miller agreed there was merit in allotments. "There are some good gardeners out there who don't have access to a garden," he added.

MLA Sharon Halford asked that the availability of land allocated in the past for agriculture purposes in the Moody Brook area be investigated, and suggested this be a possible area to develop for allotments.

The Board agreed that the minimum total value of an application should be reduced from £10,000 to £500 and that it should be available Island-wide, not restricted to Camp businesses; that there should be increased assistance and involvement during the application process from the Department of Agriculture and the loan and grant process be adjusted to fairly reflect the risk of the funding.

The recommended changes are to be included in a new proposal to go before Executive Council and a request has been made by FIDC to the Treasury to carry-over the budgeted funds to the 2012/13 financial year which will be dealt with at the August Standing Finance Committee.

Happy 30th Prince Wills

AS the Falklands 30 Liberation commemorations drew to a close, Prince William has celebrated his 30th birthday.

Born on June 21, 1982 at St Mary's Hospital, Paddington, West London, weighing 7lbs 5oz, Prince William recently spent six weeks in the Falklands completing his Search and Rescue helicopter pilot training with the Royal Air Force.

Palace officials say William marked the milestone in private with his wife and some close friends with a low key celebration.

Cameron refuses Kirchner mail

BRITISH Prime Minister David Cameron turned the tables on Argentina's President Cristina Kirchner on Tuesday when he refused to accept an envelope from her at the G-20 summit in Mexico.

Mr Cameron approached Mrs Kirchner to talk about banking reform and during the conversation asked her to respect the view of Islanders, said Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman.

She responded by trying to hand Mr Cameron an envelope containing UN resolutions that called for Argentine-British dialogue over the Falklands Islands. But he, "refused to take the envelope, turned around and walked off," Mr Timerman is recorded as saying.

A Downing Street spokesman said that Mr Cameron did not actually refuse to accept the envelope, saying it was not clear to him whether Mrs Kirchner had really tried to hand it over.

The spokesman said Mr Cameron told Mrs Kirchner, "I am not proposing a full discussion now on the Falklands, but I hope you have noted that they are holding a referendum and you should respect their views."

Meanwhile, at the invitation of the Argentine embassy in London,

Ellyn Llwyd MP, the Westminster leader of the Welsh nationalist Plaid Cymru party, confirmed he had recently met with two senior Argentine diplomats for coffee.

He said he firmly rebuffed the approach to join Argentina's campaign against the Falklands and told The Daily Telegraph he had, "no interest," in helping the South American country with its battle to win support for its claim to the Islands.

Mr Llwyd said: "I expressed no interest in getting involved in this fraught matter.

"They were trying to get me to introduce them to sympathetic MPs."

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

IF nothing else justified the reasoning behind offering up a new generation of Islanders to the world's press during their trip to the UN last week, it has to have been the unmistakable appeal of the sincere expressions in both the eyes and voices of the group as they unaffectedly relayed to millions of ITV (and I'm sure many other stations) viewers, their passion for their home. (Full story page 4).

In saying that I take nothing away from the MLAs who annually take on what must surely be the disheartening task of being forced to state a case to a committee (the C24) which considers an agenda that has no relevance to the modern status of the Falkland Islands and as a result of misjudging that status is intrinsically prejudiced against it.

However, even while the Islands must repeatedly present the dryer facts of the case to anyone who will listen, from a PR point of view bringing in the added ammunition of fresh young faces offering up spontaneous thoughts at a more human level will have almost certainly appealed to a TV audience that would normally have found the issue little more than an academic exercise in foreign politics, and, irrelevant to their own lives.

'Giving the Falklands a face' has been the aim of the Islands PR machine over recent months but up until June 14 it had been something of a shaggy dog story, a few good bits but primarily a little samey and dull. However, even I had to admit that if the superb publicity produced by our UN gang last week was the punch line, then the joke was almost certainly on Cristina.

Less immediate, but just as important, the additional reasoning behind the trip (to introduce a younger generation to the world of politics) also seems to have produced positive results with one, at the very least, encouraged to consider a future in that sphere.

***

DESPITE being rather taken aback by just how "inspired" Penguin News interviewees Andy and Ailie were by our elected representatives in their international roles; as a Falkland Islander it was truly pleasing to be made aware how capable the MLAs were of taking on their more experienced counterparts from other countries. This does raise the point, however, the importance of being able to adapt from local politics to operating in more sophisticated fora, and as such one would hope that representatives are always chosen for such jobs, not necessarily on a 'share and share alike' basis, but because they are truly capable of performing with the skill required.

PM: Argentina is one shadow on horizon

ARGENTINA is the, "one shadow on the horizon." Prime Minister David Cameron told Falkland Islanders and other guests gathered at the Falkland Islands Government Reception held in London on June 14.

He assured, however, that while Britain's long term goal for Latin America was not bickering and hostility but partnership. "When it comes to the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands, there will be absolutely no negotiation."

He said, "This is not some game of global monopoly, with nations passing a territory between them. It is about the Islanders determining their own future. This has been their home for almost 180 years. There are children whose ancestors have lived there for generations. The roots go deep and they will not be ripped out. So my message for the government of Argentina is this: the UK has no aggressive intentions towards you; accusations of militarization and nuclear threats are hyperbole and propaganda; but do not underestimate our resolve. Threats will not work. Attempts to intimidate the Islanders will not succeed because Britain stands ready and willing to stand up for the Falklanders at any time. As long as they wish to remain a British territory that is the way it will stay."

Earlier in his speech he referred to the, "vivid memories of those weeks in the spring of 1982. In this room, we've got those who fought on land at places like Goose Green and Mount Kent in the South Atlantic and in the skies above. We've got Islanders who saw their homeland occupied, and we've got many British people who watched anxiously from afar. I was a 16-year-old schoolboy at the time and I remember today rushing back to the radio, trying to find the latest news and listening to those calm unflappable tones of that famous Ministry of Defence spokesman."

He added that the anniversary was a chance to look back at what happened and remember those who fell; and, "as they would have wished, to look forward to what the future holds for the Falklands."

'Highs' appeal discontinued

AN appeal against Customs and Immigration was discontinued on Wednesday. The appeal was against the Collector of Customs for the seizure of suspected psychoactive substances. However, the complainant requested to withdraw his appeal and this was allowed by the court.

Originally a package labelled 'leisure accessories' mailed to David Hewitt of Stanley was searched by Customs and confiscated due to a suspicion that it contained psychoactive substances. Acting within the law Mr Hewitt had ordered the package before the legislation was introduced banning its import but he also believed he was entitled to compensation from Customs.

Although Mr Hewitt withdrew his appeal, Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley took the opportunity in court to point out that the ordinance specifically states no person is entitled to compensation for goods of this nature forfeited by Customs and pursuing compensation is a civil matter.

Crown Counsel Alison Inglis said because the ordinance was created with a degree of urgency ExCo understood that orders already placed, if it could be proven, would be compensated for.

Though the case was discontinued Mr Gumsley criticised the legislation for its failure to be upheld by evidentiary support. Substances are confiscated if they are identified by the internet to have a psychoactive effect.

"It is not admissible to use evidence provided by the internet," said Mr Gumsley. He noted that taking the words of an internet supplier advert that something is a psychoactive substance does not prove that it is so. He said that evidence through lab testing or expert advice would be the only way to prove the harm of a substance within the law.

More £s for bobbies on the beat

WORK is ongoing within the Human Resources department to improve salaries for police officers in the hope it will improve recruitment locally.

Chief of Police Barry Marsden told the Police Committee on Thursday there were difficulties in recruiting either reserve or regular officers locally with remuneration being the primary cause.

Mr Marsden said that excluding the vacancies created by the recent increase in establishment in the past nine months, the Royal Falkland Islands Police had had four regular constables leave the service (40 per cent of the entire constable establishment) and regrettably included a local officer with 13 years experience.

He said it was a concern that the police were unable to attract a large number of quality applicants either as regular or reserve officers locally. In the UK the situation is totally reverse with the police service being the most sought of all emergency services, he said.

Enquiries with staff, comments from the independent public consultation meeting held in October 2011 and speaking to the public had revealed a number of reasons why policing was not seen as an appealing role in the Falklands with remuneration the biggest factor, he said.

"In financial hierarchical terms the police service is seen as poorly paid compared to other occupations either within government or in the private sector. This was similar to the UK in the late 1970's when recruitment was at an all time low and the Edmund Davies enquiry was held which resulted in a considerable improvement in remuneration making the police service a relatively well paid occupation when compared to other emergency services, nursing and the teaching profession," said Mr Marsden.

It was hoped that by making remuneration more attractive local people would find the police service a preferential career choice and retention would improve.

In the new financial year the RFIP and Human Resources Department would (as approved by Executive Council and Standing Finance Committee) be recruiting the additional staff members, firstly at a local level and then overseas if local appointments could not be achieved, he said.

Year 5 song moves exhibition visitors to tears

'Amazing' art

"ABSOLUTELY" amazing," was the opinion of visiting 2 Para Veteran Mike Crockford on viewing the Infant Junior School and Camp Education student artwork exhibition held on June 15.

Funded by the Falkland Islands Government's Protected Areas Project, and created with the guidance of 16 local artists, the exhibition included countless unique pieces of artwork following a theme of 'what students love most about their Island home' while simultaneously honouring the freedom they enjoy today achieved by those who fought in the war of 1982.

The Falklands war veteran described it as, "very moving" adding that in particular it was the children's 'conflict diaries' that caused him the greatest emotion.

Speaking to visitors on the day, Deputy Head Karen Steen thanked the many contributors, sponsors and the children for their, "commitment to the project and for expressing creativity throughout."

She said the aim was to pass the story of the war on to the children so, "they can remember how we came to live in freedom, for which we are eternally indebted."

Logan Dickson and Dwight Joshua opened the exhibition by reading their poems about what life would have been like during the war. The poems were followed by a touching and beautifully performed song written by Year five and Mrs Adams-Leach, and sung by the school choir and Year 5.

A number of visitors to the exhibition described themselves as moved to tears, not only by the song but the artwork produced so painstakingly to communicate, not only their love of the Islands but the often painful memories of family, friends and teachers.

Artist Zhanna Shcherbich, who worked with the children said she was a little nervous before the project began, "I was scared the kids would be all over the place but Mrs May was so determined and organised them and they responded really well to the lessons. It was an intense few days but it was fun."

Another helper Fiona Didlick said she was struck by how brave the children were in their use of big and bold colours. "They were so keen to tell a story they'd add a sheep then rock, and then what the sheep was eating, and more and more to the picture. I felt quite bad because I had to tell them to stop adding layers of stories on top of their pictures before they lost their original work," she said.

Organiser and Protected Areas Project Officer Clare Cockwell told Penguin News she would like to thank everyone who attended the exhibition: "It was a culmination of months of hard work by children, staff and volunteers; work that we knew was worthwhile as we watched the children show their visitors what they love about where they live."

"I'd also like to thank everyone who left a message on our comment board. Visitors were asked the same question that the children had considered: what do you love about where you live? The answers we received from friends, family, veterans, and all our visitors, were very moving and inspiring."

She said the project was made possible by, "financial support provided by FIG, who contribute an education and outreach grant to the Protected Areas Project, and the Overseas Territories Environment Programme, who fund the project as a whole. This commitment ensures that we can continue to provide environmental education to the next generation, who will be responsible for looking after our natural heritage into the future."

Further examples of the children's work were included in last week's bumper liberation issue of Penguin News.

Stunning felt work

Credit union?

INITIAL research has been carried out by FIDC's Projects Manager Michael Betts into the possibility of establishing a credit union in the Falklands.

Credit unions are generally defined as small non-profit financial organisations set up by members with something in common to benefit their community.

The Falklands only has one financial institute that provides limited services and tends to be risk adverse when considering business loans, Mr Betts explained. This situation had forced FIDC to become a, "lender of last resort," to ensure small businesses and farms had access to finance. He said that situation would not change until an "element of competition was introduced."

Young business

AN initiative to develop entrepreneurship in young people between the ages of 18 and 30 is in the early stages of development within the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC). The main objective is to engage key individuals and associations to take part in the development of a youth business programme as a possible avenue for young people to develop the businesses of the future, based on Falklands' realities, General Manager Marc Boucher told a meeting of the Development Corporation Board on Wednesday.

FIDC website

THE Development Corporation's new website (fidc.co.fk) went live on Wednesday after a two year absence. Business Advisor Jackie Gumsley explained that staff had worked closely with Brian Jamieson of South Harbour Consulting Ltd to gather the content and three staff had been trained to administer the site in the hope all maintenance could be carried out internally. As with all websites, it would expand over time to ensure it, "accurately and dynamically reflects FIDC and the environment in which it operates," said Mrs Gumsley.

Updated licence

THE Police Committee were told on Thursday a card version of the Falkland Islands driving licence would be available to the public at a cost of £1.50 for the optional supplementary card and would mirror the EU design adopted by all EU countries which has to be in place by January 19, 2013.

Drink driving

STANLEY man Arthur McBain (77) was banned from driving and fined £600 in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday after he admitted drink driving on June 2. Mr McBain was disqualified for 18 months and ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

IT is good when something long planned comes together as it did in New York last week. When we formed groups early last year to deal with the various Argentine threats to our communications and other aspects of our daily lives, public relations was an important element. Including non MLAs in various overseas activities was something we agreed we would pursue. While we lost some of the element of surprise through a little misguided over-eagerness in some quarters, we certainly achieved what was hoped in demonstrating Argentine intransigence and, putting it bluntly, hypocrisy. We all owe a huge thank you to the six individuals who took time out of their busy lives to make it happen. Six against the 90-odd taken by the Argentine president to pack out the venue tells a story of the effectiveness of truth and quality not quantity – and our speakers did not do badly either! However, we cannot expect miracles from the largely irrelevant C24, so we simply have to keep on working.

***

THE visitors last week all seem to have valued and enjoyed their time here and will undoubtedly spread the word far and wide. It is just a pity that they could not pack anything else into their busy programmes as there is so much of interest going on. I was able to see some of the activities at FICS when the Minister visited there and was also delighted to see the wonderful exhibition at the IJS where the children had illustrated some of the special things about their country. I also got to hear, in the schools, some of the songs created by students with the help of Mrs Adams Leach. I hope they will consider making a recording for people to buy so that more people can enjoy them. Unfortunately it was hard to hear their performance at the Liberation reception because not everyone had the courtesy to listen.

***

I PLAN to be away until July 11, part private business and part holiday. The Hon. Gavin Short has agreed to cover for me. Sorry I'll miss the next public meeting.

Acknowledge the people Cristina

Two of a new generation of Islanders talk about their visit to the United Nations as part of an eight strong delegation

"INTENSE and inspiring," is how Islander Ailie Biggs (29) described a recent visit to the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonisation (C24) as part of a delegation of six young Islanders and two Members of Legislative Assembly, determined to take the Falklands message to the Argentine President Cristina Kirchner and the world press.

So resolute that Mrs Kirchner would acknowledge the people of the Islands Ailie found herself clutching a letter from the Falkland Islands Government, while pursuing a heavily bodyguarded Head of State down a corridor.

The letter itself had been offered to the President by MLAs Roger Edwards and Mike Summers who had shortly before presented the Falklands case to the largely anti-Falklands committee.

Mrs Kirchner refused to acknowledge the letter, however, the six younger members of the team, Michael Poole, Krysteen Ormond, James Marsh, Caris Stevens, Andy Pollard and Ailie had been warned that immediately the Argentine President finished her own speech she would leave.

"We nipped out the door and lined the corridor and waited for her. I know James shook her hand until she realised who or what he was. Krysteen was speaking to her in Spanish so she definitely knew who we were. I followed her down the corridor and asked her to accept the letter, that we had things we would like to discuss, and to please acknowledge the people of the Falklands. She didn't acknowledge me at all, her bodyguards did try to politely remove me, but they didn't have too much success."

In the lead up to the meeting held on June 14, the group had spent exhausting days speaking to a well briefed press, in both London and the USA. Two of the group, Andy and Krysteen had arrived in the USA ahead of the others, accompanying the MLAs on a frantic schedule of meetings, think tanks and interviews in Washington and New York.

Ailie said: "Reception from the press was positive; they were very pro-Falklands. It was great to get that amount of coverage. I think it has done a lot for the Islands."

The interviews were, "intense," because although the group was clear on the message they wished to deliver, "I've been interviewed before but it was exhausting, a full day of interviews in London," before facing the New York press, "having to be careful about what you said, and to be concise and accurate."

The reason for a larger Falklands delegation than usual to the C24 was a response to news that for the very first time an Argentine President would attend the conference; along with a 96 strong delegation.

Ailie believes that sending the Falklands delegation, "was certainly the right thing to do and it all came off very well." She praised MLAs Summers and Edwards, "they were just great in their delivery," adding that the trip has made her realise the importance of the work of the MLAs overseas. She said from her own point of view the trip would encourage her into politics.

Senior Agricultural Advisor Andy Pollard was equally enthusiastic saying it was, "a really good line that we had fourth to seventh generation Islanders there to say we are not an implanted population, here we are in proof."

He said it was also helpful to have the group, "just to handle the wide range of media there, and to promote that the Falklands is forward going."

Andy and Krysteen, accompanying Mike and Roger, were primarily involved (in advance of the C24) in Washington meetings with USA senators, and officials connected with the UN.

Their aim? "Trying to get across that supporting negotiations isn't a neutral stance because Argentina has a predetermined outcome on the Falklands issue. We were pushing human rights and self-determination as the neutral stance. Some were pretty open to it but it's a political game and some have big dealings with Argentina. At the same time, everyone we talked to did listen and there was quite a bit of support out there for the Falklands too," said Andy.

He praised the idea of a referendum, noting that many of the officials had brought up the concept prior to any announcement that it was in fact going to happen in 2013.

"There's no question from my point of view that it's the right thing to do. Of course it won't make a difference to Argentina's attitude, but it will make a difference to some other countries. Either they come here and see we are British or we show them on paper."

Speaking of the C24 speeches Andy added, "I take my hat off to Roger and Mike; while I have always had a level of respect for what they go away to do, we were all very inspired as Falkland Islanders by them."

Crime rate going down

At Thursday's meeting of the Police Committee Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden reported a decrease of 16 per cent (116 incidents) in the number of incidents reported to the Royal Falkland Islands Police from October through to March.

The overall arrest rate, however, was only down by one from 38 to 37.

Mr Marsden said that during that period there was a reduction of 27 crimes (31 per cent) compared to the same period in the previous year. There had been an increase in the reporting of alleged sexual offences, however some of the crimes were alleged to have been committed by the same person and were still in the process of investigation awaiting trial.

He said it was pleasing to see that there were no TWOC's (taking without consent) in the period as this particular crime was becoming a worrying trend.

It was also pleasing to see that there were no reports of juveniles consuming intoxicating liquor he said, however, the period did see an increase in driving over the prescribed limit and other vehicle related offences.

Biodiversity grants

A GRANT scheme established from a bequest to Falklands Conservation by Joan Kenneally can help you get involved in biodiversity this year.

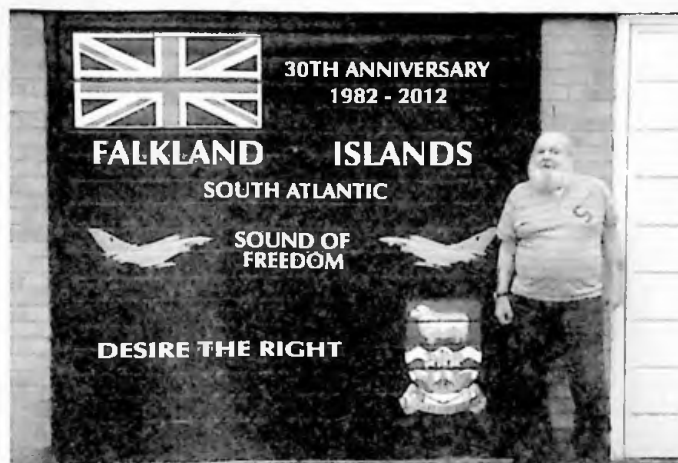

Grants up to £1,000 are awarded for practical conservation, research and/or wildlife education projects in the Falkland Islands.

Farrah Peck of Falklands Conservation explained that appropriate projects included but were not restricted to, restoration/ protection of tussock grass through planting, management or fencing; control of rodents/cats to reduce impacts on wild birds; control of invasive plants (gorse, thistle etc.) where these are damaging native habitats; construction of bird hides for visitor use and enhancement of wildlife and bird habitats.

Applications will be accepted until July 31, with grant allocations made by August 31. Projects must be completed by June 30 the following year (within 10 months of award). Miss Peck said projects should aim to contribute at least 50 per cent towards the total cost - this can be payment in kind such as labour, fuel, accommodation and materials.

For application forms and further information, or to discuss your projects suitability phone: 22247 or email:

Fred Townson with his Falklands 30 garage art

Message of freedom

A FORMER Sergeant with 266 Signal Squadron Fred Townson (65) has remembered Liberation Day with some rather splendid art work on his garage door in the UK.

Fred did two tours in the Falklands soon after the war and has returned on holiday to visit his many friends in the Islands. His daughter Mandi told us he is an avid Penguin News reader and never stops talking about his time in the Falklands.

Fred, who is now disabled as a result of a motorcycle accident has dedicated his garage art to the Falklands civilians who helped the British Forces during the war in 1982, while sending out a clear and welcome message to passers by in his neck of the woods.

Your questions answered

Q Could the Chief Executive explain that while the Department of Agriculture publish weekly wool benchmark prices, the FIG owned company FLH allegedly sold over 80 tonnes of wool through the Falklands Wool Company for as much as 150 pence below the prevailing benchmark in mid 2011 for delivery in 2012? Would the CE explain how FLH/Wool Company action could in any way have assisted the wool market for Falklands' farmers in 2011 and 2012?

Falklands Landholdings Manager Owen Summers provided the following response

A FLH like several other farmers took advantage of the exceptional wool prices towards the middle of 2011 and contracted a quantity of wool for delivery in 2012; which incidentally was some 20 tonnes less than that quoted by the writer. Wool price offers made by buyers for wool finer than 25 micron, have commonly, from approximately Feb/March 2011 until now carried discounts from benchmark of between 50p and £1 with the finer microns being discounted the most. When FLH secured its contract there was some discount but nowhere near the 150 pence quoted by the writer and it can only be assumed they have confused net prices with gross.

This contract related to approximately 5% of the Falklands total wool clip and is unlikely to have influenced the market for Falklands' wool throughout 2012 especially when discounts on the market today are very similar to those prior to the contract being taken.

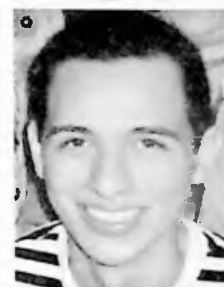

The information above relates entirely to the FLH contract and FLH/FIG is unable to comment on the private business of Falklands Wool Company.

Q It is widely understood that the Falklands Wool Company has received significant unsecured borrowings from FIDC. What is the maximum FIDC has lent the Falklands Wool Company at any time in the last year and at what interest rate? Are such favourable terms available to other businesses?

FIDC's Business Advisor Lyn Buckland supplied the following answer

A In 2011/12 no monies have been loaned. The loan arrangement was terminated by FIDC in December of 2011. Loan terms and conditions are assessed on a case by case basis, but the arrangements with the Falklands Wool Company were typical of a normal unsecured loan interest rate.

1. What is your most prized possession?

Possibly my Apple gadgets, can't live without them, and my Beats headphones

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?

Undoubtedly, it would have to be Margaret Thatcher; she's one formidable woman

3. What is your happiest moment?

Christmas 2005, I had just moved here with my mum and my sister to join my dad

4. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition?

I would probably do one of my Beyonce numbers; I'd have to lip-synch though

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

My alarm clock every morning

6. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

I think Siân Davies would have a defying and fierce attitude to show our neighbours where we stand

7. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Most definitely Sydney, I love the beach/city combination.

8. What is your favourite TV programme?

Family Guy, it depicts modern society as it is (with a comedic approach), plus, some say Stewie and I have a lot in common

9. What song makes you feel happy (or sad) when you hear it?

Lucky by Jason Mraz and Colbie Caillat. It reminds me of a walk home after a night out with my best friend Jane, singing our drunken hearts out along Fitzroy Road

10. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Sushi. I don't get to eat it often, but I make the most of it when I get the chance to

Cubs to Tumbledown for Scots Guards

THE nine Scots Guards killed in the Battle for Mount Tumbledown in 1982 were remembered on June 13 by the Cubs on their annual memorial hike.

Thirteen cubs took part in the hike up Mount Tumbledown accompanied by leaders Jan and Tim Miller, Cynthia Williams and Mark Neves, parents Ralph Harris, Miranda McKee and Marlene Short and Grandad Les Harris, along with Major Tim Carmichael from MPA, "who kindly came along to give the cubs a Battlefield talk," said Mrs Miller. Mark Spruce from FITV also made the journey.

Mrs Miller said: "Although conditions were quite icy, we all safely made it to the Argentine field kitchen and stopped to watch a VC10 fly over, plus two Typhoons which waved to us. Major Tim gave the cubs a talk on walking safely in the hills before we carried on to the summit, where he showed them how the Scots Guards came up the hill in the dark and described the awesome battle that took place."

The group then moved to the cross, where the Cubs polished all of the brass plaques. Lachlan Crowie read out the names of the fallen and the Collect of the Scots Guards. Sean Sackett laid the cub cross. Molly Jaffray laid the wreath to remember the Scots Guards and youngest cub Travis Jaffray planted the Falklands flag.

"After having a group photo, Major Tim produced chocolate for everyone to share," said Mrs Miller, "and we had another treat of the Typhoon coming back especially to wave to us again, followed by a low flying FIGAS plane bringing Falklands 30 VIPs back from Fox Bay. We would like to thank all the parents and especially Major Carmichael for coming with us."

Second referendum

IT was very good news I thought, to hear about the referendum planned for next year on the subject of our political future. I would like to propose that we have another referendum on the subject of the Stanley to MPA road, i.e. would we like to see the road sealed with asphalt over its entire length.

I suspect that the majority of the population would favour such a proposal.

IJS put on a great art show

I HAVE just returned from viewing the Infant/Junior School and Camp Education Falklands 30 exhibition and am absolutely stunned at the excellent quality of work on show.

May I congratulate all the pupils on their creative ideas and skill in executing them. Clare Cockwell, (Protected areas project) local artists and all the staff have worked successfully together, putting in many extra hours to produce such a treat for all who visited. From the conception of the idea, the development of the work with the children, through to the final exhibition, this project has given youngsters a true and lasting experience which they will remember and pass on to future generations.

It was also very special to hear the school choir perform the song which Year 5 have written (see right) - the words portray their own ideas of the Falklands today, and their thanks to those who fought and lost their lives for freedom for generations to come. Shirley Adams-Leach is an inspiration to all young musicians and I hope this particular song will have a much wider audience.

Minister Browne sends his thanks

Dear Editor,

I would like, through the pages of Penguin News, to thank the people of the Falkland Islands for being so friendly and welcoming during my visit last week.

Getting to know the Falkland Islands was a fantastic experience and it was a great privilege to be with you for the celebrations and commemorations around Liberation Day.

The British Government wholeheartedly supports the principles of self-determination for the people of the Falkland Islands and I was delighted to be able to confirm this commitment in person during my visit.

Yours sincerely,

Kiwi pilot set to run seven marathons in just a week

NEW Zealand pilot Mike Allsop is set to run seven marathons in seven continents in seven days, kicking off the challenge on July 14 here in the Falklands.

Mike, an Air New Zealand Boeing 737 captain, aims to be the first New Zealander to complete the challenge and achieved his first extreme milestone in 2007 when he climbed Mt Everest.

He will now attempt to match British explorer Sir Ranulph Fiennes's incredible 777 feat, with funds raised from his efforts going to New Zealand children's charity KidsCan.

Mike's major sponsors Air New Zealand and Vodafone are proud supporters of his efforts and have provided the flights and technology required to make his 777 project a reality.

This is My Home

This is my home, where I belong
It's the inspiration for this song
The Falkland Islands, peaceful and free,
This land will always be special to me

Spring comes around and the weather is fine,
All getting ready for lamb marking time.
Penguins and albatross home from the sea
To build a nest for their family.
Out on a gather, the sun on your face,
Guiding the sheep towards the race.
Everyone busy in the shearing shed,
But I would rather be fishing instead.

This is my home, where I belong,
It's the inspiration for this song.
The Falkland Islands, peaceful and free,
This land will always be special to me.

Sports weeks are always filled with fun,
Dog trials and watching the horses run.
Miles of Camp to enjoy and explore,
From mountains rugged to beautiful shore.
Peppery buns and muddle bee jam,
The glorious smell of roasting lamb.
Collecting eggs under skies so blue,
A taste of the Falklands for me and you.

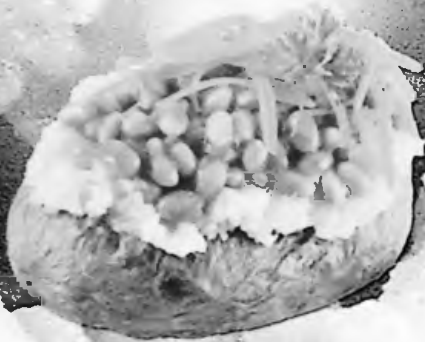

This is my home, where I belong,
It's the inspiration for this song.
The Falkland Islands, peaceful and free,
This land will always be special to me.
Repeat chorus

Meghan and Kalon fly the flag at the ball

PATRIOTIC youngsters Meghan Law and Kalon Jaffray took the titles of Miss and Mr Liberation at the ball on Wednesday night both sporting a flash of the red white and blue of the Union flag.

The joint Stanley Sports Association (SSA) and SAMA(FI) event organised by Mandy Ford attracted a large crowd with some fresh new faces taking to the dance floor with a reduced age limit of 14 and the licensed bar restricted to the refreshment room.

Stanley taxi driver Faith Felton was presented with the Miss SAMA sash, selected by visiting veterans on the night while FCO Minister Jeremy Browne presented a sash and prizes to the younger winners.

With final calculations still to be made it is anticipated that in the region of £900 each was raised for SAMA (FI) and the SSA which is celebrating its 100th race meeting this Christmas.

"Everyone made a huge effort in making it a great night to remember," said Mandy, adding her thanks to Heather Smith for making the superb sash and also to all the bouncers and people who helped on the night.

Finalists (back) Sandra Alazia, Elane Morrison, Amy Guest, Beth Parker, Kate Stenning, (Front) Caitlin Whitney, Reba Peck, Tiegian Curtis, Meghan Law, Bronwen Ford, Dani Gordon, Keiran Watt

Below left: Falkland Islands war veterans march at Aldershot at a commemorative weekend held on June 16 and 17, described as a regimental family occasion. The main event was held at the military cemetery with a full drum head service followed by a march through and salute at Princes Hall and a fly past of Falklands-era aircraft.

Below: Veterans organisations with the colours at Pangbourne. More than 800 people attended a service held at the Falkland Islands Memorial Chapel in Pangbourne at which the Elizabeth Cross medal was presented to the families of those who lost relatives in the Falklands war

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)...Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area
146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)...Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182...Mz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 15th June 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its new lowest value this season at AU$1,054 making it 680/kg clean in Stirling, up by 12 pence. There was an offering of 32,693 bales this week, with a clearance rate of 83% which has decreased from last week.

There is a rather small offering of 22,600 bales predicted for next week. Even though there is a high availability, it does seem that prices will rise in the short term.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Stanley reflects on 30 years past

ON the 30th anniversary of liberation 208 people of those living in Stanley in 1982 were identified as still living in Stanley, and many of them gathered at the Town Hall on June 15, to mark the occasion.

Reception organiser Rosie King who was 25 at the time, kept a diary of events. Part of her June 14, 1982 entry read:

"What a day! Started with 10 hours of fierce artillery fire. From approx 10 am things have been peaceful. At 10 past 2 this afternoon Pat Watts broadcast that there was a ceasefire at present. The Brits have advanced as far as the Battle Memorial and so have taken Wireless Ridge and Tumbledown Mountain areas and Mount William.

"The announcement said that the Generals from both sides are to meet at 4 pm this afternoon to assess the next step. We are to stay indoors until further notice.

"Thousands of Argentine troops appear to be in town and of all the things, we watched them pile up lots of their radio equipment and then set to and bash it up with pick-axes. This happened right here outside of King's yard."

It was June 15 before Rosie and many others felt they were truly liberated. "We headed to Ross Road as the troops arrived in; that was liberating to the core," she said.

Stanley's June 14 1982 residents gather at the Town Hall on Friday

As many of the remaining 208 residents accompanied by family that could attend, were welcomed at the Town Hall from 7-10pm as well as Ann Reid and Ben Lovett who lost family members during the war and are now resident in the Islands. 258 candles were lit to represent those that paid the ultimate sacrifice with Ann and Ben lighting the last two candles to directly represent their son and father respectively.

Rosie said The Reverend

Richard Hines then, "very kindly opened the reception with a welcoming and poignant reflection of the reason we had all gathered."

Norman Clark followed on with official photographs to record the occasion which are now on his website, followed by everybody enjoying a canape buffet and in a lovely warm atmosphere, there was plenty of chat going on for the rest of the evening.

Rosie thanked Malvina House Hotel for the catering, Sullivan Shipping Limited, Mini Mi's Nursery, Bold Venture, CFL, Jacs Cakes, Shorties Diner, Beauchene Fishing Co Ltd, FIODA Jason Lewis, Myriam Booth and family members.

"Jill, Les (Harris) and I were extremely pleased with the whole event," she said.

On June 14, 1982 there were approximately 633 residents in Stanley.

Students invincible in giant cake project

HMS Invincible was recreated in cake form for the Falklands 30 public reception on June 14, by Falkland Islands Community School students. FICS students have been undertaking a series of projects geared around Liberation and the final days of the Falklands war.

The cake project began with the school, students, parents and members of the community donating ingredients towards the project, including 400 eggs.

Around half the students in school cooked a cake towards the project during Monday afternoon and Tuesday. Final assembly of the cake took place on Wednesday. This had to be done in place as the final weight of the cake was over 100kg.

During the Wednesday, Declan Bonner, Pilar Castro, Bronwen Ford and Ollie Hayward had a course in cake decorating from teaching staff Simon Isaacs, Diane Freeman and Helen Bell. 10kg of ready roll icing was coloured various shades of grey and black, and the slabs of cake were laid out ready for cutting and shaping. The initial shape of the cake came together in around one hour, although the decoration process took slightly longer, at four hours, and was finally completed as members of the FIDF and HM British Forces arrived for Parade Rehearsal at 5pm. Bronwen did an excellent job piping the detail into place with around 80 people watching her.

His Excellency the Governor, Nigel Haywood cut the cake using a ceremonial sword.

Final dimensions were 36cm wide and 2.17m long, with a maximum height of 38cm, giving a final scale representation of 1:100 of the original Invincible. By 6pm, not much of the cake was left.

The school is in the process of applying for a Guinness World Record for the cake, although it will not be known if this is successful until possibly as late as November.

The Head Teacher and staff of FICS would like to thank all members of the community who supported the many projects and activities run during our liberation celebrations, in particular those who donated ingredients towards the cake.

Other activities relating to the war were also provided by school departments. The Science Department (John Carlin and Byron Bowden-Graham) ran a series of experiments about the science of war, including demonstrations of physical and chemical reactions used in weaponry.

Emma Brook ran a geographical activity where students had to navigate across a simulated minefield using maps. There were a few casualties.

In ICT, students participated in producing a slideshow with Kerry Ford using modern day technology to produce a show comparing historic and modern day photographs of the Falklands.

Students in History with Ben Lovett produced an historical timeline of the Conflict, with students learning about key decisions and events which took place.

Students working with Neil Ward and Colin Davies recreated the badges of the units involved in the Task Force, and also produced 30 wooden goblets. The goblet presented to the FCO Minister Jeremy Browne had been turned from an old minefield post.

Colour Sergeant Trevor Law, the Royal Marine instructor attached to the FIDF visited the school and with Ruth Kemp, put the students through some of the rigorous training undertaken by the Royal Marines and Parachute Regiment during their voyage south. Students completed shuttle runs moving weapons and ammunition crates around the Sports Hall, along with fast paced circuit training activities.

FICS Canberra commando challenge

Jessica Morris, Christopher Clarke, Ryan Watson, Hazel Fowmes and Joshua Sanchez work together to move weapons

FICS students were treated to a military style personal training session on June 13 as part of their special timetable centred around the 30th anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands.

Under the instruction of Royal Marine Trevor Law Physical Education was pushed to the limit simulating the kinds of PT that the SS Canberra crew would have completed en-route to the Falklands in 1982. Students worked in teams to evacuate casualties, move around the machinery and ammo as well as gruelling fitness tests.

"The kids were loving it," said PE Teacher Ruth Kemp. "it gave them a good chance to experience what the guys went through to keep fit on their way down here, 1982 style."

FOGL's French farm out could lead to three wells

FALKLAND Oil and Gas (FOGL) were already fully funded for their forthcoming two well drill programme, but the farm out with a French owned utility announced this week, "provides greater flexibility and may even provide the scope for a third well in the current programme," a company spokesperson told Penguin News.

On Tuesday FOGL named Edison, which is owned by French group EDF, as the company that was reported in March to have bought an option to invest in its licensed areas.

The company said Edison would pay around $50 million for costs already encountered in earlier exploration work and 2012 drilling costs for a 25 per cent interest in its northern licenses and 12.5 per cent in its southern licenses. Edison is also to make a separate cash contribution of $40 million to FOGL.

The spokesperson said: "After the two well programmes we should have at least $100 million left to invest in follow-up work, which is likely to first be 3D seismic over any successfully drilled prospects. This farm out provides further industry validation of the potential of our licences and gives us greater financial flexibility for our future exploration programme."

FOGL now expects to receive the Leiv Eiriksson rig in July following completion of the drilling of the B&S Stebbing well.

The company intends to drill its first well on the Loligo prospect and the second well will be selected based on the Loligo well results.

The spokesperson said if the initial Loligo results were encouraging, it would lead on to a further well on Loligo or a well on Nimrod. Otherwise, a well will be drilled on the Mid Cretaceous Scotia prospect.

Further drilling in this campaign would be subject to these well results and to rig availability.

Asked to what extent the political situation had impacted on exploration the company spokesperson told Penguin News emphatically: "The political situation has really not impacted our operations at anytime in the past eight years."

Oriel Securities analyst Nick Copeman also commented this week: "Overall this looks like an attractive deal for FOGL and highlights that the acreage is attracting interest from larger industry participants."

Borders & Southern in April announced a discovery of gas condensate in its Darwin prospect close to FOGL's fields.

If gas is discovered at Loligo rather than oil, it could contain as much as 30 trillion cubic feet, enough to justify building a plant to liquefy the fuel for shipping, a spokesperson reported.

Rockhopper Exploration Plc (RKH), the only company to have made a commercial discovery in the Falklands so far, is seeking $2 billion from a larger oil company to develop the Sea Lion field on the northern side of the Islands.

Sea trout project to shut down?

THE Development Corporation aquaculture project at Moody Brook is to be shut down if current negotiations with a local business do not come to fruition.

The Board made the decision last week in the closed section of the meeting, to end the sea trout project and, it was rumoured, to dispose of the thousands of fish in various stages of development.

FIDB chairman MLA Gavin Short said FIDC's mandate was to operate the project until June 30 and due to the commercial confidentiality of the discussions still ongoing, no further details could be provided.

He confirmed on Wednesday however, that there was no plan at present to destroy the fish.

The Environmental Planning Department has also confirmed that a Research Licence had been applied for to release some of the fish into the Murrell River.

Slow wool

FALKLANDS Land Holdings (FLH) wool sales have continued at a slow pace and FLH has 5,0427 clean kg of wool unsold to date; of this 31618 clean kg is oddments for which there seems little interest at the present time, reported FLH General Manager Owen Summers on Thursday.

In his report to the FLH Committee Meeting he said: "The wool market has continued to be uncertain over the last two months with the Eastern Market Indicator closing at 680p/kg on the June 15, the lowest this season although it has recovered by 14p this week."

Summer time

THE vast majority of respondents to the census conducted earlier this year were in favour of keeping 'summer time' hours throughout the year, Chief Executive Keith Padgett told the public meeting on Monday.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffary

I'VE got my fingers crossed that the ongoing negotiations between FIDC and the undisclosed local business with regard to the aquaculture project will have an outcome that will put Falklands sea trout on the tables of local restaurants, and possibly even become a sought after delicacy world-wide.

As far back as late 2009 FIDC had been hopeful a private company would join them in setting up a sea trout farming business, but it seemed no one was prepared to take the bait. The project was set up in 2007 to look at the aquaculture potential of local species and it was soon found that sea trout grow well, are relatively easy to culture and have few issues with disease.

Last winter there were high hopes the hundreds of healthy fish swimming in the tanks would be provided with sea cages to complete the experiment and prove they could be successfully farmed at selected sea sites in the Falklands. Funding, however, was not forthcoming despite an under spend of £51,000 on the project that year and a monthly running cost of just £3,000, an amount I have heard referred to as "peanuts" in FIDB meetings in the past.

In the UK, frozen sea trout fillets retail at around £23 per kilo while peat smoked (yes that stuff we have an unlimited supply of) trout can expect to fetch around £80 per kilo, and appears to come from a very small number of producers with very limited stocks. So, we have a product and a market and it has to be said, that's a lot more than the abattoir had at the start.

I appreciate that FIDC has probably taken the project as far as it possibly can, but I sincerely hope they will not angle for such a high price it will put off any prospective buyer or partner and we see what could be a really big one get away.

How great it would be to recommend to tourists they sample our home grown, peat smoked trout for lunch rather than see the venture end up gathering dust in the cellar with the other 'didn't quite make it's' or even worse with a mound of prime product on the rubbish tip which is exactly what happened with the salmon farming project in the 1980s.

From the Editor Lisa Watson:

THE increasing pressure from the public with regard to the deteriorated state of the MPA Road could arguably result in the decision makers finding themselves in the extraordinarily unenviable position, that if nothing is done to rectify the situation, they, if not legally, but certainly ethically, will be viewed as personally responsible for any future serious accidents. While that scenario is likely unfair (and it might be sensible that MLAs wait the "several" months for a clearer picture of future oil exploitation income) at the same time, the problem isn't going to go away. Thus if the Public Accounts Committee is to dwell on the issue, as reported at the public meeting, then they should not ponder indefinitely. Few issues can compare to this particular one in terms of requiring actions rather than words.

UK strengthens relationship with OTs

THE UK Government renewed and strengthened Britain's relationship with the Overseas Territories yesterday with the publication of its White Paper: 'The Overseas Territories: Security, Success and Sustainability'.

Foreign Secretary, William Hague said: the paper was the first review of the Overseas Territories since 1999 and demonstrated the importance the Coalition Government attaches to the Overseas Territories.

"As well as having a responsibility to ensure the security and good governance of the Territories, we want the Territories to be vibrant, flourishing communities that proudly retain aspects of their British identity."

"We appreciate the remarkable diversity of the Territories, each with their own specific attributes, opportunities and challenges. This White Paper is designed to meet these challenges, to set out ways we can support the Territories and strengthen our engagement with them. It is another major milestone in our long and shared history, and I hope it will mark a new era of engagement between Britain and the Overseas Territories."

This White Paper focuses on three goals: strengthening engagement between the UK and the Territories; working with the Territories to strengthen good governance, public financial management and economic planning where this is necessary; and improving the quality and range of support available to the Territories.

There are fourteen UK Overseas Territories, eleven of which have permanent populations.

- Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Montserrat and the Turks and Caicos Islands are all in the Caribbean.

- Bermuda is in the North Atlantic Ocean.

- The Falkland Islands and the Territory of St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha in the South Atlantic.

- Pitcairn, with a population of less than 60 people, is the only territory in the Pacific.

- Gibraltar is the only Territory in the EU. The Sovereign Base Areas of Akrotiri and Dhekelia in Cyprus are an Overseas Territory but are not formally part of the EU.

- The remaining territories, ie the British Antarctic Territory, the British Indian Ocean Territory, and South Georgia & the South Sandwich Islands (in the South Atlantic) do not have permanent populations.

'We're not stupid' claims Argentine president

ARGENTINE President Cristina Kirchner has addressed the countries olympic athletes and suggested they might be provoked by crowds in London, soon after British newspapers said intelligence reports had revealed that Argentina may use the Games to mount a protest about the Falklands.

"They [the British] are hoping we do something stupid, so they can discredit us," she said, adding, "We're not stupid. We don't need to use sport to stand up for our rights. We'll defend our rights in appropriate forums, like the UN."

However, Mrs Kirchner's words were immediately discredited as she followed up with praise for the advert secretly filmed and broadcast by her government which showed an Argentine hockey player training for the Olympics in the Falklands on what they claimed was Argentine soil.

"It doesn't matter who got angry about the spot. I thought it was divine, important and creative," said Mrs Kirchner.

The hockey player Fernando Zylberberg who starred in the advert was consequently dropped by the Argentine Olympic squad.

Oil boosts Stanley Services Ltd

OIL exploration in Falklands waters has contributed to a good money year for Stanley Services Ltd with turnover increased by 80.2 per cent and profits up by 69.3 per cent.

Stanley Services Ltd holds the Falkland Island Government Exclusive Licence for the supply of bunker fuels in the Falkland Islands and its territorial waters which was its principal activity in 2011 along with fuel supply to civilian aircraft, general retailing, agency services for liner and air freight, travel and tourism and motor vehicles.

According to the annual report and financial statement, revenue was increased from bunkering, hotel bookings, ships agency and car hire with the company also able to benefit from increased room availability within the Malvinas House Hotel for the entire year.

The profit for the year after taxation amounted to £2,052,613 compared to £1,212,733 in 2010 with a dividend of 85p per share paid to shareholders.

Dividends paid to the Falkland Islands Government who own 44.9 per cent of Stanley Services was £381,688 an increase of £30,653 on the previous year with fellow shareholders Lavinia Corporation and S & J D Robertson Group receiving £213,371 and £255,026 respectively.

Ocean Guardian and support vessel UOS Endeavour

A total of £69,369 was advanced to Falkland Islands Television Limited which Stanley Services holds a 50 per cent shareholding in.

A major non-cash transaction to allow development was the exchange of a property with a book value of £34,740 for land adjacent to property owned by the company with a value deemed to be £70,000.

Stanley Services Limited (SSL) was formed in 1987 and is a joint venture between the Falkland Islands Government and commercial partners S & J D Robertson Group, who were a well-established distributor of fuels in Orkney, Shetland, Northern Scotland and the Western Islands of Scotland and are now a Business Services Group and Lavinia Corporation which is a shipping, leisure and real estate group with substantial interests in other industries such as aviation, pelagic fisheries and bunker trading activities.

Deb Waldon

Ausmum awarded

SISTER to Stanley ladies Cheryl Roberts and Bernadette Pring, Deb Waldron of Party&Co has been nominated for the 2012 AusMumpreneur Awards, reports Cheryl.

The award is presented by connect2mums, which celebrates and recognises mums in business who achieve outstanding success in areas such as business, product development, services and innovation in businesses from Australia and New Zealand.

The awards are designed to recognise the growing number of women who successfully balance motherhood and business in a way that suits their life and family.

Deb wanted flexibility as a mother, so tooled with a business background and creative bent she founded Party&Co in February 2011 and launched the www.partyandco.com.au website in September 2011.

Party&Co is an online store for children's birthday parties, baby showers, and christening party products and is based on party theming, with nearly a hundred party themes for inspiration to create parties and memories to last a lifetime.

There are many benefits to balancing business and motherhood as Deb explains:

"I love that I am available for my daughter, I can do school drop-offs and pickups, be mother help in the classroom, and be available for after school activities."

"I can schedule my work around school hours, evenings, and weekends and always be available to my customers."

It can be challenging to be a successful business woman whilst raising a family and Deb gives this advice for others thinking about starting their own enterprise.

"Love what you do and believe in yourself and your product, and excel in providing the service and product that you would expect to receive."

Farmers Week health check

THE Health service will be offering advice and health checks in addition to their stand at the Rural Business Association Farmers Week Expo, which starts on Monday, June 2.

Along with a variety of health promotion information, staff will be on hand to answer questions, take blood pressure and height, weight and body mass index at the request of the public. Casualty appointments will be available for people who would like to have a general health check, with a fasting blood test taken to measure cholesterol level.

Those who would like a health check can go to KEMH Casualty on Tuesday, June 3, between 7.30am and 9am. To prepare for the fasting blood test nothing should be eaten or drunk after 10pm Monday night.

There will also be appointments available on Wednesday morning, June 4, between 7am and 9am for fasting blood tests. (Nothing to eat or drink from 10pm Tuesday evening.)

Monumental fundraising

Painting of Terra Nova by Mike Skidmore

A STUNNING painting depicting the SS Terra Nova in McMurdo Sound, Antarctica, is being auctioned as part of a fundraising effort for the British Antarctic Monument Trust.

Bidding has already reached £750 for the painting and Trustee Roderick Rhys Jones said: "We will keep all bidders in touch with the way the bidding is going and if anyone would like to put in a bid they can."

The British Antarctic Monument Trust was created to celebrate the achievements of the men and women whose exploration in British Antarctic Territory has led to a new understanding of the planet, and to honour those who did not return.

The northern piece of a two-part monumental sculpture has been erected at the Scott Polar Research Institute, Cambridge, while funding for the Southern piece to be placed in the Falklands continues.

The Trust is concentrating on raising the money necessary to cast and finish the monument to be sited in Stanley, and have already raised £20,000 towards their target of £30,000.

"We have had a number of donations from Falkland Islanders and would welcome donations from Islanders particularly those who have links with the Antarctic."

"We are also awaiting decisions by the Falkland Island Government on how it proposes the waterfront should be developed. The Trust still favours the dockyard point because of its visibility and links to the museums and cultural centre," said Mr Rhys Jones

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

AFTER the events of liberation week and once the invited guests had all headed north again, the days that followed almost seemed like an anti-climax with the constant calls from the press etc suddenly seeming to stop almost as if a light switch had been thrown. This is not to say that they have dried up completely as a call from a regional paper over the weekend, asking whether we were in any way worried about another (and imminent) invasion proved. Also we still feature in Parliament and in the UK and world press and at a level that is still quite surprising.

There is talk of the Argentines using the Olympics for political ends and it is to be hoped that this is just a rumour and that they have the common decency to be able to separate politics from what should be a joyous festival of sport. We shall see.

Recent calls about the state of Stanley's roads and also street lighting was almost a pleasure to receive as it is nice to get back to constituency matters. The PWD road section do monitor the state of roads and forming potholes and subsidence etc, where it happens and do their best to attend to the more bothersome ones, "out of season," and they assure me that if anyone has information or queries about sections of road then they will be happy to hear from them. The pot-hole hotline is 27387.

Likewise if a street lamp has turned its toes up then give the Power Station a call on 27149 and report the matter. It may be that they are aware of it but they will always be happy to hear from you. Be patient though as they are very much running on a skeleton crew and it may be that they have urgent type things happening with distribution work etc and may not be able to get to the lamp right away but rest assured that they will, as do other PWD departments, do their very best to get to grips with the problem as soon as they can.

Finally, I was rather saddened to stand and watch as someone waited patiently to cross the zebra crossing outside the police station (at turn to time in the afternoon) only to see three vehicles not even attempt to stop to let the person cross. How times change, as in my day we were always in a rush to leave work.

MPA road rage

THE severely deteriorated state of the Stanley to Mount Pleasant Road drew heated discussion at the public meeting on Monday. One individual described the road as, "getting worse earlier" adding that MLAs had once mooted, "preventative budgeting," and, he said, sealing the road would prevent accidents.

MLAs rejected the suggestion that they did not see the road as a priority adding that the cost of topping it would be one third of the national reserves. MLA Summers said the intention was that the Public Accounts Committee, as an independent body, would examine the costs of topping or not topping the road. He said the PAC would be able to, "pull people in and explain themselves," and, "pull all the information together," making it a financial decision as opposed to a political one. The discussion drew the accusation from another member of the public that MLAs, "did not care," which the Chair said was, "unfair." He added, "if it was such an easy issue we would have done something by now."

The designation of camp roads was also discussed and MLAs suggested there was a general willingness all round for this to go ahead, however, there were outstanding issues of insurance and restriction of movement across private land.

House rents points based system

INVITED to explain the guiding principles for calculating government house rents in Stanley, Chair of the public meeting on Monday, MLA Mike Summers said: "In 2002 all properties were assessed using a points-based system in order to ensure comparative levels were accounted for."

He said in other words, a four bedroom house with a garage would receive a higher rent than a bed-sit. For a number of years the policy had been to increase rents by more than the inflationary factor to recognise that the FIG rents are significantly lower than the private sector, this however, was not necessarily going to be future policy it was indicated.

It was also noted that while estimates show house rents making a profit (around £300,000), this did not take into account, "any overheads of providing the service and includes the depreciation cost of properties does not take into account any capital charge for the building of these and new properties. If these were factored in the true cost would likely show a deficit."

Review to assist lower earners

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly (MLAs) have requested a review, be undertaken over the next year of ways in which the Government can better assist lower earners in reducing their financial burden.

MLA Mike Summers stated at the public meeting on Monday: "This exercise will include a review of the current policy on Retirement Pension Contributions (RPCs)."

It was suggested by a member of the public that low paid employees were hit much harder in the Falklands for RPCs than in the UK for national insurance contributions. He felt a national insurance type contribution with a combination of flat and percentage rates and a lower earnings limit threshold could replace both RPCs and Medical Services Tax.

During the discussion MLAs also noted that pension contributions had been rising in order to keep up with the cost of providing pensions; pension funds were under performing and people were living longer.

MLA Summers said the lack of money in the funds was a "big issue."

MLA Barry Elsbey commented that a process was needed to assess all the needs and, "all the little glitches," in the system.

MLA Sharon Halford emphasised along with her colleagues that once all MLAs were together there was a will, "to discuss this," referring to the overall needs of the less well paid.

Tax revenue

TAX assessments to date for 2011 show government additional revenue in the region of £400,000 as gained from the reduction in the personal allowance decided upon at the Budget Meeting of the Legislative Assembly in May 2010.

Members of Legislative Assembly offered the answer to a Member of the Public at Monday evening's public meeting who asked how much of the June 2011 £20.2 million surplus had been gained as a result of adjustments to the personal allowance.

It was noted by MLAs however, "The deadline of 31st July for tax returns for the 2011 year has not yet been reached therefore a full answer cannot be given to this question."

From January 1, 11 the personal allowance was reduced from £14,000 to £12,000 and in the first tax band from £13,000 to £12,000.

MLAs announced at the last budget that the allowance would once again return to £14,000.

Budget decision challenged

HACKLES were raised at the Education Board meeting on Monday when the Director of Health and Education David Jenkins revealed in his report that the Examinations Officer/Vocational Work Placement Co-ordinator post for the Community School had not been approved by the Legislative Assembly in the 2012/13 budget sessions.

"This will cause FICS some considerable problems and carries risks relating to the administrative complexities of student exam and associated modules as well as the status of FICS as an examination centre," said Mr Jenkins.

He said however, that Falkland Islands Community School would do all it could to ensure that student learning was not compromised, however, recruiting a teacher to work for, "less than a pound an hour, was a very challenging task."

Previously, geography teacher Emma Edwards carried out the role, which often involved getting up at 2am to download relevant exam papers for students for £500 per year which equated to less than a pound an hour for her time.

Board members Karen Lee and Julie Halliday challenged the decision not to fund the post when an examination officer was, "vital," and there was, "no shortage of money," in government.

"A lack of funds was not appropriate when the school failed the last school inspection," said Mrs Lee adding that the lack of support by the government for the education system was, "sending the wrong message to our children."

However MLA Sharon Halford defended the decision saying that as the Education Department had requested funding for some 39 new posts it was a matter of prioritisation and it was up to the Board to decide what positions were most important.

Board member and former teacher Steve Dent said that a school anywhere else in the world which carried the current status of FICS would be receiving extra funding as a matter of course.

The Community School has failed the last three Ofsted inspections, although the subsequent internal inspections had proved that improvements have been made, Mrs Lee told Penguin News.

The Board were in agreement that another application should be made to the Treasury to source the funding for the Examinations Officer/Vocational Work Placement Co-ordinator post.

Firsts for Falklands

LEARNING Support Assistant (LSA) Ali Ford has become the first individual in the Falklands to move up to the post of Higher Level Teaching Assistant at the Community School.

Director of Health and Education David Jenkins said the school was especially pleased that Mrs Ford, as one of the most senior and experienced LSAs had taken up the post.

Board member Steve Dent endorsed the sentiment, but said the wage for such positions, at around £13,000 per annum was, "appalling."

He said he had very real concerns about the retention of good quality LSAs with such a low salary offered and added that there was a further five vacancies to be filled at the Infant and Junior School. "I have no idea where we are going to get them from," he said.

Also a first for the Falklands is Infant Junior School Deputy Head Karen Steen's acceptance as a candidate for the National Professional Qualification for Headteachers.

Mr Jenkins said this was thanks in part to the considerable work of the current headteacher Tom Hill and was, "quite an accolade," for Mrs Steen to get on the programme.

The National Professional Qualification for Headship (NPQH) is the first choice qualification for anyone aspiring to be a headteacher or principal and is designed in collaboration with some of Britain's leading headteachers and academics.

The course is aimed at highly motivated individuals ready to take up a headship soon after graduation.

Health effects linked to sport supplements containing DMAA

CHIEF Medical Officer Dr Robert Queenborough has recommended that any individuals consuming sports supplements containing DMAA stop doing so immediately and contact their GP.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) Secretariat recently received information from Australia regarding possible health effects associated with the consumption of sports supplements containing DMAA (1,3 dimethylamylamine) and have sent out an alert to all members.

DMAA is reported to cause or be associated with the occurrence of high blood pressure, nausea/vomiting, cerebral haemorrhage, stroke and death.

DMAA can be found in sports supplements, party recreational drugs, and others.

A number of adverse effects potentially associated with the consumption of DMAA containing sports supplements have been reported in Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the United States of America and triggered public health actions.

In Australia, a range of sports supplements on the market containing DMAA have been identified following complaints received by a state food authority.

Testing revealed that the following brands/products tested positive for DMAA: Noxapump; 3-D explosion; Beta-Cret; Pre-Surge; 1 MR; Cyroshock; Jack3D; Mesomorph; Neurocore; Oxyelite powder; Hemo Rage Black.

Various countries around the world have now issued warnings regarding DMAA and are considering adding it to banned substance lists.

Cameron blasts Argentina

DURING a speech at the House of Commons on Monday, Prime Minister David Cameron blasted Argentina for its, "unacceptable behaviour," regarding the Falklands sovereignty claim.

Mr Cameron said that, during the G20, "the president of Argentina had a number of arguments during this summit, not just with me, and it was made very clear to her that recent behaviour by Argentina on both investment and trade protectionism was not acceptable."

Argentina's behaviour remained aggressive to the Islanders, he said adding, "The actions displayed by the Argentine government are not those of a responsible power on the world stage with threats and military rhetoric."

The Prime Minister said the Islanders must be allowed to determine their future and claimed a referendum on their political status would end the debate over ownership once and for all.

He also warned Argentina against making a fresh claim for the Falklands in the future. "They want to determine that future themselves," he said.

He now lives with his brother and works at Stanley Electrical as an apprentice photocopier technician, but in the future hopes to go travelling around the world.

In memory of Rebecca Biggs

IT IS with great sadness that we report the passing of Rebecca Ann Lilian Biggs (nee Short) on June 20, 2012 at Sarnia, Ontario, Canada, aged 83.

Rebecca was born at Fanny Cove on February 22, 1929, the eldest of 12 children to Archie and Agnes Short. Much of her childhood was spent at outside houses around Lafonia, where Archie worked as a shepherd.

After schooling in Stanley, Rebecca became a nurse at the KEMH. She married Patrick Biggs on June 9, 1950 and for several years they lived at The Camber where Pat was Caretaker Manager.

They both loved big band music and were a wonderful dancing duo. Their first three children - Robin, Valerie and Neil, were all born in Stanley.

The family left the Falklands in 1956 and made their way to Canada, where they settled in Sarnia, Ontario. There they had another son, David. Rebecca returned to nursing and Pat worked in the oil industry.

Rebecca lost her beloved Pat in 1998. She continued to live life to the full and travelled far and wide to visit her scattered siblings. When she returned to the Falkland Islands in 2002 her one wish was to walk the seawall between the town hall and Little Italy, re-tracing a route she walked with close friends after many a dance in her youth. With a little help from her family, she did just that!

Seven of Rebecca's siblings predeceased her: John, Violet, Donald, Stanley, Sandra, Henry and Dorothy. Her surviving siblings are Ivan (Australia), Mary (Nottingham, UK), Russell (Southampton, UK) and Judy (Stanley).

She is survived by her four children and her four grandchildren. Christopher, Heather, Morgan and Dmitri. Rebecca's many nephews and nieces can be found around the world in Australia, Canada, the Czech Republic, UK, New Zealand and of course, the Falklands.

Rebecca will be greatly missed by her global family. Cremation was followed by a funeral service on June 23, after which Rebecca's ashes were laid to rest in Lakeview Cemetery in Sarnia.

Swim to Bermuda

Swimmers on Sunday

THE Stanley Swimming Club is a stroke closer to sending a team to the Island Games in Bermuda next year, following a sponsored midnight swim on Sunday.

Beginning at 1am and finishing at 7am sixteen teams (all containing one member of the Swimming Club) swam 258 laps each. This represented the 255 British servicemen and three Islanders killed in 1982.

One of the organisers, Sally Ellis said: "By the time we had finished we had completed 4,128 laps which is about 64.5 miles.

"There were some exceptional performances with some of our youngest swimmers putting in 100 laps."

In the past the Club has sent one swimmer to the Isle of Wight Games in 2011 but they hope to send a team of three or four next year.

The Islands' national squad is training hard with many early morning sessions already, and the intensity is set to increase in September and again in the New Year said Sally.

She added: "A huge thank you to all the swimmers, lap counters, lifeguards and supporters, and to the FIC and Sealish Chandlery for donating refreshments. We think we will have raised around £2,000 which will really set us off to a tremendous start on our fundraising.

"The next event planned is a quiz at The Narrows towards the end of July so keep an eye out for more information for what promises to be a fun night out challenging your mind and ingenuity."

Save Plymouth

IN the first place can I say how much we love the Falklands. We've been very concerned by what we've heard in the media with regard to the Argentine President Kirchner. We feel for you guys.

At the same time I read how our veterans are struggling to preserve the former HMS Plymouth, upon which the surrender of South Georgia was signed.

Guys you now have access to some amazing wealth due to your well managed fishery and hopefully the new oil/gas industry. I suspect enough could be scraped together to either buy or help preserve this ship, possibly even tow her to Stanley. What a high profile message that would send to the world.

The Rothesay-class frigate served in the Royal Navy from 1959 to 1988 and her story can be found if you search www.telegraph.co.uk.

In addition as a 1950s period frigate it would give you an all-weather tourist attraction, education centre and lasting memorial to the Navy that came to your aid in your time of greatest need.

I wish I had the personal wealth to help out myself but I hope the idea inspires you or someone you know.

Music for Alex

DESPITE suffering from autism and severe learning difficulties Alex McGhie, who lives at Port North on West Falklands, will now be able to experience a whole new world of sound as he starts the new school year in September.

Community School (FICS) music teacher Shirley Adams-Leach has presented his Learning Support Assistant, Susie Hansen, with the Coomber CD recording equipment donated through 'The Falkland Suite' account: the money for which was raised from last year's Winter Ball, which is held each year in memory of Helen McKay.

Mrs Adams-Leach explained that Alex responds to music with "positive engagement and real enjoyment and he has recently been listening to songs that his brother and sister, Thomas and Grace, have been singing.

"If they are recorded for him then Alex will be able to join in. He will also be able to record himself and hear his own voice which will enable him to have another dimension to his learning."

The Winter Ball this year will be held on July 21 at the Falkland Islands Defence Force Hall and tickets are available from the FIC Electrical store and FICS Music Department.

Serious courage

THE recent political delegation of articulate young Islanders was something we can all be proud of and I would say was most definitely inspirational to young and senior Islanders alike. It must have taken some serious courage to go and face interviewers from around the world, and serious skill to pull it off so well. I'm sure all of us that followed their efforts can admit we would find it a daunting task, were we in their place. Thanks very much for your hard work guys, and congratulations!

It's all a mess

SURELY Gerald, you don't call that mess between Stanley and Mount Pleasant a road? A better term would be 'bomb alley'. Our government/councillors must be very proud to show off such a diabolical apology for a road to visitors who have had to travel along it en route to Stanley.

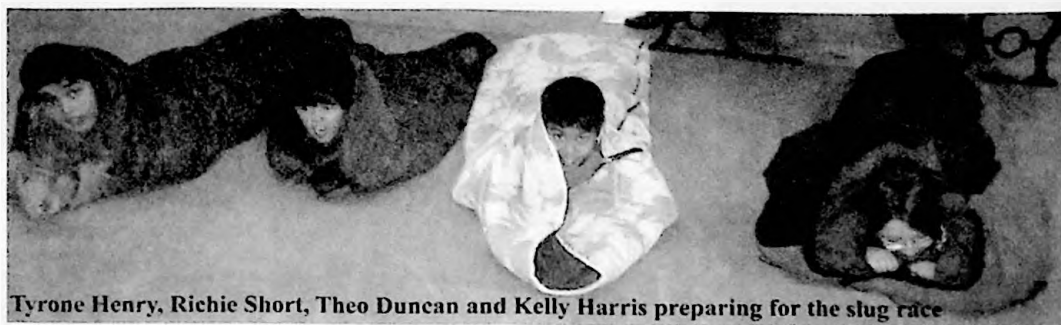

Of course they are a bit strapped for cash; only an £18 million surplus so to make up the 'deficit' road tax, postal, fuel and electricity charges had to increase.

A referendum on the road? How about one on a postal delivery service? We are paying for it to be delivered to the address on the envelope. Thirty pence to go three metres across the floor to a pigeon hole, where the pigeon is already dead. Robbery! Extortion! How about dropping the electricity charges? Why are the wind generators there? Summers said reserving money for the deep water port. What century will that happen?

The road [vehicle] tax; why is that going up when there are no 'roads'? They have been filling up pot-holes, (full of water) around the town. Not going to last long. But I will give them praise, the water was warmed up first with a gas torch before the Colas was deposited on top. Is this the 'road engineers' idea of road repair? And it took four men!

Finally, how about a referendum on this government/council?

Tyrone Henry, Richie Short, Theo Duncan and Kelly Harris preparing for the slug race

Longest night is most fun for cubs

ON almost the longest night of the year, the cubs held their annual winter sleepover in the Scout Hut, reports leader Jan Miller. Accompanied also by Tim Miller, Mark Neeves and Cynthia Williams the group took up the Falklands 30 red, white and blue theme generating plenty of camouflage and patriotic colours.

Mrs Miller said: "On arrival the cubs stowed their gear in their bivouacs before showing off their mascots and fancy dress."

"Then it was on with the activities; firstly making army dog tags and tattoos, an army assault course, icing cup cakes for supper and an hilarious field dressing competition where the medics had to bandage poor victims Richie, Hamish and Chico and then drag them off in a sleeping bag stretcher."

After supper made by Akela and Elle, Sean and Chico did the washing up and then a fast game of throwing the hand grenade was won by Lachlan. The evening also included a Falklands 30 quiz with Blue team Elle, Sean, Lachlan and Hamish proving very knowledgeable on the war and local topics.

This was followed by a game of dodging the kryptonite in the dark and then the final event was the cubs' favourite - slug racing in sleeping bags. In the final Kelly was narrowly pipped at the post by her cousin Sean.

After breakfast the following day the gang, "popped outside to watch the international space station flying over," said Mrs Miller. The tug of war was then won by the Red Team, Lizzie, Malachi, Daniel and Alfie.

The final exercise comprised walking blindfold through a minefield and listening for directions from team mates; there were only two 'casualties.'

At the closing ceremony, everyone was awarded their sleepover badge. Richie Short won the best costume prize and Kelly Harris the best dressed mascot prize.

Facelift for Leisure Centre

STANLEY Leisure Centre will undergo some extensive maintenance and upgrades later this year.

Funding has been approved to carry out work to upgrade the pool; including new tiling and behind-the-scenes improvements. New tiles will be laid in the viewing gallery and the interior of the pool area will be re-decorated. Meanwhile, work is scheduled to refurbish the floors in the main sports hall and the squash court. Other dryside work will include repainting and re-design of the reception area.

The improvements are planned to begin later in the year, taking approximately six to eight weeks to complete. During this period, the pool will be closed to the public, with the sports hall and squash court closed for about a week in total.

Residents will shortly be asked their views on the Leisure Centre, to help guide some of the improvement works and to encourage greater usage of the facilities. Leisure Centre staff will carry out a short, random telephone survey to find out what people think of the facilities.

"We're really excited about the improvements planned," said Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher.

"The end result will be a pool and facilities which should last another 20 years."

"Unfortunately we'll need to part-close the facilities to allow the work to be undertaken and we recognise there may be a financial impact for existing members, so we'll work with people to off-set this."

Finally, after the work is completed the Leisure Centre is planning to show off its new look with a weekend of sessions to demonstrate the variety of sports and fitness activities on offer.

All survey respondents will be entered into a prize draw. If you are not telephoned but are keen to give your opinions and be entered in the prize draw, please ask a member of staff for a copy of the questionnaire to complete.

Party time for foot tapping Acorns

THE Acorn group were treated to a lunch provided by Woodbine Café, at a party on June 19 in celebration of Falklands 30.

Sharon Middleton told Penguin News a delicious celebration cake was created by Jacs Cafe, "and during the party we were entertained with some lively accordion music by Neil Goodwin which got many feet a twitching and hands clapping with even a few hoots and yells, and that was just with tea."

The group also enjoyed the company of 2 Para Falklands war veteran Chris: "He probably wondered what he'd let himself in for. Thank you for coming, it was great to meet you."

During the party a raffle was drawn with prizes donated locally. Money raised (£170) will go towards the purchasing of suitable chairs for Acorns.

Mrs Middleton said, "Many of our chairs are army excess, 30 years old, and which are totally unsuitable for the older and less able to rise from."

Acorns is a registered charity and the trustees are having a fundraising year to try and raise approximately £4,000 in order to buy more chairs and little tables: "So if there is anyone out there who can help with sponsorship or donations we would be pleased to hear from you."

Trustees are Sue Howatt, Sharon Middleton, Margaret Knight, John Birmingham and Margo Goodwin. The Acorns Community wishes to thank Betty and her team for, "looking after us all so well and a big thank you to all those who gave so generously of their time for the music, the food and everything that went into giving us all a party to remember," said Mrs Middleton.

Bye bye Mr Fog

ASSISTANT Director of Education Richard Fogerty's influence spans generations and shines through the faces of those he has helped educate on the way, but 44 years dedicated to working for and developing the department has ended in the bittersweet goodbye of redundancy with his last day of work today, Friday June 29.

He began his career in 1968, the eighteen year-old Richard fuelled with adventure applied for work in far-off countries and was soon packing his bags to be a travelling teacher in the far away land of the Falkland Islands. It was either travelling teacher or game warden in Kenya, "the Falklands were the only ones that wrote back," he said.

Decision made he set off from his home town of Salisbury, with his first thrill being the flight to Montevideo, Uruguay.

"At 18/19 you're a bit focussed, but it was an adventure just flying." By the end of 1968 he was boarding the RMS Darwin from Montevideo and celebrating his nineteenth birthday on his journey to the other end of the world.

Some of his students were not too far from his own age he explained. During the week he would teach them, and on weekends they taught him to tame colts, hunt for goslings, fish and how to survive the boggy terrain with off-road driving skills.

He admits versions of Stanley and Camp were a little rougher around the edges in those days but that provided the thrills and job gratification to keep him grounded for decades.

"All the things that were a traditional part of Falklands life really did appeal. The whole colt taming thing, quite honestly no one wanted to do it and anyone with any common sense wouldn't have wanted to do it. It was a terrific experience, when you're young it's like going into a western novel without the guns."

New experiences and excitement aside he soon realised that though teaching was not what inspired his decision to travel, it was the only career choice for him: "You start teaching and get satisfaction from seeing students learn things, it's that thing when you see a light switch on and they suddenly grasp an idea."

"Sometimes it's more than passing on your own ideas it's helping them to grasp at their own ideas and come up with their own theories."

Looking back over those early years seemed to provide some of the best memories for Richard: "It would be good if all teachers could have experienced it," he said, unsure if he would be able to feel so affectionately for the Islands without that treasured experience. "It's the people who've kept me here, the friends I've made."

"You have such close contact with the families and you get to know the different priorities that people have, not everyone lives life in the same way."

Working across Camp and in Stanley as travelling teacher, Camp Education Supervisor and Assistant Director of Education

Richard has been witness to many changes, the biggest simply being new opportunities available for students in term of studying abroad. In the past even GCSE type exams weren't feasible for most.

He believes the Community School is a symbol of that change: "That's when we suddenly got access to our fishing money and there was this big investment into education and the whole change."

"There were people who had the drive to ensure Falklands' students could reach their potential."

In the 1960s and 1970s, six to seven weeks of homework would be set for Camp students between visits but it all changed when Director of Education Phyl Rendell requisitioned Argentine radios after the 1982 war to create the first daily contact with students. "That made a big difference because suddenly the children in Camp could prove they could compete on equal terms with the children in Stanley."

Telephones are used now and there are hopes that, with Cable and Wireless' help, video conferencing will be the next interactive tool to teach over distance, along with other anticipated developments in the form of new Camp schools.

As with the UK system, recognising the achievements and potential in students and getting the community more involved in working towards a level of excellence, is something he'd like to see more of in the future. "It doesn't mean everyone going off to study to do degrees. It means that those who are more practically orientated have a chance to develop those skills, and that's why it's about the integration side, it's recognising that we all have different skills."

He highlighted the value of keeping a local context on things like history and geography and incorporating it into the UK system. "That's something we have to try and keep and develop because we are not the UK."

"To decide for ourselves ultimately where we want to go, decide the values we feel are the most important and develop them within our schools."

IJS Head Teacher Tom Hill is sure of the effect Richard has had on the Education Department and suitably dubs him, "Godfather of Camp Education."

Richard is positive about the future but will not be divorcing education entirely, turning his hand to supply teaching and training as opportunities arise.

"This is a bittersweet time because this is a redundancy. I can't even imagine retirement let alone redundancy," he said, though he will be enjoying the time off initially with a break in the UK and a, "last splash," by fulfilling an ambition to visit St Helena.

"In a way it could be a bonus doing a day here and then having a day off when the sun is shining. I do see it as another opportunity."

Mid winter swim proves a real splash

THIS year's pack of courageous mid winter swimmers were rewarded with bright sunshine and a snow-free beach, unlike in past years when bare feet were forced to dance on the spot in order to avoid sticking to crunchy ice patches.

194 individuals registered for the charity swim said principal organiser John Clifford and, "proceeds when finalised will be split evenly between the Seamans Mission and the Sea Cadets," he added.

The first mid winter swim took place in 1994 and has proved increasingly popular as a charity event ever since, in particular attracting visitors from Mount Pleasant eager to take home evidence of their crazy leap into an icy South Atlantic. 128 of the total personnel arranged in an excitable line on the beach were from Mount Pleasant with the other 66 from Stanley.

Souvenir t-shirts, polo shirts and baseball caps were available as optional extras and as has become traditional, the Governor signed 'lunacy' certificates for all of those who took part. The photo on this year's certificate was taken by John Carlin during the stampede into the water.

Assistants on the day comprised Ken Newton, Cherie Clifford, Claire Law, Steve Gill and Edmonde Openshaw.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

146.625...Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland. It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Wool Market Report - 21st June 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

The AWEX ended this week at its new lowest value this season at AU$1,069 making it 694/kg clean in Stirling, up by 14 pence. There was an offering of 21,569 bales this week, with a clearance rate of 93.9% which is the highest clearance rate since March 15th.

The medium and finer fleece wools have been hit hardest over the last couple of weeks and there are three sales remaining until the end of the season all with modest offers.

Torrential Welsh mud Enduro

Along with almost 500 other competitors Islanders Jay Moffatt, Shane Blackley, Dereck Jaffray, Marty Smith and Jimmy Moffatt made the journey to the UK for the Welsh 2 Day Enduro kitted out for moto cross, but as the heavens opened turning the track into a mud bath they could possibly have done with packing their snorkels...

ALL together now, one two three, "Slippin and a slidin, woops, well I'm glidin, boy I have a long way to go." Don't cross rut, don't cross rut. - SMASH! As I lay trapped under two bikes, face down in the clay, in one of the forest section's of, to quote a marshal, "the wettest Welsh I've seen in over thirty years." I was thinking this can't get any worse. It did!

In Marty's words, "this is not what I expected." If last year's Welsh was described as wet, this year was wet enough to bog a squadron of logger ducks!

Still, singing no longer, I spragged the clutch bracket back onto the handle bars, re connected the head light and set off in search of traction.

Meanwhile, back at the start of day one, Jay, Shane and Derek were about to begin. Knowing this was not going to be easy, they quickly got into the stride of this challenging event. With clay flowing down tracks faster than a lava flow in hot pursuit of bike victims, Jay and Shane quickly ate up the miles.

The special tests, completely saturated, proved difficult to get around in a sensible time. There were four on the first day, consisting of a taped off section of bog and forest track, the latter having tree roots slipperier than freshly dug peat sods. Those tests had to be completed as quickly as possible. This could determine between a first or second finish.

More and more riders were being defeated by the torturous conditions, myself and Marty included. Jay, Shane and Derek battled on. 180 miles later they had completed their first exhausting day.

Only Jay and Shane lined up at the start on day two, Derek having pulled out due to an injured shoulder. With more rain over-night and the forecast, "more rain and high winds throughout Friday," the organisers very wisely shortened the course. The river sections had quickly become torrents and unridable. Two completely exhausted Falklands' riders passed the finish line on day two, having traversed along 360 miles of road, forest tracks, bogs, rivers and the most arduous routes the track officials could muster.

Jay had the best finish with a fifth in the E1 Class (250cc four stroke) a very commendable placing, as the conditions the riders have to endure cannot be replicated in the Falklands, therefore they have to approach this challenge completely cold.

Overall the Welsh was another success story in this our anniversary year, the bikes had been adapted with special 30th anniversary graphics.

Our riders and supporters were once again superb ambassadors for the Falkland Islands. It is with immense gratitude we thank ET James & Sons for their tremendous support and friendship, without which, it would be difficult to take part in this event.

Jimmy Moffatt

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

Business Support Assistant

The Ministry of Defence is seeking to recruit a Business Support Assistant to work with the Command Secretariat team in Mount Pleasant. Working hours negotiable between 25-37 hours per week with a starting hourly rate of £7.69 (reviewed annually).

This is a continuity post which, subject to satisfactory initial and thereafter annual performance assessment, is available on a permanent basis. The post offers a diverse range of responsibilities including pay, recruitment, personnel administration, business continuity planning, and support to Civil Military Liaison and the Command Board.

The successful candidate will be required to pass UK Security Clearance vetting to confirm their appointment.

For further information and an application form, please contact Stewart Herron by telephone on 76487 or by e-mail at hqj8depemdsec@mountpleasant.mod.uk. Completed application forms to be returned by 7 July.

If you're a practical-minded person and you fancy doing something a little different for 6 months, whilst experiencing one of the most wild and beautiful spots in the Falkland Islands, this might suit you.

The New Island Conservation Trust has a vacancy for a seasonal worker to assist with all aspects of the management of New Island for a period of approximately 6 months, commencing in late September 2012.

This position requires someone who is prepared to work outdoors for the majority of their time, with duties ranging from general settlement maintenance, to assisting with meeting visitors and attending to cruise ships, as well as assisting with scientific and conservation projects throughout the season.

Salary is £1,000 per month with all living expenses (accommodation + food) on the island covered, as well as local travel to and from New Island.

For more information please email georginastrange@gmail.com and sjonesperry@btopenworld.com.

All expressions of interest by 31 July 2012 please.
