Question proposed

'DO you wish the Falkland Islands to retain their current political status as an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom?'

That is the proposed question for the Referendum on Falkland Islands Political Status to be held in early 2013, and members of the public have been invited to express their opinions on the wording.

The proposed plan is that should the majority of votes cast be against the current status, the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) will take the process a step further.

According to a press release from FIG: "The proposed question was arrived at and agreed by all Members of the Legislative Assembly having received expert advice."

The public is asked to comment on the clarity of the wording of the question and the clarity of choice offered by the question.

The text of the proposed question is as follows: The current political status of the Falkland Islands is that they are an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom. The Islands are internally self-governing, with the United Kingdom being responsible for matters including defence and foreign affairs. Under the Falkland Islands Constitution the people of the Falkland Islands have the right to self-determination, which they can exercise at any time. Given that Argentina is calling for negotiations over the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands, this referendum is being undertaken to consult the people regarding their views on the political status of the Falkland Islands. Should the majority of votes cast be against the current status, the Falkland Islands Government will undertake necessary consultation and preparatory work in order to conduct a further referendum on alternative options.

Full text of the Falkland Islands Government press release can be found in the single sheet accompanying this edition of Penguin News.

Falklands flag flies in Parliament Square

THE Falkland Islands flag flew in Parliament Square in London this week alongside all other British Overseas Territories flags and those of the Crown Dependencies, to mark the state visit of the President of Indonesia. This is the first such ceremonial occasion when it has happened and is in line with the White Paper that noted 'the flags of the Overseas Territories will be flown at the Trooping of the Colour ceremony and other ceremonial occasions to bring representation of the Territories in line with Commonwealth Nations.'

Confusing laws to be made people friendly

EXECUTIVE Council has approved funding for the engagement of a specialist legislative drafter to assist with the preparation of a comprehensive and up to date criminal code and criminal procedure rules for the Falkland Islands.

Attorney General Mark Lewis, in making the recommendation, said the current position was that even if the public had access to the legislation of the Falkland Islands it was highly unlikely that they would be able to identify with any certainty what the law was in some areas.

This was a view Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley had also expressed in Court back in September of this year. The Court would protect the public's rights if no one else in the jurisdiction would, Mr Gumsley had said, adding, "I for one am not going to sit by and allow the public to suffer the consequences of a law that is ambiguous, confused and inaccessible."

Mr Lewis took a similar line in his paper at Executive Council last week. "Access to the law by all is a fundamental feature of a modern democracy governed by the rule of law. Currently the Falkland Islands is not in a position to make its laws available to the public in a meaningful way," he said.

Attorney General Mark Lewis

By way of example, Mr Lewis said the areas of criminal law where there were gaps and/or Falklands law was out of date included the new offences introduced by the Fraud Act 2006 which made it easier to prosecute dishonest deceptions; areas where new technology had been legislated for in terms of criminal offences under English law. The sex offenders notification requirements also needed to be updated in line with recent amendments introduced in the UK in response to criticism from the European Court of Human Rights, he said.

It was recommended that a specialist drafter who had experience in drafting tailor-made criminal law and procedure legislation for British Overseas Territories was engaged to produce draft legislation for the Falkland Islands. "This would give the Falkland Islands its own comprehensive criminal code and procedural rules which would be accessible to the legal profession and the public and remove significant areas of doubt and uncertainty as well as filling in gaps in the law that we currently have," said Mr Lewis.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has agreed to support the project with match funding up to £25,000 on the grounds of its importance for good governance, access to justice and the need to address the areas of Criminal Law and Procedure and Civil Procedure as soon as practicable. The exact cost to Government was redacted from the public paper.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

NURSE, cook, wool-handler, fencer, butcher and even psychiatrist have long been qualifications required of a woman in Camp, particularly one with a brood of children; but what about the rest of us?

In these modern times when a Stanley-woman can 'phone a plumber to sort the washing machine, grab a take-away coffee on the way to work or google the symptoms of their runny nosed child (never a wise idea by the way) have we Townies really retained any endemic characteristics to speak of?

So concerned by the thought that the Falklands female might have metamorphosed into some kind of bland hybrid borne of over-exposure to non native influences (anything from an English college education to excessive identification with X factor contestants) that I called upon my colleagues to reassure me of at least a few remaining peculiarities.

It didn't take them long and it seems that for a woman to be truly 'local' it need have nothing to do with how long one might have lived here, but (among countless other suggestions) that the individual will:

- know at least two verses of Coward of the County
- debate the pros and cons of a variety of padded but neatly fitting boiler-suits suitable for barbecues
- know how to take a corner during a quick step (and recognise a visiting Wester by his exuberant dance kicks)
- despite owning a shiny pick-up that has never been off-road, still understand the uses of diflock and a bogging board
- refer to a tray of cupcakes as a 'batch of buns' that'll need 'whacking in the oven'
- take it as a flattering sign of affection when greeted with a torrent of mocking obscenities from male friends,
- at some point use the word che at an entirely inappropriate moment (during a business meeting/ to a visiting Royal/ to their mother-in-law)

Does any of this lead to a salient point?

Well not entirely convincingly; but at a time when (as MLA Short ponders this week) speedy transformations are likely to scare us all rigid it seemed appropriate to illustrate that there are some things that never seem to change.

The referendum question is certainly uncomplicated and unlikely to cause controversy locally; of course it's more than likely the neighbours will find something to grumble about.

Port William the site for deep water port

PORT William (north of the Camber) has been chosen as the site for a new deep-water port capable of meeting the demands of all industries by Executive Council at the October meeting.

The decision follows significant work by the Falkland Islands Government over the last four months following requests by the oil and gas industry for FIG to provide confirmation of what facilities would be available to meet their needs, and the timescales for the delivery of these facilities.

At the meeting, Members of the Legislative Assembly expressed significant concerns about the size and impact a proposal for a permanent 250-metre extension to the existing FIPASS facilities would have on the environment and community of Stanley. This helped reaffirm for them the need to ensure port facilities are delivered in a planned and considered way.

In withdrawing support for an extension to FIPASS, MLAs instructed FIG officials to quickly bring forward proposals and costed models for a full port infrastructure located at Port William.

"This announcement has been communicated to Rockhopper PLC and Premier Oil and will mean that alternative arrangements to support development of the Sea Lion field will need to be agreed with them," said MLA Dick Sawle. "However, ExCo was acutely aware of its responsibility to ensure a long term vision for Stanley and the surrounding areas which is both appropriate and cohesive with our way of life. Our major concern was that while we welcome and want to support all of the oil and gas industry, we need its development to happen in the right place and that is not Stanley Harbour."

Executive Council also approved the immediate investigation of the legal requirements and consequences of the creation of a Port Authority in the Falkland Islands, and further investigation of the Joint Venture led funding model with the private sector as a potential long-term strategy for funding port infrastructure.

Chevening scholarship opportunity

GOVERNMENT House has extended an invite to Islanders interested in postgraduate study in the UK to apply for a Chevening Scholarship Award.

Chevening Scholarships are run by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and offer funding to outstanding graduates to study at one of many British Universities. Awards are normally given for one-year Masters Degree courses.

Last year the Falkland Islands saw its first Chevening success, with the award of a scholarship to Sam Cockwell, who is currently studying for an MSc in Petroleum Engineering in London.

A new website has been launched offering applicants the opportunity to apply on-line. This can be found at www.chevening.org and has its own specific Falkland Islands (Overseas Territories) pages offering guidance on criteria, eligibility and general advice, as well as the on-line application process.

The website also provides updates about latest developments in the scheme worldwide and information on applying for higher education courses in the UK more generally.

Ralph Jones, Staff Officer at Government House said, "the new website aims to make the Scholarships more accessible than ever before. Candidates will be able to apply on-line and receive alerts at key stages in the process."

He emphasised that Scholarships are aimed particularly at high quality candidates who are likely to assume leadership roles in their future careers. "There are no age limits, but candidates who have already demonstrated leadership potential will be particularly welcome."

Ralph would be happy to speak to anyone who had questions on Chevening Scholarships or the process and can be contacted at Government House on 28213.

The deadline for Falkland Islands applications is 1 December 2012.

Living free TV to air

'LIVING Free', a digital freely-accessible television channel will air in Stanley from December 1.

Coordinator of Chile Adventist University (CAU) Extension Project Leonard A Westermeyer MA told Penguin News the TV channel will present easy-listening inspirational and classical musical selections along with traditional and folklore music of Chile and the Falkland Islands.

Sponsored by the University it is offered as a public service for the purpose of strengthening positive relationships, "between our communities and to provide personal growth and educational opportunities for Falkland Islands residents," said Mr Westermeyer.

The audio selections will be interspersed with educational video presentations on topics such as healthy living through nutrition and active lifestyles, family values and mental and spiritual health.

Also part of the group is Lorena Sepulveda, a Chilean volunteer preparing to be an English teacher at Chile Adventist University; she is currently assisting the Falkland Islands Community School's Spanish teacher Mike Barton.

Sergio Casiano is a volunteer

Volunteers participating in Chile Adventist University Extension Project Lorena Sepulveda, Linda Westermeyer, Leonard Westermeyer, Allana Westermeyer, Sergio Casiano

from Guatemala studying Telecommunications at CAU and is the Engineer for Living Free Television. He will programme the TV channel.

Mrs Westermeyer is Assistant Coordinator of the CAU Extension Project.

The university is situated at the base of the Chillán volcano and a world class ski resort.

Mr Westermeyer said suggestions from Islanders for programme content and commentaries are invited and very much appreciated.

Revolutionary AGR software

ABERDEEN-based oil and gas service and technology provider AGR has launched a new logistics and materials management software programme for the oil and gas industry.

The new software which was originally designed to service the relocation of over 11,000 tonnes of equipment from Aberdeen Harbour to the Falkland Islands, looks set to revolutionise logistics planning for the oil and gas industry by streamlining what previously required multiple packages from a number of software providers.

The execution of this work, which provided equipment for the exploration rig Ocean Guardian in 2010/11, received industry-wide acclaim and was recognised as the largest successful logistics job in the sector to date.

Developed in Aberdeen and created by the company's in-house software division the M2™ programme represents half a million pounds of investment by AGR.

Director of AGR Software Solutions, Chris Ferrier, said: "Continually tracking the movement of equipment is no small task but M2™ puts the user in total control by offering a fully integrated system - something that is not currently available elsewhere in the marketplace."

Silver bonus for Doug on a mission

ISLANDER Doug Clark picked up a silver medal in badminton at the Bermuda Corporate Games earlier this week, during a fact finding visit on behalf of the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association.

The Falkland Islands will send teams to the Natwest Island Games in Bermuda in July next year.

Mr Clark told Penguin News he was sent to Bermuda by FIOGA in order to look at accommodation, travel, venues and the general logistics they will have to deal with.

He added: "When I contacted my badminton friends in Bermuda regarding my visit, I did ask if I should bring my badminton kit and have some games with them while I was there, which they agreed I should do, as the badminton club, which is in Hamilton at the Bermuda Athletic Association (BAA) was holding a tournament, the Corporate Games."

Mr Clark represented the BAA and partnered Mark Haugen, an American player he met last year in the Isle of Wight.

The tournament format was in two groups for all disciplines with the top two from the group stage playing the following day in the semi finals.

He said: "Mark and I achieved this in our Mens Doubles beating the top seeds Rick and Daniel which put us in contention for making the finals as we were seeded third. We both made it through to the singles semi finals also.

"My first semi was against Rohan (an Indian player) who is very fast, fit and hits the shuttle like a train! He was too much for me on the day so I went through to the bronze medal play off against my doubles partner Mark, who I beat in two straight sets 21-16, 21-14."

The pair then played a semi final and moved through comfortably to the final, however, Rohan and Mike Palmer (ex England under 17's) proved too powerful, so they eventually had to settle for silver.

Mr Clark said: "I had a great time there and am really looking forward to returning for the Island Games in July, the venues, beaches and people are top class."

Glen Mansell

MUCH loved British Forces Broadcasting Service radio presenter Glen Mansell has died aged 56 after losing his battle with cancer. A spokesperson for BFBS said: "Glen was never happier than when talking to, and spending time with his forces audience."

Glen moved to BFBS Radio 2 in 2002 and he spent the last four years managing BFBS in the Falklands, still broadcasting a daily music sequence, before returning to the UK earlier this year. He was very sad to leave his beloved South Atlantic, where he and his wife Monika had forged a special relationship with community and country alike.

Journalists

A GROUP of six journalists and two British Embassy staff arrive in the Islands tomorrow (Saturday November 3). The group includes five Uruguayan journalists, one Chilean journalist and two local staff from the Embassy in Montevideo.

Showroom

A CHAMPAGNE reception for invited guests will launch the Falkland Islands Company automotive showroom on Monday November 5, and will open to the public the following day.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I MAY have said this before, but sometimes as I have my pre boudoir bit of baccy of an evening I get to pondering about the future and what our country may be like in 10 or 50 years time and to be honest, sometimes when I think of the changes that are on the way and the speed at which they are likely to happen it scares me rigid.

Being scared isn't a bad thing as it gives you cause to try and see things from as many angles as you can and try and make sure that what you are about to do is the best for your people and country.

This week we have pushed the button on the new port. The plan for a modest enhancement of FIPASS had rapidly morphed into something that would have been probably twice as big as FIPASS is now and would have firmly placed the oil industry in Stanley Harbour and that was something that residents didn't seem to want so the decision was made to turn our eyes towards Port William. Not a perfect place, but probably the best of all the sites looked at. A long term view has to be taken. Not 10 or 15 years but maybe 100 years into the future.

Right from the early days the options such as Port William and Berkley Sound excited me. Not just because of them being out of town but because you would have to drive a road through and would open up the country and where there are roads and people working away from Stanley, stuff would happen. It's too far to pop back for a sandwich so in time we will probably see shops springing up at the port and it's not too much of a stretch of the imagination to see houses on the Camber.

There is a mountain of things to be done but I am confident that it can be done.

By now you will all have had chance to read "the question" that will be put in the referendum and I would urge you all to take time to join in the public meetings and phone in on this subject. It's important we all fully understand it and have the opportunity to suggest any changes that you think may improve it.

Remembering Jim Lewis 1921-2012

IT was Boxing Day 1939 when Jim Lewis first set foot on the Falkland Islands. Jim was 18, serving on the supply ship HMS Baltavia.

When war broke out earlier that year, Jim was already working at sea. Born in 1921, he had left school at 15 to join his father, John, on a trawler in the Hull fishing fleet. Jim was the eldest of five children and his wages were a welcome addition to the family income.

After his ship was commandeered by the Admiralty in 1939, Jim signed on to the Royal Navy and was sent to join HMS Baltavia, a merchant refrigeration ship. Once the vessel had been fitted with the necessary weaponry, it was ordered to sail for the Falkland Islands.

Ships travelling to the Falklands were too few to travel in convoy. Supply ships like Baltavia were at risk of being captured by the German fleet for the stores they carried. En route, the ship was diverted. Only when they arrived in Stanley Harbour (a week later than expected) was the crew informed by Commander Martin, the Naval Commander in the Islands, that the diversion was "on account of the Battle of the River Plate."

The Baltavia was stationed in the Falklands for two years, tasked with provisioning other ships in the area. Jim travelled to the River Plate, calling in at Montevideo and Buenos Aires. He also sailed to South Africa to restock, dumping old meat into the sea for the sharks on the way to make room for fresh supplies.

Back in Stanley, Jim met a 16 year old local girl, Jean Grant. The romance flourished and the young couple married in the Tabernacle in October 1941. But just a couple of days after the wedding Jim was posted back to UK. It was two years before he saw Jean again.

In UK, Jim was posted to HMS Mersey barracks in Liverpool before briefly serving on another merchant ship, HMS Devon City. After just three weeks he was seconded into the Merchant Navy, as so many seamen had been lost in the service.

One of Jim's most abiding memories of the war was the D-Day invasion of mainland France in 1944. He was aboard the merchant ship Temple Yard, anchored off Southend. "With all the small boats going across," he recalled, "it was a battle royal and quite a lot of people were lost going over before they even touched France." After the initial invasion, Jim's ship followed to replenish ammunition and supplies. "When we got there to start discharging, it wasn't a very nice sight because you saw bodies floating by now and then as they had no time to pick them up."

After the war, Jim rejoined the Hull fishing fleet. Trawling was difficult and often dangerous. In an accident, Jim broke his back and was hospitalised in Reykjavik. Unable to continue the heavy hauling work required as a deck-hand, he taught himself to cook and transferred to the galley.

When the UK fishing industry collapsed in the early 1960's, Jim found a job at a sail training base in Ham, Surrey. For some years the annual Falkland Islands reunion parties had been held in London, but this became increasingly expensive. So Jim and Jean arranged for the reunions to be held at Ham and catered for them at the training base. Many of those who attended would stay over or drop in at Jim and Jean's house, invariably receiving a warm welcome.

In 1985 Jim and Jean flew south to visit their daughter, Mandy, who had settled at Goose Green. Twenty years later, Jean joked "We came for six months holiday and we're still here!" The rest of the family later joined them to settle permanently in the Islands.

Jim always remained a seaman at heart. In Peterborough, where he and Jean moved in 1977, they were active members of the Royal Naval Association. In the early 1990's, when Jim, with Bob Fiddes and Jim Simpson, set up the Falkland Islands branch of the Royal Naval Association it was affiliated to the Peterborough branch. At around the same time, Jim also helped to get the Stanley Sea Cadets unit up and running under the name TS Pursuivant (the Royal Naval name for the Port Stanley HQ during World War I).

When numbers attending Royal Naval Association meetings dropped off, Jim, Bob and Jim Simpson decided to include other ex-servicemen. In 1994 they became founder members of the Falkland Island Branch of the Royal British Legion. In the organisations which he founded and supported, Jim's legacy in the Falklands lives on.

Airport work puts arrivals hall out of action

FROM November 19 to December 14, work is being carried out within the Mount Pleasant Air Terminal to construct a new baggage carousel.

As a result the arrivals hall will be out of use for this time.

All air passengers arriving at Mount Pleasant will be processed (passport checks, baggage collection, immigration and customs cleared) through the 'Timmy' Hangar and managed by RAF Air Movements Flight personnel, Falkland Islands Customs and Immigration Department and Sullivan Shipping handlers.

In order to assist passengers and limit disruption, all departures will still be processed through the Air Terminal as normal during this time.

Those who are collecting passengers arriving into the Falkland Islands are kindly requested to wait in the long-stay car park until passengers have cleared and exited the hangar. Individuals who are collecting passengers are not permitted to enter the hangar under any circumstances.

BFBS presenter Paul Wisdom with visiting MPC school children

MPC children go live

DURING school holidays, children from all over the Falklands often visit British Forces Broadcasting Service (BFBS) at Mount Pleasant to put a face to the voice on the airwaves and find out what happens behind the scenes.

On this occasion several Mount Pleasant School children were on the way to Tumbledown gym for some activities and BFBS presenter Paul Wisdom thought it would be fun to record a radio advert.

Paul said: "We always welcome guests of all ages to have a go at presenting but these special visitors all talked at once which could eventually lead to a glamorous career singing our BFBS jingles and they are infamous around the world."

He reminded listeners of the free advertising service which is available to non-profit organisations. "It's just one of many projects that we involve ourselves in wherever Her Majesty's Forces are located around the world," he said.

Cub Scouts with leaders and 1435 Flt crew at Mount Pleasant

Scouts at 1435 Flt

THE Cub Scouts were lucky enough to pay a visit to 1435 Flight at Mount Pleasant on the weekend and even got to sit in a Typhoon jet fighter.

After refreshments it was on to the control tower where they were shown how to track the aircraft by radar and then went to the top of the tower to watch a Hercules landing, a private jet taking off and a FIGAS Islander fly past. The morning was rounded off by a visit to the fire section where the Cubs were given the chance to sit in the fire engines and sound all the sirens, which they thoroughly enjoyed.

The Cubs would like to say a huge thank you to the OC 1435 Flt Sqd Leader Ewen Robertson for allowing the visit, Flt Lt Mark Long who organised the morning and all those who gave up their time including the parents who provided transport.

Clearing rubbish from fences

Bob a job

DURING half term, the Beavers, Cubs and Scouts took part in Job Week, where they raised money by doing chores for parents, friends and the community. Tasks included washing cars at FIDC, painting the flag poles at Liberty Lodge, weeding paths and gardens and many more.

The group would like to thank everyone who supported them. The funds raised will go towards covering the last bit of flooring in the Scout Hut and to buy new equipment and uniforms for the Group.

Third year nursing student Janice chose the Falklands for her six week elective placement. From West Yorkshire, she is married to Stephen, mum to Zoe, Cheryl and Jody and proud grandma to Mathew, Thomas and twins Calum and Jamie.

She said she has found the delivery of health care in the Falklands to be of a very high standard and has been shown warmth and friendliness by all the staff as well as the people of the Islands throughout her stay.

The weather she says is "interesting."

SATURDAY 10 NOVEMBER 2012

On Saturday 10th November at 6pm a 'Short Service of Thanksgiving and Commemoration on the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands' will be held at the Liberation Monument in the presence of HRH The Duke of Kent and returning veterans of the 1982 war.

The Band of the Royal Marines Scotland will assist and it is planned that the names of all military and civilian personnel who died during the war will be read by members of the Falkland Islands community.

Immediately following this service all members of the public are invited to a civic reception to be held in the Town Hall from 1900hrs to 2200 hrs. A wine, beer and soft drinks bar will be in operation and light finger buffet available. This event is jointly hosted and funded by the Falkland Islands Government and SAMA FI.

GILBERT HOUSE
31 OCTOBER 2012

PUBLIC NOTICE
Observance of Remembrance Sunday

There will be a Memorial Service in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.30 am. His Royal Highness The Duke of Kent KG, His Excellency the Governor, Commander British Forces, FIG invited guests; Mark Lancaster MP, Kevan Jones MP and Lt Col (Rtd) Tony Davies OBE, Members of the Legislative Assembly, visiting and resident South Atlantic veterans, together with Senior Officers of the Armed Services will be attending this Service. The Service will be led by the Rev Dr Richard Hines and other local ministers. The Band of HM Royal Marines Scotland will provide musical accompaniment. During the Service a collection will be made for the Poppy Appeal. Seating in the Cathedral will be on a first come first served basis.

At 10.20 am Guard Detachments representing the Royal Navy, Army, Royal Air Force and a Detachment from the Falkland Islands Defence Force will form up on Ross Road. The Band of HM Royal Marines Scotland will lead the parade. They will be joined by Veterans and Associations and begin their march to the Cross of Sacrifice at 10:25 am. Youth organisations will be present at the Cross of Sacrifice.

At 10.48 am HRH The Duke of Kent, HE the Governor, a Member of the Legislative Assembly and the Commander British Forces will arrive at the Cross of Sacrifice.

A short service will then be held and the Roll of Honour read out. There will be two minutes silence at 11.00 am marked by the firing of the saluting guns on Victory Green.

HRH The Duke of Kent, The Honourable Dick Sawle, The Commander British Forces, and FIG official guests will lay wreaths, followed by representatives of the Armed Services, The Falkland Islands Defence Force, the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and the Royal British Legion. Others wishing to lay wreaths will then do so.

This is an important public occasion and it is earnestly hoped that as many members of the community as possible will attend this observance ceremony and play an equal part in honouring and remembering all those who have given their lives for the peace and freedom we enjoy today. It is appropriate for medals to be worn on this occasion.

All those arriving by vehicle should arrive before 10:30 a.m. Drivers are requested to note that parking in the cordoned areas is not allowed and are asked to switch off their engines if they are parking anywhere adjacent to the cordoned area. The flow of traffic will be controlled at the junction of Snake Hill and James Street and the junction of Hebe Street with Ross Road. Drivers of vehicles are requested to await the departure of the parade before moving off.

Proudly wear your poppy

AS Remembrance Day approaches, Binyon's poem which concludes, "we will remember them," asks that our thoughts are with the ones who have given their lives for the freedoms we enjoy today. Poignant and moving words which are especially heartfelt for those who helped liberate these Islands in 1982.

Since then, our soldiers, sailors, airman and civilian colleagues have continuously been involved on operations in many parts of the world including: Northern Ireland, Kuwait, Iraq, Bosnia, Kosovo, Sierra Leone, Afghanistan and Libya as well as policing duties elsewhere. Locally, we hear or see the presence of not only the very welcome defence forces and support staff serving many miles from home, but also resident volunteers, all of whom are prepared to "stand-to" should the need arise.

The Royal British Legion is the custodian of Remembrance and ensures that we remember all who have paid the ultimate sacrifice. But it also provides support to those who are affected in other ways by war and service for their country. Suffering and hardship manifest themselves in many forms and with the relentless military commitments of today, the Legion is as busy as it has ever been.

In an effort to help our brave and proud veterans and families the Legion spends millions of pounds a year, all of which is raised through charitable donations. The benevolence of a grateful and understanding population is truly staggering. And so I ask that in the next weeks you wear your poppy with pride, and help support this venerable and worthwhile organisation.

The British Legion welcomes new members with open arms. Membership is not exclusive to those who have served; indeed we actively encourage anyone to join. Everyone has something to give and in return we can offer a friendly atmosphere in which to socialise and for those who want a rewarding experience, the opportunity to get involved in our fundraising and welfare work. From the Poppy Appeal to the Remembrance Parade and the forthcoming concert in the Cathedral, your support is always welcome and gratefully received.

Neil Russell, Chairman, FI Branch, Royal British Legion

Vet says horse proof the yard

NOW is the time of year when horses come in from Camp to take up residence in various yards and gardens around Stanley.

This message is going out to horse owners and those of you who are kind enough to offer grazing in your yard. Please make sure the yard is horse-proof; check the boundary fencing and make sure it is complete and in a good state of repair. Also check the whole of the yard to make sure that there aren't any dangerous holes lurking under the undergrowth or any sharp objects such as tin sheets, broken glass and strands of wire.

Check your yard and fences BEFORE you allow a horse to use your facilities. The most common area for a horse to injure itself is the lower part of the fore and hind leg and wound healing in these areas is notoriously slow and usually leads to marked scarring. To save the horse unnecessary suffering and save yourself a large veterinary bill please think about the dangers before the accident happens rather than when it is too late.

Roads: Minority rights ignored

THE decision at the last ExCo meeting to designate Camp 'roads' was very disappointing to many in the rural sector. In fact I would go so far as to say that minority rights are being ignored. Most people appreciate that road designation on all Camp 'roads' is inevitable at some stage and the Rural Business Association has been working hard to resolve some very complex issues and until these are resolved many consider this move to be very premature. These concerns include ownership of the land on which roads are built, road condition and warning signage, insurance, vehicle tax concessions, access issues for farms having roads sub-dividing them and enforcement issues.

The assertion that the present concession to those residing on West Falkland not paying vehicle tax for infrequent use of a vehicle on designated roads being unconstitutional seems quite absurd. The UK has had a similar system in place for many years and has never to my knowledge been called unconstitutional.

Does this mean that 'Christmas bonus payment to pensioners' and non-liability to pay income tax for those with a taxable income less than £12,000 is also unconstitutional?

The road network should be a valuable asset in any rural community but the unilateral designation of them now seems like a poisoned chalice.

Farewell to Bounty

TALL ship HMS Bounty which sank off North Carolina on Monday will be remembered in the Falklands for her visit in 2002 (pictured left in Stanley Harbour). One crew member of HMS Bounty died and US coast guard teams battling Hurricane Sandy rescued 14 others who had abandoned the vessel before it sank. The captain is missing.

ExCo: Financial assistance for less well off

FINANCIAL assistance in the form of Working Credits and Childcare Credits aimed at helping, "some of those who are less well off and also those who are out of work and would like to return to work," was discussed at the October 24 meeting of Executive Council and some recommendations approved, confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Sharon Halford.

She said: "The Treasury will be responsible for advertising what is available and how to apply for these credits and will hopefully get their awareness programme underway in early December in time to get some of these schemes in place for the start of the 2013 year."

Also at the meeting it was agreed there would be no increase in Fishing Access Fees for 2013; similarly Illex fees will remain the same as the 2012 levels, "however there were variations agreed to the refund policy and these can be found in detail in the paper which has been published," said MLA Halford.

A paper on the FIPASS Action Plan was discussed and approval was given for some funding to allow officers to take the plan forward and also to investigate the legal requirements and consequences for the creation of a Port Authority in the Falkland Islands.

As reported in Penguin News last week it was also agreed that the "port proper" would be situated in Port William on the north side of the Camber/Navv Point.

Approval was given for a reduced rate of harbour dues for a vessel in the Falklands, and the Falkland Islands Development Corporation's (FIDC) request for additional funding to cover various business loans that they had supported was also passed by ExCo.

Three other papers from FIDC which dealt with loans and had to be ratified by Executive Council as the loans were in excess of £100,000, were given approval.

A two year licence was granted to Falkland Islands Meat Company for disposal of waste.

This was subject to various conditions including the provision of funding for environmental survey work to be undertaken in the area of their waste chute plus water sampling there and in two other areas.

It was agreed that the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute be appointed as a permanent advising body to the Environment Committee; this had been requested by the committee.

A number of oil related papers were discussed including one which examined policy for extensions of Offshore Production Licences.

MLA Halford explained: "Approval was given for the application of the Road Traffic Ordinance to all rural roads, constructed by or at the expense of the Crown in right of the Falkland Islands, but not presently subject to it, on both East and West Falkland.

"This would not cover roads within settlements as many of these are privately owned.

"However before this is implemented a further report will need to be taken to Executive Council clarifying a number of points including the possibility of farm fleet vehicle licensing, insurance, the crossing of roads on farms and road signage."

Two other papers dealt with the review and consolidation of Criminal Law and Procedure and the transfer of criminal cases to the Supreme Court; approval was given for legislative drafting to be undertaken in both of those areas (see page 3 for more detail).

A number of applications for Falkland Islands Status were approved and with regard to the Waterfront Project, a final report and master Plan showing the preferred option was approved.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

ANOTHER bout of winter in the middle of spring! One day I was planting carrot seeds, the next I spent working in a tunnel trying to keep warm and undercover through the hail and snow storms, bah!

Still, the first marrows are planted in the tunnel; I will be covering them with fleece at night as they are pretty sensitive to any cold. Some small tomato plants will also be planted in there soon, though most will go into the greenhouses. I have, once again, cheated and bought three tomato plants at the garden centre. These are sturdy little characters with a nice thick stem and each about six inches tall. They should give us some tomatoes a week or so earlier than our own seedlings.

I'm putting all tomato plants into fairly large pots (about 10 inches high and across). I will then bury the pots about three inches or so in the greenhouse soil; this will help to keep them moist but stop any diseases spreading through the soil and damaging unsuspecting plants next year.

The potatoes in the tunnels are coming on very quickly now and need quite a lot of moisture every day. The lettuce is wonderful and the beetroot, carrots and turnips are looking great in there too. It's so satisfying to see plants growing again, rather than watch and worry that they might 'damp-off' or rot.

Tomorrow, weather permitting, I hope to get all the main crop potatoes in the ground and, if it's not too windy, the rest of the 'small' seeds into the raised beds. The parsnips, leeks, turnip and swede seeds need to go in, also various salad plants. The brassicas are also hardened off now and together with the peas in the guttering, waiting to go into their final homes outside. So far the ant-killing granules seem to be keeping the earwigs under some control in the covered garden, but they appear to have two seasons 'of interest'; their six monthly breeding cycle here would seem to be in November and May. There seems to be quite a lot of nests at the moment so I guess a lot of the beasties will be released again this November. Last year they were particularly thick; hopefully, with their cannibalistic tendencies they may have eaten each other thinner on the ground but I'm not too optimistic about that.

The cuttings of dahlias, pinks, roses and various shrubs are really starting to grow now too. Many have had to move up to a bigger pot. I've started the hardening off process by putting them out every day. In a few days most will go out and stay out at night as well, although I will hang on to the dahlias inside for some time yet. All the flower seeds planted a couple of weeks ago have come up, many more thickly than I had planned, but they are all starting to struggle while they wait for me to prick them out, so I really must get that done before the end of the week.

Outside the cherries are starting to flower as are the rhododendrons, the paeonies are also in bud, but it is the bulbs that are really in great shape this year. I don't know how many varieties of daffodils are in the borders, it would be almost impossible to count. The tulips are also vying for attention. There are some beautiful colours amongst them, yellow and red predominate, but salmon pink, streaky oranges and pinks and whites all add to the madhouse that is the garden at this stage. The grape hyacinths are also in full flow. I hope that the emerging hostas, poppies, lupins and many other perennials will hide the leaves as the bulbs die down. If they do not it's going to be quite a job to tidy them up.

Of the shrubs the Chilean fire bush is just dripping with buds and the lilac is obviously going to put on quite a show too. The buddlias seem a little late getting moving this year but perhaps I am just being impatient?

Front porches or conservatories have always had their uses to bring on early seeds and plants. Being an addition to the house they tend to be a little warmer and rather more frost-proof than greenhouses and tunnels. What has changed is that few houses have net curtains on their windows now and they did a lot to shade and protect young seedlings and plants. Also, many now have double glazing and central heating too; refinements that few greenhouses have as yet! All in all it's a pretty lethal combination for young plants; under those conditions they are suffering somewhat for being grown a lot earlier than normal and so quickly become 'cooked' and dried out.

I find south, east or even west facing windows give enough light and warmth and, if a mirror is placed behind the seedlings this allows them to get more light reflected on them and gives a much stronger, straighter and less leggy plant. They will have the best of both worlds, as radiators keep rooms warm most of the day anyway. At this time of year watering in a porch is an almost daily requirement for all larger potted plants. It may seem quite chilly outside with those cool winds or breezes, but plants inside are only receiving the benefits of sunshine; they get dry very quickly.

Stanley Sports Association 1908 to 2012

ON June 22, 1908 the Stanley Sports Association was officially formed during a public meeting held in the Infant School rooms. Those who made up the committee had been involved in running the first organized sports meeting the previous year on Boxing Day on the green at Whalebone Bay.

Governor Allardyce promised a silver cup for a race to be run over 700 yards for the 1908 meeting and it is still today the most coveted event on the programme.

In 1909 it was decided a new location was needed and Vere Packe offered the use of his land behind Sullivan House.

The popularity of the races increased rapidly and the 1910 meeting was a two day event and more sponsored races appeared.

In 1911 the first Maiden Plate was introduced and as the years progressed and so did the sponsorship of races with some such as the Pitaluga and the Cameron Prize continuing for almost a century.

The 1914 meeting was cancelled with the outbreak of WWI and also several other meetings were cancelled during the years of WWII, but since the Victory Meeting of March 1947 the SSA has continued to provide an important event on the Falklands social calendar.

A boat race and dog trials became part of the programme as enthusiasm for the event gathered and improvements continued to the grounds with a second grandstand and tote hut added in 1924.

To celebrate the centenary of the Falklands in 1933, the Darwin Harbour and West Falklands sports associations joined forces and a stock show, sheep dog trials, and steer riding were added to the three day programme of racing, foot events and gymkhana.

Racing continued uninterrupted with men dominating the scene, until 1953 when Sheila Hadden became the first lady jockey to win the Governor's Cup.

1957 marked two auspicious events as the Duke of Edinburgh not only visited the Falklands but also raced in the Governor's Cup.

A massive refurbishment of the course took place prior to the 50th meeting in February 1963 and the Duke of Edinburgh sent a special message from Buckingham Palace.

Plans to celebrate the 150th anniversary of British Sovereignty of the Islands were disrupted by the Argentine invasion which left the committee with the mammoth task of repairing the course after the British Forces liberation of the Islands on June 14. With considerable backing from Civil Commissioner Rex Hunt, the Government, British Army and willing local people who took their wheelbarrows and spades to the course the renovation was completed just in time for the first race on February 21, 1983.

Wet weather and a soft course seemed to dog the early years of this century and for what appears to be the only time, in 2002 the meeting was postponed because of a waterlogged course. The meeting was held in January 2003 with warm weather and a dry course.

Entries in the horse races have dwindled over the years as motorbikes have replaced horses as an every day form of transport on farms and it is worrying to see only three and four horses go up the course for a race, but the only thing that has stopped racing in the last 104 years has been wars and the weather. So, as long as there is a dedicated team of organisers and horses to be ridden you can rest assured there will be a gathering of like minded folk enjoying a Falklands post Christmas tradition that has spanned a little over a century.

THIS year the Stanley Sports Association is celebrating its 100th official meeting with a traditional three day meeting at Stanley Racecourse on December 26, 27 and 28 with all the usual horse racing, gymkana and foot events.

To mark the importance of the occasion a commemorative coin has been minted by FIG and also racing commentator Patrick Watts MBE has generously provided a commemorative medal which is to be presented to all Governors Cup winners prior to the race on Boxing Day. His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood CVO has agreed to make the presentation.

The less hardy race goers will be pleased to hear that this year marquees are to be erected, tables and chairs provided and tea, coffee and cakes to be on sale and to add to the atmosphere the school band is going to be providing some live music.

SSA secretary Elaine Turner confirmed that arrangements to make the traditional Christmas meeting one to remember are well underway with trophies and rosettes already lined up and waiting to be won and a selection of tee-shirts and hoodies are also available at the end of November.

"I'd love to see more people than ever before enjoying what is a special and this year historic event, and even better if they are all wearing clothing sporting the SSA logo," said Elaine.

Events kick off at 9.30am on December 26 with the Maiden Plate, one of the most exciting races of the day as only horses which have never raced before are eligible to enter. Sponsored by Cable and Wireless the 600 yard flat race is the first opportunity for owners and jockeys to compete with their youngest animals and it can bring either success or failure at the end of several years training in anticipation of the event. So far there is word of five horses in training for the event and boosting the numbers for the subsequent days of racing, so it is fingers crossed that

THE following are some amusing and interesting extracts from the foreword of the souvenir programme of the combined Stanley and Darwin Sports Associations meeting held in February 1963 to celebrate the 50th annual meeting of the Stanley Sports Association, written by A G Barton Esq CBE.

There are visible signs in that part of Stanley Common to the north-east of Eliza Cove that at one time there was a circular racecourse, about a half mile in circumference, carved out down to clay level, but who carved it and who raced around it, history does not relate, more's the pity. Private challenge races were sometimes reported in 'The Squeaker' (Falkland Islands Magazine and Church Paper), usually on West Falkland. For example in 1894 on the Shallow harbour sand beach near Dunose head D Macaskill riding Frolic took £5 off T Paice on Rosilla and in 1895 on the sand beach in front of Spring Point C Broen's Primrose beat T Martin's Bantam, also for £5 which was a powerful amount of money in those days. One challenge race in Stanley was not reported. It was from east to west along what is now Fitzroy Road and the first rider to touch the Rose Hotel bar-counter was to be the winner. The first to arrive was hurriedly tying his horse up outside the Hotel when the second man plunged up the steps, horse and all, fell flat on the counter and claimed the prize.

Not until 1907 does The Squeaker mention horse racing in Stanley, and in those days the course was at Whalebone Bay in the Peninsula to which the steam tug Plym ferried spectators cross Stanley Harbour. There is a story that the last race one year was from the racecourse to the First and Last Hotel; one competitor had difficulty in mounting his horse and was left far behind, but being of a resourceful nature, he swam his horse across the Canache and arrived at the winning post a long way ahead of the rest. It is not certain whether this aquatic event took place before or after the Public Meeting held in 1907, "to enquire into the apathetic attitude of the general public towards sport," but in 1908 there is mention of the recently formed Stanley Sports Association. Evidently, Whalebone Bay was not considered suitable because in 1909 a committee was set up to inspect and report on sites available for racing.

The Governors Cup, the most prestigious of races will be held before the lunch break on Boxing Day after the medal presentation and Dashing Dancer the five times winner owned by Maurice Davis is tipped to be a hot favourite again this year.

Dashing is going for an unprecedented sixth win at this year's meeting. Had she been raced at the 2008 meeting she may have equaled Bambina's record of five in succession and would be going for a record-breaking six in a row this year. However if Dashing wins this year then she will have established a record of most wins in the Governor's Cup.

The coveted position of champion jockey has been held by Tim Bonner for the last two years and one more win could put him in the history books alongside William Aldridge with 12 wins, so that is also an interesting one to keep tabs on.

And even after all the daytime fun is over there is still the SSA prize giving dance on the 28th. Doors open at the FIDF Hall at 8pm for a honky tonking boot stomping dance with DJ Mel Lloyd spinning his country discs. Prizegiving takes place at 10pm so be ready to pin those rosettes on and let your hair down after the exertions of the previous days.

SSA Chairman Owen Summers said the association had been in existence as an organisation for 104 years, "but in the eyes of the public we have only yet had 99 years of sporting events until this year when we reach our 100th year. To mark the occasion we have tried to add to the occasion without detracting from the normal programme; hopefully the weather will be kind to us and we encourage you all to join us in what we hope will not only be a memorable occasion but one that we can all enjoy in the normal tradition of the Christmas Sports."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

A HALLOWEEN themed half term at the Leisure Centre entertained a host of children engaged in fun, crazy and strange sessions including creepy spider making, witch-hat creation and egg shell collages.

Holiday Programme organiser Tamara McCormick said there were sporty activities everyday including circuits, football, a table tennis tournament and a skeleton relay race.

Miss McCormick added: "We went to the cinema to watch Para Norman (I think I was more scared than the kids) and every day we had a crazy pool session, where the children had water pistols, inflatables and had lots of fun squirting the lifeguards."

A fancy dress party at the FIDF Hall ended the week: "We had games, dancing, bouncy castles, the lot and the children really enjoyed it."

"I had loads of fun planning the week, and the children had double the amount of fun attending. I would like to thank everyone who helped me in any way."

Cricketers final fund-raising push

THE Falkland Islands Cricket Team aim in the coming week to complete the last 500 miles of the 'run, ride, row, swim' fund-raiser for three Caribbean charities.

Beginning November 5, they will undertake the final part of the challenge all week, starting at 9pm and finishing at midnight.

The team is to tour Belize, Barbados and Jamaica, playing a number of matches and will also visit their chosen charity in each country: Liberty Children's Home in Belize, Barbados Sport for Life in Barbados and The Courtney Walsh Foundation in Jamaica.

They hope to raise a total of £3,000 for the charities.

The team includes Martyn Collins, David Hewitt, Jamie Punter, James Bates, Alex Pearce, Ian France, Kalon Jaffray, Daelyn Peck, David Pickup, Mike Summer and Toby Poole. Andy Brownlee is the team captain in Belize, Craig Paice in Barbados and Ian Betts in Jamaica.

They will depart the Islands on November 24 with the first fixture on November 27 against the Belize National Under 19 XI. The Jamaican fixture is expected to be the biggest challenge.

Weather stops play

THE rather dismal weather last weekend meant a postponement of both of our scheduled events.

Despite the conditions the course was played by one visiting VIP, 45 Commando's Lexie Goldsmith, returning to our Islands for the first time in thirty years. With his son Callum caddying, Lexie described the contrast between visits as priceless and simply wished he had returned sooner.

This Saturday November 3, Stanley Golf Club will once more try to host the annual Member/Non-Member event, with one season's membership to the winning non-member. This is a Texas Scramble strokeplay over 9 holes. Players are asked to be at the course for a 1.45 sign in and a 2pm start.

The Sunday Décor Services Medal begins the Island Games Qualifiers: our hosts in 2013 will be the spectacular island of Bermuda. Players are asked to sign in by 9am for a 9.15 Tee-off.

Bermuda Shorts

CAN you plug it in? The island is indeed British and during last years Isle of Wight Island Games, I enjoyed the company of a young Bermudan golfer who had recently won a golf scholarship to the USA. His accent and demeanour were entirely American. The islands electricity supply is likewise, US, 120 Volts 60 HZ: one of your first visits should be to an electronics shop for an adaptor, choose one with manual voltage selector and selection of jack plugs for use with all your gadgets.

Home run for FITB at World Travel Mart

THE Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) and a Falklands tourism delegation offered up a world class presentation at the World Travel Market (WTM) held in London this week said FITB Managing Director Tony Mason.

He said the first day of WTM 2012 was a resounding success with exhibitor invitation visitors up 5 per cent on last year.

The Monday of WTM is an exhibitor invite-only day with the aim of allowing exhibitors to hold discussions and negotiations with those buyers they wish to conduct business with.

Almost 8,000 (7,992) invited exhibitors attended on the first day compared to 7,614 on the first day of WTM 2011, which was 14 per cent up on the year before.

Mr Mason said, "I am very pleased with the turn out and know that we have stepped forward into a worldwide arena, there's no stopping us now. It's been an amazing experience being at this event. I can't tell you how many heads of tourism from other countries have stopped by and welcomed us and have said they are so happy to see the Falkland Islands represented at such a large scale event."

Mr. Mason personally gave twenty-two interviews during the event and had high level meetings with air, cruise and land based tourism providers, which he believes will also increase tourism numbers and new travellers to the Falkland's.

"This is only the beginning, while we will keep a strong focus on our core markets; it's time to introduce tourism to the Falkland Islands to the world."

Mr. Mason said he believed with increased tourism in the cruising and land based sectors from emerging markets, destination awareness campaigns would now begin.

On November 5, 2012, FITB launched their newly designed website which will soon host a fully integrated travel agents train portal which will provide training to tourism operators around the world.

Welcoming SAMA veterans and HRH the Duke of Kent

FIFTY-THREE SAMA 82 Falklands war veterans will lodge with local families over the following week.

The group also includes a number of next-of-kin and one individual qualified in the support of those suffering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder.

SAMA 82 (Falklands) Chair Gary Clement told Penguin News this week that the group has a busy schedule ahead.

At the time of going to press, Gary announced that the group's planned arrival on Thursday was subject to a delay of some hours due to high winds. He advised that this, and the forecast of snow might cause some change to the planned time for the Service of Remembrance to be held today, Friday, at the San Carlos British cemetery.

On Saturday there will be a thanksgiving service at the Liberation Monument in Stanley and then a public reception including a finger buffet at the Town Hall (Veterans only will also be provided with a meal in the Town Hall Refreshment Room.)

His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, who is a guest of His Excellency the Governor, will be in attendance at the Liberation Monument and on Sunday will participate in the customary Remembrance Day service and parade.

Falkland Islands Government invited guests include SAMA 62 founding member, Lt Colonel Tony Davies OBE and the wife of Lt Col. Anthony James Davies OBE, Mrs Beverley Davies. Mrs Davies is the Acting Head of Community Services for the Royal British Legion.

Another guest is Government Whip and Lord Commissioner of HM Treasury Mark Lancaster MP.

Mr Lancaster in June 2010 sponsored EDM 235: 'Falkland Islands Liberation Day' which reaffirms the British Government's commitment to strengthening the historic ties between the UK and the Falklands and reaffirms the continued support of the UK in maintaining the Islands as a self-governing British Overseas Territory.

Shadow Minister for Defence Kevan Jones MP, who last visited the Islands in 2002, will also attend the Remembrance proceedings.

On Monday the veterans group will be able to take trips to wherever they wish to go, including the opportunity to attend a 'wreath drop' at the site of HMS Antelope.

Veterans will then attend a reception at Government House. Mr Clement noted that the Governor intended to provide a reception later in the year for Falklands hosts and drivers.

On Tuesday Keith and Marilyn Grimmer have organised a fishing competition for the group. Further trips to places important to individuals would be on offer.

Mr Clement said a talk given by veterans might be scheduled for Tuesday evening but has yet to be confirmed. On Wednesday wildlife trips will be on offer to the group.

Thursday will be spent relaxing in Stanley and the group will fly home next Friday.

Comment by Deputy Editor John Fowler

IS it just me, or can other people now hear the faint but pleasing sound of worms turning?

In part this feeling comes from recent evidence that the global oil industry and those that invest in it regard Argentina's threats as empty. This may be because Mrs Fernandez de Kirchner keeps shooting herself in the foot, but credit is also due to the firm declarations of support from the British Government and the fact that FIG's own public relations campaign has definitely stepped up a gear.

It is obviously important to maintain links with long-term supporters, but it has been encouraging to see our representatives now with the confidence (and the language skills) to take our message in person to the waverers in the Caribbean and to the Spanish speaking world in Central America.

It was particularly cheering, while I was away, to read of the team of articulate young Islanders who gave some media 'bite' to the usually dreary and repetitive events at the UN Committee of 24. They did us credit.

Information is the best way to combat propaganda and information gained first-hand is best of all. This is why I also applaud the decision to invite so many journalists from Latin America to the Islands. My feeling is that they, like nearly every other first-time visitor to these shores, will leave with their preconceptions shattered in a positive way.

The same goes for visitors from Argentina, including ex-combatants. I have long believed that the more of them that come here to observe our realities, the harder it is for them to continue to believe the myths about us with which they are fed from childhood.

We have had Argentine veterans coming here since 1999 and the number of 'incidents' involving them has been miniscule and, for the most part, trivial. I have spoken to many of them and found the vast majority to be decent human beings seeking the same kind of solace as their British counterparts, with whom they often share a real emotional bond. Some years ago, after the ceremony at the Cross of Sacrifice on Remembrance Sunday, I helped interpret for an informal meeting between two groups of former enemies which ended in hugs and a group photo. It was a moving and thought-provoking experience.

On my first day back home, I watched the early part of the last public meeting on FITV and was depressed to hear people, who by now really should know better, suggesting we need vigilantes to spy on returning Argentine veterans. Some of what was said almost amounted to incitement to cause a breach of the peace. Isn't that a criminal offence?

Introduced initially in English, developers will quickly be working to translate the program into Spanish, German, French and Chinese. Other Languages will follow later next year.

When asked about future plans Mr Mason said "We are looking at emerging markets and making them aware of the beauty and majestic experience of visiting the Falkland Islands. We will be attending the Arabian Travel Market which is the travel and tourism event unlocking business potential within the Middle East for inbound and outbound tourism professionals. The 2013 show will run from May 6-9 2013 and I am very excited about this event. I just hope everyone is taking notice how much we are achieving in such a short time."

"Our most important challenge is our infrastructure; we must quickly increase our hotel numbers and continue to think outside of the box. It would be easy for us a small community to fall into patterns or become bogged down with details, without the infrastructure being put in place it will slow down our growth and initiatives moving forward."

"One thing I can say and it's true, we are punching above our weight and the world is now taking notice of us. I am so happy to be representing this beautiful country at this important time. I will move us as quickly as possible while the buzz is in the air and people excited about what the Falkland Islands have to offer."

Mr Mason has ten days of meetings behind the event in the UK before heading to the United States to represent the Falkland Islands at USTOA where he currently has three private speaking engagements and an undisclosed number of interviews with US Media channels.

Trial date set for 2013

IT was agreed at the pre trial review on Wednesday November 7, that the trial of David Thomas, who is charged with three counts of sexual assault of a child under the age of thirteen and one of meeting a child under the age of thirteen following sexual grooming, will begin January 8, 2013. Counsel from the UK are due to arrive in January; Peter Horgan will represent the prosecution and Virginia Hatton will represent the defence.

Mr Thomas had previously entered not guilty pleas to the charges.

Assault

Dominic Watson was also in court on Wednesday when he admitted to a charge of assault by beating.

In September Mr Watson had been drinking in the Globe Tavern when he head butted the victim in an unprovoked incident that caused bruising and bleeding.

Mr Watson told the Senior Magistrate said that he had spoken to the victim after the incident to apologise.

Although Mr Watson had no convictions for violence Mr Gumsley said that he had an appalling criminal record. The case was adjourned to allow a pre-sentence report to be completed.

Antarctic Seas Fisheries SA

Also in court on Wednesday was the case of Antarctic Seas Fisheries SA, who entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of breaching the conditions of their fishing licence. The case was adjourned until next April due to difficulty with witnesses, although a few issues are hoped to be solved by December. (FIRS)

Gary and Odette wed at GH

ISLANDERS Gary McGill and Odette Hirtle were married at Government House on Saturday, by his Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood.

Odette works as a gardener at Government House as well as carrying out evening duties and helping out in the kitchen where her culinary skills are much appreciated.

Surrounded by family and friends, the couple took their vows in the drawing room, soon after 5pm.

Given away by her mother Linda's partner Roy Murphy, Odette wore a beautiful bright red, full length dress which entirely suited her bubbly personality and obvious happiness throughout the evening.

Gary was supported by his brother-in-law Kenneth Jaffray and also accompanied by his young son Vaughn, who looked particularly handsome in his three piece suit.

After toasting the happy couple the party moved to the Town Hall where a traditional reception was hosted and enjoyed by a huge gathering. The dancing got underway with Gary and Odette taking to the floor to Lady In Red, and a lively dance to country music by DJ Mel Lloyd continued into the wee small hours.

Gary, Odette and Vaughn pose happily in the GH Conservatory

No more Otta Seal

OTTA Seal, a road covering system which it was hoped might serve as an alternative to continued replacement of unbound capping material on Falkland Islands roads and also prove less expensive than asphalt, has been rejected by Public Works as unsuitable.

Roads Engineer Simon Catton reported to Wednesday's meeting of the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) that after trials of the system which began in 2009 and continued until this year, it was clear that Otta Seal does not work here in the Falkland Islands as a possible material to be used for sealing roads.

Mr Catton reported that the Otta Seal system had been found not to provide a surface of sufficient durability and also, due to a 75 per cent rise in the cost of bitumen since 2009 made it much more expensive than anticipated.

A first application of Otta Seal on Moody Brook Road, which was laid as part of the planning requirement for the Mink Park development, had failed and had subsequently been removed. The planned second phase of Otta Seal trials on that road would now not take place.

The Roads Engineer told TAC on Wednesday that there was still a need to comply with the planning condition for sealing the road and it was intended that this would form part of the capital submission for 2013/14.

Fun day funds

A STAGGERING £1,917.47 was raised at the Port Harriet Fun Day on the weekend despite being postponed due to bad weather for 24 hours.

Organiser Cara Jordan said attendees enjoyed a bouncy castle, hare & hound competition, cliff hanger, greasy pole, a cake stand and a very popular barbecue. Raffles were drawn and the bonfire was held at 6pm on Saturday evening. Cara said particularly popular were paint balls and camouflage provided by British Forces personnel.

Joe Newell also raised funds taking 42 minutes reversing from the 1982 monument all the way to Port Harriet on Sunday morning. Shaun Evans won the sweets in a jar, Tiegian Curtis the treasure hunt and Anika Jaffray won the 'guess the money in the pot'.

Cara said: "Thank you to everyone that came, supported or donated to help make this day so successful."

Harold and Port Troop friendship recalled

PORT Troops, Islanders and members of the Band of the Royal Marines Scotland all made their way to B Slip on Ross Road East on Tuesday to mark the 30th anniversary of 17 Port & Maritime Regiment's involvement in the Falklands War and for a memorial service for Harold Rowlands and a plaque re-dedication also at B Slip.

In 1982, 116 soldiers from the regiment were deployed to the Falklands with the Task Force on six ships including the Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram.

During their deployment they worked ship to shore operations often under heavy fire from Argentine aircraft which led to Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram being hit.

Between 1982 and 1984 more than a million tons of cargo passed across B Slip and throughout that period and beyond, Harold Rowlands then the Government's Financial Secretary, provided food, shelter, hot beverages and on occasion something a little stronger for the Port Troop soldiers.

Band of the Royal Marines Scotland march to B Slip

In 1995 WO2 Jim Bowie who was the quay foreman at the time unveiled a plaque on B Slip to mark the Regiment's efforts during the war.

17 years later his son, WO2 Stuart Bowie who is currently serving with 460 Port troops arranged for the weathered plaque to be replaced and the occasion appropriately remembered.

"Harold was instrumental in assisting my father in the 1995 dedication and his nephew Robert Rowlands has provided me with the same support with the planning of the 30th dedication," WO2 Bowie told Penguin News recently. A service at Christ Church Cathedral also took place on Tuesday.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

TEN days away in my private capacity as a Trustee of the South Georgia Heritage Trust gave time while travelling for reflection on some of the livelier FIG topics on which we are working. It was also an opportunity to put into practice my philosophy 'try anything once' - in this case the mercifully short Ryanair flight from Stansted to Oslo Torp and back. I have been on aircraft with less leg room but have never felt so herded.

Always an advocate of a minimum wage, I believe it would be a pointless exercise if it is not also a realistic living wage for someone working full time. The gap in the UK between the minimum wage and what is considered a living wage is close to 20%. While in the competitive market in the Islands someone with some skills and a decent track record can command considerably more than the proposed minimum, there are unskilled individuals who have to take what they can. The minimum wage should protect them. I have heard some make dire predictions of small businesses failing. I would ask, not for the first time, are those businesses truly viable if they cannot afford to pay their employees a living wage. It is acceptable for the owner to choose not to take a full salary while getting a business established, but a business that exploits the most needy is not what we want to see.

Finally, after years of expensive consultancies, consultations and a shelf full of reports, we have a decision on the position of Stanley's main port. No-one claims that any of the proposed sites was perfect; that would have made the decision simpler. The chosen site in Port William will provide deeper water and more space at a reasonable distance from Stanley. It does not preclude some refurbishment of FIPASS but will serve the population better in the longer term. Undoubtedly many people have different preferred sites, but we have to start thinking about the long term and about sensible updating of plans to shape Stanley and the Falklands as a whole in the future.

FIC celebrates 160 years

ALTHOUGH one hundred and sixty years was a long time to wait for a party, Falkland Islands Company Chairman, David Hudd, told a celebratory gathering of past and present employees on Wednesday night that the company was entering a new era and had a lot to celebrate besides this anniversary.

While guests enjoyed a magnificent hot buffet provided by the Malvina House Hotel, Mr Hudd reviewed the progress made by the Company over the years since being granted its Royal Charter on January 10, 1852.

The Royal Falklands Land, Cattle, Seal and Whale Fishery Company, the Islands first conglomerate, was established in London with the objective of taming wild cattle, sheep farming, establishing a general store and providing communications.

Six months after its foundation, operations started with the arrival of the first employee with eighty sheep and a wife and within a year the business was in difficulty.

Mr Hudd traced the company's history from those precarious early days through the sheep farming years and the other phases of its development and ownership until the present day.

The Chairman's own involvement with the company began ten years ago, at which time, he said he had been advised that the South Atlantic was one of the few remaining undeveloped parts of the world and for this reason had great potential for growth and development in the future. Time was proving how right this advice had been.

As the FIC's parent company, Falkland Holdings was proud of the recent investments made in the Company, the enlargement of the West Store, the Marmont Row project, MPA and most recently the opening of Falklands 4X4.

With oil now looking certain to take over from fishing as the biggest creator of wealth for the Falklands, Mr Hudd said his company planned to play a major part, both directly through its involvement with Falkland Oil and Gas and, in the development of infrastructure, with Trant and FIC's Building Services in the newly formed South Atlantic Construction.

Hospital survey highs and lows

A KING Edward VI Memorial Hospital (KEMH) staff survey has shown that while 96 per cent of respondents enjoy their jobs and are enthusiastic about the role they do, 69 per cent are either dissatisfied or very dissatisfied with their level of pay.

Throughout September 2012, an internal staff survey was produced for all KEMH and Social Services staff employed at that time, with 50 per cent responding. This was based on the annual NHS survey performed in the UK and was the first time that this had been undertaken within the Falkland Islands, the Director of Health and Medical Services David Jenkins reported at yesterday's HMS Committee Meeting.

At the meeting MLA Jan Cheek noted: "What I found disturbing was the amount of staff who has said they've suffered verbal or physical abuse. We need to find out if these incidents are historic or more recent."

When training was provided 80 per cent considered it useful and believed it allowed individuals to do their job more effectively.

In terms of accidents, errors, near misses and incidents there was a positive message in that only 2 per cent of respondents did not report these when they occurred and a large majority (80 per cent) felt that the department actively encouraged these to be reported.

Over a third of respondents did not feel that they were involved in changes to their work area or that they were empowered to initiate changes themselves.

KEMH audit

INITIAL feedback from an assessment of KEMH by a Ministry of Defence team in October, which was set against standards by the Care Quality Commission in the UK included a number of positive messages and some key areas to work on according to a report for the Director of Health and Education Services.

The assessment noted there was a clear and tangible sense of commitment from all staff met with and that it is clear we all wish to do a good job. It also noted that the hospital had, "made real headway" in its approach to risk management, also that the hospital had a clear patient-focused service. For such a small place, the public health work was surprisingly broad and of a good standard.

The review team also noted however that there was across the board a lack of proper recording of policies and procedures, and that mandatory training and continual professional development was being neglected. The team said that the issues raised in their report were clearly driven by a lack of staff and resources.

Preserving the aircraft that bombed Stanley Airport

Sad news arrived today from the frontline of historical military aviation. It appears that the last airworthy Vulcan bomber will soon take to the air for the last time. Indeed, the great bat-winged Cold War plane may already have done so.

The devoted pilots (among them Martin Withers, who flew the Vulcan which virtually destroyed Stanley Airport on 31 May 1982), the ground crew and benefactors of the Vulcan to the Sky charity have, it seems, accepted that the annual £2m bill to keep her airworthy is no longer affordable.

This is terrible news to the many thousands of people who flock to air shows around the UK every summer. The Vulcan tops the bill wherever she appears. And no wonder. The roar of four Olympus jet engines seem to convey the sound of the apocalypse. Which is fitting, because Vulcans were designed to deliver Armageddon. Indeed, during the Cuban Missile Crisis, they were running up their engines ready to deliver thermonuclear bombs to the USSR. As it happened (and thank God for that) the type did not see action until almost the end of its operational life. As those of us who were there remember vividly, a few Vulcans were selected to drop conventional weapons on our little dot in the South Atlantic.

Keeping the last Vulcan airworthy has to be horribly expensive. But the cost would be peanuts in terms of the RAF's overall budget. So perhaps the Vulcan could be welcomed into the RAF's historic flight. I think the old Cold War warrior more than deserves to join the Spitfire, Hurricane, Lancaster and Dakota in that special club.

So may I ask that if anyone in the RAF is reading this, they could push it through the letter box of the Chief of the Air Staff, with the scrawled message, "Hint, hint."

BAS survives

As I highlighted in a recent column, Antarctic-watchers were shivering recently – and it wasn't from the cold. It appeared that there was a very real threat to remove the British Antarctic Survey's autonomy by combining it with the National Oceanography Centre. There was real concern that this might adversely impact on BAS's world-leading research. It would have been bad news too for the Falklands, where Stanley and Mount Pleasant Airport are important logistical bases for operations further south.

However there has been a U-turn. BAS will now retain its independence. However, I doubt if this decision was reached out of concern for BAS's on-going ability to deliver quality science.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of the Penguin News

Instead, I strongly suspect that politicians and diplomats were deeply concerned about the signal that might be sent out if London appeared to be downgrading the importance of its presence in Antarctica. Argentina and Chile have long been very bullish, at time almost aggressive, about their claims, and they would welcome such "evidence" of declining British ambition. China leads other nations that are increasing their investment in parkas, icebreakers and skidoos.

This comes at a time of uncertainty about the Antarctic Treaty, the flimsy agreement that suspends territorial claims in favour of scientific research and international cooperation. It is generally accepted that the Treaty could unravel quickly if a few countries decide to leave it and grab a head start exploiting Antarctic resources.

So, by reasserting the British Government's commitment to BAS, a useful message has gone out. Britain is retaining its historic interest in Antarctica, and while it supports the Antarctic Treaty, it ships, people and, yes, its Falklands logistical base ensure that the country is in a good position to act alone if other nations rip up the treaty.

Rare kudos, then, go from this column to the politicians and the diplomats. The "sound future for BAS" message is a timely one that will be clearly understood.

Embarrassment for the Argentine Navy

Hands up if you have been following the on-going story about the Argentine Navy's rather lovely square-rigged training ship ARA Libertad. Well, if you haven't been following, you should have been, because it is both illuminating and wickedly amusing.

In legal and economic moves that simply go right over my head, a US venture capital company has persuaded the government of Ghana to impound the Libertad while she was on a courtesy visit to the port of Accra. It seems that the US company is following its claim through Ghana's courts and, theoretically at least, might claim the vessel in lieu of unpaid debts. At least that is how it seems to me.

One online commentator has described this as "The story that just keeps on giving." And indeed it is. I know we should not laugh at the misfortunes of others. But the sight of the notoriously short-fused President Kirchner going apoplectic and sacking her most senior naval officer is, well... downright amusing. It's hard to see what the poor admiral could have done about it, but he was in the firing line as Cristina lashed out. She then sent representatives to the UN claiming the incident posed a threat to stability in the area. The officials received a cool welcome and returned to BA with nothing.

No, we should not gloat and we should not laugh at BA's expense. But frankly the government there deserved to have its ineptitude and blustering self-righteousness exposed. Usually that government is doing its best to deliver unalloyed hostility and misery to the Falklands. So I think we can be forgiven for enjoying a little schadenfreude from the story that just keeps on giving.

Stiff upper lips on screen and in the audience as Bond returns.

The latest James Bond film has been hailed as a great success. I saw the movie last week, so can confirm that it is indeed a corker.

Our little party was queuing to part with too much money for sweeties and coke in the foyer of the Odeon, High Street Kensington when someone nudged me and said, "look, we're in good company."

I looked, and saw that just behind us in the queue were the Duke of Kent and his daughter Lady Helen Taylor. To my real surprise, there was no obvious sign of a security detail. The Queen's first cousin bought huge buckets of popcorn and the pair headed for the auditorium. As did we, and we all enjoyed the movie.

I was impressed, however, that someone who might be considered a prime kidnap and assassination target, could go to the movies without a squad of well-armed coppers in attendance. There may, of course, have been a SAS sniper hidden behind the hotdog stand, but I really don't think there was. It was good to see that the British upper lip is still rigid, not just on screen but in the audience too.

Of course the Duke of Kent is to visit the Falklands very soon. I dare someone to ask him if he enjoyed Bond's latest caper. And here's a tip: if he looks a little peckish, offer him some popcorn. I have reason to believe he likes it.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Observance of Remembrance Sunday

There will be a Memorial Service in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.30 am. His Royal Highness The Duke of Kent KG, His Excellency the Governor, Commander British Forces, FIG invited guests: Mark Lancaster MP, Kevan Jones MP and Lt Col (Rtd) Tony Davies OBE. Members of the Legislative Assembly, visiting and resident South Atlantic veterans, together with Senior Officers of the Armed Services will be attending this Service. The Service will be led by the Rev Dr Richard Hines and other local ministers. The Band of HM Royal Marines Scotland will provide musical accompaniment. During the Service a collection will be made for the Poppy Appeal. Seating in the Cathedral will be on a first come first served basis.

At 10.20 am Guard Detachments representing the Royal Navy, Army, Royal Air Force and a Detachment from the Falkland Islands Defence Force will form up on Ross Road. The Band of HM Royal Marines Scotland will lead the parade. They will be joined by Veterans and Associations and begin their march to the Cross of Sacrifice at 10.25 am. Youth organisations will be present at the Cross of Sacrifice.

At 10.48 am HRH The Duke of Kent, HE the Governor, a Member of the Legislative Assembly and the Commander British Forces will arrive at the Cross of Sacrifice.

A short service will then be held and the Roll of Honour read out. There will be two minutes silence at 11.00 am marked by the firing of the saluting guns on Victory Green.

HRH The Duke of Kent, The Honourable Dick Sawle, The Commander British Forces, and FIG official guests will lay wreaths, followed by representatives of the Armed Services, The Falkland Islands Defence Force, the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and the Royal British Legion. Others wishing to lay wreaths will then do so.

This is an important public occasion and it is earnestly hoped that as many members of the community as possible will attend this observance ceremony and play an equal part in honouring and remembering all those who have given their lives for the peace and freedom we enjoy today. It is appropriate for medals to be worn on this occasion.

All those arriving by vehicle should arrive before 10.30 a.m. Drivers are requested to note that parking in the cordoned areas is not allowed and are asked to switch off their engines if they are parking anywhere adjacent to the cordoned area. The flow of traffic will be controlled at the junction of Snake Hill and James Street and the junction of Hebe Street with Ross Road. Drivers of vehicles are requested to await the departure of the parade before moving off.

GILBERT HOUSE, 31 OCTOBER 2012

SATURDAY 10 NOVEMBER 2012

On Saturday 10th November at 6pm a 'Short Service of Thanksgiving and Commemoration on the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Liberation of the Falkland Islands' will be held at the Liberation Monument in the presence of HRH The Duke of Kent and returning veterans of the 1982 war.

The Band of the Royal Marines Scotland will assist and it is planned that the names of all military and civilian personnel who died during the war will be read by members of the Falkland Islands community.

Immediately following this service all members of the public are invited to a civic reception to be held in the Town Hall from 1900hrs to 2200 hrs. A wine, beer and soft drinks bar will be in operation and light finger buffet available. This event is jointly hosted and funded by the Falkland Islands Government and SAMA FI.

GILBERT HOUSE, 29th OCTOBER 2012

An easy fix

I LISTENED to MLA Elshy's call in the Assembly for inflationary-wage hikes to start soon.

Well MLAs can easily make all employees 2.5% better off at no cost to any employer - by abolishing the medical employment tax - that would give all employees an immediate 1% rise, and employers could give an additional 1.5% rise as they will no longer be paying this amount in tax to FIG.

Win-Win.

How lucky you are to live here

I CAME to the Falkland Islands with an open mind and no preconceived ideas for a six week nursing placement at The King Edward VII Memorial Hospital.

Prior to undertaking my nurse training at The University of Central Lancashire, I worked for my local trust as a nursing auxiliary for fifteen years, therefore I believe I am well placed to comment on the health provision here compared to the UK.

My placement was only made possible as a result of the enormous support from Janice Dent who has provided me with a fantastic varied learning opportunity. She is truly inspirational, backed up by the very forward-thinking Mandy Heathman.

Health care provision in the Falkland Islands is excellent and is, in my personal opinion, in some respects far superior to that in the UK.

I believe this is down to the commitment and dedication of all the health care professionals, whatever their role, in providing high quality individualised care. The patient always comes first; this is nursing at its best.

The medical and nursing staff are committed to providing patient-centred care, not just to the patients in their care but to their family and friends. However, they can only provide this high quality of care with support from managers, administration staff, drivers, laundry services, kitchen staff, domestics, pharmacy and technical staff, all who contribute to the care journey of the patient and is a team effort.

Although the uniqueness and remoteness of the islands does present some problems these again are managed extremely well. Waiting times to see consultants, physiotherapists, CPNs etc are quicker in most cases than the UK, and x-rays and ultra sound scans can be obtained the same day. Unfortunately because of the size of the population, maternity services at home can see expectant mothers seeing a different midwife at every anti-natal appointment, something which doesn't happen here.

I believe the people of the Falkland Islands receive the best possible health care and are extremely fortunate to have such forward-thinking and dedicated professionals taking care of their well-being.

Health care aside, I have found the islanders to be so welcoming and friendly and to have a real community spirit. I have made a lot of new friends and will be sad to leave.

The learning opportunities that I have been given have taken me into schools where I found the children and young people courteous and well mannered. People have allowed me into their homes with Rachael and I was given the privilege of being present for the birth of a new little "kelper." My thanks to the parents.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone I have met through work and socially for making my "Falkland experience" an amazing one.

Special thanks must go to Estelle Jaffray, who welcomed me into her home many times and provided me with cups of tea and a well earned rest after walking up Snake Hill with my bags of shopping. The very kind lady, Nora, at the information centre spent an hour giving me advice on where to go and she was so apologetic that she didn't have her car to run me home. What a lovely lady.

Sybie at the Pod Gift Shop gave me advice, chatting and drying me off from the rain and rescuing my camera. Thanks to Mary and Ted Carey for inviting back into their home and relating tales of the culture of the islands past and present. Thanks, also to Hamish Jennings - what a gentleman - and not forgetting James (Jimmy) Smith who has driven me around to some wonderful places along with my adventurous friends Kristina and Colleen. Thank you Jimmy, you are a little star. Thanks to all the families on Pebble, Saunders, and Hill Cove for welcoming me into their homes and Trod from FIGAS whose piloting skills have finally laid my thirty years of fear of flying to rest.

The Falkland Islands are a stunningly beautiful unpolluted piece of heaven. You are all so very lucky to live here. I have found only positive things on my short stay and although change happens everywhere, I sincerely hope you keep your unique way of life and cherish it. Finally, most of all, thank you to the patients I have helped care for. I will definitely come back.

My sincere thanks to everyone.

Blue bus goes red

THE Blue Bus, which for twenty years has given folk with limited mobility a trip to the shops on Friday, has developed faults too expensive to repair with the finance available.

At a recent meeting of trustees and users it was decided to accept an offer of the use of the Red Community Bus made by the Maud Sollis Trust Fund.

This kind offer will enable the Blue Bus service to continue, albeit in the Red Bus.

The proceeds of the proposed sale of the present bus - the third since the service began - and its garage, along with the remaining money in the Blue Bus Trust bank account, will then be donated to the Maud Sollis Trust Fund.

The Trustees of the Blue Bus would like to thank a number of people, including their volunteer drivers, Stanley Services for their assistance in providing free fuel, the FIC for free transport of vehicles from the UK and anyone else who may have contributed to the service in any way over the years.

If anyone has any questions or would like to join the team of drivers they should contact John Birmingham on 21443 / 52834 or Sue Howatt on 21385.

"Type 21 Club" is now official

AN association has been formed for all Royal Navy servicemen who served on the Royal Navy's Type 21 frigates.

The Association has been formed to organise reunions and events, become a focal point for news and information, and act as a link to other related organisations. As the Association develops, it is hoped that it will be able to offer support and other services to its members.

The Association has already held two reunions in Plymouth which were a resounding success with guests coming from all over the UK, Canada, America, Malaysia and Australia to attend. There have also been several smaller local reunions around the UK and in Australia organised by individual members.

Those who served on Type 21s can join the Association on-line through www.type21club.org.uk.

Membership is free and once enrolled there is also access to a dedicated social networking site for all members.

Associate Membership is available to family members of staff of the Yarrow and Vosper Thornycroft shipyards who built the ships, Royal Dockyard staff, and those in the Pakistani Navy who have an association with the ships.

Two Type 21 frigates: Antelope and Ardent were lost in 1982

There were eight Type 21 frigates that entered service between 1970 and 1975. A general purpose frigate of commercial design, they were known for their distinctive sleek lines and good turn of speed. They were often referred to as the Porches or Greyhounds of the fleet. They were the first class of Royal Navy ships to be powered by aero derived gas turbines and the crews' living conditions were a substantial improvement on their predecessors.

All eight ships were always based in Devonport, Plymouth, and for the first time since WWII, the "Base Port" system was reintroduced for those who served on these ships. Once trained to serve on his first Type 21, a serviceman would find that he subsequently served on several other Type 21s in his career, allowing the serviceman, and his family, stability, and familiarity with the ships. This provided a unique bond between all those who served on the ships that was not replicated elsewhere in the fleet. The ships became known as the Type 21 Club during their build period. This informal "Club" came to embody the close unity between the ships and crews.

Seven of the eight ships served with distinction in the 1982 Falklands War. Two of the ships, HMS Ardent and HMS Antelope, were lost during the conflict with many lives lost. The explosions and sinking of HMS Antelope provided some of the most iconic images of the war.

The ships were HMS Amazon, HMS Antelope, HMS Ambuscade, HMS Arrow, HMS Active, HMS Alacrity, HMS Ardent and HMS Avenger.

The remaining six ships were de-commissioned in 1994 and now serve in the Pakistan Navy.

The Type 21 Association will be represented on Remembrance Sunday in the Falklands with the laying of poppy wreaths with the Type 21 Association Crest. Wreaths will be laid at the Falklands War Memorial situated in the Maritime Memorial Garden on Plymouth Hoe, and also at The Type 21 Memorial that overlooks San Carlos Water where HMS Ardent and HMS Antelope were lost during the 1982 conflict.

When the dreaded Billy Rock took its last victim

'The Commodore' recounts the story of the sinking of the liner Oravia, one hundred years ago, using first hand accounts culled from family letters, the Falklands Journal and the fore-runner of the Penguin News: The Falkland News and Church Magazine

THE Pacific Steam & Navigation Company's Liner RMS Oravia was built by Harland & Wolff in Belfast in 1897 and introduced on the service from Liverpool to the west coast of South America via the Straits of Magellan.

The vessel was 5321 Tons, with a length of 421 ft. She carried 120 crew and could accommodate 70 First Class, 104 Second Class and 456 Third Class passengers and made her maiden voyage to Valparaiso in July 1897. She was fitted with two triple expansion engines driving twin screws with a cruising speed of 15 knots.

A typical itinerary was Liverpool, La Rochelle, La Coruña, Vigo, Lisbon, Recife, Salvador, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Port Stanley, Punta Arenas, Coronel, Talcahuano, Valparaiso and Callao.

The last voyage departed Liverpool on October 17, 1912 under the command of Captain W.C. Poole with a large number of Passengers and a full cargo on board.

Oravia arrived at the Falklands on November 12, sighting Cape Pembroke Light at 21.00 hours with 33 passengers for Port Stanley. Among them were some still familiar Falkland family names: travelling in Third Class were Allen, Atkin, Brechin, Ford, Grant, Perry and White, in Second Class were Dettleff, Hardy and three McPhees, while the First Class passengers included, Benny, Buckworth, Felton, Miller, Pitluga and Townson.

It had been blowing hard during the day from the South West with a big sea running and passengers were looking forward to dropping anchor for a quiet night in Port William before disembarkation in Stanley the next day.

Mrs Dorethea Blake describes what happened next:

"Dinner was a festive meal, all feeling cheery and the Falkland passengers rejoiced. Auld Lang

Syne was played by the band and we all stood up and held hands then finished with God save the King.

"Just after 10pm Mr Jack Felton left the smoke room to have a look at the lighthouse and went back in and said, 'I am going down to awake my people up to get some clothes on, for if we do not change course within five minutes we will be on the Billy Rocks.'" There was laughter and someone said, 'We are still five miles off.' Whilst the doubt of Mr Felton's judgment was argued over there was a loud crunch; they had struck the Billy Rock, the last of many vessels to do so. There was great consternation among the passengers, who instead of hearing the anchor let go, felt the ship strike a rock with considerable force."

It was a great benefit that the Marconi Radio had recently commenced operation in September with Mr W.D. Lacey as operator. This had been insisted on by Governor William Lamont Allardyce, despite great opposition from England when he wished to erect a wireless station in Port Stanley.

The foundation for the first tower was laid on March 27. 100 men and 20 women were transported in the Penguin and the Plym, to the Canache, where a large hole 20ft wide by 10ft deep was made to take the base. A speech was given by Governor Allardyce who stated the tower was located for good signals North and Westward to Punta Arenas and he commented to the attendees that, "Future generations might smile that we had to depend on such a poor instrument as the wireless." (This was sited where PWD Plant and Vehicle workshops are today and the original station is now the property at 70 Davis Street).

Immediate contact was made between Oravia and the wireless station and notice was given for all available vessels to raise steam and head for Port William. There were several Norwegian whale catchers in harbour and the government launch. The pilot boat Penguin and the FIC tug Samson were also available.

On board Oravia was the Islands' stock inspector, Harry Townson, who wrote: "Then came a wonderful time, which none of us will ever forget in this world. I have often heard of British courage, but what I saw was simply splendid to a man. I left the smoke room without my drink and ran into Miss Miller whom I had just left. I told her to get hat, coat and jewels, then I fixed a life belt on her, placed one on myself and locked my trunks and put my keys, flask, revolver and cash I had left and tooth paste in my pocket, put on my coat and went on deck and waited events. The scene was fine; not a shout or cry or bustle. Everyone had their belts on and many with blankets over the shoulders. The ship's whistle screamed fearfully, lights flashed and the wireless was hard at it.

The order was splendid and British pluck stood out prominently, making a chap feel very proud of his country. On the bridge, the Captain was at his post issuing his orders calmly and the engines were going full speed astern to no avail. The bell was rung for boat stations."

Punta Arenas-bound passenger Robert Blake wrote: "due to the wind earlier in the day there was a big swell around the Billy and Oravia started to grind herself down immediately, the forward section on the rocks and the stern of course rising and falling considerably with the swell. Before an hour had passed, the foremast had jumped up a foot and half and broken the stays. Flooding was initially confined to the two forward holds."

About an hour after stranding several small vessels lights were sighted bearing down on the ship which was a cheering sight to the passengers on board the doomed ship as no one had any idea how long it would be before the ship might slip off the rocks and sink in deeper water.

Four life boats were lowered and were filled with women and children. Harry Townson writes that "Mr Buckworth of Packes Fox Bay stood ready with his fist and me with my gun, in case anyone was rushing the boats."

Stanley Swimming Club Triathlon

THE sun largely kept its promise on Sunday for the Stanley Swimming Club Triathlon, but the strong winds, which gradually gained strength during the day, left a number of cyclists almost pedalling at a standstill on their way up Sapper Hill.

Despite the impact of the weather on weary muscles, the day was a huge success with a total of 39 entries including 20 adult and three junior individuals. The winner in the Adult Men's category was Ben Shepherd from MPA who, despite getting somewhat misthrothered and finding himself unexpectedly meandering through the Governor's cabbage patch, finished the 1.5 km swim, 20 km cycle and 10 km run in a time of 1h, 57m. Anton Wolfaardt, although achieving the best speeds of the day in both the swimming and running events, was unable to match Ben in the cycling event or changeovers and took second place with a time of 2h, 7m.

Miranda Wilson was the strongest contestant in the Women's Individual event coming home in 2h 38m, 21 minutes ahead of Debbi

Ford. Winners of the Women's Team event were Sharon Gilbert, Zoe and Anna Luxton. Zoe had lost the draw on who was to take the cycling segment in her team and having fought her way furiously up the Bypass road was later stunned to find that she had recorded the quickest cycling time among the ladies. Still, she swears she will not be cycling next year.

Roy Buckett, Jack Wilson and Richard Short were the winners of the Men's Team event having snapped victory away from the jaws of Carly Yeomans, David Tongue and Rex Eagle. Despite having achieved a better time, the latter were unfortunately disqualified from the prizes for completing a team event with two members rather than three when Rex, with characteristic determination and having completed a very creditable cycle, also ran the course after teammate David was injured.

Most amusing moment came from the Junior teams when Gareth McGhie, finding himself well in the lead following a sterling swim from team-mate Sorrel (who recorded the third best swim time overall in the event), then had to watch with gritted teeth - and a broken chain - as competitors gleefully pedalled past him. Amy Guest kindly stopped for a little while in sympathy but seeing a chance of victory within her grasp took off leaving him - only a little regretfully - to his fate. However, she didn't reckon on Gareth's team-mate Kalon Jaffray who, when Gareth finally got in some 10 minutes after Amy, took off like a bullet round the course in record speed and got in just ahead of Amy's mate Kate Stenning - having called into his Nan's for some smoko on the way.

Anastasia Markina was the remarkable victor of the Junior Individual event completing the 1.5 km swim, 10 km cycle and 5 km run in an excellent time of 1 hr and 59 minutes.

A prize-giving ceremony was held on Sunday evening at the Narrows where the winners were presented with trophies by Alex Olmedo, and a very composed little Molly Roberts handed out cash prizes on behalf of Beauchene Fishing Co Ltd.

The Stanley Swimming Club would like to thank the Seafish Chandlery for the water and all the volunteers, the competitors and the Leisure Centre staff for making it such a successful event.

Special thanks go to the very generous sponsors: the Waterfront for the handsome cups and shields, and most of all Beauchene Fishing Co Ltd for the extremely generous prize money totalling £1,250, which was donated as part of their commitment to supporting the local community.

Beauchene Fishing Co Ltd, were encouraged to see so many participants on the day and are hopeful the event will become a regular in the Stanley sporting calendar.

"Considering the weather, I thought that all the competitors did very well to even complete the Triathlon," said Managing Director Cheryl Roberts.

With such a healthy number of entrants and the logistics wrangled through, organisers are hopeful to hold the event annually or every two years.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:

Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

The Wool Market Report - 1 November 2012 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

NO change in the AWEX this week as the increases of the last three weeks stalled. The AWEX closed at 1,046AUS/cents/kg only a small decrease of 2 cents.

The total rise of the AWEX over October was 11%. This was a lift after a negative start to the season. The steadying of the price was still encouraging baring in mind the large volume of wool on sale with a sale rate of over 51,000 bales but still with a pass rate of 93.3%.

The Campaign for Wool began its second year in Japan with a partnership with two top tier fashion retailers in the heart of Tokyo. 'Ginza Fashion Week' began on the 17th of October. This week-long event specifically highlighted woven items and knitted items. Japanese famous brands as such 23-ku, Untitled and Gotairiku also supported the Campaign for Wool. All the windows of 2 department stores were filled with Wool displays with the Campaign for Wool logo and shoppers throughout the week were able to see, and most importantly, buy, the best of Wool in these two leading Japanese stores.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Riding the favourite at the Stanley races a jockey was well ahead of the field. Suddenley he was hit on the head by a box of Thorntons chocolates

He managed to keep control of his horse and pulled back into the lead , only to be struck again by a box of Christmas crackers and a dozen mince pies as he was nearing the finish

With great skill he managed to steer the horse to the front of the field again, on the run in he was struck again this time by a Christmas pudding and the finest bottle of champagne , thus distracted he succeeded in coming second.He immediatly went to the stewards to complain that he had been seriously hampered

Closing date for hamper orders is on

Corks pop at opening of new FIC venture

THE popping of champagne corks at a reception for invited guests accompanied the launch on Monday night of the Falkland Islands first ever car showroom.

Welcoming guests to the new showroom, which has been tastefully located within the historic FIC blacksmith's shop, James Bates, Manager of what will now be known as Falklands 4X4, thanked Falkland Islands Building and Maintenance Services for their outstanding workmanship, the FII board for putting up the funds for the project and former Stanley FIC General Manager, Terry Spruce for allowing the use of his pictures on the walls.

Karl Harris was also thanked for displaying his immaculate Series 1 Landrover, and Sealed PR, who had arranged the reception in conjunction with the Malvina House Hotel.

When invited to formally open the showroom, FIC Director David Hudd, pointed out that FIC had been selling Land Rovers for 60 years or so, but he believed that this was a new era for the Company and that the fact that this project has taken place demonstrated the Company's level of confidence in the Falkland Islands economy as a whole, whether it be through the showroom or the Company's collaboration with local companies in the proposed waterfront development.

Stanley Running Club
meets Saturday mornings

Would like to advise all club members there will be no
archery this Sunday
11th November 2012.

STORM and gale force winds replaced the week of fine spring weather, just in time to scupper the golfing weekend. The Décor Services November medal went ahead in playable but very strong and gusting winds.

The field of eighteen were soon scattered across all quadrants of the 60 acre paddock. The days honours went to Roy Smith with a hard fought round of 76 and a nett score of 67, placing him two shots clear of Darren Wade and Tony McMullen. Roy is usually the first on the course for evening practice and the win is a long overdue reward for that effort.

This was also the first of eight qualifying rounds for the 2013 Nat West Island Games, with players five best rounds to count; it is unlikely that any of Sunday's high scores will survive.

Roy Smith leads the race for Bermuda on 76, Glenn Ross posted a 77 and then there are a cluster of players on 81 and 82.

The Matchplay draw has as usual thrown up some interesting ties with two of the clubs best matchplay players, Ian Stewart and defending champion Sarah Bowles, meeting in the first round. The Matchplay competition is a knock-out tournament that runs from November through to the final match in April.

Sarah has won this event three times in five years, including victories in each of the last two seasons but faces a tough start en-route to the unprecedented hat-trick.

There will be no match on Remembrance Sunday but this Saturday sees the second annual skins challenge. Groups of four with nearest to matching handicaps will play of scratch.

If you are considering playing golf, then this is a good event to come for a look-see, with the lowest handicap players grouped together, that is, Glenn Ross, Troyd Bowles, David Beynon and Kevin Clapp and another including some of our best match players, Ian Stewart, Sarah Bowles and Roy Smith.

The two youngsters Ieuan Ford and Declan Bonner, wearing Fowler orange, will feature in another grouping. It all means that sparkling play is almost guaranteed. Players are asked to be at the course for a 1:45 sign in and a 2 PM start. Weather permitting; a BBQ will follow the match.

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

The Falkland Islands Company - Vacancies

The Falkland Islands Company Limited would like to congratulate three members of staff for their recent success.
Stevie Aldridge has been extremely successful on his Dangerous Goods Course, gaining 93% in his final exam.
Two other employees are studying for professionally recognised accountancy qualifications and both of them have passed their first examinations. Congratulations to Liam Felton-Short and Hannah Humphreys from the West Store Office.

The Falkland Islands Company Limited invites applications for Joiners, and a General Foreman within the Construction and Maintenance team - starting 1st January 2013.
Successful candidates should be capable to work responsibly without supervision to a high professional standard. The ideal candidates should have some experience and be physically fit. Successful candidates should be versatile with a good knowledge of general construction work. An ability to communicate well with other members of the team and clients is essential. It would be preferable if candidates had knowledge and experience of first and second fix carpentry. Successful applicants must also be of sober habits. Competitive rate of pay will be offered by negotiation with successful candidates.
For further information and to apply please contact Roy Smith on 51136 or email construction@fic.co.fk

The family of the late Jim Lewis would like to thank everyone for their kind words, for all the cards, flowers and donations we received. You made it a little easier for us to get through the last weeks. Thank you to Richard and Kathy for a lovely service, Paul for playing the music, Tony, Bernie, Ricardo, Rob for carrying Dad and the PWD lads for keeping a close eye on them, the Sea Cadets on parade outside the Cathedral, Fred with the British Legion standard on parade inside, the Royal Naval and the Royal Marines Associations on parade at the cemetery. Dad would have been so proud of everyone.

A very special thanks to the Doctors, Nurses and hospital staff, Kerry, Margo and Caroline for the daily care while Dad was in sheltered housing. Fran and Ginny for delivering his meals. The quality of care Dad received over the last weeks of his life went way beyond the call of duty. You ensured Dad kept his dignity right to the end.

We cannot possibly name everyone who has helped in some way. You know who you are and we thank you all.

Dave, Pam and Mandy

THANK YOU to everyone who helped in any way with our scavenger hunt challenges. The overseas element of Team Bubblesque Loves Rock Salt Rounds were stunned by the generous and open nature of the FI community and want to move here – you made us even more proud to be Kelpers! Be ready for GISHWHES 2013 and a small local version before that. In the meantime: embrace the madness!! (And please consider supporting Random Acts – a lovely little charity committed to conquering the world one random act of kindness at a time).
Team BLRSR x

Richard, Lizzy and Marcy would like to say thank you to everyone who helped with the safe arrival of Ollie James, to all the KEMH staff and people that visited and sent cards and gifts. Especially thank you to Mandy who helped to keep Marcy so involved with everything; she is the proudest little sister ever.
Thank you

Layla & Lindsey Bone would like to massive thank you to everyone who supported the Halloween cupcake sale in aid of "Girl Guides Association". The sum of £163.66 was raised.

This years Remembrance Day Parade will take place on Sunday 11th November 2012.

At 1015 hours, following the service at Christ Church Cathedral and to allow for anyone who wishes to walk to the Cross of Sacrifice the Royal Falkland Islands Police will be temporarily closing Ross Road from Dean Street to Seaview Cottage, as the congregation passes along the route the roads will be re-opened.

A wreath laying service will be held at the Cross of Sacrifice and as a result of this; Ross Road will be closed between Seaview Cottage and Hebe Street whilst this ceremony takes place.

Motorists are reminded that no vehicles are to be parked on the road or verge 50m either side of the Cross of Sacrifice, and that any vehicles parked in the adjacent vicinity do not have engines running.

Ross Road will also be closed to traffic on Saturday 10th November 2012 from Seaview Cottage to Snake Hill between 1630 and 1730 hours to allow for a rehearsal of marching troops.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police would like to thank all motorists for their patience and understanding during these times.

Road Closure

There will be an Act of Remembrance for the visiting 1982 veterans lead by HRH The Duke of Kent at the Liberation Monument on Saturday 10th November 2012. As a result of this Ross Road will be temporarily closed to traffic between Reservoir Road and Barrack Street, between 1750 hours and 1855 hours on Saturday 10th November 2012.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police would like to thank all motorists for their patience and understanding during these times.

Slight change of tune from Ban Ki-moon

ACCORDING to reports of a recent interview in New York with the Buenos Aires newspaper Tiempo Argentino, United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon has refuted Argentine claims that the UK Government is in breach of UN resolutions with regard to the Falkland Islands, and appears to have argued in favour of the right of Falkland Islanders to self-determination.

In a recent report on the interview, Mercopress states that the Secretary General expressed the belief that "people living under certain conditions should have a certain level of capacities so that they can decide their own future be it independence or some kind of government in their territories."

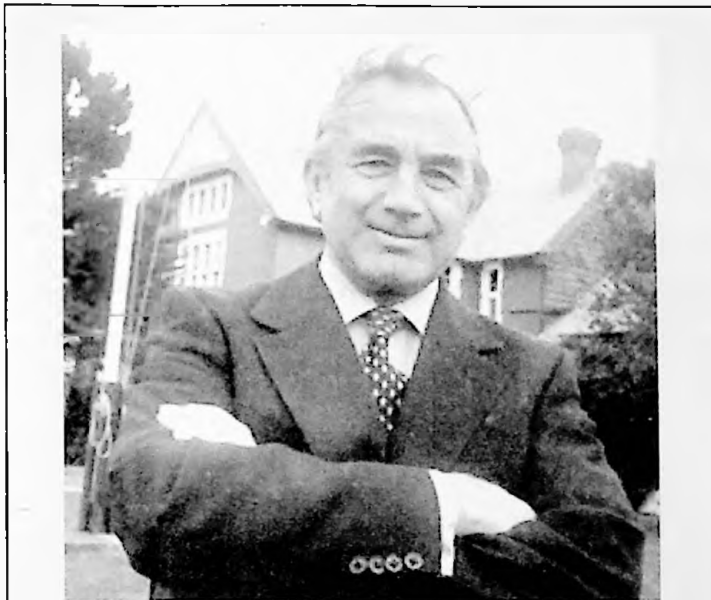

While still calling for dialogue between Argentina and the UK as he has done previously, because he was "concerned about the strong statements exchanged between Argentina and the United Kingdom," the Secretary General was reported to have said that the UK had not violated relevant UN resolutions. "Being able to decide their own future was the main criteria of the main UN bodies," said Mr Ban Ki-moon who added that he "didn't think such a right was an abuse or violation of relevant UN resolutions."

Argentina has on several occasions asked Mr Ban Ki-moon to bring together Argentina and the UK to establish a dialogue.

The Secretary General said, "the UN has been working strongly from its very beginning to help non autonomous territories to achieve independence" and to put an end to colonialism.

"Of course there are still some which are ruled by certain structures from other countries, but I sincerely hope that as we move along the Twenty-First Century, all the people in the world can enjoy independence."

When asked about the 16 UK Overseas Territories, Mr Ban Ki-moon said he expected they should be resolved "ideally" through dialogue, particularly when we are talking about the Falklands.

Sir Rex Hunt CMG

We received news of the passing of Sir Rex Hunt with great sadness. Sir Rex will forever be remembered in the Islands for his years of service as Governor, and particularly for his courage and dignity in facing the Argentine invasion in 1982. His numerous contributions to our home were recognised in his being granted the Freedom Of Stanley in 1985. A loyal friend of the Falkland Islands, he served for many years as Chairman of the Falkland Islands Association and as President of the UK Falkland Islands Trust. His passion and commitment to the Falkland Islands will be sorely missed. The thoughts and deepest sympathies of all Falkland Islanders are with his family and friends at this sad time.

MLA Roger Edwards

On behalf of the Legislative Assembly of the Falkland Islands

Royal visit concluded

HIS Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent departed the Falklands on Monday, after a visit undertaken as part of the celebration of the Silver Jubilee of HM the Queen.

During his five days on the Islands, the Duke carried out a busy programme of events, including laying wreaths on behalf of Her Majesty at Blue Beach Cemetery, San Carlos, the 1982 Liberation Monument and the Cross of Sacrifice in Stanley.

As President of the War Graves Commission, the Duke inspected war graves in the Stanley Cemetery and also unveiled commemorative plaques marking the opening of the Historic Dockyard Museum Project and the opening of the new Falkland Islands Environmental Research Institute currently housed in Stanley Cottage.

Visits were also made by the Duke to the Oil Yard, King Edward VII Memorial Hospital, to the Community School and to the Infant and Junior School where pupils also had the opportunity to meet the royal visitor.

Born in 1935, The Duke of Kent is the son of the late Prince George, fourth son of King George V, and the late Princess Marina, daughter of Prince Nicholas of Greece. He is cousin to both The Queen and The Duke of Edinburgh.

World class research in the South Atlantic

THE South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI), a pioneering concept born from a gap in the knowledge economy noticed by the Falkland Islands Government, was officially opened by His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent on Monday.

Aspiring to be a world class centre of environmental research from the equator down to the ice, the FIG organisation will forge the way in valuable contributions to earth science and has already planned projects in the Falklands, Saint Helena, Tristan da Cunha, Ascension Island and is hopeful to link with institutes in Chile.

"There's been a lot of environmental research conducted here in the past by organisations like BAS but never a coordinated effort," said SAERI Director Dr Paul Brickle.

The Institute will teach and mentor post graduate students and has already had a lot of support from UK universities. Two PhD students are due this October with another in January.

Dr Brickle told Penguin News he hopes the Institute will move to a purpose-built building in four years and accommodate up to five resident senior scientists to work on varying research, from climate change to marine ecology.

For now, the small team of three are enthusiastic about what they can achieve, with hopes to diversify into many areas of natural science.

"One such area is peat coring. We can reconstruct the prior climate of the Falklands and neighbouring South America by analysing the prehistoric composition of the earth sample."

"Another is iron seeding; monitoring the ferrous dust that accumulates in the Southern Atlantic Ocean, which is understood to be directly linked to the region's productivity. Another blue sky theory is tracking of sea birds by biological markers."

"The momentum is really gathering now and we're only seven months old. It's all down to support from government, the community and interest from the UK" said Dr Brickle.

Comment by Deputy Editor John Fowler

It was perhaps apt, if still very sad, that the news of the death of Sir Rex Hunt should have occurred at this time when we have been particularly remembering the events of 1982 in the company of so many of those who liberated us from alien occupation.

Unfairly, perhaps, given his distinguished career of service to his country in many countries and in other conflicts, it is because of Sir Rex's typically doughty response as Governor of the Falklands to the Argentine invasion that the story of his passing has appeared this week in newspapers throughout the world.

Elsewhere in this and coming editions of this paper there will, I am sure, be many more tributes to Sir Rex. There are some people you meet in life who remain part of your history and, in that sense, part of your identity. For many of those who, like me, enjoyed the rewarding, but sometimes uncomfortable privilege of working under Sir Rex and getting to know the real man beneath the plumed hat, he is one of those people. With his parting we feel the loss of some small but important part of ourselves.

Of course it is impossible to think of Sir Rex, without also thinking of his wife, Mavis, who provided him with unfailing support and strength, particularly in his declining years. I am confident that the thoughts of all her many friends in the Falklands will be with her and the family at this time.

I WISH that the referendum question could be tweaked a bit so that some of us do not have to keep our fingers crossed while voting "yes" as we all must.

The trouble is that while we agree that being a British Overseas Territory is currently our best option, and certainly a hundred times better than becoming an Argentine colony, a growing number like to think that with the support of the British Government, the Falkland Islands is engaged in a process which might lead, at some time in the future, however remote, to something approaching full nation status.

Up to now, we have been so busy defining ourselves in terms of what we don't want to be, (Argentine) that we have not discussed what we do want to be, and really we should start. Perhaps a question leaving the door open for future discussion could be something like:

"Do you wish that the Falkland Islands should retain its current political status as an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom, until its people decide otherwise?"

Laying wreaths at the HMS Glamorgan Memorial

Cubs lay wreaths for Royal British Legion

FOUR Cubs braved the weather on Saturday to accompany their Akela Jan Miller to the HMS Glamorgan memorial where they had the great honour of laying the family wreaths on behalf of the Royal British Legion. Connor McLeod, Richie Short, Travis Jaffray and Thomas Ford then went to Fitzroy and laid a wreath at the Royal Engineers Memorial and four wreaths at the Welsh Guards Memorial. The group were accompanied by Welsh Guard veterans Steve Jones and Andy Robert, and also Bryan Wigley, who was only four years old when he lost his father on the Sir Galahad.

Royal thank you

ALSO this week, Beavers and Cubs were very excited to receive a special letter of thanks from Her Majesty the Queen on Monday. The group received the thank you for a beautiful and fantastically patriotic card they made for Her Majesty on the occasion of her Diamond Jubilee.

Criminal Court on Wednesday

TRINA Berntsen was fined £175 with £85 costs and her licence was endorsed for driving at 37mph in a 25mph zone. Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis explained Ms Berntsen was driving a Poole's taxi and had three fare-paying passengers when a static police check found her to be driving in excess of the speed limit.

Veronica Miernes Terono is to pay a £215 fine and £85 costs after admitting to driving without due care and attention. The incident occurred on October 20 when she turned right off the Bypass road and lost control of her vehicle colliding with the garage of the house known as Harbour View Knot, 1 Eliza Cove Road, structurally damaging three walls of the property. Ms Terono said she accidentally pressed the wrong pedal and panicked and has already offered to pay for the damage and apologised to the owners. Her licence was endorsed.

Tanya Curtis was fined £125 and ordered to pay £85 for driving at 37mph in a 25 mph zone. She received an absolute discharge for the charge of not wearing a seatbelt. Ms Curtis explained that she always wears a seatbelt, but that she had removed it only because she had recently had a baby and the belt was causing her pain. Her licence was endorsed.

Luke Clarke admitted by post to using a mobile phone while driving. Mr Clarke's licence was endorsed, he was fined £175 and is to pay £85 costs.

Following a probation order, Dominic Watson, who head butted a bystander in the Globe Tavern in September, was sentenced to a community service order and ordered to pay £85 costs for causing assault by beating. Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley told Mr Watson he hoped that community service would help re-establish his work ethic and encouraged him to get a job to pay the £85 prosecution costs himself, after Mr Watson explained he could get a job but he "just didn't want to."

Tanzev Gough was ordered to pay £343 in compensation and costs for a charge of common assault, which occurred at the Trough on July 15, 2012. Following a previous altercation with the victim's sister, and fuelled by alcohol, Ms Gough exchanged words with the victim, slapped her across the face and pulled her by her hair, assaulting the victim and damaging her spectacles in what Senior Magistrate Gumsley described as a "ridiculous" and "violent act."

Crown Prosecutor Inglis apologised for the long time it took to get the case to court, but explained the delay was caused waiting for a medical report to be produced.

The Duke meets Ronnie Clarke, the last blacksmith to have worked in the shop before it closed its doors in 1993.

Historical step taken

ONE hundred and seventy years on from the creation of the Government Dockyard as the base for the development of the new town of Stanley, the redevelopment of the area was officially marked on Monday with the unveiling of a commemorative plaque in the old Blacksmith Shop, by His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent.

Chairman of the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust, Tim Blake, introduced the Duke to some of the individuals who have helped to bring the Dockyard Project from concept to reality.

Museum Manager Leona Roberts was pleased to announce that foundations for the Diamond Jubilee Building, which, along with the historic Central Store will house the relocated national museum, will be laid very soon and that it is hoped the building will be complete next year.

Mrs Roberts explained to the gathering of guests and dignitaries that the Dockyard Project is dedicated to preserving the unique Kelper way of life and so rather suitably the plaque is housed in one of Stanley's oldest listed buildings where its historic importance will be protected.

Mrs Roberts said the redeveloped Dockyard will become a physical centre for Stanley and help fulfil the Falkland Islands Government's aim for a usable and attractive waterfront area which will benefit the community, preserve heritage, provide exhibition space and reach out to the tens of thousand visitors our small town receives every year.

No dispute over Falklands issues

TWO members of the Westminster Parliament, have been visiting the Islands during this period of remembrance as guests of the Falkland Islands Government.

Mr Mark Lancaster MP, who is a Government Whip and Mr Kevan Jones MP, Shadow Minister for Defence, left the Islands on Tuesday on the same flight as HRH the Duke of Kent, after a similarly full programme of visits and official engagements.

Speaking to Penguin News during the week both visitors wished to thank their hosts and the people of the Islands for the warmth of their reception - according to Mr Lancaster something not always given to politicians in Britain.

They were adamant that there was absolute cross-party agreement in the British Parliament over the right of Falkland Islanders to self-determination and the need to maintain the current level of military deterrent against any possible aggression.

Being himself a serving officer in the Territorial Army, who has served in Kosovo and Bosnia as part of the UN peace-keeping force and more recently in Afghanistan, Mr Lancaster was keen to reassure Islanders that recent announcements from the British Government that reservists would be part of the Falklands garrison did not imply any reduction in military capability. Not only was the Territorial Army now a highly professional and well-trained force, but also its members had already been routinely serving in the Falkland Islands for some years.

Mr Kevan Jones, who first visited the Falklands in 2002 said that he was impressed by the progress that had been made in the Islands since then and delighted to find the same spirit of purpose and optimism evident.

For the MP for North Durham the opportunity to meet with veterans had been one of the highlights of the visit. In his former capacity as Minister for Veterans, Mr Jones had signed what he believed was the first cheque which went towards the founding of Liberty Lodge in Stanley.

LAN flight departure delay

WHEN technical problems prevented the departure of Saturday's LAN flight with 80 passengers, what could have been a nightmare scenario for the airline's Stanley agents, International Tours and Travel, was resolved due to what Corrinne Paice of ITT describes as "a real community effort" by a host of individuals and organisations, including FIDF, ITT, Shorty's Diner, the Kelper Store, Seaman's Mission, Anya Cofré, Keith and Kathy Biles and Corrinne's husband Craig. After spending the night, in the FIDF Hall, snug in sleeping bags provided by Ocean Rig, the 61 non-resident passengers eventually flew away from MPA at 6.30 on Sunday morning, apparently cheerful and none the worse for their experience.

Premier readies for Sealion

IN an Interim Management Statement released yesterday, November 15, Premier Oil reports that the acquisition of 60 per cent of Rockhopper Exploration's interests in the Falkland Islands has been completed and the company has assumed operatorship of the Sea Lion project. Following formal assumption of operatorship by Premier on 1 November 2012, a detailed pre-FEED work programme for the Sea Lion development in the Falkland Islands is under way. Concept validation and pre-FEED studies are expected to complete by mid-year 2013.

No liberty for Libertad

ON Wednesday, the Argentine government formally reported Ghana before the Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, in a bid to try to recuperate its sail-training ship ARA Libertad that has been detained in Tema port since October 2, after a Ghanaian judge ruled in favour of NML Capital, an investment or "vulture" fund that is demanding the payment of Argentine bonds, capital and interest, totalling 370 million dollars. The Tribunal for the Law of the Sea is an international court that was formed to mediate disputes on the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

Falklands 'guitar hero'

IT was with great sadness that we learned on Wednesday of the death in Santiago of Gerard Robson. Lead guitarist and founding member of "The Fighting Pig Band," 'Fred' was a source of encouragement and inspiration to young musicians and will be missed by all who knew him. Our condolences go to Phyllis, Willie, Jodie, Cherry and all the family.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I JOIN others in sending condolences to the family of Sir Rex Hunt who continued working for us long after his retirement. Everyone who knew him will have some memories of his energy and humour to recall with affection. His stories of his previous postings demonstrated that he had a very interesting career with many exciting moments in Vietnam and Uganda.

It has been a special week for us, meeting some of the veterans who have returned for the first time as well as people who have visited previously. I hope they were able to see from the very large and respectful turnout at all the remembrance events how greatly their achievements and sacrifice is appreciated. The hard-working band of the Royal Marines of Scotland added so much in marking the solemn events but also providing the uplift and fun that live music brings. We are very fortunate that they were able to come and should renew thanks to those in the MOD who made it happen.

As others have said we are still in listening mode on the referendum question and welcome any input. It seems, since members outnumbered the public at the meeting held on the subject last week, that most people are happy with the general thrust of the question but it is not too late to let us have your thoughts before we move on to the more practical aspects of organizing the vote and details of its monitoring. If you have any concerns please contact one of us. It will be too late when the question is finalized.

In the meantime we maintain the momentum on oil readiness. There is much to be done, not only practically but in terms of ensuring that our legislation and regulation are up to the demands that will be made. We are under no illusion that it will be easy or uncomplicated but have the will to do it. We are acutely aware that some departments are short of resources, especially people, and that will have to be dealt with as we are almost into the next budget cycle.

HRH the Duke of Kent filling his viewfinder with Rockhoppers

Time out on Pebble for the Duke

HIS Royal Highness the Duke of Kent took a short break from his ceremonial duties to enjoy the wildlife and hospitality of Pebble Island on West Falkland on Friday and Saturday.

Despite the adverse weather conditions which included winds of over 40 knots, the Duke travelled to Pebble by helicopter following the service at Blue Beach cemetery and after a warming lunch, undertook a tour of the east end of the island.

Escorted by Pebble Lodge owners Jacqui Jennings and Allan White and tour guide Ken Berntsen the Duke's party which included his Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood and Mrs Haywood set off with a wildlife checklist which was enthusiastically filled in.

Inevitably it was the Rockhopper penguins which won the Duke's affection and his photograph collection will have increased considerably as the captivating antics of the smallest but arguably best loved of the Falklands penguins kept him clicking away while battling to stay upright in the gale force winds.

Dinner was a lively and relaxed affair giving a true taste of the Falklands and included a sticky date and Diddle-dee dessert created in honour of the visit (now known as The Duke's Diddle-dee pudding) with the Duke taking the time to show his appreciation of the efforts everyone had made to make his visit enjoyable.

Before departing by helicopter on Saturday morning the entire party braved even stronger winds and travelled up First Mountain to pay their respects at the HMS Coventry memorial, before continuing with a very busy schedule.

Roads programme well in hand

THE PWD's Road Engineer, Simon Catton reported to the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) on November 7 that his department's asphalt programme had started with no significant delays, the North end of Villiers St having been done during the school holidays.

Works to follow include the overlay of H Jones road which was started on October 29.

Repairs to Lookout Industrial Estate roads were being undertaken following the agreed withdrawal by FIDC from the management of estate.

Patching was going on various areas around town, Stanley bypass and MPA road.

Resurfacing of the Sapper Hill section of MPA Road will start in January 2013. The first job will be to remove the now redundant safety barrier and strip the asphalt. Actual asphalt laying is due to commence in February. General maintenance is ongoing.

Grading work has been progressing well, according to the Road Engineer, who listed the following roads and tracks completed to date: North Camp, Cape Dolphin, Long Island (including repairs to causeway), Port Louis, Rincon (including repairs to wash out areas), Johnson's Harbour (including repairs to wash out areas and soft spots) Horseshoe Bay, MPA Road and all unsurfaced roads in the Stanley area.

Mr Catton reported that the planned order for road capping had been as follows:

Mount Kent Turnoff, after the installation of new culverts and removal of soft spots, had been completed on October 28 and capping at Pretty Banks had started on October 29.

These areas would be followed by stretches of the Estancia track north of the Mount Kent turnoff and then the MPA road.

Ice Route may be longer

AFTER discussion of a paper submitted on the subject by Road Engineer, Simon Catton the Committee recommended that next Winter the Stanley Ice Route - those roads which are routinely salted when conditions are icy - should be extended from Davis Street East to Stanley Airport.

Traffic to the airport has increased significantly since the oil industry's helicopter operations have been based there, the Committee was told.

Although this extension was agreed by the Committee, it will still need to be approved by MLAs and at present is not included in budget submissions.

PICTURED are visiting and resident, serving and retired, Royal Marines, who gathered at their own dedicated monument on Ross Road on Monday evening for a brief wreath-laying ceremony, before attending the reception for 1982 veterans held in Government House.

The occasion was organised by Paul Adey, who had brought the wreath with him from the UK. This being a proper 'Royal' occasion, there were toasts, to Her Majesty the Queen, the Corps and, particularly poignantly, in this anniversary week, to "absent friends."

Naturally, since the Royal Marines are part of the Royal Navy, the beverage of choice for the toasts was rum, thoughtfully provided by Penguin News's own gardening correspondent Ginge Kidd.

FIGAS operations under review

AT the Transport Advisory Committee meeting on November 7, Simon Fletcher, FIG's Director of Central Services presented a discussion paper proposing several changes to the Revised FIGAS Flight Programme (RFFP) instigated on July 1, 2010.

Mr Fletcher said that the aim of the revisions, which were made in the light of experience gained in the operation of the RFFP, was to further advance the Service Level Objectives agreed in the FIGAS Business Plan in 2010, namely to reduce the deficit to £900,000 by 2015/16 and to achieve an annual increase in the passenger per hour load factor by 0.2 per cent on local flights and 0.6 per cent on tourist flights.

It was proposed that for the 2013/2014 season, capped residents' fares, which were increased by 10 per cent from July this year should remain the same, but that all other rates and tariffs should be increased by 10 per cent. Baggage rates for both residents and others should remain the same.

Members took issue with a proposal to impose a late booking fee of £25 to be applied if a new booking was made after 10am on the day before a flight was requested. It was suggested that this might prove a disincentive which could lose revenue for FIGAS and was particularly unfair if the requested flight would fit into an existing flight plan without requiring any time-consuming rescheduling on the part of FIGAS staff.

There was general approval of a suggestion by one member that the late booking fee should only be applied where a requested flight would necessitate rescheduling.

There was also discussion of four options regarding a perceived need for a clear policy on concessionary freight rates. These, the Committee were told, had been introduced in the past to encourage Camp residents to diversify their businesses by growing vegetables and other fresh produce for the Stanley market.

FIGAS Islander

Historically, Mr Fletcher explained, it appeared that these concessionary rates had been granted by the Financial Secretary on a more or less ad hoc basis.

It was agreed that further discussion on this subject was required in the light of the Rural Development Strategy, but the Committee appeared generally in favour of maintaining concessionary rates for the shipping into Stanley of products for which freshness was an important factor, but to remove all other concessionary rates except for outer islands.

With the aim of reducing uncertainty about flights for locals and to allow firm plans to be made for other users, the discussion document presented to TAC proposed that during the summer season (from September 1 to April 30) flights would operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, regardless of load limit.

On the other days of the week, normal planning to ensure economical loads would apply.

During the summer season, FIGAS would be a seven day a week operation. In addition, it was proposed that FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, even if they have been jeopardised by cancellations on the part of other intended travellers.

Mr Fletcher said that these and other proposals were part of an on going process in which the increase of the amount of passenger traffic with its concomitant impact on revenue and the reduction of the deficit were crucial aims.

By working with local land owners and tourist agents, they aimed to increase opportunities for transporting visiting cruise ship passengers to prime wildlife locations on East Falklands.

FIGAS were also searching for efficiencies across the Department to further reduce direct operating costs.

Possibilities for discussion might include reducing fleet size by 'moth balling' an aircraft for a one year period and closely monitoring the effect this had on operations.

Heartfelt thanks

BY way of this letter, as parents, grandparents and uncle we would like to express our heartfelt thanks for the overwhelming support which we have received since Dan's tragic accident at Long Island on October 20th.

The sheer volume of support locally and from overseas, with cards, letters, flowers and visits was absolutely staggering and that our great friends Evie and Normps came immediately out from England to be with Ileen and me and Attie was incredible. The support which we had during those five unbelievably difficult days before Anya and Migs returned from Chile was fantastic and continues still.

To thank or name everyone personally would not be really possible as someone is bound to be left out. But special thanks must go to everyone at Long Island on that day, especially the young people, the RAF Helicopter crew and the KEMH medical staff in their many capacities which at times we know went well beyond their normal remit. Then there were many people working away behind the scenes to ensure that certain things took place so swiftly and smoothly: the Police, FIGO, Customs, ITT, the Shipping Agencies and the RAF at Brize Norton, Ascension and Mount Pleasant. The list goes on. We will probably never know who they all were, but their help and efficiency was beyond words and so very much appreciated.

Having said that it would be wrong to mention individual people, thanks must be given to the Rev Dr Richard Hines for his spiritual support and understanding to us both and for allowing the Cathedral to remain open so that Dan's friends could be with him throughout the night; it was truly amazing. It is hard to put into words how the compassion, feeling and conduct of those young people shone through, not only for Dan but also for Reuben and the family in coping with this devastating loss.

But to all those many people who helped to enable us to cope at the time, we send our heartfelt thanks. They all being with us in their thoughts and prayers helped us enormously to cope and get through. It was such a great comfort and so, so much appreciated.

Time after time

IN a recent radio coverage Members of the Legislative Assembly were speaking to justify the wording and format in the coming Referendum on the Political Status of the Falkland Islands.

While I fully agree with the preamble and the explanation of the Yes or No "tick the box" answer for simplicity and clarity, my ears pricked up when, I think, MLA R. Sawle said they decided to restrict it only to those on the Electoral Register, because it might have been construed as a fiddle if it encompassed a wider range of the population.

That statement can be read as an admission that the vote on the time change in the Census was a fiddle? What do readers think?

Loyalty put in question

THE tail end of the Deputy Editor's last week editorial more than raised a few eyebrows. I can only speak for myself, but I was livid with anger. It speaks volumes about John Fowler's loyalty to his chosen home.

Not welcome in my book

MAY I take some issue with last week's editorial.

Firstly, in 1945 Germany and Japan gave up their territorial claims and ambitions. Argentina never has - the only difference between 1982 and 2012 is that one was a military warfare campaign with live ammunition. Today's is economic, political and communications harassment amounting to war wherever they can. Other than the lack of lead in the sky, nothing has changed.

Some Argentine veterans and families do come here quietly and respectfully to get their peace of mind, keeping their personal views to themselves, and it is good that they can.

Others come here, perhaps looking for personal closure also, but definitely with an agenda and it is naive to think that seven days in the Islands will alter their fixed beliefs one iota.

These are the ones who spoil it for all the others. Ask the elderly citizens who live up West and out in camp, who are faced with groups of Argentines wandering about shouting slogans, waving flags, coming onto their land and demanding access as if they have a right to it.

What about the ones who are rude and objectionable to our Customs and Immigration staff - arrogantly flicking their Argentine ID Cards across, instead of producing a passport, refusing to fill in arrival forms because it has the name Falkland Islands Government on it etc?

I believe staff stand firm and make them produce passports and sign forms - or they go back onto the flight, but they should not have to suffer that arrogant rudeness. Go to Argentina and try it and see where you end up!

For some years now these folk have been coming in Remembrance Week - a period that is irrelevant to Argentina - but they know there are always some SAMA veterans here then - so yes - I have seen many attempts at "meetings" - some genuine - but plenty where a couple of the Argentine veterans suddenly produce cameras and happen to actually be reporters. Result: some embarrassed SAMA vets and pictures all over Argentine papers, often with a political slant.

Sorry, but in my book until their Government recognises that we exist as a people with normal human rights, it is unlikely that those folks will ever be very welcome here.

(Deputy Editor's Note: While understanding their feelings, I find it distressing that people I consider old friends should doubt my loyalty to my chosen home.

We are still at war, but it is a war being played out on the battleground of international public opinion, against a hostile government, not its people. I happen to believe that we are now winning and will continue to do so if we keep calm and avoid ill-considered reactions to petty provocations.)

MP brings a sign for Stanley's war graves

ON Monday, visiting British MP and Shadow Defence Minister Kevan Jones, acting in his capacity as Commissioner of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, visited Stanley's cemetery on Ross Road East. His purpose was to deliver a plaque designed to inform the public that there are official war graves within the cemetery.

The Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC) is an inter-governmental organisation of six independent member states whose principal function is to mark, record and maintain the graves, and places of commemoration, of Commonwealth of Nations military service members who died in the two World Wars.

There are over 2,500 such sites around the world in over 150 countries, so the plaque which was accepted and later mounted on the cemetery's fence by Rob Yssel is just one of several hundred to be distributed in coming weeks and months.

Rob Yssel is the person responsible for the maintenance of the military graves here. He and local historian John Smith were present at the cemetery to meet Mr Jones. They were joined by Glen Williams of the Public Works Department, who has over all responsibility for the Stanley Cemetery.

On Saturday they had again been on duty at the cemetery to meet His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, who is President of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission.

At the mercy of the storm

The second part of the story of the sinking of the Oravia by 'The Commodore.' Stuck fast on the Billy Rock, late on November 12, 1912, in rough and windy conditions, passengers and crew await rescue by whalers and the local vessels: Sampson, Penguin and Plym.

OWING to the rough sea none of the whalers could come alongside and to make matters worse the wind increased in violence and thick raining weather set in. Some of those in the life boats were then transferred to the whale catchers.

Mrs Felton quotes in her account, "Our officer in charge and a crew of men knew nothing at all about pulling an oar. The result was we were drifting out to sea and getting further away when the Samson arrived and dear old Captain Henry Thomas happened to see us, just as we were going out of sight and he came after us. They shouted for him to go to the Oravia, but he kept right on and got us and I feel so thankful that he had the sense to do it for I shudder to think what might have happened, as our boat was leaking badly. I hope I am not a coward but I must confess I felt simply terrified in that pouring rain, the harsh voices of the men shouting orders all combined and the knowledge that our crew did not know a thing about boats. I just clutched Louis tight and I could not speak a word. I could scarcely breathe".

The Penguin as she then was

The Government pilot launch Penguin, under command of Captain Smith was the first vessel alongside the wreck and took off the remaining women, children and some men.

Captain Thomas handled Samson with great skill and brought the tug alongside, also with a great sea running and loaded all remaining passengers on board. It was thought the tug carried near 300 people.

Captain Poole and his crew remained on board Oravia salvaging everything possible from below.

The first vessel arrived back at the public jetty at 3 am Wednesday morning and it was still raining hard. Passengers were sent to the customs house and drill shed near the East jetty. Governor Allardyce and his staff and most of the leading people in Stanley were present. At that time there were around 800 people living in Stanley and with such a large number of passengers to find accommodation for, Allardyce appealed to the people of the town to be prepared to receive into their houses any of the ship wrecked passengers and crew requiring shelter.

All the hotels and plenty of houses were soon full. Some were unable to get beds but they had warm fires to sit by and coffee and soup awaiting them.

Townson writes, "Buckworth could not find his wife who was on another boat, so we went and had a very stiff whisky and soda twice and it was the best drink I think I ever tasted."

During the day of the 13th some of the mail was brought ashore by the FIC Tender Plym, with Captain Jones at the helm. Sampson and other vessels attended to bring the baggage ashore and what cargo could be saved, including a quantity of rams from New Zealand for the Islands that had been loaded in Montevideo.

16 out of the 23 shipped were saved and only seven rams and two puppies were lost.

In the Falkland Journal in 2000, in an article by David Luxton, Trevor Hooley aged 95 recalls as an eight year old boy being down the jetty to have some salvaged salt water damaged chocolate thrown by the tug crew to the curious boys on the jetty and saving a penny or two.

The day continued with a gale blowing and a big sea running and about 5pm on Wednesday 13th an urgent wireless message was sent from Oravia saying the ship had to be abandoned. At 6pm the crew of 120 were transferred to Sampson, Captain Poole being last to leave the ship. The crew were taken to the naval base and quarantine station at the Camber, where Mr Harding the FIC Manager had prepared accommodation for them, while the Captain and officers were landed in Stanley and given a rousing good cheer.

PSNC's Oronsa

All the passengers were loud in their praise for all that had been done for them by Captain Poole and his crew and were surprised that all their luggage had been saved. Not even their loose clothes or other unpacked items from the cabins were omitted; they were all in pillow cases or sheet bundles with the cabin number on marked on them.

The F.I. Church Magazine for December 1912 reports that "The hospitality and kind solicitude of the people of Port Stanley is beyond praise. They vied with each other in attending to the homeless passengers".

On Thursday, another visit was made to the wreck, but with a big sea running, the mast half gone and the hull washed by the seas it was silly to think of boarding her as it was so dangerous. All the cargo and half of the parcel post remained on board.

A testimonial was organised for the Captain and officers and a concert in aid of the crew by the "Oravia Blackbirds" was arranged in the Church Rooms by Harry Townson on 25th and 26th November. Twenty four pounds and nine shillings were given to the crew, and the passengers handed over a further twenty three pounds. On the Sunday a thanksgiving service was held which nearly all attended and the Cathedral and the Catholic Church were filled to overflowing.

Port Stanley is only a small settlement and the services rendered by its inhabitants will be appreciated better when it is realised that they sheltered and fed, almost at a moment's notice, an additional fifty per cent of destitute persons.

On Monday 18th the PSNC vessel Huanchaco called and embarked all 3rd class passengers and a few 2nd and 1st class, taking them to their onward destinations and the remaining 1st class passengers and officers and crew were collected by PSNC steamer Oronsa, a larger sister vessel of Oravia on 28th November.

St Helena Airport

3rd November marked one year since the start of the St Helena Airport Project. With progress on the airport well underway, the island is poised to undergo an economic transformation. This is the most exciting and important period of St Helena history for perhaps 150 years.

St Helenian Airport Project Director, Janet Lawrence said, "Being involved in the project on a day to day basis it's easy to lose track of how quickly time is flying and how far we've come. The one year anniversary of the signing of the airport contract is an opportunity to compare the situation then with now. We've completed the temporary jetty and established the temporary fuel storage facility in Ruperts, the haul road to Prosperous Bay Plain is complete, and construction works have started on Prosperous Bay Plain. To have reached all of these milestones on time, on budget and to specification is major achievement and I have to say a huge thank you to everyone involved. We will be keeping up the pace with the work at the airport site. Watch this space!"

Royal visitor joins 1982 vets in Remembrance Act

ALTHOUGH not as challenging as the climatic conditions which had delayed the arrival of the air bridge on Thursday and turned the Act of Remembrance held at San Carlos into an ordeal by wind, rain and hail, there was a threat of rain and a bite in the wind on Saturday night as a sizeable crowd gathered at the Liberation Monument. It was cold enough, in fact, to make many feel that the calendar had somehow slipped back to June 14, which is when the people of the Falklands usually celebrate their liberation in 1982 and pay their tributes to those who achieved it for them.

There were, however, significant differences: for one, the presence of His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, whose visit to the Falklands was part of a programme of Royal visits to all of Her Majesty the Queen's present and past dominions to celebrate her Diamond Jubilee. Tall, dignified and elegant in his long grey great coat, the Duke walked with the Governor to the Liberation Monument from Government House and laid a wreath on behalf of Her

At this parade the usual detachments of Falkland Islands Defence Force and units of the three branches of the British armed forces represented in the Islands were absent. Their place was ably and smartly filled by the visiting group of sixty veterans of the Conflict in 1982 and local veterans, including former members of the Defence Force.

Helped no doubt by the stirring accompaniment of the band of the Royal Marines Scotland resplendent in their best blues and white pith helmets, the veterans showed that the intervening thirty years had done nothing to diminish their military bearing and marching ability. Rightly, at the end of the ceremony as they marched past the Memorial, where HRH Duke, the Governor and the Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands took the salute, they were roundly applauded by all present.

As always, the service, which was led by the Rev Dr Richard Hines, was moving, but for the veterans and for many locals too, the most moving part may have come just before the traditional two minutes silence, when the names of all those members of the British Forces who died were read out, together with the names of the three civilian ladies also killed. Enunciated clearly at an even pace by a variety of Falkland Islands residents, this recital of so many names, some well-known and others perhaps known only to close friends, former comrades and family, took some time, giving the listeners ample opportunity to reflect both on just how many lives were sacrificed for our freedom, but also on the pain associated with each loss, whether of a high ranking British officer or a humble Hong Kong laundry man.

At the reception in the Town Hall following the parade, MLA Mike Summers addressed the veterans' party. He stressed that their presence was not only welcome, but also extremely important for us, as he hoped that it would be for them.

In reply, founding member of SAMA 82, Lt Col (Retd.) Tony Davies OBE spoke warmly of the friendly and kind reception that SAMA members had always received in the Islands from Islanders and particularly gave thanks to all involved in the establishment and running of Liberty Lodge, which he describes as a magnificent facility.

Colonel Davies also took the opportunity to thank the two visiting members of the British Parliament present: Kevan Jones and Mark Lancaster for the support given to Falklands veterans by governments of both parties during the last ten years. Referring in particular to the permission granted to SAMA members to obtain indulgence flights when visiting the Islands, and the granting of concessionary rates in this anniversary year, he said that SAMA was the only military veterans association that had been granted these important privileges.

Addressing himself directly to the visiting party of veterans, all of whom were returning to the Falklands for the first time since 1982, Colonel Davies urged them to talk to locals and enjoy the hospitality offered. At times, coming back might be hard and there could be tears, but that was all part of the healing process and there was no shame in it.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

SILENT HILL: REVELATION 3D (15) 94 mins Horror. Heather Mason and her father have been on the run, always one step ahead of dangerous forces that she doesn't fully understand. Plagued by horrific nightmares and the disappearance of her father, Heather discovers she's not who she thinks she is, a revelation that leads her deeper into a demonic world. Sean Bean, Kit Harrington
MADAGASCAR 3: EUROPE'S MOST WANTED 3D (PG) 93 mins Family. Alex, Marty, Gloria and Melman are still fighting to get home and their journey takes them through Europe where they find the perfect cover: a travelling circus, which they reinvent - Madagascar style. Ben Stiller, Jade Pinkett Smith
SINISTER (15) 109 mins Horror. A crime novelist uncovers more than he could ever have feared when he moves into a new home. Discovering that the previous occupants were brutally murdered, he finds a box of home movies that fast forward him and his family into a supernatural nightmare. Ethan Hawke,

Vincent D'Onofrio
LOOPER (15) 118 mins Sci-fi. In the year 2042, a mob hitman assassinates targets that arrive from the future of 2072. For him it's just a job until he receives a new target: himself from the future. Emily Blunt, Joseph Gordon-Levitt
FRANKENWEENIE 3D (PG) 87 mins Animation. Young Victor conducts a science experiment to bring his beloved dog Sparky back to life, only to face unintended, sometimes monstrous, consequences. Winona Ryder, Catherine O'Hara
THE SWEENEY (15) 112 mins Action. Seventies cop classic 'The Sweeney' returns to the big screen, this time with the action switched to modern-day London and Ray Winstone as Jack Regan; the tough Flying Squad detective with a most unconventional approach to coppering. Ray Winstone, Damian Lewis

The Wool Market Report - 8 November 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A DROP was seen this week leaving the closing AWEX at 1,003AUS/cents/kg a decrease of 43 cents. This was expected after the recent rise in prices and the large sale last week. We have returned back to the prices seen at the start of October before the upturn.

Australia was not alone in its lack of demand from buyers, many of which may have purchased all they needed in the last 3 weeks leaving the market potentially flat until new interest returns. New Zealand saw low sale rates of 75%, and South African prices fell nearly 4% last week after also seeing steady rises previously.

For UK Wool Week this October knitters carried out a long distance knit-against-the-clock on a cross country train that was The Clickety Click on the Clickety Click. The knitters completed a Union Jack flag, with the completed flag flying proudly as the train pulled into Kings Cross, accompanied by 30 contented but exhausted knitters.

AMAZINGLY given that on Thursday the wind had ripped down all the bunting strung between the lamp posts on Ross Road, the Remembrance Sunday parade to the Cross of Sacrifice, which followed the annual thanksgiving service in the Cathedral, took place in warm, sunny and virtually windless conditions.

Graced once again by the presence of HRH the Duke of Kent, who laid a wreath on behalf of her Majesty the Queen, the parade was swelled by visiting veterans, armed detachments of Her Majesty's Forces, the Falkland Islands Defence Force and uniformed youth groups.

Wreaths were also laid by His Excellency the Governor, Mr Nigel Hayward, the Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands Brigadier Bill Aldridge, MLA Dick Sawle and others, both representatives of associations and private individuals.

St Helena Airport Project.

Client: St Helena Government

Founder: Department for International Development (UK Government Department)

Project Value

Phase 1 Design and Construction: £216 million

Phase 2 Operation: £38 million

Project Duration:

Phase 1 51 months (completion Feb 2016)

Phase 2 10 Years

Project Works

- 14 km Access Road from Ruperts Valley to Airport site
- Bulk Fuel Installation for 6 million litres
- Drill blast and fill 8 million m³ of rock. Maximum height of fill is 100m
- Terminal building, ATC tower and other miscellaneous buildings
- Drainage culvert under the fill for 750m
- Concrete runway of 2 000m
- Airport ground lighting
- Navigational aids
- Air traffic control equipment
- Airport operational equipment (fire engines, ambulance, tow units, etc.)

Temporary works include a temporary jetty, fuel storage for 1.5 million litres of diesel and water pumping of up to 3 million litres per day, workforce accommodation, workshops and offices.

Logistics

The majority of goods and equipment from various parts of the world are sent to Walvis Bay, South Africa, for consolidation before being sent to St Helena aboard Basil Read's 3,500t vessel. Up to 100,000t of goods will be transported to the Island during the project including 22 million litres of diesel, 25,000t of cement and 5,500t of explosives.

Work Force - the majority of the workforce is from St Helena and should peak at around 250.

Main companies that are subcontracted to Basil Read include: Worley Parsons – lead design; Virtual Consulting – airside design; KMH and TPSP Architects; Atkins and WSP – Independent Certifiers; PRDW - marine; Lanseria Airport International; Thales – AGL, NavAids; SAIEA - Environmental; Trotech – Bulk Fuel.

Growing St Helena's Economy

The airport will provide a significant opportunity for the island to begin to move to better economic sustainability and self-sufficiency. This will benefit the whole population of the island over time, and mean positive improvements in many aspects of island life. However, the airport is just one part of the jigsaw. In the coming months and years there are huge opportunities for people to create, develop and invest in businesses on St Helena. Tourism has been identified as the key economic driver, but there are many other areas that offer opportunity too. These include agriculture, fishing and a whole range of professional services.

Enterprise St Helena is the non-governmental organization responsible for the economic development of St Helena. Its activities include: tourism; a property portfolio of commercial retail, office and tourism development sites; support for on-island and international investors; finance and investment; industry development programmes for the tourism, fishing, agriculture, 'green' initiatives, construction and wider sectors; support and advisory services to local businesses; training and up-skilling; and international promotion.

The island's national vision is "To Create a sustainable and vibrant economy for the benefit of the island, whilst creating opportunities for all."

Courteous kids knock cricket coach for six

Paul Barsby with Year 5 students

ROYAL Navy Cricket Coach Paul Barsby, who is visiting the islands to help to train Falkland Islands Cricket Club for their forthcoming tour of the West Indies, kindly made time to visit the Infant and Junior School on Wednesday to coach some of the pupils.

Mr Barsby said what struck him most was the standard of behaviour of the children at IJS, and noted he had never heard so many children say "please" and "thank you," and was particularly impressed with the sportsmanship they showed clapping each other and taking turns.

The enthusiastic coach has had a busy schedule, spending several days in school and training our national squad in the evenings. During his visit he handed over a "Kwik Cricket" set for the school to use, donated by the Royal Navy. Headteacher of IJS/Camp Ed Tom Hill said, "this is a fantastic opportunity for the children to benefit from the visit of a leading professional coach."

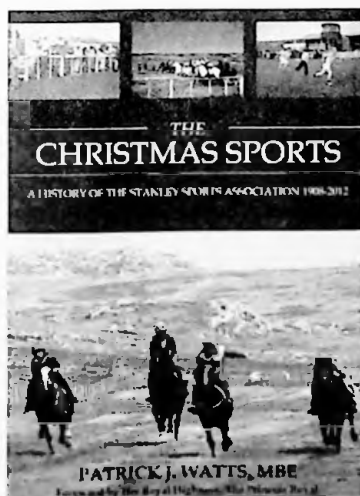

The fruits of a magnificent obsession

MANY years ago in the Camp in Lafonia and maybe elsewhere in the Islands, disputes about past events could often be solved by consulting the inside of cupboard doors. Whether for lack of paper, or because of a desire for a more permanent record, the cupboard door was often where a house's chronicle of events was written.

Given that for over forty years Patrick Watts has commented on every Christmas meeting of the Stanley Sports Association, bar one, it is not at all surprising that for many people he has become the equivalent of that useful source of information, particularly for school children busy compiling their entries for the Alistair and Jane Cameron Local History Competition.

In the introduction to his long-awaited book: The Christmas Sports, a History of the Stanley Sports Association 1908-2012, Patrick describes how his efforts to provide interested youngsters with accurate information, led him to realise just how lacking his own knowledge was in certain respects.

It was this realisation that soon evolved into an obsession, leading to the magnificent volume which was launched at Government House on Thursday evening, and is now on sale exclusively at the

The handsome front cover

Capstan Gift Shop, where Patrick will be available from 10am today, Friday, to sign copies.

Much of the book - which in honour to Patrick's own mother's Lafonia origins we might call 'the cupboard door part' - is taken up with the records of every event run during a Christmas Sports from 1908 to 2011, both on horseback and on foot.

In the case of the horse races, even the most obscure and rarely competed, like the race over 500 yards held in 1949 for jockeys born in the UK, we learn the names of the first, second and third horses with their jockeys and often their owners.

This meticulously researched information is supplemented by a host of photographs garnered from many local collections. Here again, Patrick's obsession for accuracy is in evidence as in many cases even random bystanders are identified.

There is also Patrick's well-researched history of the Sports Association, which is rightly described as "fascinating" by no less a person than Her Royal Highness, Princess Anne, in a specially written foreword.

Too big for most stockings with 260 A4 pages, this is a book, which anyone interested in the social history of the Falklands as well as 'The Sport of Kings' will be delighted to find under their Christmas tree.

ON Saturday eleven golfers played in the annual skins game, with Ian Stewart, Wayne Clement and Tony McMullen winning the pot in their respective groupings.

The origin of the term 'skin' is unclear, from furrers gambling their pelts at golf centuries ago to 'skinning' your opponent.

This weekend is the popular White Rock competition Carole and Rodney Lee are your hosts for the second in the series of Island Games Qualifiers. The event is a Stableford format but players wishing their score to count towards Bermuda need to remember to hole out. Members are asked to sign in by 9:00 for a 9:15 tee-off.

Goodbye Sir Rex

There will of course be many richly deserved tributes to Sir Rex Hunt from around the world. His place in the history of the Falkland Islands is secure but here we focus simply and briefly on his golfing legacy.

The earliest recorded archive for the sport of golf that we have been able to find to date; is the January 1900 journal entry that simply states "The Gentlemen of Stanley met and formed Stanley Golf Club."

Over the last hundred years, our golf club has ebbed and flowed and enjoyed at least three venues. It was back in 1983 that Sir Rex Hunt and other golfing enthusiasts such as Alex Smith led the modern rebirth and mapped out the current layout in the 60 acre paddock. The depth of thought that went into the design of the course is clear as it survives essentially unchanged.

Our 18th Hole, "Hunts Home" is the testing and tactical par 5 which has seen many an Open won and lost.

Sir Rex was instrumental in bringing the famous Ryder Cup Captain Bernard Gallagher to the Falklands in 1998.

Sir Rex was the President of our club and it is a testament to his vision that the Falklands now have a thriving and growing golf club. Our deepest sympathy goes out to his family and friends.

Politics or weather - cancelling cruise ship companies offer mixed messages

THE Falkland Islands cruise tourism industry has worryingly been receiving mixed messages from cruise companies regarding why two large vessels, Veendam and AIDAcara have cancelled visits to the Islands.

Long time visitor the Holland America ship Veendam has cancelled her Friday call to Stanley and future visits for the remainder are uncertain. Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) and Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) Chair Mike Summers said this week.

However, up until very recently the ship's agents locally, the Falkland Islands Company (FIC) had been told that the vessel was scheduled to call on a "weather dependent basis," this season. Despite good weather the vessel has already bypassed the Islands, and Managing Director of the FIC Roger Spink, told Penguin News

he was still waiting to hear the reasons for the most recent cancellations.

MLA Summers announced to FITB Members on Wednesday this week that he was in touch with the FIC with regard to the situation and: "We are very active on the issue with both HAL and Carnival at a number of levels."

He added: "As the representative body for tourism in the Falkland Islands we are engaged on this and take it very seriously. We fully understand the importance to a large number of local businesses. Once there is any information we will advise."

Since the last cruise season when Veendam cancelled a number of visits it had been rumoured locally that the ship's company was under political pressure from Argentina to cease her trips to the Falklands, and that despite scheduling visits to the Islands for this season there had been no real intention to visit.

Penguin News attempted to make contact with the Holland America Public Relations Office in the USA but has yet to receive a response.

With regard to Carnival vessel AIDAcara, Sullivan Shipping Services Limited, agents for the cruise vessel, announced yesterday that the ship had cancelled her December 3 visit, "due to the current situation in Argentina," (according to Carnival).

Sullivan Shipping Tourism Co-ordinator Samantha Marsh explained that Carnival had not specified what, "the current situation," in fact referred to but it could be interpreted as the general strikes taking place in Argentina, which had been described in the South American press as having paralysed the country.

However, at the FIC, Mr Spink said he had been informed by Carnival that the AIDAcara would not visit the Islands due to loss of income if the AIDAcara was forced to bypass Stanley due to, "heavy weather, winds and waves."

Biggest Camp fire ever

WHAT has been described as the biggest camp fire ever on the Falklands mainland has been keeping the Fire and Rescue Service busy all week. Six of Stanley's Fire Service employees have been working up to fourteen and a half hours each day directing and coordinating the efforts of up to 90 military personnel from Mount Pleasant.

Unconfirmed reports suggest that the fire began on Wednesday November 14, at the Onion Range, during the military's Cape Bayonet exercise (held every two months) and was probably as a result of small arms fire with tracer bullets. The same source indicates that a decision not to fight the fire immediately after it began was taken in order not to lose the momentum of the exercise.

HQ BFSAI responded by saying that due to hot weather the grass had become very dry and in such conditions local fires were common and could be caused by a variety of factors.

The statement noted: "The nature of the training undertaken during live-firing exercises can result in small fires. As responsible land-users, we understand that this risk exists and we continually monitor the range for any fires that may have been inadvertently started, but these usually burn themselves out without any need for intervention.

"When it became apparent that, because of the particularly dry weather conditions and the wind, the small fires started during the exercise posed a wider threat, BFSAI took prompt and appropriate action. A large number of military personnel, equipment and helicopters have been deployed to the vicinity of Onion Range and are continuing to make strenuous efforts to put the fires out in support of the civil fire services."

The local Fire and Rescue Service received a call for help from the military authorities at 3pm on Monday November 19 and were given command of the situation as the fire was by then on civilian-owned land.

Besides personnel, they now have all their available equipment, including Land Rovers, quad bikes, water pumps and hoses on the scene. Also deployed has been the RAF Search and Rescue helicopter with a rain maker attachment, and a military fire-fighting battle vehicle. Unfortunately, a bulldozer and a mechanical digger also supplied by the military, were unable to reach the area of the fire.

Due to the dryness of the season, the fire escaped from Onion Range and began heading East at speed, and on Thursday it was reported to be just one kilometre from the Malo River.

Described by the Fire Service as, "very aggressive," in one night alone, the fire is reported to have travelled 2kms. Estimates of the area currently affected state that it is some 20 to 21kms in length and 4kms wide.

Hopes that rain on Tuesday night and the early part of Wednesday night put out the fire were soon dashed. As one observer commented: "Once the sun came out again, so the flames re-appeared." Efforts were still continuing Thursday to contain the fire and prevent it heading north towards Evelyn Station.

Funds for port

£1,720,410 has been approved by FIG to progress the design of the new port at Port William to the point of, 'concept' design and to employ professional, legal, and specific site investigations.

£150,000 had earlier been approved to begin the design process and architects are currently being recruited. It is believed initial design can be delivered by early 2013 and the port by early 2017. Site investigations will provide knowledge of the shape and depth of the bay, check for unexploded ordnance and ascertain the need for a breakwater as well as look at the ground conditions for shore based facilities. FIG will underwrite investment until private sector funding becomes available, or if none does will provide the services themselves on an understanding this can be recouped over time through negotiating a 'forward funded, lease-type' arrangement, with the oil and gas industry to provide the facility.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

DESPITE PN staff expressing confusion on Tuesday that it had taken Gilbert House an entire month to publicly release a response to unfortunate comments made in the Argentine press by UN Decolonisation Committee (C24) Chair, Diego Morejón Pazmiño; one particular sentence penned by MLA Elsby did make me blink at how times have changed in terms of our approach to that particular organisation.

According to the letter from Gilbert House dated October 18, 2012: "The Decolonisation Committee is seen by most people as an out-dated, ineffective and partial Committee."

Interesting, because many years ago during my first stint as Editor I made similarly derogative comments about the C24 (OK I might additionally have hinted at a degree of alleged 'back-scratching' between C24 members) and the reaction from our government to the Media Trust was that I should immediately publish a written apology to the C24 for my words.

My opinion of such an anachronistic institution hasn't changed in the slightest and I'm fairly certain that the councillors of the time felt the same; the difference in recent years is we seem to have grown the balls to point it out.

Still on the subject of the Members of Legislative Assembly, MLA Cheek draws attention in page 4 column to next year's General Election. While she outlines a number of often repeated concerns in relation to that subject, it might also be timely to recall another much less mentioned likely consequence of an ensuing election: that being a creeping consciousness on the part of current representatives of the need to be 'electionable' as opposed to simply effective.

To what extent electioneering awareness impacts on the thoughts of the Assembly is difficult to measure at this stage, but as November 2013 comes closer it isn't out of the question that should it weigh too heavily, then the potential exists (as it does every four years) for decisions to be made in an ill-considered manner in order to garner popularity in the short term.

The Tourist Board this week officially acknowledged the 'open secret' (not my words but beautifully accurate) that the Veendam will not be making a Falklands appearance this season. I think FITB can rest assured that few local businesses would have anticipated income from her passengers in their budget forecasts for this season. In the longer term though the great worry is why we've lost her; economics or political interference; allegedly the latter.

Flora and Jasmine explore the tussac

FOR the third year running, lucky children from Year 2 were able to visit Kidney Island thanks to the generous support of the Environmental Planning Department. Four trips took place over two days and the weather was glorious for all of them.

The children explored the beach and the tussac, looking at the habitats of different creatures living on the islands. They saw jumping jacks, Cobb's wrens, tussac birds, magellanic penguins, dolphins, sea lions and very excitingly, an elephant seal pup. The children used materials produced by Clare Cockwell of the Protected Areas Strategy.

"We had lots of enthusiastic helpers and would like to thank them for giving up time to spend a beautiful couple of days in the sunshine with us. Without their help the trip would not be possible," said Teacher Robin Cooper.

Infant and Junior students receive letter from the Queen

Year Six students with the letter

YEAR 6 received royal thanks this week from Her Majesty the Queen, responding to a letter they wrote to her last year. Head Teacher Tom Hill said "Mrs McMullen was so impressed that she hand delivered the letter to their classroom on a silver tray."

The Queen thanked the children for their letter and said how much she appreciated all their hard work on a project about her Diamond Jubilee, and that she enjoyed hearing of the school.

Her Majesty regretted that she was unable to visit the Infant and Junior School herself this year as the children had requested, but they remain hopeful to see her in the future.

Georgia seafoods in China

FALKLAND'S fishing company Georgia Seafoods joined Scottish and English seafood producers to exhibit as part of the UK pavilion at the China Fisheries & Seafood Exposition held in Dalian, China last week.

A representative of the company, assisted by a translator, promoted the company's products: Patagonian and Antarctic Toothfish to importers and distributors from all over Asia.

The show has become the largest seafood event in the world and over 18,000 visitors from 80 different countries attended this year. A spokesperson for Georgia Seafoods told Penguin News: "Places sold out early despite a new hall being added for this year's show."

He explained that Chinese seafood production and exports are growing but the domestic demand for premium seafood such as lobster, crab and high quality wild-caught whitefish that cannot be farm-raised continues to rise dramatically.

Toothfish is considered a staple fish in gourmet Asian cooking because the firm thick flesh retains juiciness so well after cooking. It is most commonly sold in restaurrants and hotels as Miso Glazed French Cod, which relates to the Japanese method of preparation that made the fish famous in US restaurants and the origin of Toothfish that is most commonly marketed to Asia.

Chefs on the UK pavilion prepared samples of Georgia Seafood fish and visitors were invited to compare the two species of Toothfish: Patagonian Toothfish, which is the species caught around the Falklands and South Georgia, and Antarctic Toothfish, which is found further South off the Antarctic continental shelf. The taste and texture of both species were widely accepted as identical.

The company also sponsored a Taste of Britain reception evening. Falklands Patagonian squid and Toothfish were served to invited guests.

Georgia Seafood is the operator of the Falklands longliner Tromo which fishes in the MSC South Georgia Patagonian Toothfish fishery and the MSC Ross Sea Antarctic Toothfish fishery.

Plan concerns

MUCH time was spent during Monday's public meeting in the discussion of FIG's planning procedures.

St. Mary's Walk resident, Phil Middleton, voiced the concern that what he called, "commercial interests," were being allowed to go ahead with developments which would require the re-alignment of roads and seriously affect both road traffic management and the whole appearance of the historic centre of Stanley. He suggested that decisions about large scale developments in Stanley's centre should be subject to the approval of the whole Legislative Assembly, as, "representatives of the people," rather than being left, as at present, to the Planning Committee.

Mr Middleton was assured by the MLAs' panel that all planning applications would need to take traffic management into account and also included a consultation process. Not only were residents immediately adjacent to any proposal notified, but planning applications were listed in local media and could be inspected in detail, before any decision about them was made.

MLA Mike Summers did admit that he thought it unfortunate that objectors to a planning application did not have the same right of appeal as applicants for whom permission had been denied.

MLA Summers also informed the meeting that a decision had been taken to review the existing Town Plan, a process which would also be open to consultation.

Shed refused

THE suggestion that the Falkland Islands Government had refused to allow the Museum and National Trust to keep the PWD Carpenter's shop, as part of the Museum's relocation to the Government Dockyard, was denied by MLAs at Monday's public meeting.

MLA Dick Sawle said that estimates made some time ago of the cost of refurbishing the shed to bring it up to the required standard to fit in with other museum buildings had come in at some £212,000. This would have severely bitten into the agreed project budget of £1.8 million and was therefore probably part of the reason why the Museum and National Trust had opted to exclude it from their plans.

This decision was entirely up to the Museum and National Trust, but there were other contributory issues, in particular the need to locate the required public toilets in the area currently occupied by the carpenters' shop.

A tribute to Fred

FLAGS will be flown at half mast across the Falkland Islands Government on the day of Gerard 'Fred' Robson's funeral, in recognition of his 35 years of service to FIG and his time as a member of the Legislative Council the government has announced.

Attorney General Mark Lewis said: "In the Attorney General's Chambers we have had the privilege of working with Fred for many years, and valued him greatly as both a friend and colleague. He was genuinely one of life's lovely people, and we will miss him greatly. My thoughts and greatest sympathies are with his family and countless friends."

Chief Executive Keith Padgett, said: "Fred was one of the Falkland Islands Governments longest serving staff, who for 35 years worked for the good of our Islands and our community. As a teacher and house parent at Stanley House, his warmth and personality touched many people."

"He also worked in both the Departments of Agriculture and Legislature, and since 1993 has worked in various roles with the Department of Civil Aviation.

Fred also served on Legislative Council, making numerous contributions to our home that will never be forgotten. We are grateful for all that he did, and will miss him profoundly. My deepest sympathies are with his family, friends and colleagues at this terrible time."

Nostalgic night

PATRICK Watts chats with Mrs Sheila Hadden after presenting her with a copy of his book on the Christmas Sports, which was launched at Government House on the evening of Thursday, November 15. During an amusing speech about how his book came to be written, Patrick paid tribute to the help he had received from Mr and Mrs Hadden and pointed out that in 1953, riding Sinfonia, Mrs Hadden became the first-ever lady to win the Governor's Cup.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

AN independent review of members' remuneration is now underway and it will encompass a range of related issues. It is planned that the group's report will be ready in time for some recommendations, if approved, to be implemented in time for the next general election. Some feel that the current system of allowances is insufficient to attract more candidates and there is no doubt that the workload is increasing year by year to the point where MLAs need to be virtually full time. There will be a fairly lengthy consultation period and I'm sure the group will welcome different views and ideas. Any change or increase in allowances would be in place for the next Assembly, in keeping with the accepted practice that members do not vote themselves more money.

Another idea being mooted is a possible increase in the number of members as there has been a problem in getting quorums for meetings in the last couple of years with so much overseas activity. If there is general agreement, that would take longer because it would require an amendment to the constitution. There is also discussion around the eligibility of civil servants to stand for election and whether all might be able to stand conditional upon resigning the civil service job if elected to avoid possible conflicts. This raises a question of job security, although my personal view is that if your priority is job security then politics is probably not your best bet.

Whatever is done, I do hope it ensures a great selection of candidates next November and that those elected will have time to do the job properly. At the risk of boring people I'll say again, if you are considering putting yourself forward as a candidate start studying committee minutes (available by e-mail from the Secretariat), Gazettes, the Constitution and any other available government papers. Unless you have a working knowledge of FIG procedures you will find it hard to be effective. The electorate have the right to expect candidates to have shown some initiative by informing themselves and not expecting to be 'spoon fed' everything.

Sir Rex Hunt

An abridged and edited version of an obituary by Harold Briley

SIR Rex Hunt said he had the longest title and one of the biggest areas of the Commonwealth to administer, as "Governor of the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Shetland Islands, British High Commissioner for the Antarctic Territories and Commander in Chief of the British Forces, Falkland Islands."

He told visitors he was responsible for, "eighteen-hundred people, six-hundred thousand sheep and six million penguins." And the people, he said, were "more British than the British. Where else do they know the second verse of the National Anthem?"

As Governor, Sir Rex, with Lady Hunt, was host to many prestigious people, including most senior members of the Royal Family, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, with whom there grew friendship and mutual respect forged by their experiences of the invasion.

Hunt was an unusual diplomat with none of the stuffiness or formality sometimes associated with that profession. He managed to retain the dignity and ceremonial duties of a colonial governor with a genial and welcoming disposition which endeared him to all walks of life. He was a man of the people, as much at home drinking tea in the Islanders' remote home-steads or quaffing a beer in Stanley pubs, as clinking champagne glasses in the corridors of power.

Sir Rex and Mavis met with hostility in London due to their identification with Islanders' aspirations to avoid the forced integration with Argentina which seemed to be Foreign Office policy before 1982.

They made many friends in the Falkland Islands, including their chauffeur, Don Bonner, who drove them around Stanley in a red London taxi. This was an unusual vehicle for a governor but Rex Hunt, who was short in stature, would explain that with its generous headroom it was the only vehicle which a governor with his plumed hat and sword could enter without falling over.

In retirement, Sir Rex continued supporting the Islanders as chairman of the Falkland Islands Association, the Falkland Islands Trust, and the Shackleton Scholarship Fund. He was welcomed back to the Islands seven times, including the tenth and 25th anniversaries of the conflict.

Sir Rex was educated at Cad-man School and Saint Peter's College, Oxford. He joined the Royal Air Force in 1944, and served as a Spitfire pilot in India and Germany. He returned to Oxford in 1948 to complete a law degree.

He joined the Overseas Civil Service in 1951 as a district commissioner in Uganda. Subsequent diplomatic posts took him to Sarawak, Brunei, Turkey, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Foreign Office Middle East Department, and South Vietnam. When Saigon was invaded, Rex Hunt was one of the last diplomats to leave the British Embassy.

The award of the CMG in 1980, was followed by a knighthood in October 1982.

Rex Hunt was Governor or Civil Commissioner in the Falkland Islands from 1980 to 1985, creating a bond with the Islanders which, he said, "would last until we die".

Rex Masterman Hunt was born in Redcar, Yorkshire, on June 29 1926, the son of William Hunt and Ivy (nee Masterman). He died in hospital on November 11, 2012. He married Mavis Amanda Buckland from Chingford in Essex, and they had two children, Diana and Anthony.

Jamie follows in Grandad Dinks footsteps

JAMIE Lee Jennings, granddaughter of Islander now living in the Shetland Islands 'Dinks' Jennings, is following in her granddad's seafaring footsteps having just won a prestigious prize for her studies presented by the NAFC Marine Centre. The centre is part of the University of the Highlands and Islands.

Jamie (daughter of Beverley) was presented with The Northern Lighthouse Board (Deck Cadet) prize on November 12 at the centre's annual prize giving.

Praising her achievement, Head of Shetland School of Nautical Studies Jan Rigden said: "Jamie is a very worthy winner of this award, being very focussed during lessons, happy to help others and getting good results in class and excellent reports at sea. Jamie has a strong family connection to the sea, being the granddaughter of that well known Shetland/Falklands seafarer Delano Jennings, fondly known as Dinks." Jamie was sponsored by Northstar Shipping through the Ship Safe Training Group.

Jamie said: "I have been aiming towards winning this award so I'm thrilled to have met that goal and to be rewarded for my hard work. I'm going to save my prize money and spend it on further study in order to develop my career."

Healing Falklands visits systematically evaluated

GROUPS of British veterans of the 1982 Conflict are always welcome in the Falkland Islands, but the recent visit of fifty was special, as will be the one planned for January, according to Lieutenant Colonel (Retd) Tony Davies.

Lt. Colonel Davies, himself a Falklands veteran, one of the three founding members of SAMA 82 and now Life Vice President of that organisation, told Penguin News that the reason for including only first-time returnees in both groups was to facilitate an attempt to monitor the effects, beneficial or otherwise, of such visits.

All the participants had received questionnaires before the visit and would also be questioned on their return to the UK.

In addition, leaders of each service group represented would also be asked to make a report on their members' experiences while in the Falklands.

This was the first time, according to Lt. Col. Davies, that a systematic attempt had been made to evaluate the effectiveness of such visits, as part of the healing process for those who might still be suffering the effects of their experiences in 1982.

Lt. Col. Davies accompanied the recent group visit with his wife Beverley. Mrs Davies was making her first visit to the Falklands, unlike her husband who has visited any times.

Now Acting Head of Commu-

Lieutenant Colonel (Retd) Tony Davies and Mrs Davies

nity Services for the Royal British Legion, but with a long career as a military nurse behind her, including service in the first Gulf War as an officer with 22 Field Hospital, Mrs Davies is no stranger to military welfare issues.

The couple, who married in 2004, intend to visit the Falklands together in 2014, but this time, on holiday. In the meantime, we will see Lt. Col. Davies visiting what his wife now regards as, "his spiritual home," again in January with the next SAMA group.

One of the prime movers behind the establishment of Liberty Lodge, Lt. Col. Davies said he believed that its future was assured, however, its use by veterans at the present level would depend to a great extent on the continued availability to them of indulgence flights on the air bridge.

He said that the availability of concessionary flights to veterans' family members in this anniversary year had been of great benefit, but accepted that this would cease at the end of December.

1. What is your most prized possession? My greenhouse

2. If you had a motto, what would it be? I'd have a couple: 'Nolli illegitimi carborundum esse' from my school days, and 'every day above ground is a bonus' (Biker Billy)

3. What is your most embarrassing moment? I've probably had loads but my memory is thankfully not what it used to be. This morning I had my t-shirt on inside out at work – thank you Sally!

4. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I'd cheat and send in Kirsty to do a comedy golfing act

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Additives and chemical junk in food and drinks, disguised as diet food! It isn't food

6. What is your nickname and why? 'Saggy Maggie' - because Kirsty is cruel

7. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Egypt – because Teslyn was meant to wait for me, but got there first

8. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? Anything that inspires a good sing song, and band music is always very uplifting

9. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Cheese and cider (oops that's two but the cider is one of my five a day so I guess it doesn't count)

C24 Chairman brings further 'disrepute' to UN committee

FALKLANDS representatives have criticised political comments made to an Argentine newspaper by the Chair of the United Nations Committee of 24 Diego Morejón Pazmiño in October, and also noted that his comments were at odds with those more recently made by the United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon.

A Falkland Islands Government statement this week said that in their view Señor Morejón was quoted making statements in this interview on the subject of the Falkland Islands that, if reported accurately, would conflict with his role as an impartial chairman. Subsequently, the United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon was reported in an interview with Tiempo Argentino on November 10, 2012 saying that people should be able to plan and govern their own future, which is the main criteria of relevant UN bodies. The views earlier expressed by Señor Morejón were at odds with this.

The Falkland Islands Government voiced its concern to Señor

Morejón some days after his interview and also repeated previous invitations for him and other Committee members to visit the Islands. To date no response has been received.

In the letter to Señor Morejón signed by MIA Elshy on behalf of the Assembly it was noted: "As the Chair of a United Nations Committee you are bound to uphold the values of that institution and to act in a democratic and impartial manner. You state that you were chosen to chair this committee as candidates in the Caribbean were thought to be biased.

"However, it is clear from this report, and from other speeches in the past, that you have already decided that the Falkland Islands should be ceded to Argentina against the clear wishes of its people. This is in direct conflict with the United Nations principle of self determination.

"You have visited Argentina so as to better inform yourself in this matter and yet you have failed to do what any impartial chair would then do, namely to visit the Falkland Islands, speak to elected members and talk to our people.

"You also claim that the United Kingdom has failed to respond to Argentina's claims of militarisation of the Falkland Islands.

"I would first remind you that the only reason there are military forces here is as a result of our country being invaded by Argentina in 1982. On the specific point, I would refer you to the written reply of 22nd February 2012 from the United Kingdom Government to the Government of Argentina."

The letter from the Falkland Islands Government also adds: "The Decolonisation Committee is seen by most people as an outdated, ineffective and partial committee and your actions as Chair have brought its reputation even further into disrepute. The elected members of the Falkland Island Government yet again extend an invitation to you and other members of the committee to visit the Falkland Islands before the next meeting of the Committee, so as to better inform yourselves of the real situation here."

BECOME PART OF OUR GLOBAL NETWORK

Do you have the potential to be a future leader and desire to study in the UK?

Government House is pleased to announce that applications for Chevening Scholarships, the prestigious global scholarship programme of the UK Government, are now being received.

The Scholarships, which are funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth office, operate in over 100 countries and territories worldwide and this year will support about 700 students. The Scholarships are awarded to exceptional individuals with leadership potential. Awards are typically for a one-year Master's degree, in any subject and at any UK university.

There are over 41,000 Chevening alumni around the world who together comprise an influential and highly regarded global network.

After the wreck, comes the reckoning

The third and final episode of 'The Commodore's' account of the sinking of the SS Oravia one hundred years ago this month. Some brickbats and blame, but also some blessings....

A FORMAL investigation into the accident was held from November 18 to 23 with Montague Craigie Halkett, Stipendiary Magistrate, in the chair assisted by Commander Victor Speranza R.N.R., Colonial Engineer Reginald Baseley M.I.M.E., and Captain George Perkins-Ward, Master of The Bay of Biscay. After hearing the evidence, the court drew attention to Assistant Lighthouse Keeper Pearce who stated he had thought Oravia was too close as she was approaching the light and that if the regulations required it and he had the means, he would have signalled the vessel that she was standing into danger.

The court was of the opinion that a subsidiary light on William Point was required for the safety of navigation. In stating its conclusions, the Court said that the loss of the vessel was due to the under-mentioned reasons:

1) A mistake in taking Mount Lowe for Rugged Hill (in Johnson Harbour camp) and also for mistaking the lower Tussac Island in Port William for William (Mengarigie) Point.

2) An error of judgement by the Master and officers on the bridge in overestimating the distance from Cape Pembroke Lighthouse at 10.10pm when cross bearings were taken.

3) Failure to verify the vessel's position as taken by cross bearings at 10.10pm, by distance run from first sighting of the light at 9pm

4) Failure to exercise sufficient caution when approaching Port William.

5) Too much reliance being placed on one cross bearing taken at night

6) The Master being too confident that his position was correct. The 3rd Officer who was on duty on the bridge showed lack of initiative and use of his independent opinion. Immediately after the vessel grounded soundings in the well of No1 hold gave three feet of water. This rapidly increased and on November 13, owing to the heavy sea which caused the vessel to surge badly, it was found necessary to abandon her as a total wreck. The Master was unable to state the value of the loss on ship and cargo and was unable to say whether the vessel was insured or not.

The court severely censured the Master and ordered him to pay for one half of the investigation. The court also commented on the fact that the Master did not seem to have received from his officers on the bridge that independent opin-tion of thirty six pounds and ten shillings for the King Edward Memorial Hospital fund, in appreciation of the kindness and hospitality shown by Falkland Islanders towards the passengers of the Oravia.

The passenger also handed over to Governor Allardye a contribu-and generosity showed to their fellow creatures, emigrants of the Oravia.

The FI Magazine and Church Paper of September 1913 reported that the Directors of the FIC took the decision to distribute the whole amount received by them from PSNC amongst those who assisted on the company's tug, launch and boats in the work of rescuing the passengers on the eventful night of November 12, in appreciation of their humanity and the risk to their lives at the time of the stranding of the Oravia.

Luck Jim or Jonah?

There were lucky outcomes for several from this event. An Oravia crew member had already been a survivor, for he was on board RMS Olympic when struck by HMS Hawke in September 1911, and he had been sick and missed the sailing of RMS Titanic in April 1912. Having survived the Oravia in November 1912, his luck continued when he was a crew member of HMS Pathfinder. This was the first warship to be sunk by torpedo from a submarine and went down in four minutes in September 1914. If this were not enough, he returned to the Falklands as a stoker on board HMS Kent and survived the battle on December 8, 1914.

Happily ever after

The ever gallant Mr Townson married fellow passenger Miss Miller whom he met on board Oravia and they lived happily ever after.

The survivors

There are two survivors still to this day: the remains of the tug Sampson built by Earles Shipyard of Hull in 1888 are on the beach at the North side of Stanley Harbour and the Penguin, which was converted from steam launch to a sailing schooner and gave many years service to 'Cracker' Jack Davis and others was sold to Chile by Dave Eynon in the 1990's. As far as we know it is still in operation today.

Samson as she appears now in Stanley harbour ion as to the position of the ship that he should have received at the time the vessel was approaching the light.

The FI Magazine also reported that a pleasing little function took place in the Church Room on 27th November, when the passengers presented Captain Thomas of Samson with a purse of 20 guineas for services rendered on the neer Kennedy, Purser Hack and several English passengers also wrote a warm letter of appreciation to Stanley residents quoting, "We were hungry and ye fed us, We were without clothing and ye sheltered us, We were strangers and ye took us in."

Thirty four persons with Mediterranean surnames also wrote to thank the people for the kindness

Sincere thanks

I WAS one of the South Atlantic Medal Association (SAMA 82) 'veterans' from the 1982 conflict who visited the Falklands last week. May I through your columns most sincerely thank all of those who made our visit such a success and truly memorable. A great many in the Falklands contributed to the success of the visit, including the local organisers, hosts who accommodated us and drivers who took us around. To all of these the veterans really are most grateful.

Above all it was so good to meet the Islanders themselves, and to experience your friendliness and generosity. It was instructive to listen to personal experiences of the Argentine occupation, which deserve to be more widely known. It brought home that the occupation was not the benign affair it is often assumed to have been.

Personally I believed from the very outset that the retaking of the Falkland Islands was the right thing to do, but if I did have any doubts they would have been assuaged by listening to the islanders, seeing the spectacular progress made over the past 30 years and experiencing the all-pervading sense of optimism for the future.

It was a privilege to have visited the Falkland Islands last week. I would like to wish you all every success for the future. We will be watching your progress very closely!

RALEIGH

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

IT has been quite a busy fortnight; most of the time has been spent gardening and quite a bit has been achieved, more would have been possible had the weather not been even more unpredictable than usual but even so it has been a satisfying time.

The main-crop potatoes are now all in. They have been spaced about fifteen inches apart in rows two feet apart and about five inches or so deep. All lettuces and other salad greens and all the other bits and pieces are planted at this time of year, such as the swede, parsnip, carrots, turnips not to mention beetroot are also in the ground and no doubt about to come to the notice of the birds around and so some netting has gone over the raised beds to ensure they are covered.

I usually also plant radishes very thinly amongst the rows of parsnips and carrots as they help to mark their rows during the three or four weeks it can sometimes take them to germinate; as the radishes get used they allow the emerging carrots and parsnips room to stretch too. And, with the sort of weather we are having at the moment germination could take some time so will need to know where to weed amongst them!

The peas are out of their guttering and looking very healthy and strong and a lot of the cabbages and other brassicas are now in their allotted places. When planting seeds in rows I like to mark out the row and then water it thoroughly before planting the seeds; this ensures they get the moisture they require without forming a hard 'cap' on the top-soil and perhaps, spreading all the seeds everywhere by watering from the top.

The brassicas are treated in the same way, as having dug the hole for the plant a good mug full of water goes into it before the plant does. This together with ensuring the plants are well soaked before they are taken out of their pots or modules gives them a really good start.

I am, once again planting tomatoes in any spare spot under cover. How is it I manage to get so many leftovers? Mind you, there are 10 different types planted this year so there were almost certainly bound to be too many! Still there can never be too much of a good thing; you really can't beat a tasty tomato straight off the vine can you? And a sandwich of tomato slices and chives is incredibly tasty, although Bill reckons that sliced tomatoes are even better with a sprinkle of sugar. Yuk!

Pricking out some dozens of perennials the other day I was reminded how stupidly and rather greedily I used to once prick-out only the largest plants, leaving the runts of the litter in the seed trays. It soon proved just how silly I'd been, for the flowers on those mini-plants were totally different in colours to those I had potted on. The moral of the story I guess is, don't ignore the little ones in a tray of mixed colours. They might well turn out to be the most interesting in the end! Now all their pots are starting to fill up with roots, and they are all looking healthy and happy with more space to spread out. I can't wait to see them fully grown and in flower!

Looking around the vegetable garden the other day I noticed the gooseberry saw-fly has been having a field day, although mainly with the currant plants which are of the same family. These little horrors can strip them all of their leaves in no time at all. Normally they are not seen till somewhat later in the season, so much later in fact that I've frequently allowed them to have their snack as it meant it was so much easier to see, and so not so painful to pick, the gooseberries. However, this year I had to spray the little sods for they are stripping the flowers off too, such a shame as the plants are dripping with bloom. At times like this I forget all about being 'organic' and set out to kill!

Plants in pots can be put out at virtually any time of the year providing it is not frosty and there is no snow on the ground. However, it is not too late to do some 'tweaking' of existing plants in the flower beds either. I discovered, on one of my 'plant patrols' that I had managed to plant some roses and peonies much too close to each other last autumn so, armed with a bucket of water to put into each freshly dug hole together with a handful of blood, fish and bone fertiliser I set out to put them in their new homes. There should not be a problem as long as they are handled gently and are moved with as much soil as possible on the root ball. Ensuring they don't get too dry for the next few weeks will see them well away and flowering with the rest.

The rhododendrons are almost all in flower now, one to flower for the first time is called 'Venetian Chimes' it's gorgeous! The cherries are also carrying wonderful amounts of blooms. If other years are anything to go by that means we are due very high winds for the next week or so, maybe not and that would be nice but, don't say I didn't warn you!

AN impressive £788.73 was raised for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund at the annual fire engine pull on Saturday.

Fourteen fire fighters pulled the weighty vehicle from the end of Ross Road West to the Jetty Centre, with eleven extra helping keep them hydrated and swishing donation buckets.

Beautiful weather encouraged the community out on to the streets to help cheer on the mostly volunteer Fire and Rescue Service, and a good crowd gathered afterwards to enjoy a wonderful demonstration of Fire Service training as the team rescued a rather manly looking woman from the top floor of a smoking building.

The whole department would like to thank the public for their generous donations and cheering the guys on, and '82 veteran Curly Elstow who started the event in this anniversary year.

St Helena: small island, BIG opportunities

We're taking off!

For many years St Helena has experienced the difficulties of many small island economies, including net out-migration, diseconomies of scale and a dependence on aid and remittances. Changes in UK Government strategy and policy have placed a focus on providing an improved environment for economic and social development and promoting self-sufficiency, to benefit everyone in St Helena.

St Helena Island

St Helena: small island, BIG opportunities

We're taking off!

The provision of air access will facilitate tourism development, which in the longer term will drive economic development, thus supporting the objective of moving St Helena towards economic self sufficiency. As part of its commitment to the airport process, St Helena Government has undertaken a series of reforms to make the island somewhere that welcomes business people and investors, and where it is easy to do business. Enterprise St Helena (ESH) is a non-governmental organization responsible for the economic development of St Helena. Its activities include: tourism; a property portfolio of commercial retail, office and tourism development sites; support for on-island and international investors; finance and investment; industry development programmes for the tourism, fishing, agriculture, 'green' initiatives, construction and wider sectors; support and advisory services to local businesses; training and up-skilling; and international promotion.

Construction of the airport is well underway and the first passenger flight is scheduled for February 2016. Over the next few years the opportunities arising on St Helena are endless. A significant, but relatively modest number of visitors, 30,000 (capped) per annum (around 600-900 per week, the same increase in the population as over the festive season), is needed to make St Helena financially self-sustaining (St Helena's Sustainable Economic Development Plan 2012/13-2021/22). This requires two or three cornerstone developments and a range of smaller boutique hotels and guest houses. Only the private sector will build and run hotels, provide quality restaurants and tourism experiences.

Whether it is due to sea-borne tourism in the short term or from air access, the island is striving to increase its tourist numbers around a principle of low volume, high value, so that high quality services will be in demand. Opportunities already identified within tourism include: hotels and boutique hotels, bed and breakfast accommodation, self-catering and villa accommodation, vacation complexes (and the services to supply these), a range of quality restaurants, sports fishing, diving and other sea-based activities, soft and hard adventure activities, eco-tourism, craft and other business products, chartered passenger cruises, retirement villages and seafront visitor attractions.

In addition to property development opportunities within tourism and hospitality, opportunities exist in other areas of commercial and residential development, such as: warehousing and storage facilities, industrial workshop facilities, processing facilities, office accommodation, housing and retail outlets.

ESH will make available a range of greenfield, heritage and other properties that are suited to tourism development. The list is by no means prescriptive or exhaustive, and Commercial Property Director, Stuart Planner, is happy to discuss any ideas and propositions. Included in the list is PWD Yard, Longwood "hub", Devil's Punch Bowl, 1/2/3 Main Street, Ladder Hill Fort, Verandah Quarters and Jamestown Wharf

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

SILENT HILL: REVELATION 3D (15) 94 mins Horror. Heather Mason and her father have been on the run, always one step ahead of dangerous forces that she doesn't fully understand. Plagued by horrific nightmares and the disappearance of her father, Heather discovers she's not who she thinks she is, a revelation that leads her deeper into a demonic world. Sean Bean, Kit Harrington
SINISTER (15) 109 mins Horror. A crime novelist uncovers more than he could ever have feared when he moves into a new home. Discovering that the previous occupants were brutally murdered, he finds a box of home movies that fast forward him and his family into a supernatural nightmare. Ethan Hawke, Vincent D'Onofrio
TWILIGHT SAGA: BREAKING DAWN PART 2 (12A) 115 mins Drama. The concluding film in the series starts after the birth of Renesmee. When Volturi swears to destroy her after she is wrongly identified as an outlawed immortal child, the Cullens gather the tribes together to protect her. Kristen Stewart, Robert Pattinson SKYFALL (12A) 143 mins Action. Bond's loyalty to M is tested as her past comes back to haunt her. As M6 comes under attack, 007 must track down and destroy the threat, no matter how personal the cost. Daniel Craig, Helen McCrory

HOTEL TRANSYLVANIA 3D (U) 91 mins Animation. Frankenstein, the Mummy, Dracula, and the Werewolf are among a group of monsters hiding out in a hotel on the outskirts of Transylvania now that modern technology has made them seemingly irrelevant. Adam Sandler, Selena Gomez

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A FLUCTUATING week of trading ended in an overall positive rise of 10 cents to 1,013AUS/cents/kg. This was expected after the recent rise in prices and the large sale last week. There was a dip at the start of the week and then the trading picked up by the end of the week.

Strong buying interest from China at the end of the week was a relief as there was a very large offering of 52,441 bales. A further offering of nearly 50,000 bales is going on sale next week will be a challenge to sell so prices may dip or maintain unless there is further demand.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

We're taking off!

Current population levels on St Helena (4,084 at the 2008 census) mean there are limited professional services available. An increase in tourism and a forecast rise in the population will create many opportunities for investment. Areas that have been immediately identified are: accounting and auditing, creative services and graphic design, legal services, recruitment, training, architecture and home design, estate agency, valuations and surveying, signage, property sales and service management, conveyancing, marketing and financial services.

A growing private sector will present many opportunities in the fields of information technology – web design, E-commerce, installation, network support, internet cafes etc. Additionally, in an effort to increase 'green' practices on the island and market the island for its 'greenness' there is huge potential for recycling and the provision of products and services utilizing the abundance of waste as an alternative raw material, such as collection and recycling of glass, aluminium, paper and plastic, and the sale and installation of green energy producing equipment, both domestic and commercial.

Many of the services and functions provided by St Helena Government are divestment opportunities for new and existing entrepreneurs and businesses within a growing private sector. Activities identified include: public utilities (energy and water supplies), public transport, travel agencies, IT, property and grounds maintenance, cleaning and catering services.

Currently less than 1% of the island's waters are fished and opportunities exist in, but are not limited to: sustainable commercial fishing for the local market and quality export; supply chain and secondary fish processing, sports fishing, fish farming and aquaculture.

Much of St Helena's food is imported. A predicted increase in the number of visitors and population will increase the demand for fruit, vegetables and meat. Opportunities in agriculture include: hydroponics, covered production, horticulture, meat production, poultry, refrigeration and storage, food processing, composting and animal feed. While production of St Helena coffee is low, demand for this lucrative export is high.

Matthew Joshua, Marketing Manager for ESH, said, "There are significant opportunities for support services, products and businesses to provide for tourists and residents alike. ESH is a one-stop source of advice and information for local firms, investors, entrepreneurs and individuals seeking to do business on St Helena. If you have a business idea, come and talk to one of the ESH team. We want to encourage as many suitably skilled Saints to return to the island. Already it is pleasing to see that Saints are returning. Between April and September this year there were around 100 "returning Saints" - classified as those of workforce age staying for more than 6 months. The numbers of visiting Saints is also up on last year. We are finding that Saints are coming home for a holiday, testing the water, and return a few months later. We believe that St Helena has a bright future ahead, and now is the time for Saints to seize opportunities and help shape that future".

Sporting Spirit slam dunk

A WHIMSICAL night of light-hearted rivalry was on the cards at the Badminton Club's Sporting Spirit event on Saturday. Tables enjoyed a two-course meal before they clashed in tongue-in-cheek contests.

The club aimed to raise around £1,500 in their ambition to attend overseas competitions, and after the bar bill has been tallied they hope to have achieved somewhere close to their target.

Team Saint Helena walked away with the victory of the night. Organiser Rosemarie King would like to thank: "Shorty's Diner for super food and super service, Andrew Brownlee as an excellent Master of Games, stepping in at the last minute for a poorly Gary Tyrrell, Roxy King for effortlessly designing the posters, tickets and brochures, FICS for the loan of equipment, Jan and Tim Miller for the flags, FIODA for the use of the PA system, Patrick Watts for opening the Games, Deirdre Marsh for selling raffle tickets and the West Store for allowing us to intercept their customers in their foyer and contributors of the excellent raffle prizes.

"This sort of fundraiser involves a lot of people doing what they do best, which includes the extended family of badminton players, and the great folk who buy tickets to enjoy such nights, so on behalf of The Stanley Badminton Club, a big thank you to one and all," said Mrs King.

FI Dek hockey getting ready for the big time in Canada

MARCUS Morrison, Chairman of the Falkland Islands Dek Hockey Association was recently interviewed for the web site of the International Street and Ball Hockey Federation (ISBHF).

The ISBHF is the governing body of the sport and organisers of a world championship to be held next year in St John's, Canada, to which the Falkland Islands Dek Hockey Association hope to send a team.

Asked first about the Falkland Islands team's preparations for the World Championship, Marcus replied "Currently the team is working on endurance and strength training to increase fitness. Our First Team coach is also concentrating on positional plays and defensive duties, looking at lines and how they will work during the game and, most importantly, honing the goal-tenders' skills to ensure they are ready for the increased challenge

"Games are being played against our local military force to keep the fitness levels up and to iron out any creases with positional play, zonal marking, passing and communication. The size of the military gymnasium is much bigger in comparison to our local gymnasium so we can play with either four outfielders or five. This enables us to get used to more players on the rink than our usual three. The First Team Coach is working on getting the players used to playing with two extra players on the rink."

Marcus said that the Falklands Association hoped that either ISBHF President, George Gortos, himself or other identified coaches would come to the Falkland Islands in February or March 2013 to assist the national team with their preparations.

He explained that the team was currently fundraising and looking to obtain sponsors to assist with the costs of attending their first World Championships, adding: "So far things are looking great with a number of companies very excited about the prospect of the Falkland Islands competing in an international tournament."

"Our local league and cup competitions will also start in March and continue on through to August so will ensure our players keep up their fitness levels and stay sharp before jetting off for St. Johns in June."

Asked to name the members of the Falkland Islands team to go to Canada, Marcus said that while he thought the First Team coach had a good idea which of a current twenty-one contenders would be part of the fifteen players and two goal tenders to go, it would not be appropriate to name players yet, with so many months of preparation still ahead. There was still time for players to impress.

Wayne wins White Rock

NEAR perfect conditions greeted golfers last Sunday as 22 players teed up for the annual White Rock competition. This was also the second in the series of Island Games qualifiers.

The course was in excellent condition and Wayne Clement took full advantage, amassing 42 points in a faultless round of 72, which included three birdies.

Kevin Clapp eased into second place on 37 points, just ahead of Darren Wade on 36.

Nearest the pin on the 16th went to Ric Nye and Sarah Bowles had the best shot into the tricky 12th. The longest drive was also collected by Darren Wade. Best front 9 was won by Graeme Hay with our Captain Troyd Bowles taking the prize for the best back 9.

In Island Games terms it is possibly too early to say, 72 would have been the target for several of the players but only Wayne managed to achieve it.

Troyd Bowles and Kevin Clapp both posted good rounds of 74. The first round in the matchplay is nearly complete, with Sarah Bowles taking the honours in the big match of the round against Ian Stewart. Wins also for Wayne Clement, Darren Wade and Kevin Clapp.

The members and non-members event attracted a field of ten non-members and produced some excellent performances. Ginny and Lynne Forster were beaten into second place by Richard Bonner and now, new member, Jimmy Curtis.

This Sunday it is the first Honours Board competition. Players will contest the Secretary's Shield and the format will be Bogey.

Members are asked to sign in by 9:00 for a 9:15 tee-off.

Cricketers looking good to go on tour

Jamie Punter, Andrew Brownlee, Eva Jaffray and Kalon Jaffray

WEDNESDAY evening saw the Falkland Islands Cricket Club's intended tour to the West Indies helped by a donation from the aptly-named Caribbean Alliance Insurance Company.

Presenting the cheque for £1,500 on the Stanley Sports field was the Manager of FIC's Insurance Department, Eva Jaffray, whose son Kalon is one of the team and was present to help receive the cheque.

While expectations of success for the team might not be great in an area of the world renowned for its cricketing prowess, at least they will look smart, as our picture demonstrates, in brand-new whites sponsored by Falkland Holidays.

A reception to say farewell to the team, which departs for the West Indies this Saturday was held at Government House on Wednesday evening.

The first fixture against the Belize National Under 19 XI will take place on November 27.

Referendum
Political Status of the Falkland Islands
March 2013

Remember that you will only be able to have your say by participating in the Referendum if you are on the Electoral Register

Not around on polling day - what are my options?

Sometimes people are away on polling day, or are not able to get to their polling station for other reasons, but this doesn't mean that they have to miss out on voting. They could apply in writing for either a postal, proxy or proxy postal vote.

What exactly does this mean?

Postal vote applications - you can vote by post

Anyone can apply to have their ballot papers sent to them through the post instead of going to vote in person at a polling station. By completing and submitting a Postal Vote Application Form, you can choose to vote by post.

Proxy vote applications - a person nominated by you can vote on your behalf

Anyone may appoint a proxy to vote on their behalf. If the elector is unable to attend their polling station in person on polling day, by completing and submitting a Proxy Voting Application Form, the elector can arrange for someone to vote on their behalf.

Postal Proxy Voting - a person nominated by you to vote on your behalf can apply to vote by post

Anyone appointed as a proxy to vote on someone else's behalf, may, by notice in writing delivered to the registration officer, apply to be allowed to vote as proxy by post.

For further information or an application form please contact the Registration Officer Beth Reid on telephone number 27269 or email registrargeneral@townhall.gov.fk

Coming to Stanley - December 1, 2012

Regeneris wins oil impact study bid

THE London and Manchester based company Regeneris Consulting will undertake a Socio-economic Impact Assessment of oil and gas development in the Falkland Islands on behalf of the Falkland Islands Government.

The company was successful ahead of 14 other bidders and has stated: "The appointment builds on the wide range of experience Regeneris has in assessing the economic and social impacts of a range of large scale energy developments."

Regeneris was appointed in early November and is currently undertaking the necessary preparatory research before commencing the main work programme.

The work will include the preparation of detailed social and economic models on a range of possible oil and gas development scenarios, and as such will be broader in scope than the Rockhopper/Plexus study.

It will also explore the implications of these scenarios in terms of their impact on society, the economy and FIG service/infrastructure provision; and will include recommendations on how to maximise the positive impacts from oil developments and how to minimise any negative effects.

The study will include extensive consultation in the Islands. A range of methods are proposed including one-to-one meetings with key stakeholders, public meetings (in both Stanley and Camp) and a series of focus groups within the community.

Precise dates have still to be confirmed but it is planned that the consultation phase will take place in mid to late January 2013.

An Executive Council paper, Oil Readiness Review and Action Plan, was recently released to the public and includes a range of activities being pursued across the Falkland Islands Government as part of its preparation for an oil industry in the Falkland Islands, including the recruitment of a Specialist Oil and Gas Advisor.

Fishing company seeking good management label: a first for the Falklands

FOR the first time a Falkland Islands fishing company is seeking to have its good management certificated by the internationally recognised Marine Stewardship Council (MSC).

Consolidated Fisheries (CFL) Marketing Manager Janet Robertson told Penguin News CFL entered into assessment in August this year. She believes that for the Falklands as well as CFL it will be advantageous to have an MSC certified fishery.

In Stanley this week to assess the company for certification have been Stephanie Good, Fishery Assessment Manager from the MSC and Jim Andrews of Intersect Moody Marine, which is the certification body assessing the situation.

Mr Andrews told Penguin News this week that the way the MSC standard works is that any fishery globally is assessed against three principles: whether the fish stock is in good condition, impact of the fishery on the marine environment and how well the fishery is managed.

information, interview people and find out about all three areas of the fishery. He said ultimately, if the fishery is certified, the packaging material of the Consolidated Fisheries product will bear an eco-label. The idea is that the consumer sees the label and favours an MSC certified product.

For the fishing company, in terms of processes and retailers in many markets, Mr Andrews pointed out that being certified by the MSC can be the difference between having access to the market and not.

This is not the case currently with the Toothfish fishery, but for other fisheries, he said, if you are not MSC certified your range of buyers is very much reduced. Also there can be an effect on the price you get per kilo.

The assessment process looks at the measures that are in place to prevent illegal and unlicensed fishing.

Mr Andrews said that MSC is also very keen to ensure traceability through the whole supply chain, so when they certify a fishery, they certify what happens at sea up to the quay side and then they look at everything beyond that as well.

Asked what it was she was specifically observing in the Falklands, Stephanie Good said that part of her job was to look at the whole MSC fishery standard and review it in terms of how easy it was to interpret in practice.

She said, "I'm here to see in a practical setting how the standard is interpreted and what happens in the assessment process."

"Hopefully I can learn things that I can bring back and feed into a review of standards which is planned for next year."

Asked what changes, if any, had resulted in CFL operating procedure as a result of their bid for MSC certification, Janet Robertson said, "much of what was needed to be done was actually work that is done by the Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Department, because it is the management of the fishery which is critical: the science, the knowledge about the species and the impact on the environment."

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

HAVING shuffled rather reluctantly through a hail squall to the Members Remuneration Review Panel public meeting on Monday (I've such a rock n roll lifestyle) it was a pleasant surprise to see a reasonable number of bums on seats; albeit many of the same bums that are toddled along to most public meetings.

Unlike the majority of the monthly scheduled public get togethers which tend to meander along at a leisurely let's-try-and-fill-the-hour pace, it was clear at this one that the subject had really struck a chord. Questions such as should MLAs work full time (workload is increasing) or continue part-time but with the Assembly increased in number, were politely but passionately debated, along with the size of salary and the scope of MLAs' responsibilities; one part of the end game of course being to attract more election candidates, particularly those under the age of old fart.

As the article in this week's Penguin News (page 5) indicates there was a definite leaning towards introducing the full time MLA, although an argument was presented against that such a committed role wouldn't attract a younger set due to some reluctance to give up a career for four years with the fear of non re-election at the end of it. Then again, we might bear in mind that the current system isn't working anyway in terms of attracting younger candidates. Plenty of university graduates are being churned out each year but how many of them are even glancing towards politics, let alone considering it as a career option? So it's not as though a new system would make situation worse.

Not that that's a viable reason alone for changing it, but, as one member of the public sensibly pointed out, if the 'post' of MLA were presented in a clear and modern manner, with responsibilities and terms and conditions outlined and a set attractive salary offered it would be instantly more recognisable as a 'job'. (A more alluring prospect than the current 'we hope you give up your usual job and run the country, but we won't pay you much'.)

Yes the possibility still exists that one might not be re-elected at the end of it, but a four year contract isn't a bad one in any career; and in these modern times individuals are far less inclined anyway to climb into one career and stay there until they're carried out 50 years later covered in cobwebs and sporting a gold watch. And after all, four years as a politician, hopefully spent displaying some degree of initiative, drive and self-confidence and picking up a working knowledge of just about everything 'Falklands' might look quite attractive to a future employer.

A GENEROUS donation to the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust was made by the MPC Thrift Shop on Thursday.

The MPC Thrift Shop is a charity shop which is open to everyone on the Islands and donates its profits alternately between causes in the UK and the Falkland Islands. In the past year the shop has helped the Maternity Unit at KEMH, Stanley House and the Alex McGhie fund.

Based at Mount Pleasant, the Thrift Shop also regularly has a stall at flea markets in Stanley. Opening hours of the popular store at MPC can be found on their facebook page.

Research licences approved

EIGHT Research Licence Applications were approved at this week's meeting of the Environmental Committee. One application on seabird pathogen research was considered "too ambitious" at this stage and the committee decided further information was needed before the application could be approved.

The applications approved comprised: Southern Sea Lion satellite and GPS unit deployments, Striated Caracara chick banding, Rockhopper antibodies application, Southern Giant Petrel offshore sex determination, New Island Rockhopper penguin study, Thin-billed Prions study, Sooty Shearwater surveys, Gentoo Penguin genetics.

The Striated Caracara chick banding project was considered particularly interesting and it was thought that information regarding movements of the species could be useful to farmers interested in moving particular sheep flocks away from areas highly populated by the birds.

Referendum

THIS month's meeting of ExCo considered a paper that included various matters relating to the Referendum. A spokesperson for Gilbert House said this was, "the first stage of a formal sign off process that will require the arrangements to be specified by Order." Penguin News understands that a formal announcement from the Government on these issues will be made in due course, once final sign-off has occurred.

The Referendum will take place on Sunday March 10 and Monday March 11, 2013.

Police appeal

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) are appealing for witnesses to a fight outside a pub on November 17, and reported 11.45 pm that night. It took place at Deano's Bar on John Street, Stanley. Officers of the RFIP attended and saw a number of people fighting and one arrest was made. The RFIP have said all information will be treated in the strictest confidence and witnesses should ask to speak to Detective Sergeant Dave Street or Chief Inspector Len McGill on telephone number 28100.

Cristina is irrelevant

EMPTY wells might prove more of a problem to Falklands oil exploration than the threats of Argentina's President, who was described this week as "irrelevant" by one oil industry analyst.

Shares of Falkland Oil and Gas (FOGL) which had jumped as much as 21 per cent last week as drilling at the company's Scotia well drew to a close, slumped by 49 per cent on Wednesday to an historic low of 51 US cents with the announcement of poor results, which had led to the well being capped and abandoned.

The stock price had hit a high of 4.28 dollars in July 2010.

FOGL's partner in their exploration of the Falklands Southern licence zone, Noble Energy, announced that the deep water well in the Scotia area off the coast of the Falklands revealed about 164 feet of low quality reservoir.

The collapse in the shares, however, came despite an insistence from FOGL that it remained upbeat on its campaign, with further tests set to determine whether there was a higher quality reservoir elsewhere in the region.

Noble entered into a farm-in agreement with FOGL in August 2012 and holds a 35 per cent operating interest in most of FOGL's licenses.

The day before the disappointment of Noble's recent announcement, one independent analyst wrote that the company's prospects in the Falklands were, "especially good."

He stated that doubts about the company's prospects had been limited to the threats made against participating oil countries by the Argentine President.

"However," he wrote, "her tactics do not seem to be working in her favour, adding, "Noble has decided to forge ahead with its plans to explore and drill in the Islands, without worrying about what the consequences may be. This is also because most political analysts believe that Cristina will not be able to retain her post in the next election. That prophecy seems to be coming true, when we look at the mass protests that are taking place across Argentina at the moment.

"The Argentinean economy is in shambles and the country really is not interested in the Falkland Islands. Most Argentineans believe Falklanders get to choose whether they belong to Britain, Argentina or to themselves. Industry analysts have noted that as long as the British Navy is in place and as long as the Falklanders do not give into empty threats made by Kirchner, oil companies operating in the Islands will be safe."

The analyst for the investors' web-site IncomeHunter concluded his report by writing, "Noble has also agreed to invest $180 million to $230 million on exploration. Susan Cunningham, Senior Vice President for exploration, insisted that above-ground risk is very manageable and that the regulatory environment is very favorable. There was no mention of Kirchner or her diva-esque threats. And that is because Cristina is no longer relevant."

Argentine violence causes ship cancellation

EARLIER this week (as reported on penguin-news.com) the Falkland Islands Government condemned, "the violent act of intimidation," carried out by an Argentine extremist group against the offices of a company that provided services to cruise ships that visit the Falklands.

Member of Legislative Assembly Dick Sawle said: "Sadly, this act has apparently resulted in at least one cruise ship operator (AIDA Cruises) cancelling their operations in the Falkland Islands."

He said it was another example of a country of over forty million people attempting to bully and threaten three thousand people, and strangle the economy of our home. He encouraged the tourism industry to stand firm. He said there were countless families in the Islands whose livelihoods for over a decade had depended on the cruise vessel industry."

He continued, "The Falkland Islands is a spectacular tourism destination, and is a fantastic place to do business. We enjoy a warm relationship with the tourism industry, and look forward to continuing to work with vessel operators long into the future."

Earlier in the week, Chair of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board, MLA Mike Summers said the decision for cruise vessel Veendam not to visit the Falkland Islands had still not been made clear, "but all indications are that it is a lot more than just weather and they are probably being threatened the same way."

Both Veendam (Holland America) and the AIDAcara are part of the powerful Carnival Corporation which also owns Princess Cruises. A withdrawal of all Carnival ships could mean a potential 40 per cent loss in terms passengers visiting the Islands.

MLA Summers told Falklands' media: "We haven't contacted the AIDA group directly. I have now written to the CEO of the Carnival group in Miami expressing the Falkland Islands Government's disappointment at the capitulation by the AIDAcara and the apparent withdrawal of the Veendam visits, and asked them to take a corporate view on whether responding to bullying in this manner is an appropriate thing for a group like Carnival to be doing. Carnival UK has already given assurances that it wouldn't give in to bullying."

FITB Managing Director Tony Mason was scheduled to meet the Vice President responsible for scheduling for Holland America this week.

Nine months sentence for offender

KAYLEE Smith (20) of Stanley was sentenced on Monday to a total of nine months custody in a young offenders' institution for a combination of offences, involving falsification of bank forms and forgery, in two groups.

An early and similar offence for which Miss Smith had been put on probation was not taken into account by Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley when sentencing, although he said it was clear that she had been in breach of her probation terms when committing the subsequent offences, to which she had pleaded guilty.

With regard to the first offence, said Mr Gumsley, Miss Smith had been, "given a chance, but had thrown it back in the court's face."

A further chance, also rejected, had been given to Miss Smith in respect of charges laid against her in September, when she had pleaded guilty to attempting to obtain goods to the value of £74.99 from the FIC, debiting purchases to the sum of £65.73 from Mrs Olive Smith's FIC account and forging a bank transfer form to the sum of £100.

At that time, Mr Gumsley deferred sentencing for three months, ordering Miss Smith to comply with all probation orders and not to reoffend or she would go to jail.

On Monday, the court heard how some time after October 29 Miss Smith had stolen cheques from the chequebook of her aunt, Mrs Anya Cofré, when the latter was suffering from the tragic death of her son several days earlier, and had used them to obtain meals, goods and cash from Shorty's Diner, the Kelper Store and the Globe Tavern.

Describing Miss Smith's actions as, "mean and despicable" the Senior Magistrate said that he found it extraordinary, given her record, that anyone should have been prepared to accept a cheque from her, but believed that in two out of three of the cases, the recipients had been influenced by their knowledge of Miss Smith's relationship to the grieving family.

Defence Counsel, Mr Mark Neaves said of his client that she knew she would be going to jail for what she had done and admitted that her behaviour had been, "horrible." In mitigation he said that his client had warned the Globe Tavern not to present the cheque she had given them and had texted an apology to Mrs Cofré. Her actions, he said, were not deliberate, but opportunistic and inexplicable. The amounts involved were relatively small and had not been taken to support a, "grandiose lifestyle."

Quark v GSGSSI in judicial review over licence denial

AT the time of going to press, a judgement was still being awaited from Lord Chief Justice Mr Christopher Gardner QC on a case before the Supreme Civil Court of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, which could have a significant impact on the treatment of applications for licences to fish for Toothfish in the South Georgia fishery.

Quark Fishing Ltd, owners of the long liner Jacqueline, which has participated in the South Georgia fishery since its beginning fifteen years ago, were seeking a judicial review of the decision made by the Director of the Fishery Department of the Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) to deny their company's vessel a licence for the 2012 season.

In his opening remarks, leading counsel for Quark Fishing Ltd, Mr Fergus Randolph QC said that this judicial review was important, not only for his client, but also for South Georgia and the people of the Falkland Islands.

Acknowledging that the job of the Director of Fisheries of GSGSSI was a difficult one, subject amongst other things to the advice of the British Foreign Office, he said it was important that the rule of law should be seen to apply to his decisions.

Mr Randolph, who was supported in court by Mr David Scannell, went on to state that the requirements of procedural fairness must be observed, but not necessarily through the strict application of a set of rules. Referring to what he called the, "common perception of fairness" he said that this should not be swayed by, "austere legalisms."

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THOSE of us available were involved in interviews with the many visiting journalists last week. I'm always conscious that no matter how many people we try to make better informed we have not reached countless more. It is an endless task and we take every opportunity to further it. The latest group were well briefed and asked some interesting and searching questions and freely admitted having many surprises after seeing things for themselves. At least one had previously been 'briefed' by representatives from the Argentine embassy in their country but quickly saw through the blatantly false propaganda after arriving in the Islands. Those in Argentina formulating this rubbish have yet to learn that when found out in one falsehood, everything else they say becomes suspect.

A number of MLAs are heading off to attend meetings and on oil related visits. The Hon Sharon Halford and I will attend the Joint Ministerial Council in London next week, preceded by a meeting of the UK Overseas Territories Association and a meeting with 'our' minister Hugo Swire MP. This Friday, the Hon Dick Sawle and I will attend a meeting with interested parties regarding oil. He and Director of Mineral Resources, Stephen Luxton, among others, will be doing presentations. MLA Elsbey will then join up with the group including senior officials going to Norway and Shetland on an oil fact finding trip. In the meantime the Hon Ian Hansen is accompanying the cricket team on their tour as stand in for the Hon Mike Summers who is otherwise engaged.

Last week I wrote about the Members Remuneration Review Panel on potential changes in conditions and other issues. I would urge anyone with thoughts on the subject to get involved in meetings. The next few years will be some of the most pivotal in our development as a country. I want to be able to use all my votes in the General Election, something I regret I've been unable to do on some other occasions. As part of the growing 'silver' vote I hope my fellow pensioners will be active in airing their views.

Weight watchers for sheep

THE Department of Agriculture launched an initiative this week aimed at focusing farmers into understanding the weight gain of their young sheep.

National Weighing Week is designed to encourage farmers to measure sheep growth rates for either replacement ewes or lambs destined for the abattoir.

Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday told Penguin News growth rates reflect the farmers current sheep system: "If you are trying to make improvements in ewe condition, genetics, nutrition and supplying new season lambs then tracking body weights and growth rates is a measurement of how changes are performing."

She said: "Each sheep is genetically designed to grow to a certain lean meat (muscle) size and then start laying down fat. The faster they grow early in their life, the sooner they turn off muscle growth and start to lay down body fat.

"Making sure a high percentage of lambs make the correct weight and fat class during the FIMCo export season equals improved profit on farm. Growth rate and fat deposition is also the key to successful breeding from an 18-month old ewe."

She said National Weighing Week was about helping everyone understand how the industry was performing and was vital information for Falkland Islands Meat Company.

If you want to get involved with National Weighing Week call the Department of Ag on 27355.

Paras run for charity

THREE former members of 9 Para will complete a run from Port San Carlos to Government House in Stanley today (Friday).

Steve 'Billy' Morris, Bob Chatterton and Jamie Rankine with the support of Sam Lane-Sansam were scheduled to run non stop via Douglas, Teal Inlet and Estancia House, then over Mt Longdon before reaching Stanley. They began the 175 mile long haul yesterday (Thursday).

While Steve and Bob are

Falklands War veterans, Jamie is a veteran of three tours of Afghanistan and a tour of Iraq.

The purpose of the run is to raise £5,000 for Combat Stress and Sama (82).

The three hope to complete the run within 20 hours. The group have also kindly donated an iPad to the King Edward Memorial Hospital.

If you would like to donate to the cause then go to www.justgiving.com/falklandsrun-combatstress or www.justgiving.com/falklandsrunsama82

CFL seek eco label

In that respect our application was heavily reliant on the Fisheries Department which already has a reputation for good, solid management."

From the company's side, Janet Robertson said that compliance with the MSC standard was more about making certain things more explicit and having clearer protocols in place, especially with regard to stock assessment principles.

They also had to look at their routine operating practices and protocols on board the vessel and make sure that they were up to the required standard, and that there were clear practices for the crew to follow which would minimise the impact of fishing activities as much as possible. She said that everything the company had to do in this regard, was already being done; it was just a case of making sure that standards were maintained and any malpractice was avoided.

Asked what she thought the company would get out of MSC certification, Mrs Robertson said that the answer now was probably slightly different from what it would have been two or three years ago.

For many years the South Georgia Fishery was the only MSC certified toothfish fishery, and as a result of that, although the demand for certified toothfish was not great, it did mean that because there was a relatively small fishery providing it, there was a premium paid if you were selling an MSC certified fish.

Since then, with the certification of a number of other toothfish fisheries around the world, and probably with supply exceeding demand, there was less likely to be much of a premium paid. Although Consolidated Fisheries do not sell into Europe as a matter of course at present, if they wanted to they would be severely limited as to where they could sell it, if they were not MSC certified.

Budget plans

AN early look at budget strategy made up part of the Executive Council meeting held last Thursday. Members of Legislative Assembly agreed to maintain the strategy of having a Medium Term Financial Plan (MTFP) with annual targets over the next five years for maintaining balanced budgets. According to the summary of the meeting: "We also noted that there will be one-off receipts due to oil related activity over the next five years."

A strategy was agreed which will place oil related income into a separately identified fund within the consolidated fund. MLAs believed it was important to treat those revenues separately, "in order to preserve the integrity of the MTFP which does not take into account these one-off revenues as they are not recurring revenue items." MLAs also supported the proposal to continue with a Long Term Financial Plan.

Tax exemption

THE Falkland Islands Government has agreed tax exemption, "for a variety of companies that work in defence related areas," it was announced in the Executive Council summary.

It noted: "This agreement has been in place for many years and whilst we extended it for a further year, we also noted that for localisation projects to take place at MPC, there would need to be a level playing field at some stage so that local bidders for contracts were not disadvantaged."

Another, "slight change," to tax laws allows for business assets to be transferred as a gift to close relatives. This effectively allows the gifted assets to be transferred without any potential charge to tax and be received with a value that can be carried forward. It also means there would be no requirement to spend large amounts of money trying to ascertain market value for those assets.

Minimum wage

A PAPER on enforcement options for the minimum wage was approved by Executive Council last week. The paper recommended the minimum wage be enforced through the Civil Court and through a system of restitution and damages.

The Senior Magistrate will be requested to revise the Legal Aid Scheme appropriately and review the applicability of legal aid to other employment law matters. The Taxation Office will be asked to provide telephone advice to employers and workers regarding the implementation and application of the minimum wage and the Attorney General will draft the necessary legislation to implement it.

More pay and full time MLAs?

MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly should work full time in the future and be paid around £40,000 a year it was felt by some members of the public attending a discussion meeting held by the independent 'Members Remuneration Review Panel' chaired by Richard Cockwell on Monday.

The meeting is the first of many to be held in order to seek views on the future role of Elected Members, along with a review of their responsibilities and how they should be paid for their efforts.

Within its terms and references the panel will also examine financial hindrances and suggest options that could maximise the pool of potential candidates.

They will also look at whether the current list of politically restricted posts are appropriate.

Panel member Lewis Clifton, expressed concern at the lack of young people interested in standing for election. He drew attention to their worries with regard to the financial risk involved in being an MLA based on practical concerns about how to pay, for example, their mortgages and loans.

Other points raised at the meeting included:

- the increased workload of Members of Legislative Assembly and the need for decisions to be made more quickly. While most at the meeting felt having full time members would be the correct way forward in the future, one other disagreed believing the government could be run efficiently without full time members or an increased number of MLAs

- what full time MLAs should be paid. Numbers from £40,000 to £50,000 were suggested. Mr Cockwell noted that Jersey politicians were paid £42,000

- the potential need for an 'exit strategy'. For example, in the Isle of Man representatives are paid for six months after losing a seat. This was considered excessive by the panel but Mr Cockwell suggested a shorter time might be considered

- making the job specification clear. One member of the public suggested there might be areas where MLAs could reduce their involvement at committee level, although others disagreed suggesting MLAs must directly represent their electorate

- if MLAs work full time they might require a set recess in order to avoid the taking of leave at times when MLAs were required to be closely involved in government

- should Executive Council members be paid more than regular members? Following a discussion it was suggested that since all members had to read all documents the role of Executive Councillor did not involve a greatly increased workload compared to regular Assembly Members

- should full time MLAs be allowed to have outside interests? Meeting attendees felt this should be allowed

- what 'full time' would mean and how the working week might be adjusted to allow Camp representatives to return to their farms at weekends

- travel expenses were also discussed. While it was felt reimbursement for travel was appropriate, it was also suggested that full time MLAs should not be paid additional amounts when travelling, as they currently are

- it was felt full time MLAs should be entitled to pension contributions while in office.

The panel will meet with the Chamber of Commerce and the Rural Business Association today (Friday) and on December 11 will hold a meeting for younger Falklands residents in the hope of gathering their thoughts and concerns. Further meetings will be held in the Camp and also with Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Kirsty Williams

1. What is your most prized possession? My 100% genuine Jukebox or the Mini Cooper

2. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Pencil Lane during lunch hour

3. What is your nickname and why? Charlie Brown, because Saggy Maggie is cruel!

4. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Anywhere, so long as it's with good company

5. What is your favourite TV programme (and why)? Cali fornication. If you've seen it you wouldn't have to ask why, and if you haven't, then hurry up coz you haven't lived

6. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I have different coloured eyes, and despite popular belief I do have a spine

7. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently? Watched Twilight - Breaking Dawn (Pt 2), despite thinking it was all a load of rubbish, I was pleasantly surprised. Having started backwards I am having a Twilight marathon this weekend

8. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Marmite and Philadelphia cheese on toast

9. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? So many to choose from but would have to be Agadoo by Black Lace; can still picture Liam dancing on stage in the Canary Islands, so cute

10. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? When everything's coming your way you're in the wrong lane. Get out, while you can

RDS to deliver

WITH the release of a new Capital Development Fund the Rural Development Strategy (RDS) will have the opportunity to begin to deliver on its commitment to increase the number and variety of businesses operating in Camp. Coordinator for the RDS Nuala Knight told Penguin News this week.

The scheme is open to applicants wishing to establish new businesses in Camp and will contribute towards the capital costs of establishment or expansion.

Mrs Knight said: "We're hoping that the scheme will provide the extra help needed to get new business ideas off the ground."

The scheme is open to both Camp and Stanley residents on condition that the new business and new job is created and based in Camp. For more information about the scheme contact FIDC on 27211 or Lyn Buckland by e-mail lbuckland@fidc.co.fk or visit www.ruraldevelopment.gov.fk

Co-organiser of the event Tansy Bishop of Sew What with a colourful display of wares

From plants to philately

Presents a plenty and fun for all

TANSY Bishop of Sew What and husband, Nigel, of NCB Solutions, who were joint organisers of the Arts, Crafts and Produce Fair held in the FIDF Hall on Sunday told Penguin News they felt the event achieved its objective.

The couple said it was intended that it be enjoyed by the whole family, as well as offer an opportunity to sell their own wares to a number of local producers of crafts, alongside gift items with Christmas rapidly approaching.

On Sunday, the fair attracted eight stall holders and a constant stream of visitors throughout the day, with the first two hours particularly solidly packed with people looking for that different or locally produced Christmas present.

Besides the stalls selling everything from pot plants to paintings to philately, there was a bouncy castle to keep the children amused and a cafe selling reasonably-priced and wholesome fare, including the best sausage rolls this reporter has had for some years. Encouraged by the success of this event, Nigel and Tansy are already planning a sequel in the New Year, to be held on the weekend before Valentine's Day.

While pleased by the level of participation of local traders and crafts people in Sunday's event, they hope for even greater things next time.

Referendum Political Status of the Falkland Islands March 2013

Remember that you will only be able to have your say by participating in the Referendum if you are on the Electoral Register

Not around on polling day - what are my options? Sometimes people are away on polling day, or are not able to get to their polling station for other reasons, but this doesn't mean that they have to miss out on voting. They could apply in writing for either a postal, proxy or proxy postal vote.

What exactly does this mean?

Postal vote applications – you can vote by post
Anyone can apply to have their ballot papers sent to them through the post instead of going to vote in person at a polling station. By completing and submitting a Postal Vote Application Form, you can choose to vote by post.
Proxy vote applications – a person nominated by you can vote on your behalf

Anyone may appoint a proxy to vote on their behalf. If the elector is unable to attend their polling station in person on polling day, by completing and submitting a Proxy Voting Application Form, the elector can arrange for someone to vote on their behalf.

Postal Proxy Voting – a person nominated by you to vote on your behalf can apply to vote by post

For further information or an application form please contact the Registration Officer Beth Reid on telephone number 27269 or email registrargeneral@townhall.gov.fk

Caribbean Cricket

Batting practice in Belize

THE Falkland Islands Cricket Team dubbed, "a great success," their first two 20-over games against Belize's National squads. Their first game was against the home nation's U19 National Squad on Tuesday and the Falklands batted first accumulating a score of 52 runs off 19.3 overs. David Hewitt was top scorer for the side with a score of 29.

The Belize U19 squad scored 54 after 10 overs, having lost 3 wickets.

The second game of the day was against the Belize Senior National Squad. Falklands batted first and scored 62 runs for the loss of eight wickets. Toby Poole and Jamie Punter top scored with 11 runs and David Pickup got 10.

"Toby was inspirational; he came into bat with seven balls to go and scored two fours. A real morale boosting innings," said Mr Fowmes. Andy Brownlee took two wickets for 23 runs.

The Belize National squad surpassed the Falkland Islands total in the ninth over.

"David Hewitt was awarded the man of the day award from all his team mates. Very thoroughly deserved for his innings in the first match and the three wickets he took overall," said Mr Fowmes.

Earlier in the week the team visited The Liberty Children's Home, a project that cares for 28 children between the ages of 3-14, and presented them with a cheque for $1,500 USD.

Mr Fowmes said the whole team were humbled by the experience, but felt, "extremely privileged to be allowed to meet the children and the wonderful people that help to look after them all."

Medical Dept says thanks for help

THE medical services of the Falkland Islands, both civilian and military, had several opportunities for saying thank you last week to benefactors from outside the Islands.

One of these was regular visitor to the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital in Stanley (KEMH) Dr Vanessa Lawton.

Dr Lawton is a highly experienced visiting consultant gynaecologist and urogynaecologist who normally works as the Clinical Director for Urology, Gynaecology, Oral Surgery & Clinical Psychology at the Salford Royal Foundation Trust in Manchester.

During her visits to the Falklands, Dr Lawton normally undertakes a large number of gynaecological consultations and associated surgical procedures and on this visit she included in her baggage a special, if rather heavy, gift for the KEMH: a 21 kilogram Ventouse machine.

A Ventouse is a special vacuum device used to assist in the delivery of a baby when the second stage of labour has not progressed adequately. It is an alternative to a forceps delivery and caesarean section.

The advantages of using a Ventouse include the facts that an episiotomy (a surgically planned incision) may not be required, that the mother is still able to take an active role in the birth, that no special anaesthesia is required and that the force applied to the baby can be less than that of a forceps delivery. There is also less potential for maternal trauma compared to a forceps assisted delivery or a caesarean section.

The KEMH already had a Ventouse machine however, it was dated. Accepting the gift from Dr Lawton, Director of Health Mr David Jenkins said that it was a valuable upgraded addition to the essential equipment of the KEMH and they were extremely grateful to Dr Lawton and her colleagues at the Salford Royal Foundation Trust for the very kind donation.

Thanks were also in order last week to Dr Jorge Stanham MBE, the Chief Medical Officer of the British Hospital in Montevideo, who was making his second visit to the Falklands. Some fifteen to twenty former patients of the British Hospital had the opportunity of meeting Dr Stanham for drinks on Friday evening in the Narrows Bar, and on Thursday he was guest of honour at a lunch hosted by the Medical Department at the Malvinas House Hotel.

Dr Stanham's visit was kindly coordinated by the FCO and it allowed Dr Stanham to re-familiarise himself with the staff, organisation and requirements of both KEMH and the Ministry of Defence.

While the number of civilian patients from the Falklands attending the British Hospital in Montevideo has reduced over recent years and now, according to KEMH Manager Michael Poole, amounts to about one a year, it is still used more frequently for urgent cases from the Falkland Islands military community, which was represented at the Malvinas House lunch by MPC Medical Officer, Sq Ldr Claire Booker.

Also present during the lunch, besides MLAs Jan Cheek and Sharon Halford and representatives of local media, was Sq Ldr Vicky Lane. As part of the MOD's commitment under the Memorandum of Understanding on health services, Sq Ldr Lane has been providing training for both KEMH and MoD staff in the use of new equipment intended for use in emergency air-ambulance flights to Montevideo.

Hospital Manager Mr Poole says the training was very successful and KEMH have now taken formal control of the new equipment for use in future aeromed situations.

Scheme to assist lower paid begins 2013

A WORKING credits scheme, including child care credits, approved at the October meeting of Executive Council, will be effective from January 1, 2013. A spokesperson for the Falkland Islands Government said: "The aim of this scheme is to direct assistance towards those households in receipt of a low wage and is intended to complement the minimum wage policy development. The child care credit premium is intended to reduce the financial burden on parents who are working and paying for the child care of young children."

With regard to working credits households will be eligible where the applicants are over 16, resident for taxation purposes, have savings of less than £16,336 and where the household works 25 or more hours a week. Household earnings must also be lower than £14,000. The credit received will range up to £1,561 per annum and will be paid directly into the applicants' bank account in twelve equal instalments on a monthly basis (mid month).

Regarding child care credit this will be a premium paid on top of the working credit. Applicants therefore must meet all the eligibility criteria set out above and in addition have at least one child under the age of five residing in the property. Additional credits of up to £1,576 per annum (one child in property) or up to £2,297 (two or more children in property) will be paid alongside the Working Credit.

On announcing this scheme Financial Secretary, Nicola Granger said: "We hope that this scheme will assist those working and earning a low wage, particularly those who previously have not been able to get into employment due to bearing the costs of child care."

Member of Legislative Assembly Roger Edwards, Chair of Standing Finance Committee commented: "I believe this to be a very positive step forward in assisting parents of young children back into the workplace and along with our policy on a minimum wage, hopefully soon to be implemented, will go a long way to assist those most in need."

Applicants will need to submit a form and supporting documentation to The Treasury for assessment in December 2012 or January 2013. All applications will then be reassessed through the Tax Office using a standard Tax Assessment Form at the end of the tax year.

The Treasury will be holding a question and answer session and providing assistance in completing application forms for potential applicants shortly, which will be advertised soon.

Contact: Nicola Granger on 28400. Queries regarding eligibility for application or attendance at the question and answer session: Jody Poole on 28400.

Hockey celebrates

Hurricanes - Stuey Duncan and Grant Budd with the Cable and Wireless, Russell Smith Memorial Trophy

WITH preparations building for the World Championship in St Johns next year, the hockey club took some time-out to recognise their achievements over the last two seasons with a presentation, Saturday night at the FIDF Hall.

After the wealth of shiny trophies and medals were awarded the hall opened to the public for a night of live music entertainment and dancing.

Chairman of Falklands Dek Hockey Marcus Morrison thanked the many people and organisations who support the club: "Cable and Wireless, Energise and Kandy Kabin for sponsoring the prize giving and a special thanks to the Smith family for attending to hand out the prizes for the Cable and Wireless Russell Smith Memorial Trophy. Also huge thanks to the Goss Girls (Jane and Carole), Dae Peck, Pete King, Ian Goss, Sherilee Goss, Gordon Peck, Norman Clark and Trevor Betts for providing the live music on the night, it really made a difference. Myriam Booth also for providing the music during the breaks, Nigel Bishop for provision of DJ equipment and all other party items and to Pam and Dennis Budd for working hard on preparing the food on the night. And last but not least Grant Budd, Martyn Barlow and Robin Cooper for helping set up the FIDF hall."

Mr Morrison added: "The 2012 committee has worked extremely hard to put hockey on the map in the Falkland Islands and now on an international level, the new committee will look to continue this in 2013. The support we received from the general public on the second part of the night was tremendous so thank you all for coming along to support the hockey association in its endeavours to send a team to St. Johns, Canada in 2013. Keep a look out for other events to come in the future."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

The Wool Market Report - 22 November 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A STEADY week of trading ended with a rise of 6 cents to 1,019AUS/cents/kg. Reasonable sale interest came from the usual countries with particular interest from Italy. Next week will see a sale of over 55,000 bales the biggest yet this season, so we may see a fall in prices next week.

Australia are seeing a bottle neck of supply due to the last remaining "dumper" company; Independent Wool Dumpers Pty Ltd, being full to capacity until early December. This is stopping the exportation of wool out of Australia.

This dumper company uses large hydraulic wool dumping presses to reduce the size of farm pressed wool bales. Using these presses and specially produced steel strapping bands, up to 120 wool bales are able to be packed into each container, giving 100% space utilization, and saving money.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Anniversary of the Battle of the Falkland Islands

The following programme has been arranged for Saturday 8th December 2012 to commemorate the victory of the Naval engagements of 8th December 1914, on which day 6 British sailors lost their lives and a number of others died later from injuries received during the battle. 2,260 German sailors also lost their lives.

At 9.25 am detachments representing British Forces Falkland Islands and the Falkland Islands Defence Force will enter Christ Church Cathedral, where at 9.45 am the customary Memorial Service will begin, led by the clergy from Stanley and the Force Chaplain. His Excellency the Governor together with the Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands and Members of Legislative Assembly will attend. Members of the Public are very welcome to attend this service and are asked please to be seated by 9.30 am.

At the conclusion of the memorial service at about 10.15 am the Parade, led by the School of Music Band of Her Majesty's Royal Marines, will march to the Battle Memorial.

At 10.45 am the parade will arrive at the Battle Memorial. Members of the various youth organisations will be present. At 10.58 His Excellency the Governor will arrive at the Battle Memorial and will inspect the Parade. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath, followed by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, and representatives of the Royal British Legion and Associations.

After the ceremony at the Battle Memorial there will be a march past. His Excellency the Governor will take the Salute from a dais at the entrance gates to Government House lawns.

Members of the public wishing to attend the ceremony are asked to arrive no later than 10.50 am.

It is appropriate for decorations and medals to be worn on this occasion

Fair tribe maidens of Lumbago: Ally, Kerry and Deborah

Animated Henry Holmes

Shiver me timbers what a performance

PIRATES of the Curry Bean hoisted the mainsail at the Town Hall this week with a boot load of gags, jaunty choreography and ballads to warm the cockles of the public's hearts.

The Falkland Islands Community School production, supported by the Infant and Junior School Choir, followed the escapades of scurvy bean fuelled pirates, led by the captivating Henry Holmes as pink bearded bilge rat Red Beard. The wild crew steal a treasure map, and in the process kidnap Pearl (Hannah McPhee) inspiring her children, Jack (Rhys Greenland), Liza (Jessica Cooper) and their rat catching kitty Fiddlesticks (Yorin Bagley) to join the Navy and follow the crew of the Curry Bean across the Atlantic.

Confident and funny, the evening was awash with excellent performances from vivid characters including Naval officers Captain Cod (Megan Thorpe) and Admiral Hornhonker (Africa Shepherd), two delightful winkle pickers Skuttle (George Howatt) and Slack (Thomas Short) who turn their hand to sailing, and Jack Ford who skilfully played a number of roles.

Crew, teachers, young stars, and maestro FICS Music Teacher Shirley Adams-Leach, should all be very proud of their hard work.

We're taking off!

Julian Morris is CEO of Economic Development on St Helena. He will be visiting the Falklands for four days of meetings from Monday 3rd December to and including Thursday 6th December. A year into construction of the airport, there are a number of reasons for visiting the Falklands:

- Formal and informal briefings with MLA's, senior officials and members of the public about St Helena developments. It is hoped to have three events:

- a. Chamber of Commerce – 5.00pm Monday 3rd December
- b. Public update – Tuesday 4th December
- c. MPA update – Wednesday 5th December

- Inform Falklands businesses about investment opportunities on St Helena - opportunities include: retail, construction, hospitality, tourism services, aviation services, business services, fishing, shipping, etc

- Explore ways of Falkland Islands Government and St Helena Government working collaboratively

Please Contact: Julian's PA Grace Richards Tel +290 2163 Grace.Richards@esh.co.sh

or Charlene Rowland Tel +500 51588 rowland@cwimail.co.fk who is co-ordinating Julian's Falkland's itinerary.

Five kilometre fun run

DESPITE howling wind and intermittent showers, 27 runners set off in the Stanley Running Club five kilometre fun run, from the Beaver Hangar to The Seamans Mission, on Sunday.

Running Club members decided to hold the event to raise more awareness and hopefully some extra funds to send athletes to compete at the Bermuda Island Games next year.

First runner back was Bill Chater in 19 minutes 35 seconds, first woman back was Ros Cheek in 24 minutes and 9 seconds and first junior was Kate Stenning in a time of 26 minutes 37 seconds. Prizes for these categories were colourful prints by local artist Leigh-Ann Wolfaardt.

Stanley Running Club's next scheduled event is a 10 kilometre run on December 16. There's plenty more on the calendar including their biggest race, the Cape Pembroke Half Marathon on February 17, 2013.

First Junior Kate Stenning collects her prize from

THE Secretary's Shield was the first chance this season for golfers to post their name on the coveted Honours Board. The downpour at the start relented for a few hours, long enough for players to complete their rounds and remain dry but end the contest somewhat battered and bruised by a strong and gusty wind from the south west. In strong winds, good ball striking is a must, as any miss-hit will be punished either by lack of length or sailing several miles sideways on the wind.

The bogey format is match play against the course and players receive shots according to their handicap and try to win or halve holes as they would in a match. Returning an overall plus score means the player has beaten the course.

Despite the weather, several players managed to return to the clubhouse having mastered the challenge. Club Captain Troyd Bowles returned a +1 in a tidy round with few errors and some unrewarded good shots.

Ric Nye also posted a superb +1, including 4 plusses over the last five holes to secure third place. In second place was Tony McMullen on +2 with +1 for each nine hole section.

The clear winner on the day and his name going to the printers for the first time was Declan Bonner with an excellent round of +3. The best front nine went to Troyd Bowles and best back nine to Richard Bonner.

The tough wind prevented anyone from finding the green and means that both nearest the pins are rolled over to next Sunday. Longest drive on the day went to Ian Stewart.

Next Sunday it is the return of strokeplay and the Décor Services monthly medal.

This is the third in the series of eight island games qualifiers.

Members are asked to sign in by 9:00 for a 9:15 tee-off.

Cruise bosses 'lack spine' in face of Argentine bullying

THE increasingly unavoidable fact that cruise companies are cancelling visits to the Falklands due to pressure from Argentina was described this week as extremely disappointing by MLA Mike Summers who said it demonstrated a "worrying lack of spine" among the executives of the companies in question. He added that this kind of harassment of a small and innocent community on the part of its large neighbour was disgraceful and deserved world-wide condemnation.

The threat posed by Argentine action against cruise liners that visit the Falklands entered a new phase on Wednesday this week with the news that the departure from Buenos Aires of the cruise ship Seabourn Sojourn was delayed by industrial action.

Buenos Aires newspaper

Infobae reported that according to a representative of a Group calling itself Resistencia Malvinas, the withdrawal of the service of a tug by members of the United Port Workers' Union had prevented the ship from leaving port. He claimed that, "it has been blockaded, like the frigate Libertad in Ghana."

According to the same spokesman, the boycott of the vessel would be maintained until its agents agreed to sign an undertaking not to visit the Falklands, or until either the justice system or the Argentine Foreign Ministry should intervene.

In the event, though the Seabourn Sojourn was not able to leave Buenos Aires at 5pm on Tuesday as planned, its departure was eventually permitted seven hours later and the vessel was seen to be entering the Port of Montevideo the following morning at around eight o'clock.

According to the ship tracking website www.seascanner.com on Wednesday morning, the Seabourn Sojourn was still due to leave Montevideo in the early afternoon of Wednesday and expected to arrive in Stanley at 9am on Saturday.

On Thursday, a further article in the Buenos Aires press said that when the Seabourn Sojourn left Montevideo for Puerto Madryn there was still no official confirmation that it had agreed to abandon its visit to Stanley.

The Infobae article on Wednesday concluded with another statement from the Resistencia Malvinas Group to the effect that the 700 passenger cruise ship Seven Seas Mariner, due in Stanley in February, would now be visiting Puerto Madryn instead.

Youths at Parliament

YOUNG Islanders Krysteen Ormond and Stacy Bragger joined the Commonwealth Youth Parliament in London this week.

The Falkland delegates made some good contributions to the group debates particularly under the party group entitled 'Determining For The Future' where they were able to successfully highlight the importance of self-determination from their own experience.

This was the fifth CYP in the UK, this year's marking the Diamond Jubilee year of the Queen. The three-day programme, December 5-7, focussed on the theme of governance, exploring the topic at a local, national and international level.

Delegates have split their time between the historic and ornate surroundings of Parliament and the Greater London Assembly, and obtained insights into issues that affect the Commonwealth populations.

Full report on events next week.

MLA Cheek - Supportive meeting with Prime Minister at Number 10

LEADERS of British Overseas Territories, including Falkland Islands Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek met with the Prime Minister at Number 10 Downing Street on Wednesday afternoon.

MLA Cheek and MLA Sharon Halford are in London attending the Overseas Territories Joint Ministerial Council. It meets for the first time to drive forward implementation of the White Paper: The Overseas Territories: Security, Success and Sustainability.

Speaking to Penguin News from London MLA Cheek said: "I felt the meetings went well and we participated in all sessions. The visit to No 10 was very pleasant and began with the walk up the staircase lined with photographs of past Prime Ministers."

They were then joined by the Prime Minister for tea and, "he made a point of speaking to everyone and is clearly well briefed on the issues affecting each territory."

MLA Cheek said: "This was a significant first for Overseas Territories delegation leaders to be received by the Prime Minister. It was a clear demonstration of support for the Overseas Territories."

The Joint Ministerial Council closed on Wednesday with the agreement of a joint communiqué which sets out priority issues and a comprehensive action plan for joint work in the coming year.

Comment by Deputy Editor John Fowler

IN the past I have occasionally argued against investing too much money on the servicing of the large cruise ship industry, unless what we were spending money on for them were also things of direct benefit to the community, like a new museum, roads, public toilets, a market place or maybe even a cinema.

My reason for this caution was not only the example of some small ports in Alaska which had tarted themselves up to the extent that a visit to them was no longer considered to be an "authentic Alaskan experience" by the cruise ship operators, who diverted their ships to other ports.

Large vessel cruising involves miracles of logistics and the overcoming of multiple problems, which make it a notoriously fickle industry, especially for ports, which like Stanley are not points of departure or arrival for passengers and can be bi-passed for a variety of legitimate reasons. My main fear was that as the arrival on our shores of large cruise ships was not down to our efforts, but to a combination of factors outside our sphere of influence, other events beyond our control might equally lead to their disappearance.

What I had in mind were factors which might burst the popularity bubble of these resorts of the seas, like the outbreak of some untreatable killer disease, a spectacular sinking, or, more likely an act of terrorism, like the hi-jacking of the Achille Lauro by the PLO in 1985.

Although no one has been killed, the recent cancellation of so many visits of big cruise ships, with a subsequent loss of a substantial amount of expected income for so many people is as a result of an act of terrorism, if not one of the kind that I had envisaged. In some ways it is worse, as its immediate effects are not global, but impact on us specifically, though one can but hope that there will also be a knock-on injurious effect on Argentina's standing as a cruise ship destination.

In one sense, one could compare large cruise ships to the Illex squid, which is profitable, but migratory and fickle. However, extending the analogy further we find that our dependable Loligo equivalent, the smaller expedition vessels which used to conduct passenger exchanges here before heading round our islands or to South Georgia and Antarctica, and were therefore more profitable per passenger, were already largely killed off some years ago by the Argentine government's ban on the charter flights which supplied them. This other despicable act of bullying should also not be forgotten amid the current disgust.

At first this seemed likely to be a case of Argentine wishful thinking as the website of the vessel's operators, Regent Cruises, a subsidiary of cruising giant Carnival, still indicated a Stanley arrival on February 8, to be followed on February 10 by a visit to the Patagonian port. However, later on Wednesday, local vessel agents Sullivan Shipping announced that the Seven Seas Mariner and the Regatta had cancelled calls to the Falklands planned for February 8 and 9, "in light of the Argentine government's actions against vessels arriving from the Falkland Islands."

Hattie Kilmartin, who with husband Kevin is one of the Falklands' largest employers of guides, drivers and catering staff on cruise ship days, described the news of the cancellations of Regatta and Seven Seas Mariner as "heartbreaking," and revealed that the Bluff Cove Tour's takings had been down by 62 per cent this November, due to cruise ship cancellations.

Resistencia Malvinas argues that the Seabourn Sojourn violated the Gaucho Rivero Law, which has been sanctioned by five Argentine provinces including Buenos Aires. That law originally purported to apply a ban on the use of all ports in the areas to which it applied to ships involved in any aspect of the exploration for hydrocarbons in Falklands waters.

When the Gaucho Rivero law was invoked last year to prevent access to Ushuaia by two large cruise ships which had previously visited the Falklands: P&O's Adonia and Princess Cruises' Star Princess, it caused widespread protests not only from the cruising industry, but also from tourist-related businesses in Ushuaia itself.

Wednesday's episode in Buenos Aires occurred a day after the Argentine Ambassador in London, Alicia Castro, was summoned to the Foreign Office to explain her country's apparent acquiescence in the face of the attacks by masked men on a Buenos Aires Shopping agency which apparently led to the cancellation of a visit to the Falklands of the cruise vessel, AidaCara. In a statement condemning the protests, which took place on Monday, November 19, the Foreign Office said: "We are deeply concerned to learn that a cruise company has taken the decision to cancel a visit to the Falkland Islands following a violent act of intimidation against their shipping agents in Buenos Aires. It is shameful that elements within a large country like Argentina should seek to strangle the economy of a small group of Islands. Such action benefits nobody and only condemns those who lend it support."

FCO Falklands team grows

THE reestablishment of a Falklands Department at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been announced by Peter Hayes, Director of the Overseas Territories, on Wednesday.

As part of a restructure of the Overseas Territories Directorate (OTD), three new departments will sit underneath OTD Martin Longden, who has visited the Islands twice since joining OTD in early 2011, will head the new Falklands & Southern Oceans Department.

Similarly, the Polar Regions Unit, which has responsibility for South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, will now be known as Polar Regions Department, headed by Jane Rumble.

Mr Hayes commented: "Whilst much of the rationale for this change is to bring OTD's structures into line with other FCO Directorates, the reestablishment of a Falklands Department also reflects the increasing political importance that Ministers and senior officials attach to our Falklands work.

"Supporting the Islanders' right to self-determination and economic development is a key FCO objective for 2012/13. We have increased by half the size of the Falklands team in London, whilst employing extra resource across our diplomatic network to assist with this effort (including new positions in Washington DC and Stanley)."

He said HMG and FIG together had made significant progress in promoting the rights of the Islanders.

Movember madness strikes the Narrows

SPURRED on by Hospital Manager, Michael Poole, but not necessarily in the service of either public health or personal hygiene, strange hairy growths have appeared on the faces of many - mainly men - in the Falklands and elsewhere this month.

Movember, a compression of the words moustache and November has become an annual event around the world, with strict rules and observances. Basically it requires the clean-shaven - once again almost exclusively masculine - to astound their friends by growing moustaches throughout the month, in exchange for charitable donations.

In Stanley all this hairy madness came to an official end at the Narrows Bar on Friday night at an event organised by Heather and Robin 'Snoozer' Smith who lead a group calling themselves the Stanley Services Seven.

The Stanley Services Seven

Apart from the ceremonial shaving off of several moustaches, the group had organised games and even the sale of moustaches for those incapable or unwilling to grow their own.

By all accounts a great time was had by all and a total of £551 was raised to be split between the Stephen Jaffray Fund and Cancer Awareness.

The organisers would like to thank all who supported this event in any way.

Your questions answered

Q DO you have to prove you are actively looking and applying for work to qualify for benefits and/or a free government property?

A Provided by Children's Social Worker & Acting Team Leader Glyn Hockney.

For benefits which are paid via the employment programme and which are administered by the training centre you are required to show evidence that you are seeking employment in order to qualify for assistance.

Welfare assistance has different criteria and is payable for people who are too ill to work or are single parents with young children under full time education age and they do not have to prove they are actively seeking full time employment.

Free government property:

There is no free government property although there is a rent rebate scheme which is operated by the treasury. Please contact them for details of eligibility criteria

New Legislation for FIDC

A PRESENTATION on new legislation governing the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC) was given to the meeting of the Falkland Islands Development Board (FIDB) on Wednesday, by legislative draughtsperson, Ronnie MacLennan-Baird.

The call for a new Ordinance which sets out, "to provide for the Falkland Islands Development Corporation to continue in existence as a body corporate, to make new provision for its purposes, management, operation and internal governance and connected purposes," was recognised some years ago, as the original Ordinance which dated from FIDC's beginnings in 1983, had been amended eight times, most recently in 2004.

Mr MacLennan-Baird told members that a review had been commissioned in 2008, but delayed until 2010.

Under the new arrangements suggested by the Bill are significant changes to the FIDB. It is proposed that the Board should have three members to be appointed by a special Appointments Board to be created by Executive Council (ExCO). These will be the Chairman, the Vice-Chairman and one other. The holder of the post currently titled General Manager FIDC and probably to be called Managing Director FIDC, (though some members thought this title misleading) will not be a member of the Board, but may attend and not vote. It is proposed that other members will be one MLA, the Chief Executive and up to four co-opted members to be appointed by the Board.

The presentation to the Board formed part of a consultation process which is open to all sectors of the community until December 21, this year.

Copies of the draft Bill which will be presented to Executive Council at its January meeting can be obtained by mail from FIDC, Shackleton House, POB 580, Stanley, or by email from sfaria@fidc.co.fk

Anyone wishing to discuss any aspect of the Bill is invited to call 27211 to arrange an appointment with FIDC General Manager, Marc Boucher.

Unasur rejects referendum

THE Union for South American Nations (Unasur) last week categorically rejected the Falkland Islands' March 2013 referendum during a summit that took place in Lima, Peru.

Argentine Vice-President Amado Boudou said: "It was a really important meeting due to two issues that were mentioned in the final communiqué. One is an explicit rejection to the self-determination and referendum that will take place in Malvinas islands and its eventual result. This reaffirms Argentina and the UN's 1985 stance. This is a political success for the President, but above all for Argentines."

The Argentine press announced last week that the Argentine government was embarking on an 'anti-referendum strategy'. This would include a campaign in the UK to persuade British political personalities not to attend the event as observers. A second effort, again according to the Buenos Aires media, is that two top Argentine diplomats will tour the Caribbean and Africa to inform of the "legitimate rights" of Argentina over the Falkland Islands and on the "inconvenience" of sending observers to the referendum.

CCTV is the key

"DUE to vigilance and the good work of the staff at the Seafish Chandlery a male was identified as being responsible for an offence of theft," according to a statement from the Royal Falkland Islands Police.

It noted: "This male was arrested and interviewed as part of a police investigation and received a citable caution which is held on record within the Falkland Islands. This is not the first time that CCTV at the store has been invaluable for the identification of persons involved in possible offences, and should continue to act as a deterrent for the future."

Ozone hole

THE average area covered by the Antarctic ozone hole this year was the second smallest in the last 20 years, according to data from NASA. The ozone hole reached its maximum size on September 22 when it covered 21.2 million square kilometres. The edge of the hole still sometimes extends over South Georgia.

Police suspension

A MEMBER of the Royal Falkland Islands Police has been suspended, "whilst an incident is being investigated," Director of Emergency Services Barry Marsden confirmed to Penguin News this week, adding that he could not make any further comment.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

ONE thing about politics here is its variety. We were recently contacted reference the lists of Islanders killed on active service in wars. It was thought that there were people missing from it. After some research it was found that the list, as read out at the cross, was correct, as far as we could tell. A Mr Biggs was missing from one of the plaques in the cathedral but the plaques on the cross itself seems to be woefully short of names of those who gave their lives and this will be corrected. Can I take this opportunity to ask the public whether they know of any other Islanders who have died on active service in wars who may not be mentioned? One omission seems to be a young lad of Steen who I believe was killed in the Vietnam War. On Remembrance Day we remember all those who died in all wars and to me it would only seem to be correct that he (and any others who gave their lives on active service) should be remembered. The list of names of all those Islanders known to have died on active service is available from Gilbert House and I would be happy to hear from anyone who may know of anyone who should be on it.

The activities of the thugs across the water seem to be increasing in an attempt to stop tourist vessels visiting the Islands and a report sent to me a few moments ago (on Wednesday) appears to be saying that they have targeted a vessel that called here recently. It's amazing that a country like Argentina that tries to sell itself as peaceful and democratic (apart from refusing to settle its debts etc) can, via proxy organisations such as Quebracho and unions effectively indulge in state sponsored blockades and vandalism, almost bordering on outright terrorism and repression. To the few of you out there in the Falklands who seem to want to preach understanding and, "give peace a chance," I say to you this: Argentina will never change its spots. If anything they are getting worse. Anyone who thinks otherwise is living in (a rather dangerous) cloud cuckoo land. Remember, what they want is our country, to take it away from us, to colonise us, to take away our freedom again. I for one will never give an inch to them. They can do their worst, we shan't buckle. There will be no surrender. If that makes me a hard liner, then so be it. Unlike the despotic regimen that we have the bad luck to be anchored next to, we have, despite their ever more desperate acts, a brilliant future. Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year to all.

Calm Christmas spending

AS the festive feeling starts coming to the Falklands, and we all realise that we have missed the last date for surface mail to the UK and will have to spend more money to get cards to our friends and family all over the world, there can be a feeling of spreading dread as the pennies mount up and the cost of the whole period becomes completely unmanageable. Then what should be a fun time becomes a time of stress and worry for many.

Recently there was an article in The Independent in the UK which was discussing the idea that consumers rush to be in debt in December and then seek help in January. We can all sympathise with this, but does it have to be that way?

The reality is that we all need to budget. This is a very hard thing to do when there are many businesses trying to sell us the latest electronic gadget or designer clothing, that we know our children, grandchildren, brother, sister, nephew, niece, etc wants or needs. But sticking to a budget may mean it's affordable.

It seems like a statement of the obvious, but all of the normal expenses happen in the month as well as the additional ones. If you find yourself running up your store cards and are secretly concerned as to how you are going to repay them, or writing out the third cheque of the day knowing that it is going to clear the account of all of the funds, then time has definitely come to think about the overall picture of Christmas.

Some advice which may help is:

1. Make a list of your normal expenditure and then see how much money you have left over to work out the total budget.
2. Make a list of the things you actually need.
3. Make an agreement with certain family members or friends, not to buy presents, or set an amount for presents to limit expenditure.
4. Set a budget for each person's present and stick to it!

5. Send a voucher rather than a present and then there is no temptation to overspend on the bigger or prettier item on the shelf.

Added to the above is the knowledge that most of us will get paid in mid-December instead of the end due to office opening times and bank requirements. While this may help put cash in your pocket now, be extra careful as January 29 will seem like a very long way away if you overspend during the festive period.

Remember, some expenses such as rent or loan repayments will still be made on the same day – in most cases this is the last day of December. Also remember that food bills might be higher as we all tend to over buy and maybe even spend more phoning or skypping with friends and family overseas.

That all said, if anyone needs assistance to budget or plan or general advice then there is help available from the Citizen's Advice Bureau Monday to Friday from 4.30 to 6.00 on 55355. Someone will be able to take your call and find someone to assist if they can not help you straight away. It is a free and confidential service so please don't bury your head in the sand if you need help on any matter, shout!

C&W sale

CABLE & Wireless Communications Plc (CWC) announced this week it had agreed with Bahrain's Batelec Group the sale of the majority of the assets of its Monaco & Islands business unit for an enterprise value of US$680 million.

CWC will divest its entire shareholdings in its businesses in The Maldives, Channel Islands and Isle of Man, the Seychelles, South Atlantic and Diego Garcia as well as creating a partnership with Batelec for CWC's 55 per cent shareholding in Monaco Telecom.

Chief Executive of C&W in the Falkland Islands Justin McPhee, said: "We are pleased with today's announcement that Cable & Wireless South Atlantic will be joining the Batelec Group. Batelec is an international telecoms operator respected for delivering value and innovation to its customers. Batelec is committed to the continuing development of our businesses in the Falkland Islands and the South Atlantic and will also benefit from its international partnerships and relationships. Nonetheless, our focus will remain on delivering the best services to our customers within the Falklands."

The sale is subject to the satisfaction of necessary regulatory and other conditions, and is expected to complete by the end of CWC's current financial year.

St Helena will be 'ready enough'

FORMER Managing Director of the Falkland Island Development Corporation, Julian Morris, now Executive Officer of Economic Development on St Helena, has been caught up in a tight schedule of meetings during his visit over the past week, to encourage Falklands' business investment in St Helena.

Speaking to Penguin News, he explained that with the exciting advent of air access to St Helena in 2016, there were now fast growing opportunities for business development as the island moves towards, not only being, "ready enough" for the anticipated increase in tourists, (currently 2,177 per annum with the aim of 30,000 by 2020) but the likely positive impact on other business sectors.

Laying out the aims of his visit to the Falklands he said from a general point of view it was, "important that people down here know what is happening up there because there is a lot of interaction between the two communities."

More vitally perhaps, Mr Morris has been setting out to Falklands' businesses the coming opportunities on St Helena. A number of Falklands businesses have already invested in St Helena, "so now with the airport we want to see what other areas can be targeted."

He said in sectors such as: fishing, aviation services, shipping and retail, typically Falklands businesses, "have more cash and capacity than Saint businesses, and in terms of investment I and the island would rather have more of that coming from the Falklands, where there is a connection than from elsewhere."

Mr Morris is also looking at the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) and the St Helena Government working more closely together: "I've already experienced that since I've been there, and because I know people in FIG I can pick up the phone to them and that's been extremely useful for both sides."

He also believes with regard to strategic issues such as politics, there might be ways the Falklands and St Helena can benefit from, "more joined up thinking."

Mr Morris and the population of St Helena are working within a very tight time-frame. When the British Government made the decision to fund an airport it was unexpected, as the issue had been raised and then dropped by HMG for many years. "People were unprepared for it happening so fast," said Mr Morris.

The four year build contract is one year in already and so far is, "on target and on budget."

Mr Morris is, "optimistic that the island will be ready enough. In the first year we put together a plan of how we are going to address this issue."

The next step was to put in place the components to deliver that plan, "as well as doing some proper work. Now we are pretty much engaged on the proper work."

Those components include: inward investment (getting hotel businesses to come and build on island, where currently there are only 18 rooms available); increasing the capability and capacity of Saint businesses on the island, "in order to take advantage of this situation," and, "linked to that, but also separate, is the 'up-skilling' of Saints."

Next week a hospitality training school will be launched in St Helena so that Saints, "will not just be employed in businesses, but running things themselves."

Providing finance for businesses and international promotion are two further components, however, Mr Morris is also responsible for shipping, the airport project and fisheries development.

Changes are already happening he explained. As a result of the airport project he has agreed a new ten year deal with Cable &

Wireless which has meant cheaper rates and significant improvements. The island has also gone from three TV channels to 15 and mobile phones will 'happen' next year.

Mr Morris made it clear that he was not in the Falklands in order to target Saints to return home to work, although part of the organisation he is running is, "definitely targeting that with some success, but when wages in Stanley are four to five times higher than they are in St Helena, people will only move to be in a better situation."

He added: "So we have no expectation of Saints from Stanley moving back to the island, but from the UK and South Africa definitely; that's where we are having quite a bit of success."

Over recent years, with wages low and few opportunities for the younger generation, the population of St Helena has reduced from around 6,000 to approximately 4,000.

Mr Morris said, "I'm there to help the island change and it needs that change in my view as wages are too low. Half the people of working age are off-island as there aren't the jobs on the island and 20 per cent of kids at school don't have at least one parent on the island."

Summing up, Mr Morris commented that although the Falklands and St Helena were very different in many ways, there was also a parallel: "The airport is going to be St Helena's 1982 and it will change the economy and be a catalyst."

He said the parallel had given him a lot of encouragement: "Rapid change in a small community is a lot easier to do than rapid change in a bigger place," and the Falklands, he said, provided a perfect example of this.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Anniversary of the Battle of the Falkland Islands

The following programme has been arranged for Saturday 8th December 2012 to commemorate the victory of the Naval engagements of 8th December 1914, on which day 6 British sailors lost their lives and a number of others died later from injuries received during the battle. 2,260 German sailors also lost their lives.

At 9.25 am detachments representing British Forces Falkland Islands and the Falkland Islands Defence Force will enter Christ Church Cathedral, where at 9.45 am the customary Memorial Service will begin, led by the clergy from Stanley and the Force Chaplain. His Excellency the Governor together with the Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands and Members of Legislative Assembly will attend. Members of the Public are very welcome to attend this service and are asked please to be seated by 9.30 am.

At the conclusion of the memorial service at about 10.15 am the Parade, led by the School of Music Band of Her Majesty's Royal Marines, will march to the Battle Memorial.

At 10.45 am the parade will arrive at the Battle Memorial. Members of the various youth organisations will be present. At 10.58 His Excellency the Governor will arrive at the Battle Memorial and will inspect the Parade. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath, followed by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, and representatives of the Royal British Legion and Associations.

After the ceremony at the Battle Memorial there will be a march past. His Excellency the Governor will take the Salute from a dais at the entrance gates to Government House lawns.

Members of the public wishing to attend the ceremony are asked to arrive no later than 10.50 am.

It is appropriate for decorations and medals to be worn on this occasion

1. What is your most prized possession? At the moment it's probably my job! No idea how I got it but I'm aiming to be the next Roger Spink by the time I'm 20!

2. What is the worst piece of advice you have ever been given? "Remember, grass doesn't sober you up," from Drew on my 16th birthday

3. If you had a motto, what would it be? Well I have 'Live with a smile' tattooed on my arm so it would be pretty stupid to say anything else

4. What is your most embarrassing moment? To date: taking me over a week to do these questions

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Being woken up

6. What is your nickname and why? "Leighsuff!" I have no idea as it's making my name longer. Recently Sian has started to call me "Leighfranrob"

7. What is your favourite TV programme? For the few who know it 'Blue Mountain State'. I got so addicted to it that someone even bought a BMS T-Shirt which I wear to bed

8. What's the best book you have read recently? 'Shantaram' by Gregory David Roberts. It's big book and I've read it five times. Sad to say that was what my holiday in Spain mainly consisted of

9. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Bread

10. What is your happiest childhood memory? I don't think there's one memory that I don't like from when I was younger. I grew up in camp and managed to find something to do every single day, I was never bored - that's something to be happy about Islander Leigh grew up at Port Stephens where she tore around the Camp with her two older brothers, Dion and Drew. She returned to the Islands this year to work as a graduate trainee manager at FIC. In her free time she enjoys running, jagermeister and 'riding for Lane'.

They are also tasked to determine what factors might prevent any elector from standing for election.

In particular your opinions are sought on the following:

What constraints are there to prevent you or others from standing for election?

Should Assembly Members be fully paid?

Would you consider standing if Members were made full time and adequately paid?

If fully paid what level of pay and other incentives might attract young home owners to stand for election?

If fully paid how do you see the role of Members changing?
If made full-time, should Members have to resign their jobs which might interfere with Assembly business?

Please come along and persuade your friends to come along to discuss this important issue.

You will be listened to!

Referendum Political Status of the Falkland Islands March 2013

Remember that you will only be able to have your say by participating in the Referendum if you are on the Electoral Register

Not around on polling day - what are my options?

Sometimes people are away on polling day, or are not able to get to their polling station for other reasons, but this doesn't mean that they have to miss out on voting. They could apply in writing for either a postal, proxy or proxy postal vote.

What exactly does this mean?

Postal vote applications – you can vote by post

Anyone can apply to have their ballot papers sent to them through the post instead of going to vote in person at a polling station. By completing and submitting a Postal Vote Application Form, you can choose to vote by post.

Proxy vote applications – a person nominated by you can vote on your behalf

Anyone may appoint a proxy to vote on their behalf. If the elector is unable to attend their polling station in person on polling day, by completing and submitting a Proxy Voting Application Form, the elector can arrange for someone to vote on their behalf.

Postal Proxy Voting – a person nominated by you to vote on your behalf can apply to vote by post

Anyone appointed as a proxy to vote on someone else's behalf, may, by notice in writing delivered to the registration officer, apply to be allowed to vote as proxy by post.

For further information or an application form please

Fond memories new friendships

MY name is Alan Dodsworth. My brother Mark fell alongside 22 of his 3 Para comrades on Mount Longdon during the conflict in 1982.

I, along with my wife, have recently had the privilege of visiting the Islands for the first time and wanted to record my sincere and heartfelt thanks to the Islanders for their welcome, hospitality and the affection shown to me during our visit.

I would also like to convey my thanks to Ellen, Smokey, Karen and everyone involved with the Liberty Lodge, without whom I don't believe my dream of making the journey would have been realised. The work they do is exemplary and their commitment to it is unwavering.

Special thanks need to go to the drivers, Brian and Keith who made my visit everything I had hoped for, especially Keith aka 'Crocodile Dundee' who drove me to the top of Mount Longdon, allowing me to see and place my feet at the very place Mark fell. I have a physical disability with limited balance and walk with the aid of stick, therefore was unsure whether this would be possible. Keith, however, wasn't having any of it and ensured that I got to where I wanted to go. Gentlemen, your skill, commitment and knowledge is worthy of greater acknowledgement than I can ever bestow, but what you gave me is an experience I shall never forget and for that I will forever be in your debt. Thank You.

I have taken many things away with me on my return home, not only fond memories and new friendships, but two things I hold most dear. One is that the islands are now real to me, no longer a name on an Order of Service or a Memorial Stone. The other is the overwhelming affirmation that the wonderful people who live there will never forget the brave many that returned home in 1982, and the brave few who paid the ultimate price; that their and their families' sacrifice was not in vain.

I hope to return soon.

With love and best wishes

More money but no real change

WITH regard to the suggestion to pay £40,000 per annum to MLAs while I agree it is right to pay MLAs a salary I feel that before anyone starts to consider what is a fair wage to offer them someone should be bringing to the attention of the MLAs the huge pay gap between the lowest and highest paid in our society.

It was suggested some time ago that £20,000 per annum could sustain a reasonable standard of living. If this is the case then before offering what could be seen as the pot of gold to anyone in that minority category, we should be addressing the pay structure across all sectors of employment. A lot of good people are working for peanuts and doing an excellent job because they care for what they do, while others getting massive salaries couldn't give a toss because it is the fat pay check they signed up for.

If the country cannot guarantee that even the lowest paid be in the £20,000 per annum (reasonable standard of living bracket) how on earth can one justify paying this proposed amount to MLAs many of whom are likely to get re-elected and could still be employed in their business one way or another if they have one.

I actually believe we are going to see many people stand for council just on the chance to earn this wage alone. It would be for many that pot of gold they dreamed of.

The vast majority of eligible Islanders who could stand for council would likely see this as a meal ticket. £40,000 per annum is almost five years wages for a lot of people in the lowest paid sector, and dare I say many of them with a pretty good degree of intelligence are working for peanuts because others are getting those better paid jobs above them because of inside knowledge.

While it is widely accepted that MLAs are seen as being accountable for their actions has anyone actually been held accountable? By giving MLAs a super pay packet will it be that the constituents will demand more accountability because it will be tax payers money that foots these wages?

Does this not open the door for anyone to have a go because with little or no accountability money could be the attraction?

One should ideally be standing for council who has the best interests of their constituents and their country in mind rather than the pot of gold that most will likely be standing for if such a wage was offered.

Will elected MLAs actually do their job any better if they are on a full employment system? Probably not, because if my thinking is correct up until now most who are or have served on council go with the majority decisions so in effect nothing but the amount of money each will get will actually change.

Tea towel FI politics in Dubai

I thought you might be interested in (and possibly amused by) an incident that occurred during the weekend just passed.

I had taken my three children (all, you may know, born in the Falkland Islands) to the Dubai Rugby Sevens. On the second day, the Saturday, there was a match-up between England and Argentina so we took along and held up a tea towel I had bought from the Harbour View Gift Shop that has as a pattern of a map of the Falkland Islands in outline filled in with the Union flag and the words 'Falkland Islands' below. It is pretty much the same logo as on the baseball caps we were wearing. My children noticed that some of the Argentine players had remarked to each other after spotting the tea towel while warming up but that was all.

However, when Argentina later played Scotland I again held up the tea towel during the game. At the end of the game the towel was spotted by some Argentine fans sitting nearby and one in particular took offence. He signalled that he and I should leave the stands to discuss it. I responded, "There's nothing to talk about," and then remembered that I had brought along in my bag a shirt also from the Harbour View that reads 'Keep Calm and Keep the Falklands British'. When I took this out and held it up to him it was like a red rag to a bull. Well in this case, a red T-shirt to a ... (I will leave you to complete the sentence).

He promptly stormed over and wittered on that it was no joke, it was a very serious issue to some people and many had died over the islands.

"I know," I said, "and you started it," but then realised we were at danger of getting into the conversation I did not want to have so I just told him to sit down because I wanted to watch the rugby. At this he said he would, "take matters further," and went back to his seat.

I could see the headline: 'Man Arrested for waving a tea towel.' What another propaganda coup! As it was, perhaps regrettably, nothing did happen but the moral of the story is clear. Next time the Falkland Islands delegation visits the UN they should get themselves along to the Harbour View and stock up on tea towels to display at the meeting. The effect on your sensitive Argentine neighbours is a wonder to behold. Keep desiring that right.

Unhinged by hurtful comment

DEAR Sir or Madam. The written words struck me as deeply as a knife!

As a member of our community and proud to be refereed to by many locals as, "a bloody contractor," - a salutation which cheers me up actually as I am informed by Auntie Sharon (a charming wench of a certain age one thinks) also of The Penguin News - "it's a term of endearment in your case Ken."

I was shocked and horrified to read today that I might well be within the age category of 'Old Farts' as referred to by 'young Lisa': she the author of the same hurtful Penguin News Editorial article last Friday 30 November which referred to 'Old Farts'.

I had to be physically comforted by my work colleague Nick Rendell (a trainee Old Fart) as I was deeply distressed and reduced to tears - shame on you Lisa.

Please could you define precisely at what age does one become an 'Old Fart' and is there a FI Old Farts Association one can join?

Yours sincerely, outraged, emotionally drained and now unhinged and also feeling very unloved of Emsworth.

ALSO, it's fair to say that we don't have this trouble, wait for it, wait for it.....in the UK!

Help reunite old friends

MY name is Ian Tautz. I serve in the Royal Air Force and I'm due to deploy to MPA for a third time this coming February.

On this occasion I would like to reunite with some people I went travelling with in 1998. I was lucky enough to represent the UK at the Scout Jamboree in Chile and was accommodated with about 12 Girl Guides from the Falkland Islands. These are the people I would like to get in touch and catch up with.

However, I have no names for these girls. Can anyone help?

Three diminutive running figures, against the vast expanse of the Falklands landscape, with a very long way still to go

18 hours for 75 mile charity 'tab'

THREE footsore but triumphant ex members of 9 Parachute Squadron, Royal Engineers arrived at Government House in Stanley on Friday to be greeted by Acting Governor, Ric Nye.

The trio Falklands War veterans Steve 'Billy' Morris, Bob Chatterton and Jamie Rankin, who is a veteran of tours in both Afghanistan and Iraq, had just completed the magnificent feat of running from Port San Carlos to Stanley in under 20 hours.

Support for the runners was provided by Sam Lane-Samson, who, besides being a colleague of Steve and Bob, was also for some years a Falklands resident.

Starting at a quarter to three on Thursday afternoon, their route retraced the tactical advance 2 Troop made in support of 3 Parachute Battalion the Parachute Regiment. The run commenced at the point where 2 Troop came ashore at Green Beach on May 21 1982 and from there took them to Estancia via Douglas Station and Teal Inlet on the road, after which point they made an overland detour to the summit of Mount Longdon, before heading for Stanley via Moody Brook.

On Mount Longdon the group paused for a while to pay their respects to a fallen colleague, Corporal 'Scotty' Wilson, who in 1982 was a member of 2 Troop Royal Engineers, in support of the 3rd Parachute Regiment.

Much help for the group, who were self-funding and running in aid of the charities Combat Stress and Sama 82, was given by local people, including Ellen Davis at Liberty Lodge, Tony and Ailsa Heathman at Estancia and by tour guide, Keith Heathman, who helped the runners with a vehicle reconnaissance to find a safe cross-country route from Estancia to Mount Longdon.

While the latest information available to Penguin News suggests that the group is still somewhat short of its £5,000 target, there is still time for more on-line donations, if you enter Bob Chatterton's name in the Just giving web site: www.justgiving.com.

Stripping off in the Rose for charity

Smooth-chested Tommy, showing off the gains from his pains

THE Rose Bar has been the venue for a number of unusual fund raising events over the years which include both people and sheep shearing, but Sunday's gathering witnessed a very close shave as a Scots oil worker concluded his Movember activities by having a full chest wax.

Tommy McLeod who works for MI Swaco and has visited the Islands regularly over the last year, had already shed his moustache which had raised £550 for local charities, and in a bid to boost funds further had offered to have his chest waxed.

Local beautician Mikaela Ford took up the challenge and as the wax pot warmed, a decidedly nervous Tommy prepared for the ordeal.

The first strip brought a resounding yell and one of the fastest sit ups on record. As funds swelled so did Tommy's confidence and with the pot sitting at £900 he took the brave decision to offer his arm pits for a thorough stripping if a total of £1,000 could be raised. Before another "aahh ya bih" could pass his lips a squall of notes hit the table and his fate was determined along with a grand total of £1,150 making its way to local charities.

Joe 'Windy' Newell was on hand to receive the monies and assured it would be distributed among local charities, including something for the younger generation.

A somewhat flushed Tommy said that over the last year he had met a lot of great people on the Islands and he hoped that the contribution would go some way to show his appreciation.

With regard to his depilation, Tommy said: "Without the generosity of all who donated it would have just been another idea that would have ended up in my 'Wit the hell was ah thinkin?' back catalogue, so a very sincere thank you to all involved."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 29 November 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A RISE of 15 cents was seen this week after the AWEX closed at 1,034 AUS/cents/kg. The highest price seen in November. Oddments and 19 - 22 micron fleece was the biggest earners of the week, especially at the last sale of the week where the majority of the price rises were seen.

The prices were surprising the traders based on the large offering of 52,491 bales which achieved a 91% sale rate. Large volumes are on offer over the next two, and final weeks, of the 2012 season.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Full house at Cathedral's Advent Market

WHETHER for the chance of being served tea and cake by the Attorney General, Mark Lewis or Legislative Draughtsman, Ronnie MacLennan Baird, both immaculate in white shirts and bow ties, or for the chance of buying some early Christmas presents, the Stanley community turned out in force for the Cathedral's Advent Market on Saturday.

As always, there was something for all tastes and ages, together with many an opportunity to catch up with old friends and acquaintances for a chin wag.

At the end of a very enjoyable afternoon the Cathedral's funds had been swelled by what Cathedral Treasurer Viv Perkins described as a "very welcome sum" of £1,816.43.

Biggest money earner on the day was the Cakes and Bakes stall raising £677.65, while the ever-popular raffle raised £356.

In order of profitability, but not necessarily in the order of fun they supplied, the next big earners were the gift stall with £192.13, the Cathedral Crafts stall with £170.80 and the Café with £101.40.

Most fun, for children anyway, was probably provided by the various games on offer, which also contribute to the overall total.

These were: Jar Tombola £38.15, Teddy Tombola £32.50, Ping pong Challenge and Stairway to heaven £39.30, Treasure Hunt £76.80, Trash or Treasure £23.50, Tinsel Tug and Six Socks £22.60.

Viv Perkins thanks the public for their support and all those who devoted so much time and energy to make the market a success.

Road safety with PC Ford

YEAR One learned their Green Cross Code last Friday when PC Nobby Ford dropped by the Infant and Junior School to give a talk on how to 'stop, look and listen' to the class. He also judged a poster competition with the theme of road safety, won by Nora and Sahara (pictured above) for their eye-catching use of colour.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

DID I not warn you to expect high winds? Obviously together with hail stones and a small amount of rain which was enough to make you feel a bit damp but not enough to cover the garden's needs. So, it was nice and rather comforting to wake up one night recently to the sound of real rain on the roof: bliss! It was a bit disappointing though to find there had only been enough to wet the surface of the rather parched soil, so I hope we get some more to soak in to it. If not I shall go and give everything a good soak to ensure the roots do not come to the surface for moisture. I don't worry about watering established lawns; although I hate to think just how very dry it must be in the camp, poor animals, the grass out there also quickly recovers given a bit of rain.

I forgot to mention too about the peas in the guttering. The plastic strip worked a treat, I was able to just hold one end of the plastic strip whilst Bill walked backwards with the guttering. The result was a nice straight row of three inch high peas.

We have three small grape vines, two are of black grapes and one is a green one. None of them are more than two foot six inches tall but all of them are dripping with little fruits. I guess a certain amount of thinning is going to be called for this year.

Speaking of thinning, like most people I own a mobile phone but receive on average only two calls a week; however, when planting the swede seeds last week the phone rang five times! I was planting on a raised bed and using a plank of the right width to get the distance I wanted between rows (it saves fiddling about with lines and sticks). I could not remember after each call where I had got to so I guess we will either have blank rows

bush and right:

or very thickly sown ones; busy times ahead!

Self set potatoes are always to be expected; small potatoes are often hard to see at lifting time, but when the potatoes turn out to be a great size for baking the whole thing becomes rather embarrassing! On the subject of potatoes ours look to be in good nick still, sitting in their cupboard in the dark. The only ones giving any cause for concern are the 'Desiree' spuds; they are fine when freshly cooked but turn a grey and un-appetizing colour almost immediately afterwards, probably something to do with our soil. I've already planted more for this season so I shall just have to remember to use them before the rest.

During one of my plant patrols the other day I spotted yet another dandelion rearing its flowering head, this time amongst a large clump of paeonies, and so I stepped in to remove it immediately. No great problem in itself, however, I lost my balance stepping back on to the path and fell over; right in the middle of the paeony! Of course when something like that happens to you immediately look around to check you're alone and that no one has seen your tumble don't you? Oops! I looked up and sure enough there were a whole bunch of tourists stopped in the drive taking photographs. Ah well, laughter is the same in any language.

Some of the new potatoes are really coming on well now and it is perhaps time, if they are tall enough, to start hoeing them up. This will help protect them from wind and frosts and also give the roots a bit more space.

Nature abhors a vacuum and all the areas where grasses and dandelions have been shifted from are now colonised by chickweed. Still, that weed shows that the ground is now becoming quite fertile.

As all veg is now planted and, for the moment, I can forget about them, I must now turn my attention to the flower beds. They are looking a bit tattered following the high winds we've had. But, the flag irises are in bud and soon their glorious big flowers will open as will the paeonies.

The rhododendrons are still flowering, just, but the lewisias are looking fantastic. There are an awful lot of bulb tops out there so I'm willing the larger plants on to grow and cover them; the hostas will certainly do that once they get going. The Embothrium (Chilean fire bush) is superb this year and the Syringa (lilac) is just opening as are the flowers of the Ceanothus (Californian lilac).

I have had some 'pips' of Convalaria for years which all planted in one area; they survived but that is all. Last year I treated them in the same way as I do most other plants and put bits of them in various areas; it worked! Some will probably never reappear but those that did come up have flowered for the first time, with wonderful scent.

Bill helped me to plant the new fruit trees from the garden centre yesterday. We now have apple 'family' trees; that is they have had other apples grafted on them to ensure they fertilise each other. We've got a pear 'family' tree too; a sweet cherry tree and a plum complete the new purchases.

JAN Turley, a Netball coach with experience in training England's finest, has been working with Stanley Netball Club this week on a visit funded by the Shackleton Fund.

At their Tuesday training session she told Penguin News how impressed she was with how the team were already playing, and said her role as a visiting coach was to inject some fresh ideas and drills into their training, and dust off any bad habits.

Her focus in the session was developing the teams umpiring knowledge and skill, something the club has struggled with in the past. "I want to set up drills and set up practices they can get on with when I go and can build on in the future," she said.

The enthusiastic ladies of the Netball Club had plenty of questions for the coach and organised a busy week of practices to make the most of her visit, but she still found time to drop in at the schools. Jan said she had enjoyed her time in the Islands and, if the team would have her back, would be happy to visit again.

Stanley Netball Club meets weekly at Stanley Leisure Centre, Tuesday 6pm, new members are welcome.

FIFTEEN golfers signed in for the Décor Services sponsored monthly medal. Strong winds from the north usually do not impact too greatly on scoring and this was no exception as many returned fine scores. None better than Richard Bonner who posted a personal best round of 89 for a nett 64 and first place.

Breaking 90 is one of several milestones in golf; breaking 80 is next up for Richard and by the average of his card, that will not be too long in coming. Second place went to Tony McMullen with a fine round of 77 for a nett 65.

Nearest the pins, carried over from last Sunday, went to Tony McMullen on the 12th and Ian Stewart on the 17th.

In the Island Games section, another good round for Roy Smith who played much better than his 75, which included a rare bird, an excellent eagle on the par five 18th. Roy leads the way in qualification for those with three rounds but if we take the best two, then Wayne Clement is in good shape with rounds of 72 and 77.

The match play is progressing well with most first round matches now complete. A good win for Adrian Lowe over Glenn Ross sees him meet the in-form Rod Tuckwood in the next round.

We bid fond farewells to two of our regular Sunday golfers. David Beynon heads back to the lovely Pennard Golf Course, ranked 55th in the UK top 100 golf course, and Ric Nye heads back to somewhere near Gatwick. We thank Ric for his work on the committee and for giving up his Saturday mornings over the past two years to look after our junior section.

Next Sunday it is the welcome return of a Stableford competition and this time sponsored by Morrison's.

Members are asked to sign in by 9:00 for a 9:15 tee-off.

Karate Club MPA trip

THE Karate Club started their Christmas season officially on Saturday December 1 with an outing to play Laser quest and Ten Pin Bowling at MPA. All 18 children enjoyed themselves and relaxed after their boisterous activities to watch a fun movie Madagascar 3 in 3D.

The club will shut for a two week break on Friday 14th December and restart early in the New Year, a date will be announced in the Penguin News. The club is looking forward to Chief Instructor Dave Wilkins proposed visit to the Islands in January 2013 (dates to be confirmed). A huge thank you from the Karate Club students to Carlos and the Laser quest team for a fab day out. Also to Gabbi, Rena, Rachel, Guido and Tom for helping with transport and joining in the fun.

Tourism own goal for CFK

ATTEMPTS by a group of activists to apply to cruise ships a regional law originally designed to hinder oil exploration in Falklands waters now appears to be back-firing, to the fury of the Argentine tourist industry, with the news that ports in that country are now being avoided by international cruise companies.

The Quebracho Patriotic Revolutionary Group, led by notorious political activist, Tony Lopez, which had delayed the departure from Buenos Aires of the Seabourn Sojourn earlier in the week, were waiting for the vessel in the southern port of Ushuaia after its unsuccessful visit to the Falklands on Saturday.

The group, which have been described by some commentators as "Cristina's thugs" were hoping to enforce a regional (as opposed to federal) law designed to prevent the berthing in ports belonging to signatory regions of any vessels with British flags or the flags of countries associated with Britain, involved in the exploitation of natural resources in the South Atlantic.

Aware of the Quebracho group's presence and their intentions, representatives of the owners of the Seabourn Sojourn and of the Veendam, which was also scheduled to visit Ushuaia, wrote to the port authorities requesting a guarantee of their vessels' security. When no response was received, the decision was taken to by-pass Ushuaia in favour of the Chilean port of Punta Arenas.

According to reports in Ushuaia's local paper El Diario del Fin del Mundo, this decision was communicated to government officials in Tierra del Fuego by the ships' owners, who added that they would now be reconsidering their vessels' itineraries for the rest of the season.

Hard on the heels of this cancellation, which was described as a "catastrophe" by the Ushuaia

Tourism Chamber of Commerce, P&O announced that they were cutting Argentine ports from the scheduled world cruises of two of their ships the Arcadia and Adonia, but would still be visiting Stanley.

This welcome news was later confirmed by a Penguin News reader who is booked with his wife on the Arcadia's 2013 world cruise. He wished to congratulate P&O on what he described as, "their bold and brave decision to strip out the three ports of call in Argentina because of the threats and intimidation to ships, their passengers and crew coming from the mainland towards vessels that visit the Falklands."

John Thorpe, who lives in Cyprus, pointed out that the Argentine ports will be the losers, as he and his wife had already paid £600 for three tours, which would now be refunded. This was quite apart from any other money they might have spent ashore in Argentina.

The scale of Argentina's potential financial loss was not lost on Mr Marcelo Letti of the Ushuaia Tourist Chamber of Commerce who is quoted in Argentine papers as saying, "The fact is that these two ships (Seabourn Sojourn and Veendam) have already announced the cancellation of all their further visits this season. Just these two ships means the loss of 18,000 passengers, or to put it another way the loss of 18,000 sentries into the National Park, port taxes, taxi rides, souvenir purchases and excursions."

Mr Letti said the situation could become even more grave if, as announced, the major cruise ship companies decided to abandon the country as a destination. "What we lose in a minute could take us years to recover" he said.

Sea Spirit (112) Bremen (184) and Le Boreal (220) are scheduled to visit the Falklands this week.

De-mining resumes next month

THE next phase of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Explosive Ordnance and Landmine Clearance Programme is to be carried out between January and March 2013 by BACTEC International Limited, who undertook the first two phases.

This is the third such phase of explosive ordnance and landmine clearance in the Falkland Islands. The first was carried out in 2010 with the successful clearance of areas that included Surt Bay, Goose Green and Sapper Hill, as well as land clearance on Stanley Common in 2012 that opened up a large area including the Stone Corral.

The scope of work for Phase Three is the clearance of one known, fenced, minefield in the part of Stanley Common that was released for public use earlier this year, as well as the clearance of the large (currently restricted) area just to the north and west of Mile Pond, which, it is suspected, contains two minefields.

Additionally, a further minefield just to the north of and bordering the Stanley to Goose Green Road, which was subjected to some clearance in 1982, is to be re-processed/cleared and the land released for public use.

Any available time will be used to carry out further land release to the east of Round Pond heading towards the Eliza Cove Road.

The BACTEC team will consist of 51 Zimbabwean demining personnel, most of who have already worked on Phases One and Two.

Phillimon Gonamombe will again be the Operations Manager and the project will be directed by Guy Lucas, who in 1982 set up the post conflict clearance and also directed the 2009/10 and 2012 programmes. Guy has first-hand experience and knowledge of the Islands and the task at hand.

Unlike the 2012 programme, which focussed on land release, the 2013 programme will focus on clearing known minefields to meet the UK Government commitment in accordance with the Ottawa Treaty, as well as doing some land release.

The BACTEC team is looking forward to returning in January to continue its work following up on 2012's successful land release project.

BACTEC are pleased that Guy Marot, who was part of the team for Phase 1 in 2009/10, will be the Falkland Islands Demining Project Office (FIDPO) representative.

Comment by Deputy Editor John Fowler

I FORGET exactly which famous person it was who said, "I disagree entirely with what you say, but I shall defend to the death, your right to say it" but that pretty much summed up my reaction to one of this week's readers' letters, whose writer should be grateful for the fact that he lives in a democracy where freedom of speech is allowed.

Apart from demonstrating a colossal ignorance of how the cruise ship industry operates, the writer was suggesting that in the name of "our fundamental human rights" we should deny the same rights to 40 million other people. Now call me naive if you wish, but I was brought up to believe that two wrongs do not make a right and that "fundamental human rights" as referred to in the very Charter of the United Nations, are supposed to be applicable to all human beings, not just to those who happen to agree with us.

On a more pragmatic level, the proposal that we should once again ban all Argentines from visiting these islands, attractive though it may sound to many, would give their already hysterical and aggressive leader another stick to beat us with in the court of international opinion. It would also deny the chance to replace myth with reality to a growing number of Argentines who are as unhappy about their leader and her isolationist antics as we are.

If he would raise his head from the embattled trench in which he seems happy to live judging by his comments last week, MLA Gavin Short might also realise that the number of ordinary Argentines who are beginning to see through their government's use of the Falkland Islands as a diversion from their country's real problems is growing. We are right to regard that government as a hostile and aggressive entity which should not be trusted, but to tar every Argentine for ever with their present government's dirty brush can only be regarded as both racist and ultimately, demonstrating a bleak and defeatist view of the future.

Earlier I had intended to write a different short editorial, in both English and Spanish - to make sure the point got across - telling the visiting 'Rugby sin Fronteras' group that their activities were unwelcome here and could be construed as a deliberately provocative act. Then I made what many would describe as the mistake of listening to their leader's account of the group's recent activities in the midst of the Israeli and Palestine conflict. Juan Batista Segonds is proud of the nickname "Madmen for Peace" that they were given there and says that, contrary to what his government might think, he believes in our human right to live in peace. If the Pope can believe and bless him, maybe we should too.

Professional attitude needed for a career in Falklands politics

THE public meeting called on Tuesday night by members of the panel set up to look into the remuneration, role and responsibilities of members of the Legislative Assembly attracted some fifteen members of the target 20 to 40 age group, which was, according to Richard Cockwell, who chaired the meeting, the largest number present at any of the meetings held on this subject so far.

The meeting was refreshingly different from those held by MLAs each month in the Town Hall. This was not just because of the relative youth of the participants, nor because of the relatively intimate surroundings of the Narrows Bar side room, but because of the largely positive nature of a debate, which probably in the end threw up as many pertinent questions as it gave answers.

Mr Cockwell, who was supported by fellow panel members Lewis Clifton and Justin McPhee set the ball rolling by asking what would prevent members of the audience from standing for election to the Assembly. Farmer Justin Knight, said that he thought job security might be an issue, with the possibility of finding oneself jobless after a four year term, though Adam Cockwell, Managing Director of Workboat Services said that a term in the Assembly should be regarded as the equivalent of a four year contract.

Kris Thorsen, from Teal Inlet, spoke coherently about the problems facing the self-employed, particularly those involved in Camp businesses. She claimed that even if paid £40,000, which was the kind of annual salary that had been mooted elsewhere, the difficulty and expense of employing someone suitable to fill in for her absences would make her situation unviable.

While no firm recommendation on future payments to MLAs had yet been made, Mr Cockwell said that it appeared from earlier meetings that £40,000 to £50,000 "would be the mark." Pippa Christie said that there was a need for a salary which could attract public servants who were already on FIG's Grade C or above.

With regard to the fear that candidates might be attracted by the money alone, Daniel Fowler asked whether the purposes of the country might not be better served by such a candidate who was confident and capable, but self-seeking than by a "well-meaning idiot."

Former councillor, Lewis Clifton said that what was needed in a candidate was a hunger for the job, "fuelled by the remunerative package." He said that being elected to serve on the Assembly represented a fine career opportunity. After four years of service the successful candidate would come away with "an unrivalled curriculum vitae."

Despite the difficulties recognised in attracting candidates from a wider section of the community, there was unanimous agreement in the meeting that the time had come for full-time MLAs, though it was acknowledged that this would present particular difficulties for Camp members.

While the issue of MLAs' remuneration was of interest, by far the greater part of the lively debate had to do with the need to define the role and responsibilities of MLAs should the decision to make them full-time be taken.

Kris Thorsen's comment that at the moment she had little or no idea about what was involved in the role, met with general agreement, as did a suggestion from Lewis Clifton that there should be a "phased-in" induction process for candidates prior to the election and another from Justin McPhee that training should continue after election.

There was also general agreement that changes in the terms and conditions of MLAs employment was only one part of a necessary process of reform of the way government works at present. Andrew Pollard spoke of the frustrations caused by the non-professional attitudes of some MLAs and Lewis Clifton said that he believed having full-time councillors would allow them to meet more frequently and avoid the current "peaks and troughs." Paying more to have more of the same was not what this process was about, he said.

Young Islanders explore the world of Westminster

THE Falkland Islands were well represented earlier this month at the 5th Commonwealth Youth Parliament (CYP) in Westminster by two young Islanders.

Krysteen Ormond and Stacy Bragger were selected to attend the event on behalf of the Falklands earlier this year with 60 delegates in total aged between 18 and 29 participating.

The CYP is jointly hosted by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association and the CPA UK branch, as part of both organisations' commitment to engaging young people in politics, parliament and the Commonwealth. The three-day programme focused on the theme of governance with delegates divided into a fictional government, opposition party and group of independents.

The packed programme included sessions on the roles and responsibilities of Members of Parliament, the role of young people in politics and the role of the media and the rise of social media. Delegates heard from the likes of MPs Andrew Mitchell, Andrew Lansley and Speaker of the House of Commons John Bercow.

During a session on committee systems Stacy took the opportunity to thank Andrew Rosindell MP for his strong support of the Falkland Islands during this period of aggression from Argentina. Mr Rosindell said that he appreciated the kind words and revealed that his next meeting that day was with the Argentine Ambassador in London Alicia Castro. He jokingly asked if the Falklands delegates had some boxing gloves they could lend him for the meeting.

The Falklands delegates, who were part of the opposition party, were able to make many contributions during the CYP and the Islanders were particularly pleased that they were able to influence their party to have the right of self-determination as one of its main principles. This led to the party being called 'Determination For The Future'. During a debate on a motion proposed by the opposition that the Commonwealth form a Treaty Association to defend democracy and national autonomy within the Commonwealth, Stacy gave a speech on the importance of Falkland Islanders being able to decide their own political future. Krysteen also offered the Falklands perspective on different issues during several sessions. The programme concluded with a debate in the Robing Room of the House of Lords on access to education which was presided over by Lord Speaker Baroness D'Souza.

The opportunity to meet and make friends with so many talented delegates who are destined for great things in the future in their own countries was a particular highlight for Stacy. He says that it was tremendous to participate in such a brilliantly organised programme in the prestigious surroundings of the Houses of Parliament.

Krysteen felt that one of the most exciting aspects of the CYP for her was being able to compare and contrast the Falklands against other Commonwealth nations - seeing what challenges are faced by bigger regions and small island nations alike. Particularly interesting according to Krysteen was a discussion with Emily Shaw of the Scottish Youth Parliament on how young people are engaging in politics and are making an active difference in how their country is being run.

Getting to meet other young people and enter into healthy debates about topics that are relevant to young Commonwealth citizens will be invaluable according to Krysteen and she felt as well that she has definitely made some firm friends along the way.

Stacy and Krysteen say that they wish to thank CPA Secretariat and CPA UK for hosting them, as well as Gilbert House for giving them the opportunity to participate in this fantastic event.

Hardtalking MLA Cheek

ASSEMBLY Member Jan Cheek took up the challenge of spreading the Falklands message on what is considered one of the toughest interview programmes within the British media on Wednesday.

Hardtalk has featured some of the best known personalities in the world and political leaders such as Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf and former South African President Thabo Mbeki have been subjected to in depth interviews and hard-hitting questions.

MLA Cheek said she had watched the programme many times and knew it would be exactly what it said: hard talk, but thought it would be well worth doing because it is watched and heard worldwide. "I knew, whatever the questions, I could get some of our messages out there."

The recording took place in a green, high definition studio, so that background shots could be added afterwards and MLA Cheek met Shaun Ley just minutes before the interview began.

"It is fairly intense as it is recorded in a single take of around 23 minutes and you are not given the questions in advance," MLA Cheek told Penguin News, adding, "you have to think on your feet and it is important not to be irritated when they seem to be going over the same ground."

The interview had given her an opportunity to get out the message of Islander's right to self-determination and the fact that Argentina ignores that and want only one outcome, that is to make the Falklands a colony of Argentina, MLA Cheek said.

"I was also able to get in examples of their aggressive attempts to isolate the Islands physically and economically. The highlight for me, and I hope it comes over well, was having a good opening for the last word before the formal handshake at the end."

The interview concluded with MLA Cheek stressing that Falklands representatives had handed the Argentine delegation at the C24 in June, a letter offering to discuss matters of mutual interest, which they totally ignored.

Penguin News was contacted this week by several former Falklands residents who had watched the programme and admired MLA Cheek's calm and authoritative responses to the at times provocative questions.

"I thought Jan presented the Falklands and Islanders really professionally," former SCB bank manager Nick Hutton said, adding, "Of course, in me she was preaching to the converted but hopefully her handling of the interview will have swayed a few neutrals over to the Islanders' side of the argument."

Summer events planned for a western national nature reserve

AS part of the Protected Areas Project, Clare Cockwell of Falklands Conservation is organising a series of courses and events to be held on West Falkland throughout the summer.

The events begin on February 10, with a fun afternoon for all the family, a Teddy Bears' Picnic at Old House Stream in the Patricia Luxton National Nature Reserve, Chartres, with entertainment provided by visiting musician Marc Block. Mrs Cockwell explained that Marc had gained an enthusiastic following when he visited last year and many were looking forward to hearing him play and sing again.

The following weekend (Feb 16-18) is to be all about plants, with Richard Lewis from the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, teaching how to identify native and introduced plants, and FC's Alicky Davey demonstrating the collection and storage of seeds. In March, Sian Nightingale of the Department of Agriculture will be showing participants how to get the most out of their GPS, with applications for both farming and conservation.

Mrs Cockwell said the courses will all start at Fox Bay School, but there would be as much outdoor activity as the weather would allow. "We have been very fortunate to secure funding from the FIG's Environmental Studies Budget to promote the Patricia Luxton National Nature Reserve at Chartres and the site's owners, Bill and Stephen Luxton, are keen to see the public using and enjoying this special place. It's a particularly good site for plants and an ideal place for teaching and learning, as well as just enjoying the outdoors," she said.

The events are open to everyone and are free, and no previous knowledge or experience is needed. If you would like more information or to reserve a place on any of the courses, please contact Clare on 42089, email protectedareas@conservation.org.fk. No reservations will be needed for the Teddy Bears' Picnic, which will be advertised again nearer the time through the usual channels.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE Joint Ministerial Council ran for a day and a half but related events and opportunities for other meetings filled most of the time away. I attended two as second oil MLA. The first was an event for representatives of some investors in our oil industry. Over 100 people attended and excellent factual presentations were given by Stephen Luxton, representatives from the FCO and from British Geological Survey and others including the Honourable Dick Sawle and representative from two of the oil companies. There was also an informative meeting at the FCO with oil company representatives. This was followed by a Business forum for all the OTs

We met Hugo Swire MP who replaced Jeremy Browne as our Minister; he is also the son-in-law of John Nott so is exceptionally well informed about the Islands and gave the usual firm reassurances

We had a brief visit to the expanded Falklands Department where we met some enthusiastic and hardworking people. It was easy in the fairly distant past to question the engagement of the FCO in our problems with our irritating neighbour, but that is not the case now. We took several opportunities to express our appreciation of the unequivocal support we receive.

The UK Overseas Territories Association met in the morning of December 5, before the first sessions of the Joint Ministerial Council to discuss some of the items scheduled for the JMC. It was also an opportunity to discuss the structure of UKOTA and to welcome back Gibraltar and Turks and Caicos who were absent for some time for different reasons.

There is a detailed communiqué on the FCO website from the JMC which summarises the work done in the various sessions which were chaired by Mark Simmonds MP the Overseas Territories Minister. Other ministers attended whole or parts of other sessions as time and Parliamentary commitments permitted.

Finally we laid a wreath at the Battle Day ceremony at the Cenotaph and went on to the Falklands Association AGM and lunch. This group has worked for us for years, in bad times and good and deserve our thanks

Glamorgan remembered

ON Monday members of the Cub Scout Pack, met HMS Glamorgan veteran Paul Engeham in the 1982 Memorial Wood to help him to lay 13 new tree plaques that the Glamorgan Association had funded to go by each tree commemorating a fallen crew member.

Jim and Anna Wisner were in the Islands the previous week and were able to lay the fourteenth tree plaque for their son Mark Henderson.

HMS Glamorgan was one of the first ships to participate in the Falklands campaign: on April 2, 1982, she was already at sea off Gibraltar about to take part in exercises and was immediately diverted to join the main Royal Navy task force, serving, as flagship for Admiral Sandy Woodward during the voyage south until April 15 when he transferred his flag to HMS Hermes.

Glamorgan was first in action on the evening and night of May 1, when she joined forces with HMS Arrow and HMS Alacrity to bombard Argentine positions around Stanley.

In the early morning of June 12 1982, HMS Glamorgan became one of the last casualties of the maritime campaign. An Exocet missile launched from a make-shift trailer on Davis Street, exploded on her after deck causing a Wessex helicopter to explode and killing 14 crew members.

Legal problem for fishing case

PRINCIPAL Crown Counsel Rosalind Cheek, told the court on Wednesday morning that in researching the case against Antarctic Sea Fisheries SA, who are charged with breaching their licensing conditions by allowing the discharge of hooks, she had become aware that current law does not support the use of 'live link evidence' from jurisdictions outside of the Falkland Islands. This had come as a surprise to her and was a problem which would be looked at as a matter of urgency as part of criminal law review procedures starting in January 2013.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley highlighted that the lack of clear policy to underpin the law and allow testimony from outside of the Islands was one of many problems facing the administration of the law in the Falkland Islands. "These are questions the public has a right to have answers for," he said, adding that the problem may contribute to injustice.

In the case of Antarctic Sea Fisheries SA, all relevant witnesses would have to travel to the Falklands for the trial scheduled in April, "with costs to be incurred by whoever loses," Mr Gumsley said.

Ex-Colonial Secretary dies

AFTER a somewhat adventurous life, which reads in part like the plot of a James Bond novel, Aubrey Denton-Thompson, MC, OBE, who was Colonial Secretary in the Falkland Islands from 1955 to 1960, has died in England, aged 92.

As a 2nd Lieutenant in the Eighth Army, Mr Denton-Thompson won the Military Cross at El Alamein for "courage and initiative under heavy fire from all arms and bombing from the air." In the process, he had destroyed three enemy tanks while covering the retreat of British troops.

In October 1942, during the second battle of El Alamein 2nd Lt Denton-Thompson was struck by shrapnel and presumed dead, only to be discovered alive a day later by a soldier collecting tags from bodies and taken by ambulance to a field hospital. The ambulance came under fire and he was hit by a stray bullet but again survived.

Later, as an Acting Major, on his way in a bus to an airport to be dropped behind enemy lines in Greece, a freak accident took off his left arm. His three companions who carried on with the operation were captured by the Germans and shot.

In 1958, while Falkland Islands Colonial Secretary Denton-Thompson was awarded the OBE for his contribution to the Colonial Service.

Quebracho are Cristina's thugs

AND so it has come to this. A violent proxy group of the Kirchner Government attacked and terrorised the office and staff of a Buenos Aires shipping agency simply because they represented a cruise ship company operating to the Falklands. I wonder, with occasional fear, just how much further this violence can go. No one has been killed yet, but for how much longer?

How sad it is to compare this nadir in relations with the peaceful co-existence of the last days of the last century. Then, Argentine Foreign Minister Guido di Tella, acting for Carlos Menem (who had once claimed to be a "Malvinas" firebrand) was almost embarrassingly friendly.

Of course Di Tella had the same agenda as any other Argentine politician; he wanted to see Argentine control over the Falklands. But he would have been happy if his diplomacy had led to nothing more than face-saving concessions. I would settle for him any day, rather than the currently extraordinarily aggressive President Kirchner, Foreign Minister Timerman and the Quebracho thugs.

But where do we - or, more importantly, they - go from here? There is no more the Falklands can do than repeat its willingness to cooperate with Argentina in areas of mutual interest, such as oil and fisheries, while seeking to convince other neighbours in South America that we just want to get on with our lives in peace. But I fear that the Argentines may go a lot further down the route of covert support for violence.

I lived in Uruguay during the days of the Tupamaros, a guerrilla group inspired by the Cuban revolution, which began its campaign by staging largely symbolic incidents. But little by little they graduated on to assassination and kidnapping. Arguably, they were forced to do so by the illegal and brutal military government of Uruguay, but my point is that terror groups can start off as little more than militant protestors and evolve into killers.

I might believe that Quebracho and others may remain no more than oafish thugs if there had been a genuine clampdown on their activities by the government in BA. But they are useful to Kirchner and her lot, and that is why the police did not curtail the shipping agency raid or arrest suspects afterwards.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of Penguin News

If thuggery is unopposed and effective (and it does appear to be effective, as at least one large cruise ship called off its visit to Stanley as a result of the recent raid), then the thugs will move onto more extreme violence, perhaps even terrorism.

In 1966 an Argentine guerrilla group hijacked an airliner to the Falklands and attempted a symbolic invasion. It became something of a farce, of course, when the Douglas DC4 had to put down on the Race Course and became bogged. But modern nationalists could try it again and do it better, using planes or cruise ships. Those who plan the defence of the Islands at Mt Pleasant know that such hijacking is a very real risk.

Of course by supporting violence, the Argentine Government is looking unsavoury, which benefits Falklands diplomacy. But the impact of the threat of violence, let alone the reality, on the Falklands economy is very real.

Cristina Kirchner is becoming increasingly desperate and, if her support for Quebracho is anything to go by, increasingly irrational. What can the Falklands do? Well, to quote that hackneyed adage borrowed from 1940s Britain: Keep Calm and Carry On. That and start counting the days until the end of the Kirchner government. Unfortunately, though, that may be several years away, giving Quebracho and others plenty of time to heat up the South Atlantic cold war.

A personal memory of Sir Rex Hunt

SIR Rex Hunt may not have been very fond of Penguin News. Both before and after the war, the paper was pugnacious and, when necessary, critical of both British policy about the Falklands and government within them. In those days, of course, the Governor had a much more hands-on involvement in government, so he must have sometimes felt that PN criticism was personal. But I know he was man enough to handle that, and he was never less than friendly to me, even when I was the editor.

Like many other Islanders, I came to like him very much, mainly because of his bravery in confronting the invaders, but also because when torn between loyalty to his masters in the Foreign Office and his loyalty to the Islanders, he opted for the latter. And he did so very publicly, saying on local radio that he would never accept any Falklands policy formulated in London that was not acceptable to Falkland Islanders.

When I heard of his death, I did not, however, think of him as a governor. Instead, I immediately recalled a small example of his kindness. I was on my own in Stanley when, in May 1985, I received the immensely distressing news that my father had died during a visit to the UK. As I attempted to make sense of this news, the phone rang. It was Rex Hunt. He had learned of Dad's death just minutes after me, and had phoned immediately to offer his sympathy and support. If there were anything he could do to help my family and I, then he would do it willingly.

The hours and days that followed are something of a blur in my mind, but I believe he made it possible for me to get a seat on a "full" aircraft heading north a day or two later. I might otherwise have missed my Dad's funeral.

Rex Hunt was one of a kind. Although he and Penguin News had their differences, he cared about Islanders - even me.

Direct anger at Argentina not tourist industry

I WAS very disappointed to read MLA Mike Summers stating that cruise ship executives showed a "worrying lack of spine". I worked for ten seasons on the Clipper Adventurer and never saw any lack of spine; indeed, the company would go out of its way to allow me to work on their vessels and to visit the Falklands, finding ways around the obstacles placed in its path by Argentina.

It is the Argentine Government we should be directing our anger towards, not the cruise ship executives. Argentina's actions towards the Seabourn Sojourn are a form of economic terrorism on our Islands and should be condemned globally. Our MLAs should be demanding an apology from the dockers "industrial action" and the company should be offered compensation from the Argentine Government for those actions.

I was very sad that after the great effort and courage this vessel showed to visit our Islands, the wind blew too hard for them to come ashore on the weekend.

Heartfelt thanks for a great visit

A HEARTFELT thank you to all who helped make my stay so happy and welcoming. A very special thanks to Kay McCallum for all her help and for making my stay so comfortable. Also Jeremy at Government House Gardens for showing me the cottage where my grandmother and grandfather lived, and where my father was born, and the gardens where grandfather worked 1909-1921.

Many thanks also to the museum and Public Works Department for locating my uncle's grave (died 1910 aged 6 months). Thanks to the Globe Tavern and the customers who helped with my many enquiries and made me most welcome.

The Falkland Islands, with its friendly and laid back lifestyle is a marvellous country, (treasure it) and a long peaceful and prosperous future. Many thanks,

Mr PA Benton

Petrol price is the final straw

THE recent increase in the price of Petrol to 115p is really the final straw.

Petrol here is now almost exactly the same as it is in EEC countries and a little higher than in France although those countries have huge taxes on fuel as well as VAT at 20 per cent. When you consider that the base price of the fuel is in the region of 60-

65p per litre one has to query the massive mark up being made by Stanley Services. No way can it cost that much to get petrol here and it should cost no more than diesel does.

I think the public are entitled to an explanation - although when you see the massive expenditure being made in Stanley by Stanley Services in the Malvinas Hotel complex, I suppose the poor wretched consumer has to be screwed to fund it. Just another monopoly doing as they wish.

PS - Is it good news about the other monopoly? The new owners can't be any more rapacious than Cable & Wireless anyway and good riddance to a name that makes me grind my teeth every time I see it! We should grab the chance to take it over now and set up our own - maybe call it Ben-nycom!

Privileged to visit the Islands

I WAS very privileged to accompany my husband as guests of the Falkland Island Government during remembrance tide. I would like to thank all those involved in making our visit so memorable. The Islands have played a huge part in my husband's life who served as the RSM of the Welsh Guards during the war in 1982. As a consequence they have been part of my life too. Having now visited and seen your beautiful land, visited the memorials and met the wonderful people we can not wait to return together again to explore further and spend more time with the many friends Tony and I have made. Seasons greetings to you all.

Time to show some backbone

WHILE on the whole I agree with MLA Summers comment "Cruise bosses 'lack spine' in face of Argentine bullying" (Penguin news volume 24 No 27) as the Argentines are trying just about every dirty trick in the book to hassle our economy, there is something we can and should do right now.

MLA Summers says the cruise bosses have a lack of a spine, but I wonder if maybe our MLAs may be also be lacking a bit of spine as well. Why have we not stopped all Argentines coming to our shores as tourists? I know it will be said that is likely to cause further escalation, but in all honesty that is exactly what they are doing to the people of the Islands when they refuse to recognise we exist. We should go a step further and stop any further Argentine integration in our community.

For years the Argentines have been interfering in our affairs and we have sat back and done nothing except through the private sector publicly countering when ever possible articles and false statements. How much more do we have to put up with before someone in higher places starts to do something about it?

We are not children, though the Argentines are treating us like some and are getting away with it. Enough is enough and now is the time to put the Argentine regime firmly in its place. If they disrupt our tourism then we should deny any future Argentines coming here to enjoy what we can not. That should also include those who are using fronts like sport or journalism. They are interfering with our fundamental rights, that is the freedom to do as we want. We are supposed to be a democratic country and up until now we have done everything nice towards Argentine relations, but as they seem to not understand the meaning of being nice we have to stop fooling ourselves and start doing something more constructive that will tell these thugs we are not going to be a pushover anymore. They seem to have gotten the message in 1982 when they were kicked out because they pushed too far.

If cruise operators want to drop us from their itinerary for fear from our bullying neighbour then let it be and go out to the world and invite new cruise operators to come who are not afraid of the Argentines.

Referendum Political Status of the Falkland Islands March 2013

Remember that you will only be able to have your say by participating in the Referendum if you are on the Electoral Register

Not around on polling day - what are my options?

Sometimes people are away on polling day, or are not able to get to their polling station for other reasons, but this doesn't mean that they have to miss out on voting. They could apply in writing for either a postal, proxy or proxy postal vote.

What exactly does this mean?

Postal vote applications - you can vote by post

Anyone can apply to have their ballot papers sent to them through the post instead of going to vote in person at a polling station. By completing and submitting a Postal Vote Application Form, you can choose to vote by post.

Proxy vote applications - a person nominated by you can vote on your behalf

Anyone may appoint a proxy to vote on their behalf. If the elector is unable to attend their polling station in person on polling day, by completing and submitting a Proxy Voting Application Form, the elector can arrange for someone to vote on their behalf.

Postal Proxy Voting - a person nominated by you to vote on your behalf can apply to vote by post

For further information or an application form please contact the Registration Officer Beth Reid on telephone number 27269 or email registrargeneral@townhall.gov.fk

Dazzling IJS Christmas Nativity

Head Angel Connie

AFTER some dedicated organisation from year two teacher Jackie Cooper the youngest students of the Infant and Junior School (Key stage 1 and Foundation stage 2) endeared the crowd with their touching and traditional rendition of the Christmas story, "A Christmas Jig-saw". The story explored the bible tale, literally, piece by piece and was narrated by confident six year old angel, Connie, who had to learn a lot of lines by heart. At the dress rehearsal on Tuesday Head Teacher of IJS CE Tom Hill said the whole cast and crew did very well to organise the delightful play from start to finish in two and a half weeks and was confident the performances, Tuesday and Wednesday night, would run smoothly.

Tumbledown Run

Thursday, 6 December, 2012

COMMUNITY School Physical Education teacher Ruth Kemp said the event was enjoyed by all who took part this year, adding, "and even the weather held for us." She thanked Developing Assets Ltd for sponsoring the event this year by helping cover the cost of transport and for providing prizes for the first boy and girl across the finish line. She extended her thanks to the FIDF for their help with the equipment needed to help the event run smoothly.

House totals for the event from all those that took part - Ross were first place with 122 points, Fitzroy came second with 112 points and Shackleton was third with 72 points. Top runners results on page 15

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

The Wool Market Report - 6 December 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A rise of 52 cents was seen this week after the AWEX closed at 1,086 AUS/cents/kg. The highest price seen since June. Continued buying interest from China has led to this price increase.

19 - 22 micron in Stirling terms saw the biggest price increases. In the market oddments and cross breeds saw a bigger rise than usual, specifically oddments which saw price rises of 6%.

Market analysts have said that the Chinese buyers may be worrying about lack of supply of the favoured mid microns and come out to the market to stock up in case supply restricts later in the season.

Week ending	Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category.

Battle (against the wind) Day

BEING a summer event, the parade which follows the annual December 8, Battle Day, thanksgiving service in the Cathedral is generally held under clear skies against a background of sparkling blue water. For the ladies it may normally be an occasion to wear something floral and maybe a hat, but not this year.

This year, those hardy souls who gathered at the monument on Ross Road, which commemorates the naval Battle of the Falklands in 1914, faced a wind blowing from the West, with just enough South in it to nip the fingers and enough strength to take any head gear not securely fastened down, flying into the harbour.

If these conditions were hard on the spectators, they must have been doubly so for the participants, in particular the marching detachments from the Royal Navy and the Falkland Islands Defence Force, led by the immaculate and colourful band of the Royal Marine Music School. Sensibly, also, to avoid any risk of becoming human kites, none of the clerics from the three Stanley churches and MPA chose to wear their ecclesiastical robes.

With these precautions taken, true British phlegm prevailed and the proceedings went off smoothly, even including an understandably crab-like fly-past by the RAF's Air Sea Rescue helicopter.

Past and present Royal Marines, with special guest Don Bonner and the band of the Royal Marines School of Music

ROYAL Marines past and present, with their families and invited guests came together in the Town Hall on Saturday evening for an evening of entertainment and education, which above all celebrated the fact that since the beginning of British settlement of the Falkland Islands the Royal Marines have played a significant part in our history.

The fourth annual dinner dance of the Falkland Islands Royal Marine Association was a glitzy affair, with candlelit tables and a superb buffet served by the excellent staff of the Malvina House Hotel.

The event was made even glitzier by the presence of the band of the Royal Marines Music School, which in its various guises kept everyone entertained throughout the evening. Their musical offerings took in everything from the solemn to sensational drumming, from swing to Stevie Wonder, with an incredible 'beating the retreat' thrown in - no easy feat in the confines of the Town Hall. Whether getting feet tapping, or provoking belly laughs with a humorous sketch involving the world's first solo on the urino-phone, they were brilliant.

Brilliant, also, was the evening's host, 'Curly' Elstow, who took the audience through the long association of the Royal Marines with the Falkland Islands and explained the historical significance of the six elements of the regiment's Globe and Laurel insignia, which was much in evidence in the hall. He then launched into a hilarious recital of what appeared to be a hitherto undiscovered alternative to the Book of Genesis, in which, the Royal Marines appear to have found divine favour, above all other "mediocre" forms of military life.

Fitzroy drum and rock the night away

FITZROY residents were fortunate enough to host the Royal Marines School of Music Band, on their return to the Falkland Islands, on December 5.

The evening kicked off with the Corp of Drums, playing a short set followed by the Jazz Band. After some light refreshment, the Rock Band played a number of 70s and 80s songs to which the, until then quiet audience let their hair down and took to the dance floor. This was followed by a reprise by the Drums during which they asked Carol Green to join them, much to the amusement of everybody in the building.

One young drummer was heard to say that he would remember the night for the rest of his life; although they were meant to play for about one and a half hours, they were still in the hall when the power went off at eleven o'clock. It is hoped that this will become an annual event at Fitzroy.

THIRTY years to the day the Falklands Plantation in Portsmouth was re-dedicated by The Lord Lt of Hampshire Mary Fagan.

The service was given by Reverend Roger Devonshire a Falklands 1982 veteran himself and MLA Sharon Halford was in attendance to represent the Falkland Islands Government. The Lord Mayor of Portsmouth along with several mayors from around Hampshire attended and there were also around 15 standard bearers representing a variety of organisations.

Approximately 150 veterans and families were in attendance for the short service organised by the Portsmouth City Council and held on a very frosty morning on the slopes of Portsdown Hill, Portsmouth. On completion of the service everyone was invited for tea and biscuits at Fort Purbrook.

SRC half marathon

STANLEY Running Club's annual event, the Cape Pembroke Half Marathon, has been scheduled for Sunday February 17, 2013. With only nine weeks to go, runners interested in taking part in the 13.1 mile event should be looking to start their training.

Before you begin half marathon training, you should be able to run for at least 30 minutes, comfortably, without stopping. Combinations of run/walks are great to use during pre-training because they ease your body into the exercise and minimise the chance of injury like shin splints or muscle strains.

Your mileage should increase gradually each week with good rest time between sessions to help your body recover. Completing a run of 10-12 miles about three weeks before the race will be enough to prepare you for the finish, but in the final weeks before the half marathon you should rest as much as you can to allow your body to recover from training and be strong on the big day.

THE annual Morrison (Falkland) Ltd tournament attracted a strong field and despite the poor weather conditions some excellent golf scores were achieved.

The wind from the south west is helpful only on the short par four 10th and the short 17th but a general nuisance everywhere else. It was no surprise that two of our purest ball strikers coped best with the challenge.

Sarah Bowles was on target all day for bettering her own course record of 71 but a handful of bogeys over the closing holes saw that target slip by. Sarah still posted the day's best round of 73 for a normally triumphant 40 stableford points.

However, Declan Bonner, who won his first honours board competition two weeks ago, continued his fine form with a well crafted round of 74 and 41 points. Declan did not drive well all day but played sure and sweet irons into the greens and has one of the best short games in the club. Heralded for some time as a future star in Falklands golf, no longer, he is here now.

Third place went to Tim Bonner on a creditable 35 points, best nines went to Rodney Lee and Bob Gilbert, nearest the pins to Sarah Bowles and Carole Lee.

The longest drive was powered into the wind by Drew Irvine. The club wishes to thank Mike Butler and all at Morrison (Falklands) Ltd for their generous sponsorship of this event.

Sunday is the return of the popular Sullivan Shield, the format is Stableford.

Members are asked to sign in by 9:00 for a 9:15 tee-off.

Andrew, Sandra and family would like to thank everyone for their messages, cards and flowers during this very sad time. It has been a great comfort to know that Freda was loved by so many, both here in the Falklands and overseas. Special thanks to the KEMH and FIGO staff who 'left no stone unturned' in the effort to get mum/granny home from the UK earlier than was ultimately possible. The help and support from all close family and friends has also been greatly appreciated.

Clara McKay and family wish to thank Dr Rowlands and Dr Edwards, Nurses and staff at the KEMH for all their help and kindness to Bill and to us, during Bill's brief week in hospital. We also want to say 'thank you' to everyone who made phone calls and sent beautiful flowers at home and abroad. Your kindness is greatly appreciated.

Dear Aunty Sarah

Have a great time in Norway – me and my mummy will miss you lots!

With big hugs & lots of love from Oli xx

It is with regret that we announce the death of Dorothy Newing who passed away aged 88.

Shaping a positive future for the next generation

British Prime Minister David Cameron delivers his Christmas message to the people of the Falkland Islands

2012 HAS been a memorable year for all of us. It's been a year of happy celebrations but a year of more sober commemorations too. In London and Stanley, we celebrated the Diamond Jubilee, marking the 60th year of Her Majesty the Queen's reign. The genuine and deep affection for Her Majesty both here and in the Falklands reminded us of the ties that bind us together.

It was an extraordinary summer in another respect too. The 2012 Olympics exceeded all our expectations. This was without doubt the greatest show on earth. The world saw what the best of British talent, guts and ingenuity could produce. I was truly, truly proud of our country and I hope it looked as impressive 8,000 miles away as it did from here.

But June was also a time for some sombre reflection. It was a time to remember the conflict 30 years ago when your home was invaded by the Argentinian junta and for remembering the 255 British servicemen and three islanders who lost their lives. I know you, like me, will never forget the sacrifices they made. It would be appropriate too to remember those Argentines, mostly young men, pressed into service by their government, who also lost their lives.

Last month we sadly lost Sir Rex Hunt who played such a pivotal role during the invasion and following the Island's liberation. Sir Rex was the very best of British: a brave man and a dedicated public servant. He was also a close friend and passionate advocate of the Falkland Islands people. I know he will be much missed by all who knew him.

In June I had the privilege of speaking at the Falkland Islands Government's Liberation Day reception. I was able to hear firsthand the stories of those directly involved in the conflict and to understand more about its lasting legacy. But, we didn't just look back, we looked forward too and it's testament to your efforts that the Falklands have prospered so well since those dark days of April 1982. The progress you've made in shaping a positive future for the next generation of Falkland Islanders has been truly remarkable.

Now this year the Government officially renewed its partnership with the Overseas Territories, restating our commitment to help promote the territories social and economic development at a time of dramatic global challenges. We want all the peoples of the Overseas Territories to be able to determine their own destiny and realise their aspirations. But, I'm always conscious that you, the people of the Falkland Islands, continue to face a particular and direct challenge both to your economy and to your identity as Falkland Islanders. President Kirchner's Government appears determined to argue that you should have no say in how you are governed. They continue to misrepresent the history of your Islands and the current realities of life there. I'm pleased to see the Falkland Islanders working hard to correct these misrepresentations. Indeed, it was particularly good to see a delegation of young Islanders travel to the United Nations in June to challenge President Kirchner directly. They were a great credit to you all.

It is a pity that Argentina persists in behaving this way. The UK would like to have a more positive relationship with the Government of Argentina. We are stepping up our engagement with Latin America more generally, and there are so many global issues we could work on together.

But, the British Government will not stand by and allow your human rights to be ignored. There is no justification for any country to try and deny you the right to democracy and self-determination. Nor to make attempts to isolate you, block your trade and undermine your legitimate fisheries, hydrocarbons and tourism industries.

Next year the Falkland Islands Government will hold a referendum on the political status of the Islands. I value deeply the UK's relationship with the Falklands and hope it will long continue. But it is not my decision, nor is it Argentina's, it is yours and yours alone.

This referendum is true democracy in action, an opportunity to show the international community what you want for your future and to show it definitively. I hope all of you seize it.

In the meantime, Samantha and I would like to wish everyone on the Islands a very, very merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Colin Roberts CVO named as next Falklands Governor

THE Falkland Islands Government today announced the appointment of Mr Colin Roberts CVO as the next Governor of the Falkland Islands.

MLA Sharon Halford said: "We already enjoy a good relationship with Mr Roberts through his previous role as Director of the Overseas Territories Directorate within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The experience he has from this role will stand him in good stead when he takes up his new post in April 2014, and we look forward to warmly welcoming Mr Roberts and his family."

As a modern, self-governing Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom, we enjoy a relationship based on the shared ideals of democracy, freedom and self-reliance, said MLA Halford, adding, "We look forward to working in partnership with Mr Roberts and his colleagues as we work through the challenges and opportunities presented by these exciting times."

Norwegian light shines through the Winter darkness

THOUGH plagued with flu and taking place largely in darkness, the recent visit to Norway by MLAs and senior government officials appears to have produced encouraging results and shone some light on possible developments in the Falklands, according to MLA Dick Sawle.

MLA Sawle said that the Norway visit had "two strands". One of these was to study the Norwegian approach to the regulation and development of the oil industry, which was the particular focus of fellow MLA Dr Barry Elshy, and the other, which was of particular relevance to his own portfolio responsibilities was to do with port infrastructure.

Besides MLAs Sawle and Elshy, the Falkland Islands Government delegation consisted of the Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton, Chief Executive Keith Padgett, Financial Secretary Nicola Granger and Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher. Head of Policy, Jamie Fotheringham, was to have accompanied the group, but was prevented by illness. According to MLA Sawle, nearly every other member of the delegation suffered from flu at some time during the visit.

MLA Sawle told Penguin News that much of the delegation's time was spent talking to the Norwegian Department of Petroleum and Energy. The aim was to learn how the Norwegian Government had managed oil exploration and oil development and the type of relationships with oil companies that this had demanded. Also of interest was how the Norwegian Government had managed the wealth which had proceeded from their natural resource.

There were, said MLA Sawle, some "very key messages" that emerged from the Norwegian experience; "they had made a few mistakes in the early years and had learned from those. It was important that we got the most we could out of their experience."

According to MLA Sawle, one of the key things learned was the need for clarity on the part of government in its dealings with oil companies, particularly in the sense of clear legislation, so that the oil companies could know precisely what was required of them, thus avoiding the need for excessive negotiation.

With regard to his Trade and Industry portfolio, MLA Sawle said that it was interesting to observe in Norway how the oil industry had created a ripple effect throughout the economy, with the growth of subsidiary companies. This had already been seen in the Falklands to some extent, but would increase hugely when the phase of oil development arrives.

Referring to the way Norway had managed oil wealth, MLA Sawle said that they realised that any natural resource such as oil was finite, therefore it was very important from a budgetary point of view that all those non-recurring revenues arising from it, should not be spent as they arrived. The Norwegians had created a Sovereign Wealth Fund, from which a certain percentage each year could be allocated to whatever projects might be considered desirable.

With regard to the particular focus of his own visit, MLA Sawle said that his visit to Hammerfest, which at 70° North is perpetually dark at this time of year, during the Norwegian Winter, had shown that the Norwegians were able to carry on building port infrastructure all year round.

In Stavanger and Hammerfest, MLA Sawle was encouraged to find that the Norwegians were employing similar port construction techniques to those envisaged for the Falklands.

Conversations with the port authorities were interesting, said MLA Sawle, because although Norway is a very expensive country, the costs of building their ports were a lot lower than some of the "vague" estimates given for port construction in the Falklands.

Finally MLA Sawle said that one lesson from Norway was the need to maintain clear and open communications between government and the community. To this end, a full report on the Norway visit is being prepared by Stephen Luxton and will be made public.

Prestigious prize for Sonia

THIS year's recipient of the Falkland Islands Association, Bill Hunter-Christie Memorial Prize, for an outstanding Falklands overseas student was Miss Sonia Arkhipkina of Stanley, who is currently in her first year at the University of Leeds where she is studying Medicine.

Sonia's prize was presented to her in London during the Falkland Islands Association's Annual General Meeting by Mr Hunter-Christie's widow, Mrs Merle Christie.

The prize was set up in memory of Bill Hunter-Christie, Barrister at Law and friend of the Falklands, who died on 22 September 1997 aged 75 years. Mr Hunter-Christie was a founder member of the Falkland Islands Association and worked tirelessly to create and maintain a powerful lobby for the Falklands at Westminster.

Secretary of the Falkland Islands Association, Colin Wright, said of Mr Hunter-Christie, "He was a fervent believer in the power of youth and had great admiration for young Falklands' overseas students."

Help available for rural water

IN AN effort to ensure that Camp residents have access to and the use of sufficient quantities of water for domestic and business purposes, the Rural Development Strategy steering group has set aside £11,000 of funding in this financial year to establish the Developing Camp Water Systems grant scheme.

Improving water systems helps meet several key Rural Development Strategy objectives: it helps improve the quality of services available in Camp, it improves quality of life and it facilitates the growth of businesses.

Funding is available for modernising, replacing or renewing water infrastructure such as pipes, water tanks or developing new spring holes.

Anyone interested in applying for funding should contact Nuala Knight at FIDC in the first instance. Tel 27211 or email rdproject@fidc.co.fk

In court for rum theft

STANLEY man, Mr Robert Kiddle, who appeared in the Stanley Magistrate's Court on Wednesday morning, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft.

Mr Kiddle admitted that after or during a party at the house of Mr Scott Short on November 6, he had stolen a bottle of rum to the value of £19 and a bowl of money to the sum of £105.

The case was adjourned for sentencing until February 4.

Recipients of the Diamond Jubilee Medal gather at Government House on Thursday Evening

ALTHOUGH they were not all present at Government House to receive them from HE the Governor, the following people, were presented with Diamond Jubilee medals on Thursday night: Leif Middleton, Tom Blake, Conrad Francis, Jeremy Henry, Donna Henry, Nevin Middleton, Micky Sutcliffe, Paul Watson, Mandy Heathman, Keith Heathman, Janice Dent, Alison Ford, Tall Davies, Richard McKee, James Bates, Andrew Miller, Duane Stewart, Kim Bone, Trudi Felton, Carol Reid, Jill Roberts, Ben Hoyle, Simon Isaacs, Sam Cockwell, Liam Shelbourne, Andrea Barlow, John Clifford, Cherie Clifford, and Fr Peter Norris.

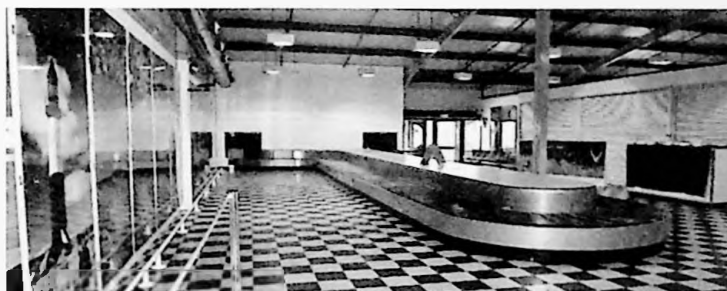

This was the second round of awards made at GH. This round included those who were unable to collect their award first time round and a number of people who were not included in the first round of awards.

The criteria for the award of a Diamond Jubilee Medal include service in HM armed forces or in emergency services and being still in service on February 6 2012, having completed five years service on that date. Other units are allowed. For the Falklands this roughly translates as FIDF, Fire and Rescue Service, Medical services, including nurses who attend emergency scenes in ambulances, the Royal Falkland Islands Police and the Sea Cadet Corps.

Aggregated service is allowed. For example, Having served three years in the Armed Forces a few years ago and then working in one of the above in the Falkland Islands and being in service on 6 February 2012.

Arrivals Hall at MPA open again

AFTER almost a month of work, the Arrivals Hall at Mount Pleasant Airfield has been officially re-opened by Commander British Forces SA1, Brigadier Bill Aldridge and the Managing Director of FITB, Tony Mason.

The Arrivals Hall has had a number of improvements carried out since it closed in late November. The overall look of the hall has been enhanced with large scenic image boards designed by Julie Halliday of Studio 52 and a new baggage carousel has been fitted to allow faster movement of passengers through the terminal.

The upgrades to the terminal, which were planned and executed in conjunction with FI Tourist Board, have been carried out not only to improve current services but to prepare the terminal for the handover to the Falkland Islands Government, planned for next year.

Top awards for young scouts

NICK Rowlands was presented with the Chief Scout's Bronze Award on Tuesday. This is the highest Award that Beaver Scouts can get and Nick is also the very first Beaver Scout in the Falkland Islands to receive the Award.

Four cubs: Sean Sackett, Molly Jaffray, Lachlan Crowie and Thomas Ford received the highest Cub Scout award that can be achieved, the Chief Scout's Silver Award.

Akala Jan Miller said they have "all worked really hard for the awards and the leaders are really proud of their achievements."

Our Islands Our History

THE Falkland Islands Government is pleased to announce the completion of the booklet "Our Islands, Our History". This booklet provides a succinct and accessible summary of the key aspects of the history of the Falkland Islands, and of the people whose determination and character brought us to where we are today. It is a companion to the popular "Our Islands, Our Home" booklet which was released earlier in the year.

"Our Islands, Our History" will be available as a free digital download on the Falkland Islands Government website at midday on Friday 21st December. Hard copies will be available in late January.

Rhys Clifford and Gabi Hoy

Among the star students receiving awards this year were Rhys Clifford and Gabi Hoy, who were described as follows in the programme of events:

Rhys Clifford: A committed and dedicated student, he enthusiastically takes on any new challenge and has a very positive outlook to his studies, gaining excellent grades through his conscientious approach. In practical sessions, Rhys is extremely able and he is working on building his leadership skills in the restaurant and kitchen. He has excellent communication and personal skills, is an extremely popular member of his group and he has been an active student representative for his class within the Student Union. We as a team adore his cheerful presence and he is a pleasure to teach, especially when he wore his 'White Bunny Suit' for a marketing project.

Gabi Hoy: Demonstrated passion for the role of Cabin Crew and this was reflected in her high level of commitment and enthusiasm, both in her studies and in her voluntary participation in external events such as open evenings and mini flights. Gabi excels at customer service and combines this with a warm nature and can do attitude, which is perfect for the Cabin Crew role. On recruitment day, Gabi was chosen as the candidate most likely to succeed as Cabin Crew.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THIS year has been an extremely busy one. Any doubts or reservations I may have had about the need for full time Assembly members have disappeared and I am convinced that we need people who can devote most of their time and energy to the job. Across Government there are many areas where we and the civil service are 'one deep'. In other words there is no-one to step into a role when someone is absent or ill. The Government machine is only kept going by the good will and often excessive hours of some committed individuals. This has to be addressed if we are not to have to drop some areas of activity altogether.

On a happier note we have been well assisted in the task of countering the Argentine attempts to isolate us economically and physically by many who are happy to help us make our case. They have been in the margins of the UN, at the Party Conferences, Youth Parliament and other events. It is great to see so many willing to look beyond comfortable self interest and do something for their country.

One of the important themes of the recent joint ministerial council was education and the fact that it is the best investment any country can make. While many people have done extraordinarily well with the good, but basic, education offered in the Islands as I was growing up, there can be no doubt that the opportunities for further and higher education available since the 1980s to those who have met the requirements has given extra competence and the confidence that goes with it. It will become more essential as we move into a more pressured era to offer opportunities to update skills.

Many thanks to all the kind people who have contacted me about my Hard Talk interview. It seems to have gone down well and although the format is quite daunting I do enjoy every opportunity I get to try to put our case and this was a chance to reach a huge audience.

I wish everyone a happy and peaceful Christmas

The Oakham School D of E group at Goose Green

Seeking gold in the Falklands

WHILE Falkland Islands students overseas have achieved gold in the Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme, a group of students from Oakham School in Rutland, who left on this week's Air Bridge are probably the first to come to the Falklands to complete the expedition section of the Gold Award.

Sponsored by BFSAL, the group of nine cadets, who are all members of their school's Combined Cadet Force (CCF) walked from San Carlos to Goose Green and then from Goose Green to Fitzroy in four days.

En route, the group, which was led by Economics and Politics teacher, David Taylor, camped at Camilla Creek and Goose Green.

On arrival in Stanley, as part of the Public Service element of the Award, they did some painting at Liberty Lodge and on Monday morning met His Excellency the Governor, Mr Nigel Haywood.

The group's route followed first the TAB (Tactical Advance into Battle) of the 2nd Parachute Regiment before the Battle for Goose Green and then the Southern line of advance on Stanley taken by British troops in 1982.

The Oakham School in England's smallest county, has a prior Falklands connection as Jeremy Thompson, who commanded the Special Boat Squadron during 1982, is an old boy.

Busy 6th year for FIFCA

CHAIR of the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association (FIFCA), Cheryl Roberts, used the occasion of the annual Christmas social evening at the Wirebird last week to reflect on FIFCA's role in what is now its sixth year of existence.

Mrs Roberts began by saying that 2012 had once again seen the Falklands fishing industry continuing to work jointly with the Government Fisheries Department and attending regular meetings and presentations.

She said that FIFCA members had continued to sit on a number of Government and other committees concerned with the industry and the environment. This, she said, was a useful tool to keep all members updated. The Association was always eager to get members involved so would welcome any new volunteers.

FIFCA had been involved with, but not limited to, discussions on derogations, FIPASS, the port, the harbour fee review, crew safety awareness, Marpol, Plexus Consultants and MPA and had made a presentation on licence fees.

Decisions on a new logo were almost complete, said Mrs Roberts and members would soon be informed, though she found it hard to believe that such a little item could take up so much time and stimulate such debate and passions.

Reporting on the FIFCA stand at the Brussel Seafood Show in April, Mrs Roberts said that it had been very successful and had attracted a lot of interest. For the first time the stand had been manned continuously by a number of FIFCA members staff. This had ensured that members could better utilise their time rather than have to stick to a rota as had been the case in previous years. FIFCA would be looking at employing similar arrangements for future shows.

The Association's Secretary, Alison Nye, who left the Islands on the previous Saturday was thanked in her absence for her work. It had been a pleasure to work with her, Mrs Roberts said.

The opportunity was also taken to welcome new board members: Alex Reid and Migs Cofre, and to offer thanks to Tom Blake and Stuart Wallace who had decided not to stand this year. Existing members, Vice-Chair, Hamish Wylie and Drew Irvine complete the Board for 2013.

Finally, Mrs Roberts reported that the Association had just secured new office premises from Golden Touza and would be moving on February 1. The property is leased unfurnished, so an appeal was made to any members who might have some good quality furniture lurking around which required a good home.

Falkland Island football players enjoy coaching tips from a legend

FOOTBALLERS, both young and old, in the Falklands have had the opportunity and rare privilege this week of being coached by one of the game's legends.

Once regarded as one of the best strikers in Europe, who could shoot, volley, dribble, create and pass with precision, Mr Sosa played for a succession of top clubs in Spain, Italy and Germany, in the eighties and nineties before returning to Uruguay in 2003 to round off his playing career with Nacional, for whom he now coaches.

At the beginning of his career in 1982, when he was fifteen years of age, Rubén Sosa was one of the youngest players ever to play in the Uruguay First Division. Four years later, after transferring to Spain, he was part of the Real Zaragoza team which won the Copa del Rey and scored in the final against Barcelona.

With Italian team, Internazionale, Rubén was that club's leading goal scorer in the 92/93 and 93/94 seasons, helping them to win the UEFA Cup in 1994. Further European honours came in the 1995/6 season with German club, Borussia Dortmund, when they won the Bundesliga with Rubén's

Returning to Uruguay, Rubén collected more winners medals as his club Nacional won the Uruguayan League Title with his help in 1998, 2000 and 2001.

Mr Sosa was also part of the Uruguayan national team which won the Copa América in 1987 and 1995 and played in the World Cup in Italy.

Accustomed as we have become to the tantrums on and off the pitch of some of today's millionaire football super stars, it is refreshing to meet Mr Sosa, whose enthusiasm for the game which has been his life's passion is infectious, as his enthusiasm for coaching the footballers of tomorrow with his own school, the RS Escuela de Fútbol.

In Stanley, accompanied by one of Uruguay's most famous sporting journalists, Mr Toto de Silveira, who was present in 1996 when England beat Germany to win the World Cup, Rubén Sosa has been holding a series of football workshops for school children and also for the Falkland Islands team, which will culminate this afternoon (Friday) in a match between children and their dads.

Asked how he found the young Falkland Islands players, Mr Sosa, who has run football training camps for young players in the USA as well as Uruguay, said that he had not expected there to be so many young players in such a small community. He was impressed by their keenness to learn technique and to do things correctly, but felt that the older group of 13 to 15 year olds lacked a bit of the fun of the younger groups: 5-9 and 10-12. For him, soccer was about passion, but also about having fun.

With regard to the senior players, Rubén said that he had been working with local coach Ian Betts on their physical state and had been demonstrating ways of increasing their fluidity of physical movement.

Mr Sosa said that he was aware of the long-standing historical links that existed between the Falkland Islands and Uruguay and hoped that his visit, which was sponsored by the Falkland Islands Government with the assistance of the British Embassy in Montevideo, would help these links to continue.

A brother gives thanks

I WOULD like to take the opportunity to thank all the people of the Falkland Islands for their generous hospitality and their appreciation of all the fallen and veterans.

As a brother of Cpl. Stewart McLaughlin (3 Para, Mt Longdon June 12, 1982) it has given me great comfort to meet with some of the Islanders and experience your friendly and caring ways.

If I could mention especially Ellen at Liberty Lodge and Frank and Vera Leyland and their family Andrew, Lynn, Samantha and Michael for helping to make mine and my son John's first trip to the Islands special.

My special Russell is working here. I am here with my son and another brother. Mark has just arrived. We went to Mt Longdon on the 12.12.12 to lay a stone brought down by him.

So thank you all again

For anyone who would like to contact me, in relation to Stewart, my email address is: dunckmack@hotmail.co.uk

Is this the voice of the majority?

THE Deputy Editor appears to be confused by the letter I submitted "Time to show some Backbone" in the last week's paper.

Firstly, I am not ignorant to how the cruise ships work as he puts it, but simply stating that if those cruise ships are willing to be controlled by Argentine propaganda then so be it. That is their choice, but does not stop our country canvassing operators who are willing to stand up to those thugs across the water.

Second point is that John assumes that my comments referring to stopping all Argentine visitors to our shores under the guises they come here does not suggest that I believe that the entire Argentine population are all against us.

What I, and many others, are concerned about is the hard facts that while we are supposedly not allowed to say anything to offend Argentinians or the rest of the world, it appears to be widely accepted that MLAs and certain political know-it-alls are quite prepared to allow that country to intimidate us, because they themselves do not have the backbone to say what the average Islander is feeling.

Also he prattles on about the fact that two wrongs don't make a right and most of us are intelligent enough to know that. The problem is to be allowed to respond to something that offends us is by the politically correct of our society, wrong. So much for democracy, because you are damned if you do and damned if you don't.

We Islanders have always been the nice guys and have put up with years of intimidation and we are now beginning to realise that we have to start speaking out a little louder because our elected leaders can't, or won't.

It is quite concerning to the reader that our Deputy Editor appears to not support the majority views. Many people will not make a public statement but nevertheless share the same views I do and while I believe it right to have our say, as written in our Constitution (which he also tries to educate us about,) many fear they will be persecuted for doing so. I happen to care for the concerns of the less fortunate that live among us.

Some of our councillors are doing a great job telling the world but it is often the many smaller issues that make their mark on the vast majority of people who have to live here.

The rugby visitors in the eyes of many is like rubbing our noses in it and should not have happened and to make that point, would the Argentine Government allow any group of Falkland Islanders go to their country to educate their youngsters about our ways of life? I hardly think so, because Argentina does not even recognise us as a people and John would do well to remember that fact before he jumps on the thoughts and actions of the local people in the future.

This is my home. I was born here and proud to be called a Kelper. John, on the other hand, chose to come and live here and though he experienced the horrors of 1982, he chose to stay here. His inner feelings will never be the same as the majority of the older Islanders who were born here.

What makes me feel proud to be an Islander is the fact that many Islanders have went out and confronted the Argentine propaganda with the truth and it is now getting to the right people. Yes, we could say that Argentinians coming here could help us, but to be quite frank it is not likely to happen because they only come here because they have the belief that one day this country will be theirs. Better we educate the rest of the world how it really is rather than let our Argentine visitors go back and tell a pack of lies.

"What makes me feel proud to be an Islander is the fact that many Islanders have went out and confronted the Argentine propaganda with the truth"

As my colleagues at Penguin News will testify, I have actually and literally spent hundreds of hours of my life confronting Argentine propaganda with the truth, in English in the Penguin News, on the Penguin News web site, and also in Spanish and English, with visitors to the Islands and on radio and TV, in Argentina itself and elsewhere in the world.

We are on the same side in this battle Mr Goodwin, but apart from sniping from the sidelines, I am not sure what your contribution has been.)

Argentina is losing big time

MY WIFE and I are booked on the P & O liner Arcadia for its 2013 World Cruise. I would like to congratulate the management of P & O for their bold and brave decision to strip out the three ports of call in Argentina because of the threats and intimidation to ships, their passengers and crew coming from the mainland towards vessels that visit The Falklands.

Of course it is disappointing for many passengers, myself included, that we will not be visiting Argentina and there are some who are booked on the ship who believe the Falklands should have been jettisoned as a port of call and are saying as much on some internet cruise forums.

But that would be to cave in to threats of violence, blackmail and intimidation from the Argentinians. If only such people would engage their brains and think for a moment of the consequences of giving in to the demands of the Argentinians instead of just considering their own self-interest!

What if such threats of violence and intimidation happened to focus on the place where they live - would they take the coward's way out? Probably!

As for the Argentinians, they are going to lose out big time. Well, we had three ship's tours booked that amounted to £600 which we will now have refunded. And spending money ashore would have been on top of that.

Good that P & O has taken such a principled stand against mob rule. Here's to calm seas and sunny skies on Jan 26, 2013, when Arcadia is now scheduled to drop anchor off Port Stanley, Falkland Islands.

Thanks for a wonderful trip

I JUST wanted to let you know what a wonderful trip my wife and I had to the Falklands a few weeks ago. I was viewing it with a bit of trepidation, not having been back since 1982, and I now know I needn't have worried. It made all the difference that I was able to come with my wife. Jules enjoyed it enormously, not just as a journey, but because it gave her an insight into what we did 30 years ago, and how worthwhile it has turned out to be. The SAMA 82 concessionary scheme worked really well because she was able to come with me, and I really hope it will be extended so that others can do the same too.

We loved the scenery (if not the unseasonably cold weather!), and the amazing wildlife that we saw as we travelled around the islands, but the best part was undoubtedly meeting so many great people. From James at FIC, John and Michelle at Port San Carlos and Allan and Jacqui at Pebble Island, everyone was helpful and friendly. With great people like Jenny at Sea Lion and Paul of FIGAS, we felt befriended and supported throughout by grounded, resolute and forward-thinking Falkland Islanders. Thanks once again for your advice and support, and if you get the chance, please pass on our best wishes and warm regards to everyone we met. It was very, very special.

First visit for 1982 veterans

WE ARE two 1982 veterans who have just returned to UK from a most amazing visit to the Islands, and we would like to say 'thank you' for the superb hospitality we were shown.

In 1982, I was a troop commander in 59 Independent Commando Squadron Royal Engineers, and Steve Smith was my troop staff sergeant. Apart from a fleeting visit by Steve, neither of us had been back since then, until late November this year when we were able to visit all our troop locations from the war, and many more. It was a memorable trip - enjoyable and emotional in equal measure, and hugely therapeutic for us both.

We're hugely grateful to everyone we met. Without exception we were welcomed like old friends by people we'd never met before and we spent many hours, often late into the night, sharing stories of those dark days 30 years ago.

Although we couldn't possibly thank everyone individually in this letter we would like to offer our particular thanks to Celia Stewart and Rod who hosted us so well when we were in Stanley, to Terence and Carol Phillips for their generosity when we stayed at Hope Cottage Farm, and to Ken for his superb tour of the battlefields at Darwin and Goose Green.

We also owe massive thanks to the current Royal Engineers at Mount Pleasant, who advised and supported us well beyond the call of duty.

More broadly, may we also thank those we met at Teal Inlet, Port San Carlos, San Carlos, Ajax Bay, Darwin, in Christ Church Cathedral, at Stanley airfield, to the Falkland Islands Company vehicle hire team, and those in the Globe Tavern, Victory Bar and many other places where hospitality and friendship was extended so freely. Thank you all very much indeed for making us so welcome in your lovely Islands. To see them as they are today and meet people so proud to be British makes everything seem so worthwhile.

Different spots?

I AM a teacher from Buenos Aires. I want to say that the policies of our government do not represent the sentiment or the agreement of the total population. I believe in your right to self-determination - I would just like to tell you some ideas that may one day help build a peaceful world. Thank you very much and know that in Argentina there are people that respect and love you.

Spanish cheer

MARY had a unexpected pleasant surprise early this morning. Who would expect to see a familiar face from Stanley on the television in our home in Spain? Who was it? None other than MLA Jan Check.

Mary always checks the UK news and weather first thing in the morning. Jan was on the programme Hardtalk, but unfortunately I was still in bed, but mind it was before 6am, but Mary was pleased to say Jan was a match to the interviewer. As we still think of Stanley as our home we would ask if at all possible to let all in the Falklands know through the Penguin News that the MLAs do get heard and interviewed on their travels.

Well done Jan, keep up the good work.

Hoping you all have a merry Christmas and a happy New Year

Who governs the Falklands?

I WRITE in response to the recent court case involving an oil worker whereby, after all the facts were considered in an "emergency" held court, he was found not guilty even after having expressed "negative" views involving the Falkland Islands in a local pub.

That in itself is an act of provocation to many people, given the political situation which I am sure is explained to all these workers who are welcomed to these Islands.

However, if a local shearer had to connect to a FIGAS flight pending a contract the following morning, would he or she be afforded the same consideration?

Are we now already bowing to the whims of the oil companies and where will it stop? Is it a case of where any Falkland Islander who expresses a complaint or disagreement against an oil company is, to coin an American phrase, "against the programme".

Who now governs the Falkland Islands?

Appreciation from CBFSAI

I AM writing to express, publicly, my most sincere appreciation for the manner in which the Falkland Islands Emergency Services and, indeed, the whole local community rose to overcome the challenge posed by the recent grass fires in and around Onion Range.

It is now over a month since the major fire-fighting activities ceased but, as you may know, many personnel from BFSAI supported by elements of the Falkland Islands Fire & Rescue Service have spent a considerable amount of time since then digging out and extinguishing the many underground peat fires that remained.

It is fair to say that many of us in BFSAI are considerably more knowledgeable about peat fires than we were five weeks ago! Much of this knowledge comes not only from direct practical experience but also from the local community and the Fire Service, in particular. The performance by all of the deployed Regular and Retained FIFRS personnel, supported by the FIDE, PWD and private individuals, was simply outstanding and I was hugely impressed by the way in which they cheerfully and effectively went about what was undeniably a difficult and demanding job in the severest of conditions. I was also much taken by the high level of co-operation maintained at every point between the emergency services and the military personnel.

This was a particularly positive aspect to emerge from the incident and underscores the deepest level of team-work between our organisations in overcoming a shared challenge and certainly vindicates our continued joint emergency planning and training.

My thanks are also due to the entire local community which responded so selflessly and with such good humour to support the fire-fighting efforts. I am only too aware that the Retained Fire-fighters, in particular, cannot deploy without effect upon their employers and I would like to thank the local businesses which, without hesitation, extended their permission for their staff to take time off to respond to the fires. This was of the greatest assistance in bringing the fires under control.

I am not so complacent as to believe that we will have yet found all the 'hotspots' but having dealt with almost 80 in the last weeks, and supported by the recent 'indifferent' weather, I am confident that we are all but there. We continue to monitor the area regularly and, indeed, were able to detect and extinguish three previously unidentified heat sources last week. I will maintain this regular presence until I am satisfied that the chances of a lingering peat fire are absolutely minimal and I can assure you that we will continue to take prompt and vigorous action to deal with any renewed fire threat. You and your readers would also wish to know that we are currently engaged with the Emergency Services to ensure that all the relevant lessons arising from these fires are learned and applied appropriately. I sincerely hope that we are not faced with a repeat of this situation but I am greatly encouraged that in the event of a further incident BFSAI and the Emergency Services would join together again in a similar spirit of co-operation and shared effort.

And thanks from Smokey

AS the Chief Executive of the Falklands Veterans Foundation (FVF), I would like to take this opportunity on behalf of myself, the Chairman (Lt Col Tony Davies) and all the Trustees to thank you all for the kindness and generosity that you show to all visiting veterans and support that you give to Liberty Lodge.

2012 has been a particularly busy year and although the FVF built Liberty Lodge to accommodate visiting Veterans we still rely on yourselves to host Veterans and their families. In addition to the hosts, we have the volunteer drivers that show pure dedication and constantly give their own time to take the veterans to the battle sites. I sincerely hope that we have not exhausted your hospitality and thank you from the bottom of my heart for all that you do for us.

It is extremely difficult to manage the Lodge from 8,000 miles away so special thanks also go to Ellen Davis and Gary Clement for all the support that they give to the FVF in making Liberty Lodge a success.

May I wish you all a very Merry Christmas and a safe and prosperous New Year.

Invitation To Tender - Radar Site Decommissioning, Goose Green, Falkland Islands

The British Antarctic Survey (BAS), Natural Environment Research Council, wishes to remove radar masts and associated infrastructure from a paddock on the edge of the Goose Green settlement by 31 May 2013. This is to comply with Falkland Islands Government planning permission 56/09/P which requires that "the radar array and supports, ISO containers and all other structures and equipment, together with all foundations shall be removed by 31 May 2013 and the site restored to its original condition prior to development".

BAS invites expressions of interests from suitably experienced contractors to decommission this equipment and related infrastructure, and to restore the site to its original condition.

To receive the Statement of Requirement and Tender documents, interested parties should contact Steve Lucas, RCUK Procurement Specialist: sjlu@bas.ac.uk

The closing date for receipt of Tenders will be Friday 1st February 2013 16.30 UK time

PUBLIC NOTICE FROM THE RETIREMENT PENSIONS BOARD OF MANAGEMENT

RETIREMENT PENSIONS FUND

CLAIMING A PENSION

Contributors to the Retirement Pensions Fund (previously known as the Old Age Pensions Fund) are reminded to claim a pension upon reaching the age of 64 years. For widows and widowers a pension may be claimed upon reaching the age of 60 years. Claim to Pension forms can be obtained from the Pensions Office at the Treasury.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO RETIREMENT PENSION SCHEME

It is compulsory for all persons resident in the Falkland Islands between the ages of 17 to 64, and who have earnings in excess of the current limit of £180 per week, to contribute to the Fund. It is important for all contributors to have as full a pension record as possible. An incomplete pension record will result in only a partial pension at retirement.

APPLYING FOR CONTRIBUTION CREDITS

Any person who considers they are unable to afford making contributions is advised to contact the Pensions Office at the Treasury to see if they are eligible to apply to the Board of Management for assistance. Under certain circumstances the Government will pay contributions on behalf of contributors. To be eligible a person must be earning less than the current limit of £180 per week and fulfil any one of the following criteria:

- entitled to a family allowance,
- or
- looking after a person who is entitled to an attendance allowance,
- or
- unable to work due to ill health,
- or
- following a prescribed course of education/training,
- or
- actively seeking employment.

Conservation seed collection

FALKLANDS Conservation took a trip to Middle Island in Choe-soul Sound recently. The first field trip for the new native seed mix project also marked a generous donation of £500 to FC from the 460 Port Troop who delivered the conservationists to the island.

The 460 Port Troop used their 'Landing Craft, Vehicle, Personnel,' a boat capable of delivering vehicles and people directly on to a beach and often used to take military personnel out at weekends to see a little more of the Islands. Fees for the weekend trips are collected from each passenger and the pot of money is donated to a chosen charity, this time to Falklands Conservation.

Once we had landed, a team of volunteers got to work collecting tussac and blue grass seed. These collections will form part of the native seed mixes being developed by FC for use in restoration of eroded ground and improvement of degraded pasture. The island proved to be a great site for collecting these species which are among the first grasses to set seed in the Falklands. Very quickly volunteers filled a number of large sacks full of seed heads.

There was also the opportunity for FC staff to carry out important monitoring work on the island, which is FC owned and supports nationally and internationally important plants and habitats. Surveys for the rare, endemic Falklands rock cress were carried out by Richard Lewis, Andy Stanworth and Brian Bond. James Fenton continued the photographic monitoring of a large area of the island which was badly burnt following a lightning strike in 2008. The monitoring included an assessment of the extent of wind erosion and vegetation re-growth. A bird survey of the islands was led by Sarah Crofts and Micky Reeves.

The trip finished with a barbecue in the sun at Mare Harbour. All in all it was a great day and a perfect start to the seed collecting season. Many thanks to the 460 Port Troop and the volunteers for all their hard work in making it a success. Further seed collection trips will be taking place frequently across East Falkland and some of the outer islands over the next three months. If this sounds like something you would like to get involved in please do get in touch or drop in to the shop and sign up for our mailing list.

Camp Education Nativity - It's a Baby

Angels: Talia and Kamila

IT was with great anticipation that family and friends of East Falkland Camp Education pupils gathered in Goose Green club on Friday, 7 December to watch 'It's a Baby' featuring children from North Camp, North Arm and Goose Green.

The nativity was told from the point of view of a rather grumpy innkeeper, ably played by Adam,

Narrators: Layla and Kia and his wife, played by Bekka. A supporting cast of shepherds (Elisha and Lindsey), Kings (Marco and Matias), Angels (Talia and Kamila) and sheep (Christopher and Jessica) helped Mary (Beth) and Joseph (José) welcome their new baby into the world. Narrators Layla and Kia kept everything together. Richard Hines made a surprise cast member at North Arm with ten minutes warning to learn his lines!

Parents, friends, family and members of the wider community were thoroughly impressed with the play, even more so when they realised that the 14 cast members had practised together for only two hours. Goose Green teacher, Jackie Adams said, "I am exceptionally proud of all of the children for their hard work and enthusiasm."

Beth and José as Mary and Joseph

There was a second performance, with a slightly reduced cast, at North Arm club on Monday 10 December. Once again the children did a terrific job and thoroughly deserved all the applause they got. "Thank you to everyone involved- and all those who travelled to see us," said Ms Adams.

Year 5 camping trip to Goose Green

WE arrived at Goose Green on Tuesday after driving in convoy from town. Miss Poole with her usual attention to detail had planned everything meticulously and we had the tents up in the blink of an eye before setting out on our walk to Bodie Creek Bridge.

A lot of us were up all night on Tuesday. There were high winds and it rained a lot, but the main factor which induced most of the children's insomnia was the pure adrenalin rush of being away from home and staying in a tent with friends. (Unfortunately for the teaching staff, we were up most of the night too.)

Everyone was up early and without complaint the next day though and I cooked bacon sandwiches and omelette rolls for breakfast. They all got eaten although I'm sure some people were just being polite.

On Wednesday we visited Saladero and learned a great deal about the farm from James McGhie, as well as enjoying a trip to the ruins at Hope Place.

Goose Green's Got Talent on Wednesday evening was very loud and a lot of fun. Entrants included well-known names such as "Jedwood," and the "Barbie Girls," but there were some well rehearsed dramatic entries too, (some of the boys had even thought to bring hair gel.) The panel was very impartial and (especially in the case of Mr Gill) uncannily like their television counterparts. After a scrupulously fair assessment of each performance, they awarded each group exactly 27 points. The evening finished with a session of country dancing with Mrs Adams on violin. This tired everyone out nicely and almost everyone had a proper night's sleep.

On Thursday, we completed a variety of activities around Goose Green and finished up the morning watching the shearing in progress before heading back to Stanley, stopping on the way home for lunch at Swan Inlet.

It was a fantastic week with excellent behaviour from all the children. I think we all needed the long weekend to catch up on our sleep though.

BitterSweet haven for a relaxing treat

Julie and Leslie with the chocolate tempering machine

A FAIR-TRADE and organic delight opened for business in the old Falklands Store last week. Bitter Sweet, run by Julie Clarke and Leslie Knight, sells freshly ground Colombian coffee and handmade Belgian chocolates churned on location.

Enticing customers in with the promising aromas of delicious indulgence, it's been a busy week for the entrepreneurs making chocolate gift boxes for the demanding festive season.

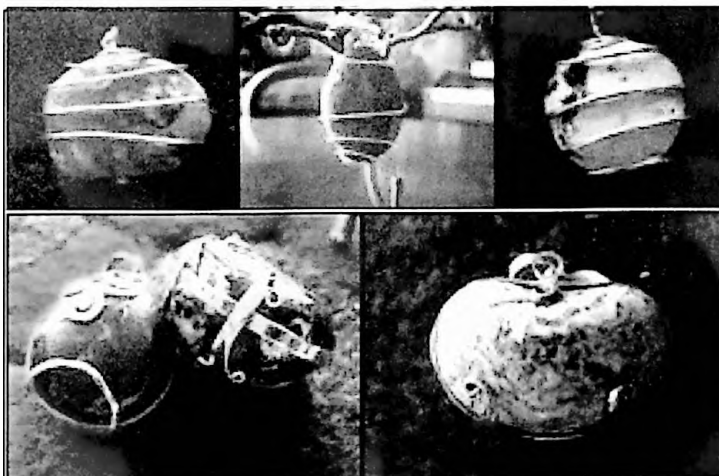

They have big plans for the future to expand the business, and the chocolate counter too, with new selections of truffles and filled centre specialities.

Upstairs from the coffee station and mini chocolate factory is a well-lit and inviting relaxation area for customers to sink into the sofas with their treats. However, the couple have more plans for the space. "We've asked Sonia Felton to provide artwork, and we hope to get portraits of the many characters of the Falklands to hang on the walls," said Julie.

It is hoped the space will also house acoustic music performances, when, in the evenings it is transformed into a wine bar with chocolate and cheese accompaniments.

Julie explained the logic behind the business venture was a culmination of ideas, her own reluctance to go back to pub management, and Leslie being a skilled chocolatier. The outcome was to create a tasteful space for people to relax in a great location and share ideas, with tasty chocolate and coffee to boot.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West

Falkland including the cross sound ferry main operational area

146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

The Vanilla Daisy Company on stage at the Town Hall

Hairy Daisy Group's flashy rendition of Jingle Bells

DANCING with festive flair the jolly little dancers of the Vanilla Daisy Company captured the hearts of the audience at their Christmas Ballet Recital on Saturday. The youngest performers in the company, Buttercup Group, opened the show with endearing style to the music of 'It's beginning to feel a lot like Christmas.'

Next to the stage was the Orchid Group, dancing to 'Frosty the Snowman'. Their jaunty hats may have been uncooperative but they delivered a chic performance regardless. Choreographed to 'Let it Snow' were the Ladyslipper Group who gave a confidently sweet interpretation.

The audience then enjoyed an interlude from the young ballerinas as one of the helpers Florence Holmes took to the stage with a solo dance to 'Silver Bells', showing what skill can be achieved with years of ballet practice.

Next were the rather dashing Hairy Daisy group dancing to 'Jingle Bells' in full reindeer garb, and the last group to perform were the sprightly Pale Maidens who danced energetically to 'Troika'.

All of the Vanilla Daisy Company then gathered on stage to wish the crowd a Merry Christmas before Tom Hill, Head Teacher of IJS:CE started the prize-giving. Fiona Wallace-Nannig extended her thanks to many who made the non-profit company a possibility, including dance teacher Hazel Fowmes and helpers Paula and Connie Fowmes, Florence Holmes and Sophie Pomper-Robertson.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

A BIT of fine weather on Bank Holiday Monday gave me, at last, a very delayed opportunity to get into the flower beds (and find the plants amongst the weeds) A gardening friend rather foolishly stopped by bearing a house plant for me that she had grown from seed. I say foolishly because experience should have warned her to drive on. When we made penguins and other soft toys for a living this same person used to visit the 'factory' where she was invariably handed toys to either fill or sew. Very adaptable is Jenny for soon she was pulling out weeds too! She finished by taking some of the rubbish bags to the dump. What a friend indeed!

I was delighted to see some of the day-lilies, (Hemerocallis) are starting to open. They are so called because the flowers open only for one day, though there are masses more to keep the show going. The 'flag' Irises are also starting to show colour, and there should be quite a variety of colour in there. There also some quite large clumps of species Iris grown from seed and flowering for the first time this year. They have rather smaller flowers, in various shades of blue and mauve, but they are so plentiful that they put on quite a show. The paeonies are looking wonderful, even the one I sat in, so far there are some deep cerise ones and a couple of lovely pink ones on show. Here's hoping they outlast this awful weather. The taller delphiniums quickly succumbed to the extremely high winds and they have been flattened; not even the weeds could prop them up! The dwarfier ones stand a better chance in our conditions but they are rather later starting to flower.

Iris flower in bloom

Breeding has given rise to many new plants and different varieties of older ones. The winds polished off the beautiful double creamy white daffodils flowering so much later than the rest, in fact, over Spring. I think it would be fair to say that daffodils of many sorts gave colour over a period of about ten weeks; sadly now, they are just looking a mess, but I have just grabbed clumps of leaves as I weeded and they do look neater. The blue, pink and white 'bluebells' got the same treatment.

Meanwhile, in the 'stumpery' the ferns (and weeds) are almost hidden by oriental poppies and dwarf lupins. Any bare areas left are camouflaged by the variously coloured ornamental hebes. They have variegated green and yellow leaves and different types of purple ones as well as some plain green leaved ones which have pink flowers and make a welcome change.

This year, for the first time ever, the forsythia flowered. What a beautiful sight! The apple blossom together with the cherry blossom were very eye-catching too, but that is all over now, though surprisingly, we still have little cherries on the trees. Does that mean more high winds to come I wonder? Meanwhile the Syringa (lilac) with purple flowers and the Ceanothus (pale blue puffs as flowers) are flowering their little socks off, as is, of course, the Embothrium.

I was delighted to see more new bulbs had arrived at the Garden Centre; I came away (as always) with bagfuls of 'must have' bulbs. They are all planted up now, including the onion bulbs which looked so good I had to have them. Some I have planted in the tunnels, the rest are in the fridge for later. The onions and shallots planted earlier in the season under cover, are filling out nicely now. Those outside planted out last Autumn, have struggled a little but appear to be doing well also.

The asparagus have really done well this year but, being young plants I only took a couple of tips off each. They should be even better next year. The pumpkins are doing well and starting to flower, though those flowers are all male at the moment.

The courgettes (baby marrows) are there in great numbers so I shall use a few before allowing them to mature to a bigger size. They don't need pollinating, just food and water required. The aubergines are struggling, even inside, with the low levels of sun and heat, whilst the peppers are at a standstill. I have been giving them very weak feeds of phostrogen to stop them becoming weak and leggy. The tomatoes too need to be fed once a week to keep them growing strongly; it helps to fill out the fruit and keep it tasty. A true tomato feed (as bought) is best for this job, too much nitrogen will just cause the plant to become too leafy at the expense of the fruit, it is also necessary at this stage to remove the extra branches trying to grow between the leaves and the stem - unless you are growing bush tomatoes that is- these small 'plants' can be rooted if required to make the season longer but, if left on the plant they will make it very unwieldy and less productive.

The Christmas potatoes should be doing well under ground. Those we planted last May are flowering, but I have resisted the temptation to dig a root out, although, as soon as the weather allows I must hoe those outside and thin the carrots, parsnips, swedes and turnips.

Merry Christmas to you all!

Turkey shooters in festive spirit

FALKLANDS Archery Club had their outdoor Christmas Turkey Shoot on Sunday, the last outdoor competition of the year sponsored by Seafish Chandlery. 13 members turned out for the occasion, shooting 12 arrows over six distances from 18 metres to 50 metres in any order they liked for the senior members of the club at each range. Members were in good spirits and up for the challenge. The longer ranges proved difficult. 'Peat bog' Andy and 'Stand Destroyer' Jo, missed a number of times on their first attempt at 50m. No one was counting though Javier Lazo, now known as Robin Hood, on the other hand tried to put one arrow inside another at 18m smashing the nock end off one of his arrows, but he still managed to beat all on the field.

Junior's had shorter distances of 10, 18 and 20m shooting 24 arrows at each. All did well and were a credit to the club and themselves. The competition proved very close for third place with the result only being decided in the last six arrows.

1st Javier Lazo 530 points (Turkey)
2nd Mike McLeod 455 points (Chicken)
3rd Jason Lewis 300 points (Poussin)

Juniors

1st Tamsin McLeod 470 points
2nd James Tyrrell 320 points
3rd Craig Lewis 90 points

Thank you to Neville Haywood and Seafish Chandlery for their generous sponsorship our competition once again this year. Also to Jo Lazo the Club Secretary for the Junior Competition prizes.

ON Thursday, a field of 21 players signed in for a welcome, and rare, return of evening golf. The Chelwell Trophy sponsored by Cable and Wireless is always keenly contested and this time proved no different.

Eugene Hurley played excellent golf for the first dozen holes and was at one point +6 in the bogey format before dropping back over the closing stretch to +3 and still good enough for a fine win. In second place on a count back was the in-form Declan Bonner. Third place went to Sarah Bowles on +2.

On Sunday, it was back to the Stableford format as players contested the popular Sullivan Shield. In stableford, players who play exactly to their handicap will complete their round having collected a total of 36 points. Anything higher means they have played better than their average.

Adam Glanville made a rare appearance and shot an impressive round of 75 for an excellent 38 points which on the day was only good enough for third place.

Gordon Lennie, who has clocked more miles around the 60 acre paddock than the Proclaimers have ever sung about, put in a superb homeward nine holes, on its own worth a massive 25 points and a total for the round of 39 points to claim second place.

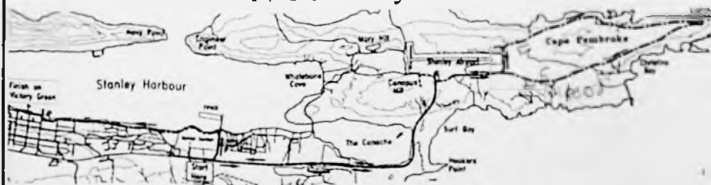

The outstanding round of the day, the week and the season so far was neatly put together by our Club Captain Troyd Bowles. Three birdies and a superb eagle on the par five 15th, resulted in a fine round of 69 strokes and 40 points.

The club wishes to thank Amanda Forster and all at Sullivan Shipping for their generous sponsorship of this event.

The next scheduled competition is the Argos Ltd event on Saturday the 29th of December, the format is Stableford. Members are asked to sign in by 13:45 for a 14:00 hrs tee-off.

Curly and Clare would like to take this opportunity to say a huge thank you to everyone for the wonderful wedding gifts we received at the weekend. Unfortunately some cards and gifts were separated so please forgive us if not everyone receives a personal thank you note.

Also big thanks to His Excellency the Governor for allowing us to be married in Government House and also his staff for looking after us all so well, Richard Short and his team for making sure the venue was finished on time for the reception and also to Carl, Matt, Jasper and the team at the Malvina for providing (as always) excellent service and outstanding food.

Special thanks to Best Man Ryan, Bridesmaid Amy, Pageboy Jonathan and Shirley Adams-Leach for providing excellent music before, during and after the ceremony. Special mention also to Trev and Claire Law for all their hard work, effort and running around to make the day run as smoothly as it did.

Thanks to you all !!

Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund

Thank you so much for all donations and support over the past year. Through the year the fund has helped 31 folk and has paid out in flights and lodgings £33,000. The support given to the fund is therefore grateful appreciated. Thanks to Morgan, Nettie, Ina, Dennis & Liz for the support you give the fund in your own time. Merry Christmas and Happy Healthy New Year to you all.

ENVIRONMENTAL MAINSTREAMING STUDY

The Falkland Islands Government seeks expressions of interest from qualified organisations or individuals to conduct a study to investigate and inform on the natural capital and ecosystem services of the Falkland Islands.

The overall aim of the study is to build on the first two phases of the current Environmental Mainstreaming study by demonstrating the potential environmental, social and economic benefits of developing an ecosystem-service based approach to land and sea management, and in so doing increasing capacity within the Falkland Islands for the consideration of ecosystem service values in decision making.

Quotes for the delivery of this study should be provided by the 11th January 2013 to Nick Rendell at the Environmental Planning Department. Further details and the full Terms of Reference for the study are available from Nick Rendell.

LIGHTHOUSE SEAMEN'S CENTRE - NOTICE FROM TRUSTEES

Trustees of the Stanley Seamen's Mission are grateful to Steve and Edmonde, out-going Managers of the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre, for their service at the Centre during the past 18 months and wish them well for their future.

From 1st January 2013 every effort will be made to maintain the Centre's usual service to fishermen, yacht users, and all other seafarers, as required. To that end, anyone who would consider joining the present small team of employees and volunteers is invited to contact a trustee to register their interest and to obtain further information.

Meanwhile, during the month of January 2013, the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre will be closed to the general public and plans prepared for thereafter. We extend our sincere thanks to all who regularly support the work of the Centre.
