Private sector stepping up in support of oil industry

FALKLAND Islands' companies are "stepping up to the plate," in providing support services to the oil industry; and their investment in increased work forces, facilities and equipment is already paying dividends.

One company Byron McKay Port Services has already expended over £8 million capital asset provisioning, in addition to an investment of about £400,000 in employee training costs over three years.

The joint venture company between Neil McKay Ltd and Byron Marine Ltd began planning for service provision to the oil industry several years ago.

Director Lewis Clifton said. "Evidence of commitment at the local level can be seen either in terms of increased capital assets (machinery, plant, cranes, fork lifts, heavy goods trucks, and supply base facilities) warehouses, hard standing, laydown and offices, and significant increases in numbers of employees to make the assets work and support the offshore supply chain. Importantly, employees must not only be multi-talented, but must be certificated to operate in the logistics supply chain to UK North Sea standards."

Mr Clifton said the company had already benefited from the growth of the oil industry, "but was only able to do so by stepping up to the plate to win contracts and deliver services."

Transportation company Falkland Islands Tours and Travel (FITT) has also increased its team in direct response to contracts that have been negotiated and held for the duration of the exploration programme with AGR, Ocean Rig and CHC.

Managing Director Andrea Clausen said the company now provided logistics personnel, along with existing transport services. FITT would be seeking to provide similar services, "and hopefully expand into some new, as the exploration programme evolves into exploitation," she explained.

Others have benefited from

Communications, transport and accommodation support oil

FITT's success with the company sub-contracting through full-time and casual employees.

Tim Miller of Stanley Growers told Penguin News that although they had not yet increased staff levels, "by 2014 I would think we will have more members of staff in the salad and vegetable production team."

Stanley Growers is supplying fresh produce direct to the offshore industry and through local agents. During the RKH/Desire drilling programme with additional seismic survey vessels the company's sales increased by about 10 per cent although it is currently slightly less due to there being no seismic vessels conducting work.

Mr Miller said in 2014 when more rigs would be present the additional personnel in the Islands would need more fresh food.

In 2011-2012 the company invested approximately £20,000 in the purchase of two large poly-tunnels and a further two giant tunnels are planned for 2013. Increased imported produce is also planned, but this will be subject to freighting options.

Sullivan Shipping Managing Director John Pollard said his company has been working with the oil industry in a number of areas, "in the marine field as owners agents for the UOS vessels that supported the Ocean Guardian rig operations and in aviation as ground-handlers at Mount Pleasant for the Hify charter."

He said the latter required Sullivan Shipping to bring in a specialist piece of equipment for loading and unloading aircraft, "which we have also put to use to assist the MOD with their airbridge operations on occasions."

He said should the frequency of international flights increase, and the companies attendance at Mount Pleasant also increase then that could well create more full and part time job opportunities.

Mr Pollard said the company would, "watch developments with interest and ensure that we are ready for any new opportunities."

In the hospitality sector, The Waterfront Hotel's Alex Olmedo has also increased staff levels, products and services due to the increased demand from oil companies and other tourism sectors.

He said: "We provide accommodation and meals to our residents and the corporate market in particular oil companies for private dinner parties."

Mr Olmedo said confirmed bookings for the tourist season were much higher than in previous years: "Although we are not the first choice for accommodation for the oil companies we get a lot of the bookings which other establishments cannot accommodate."

So optimistic is Mr Olmedo

about the future, he is planning to operate new B&B accommodation 'The Paddock', as well as refurbishing the hotel's dining room, kitchen and bedrooms and extending the conservatory: "We hope to be able to be more attractive to the oil industry with our enhanced products and services."

Stanley Services' General Manager Robert Rowlands said thanks to Stanley Services' past investment, the company had been able to provide many of the services required by the oil industry: "The company continues to look to growth as can be seen by the work already proceeding on current projects and there are plans for further investment and expansion to meet future needs," he said.

Cable & Wireless is one more company that appreciates the economic growth generated by the oil industry. Chief Executive Justin McPhee said: "We have provided oil operators with some specialised services during the exploration phase and would hope to expand this as the industry develops in the Islands."

He said the significant investments the company had made in new equipment and network infrastructure in recent years means, "we are well placed to support the requirements of the oil industry as it develops. Any activity that increases economic activity helps address the challenges we have due to economy of scale will benefit all customers in the longer term."

As has already been reported in Penguin News, the Falkland Islands Company is also anticipating significant business opportunities in relation to the oil industry including utilising existing FIC freehold land in Stanley for warehouse and storage yards. They also hope to provide offices for the industry as well as purpose built accommodation units for long stay staff. In a Joint venture with Trant Construction they aim to bid for government and private sector construction and engineering contracts.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

UNUSUALLY, it's an editorial of accolades this week, not just to keep those readers who think we are a grumpy old bunch in this office on a back foot, but also because it is deserved.

News from Executive Council that there is to be a review of the Development Plan was well received on my part, having just made personal representation to government officials along with a group of other interested parties that several areas urgently needed revisiting. That it wouldn't happen until next year was a little disappointing, but at least it has been recognised that with the rapid industrial development taking place there is a very real need to have a rational plan in place to manage the approach to commercial expansion and especially to protect our way of life.

While it's very easy to get excited about the opportunities that exist in the future, having enjoyed our inimitable way of life both pre and post 1982, an era which incorporated the fishing boom, I fully recognise that with hindsight there are valuable aspects of it we could and should have hung onto.

So eager were we to move on and embrace a more modern and comfortable lifestyle that we let some traditions slip away, while others were whipped out from under our noses without so much as a by your leave.

But, armed with the ever powerful tool of hindsight and living in an age of consultation, I hope I'm not being naïve in thinking there could never be a repeat.

"Success does not consist of never making mistakes but in never making the same one a second time," George Bernard Shaw

THE Campers Bash on Saturday celebrating a host of 60th birthdays has received rave reviews and while there was a bit of unrest initially that an application for a licensed bar was turned down, I'm left thinking it may have been a blessing in disguise.

The FIDF hall was full of people and more importantly families having a good time and quite a large number of Campers had made their way to town to join in with some good old fashioned fun. Apart from it celebrating the birthdays of the young at heart born in 1952, it was also a chance to return the hospitality of those living in Camp who regularly put on such events for the enjoyment of the town dwellers.

Well done to Heather Smith and her band of helpers for managing to 'Cross the River', keep an ace up their sleeve for the 'Card Dance' and bang that broom to keep the dance going, rather than sweeping the idea under the carpet at the first obstacle.

Falklands to Birdfair 2012

BIRDFAIR or 'the Birdwatchers Glastonbury' as it is affectionately known was attended by representatives from the Falkland Islands again this year.

The three day event was held at Rutland between August 17 and 19 and this year's Falkland Islands Tourist Board stand was manned by local birder Alan Henry, Martin and Jane Beaton managers of Weddell Island and Tony Mason the Managing Director at FITB.

Mr Henry said: "The FITB stand had lots of interest from people who had already booked land based tours or cruises where they have a stop off in the Islands.

"We also had people who were hoping to visit in the next few years. People who had previously visited the Islands also came and said hello and how they had fantastic memories of their time in the Islands."

In the afternoon of the second day Martin Beaton gave a talk called "Birds of the Falklands Where What and How" which was well attended and generated a great deal of interest, said Alan.

Abattoir ramping up for season

SAND Bay abattoir is busily in the midst of preparing for the on-coming season, confirmed Assistant Manager Dave Roberts this week.

He said there was a small amount of upgrade work to complete, "which couldn't be done at the start of last export season, and this is expected to be completed in the coming weeks."

Farmers have begun to send in livestock estimates for the season, with a return of 33 per cent in so far; about normal for this time of year. Mr Roberts said, "The Department of Agriculture and FIM-Co have been speaking to cattle suppliers, and have held several workshops to gain an increase in the cattle numbers available and also look at export beef."

Packaging, labels, pallets, salt and personal protection equipment for the season are currently being ordered to make the vessels in time for early December.

He added, "We undertake maintenance throughout the season, however after the export season, annual maintenance is carried out on all items of plant and machinery, which also involves ordering specialist materials from the UK and Chile."

General Manager John Ferguson and Production Manager Nigel Leach will attend the SIAL food fair in Paris during October, "there we have the opportunity to meet up with our most export customers, obtain feedback on the season and discuss the 2013 season with existing and prospective customers."

"Due to the euro-crisis continuing, we continue to actively look at developing products in our EU and non-EU markets to spread the risk and benefit."

Planning update

THE Planning and Building Committee approved 12 applications yesterday at what was secretary Fiona Wallace-Nannig's last meeting. Committee chair MLA Jan Cheek thanked Fiona for her 11 years with the department and wished her good luck with her new job, adding that she would be very much missed.

A single story extension to the Central Store and Coffin Shop was approved at the Dock Yard with the details of parking areas to be agreed at a later date.

The erection of dwellings for Andrew Bone at 1 Old School Hostel, John Kultschar to the rear of 29 Fitzroy Road, Robert Legg and Sammie Davis at 21 Kent Road, Marty Pole-Evans at 19 Kent Road and for a two storey house at 5 Brandon Road with the existing house and shed to be demolished upon completion for Ian Smith were all given the go ahead, as was Bono McKay's application to site a Portakabin with extension for use as accommodation at 3 Brandon Road. The siting of a Portakabin at 8 Goss Road for Tony Anderson was also approved as was the commercial enterprise of changing the use of 2 H Jones Road from a dwelling to a children's nursery and staff accommodation for Linda McRae.

Permission for an extension to the house and the erection of a garage which had previously been deferred for Jack Wilson was also approved, as was the extension of the conservatory at the Waterfront Hotel for Anna King.

Simon Hardecastle was granted permission to moor tow 16 metre fish cages for growing sea trout at sea off Shell Point, Fitzroy, for a three year period with conditions to monitor interaction with and the well being of the fish during that time.

The change of use from dwelling to guest house of The Pad-dock, 38 Davis Street was agreed for Alex Olmedo as was the removal of the existing lay-by at the front of Malvina House Hotel, to be replaced with a larger bus pick-up/drop-off lay-by for Stanley Services Ltd.

12 month probation order for 'yobbish behaviour'

STANLEY man David John Hills (30) was sentenced to a 12 month probation order on Wednesday, after a month long adjournment for a presentence report to be prepared.

Mr Hills who was on already on a community service order pleaded guilty to criminal damage and disorderly behaviour on August 8, relating to an offence which took place on July 14. Mr Hills had attempted to gain entrance to his neighbours house while in a drunken state and had become abusive and broken a window.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said having read the presentence report he noted that a probation order was suggested, but questioned why, when Mr Hills breached a previous order he would not do it again.

Mr Gumsley said he remembered sitting in the court several months back with Mr Hills admitting he had done a, "silly thing," in drink, and explaining that he was a hard worker and a family man with plans for the future. "It was all tosh," said Mr Gumsley, adding that Mr Hills had simply gone out and repeated his, "yobbish behaviour."

He warned Mr Hills that unless he stopped drinking he could end up in prison.

"You may not be in last chance saloon yet, but you are knocking heavily on the door," he added.

Mr Hills was also ordered to obey all lawful orders of the probation officer and attend all appointments set by the department for a period of 60 days and pay £85 court costs.

Two further cases were adjourned until next week. Samantha Laura McCormick (20) had her case adjourned for her legal representative to have more time to consider the prosecution papers. Miss McCormick faces charges of careless driving and driving without a seat belt.

Kaylee Ileen Simone Smith (20) also had her case adjourned for a further week for further legal research to be carried out. Miss Smith faces a dishonesty charge.

New Scania for Fire Dept

FUNDING for a Scania fire appliance to replace an aging Bedford has been approved after the Director of Emergency Services and Chief Fire Officer presented a paper to Executive Council containing the specifications of the new vehicle.

The Budget Select Committee had agreed the funding for a replacement earlier in the year, but expressed concern that they were not aware of what the Bedford was being replaced with. Funding was frozen until approval was sought from Executive Council on the detail of the vehicle.

The Scania Fire Service cab and chassis is the most popular and proven base used by the UK and overseas Fire Services, it was noted in the report and this cab and chassis is the preferred choice for replacing the existing Bedford and Dennis appliances which are no longer manufactured.

Share plans

AN Extra Statutory Concession (ESC) for individuals receiving up to £3,000 of shares a year from their employer company under a share incentive plan has been approved by Executive Council.

The ESC will allow shares which have been acquired through Share Incentive Plans (SIP) which have received approval in the UK to be non taxable benefits in the Falkland Islands. In addition, if a scheme operated in the Falkland Islands has the requisite terms and conditions as an approved SIP then the Tax Office will allow the benefits to be non taxable.

SIPs are a method of rewarding employees granted by their employer company.

Byron builds up new contacts and meets up with old friends

BYRON Marine have had a busy four days building up contacts and shaping new business opportunities at the Oilshore Northern Seas (ONS) 2012 conference and exhibition in Stavanger, Norway.

One visitor to the stand was Knut von Krough, who in 1992 brokered the sale of Leca Vest (renamed Tamar FT) from Norwegian owners via Byron Marine to the Development Corporation. The trio in the photograph had never previously met each other - David Allan (left) who was responsible for the conversion works in Yorkshire Dry Dock, Knut von Krough, and Lewis Clifton.

Natalie Smith, who in 1992 was employed in FIDC, was the third member of the Byron delegation in Stavanger, and was instrumental in recommending the name Tamar.

Shearing stops in April

SHEARING sheep in April is no longer allowed, except for animals going for immediate slaughter, following an amendment to the Code of Practice for the Welfare of Sheep.

The change to shearing dates was recommended by the Director of Mineral Resources and the Senior Veterinary Officer in order to reduce the effects of poor weather and poor nutrition on the condition of the sheep during the short Falklands growing season and received no opposition from the farming community.

Shearing is permitted from November 1 to February 28 using standard combs. Cover combs must be used from September 15 until October 31 and from March 1 until March 31.

If small numbers of stragglers (sheep which escaped earlier round-ups) need to be shorn in April the farmer should first contact the veterinary section to give notice of his intention to shear. All sheep shorn in April must be shorn using cover combs.

Your Questions Answered

Q Can the police confirm that bicycles which had been in lost property for some time were destroyed at the rubbish dump last week. If this is the case, why could they not have been auctioned for, or offered to charitable organisations?

A Inspector Len McGill provided the following information.

Unfortunately bicycles that come into found property are on their last legs, or even incomplete. Bicycles of any value are not normally 'lost' by their owners in the Falklands. The Police Ordinance permits the Chief Police Officer to dispose of items of no appreciable value by what ever means they consider appropriate. Due to the condition of the bicycles, they were destroyed at the public refuse dump.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

EXECUTIVE Council had a heavy but interesting agenda last week, probably a hint of things ahead as the September meeting has been cancelled so I imagine that October's will have a very long agenda. The cancellation is because of the number of members absent on overseas business, other meetings will be covered.

Two of us will be at the party conferences from 21 September through to mid October, always an interesting experience meeting politicians of the three main parties as well as party rank and file. As it involves long hours at the Falklands stand talking to all comers, comfortable shoes and throat lozenges are part of the essential kit along with several suits to rotate through dry cleaning as the venues are often too hot.

Two more members are currently en route to Sri Lanka for the CPA, and then one of them, the Honourable Sharon Halford will join the Honourable Roger Edwards and Head of Policy, at EU meetings in Greenland. It is unfortunate that these commitments coincide or overlap every year but every opportunity we have to ensure that people are better informed about us is worth taking.

AS second member on the Housing Committee I've dealt with a few queries recently and thought it worth reminding people that they cannot come back and go straight on the housing list unless their absence has been for educational or medical reasons.

In normal circumstances they would have to wait two years before going on the waiting list. Once on the waiting list their priority will be assessed by a points system based on needs, health, number of children etc.

Other new arrivals are expected under the immigration policy to have accommodation organised. Occasionally individuals are permitted to house-sit in properties awaiting refurbishment or in a gap between contract officer appointments. These short lets are discretionary and obviously have no long term lease so the house-sitter may be given very short notice to leave. All the other usual rules regarding no subletting or creating damage or nuisance apply. I understand that these rules are made clear to all tenants.

A pleasant tab to Stanley

IT all began innocently enough when Cpl Matt Price, husband of Islander Lee Price (nee Hazel) invited the Mechanical Transport Workshop (MTW) "to participate in a little walk for charity."

LCpl Paul Ormston of MTW told Penguin News: "Being REME and up for anything to get out of work everyone agreed to take part. Planning began for this 'little walk' and it was then we realised what everyone had actually let themselves in for."

Research of all the current charities that operate in the Falkland Islands was completed and by an unanimous decision, The Flying Santa Appeal was chosen. This charity provides presents for children around the Camp and the presents are delivered by helicopter with RAF Santa on board.

A training programme was created with the RAF Physical Training Instructors, "which had to be adhered to if anyone stood a chance of completing this endurance Tab," said LCpl Paul Ormston.

It started with low distance Tabs and progressively increased in distance over the weeks. The night before the Tab, instead of the usual Crab and Sprocket night shenanigans, MTW had a high carb dinner and were back in their rooms ready for the early start.

The group met at the Four Seasons cookhouse at 5 am for a hearty breakfast that would fuel the first leg of the journey. Everyone then proceeded to MTW for 5.30 am for final preparations and a nominal role (making sure nobody ducked out).

Spirits were surprisingly high for such an early hour with Sqn Ldr Swann motivating the lads with a final pep talk and then everyone was off, following Sprocket 1 (Wksp Land Rover) in the pitch black driven by Sgt Luke Winter. The pack was followed by Sprocket 2, equipped with an external speaker to provide motivational music, driven by DJ LCpl Izzy Ahadzie, "who broke some of the lads with his diabolical music choices," said LCpl Paul Ormston.

For the first 10 or so miles, everyone was in high spirits and managing comfortably but soon after things became a little more difficult not least due to the poor road surface and never ending hills.

"Despite the usual Falklands weather, having four seasons of weather in one day, by the grace of God the day started mild and continued on until the 25 mile point where it started to hail and rain," he explained.

"The medic, SAC Hailing was an absolute Godsend, with her lovely soft hands, tending to peoples mangled feet."

Happily everyone made it to Stanley and stopped off at the hospital where they were greeted by the nurses, staff, BFBS and the photographer. All were provided with cakes, tea, coffee and more importantly alcohol. The nurses and our medic with her lovely hands, treated the aftermath of shredded feet.

After a refreshing shower most of the lads proceeded into town to celebrate with some drinks, unfortunately the majority of boys couldn't keep their eyes open and were in bed by 9 pm.

So far the total amount has raised just under £2,000.

Shiny new pre-school opens

THE new pre-school building in the Stanley House grounds was opened up for use this week, with a delighted group of teachers and children finding their way around the pristine facility.

By no means recognisable as renovated mobile road-camp accommodation, the clean bright lines offer a welcome addition to the primary education system. With around 50 three to four year-olds being catered for, the walls will no doubt soon become accustomed to the chatter of children rather than the grumbles of tired plant operators at the end of a long day.

Approximately 25 children attend each half day session on a daily basis with the three full time teachers.

Infant Junior School Head Teacher Tom Hill explained that with the increase in birth rate the previous facility had not been able to cope and with similar numbers anticipated in future years an alternative had to be found.

This was where the PWD's Property and Municipal Section works manager Glenn Williams stepped in, and once the road building season was finished the cabins were brought into Stanley and positioned to the east of Stanley House

"It only got started in May and by August Glenn had sourced and created a purpose built pre-school facility," enthused Mr Hill.

Greatly relieved that it had been completed in time for the new term, Mr Hill confessed that he had in fact cancelled his holiday as he thought he might be faced with a line-up of parents expecting an apology.

Sourcing the equipment had been the major challenge, said Glenn who added that Roy McGill of South Atlantic Trading Ltd had made an enormous effort to get everything to the Falklands in time.

Also trying to get the outside soft play area and access paths completed in the winter had presented a challenge, he said.

"At the end of the day it was a real team effort from the Municipal section along with G&S Electrical who pulled out all the stops getting the lighting in."

And, he was happy to confirm that the entire project had come in under the budgeted £44,000.

Support for 'back into employment'

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly have approved the inclusion of "an earnings disregard," into the Welfare Assessment Procedures to financially support people on welfare assistance back into employment from September 1, 2012.

Currently people who receive welfare assistance are often the poorest in the community and have no savings and possibly debt. According to a recent Executive Council paper: "They do not have the financial resources to enable them to transfer from welfare assistance to employment to prevent them from being caught in the 'welfare benefit trap'.

The paper refers to mainly single parents with children under school age who can only find low paid employment and have to pay for child care. Due to the cost of paying child care and a percentage of their rent they have less disposable income than when on welfare assistance.

An earning disregard would enable a person to earn £40 per week without this affecting their entitlement to welfare assistance. According to the Director of Health and Education: "It is anticipated that a time bar of 12 months would be appropriate as it would facilitate the return to work and individuals obtaining an income that would render such earnings disregard as no longer being required.

"The 12 month period would be subject to review pending the circumstances of the individual claimant and the state of their family circumstances"

£40 is the equivalent amount of money that people who are on the Employment Programme can earn in addition to their employment allowance.

The financial implications are considered to be cost neutral as the extra payments should match the savings on welfare assistance claims made by applicants due to their excess income.

Joyful invasion of MPC

SIXTEEN children escorted by three members of staff from Stanley's Leisure Centre paid a much-anticipated visit to the Mount Pleasant Base on August 12.

The aim of the visit was to give the children an insight into the lives of the military at Mount Pleasant Complex (MPC) and to further build on the already strong relationship enjoyed by the military and people of the Falklands Islands, said a spokesperson for MPC.

The children and staff from Stanley Leisure Centre were welcomed by various departments and units including the RAF Search and Rescue and Dog Section.

The children particularly enjoyed their chance to see the RAF Fire and Rescue crews in action, and having the chance to try on uniforms and clamber over the large fire engines needed at the very busy airfield. The visit was organised by Cpl Stewart of the Dog Section.

Development Plan looks to the future

AT last week's Executive Council it was agreed that a review of the Development Plan should take place with the period it covers to extend to 2026.

The Development Plan comprises the Structure Plan and the Stanley Town Plan, both of which are available in full on www.epd.gov.fk

It was agreed the boundary of the Stanley Town Plan be extended to include Stanley Common and the north side of Port Harriet and also the land from Fairy Cove/Watt Cove to Navy Point.

MLA Jan Cheek said there was a great deal of work to be done, but whatever changes were proposed would be put out for consultation next year.

"It is important for future generations that we have a coherent plan for land use and do not allow a lot of ad hoc decisions to damage peoples' quality of life," she said.

The Development Plan, comprising the Falkland Islands Structure Plan and the Stanley Town Plan, was adopted in March 2004 and covers the period 2001-2016.

The Town Plan was reviewed during 2007-8 which resulted in an alteration to the document being approved in 2009. The main changes affected housing allocations and greenspace.

Policy Officer James Fotheringham said that although the Development Plan had a theoretical end date of 2016, the acid test as to whether it remained, "fit for purpose," was the extent to which it embraced the Government's approach to development and adequately reflected the land use implications arising from strategic documents and other factors that influenced planning and development.

He listed a number of reasons why a review was needed and added: "The boundary of the Stanley Town Plan is also in need of review as an increasing number of developments that support the town have been proposed beyond it, which are difficult to assess in the absence of local plan policies."

This trend was likely to increase as the town continued to grow and the review and alteration would update the Structure Plan and Town Plan maps to reflect proposals that have been implemented and also include new policies and proposals, said Mr Fotheringham.

Glorious hand-out

GOVERNMENT allocates £70,000 for referendum. What is wrong with our policy makers? First they tell us we have not got sufficient for society, now we are told that it will cost £70,000 to hold this referendum in what most of us citizens will likely answer a simple yes or no. I can see this leading to questions that either the average folk will not understand or will be based on getting the desired result which 99 per cent of us already know the answer to.

The reporters are going to love the Islanders for this glorious hand-out, make no mistake.

Surely Assembly Members will now have to start thinking very carefully when people ask for additional vital assistance or financial support, when they can spend any amount they deem fit on projects that most of us consider questionable.

It is no wonder that so many in society are again starting to ask if it is worth doing anything positive anymore.

I know that in life one cannot please everyone all of the time but pleasing some of the people some of the time would be a nice gesture.

I wonder what the future might hold when the oil is finally pumped out. Chances are we will have a similar disaster to what happened when fishing started; millions wasted while the average man and women in the street suffered.

Now is the time to take stock of just what is going on and start putting the house back in order.

Yes, it is important to have the referendum but not at the ridiculous costs that are proposed.

Could be cleaner still

THE headlines in the Penguin News dated 24th August reads 'Clean Green Islands'. Whilst that might be true up to a point, there is still room for improvement, especially with regards to the rubbish tip at Eliza Cove which is a disgrace and the amount of litter that still comes ashore on our coastline mainly from fishing trawlers.

We also still have a problem with litter around Stanley. Kevin Clapp does a great job of picking up the litter that people discard without any care, and every week I and fill one or two buckets full from around the Boathouse. There is still a long way to go in having a clean and green environment before we can give ourselves a pat on the back.

A recent programme on FITV had an interview with the CEO of South Georgia who was quoted as saying that the eradication of rats and reindeer from the island would bring it back as close to its original state as possible.

Whilst this is a commendable statement, to really achieve such an objective and actually revert South Georgia back to its pristine condition would be for every human being to vacate the island and leave it to nature. Only then would the island revert back to its original state so that nature itself would be truly in charge.

Eighties referendum revealed 94.5 per cent for British rule

IN the light of the referendum on the political future of the Falkland Islands scheduled for March 2013, Islander Eric Goss this week provided Penguin News with historical information relating to a Sovereignty Survey conducted in 1986 that revealed a 94.5 per cent vote by Islanders in favour of British sovereignty.

The results of that survey were released at a Press Reception called by the Falkland Islands Association at the Kingsley Hotel in London on April 1, 1986.

The survey itself was carried out by Marplan Limited and commissioned by the Falkland Islands Committee with the results verified by the Electoral Reform Society.

A questionnaire was sent to everyone on the electoral register in the Islands asking one question 'What kind of sovereignty do you want for the Falkland Islands?'

Of the 1,033 questionnaires sent out, 920 copies were received back, a response of 89 per cent, one of the highest in Marplan's experience.

The results were:
British sovereignty – 94.5 %
Independence – 1.5%

Other solution not listed – 1.2%
Two solutions selected 1.1 %
Lease-back – 1.0%
Argentine Sovereignty – 0.3%
United Nations Trusteeship – 0.3%

According to a statement on the survey, the Governor at the time, Mr Gordon Jewkes in writing to Eric Ogden, Chair of the Falkland Islands Association on April 4 said: "Early reactions locally suggest that the spread of replies over the poll's different categories caused little surprise and apparently no serious disposition to attempt to uncover those who expressed minority opinions. However, I sense that the percentage of replies was somewhat higher than expected by Falkland Islanders. This certainly pleased them as indeed it did me."

The results of the survey were sent to the British Prime Minister of the time Margaret Thatcher who commented: "As you know, the Government has never been in any doubt over the wish of the overwhelming majority of the Falkland Islanders to remain under British sovereignty: that wish is a key factor in our policy."

She also wrote: "we are committed to defending the right of the Falkland Islanders to live under British sovereignty. This is not negotiable."

Argentine response

THIS week the Argentine Defence minister Arturo Puricelli strongly criticized the referendum planned for March 2013, describing it as a "parody."

The disgruntled Minister added: "If you ask the English if they want to remain English most surely they are going to say yes. I think it is a referendum lacking imagination and creativity. I would have expected more from the English."

In a recent Executive Council paper on the referendum it was noted that the Electoral Commission would assist with planning.

It also noted: "It is recommended that the election is independently observed by a panel of representatives from a number of different countries including from South America."

It was also recommended that, "a suitable person be invited to select and Chair a diverse and independent panel of observers and set out its terms of reference."

A philosophical approach

FOR those interested in a philosophical defence of the Falkland Islanders right to self determination, Uruguayan Patriek Shaw has penned a piece entitled Falklandophilia - Philosophical Defence Of Falklands Educative and Executive Britishness at <http://www.falklandophilia.com/120459888>

In the piece Shaw defends Falkland Islanders patriotism as "just" and that it derives its legality from natural reason, quoting Aquinas in support of his argument: "Since natural reason dictates matters which are according to the right of nations, as implying a proximate equality, it follows that they need no special institution, for they are instituted by natural reason itself."

He also suggests that Islanders can only be good and moral if they are true to themselves and their beliefs: "Falklanders can only be truly kind if they are their true kind. Which they are under the Union Jack image of what they cherish most under God in the capacity of who they are. As long as men will need to attach themselves to true beliefs, symbols will be necessary to awaken that attachment, and the standard of Britain emblem of the Falklanders' ever-renewed collective dedication speaks to all a steadfast and neat language linked to Britain's keenest experiences and worthiest achievements."

Are you of a philosophical bent? Let Penguin News know what you think of Mr Shaw's defence.

Child evidence hearsay order

AN order has been made on the admissibility of hearsay evidence from children. This allows an appropriate person to report in certain proceedings what a child has said, without the child necessarily having to give evidence.

The purpose of the order is to relax the rules of evidence where the proceedings are concerned with the upbringing, maintenance, or welfare of a child.

This is considered appropriate because it is recognised that the normal rules of evidence can be unnecessarily restrictive in proceedings where a child's welfare is the court's paramount consideration.

An ExCo paper on the subject noted: "In particular it is recognised that requiring a child to give evidence may be harmful to the child in certain circumstances."

That is not to say that a child will no longer be required to give evidence in any relevant proceedings. The paper notes that a balance must be struck between the need to protect the welfare of the child and the requirements of fairness.

Studying the 'pandas of the sea'

TO many, the killer whale, also known as orca, is considered the panda of the sea (a not-so-cuddly black and white ocean beast). Whale scientists have been particularly busy over the last 20 years studying the killer whale and we now know a whole lot about this species or, as it turns out, possibly several species.

Ten different "ecotypes" of killer whales have now been proposed: populations that look different, have different prey preferences, feeding habits and acoustic behaviours. Also they may represent several different species. Cataloguing photos from around the world, biologists have identified five different ecotypes in each of the Northern and Southern Hemispheres, with possibly as many as four having a distribution that could potentially include waters around the Falkland Islands.

At Sea Lion Island, "type A" killer whales are sighted. These are clearly demarcated black and white, with a white patch above and behind the eye. However, there are likely to be other ecotypes in Falkland waters. The "type D" killer whale has just a tiny white eye patch; it is known from a few sightings in subantarctic waters, including at South Georgia and it probably occurs in Falklands waters also.

A pod of killer whales photographed to the north of the Falklands in 1979 has now been identified as "type B" killer whales: more gray than black and with a much larger white eye patch than types A or D. And from satellite tracking studies, there is reason to suspect that this form regularly moves through the waters offshore here.

Eight type B killer whales foraging in Antarctic Peninsula waters were equipped with satellite transmitters to record their movements during the summers of 2010-2012 by US scientists John Durban and Bob Pitman. To the scientists great surprise, these killer whales made speedy northwards trips, getting up to speeds of 12km/hr or 6.5 knots, passing just east of the Falkland Islands, to the much warmer waters off Uruguay and Brazil.

Do type B killer whales often pass through Falklands waters and do type D killer whales actually occur here? And do the type A killer whales found in the Falklands migrate to Antarctic waters also? These are good questions and we can gather our own evidence fairly easily by collating all the photos people have of killer whales in and around the Falklands. Bob and John are keen to examine Falklands killer whale photos, especially if they have date and location information associated with them. These will be used not only to identify what types are present here, but also to see if any photo-identifiable animals from the Antarctic Peninsula have also been caught on camera in the Falklands. Helen Otley is collating photos for Bob and John - please obtain further information from her and send your images to heleno@southcom.com.au

Just how do whale scientists get satellite tags onto killer whales you might well ask? Well, the US scientists John Durban and Bob Pitman worked with the Falkland's own Jerome and Dion Poncet on the Golden Fleece to get close enough to the killer whales to attach a small, temporary, satellite transmitter fired from a crossbow. This work was done in conjunction with a BBC Natural History film team and you can watch these same whales hunting their seal prey in the recent series 'Frozen Planet'. If these scenes impress you, the killer whales at Sea Lion Island are featured in the BBC Natural History Unit's series 'Life'.

And why do Antarctic killer whales travel 5,000 km round trip to southern Brazil and back, only to return sometimes less than 42 days after departing?

Bob and John postulate that whales need periodically to moult their skin, and it would be pretty cold and energetically costly to spend the two weeks waiting for the old skin to fall off and for the new skin to form in freezing waters, so the whales take off to warmer waters for a few weeks. That seems a plausible explanation. Helen Otley

Mount Pleasant weather: a dry, windy and sunny August

TEMPERATURES for the month of August were exceptional with it being the warmest since Mount Pleasant opened in 1986. Rainfall was below average and the second lowest recorded. Sunshine was well above average and the second sunniest. It was also the second windiest August.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 8.0 Celsius compared with the long-term average for August of 5.6 Celsius. The highest temperature recorded was 13.8 Celsius on the 8th.

The lowest maximum was 4.8 Celsius recorded on the 5th.

The mean minimum temperature was 1.9 Celsius, compared with the long-term average of 0.5 Celsius.

The lowest minimum was -1.7 Celsius on the 16th. The highest minimum was 5.4 Celsius recorded on the 8th.

Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 16.2 mm. The long-term average for August is 40.3 mm. The wettest day was on the 13th with a total of 6.9 mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 13 days, and 1.0 mm or more fell on 3 days.

Sunshine

Sunshine was above average for August. There were 143.2 hours of sunshine, compared with the monthly average of 97.0 hours. The highest daily total was 9.4 hours on the 18th August.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog

There were four days of sleet or snow, no days of lying snow, two days of hail and six days of fog.

Wind/Gales

The monthly mean wind speed was 16.9 knots, which is above the average of 14.5 knots. The highest hourly mean speed of 38 knots occurred on the 11th and the highest gust of 54 knots was also recorded on the 11th.

Gales occurred on seven days, and there were 19 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

IF the winds are anything to go by then spring is very definitely here!

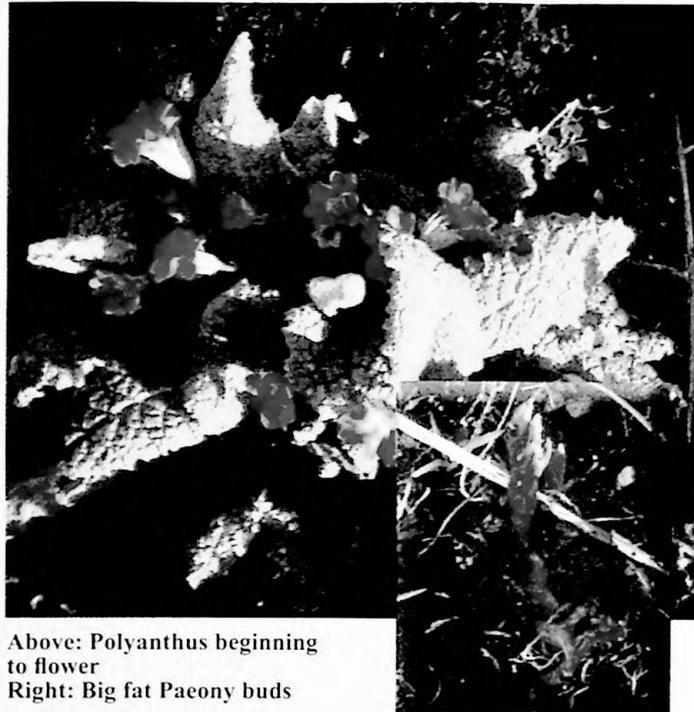

The sun hasn't really caught up yet, but the ground is drying up at last. The wind takes me back to my younger days when at this time one could smell camp fires. Ah, that wonderful smell of diddle-dee smoke and it also meant it was time for 'egging'. I was never fond of the eggs of logger ducks and wild geese, and in truth was never very good at finding the nests either, but the fun was in the search and the long walks over the Camp.

The earwigs made such a good job of snacking on our greens in the autumn that we have few cabbages, and so far no Savoy cabbages at all. I've just been out giving them a good feed of 6X to get them all started again, this applies to any over-wintered plants which will have used up all of their reserves and be a little tired by now.

In the tunnels I have been filling the lengths of guttering ready to plant our garden peas tomorrow. This year, as this guttering is becoming pretty old and rough, I've put a length of plastic sheeting two inches wide all along the bottom before the soil went in. It should help to pull and slide the plants out and into the ground later on and will just be left in the bottom of the pit at that time as there is still plenty of space for the roots to spread.

Tonight I'm soaking the peas: they will then be planted in the guttering some two inches apart and in two rows and kept in the tunnel until they've grown.

Speaking of peas (sweet peas this time) those planted in toilet roll cardboard inserts some time ago have grown into quite reasonable plants now. They have been pinched back and look quite sturdy and have about five stems each. They will start going out during the day now for the next few weeks, until they have hardened off enough to stay outside all night. The rooted rose cuttings are receiving the same treatment. All other plants and seedlings under cover must have as much ventilation as possible now, or the warmth and condensation will cause mildew and rot.

It is much too cold to plant seed outside as yet. I believe that years ago gardeners used to test soil temperature by sitting their bare bottoms on it, but I think the soil is probably warm enough to plant when weeds start to germinate.

Meanwhile, I will put plastic sheeting over the areas I want to plant to both warm the soil and, bring on the weeds to be cleared before the vegetable seeds go in.

Under cover, all seeds of lettuce, especially the cut-and-come again types like 'lollo rosso' radish, beetroot, white turnips and other saladings such as mustard and cress can go into the soil, while in pots or seed trays a start can be made on the brassicas for transplanting later.

I use small pots for this, filling them almost to the brim, firming lightly with the bottom of a similar pot, watering them with a fine rose and then popping a small amount of seed in each labelled pot.

Lettuces for transplanting outside later can also be grown in these, as can leeks and onions. To judge the depth the seed needs to be in is easy, the rule being to cover it by approximately the same depth as the size of the seed, and very small ones just sitting on top of the soil.

A plastic or glass cover of some sort will help keep the moisture in but as the seeds are inside anyway it is not essential. Job done, and all that is required is patience.

Most seeds will be up within a week, carrots can take up to three and sometimes more.

Anyone lucky enough to have heat and light could now start tomato, pepper and cucumber seeds I suppose. I prefer to wait a little longer. I won't bother putting in the early seed potatoes yet either. As a trial I put some in the ground in the tunnel last Autumn; they are not showing yet so it shows there really is no rush.

Years ago when I had my first garden, the few roses I had were from cuttings donated by friends. Having no idea what they were and as each was just known by its donors name I had no idea whether they were floribundas or hybrid-teas or anything else.

Reading gardening books in an effort to see how to prune them I just grew more and more confused. Believing 'if at first you can't succeed cheat', I grabbed a hedge trimmer and simply gave them a haircut in spring. It was most successful and I've continued to do it that way ever since, much, much easier and much less hassle too.

We've had two lovely days, even if it started to hail squall rather unexpectedly yesterday. A trailer load of weeds has left already and no doubt another one will quickly follow.

It's lovely to see the polyanthus reappearing and showing off their lovely spring flowers and it is also nice to see so much brown soil reappearing too. It won't stay that way long for chickweed and grass will quickly take over if allowed so I intend to try to fit in plants in areas which probably have bulbs or plants such as hostas, which arrive rather later.

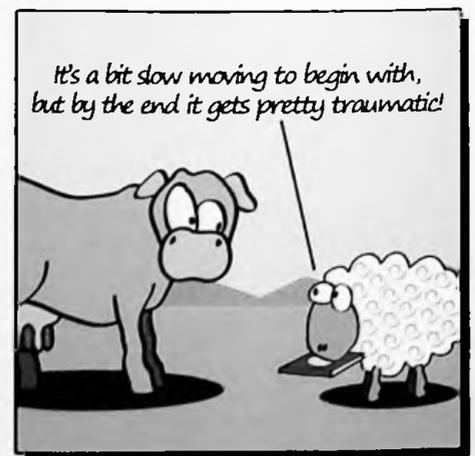

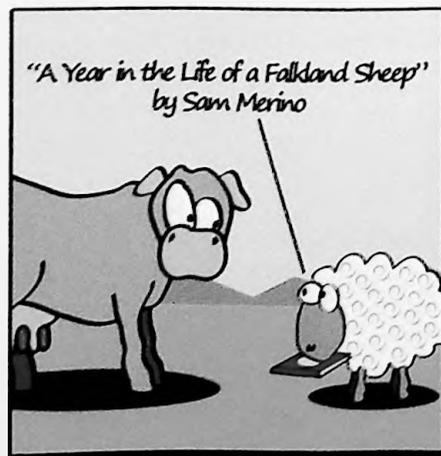

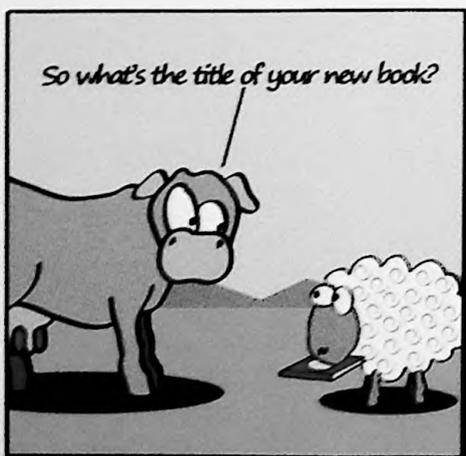

It won't keep the weeds out but maybe I won't see them that way.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 30 August 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

- More stability was seen this week with a slight drop but only by a small amount this week. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator dipped to AUS934 cents/kg clean just a small drop of a drop of 7 cents.
- A similar sale volume was offered from last week with a 88% clearance rate which helped stabilise the trend. There is still no great demand from China which is deflated the market. Anecdotal chat says that the Chinese manufacturers are running at very low stocks so potential buying interest could be immanent which will pull the price up slightly.
- Staff and guests welcomed The Countess of Wessex as she officially opened the new British Wool Marketing Board' offices on Canal Road, Bradford yesterday 24th July. Chairman, Malcolm Corbett was delighted to welcome the Countess of Wessex and provide a behind-the-scenes look at how wool is graded and selected for auction. "It was a tremendous day for all concerned and a great boost to raising the valuable role that wool plays not just in the local community but across the world."

Dancing daisies blossom on stage

FROM an appeal on Facebook from an individual seeking a ballet teacher for a little girl, a fledgling ballet company of 36 burst into life - as a result of the enthusiasm of Fiona Wallace-Nannig and dance teacher Sally Heathman.

Sally put together a nine week programme, said Fiona, which has kept pupils (ages ranging from 4 to 12) busy for at least one hour a week.

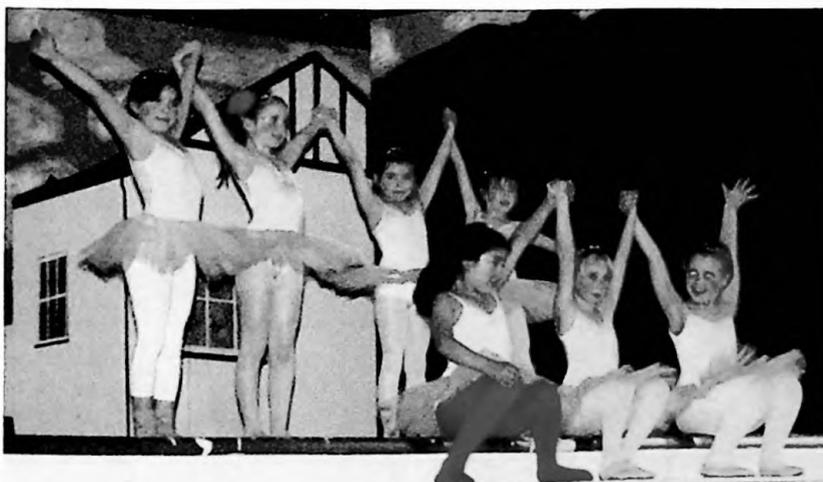

On Saturday at the Town Hall, the result of the company's efforts were displayed charmingly to family and friends and included dance recitals to ballet classics such as Giselle, the 'March' scene from Tchaikovsky's 'The Nutcracker' and the 'Cancan' scene from La Boutique Fantasque by Giochino Rossini.

All of the groups are named after Falklands' flowers including the Friday Buttercup Group, the Tuesday Ladyslipper Group and the Monday Orchid Group. Part 2 of Saturday's programme provided a certificate presentation for the students followed by a party. The company is supported by sponsors The West Store, The Print Shop, Kelper Stores, Wickham Heights Limited, Kandy Kabin the Chandlery, Fortuna and Mr and Mrs S Wallace. Thanks are also extended to the Heathman family, Estelle Jaffray and Janice Dent for baking.

Running Club Half Marathon 2012

It's time to join the Running Club

THE Annual General Meeting of the Stanley Running Club will take place in the Falkland Islands Defence Force training room (at the FIDF HQ) at 5pm on Wednesday September 12 and it is hoped that anyone interested in running, or athletics generally, will attend.

The main purpose of the meeting is to elect a new committee and to discuss athletics participation at the next Island Games.

At the moment the Running Club is the organisation used to represent other athletic disciplines with Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association.

Running Club Chair Peter Biggs said: "This is an informal arrangement and therefore it is planned to discuss the need for other athletics disciplines to have a more formal representation through a club or federation, and following from that to touch on the possibility of future expansion of the club to become a Falkland Islands Athletics Federation, or for the club to expedite the creation of such a body."

The club needs people to serve on the committee to raise the profile of the club and running generally, including organising events and providing a framework for the development of aspiring athletes towards effective competition at international events such as the Island Games.

The Running Club has long organised the annual and extremely well attended half marathon, and this year they hope to organise road races and cross country events.

If you are interested in joining the club and cannot make the meeting please call Pete Biggs on 55477.

Golf report

THIRTEEN golfers signed in for the September Medal sponsored by Decor Services.

The near ideal conditions saw David Beynon continue his good form and make it two wins in a row. David shot a solid round of 75 for a Nett 69 to secure the win. Tim Bonner edged Eugene Hurley and Tony McMullen out of second place on a count back. All three players carded nett 70s.

Ric Nye continues to lead the League Standings with David Beynon now in second place.

The next competition is the October Medal and is the start of the weekly schedule of competitions.

Golf memberships are available and start from as little as £60 for the season which lasts through until April.

FALKLAND ISLANDS GOVERNMENT PUBLIC NOTICE

Review of Members' of the Legislative Assembly Pay
 Executive Council has agreed that a review of Members' pay should be completed by an independent review panel in time for recommendations to be considered before the term of the current Assembly ends (to apply in the new Assembly from November 2013).
 The panel will be appointed by the Governor from expressions of interest received. The panel will consist of three people (and will not include members of the civil service or serving MLAs), and will conduct the review as it sees fit, inviting views from the public and interested parties.
 In addition to the review of pay, the panel will be asked to determine whether there are any financial hindrances to standing for election, suggest options to maximise the pool of potential candidates for election and review the current list of politically restricted posts.
 The Chief Executive of the Falkland Islands Government will act as Clerk to the Panel and can discuss the role in more detail with those interested.
 Written expressions of interest containing a brief statement of relevant experience should be sent marked "confidential" to the Chief Executive, Secretariat, Stanley by Friday 28 September 2012.

Court will protect the public

"THIS court will protect their rights if no one else in this jurisdiction will," declared Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley, on Wednesday as he argued with the Prosecution as to whether a defendant should face charges of deception, when it was his belief that none had been operative. "I for one am not going to sit by any longer and allow the public to suffer the consequences of a law that is ambiguous, confused and inaccessible," he said.

Kaylee Heen Simone Smith (20) originally faced seven charges of deception pertaining to obtaining goods from the Falkland Islands Company's (FIC) West Store using another person's account and also of forging a bank transfer form.

Of the bank forgery, Mr Gumsley said there was no doubt the allegation was deception.

However although Prosecutor Alison Inglis claimed all the charges were deception because Miss Smith had, "held herself out as having authority," to use the accounts, Mr Gumsley was not convinced this was the case. Miss Smith had not implied or tried to convince the West Store customer services assistants she was anyone other than herself, he said, adding that the system at the tills was, "slap happy," and not necessarily complied with.

Mr Gumsley had advised the Prosecution to review their evidence on two separate occasions during previous hearings of the case and on August 29, said: "If we are going to have a court case, let's have a proper court case for a change."

At Wednesday's hearing the Prosecution proceeded with the same charges and evidence and Mr Gumsley stood down to give the Prosecution and Defence lawyers time to reconsider the charges to be put to Miss Smith.

He said he was concerned about people being faced with allegations which, because of the set-up of the legal system they cannot understand.

Port Howard school reopens as Camp pupil numbers grow

DESPITE news that rural population numbers have continued to decline over the years, the number of children in the Camp has actually gone up, and as a result a new school at Port Howard Farm opened this week.

A delighted Infant Junior School and Camp Education head teacher Tom Hill confirmed there were now 31 children in the Camp: "Last year there was under 20, this is the highest for many years and does show the government policy on the development of Camp is working."

Mr Hill said Education Department staff became aware that a school at Port Howard would be required, "half way through last year."

The policy is that a school will be provided at farm settlements where there are more than three children of school age. If there are fewer numbers then children will receive radio lessons and visits from a travelling teacher.

Mr Hill explained that prior to the good news, the two children of Christopher and Beccy Lee were the only ones of school age (and nearing school age) on the farm. However, very recently one more child, eight year old Temis, arrived to join the little group when his mother Crystal and her husband Fernando moved to Port Howard. Temis' little brother will also soon be school age as will another child on the farm.

As a result of some juggling of teachers, rather than receiving education from a teacher for two weeks out of every six, the children will receive education for almost four out of every six. By September of next year the school will be open fulltime Mr Hill told Penguin News.

Camp Teacher Rainee Ambrose will provide some of the teaching and the Stanley School will send a different member of staff each time the school opens. The first to travel to Port Howard will be Mrs Edwards said Mr Hill.

The renovation of an old house

Rainee and her pupils at Port Howard and the newly renovated Port Howard School into a small modern school and a comfortable flat for the teacher was the work of Myles and Christopher Lee, along with members of the Port Howard gang said Beccy: "The house had been empty and derelict for years so it took quite a few man hours. Critta got the ball rolling and then Myles did a lot of work with the gang."

The children are also able to play on the sheltered lawn at the back of Port Howard Lodge.

Mr Hill said, "it was a bit of a problem getting everything organised but it's one of those nice problems that you don't mind having."

Education Committee Board Member Karen Lee said: "I am sure I can speak on behalf of other members of the Board when I say that we are delighted to have another school open in the Camp. A lot of farmers devote a lot of effort and resources into allocating buildings for the purpose of schools and we are very grateful for this. I have heard from a member of the Camp Education staff that they are delighted with the renovation works, and obviously this is a step forward for the children of current employees of Port Howard as well as IJS and Camp Education. We look forward to having sufficient children and/or resources in the Camp so that it can open full time."

Over the past year the Hill Cove and North Arm Schools have been renovated and the Fox Bay school will be getting a new playground.

According to recent census results the population of Camp has decreased by 3.3 per cent since 2006 to stand at 351 persons. The most populated settlements in Camp are Goose Green (40); Port Howard (22); Fox Bay (22); North Arm (20) and Hill Cove (16).

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

FOR the timorous gang who have applied such dedication in support of trickle immigration over the past years, the 2012 census results might have come as a kick in the gut.

All of the time we've been promoting ourselves abroad with self-applauding superlatives (Dynamic Vibrant Enterprising) our population number has stagnated, immigration has slowed, FIG is still the largest employer in the Islands and apparently, "there is no spare capacity within the labour market to accommodate any additional employment opportunities that may arise in the future."

And here we are on the cusp of an economic explosion – nice going

Not that we required a census to tell us our immigration policy was at best discouraging; most of us have been saying that for years. And, of course, why else would so many of our population have second jobs in a relatively new industry - tourism - and without whom the enterprise would have virtually ground to a halt.

Thankfully the immigration review (see page 7) aims to take the population overstretch into account, but shouldn't preparation have begun an age ago? It's not like the Islands' private sector hasn't been begging for it for years?

And on the subject of preparation, hopefully those statistics showing a trend towards an ageing population will also generate action. While hospital staff do their very best to care for those unable to live in sheltered accommodation, even they would agree the hospital environment is inappropriate for those elderly who simply need additional care as opposed to being ill. Added to that, bearing in mind census statistics show most retirees are living on much less than £15,000 a year I can't help feeling they're receiving something of a raw deal.

Lastly (although I could have happily muttered on about census results all night) it was gratifying in terms of how we appear to be developing our singularity as a people that 59 per cent identified themselves under national identity as 'Falkland Islander'.

While there is no doubt the majority would also see themselves as 'British Falkland Islanders', it did leave me curious whether a small but significant mind-shift towards 'some version of independence' might show in the 2013 Referendum if such an option was included; which it is likely to be and should be.

Conditional discharge for 'pathetic' behaviour

SAMANTHA Laura McCormick (20) admitted two driving offences and one of common assault in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

The charges of driving without due care and attention and without a seat belt related to an incident on July 15, when Miss McCormick crashed into a parked Shogun on H Jones Road while driving her Ford Fiesta.

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis told the court that Miss McCormick had been travelling east along H Jones road a safe distance behind another vehicle which had turned right onto Shackleton Drive. Miss McCormick had changed down to first gear and then once the vehicle had turned, back up into second to accelerate and collided with a parked Shogun. The impact caused the Shogun to mount the kerb. Mrs Inglis confirmed no measurements for speed had been taken.

Little damage was sustained by the Shogun, however Miss McCormick's car was irreparable. Viewing photographs of the vehicles, Mr Gumsley suggested that if such damage could be the result of a 10 mph crash, "no Ford should be on the road."

Defence Counsel Mark Neves said it was more the power of acceleration on impact than the speed, which had been verified by the driver in front.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he accepted it had been a momentary lapse of concentration, the Shogun was filthy dirty and difficult to see in an area where there was no street lighting, adding that she should have been paying better attention. Miss McCormick was fined £150 for the offence plus £50 for driving without a seat belt.

Addressing the common assault charge which took place at the Trough on June 30, Mrs Inglis said that Miss McCormick, encouraged by her friends had approached the victim and called her a whore. In Police statement, she admitted this saying it was because the other girl was "out with a squaddy." Statements from the victim and defendant differed at this point with Miss McCormick claiming she had been accused of being an unfit mother, while the victim said after a brief exchange of words which she thought had been in a joking manner, she had attempted to leave the Trough. Miss McCormick had shoved her against the wall and then grabbed her by the hair and hit her.

Mr Neves asserted that Miss McCormick tried to learn from her mistakes, and on this particular night had learned that she could not drink shots. She had been to a birthday party which started quite early, drank shots and acted in a juvenile manner, he said, adding that she admitted she should have walked away.

Miss McCormick had contacted the victim the following day and apologised for her actions.

Mr Gumsley referred to the incident as, "downright pathetic," and sentenced Miss McCormick to a 12 month conditional discharge as a chance to prove her self.

"Behave like a child if you fancy it, or take care of your child if you prefer," he said.

Driving ban removed DARREN Clive Bagley (40) of River View farm had a driving ban lifted on Wednesday, to take effect on October 14.

Mr Bagley was banned from driving on February 14, after he was stopped by Police and provided a breathalyser reading of 42 mg of alcohol per 100 ml of breath. The legal limit is 35 mg.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he had taken into account that the original case had been exceptional in many ways, that Mr Bagley who has been farming in the Falklands for 18 years was hard working and had no previous convictions.

He said the hardship the Bagley family had endured since the driving ban was put in place was a direct result of Mr Bagley's choice to get in the vehicle when over the limit. Removing the disqualification was an exceptional course, he added.

Akademik Ioffe in Antarctica

OneOcean Antarctic cruise up for auction at charity ball

THE 10th Conservation Ball is reverting to the venue of the Town Hall this year under the organisational skills of Sarah Clement and her staff at Sealed PR.

While all the much looked forward to components such as having an excuse to get dressed to the nines, the auction of a cruise, good food, music and company are still in place, the structure of the evening has been slightly changed.

The auction of the cruise and some rather splendid artwork will get underway at 8pm and will last a maximum of one hour, Mrs Clement told Penguin News.

Food will be served at the tables as the auction takes place and during this time the bar will be closed to conform to licensing laws and will reopen at 9pm when local band the Pushers will take to the stage for an hour, before the remainder of the Travel Raffle will be announced.

The top prize in the raffle is a £1,200 travel voucher from Seaview Logistics Ltd and this draw will also be broadcast live on Falklands Radio.

Because everything is happening a little bit earlier than previous years, Mrs Clement has asked that those attending the annual function sponsored by Consolidated Fisheries Ltd, arrive between 7 – 7.30pm.

"This gives everyone time to get settled and enjoy a glass of bubbly, courtesy of the Falkland Islands Company Ltd, before the evening's entertainment gets underway," she said.

With the top auction item of a cruise for two on the Akademik Ioffe valued at $13,790 per person, Mrs Clement has high hopes that some lively bidding will take place and a price in the region of £6,000 be reached.

Quark Expeditions has provided the cruise for the past eight years but were unable to continue their generous donation this year. For a time it seemed like the Ball might take place without this highlight, said Mrs Clement.

But with the support and persistence of Sullivan Travel staff and almost at the eleventh hour, Mrs Clement received confirmation from owner of OneOcean Expeditions Andrew Prossin, that he would offer a twin cabin for the November 2012 Frank Wild Commemorative expedition to Antarctica. In addition he said that if the successful bidder could not make the November 20 departure date, the cabin could be held until the next year. "I was astonished by Andrew's generosity," said Mrs Clement, adding that the generosity and unfailing support of the entire community year after year, never failed to amaze.

Jetty works

WORKS on the Public Jetty got underway this week by Morrison (Falklands) Ltd, with the placement of mass fill and rock armouring on the first section, which will extend over the same length as the existing masonry section.

DPW Manfred Keeleyside said it was planned this phase would be completed prior to the arrival of the first major cruise vessel of the season, to allow the fill to settle and stabilise before the next phase of work planned for April 2013 after the last cruise vessel.

This next phase of work will be the placement of tubular steel piles and steelwork, followed progressively by a pre-cast deck structure over the piled section, and finally an in-situ concrete deck on the mass fill section.

The pre-cast concrete deck sections will be made locally over the coming months, the steel piles and components will be fabricated in UK to facilitate rapid on site construction.

The new section of jetty fits in with the model envisaged in the Waterfront Development master plan and should not look markedly dissimilar in style from the existing structure, said Mr keeleyside.

Court will protect the public

"The law was not accessible to the people, indeed it was not even accessible to the lawyers who practised here. It was not properly accessible to anybody," Mr Gumsley informed the court. He added that even when it was accessed, "half the time the lawyers don't understand what applies."

Defence lawyer Mark Neves agreed it was an accurate summing up of the position.

Following a short recess the Prosecution withdrew five of the charges and Miss Smith entered a plea of guilty to attempting to obtain property, namely goods to the sum of £74.99 belonging to the FIC; debiting purchases to the FIC account of Mrs Olive Smith to the sum of £65.73 and by deception forging a bank transfer form to the sum of £300.

Miss Smith, who was already on a probation order for similar offences had been arrested on Saturday night for a breach of her conditional bail which included a curfew, said in Police interview she knew it was wrong when she used Mrs Olive Smith's account number and had intended to pay it back. She volunteered the information she had forged a Standard Chartered Bank transfer form.

Mr Gumsley described Miss Smith's actions as "utterly mean and despicable," having robbed from her own family, after Mrs Smith had fed her and given her money to help her out.

Deferring sentence for three months, he ordered Miss Smith to comply with all probation orders and not reoffend. If she failed on either count she would go to jail, he said.

"You can spend the rest of your life feeling sorry for yourself, or kick against it and make a change," he said, adding: "We'll meet again in three months time and I hope no sooner, or you know what will happen."

Kaylee Smith

Good report for Training Centre

THE Falkland Islands Training Centre has received a good report following a visit by the Orion Business School, Director of Health and Education David Jenkins told the Education Committee.

The Business School Representative internally verified the CMI Diploma in First Line Management course, he explained.

Comments extracted from the report include: "There is evidence that candidates' knowledge and understanding of management and the role of managers has been increased..." and, "candidates recognised the important contribution the qualification will play in the context of their own personal career development and their organisation's succession planning."

Mr Jenkins also noted that the Vocational Board had approved three new apprenticeships, all of which were in the private sector. These included mechanic, carpenter and hospitality. Also, three of this year's school leavers are about to join the scheme.

South Georgia Fishing news

ONLY one longliner remained fishing in South Georgia waters at the end of the season on August 31. Four longliners were fishing at the start of August, but just one remained to complete its allotted fish quota. The others completed their TAC at various times through the month then sailed for the Falklands for catch verification.

Three krill trawlers operated to the north and east of the Island at the beginning of the month. A fourth trawler, new to the fishery, was inspected and licensed on August 15. All four trawlers were still fishing at the end of the month and catches were good.

A reefer vessel arrived on the Dartmouth Point anchorage in Cumberland Bay on August 20 and transhipped krill from, and refuelled, three of the trawlers during the week that followed before sailing. Another reefer arrived in port on August 30 and will remain for around a month.

New Director of Education?

THE Current Director of Education will leave the post in January 2013. It was confirmed at the Education Board Committee Meeting yesterday that interviewing for this post took place in August. An offer was made and the Director of Education is waiting to hear whether the applicant has agreed to join the Department.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

SINCE there appears to be a gross misunderstanding of the cost of the referendum I thought I should spell it out in more detail. In order to ensure that everyone gets their say we agreed to fund extra settlement visits with the ballot boxes. This only costs a little more than recent by-elections. The largest potential expense will be travel and accommodation costs for independent observers for which we have allowed up to £50,000. Perhaps we have failed to explain adequately why we think it important for the credibility of any result of the referendum that we welcome independent observers. We want to be able to demonstrate to the world that the conduct of the referendum has been entirely free and fair.

This week meetings include routine update meetings for education, minerals and health, also Housing and Education Board meetings. Finally I'm stand in for the Hon Gavin Short at a meeting of the Police Committee. The Housing meeting is the first for six months and has been rescheduled at least twice because of absences of the chair and other members. There is a great deal of catching up to do, the housing list never shrinks in spite of the additional FIG houses we are building each year and the number of building plots being made available, at least some of which should free up FIG houses. I am also concerned at the level of rent arrears. Given that those with the lowest incomes qualify for sizeable rebates it is difficult to understand how thousands of pounds of arrears are accumulated. While there are undoubtedly many deserving cases there also seem to be a number who are happy to allow the poor taxpayer to fund their lifestyle choices.

Preliminary census information will give planners something to work with while satisfying the curiosity of those who love facts and figures. I look forward to more detailed analysis when staffing permits. For me the most disturbing statistic is the number of young smokers, which, given the fact that under eighteens are not permitted to legally purchase tobacco products, indicates a serious problem.

Static population since 2006 and further decline in Camp

THERE has been a decrease of four percent in the Falklands population since 2006 according to the results of the April 15, census.

The normal resident population of the Falkland Islands on census day was 2,841 and the decline is entirely attributable to the decrease in the number of civilian contractors at Mount Pleasant Airfield (MPA) according to accompanying notes. As non-residents, military personnel are not included in the census.

Excluding contractors at MPA, the true population figure of the Falkland Islands is 2,563; indicating that the population has remained static since 2006.

Stanley is now home to 2,121 people, 75 per cent of the population, an increase of less than one per cent since 2006. The population in Camp has declined by 3.3 per cent to 351 people.

The census shows that 59 per cent of residents consider their national identity to be 'Falkland Islander', 29 per cent consider themselves British; 9.8 per cent St Helenian, and 5.4 per cent Chilean.

Children aged 0-15 numbered 465 or 16.5 per cent of the overall population of the Islands – a similar number to that reported in the 2006 Census. Elderly persons (defined to be those aged 65 and over) numbered 301 or 10.7 per cent of the population. Comparison with the previous Census confirms that the trend is towards an aging population with the elderly population having increased by almost 14 per cent since 2006.

Excluding persons living in communal accommodation, the Census recorded a total of 1,269 households in the Falkland Islands. The vast majority of houses are detached (73 per cent). A total of 98 households (7.9 per cent) reported that they live in a flat, and 48 (3.9 per cent) live permanently in a mobile home. The Census shows that there is a very high level of home ownership in Stanley (62 per cent) and Camp (70 per cent).

Other statistics are: The unemployment rate is one per cent.

Almost 20 per cent of persons in employment have more than one job.

The sex ratio in the Islands is a very balanced 101 males per 100 females

Almost all accommodation has central heating throughout (93 per cent)

Kerosene is the main source of fuel used for heating in the Islands – with 79 per cent of all households using this fuel for heating. This figure rises to almost 90 per cent in Stanley

Electricity is the main fuel used for cooking in Stanley (53%), with a further 39 per cent of households reporting gas as the main source of cooking. This contrasts with Camp where gas is the main source of fuel for cooking in 77 per cent of households.

95 per cent of households indicated that their accommodation was suitable for the basic needs of the households

Jamie Fotheringham, Head of Policy said: "The statistics collected through the Census are vitally important in understanding peoples needs and in establishing what services need to be provided for people, from education, health, community care, housing and many more.

"We now have a comprehensive and up-to-date set of data to better inform such planning at these exciting times for the Islands. I am particularly pleased with the success of the eCensus and would like to thank all of those involved."

Facts about FIG housing

THE Falkland Islands Government Housing Section currently holds 228 properties (with the loss of Stanley Cottage North) with a further four under construction and another eight new builds planned for this financial year, bringing the total to 240.

Of the FIG properties held 20 are bedsits, 61 one bed, 106 two bed, 34 three bed, 16 four bed and three five bed.

The housing is allocated to two distinct pools, the contract and local pools.

87 properties are allocated to the contract pool while the remaining 153 are allocated to the local pool (including 10 of the 12 new builds).

Around 60 per cent of housing is taken up by local persons and 40 per cent by contract workers.

At a meeting of the Housing Committee this week Housing Officer Anton Livermore confirmed there were now 43 people on the Housing List (up by 8 persons since March) and 20 on the Transfer List.

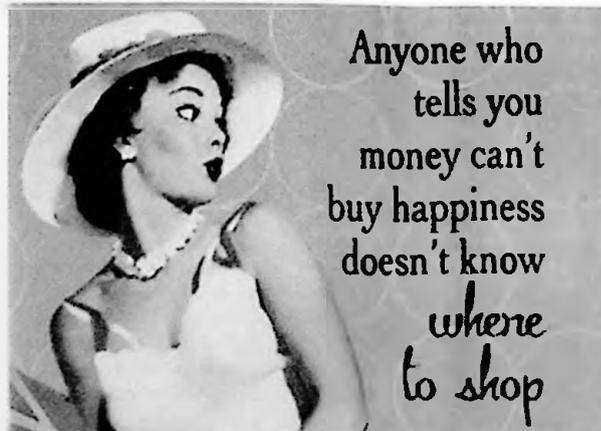

A paper addressing Future Housing Considerations was withdrawn from this week's meeting, however another meeting will convene on October 17 for the purpose of examining the paper.

Mummy-making mayhem at Stanley Kids Zone quiz night

Picture Mandy Ford

Andrew commentates on the spaghetti bridge building

TWENTY teams signed up for the annual Stanley Kids Zone (SKZ) Charity Quiz on Saturday night.

Always a great night out this one was no different with the games and theme bringing out the very best (and the very worst) in the quiz goers.

Normal question and answer rounds were treated with slight rivalry, the spaghetti bridge building brought out unusual levels of competitiveness.

The mummy making and subsequent racing, however generated alternative personalities in people that I did not know existed. Of course at the expense of someone else's dignity there was always a lot of laughter and the CHC team ensured that much hilarity ensued.

The eventual winners were 'Sorry I haven't got a clue' who very kindly donated their £200 prize back to the charity. All teams enjoyed a sumptuous supper supplied by Shorty's Diner and the Malvina House Hotel; chocolate brownies and ice cream being a favourite brain food.

A customary raffle was also held on the night with a lovely array of prizes provided by local companies who will all receive letters of thanks from the SKZ customers.

All of this was of course accompanied by a bar with table service and wine from the Seafish Chandlery to wash down the supper. The gangster themed night was impressively organised by the SKZ Manager Sylvia Watt and her staff.

Once again from the children staff and manager of SKZ thank you for your continued support over the years. It is very much appreciated.

Team Tranquil support continues

FALKLANDS watercolour artist Richard Cockwell took up the challenge for Team Tranquil on the weekend offering a watercolour class to the residents of West Falklands.

Richard said: "Due to a number of problems people who might have wanted to attend were not able to.

"This resulted in my only having one person in the morning and three children in the afternoon. They all did very well and I believe enjoyed the experience. What I try to teach is how watercolour works and how to mix colours that do not become muddy and dull so that they can paint pictures that they are proud of."

He added: "I have to say that I find it very rewarding seeing how people develop skills and create their own style. It was particularly interesting seeing how children respond. I look forward to holding another workshop next year with hopefully more attendees."

In August Team Tranquil sponsored a cooking workshop run by Government House cook Anita Browning at the Falkland Islands Community school.

The workshop was attended by 10 people of all ages and abilities and was the brainchild of Government House employee Wendy Luxton.

Both events were sponsored by Team Tranquil which works in aid of promoting good mental health.

The organisation also provides a direct line to Samaritans UK on Crime is going down

REPORTING to the Police Committee on Thursday Chief Police Officer Barry Marsden said the decrease of incidents reported continued in its downward trend, (-21) for the period April 1, to June 30.

The month of June with 86 incidents reported, was the highest number of reports to the police for that particular month since June 2008, when there were 133.

The number of arrests for the period was down by over 100 per cent, but this must be viewed against the figure for June 2011, which at 8, represents that month's highest figure in recent years.

Superintendent Marsden said the quarter was unremarkable in the volume of offences undertaken, indeed April and May mirrored the same numbers as 2011. "Both Theft and Common Assault saw a drop, (-1), and pleasingly driving over the prescribed limit saw a drop from five cases in 2011 to one in this quarter."

There was however an increase in racially aggravated offences which totalled three from a figure of zero in 2011, he added.

Of the 23 crimes reported, 10 have been closed, four undetected and two crimes classified as no crime, leaving seven still under investigation.

Nicola Granger becomes Financial Secretary

THE Falkland Islands Government announced on Tuesday the appointment of Nicola Granger to the post of Financial Secretary for the Falkland Islands Government.

Acting Chief Executive Simon Fletcher said: "I am delighted to announce the appointment of Nicola Granger as Financial Secretary. Nicola has a wealth of experience with the Falkland Islands Government, and has been acting Financial Secretary since February. I have no doubt that Nicola is the right person to lead the Treasury through the next few years, which promise to be very exciting for the Falklands Islands."

On her appointment, Nicola Granger said:

"I'm excited by this opportunity to build on my work of the last five years and to lead the Treasury through what is going to be a challenging but critical time for FIG's finances.

Nicola Granger

"I'm very fortunate to have a strong and dedicated team in the Treasury and I look forward to working further with them over the coming years."

CMI Level 3 Diploma in First Line Management

The Training Centre would like to offer the CMI Level 3 Diploma in First Line Management to private sector companies. The qualification is designed for supervisors and first line managers, to support development of their skills in maintaining and developing the effectiveness and efficiency of the operations for which they are responsible by motivating and developing the people who work in the team, fostering effective communications and developing a sense of corporate identity. The course lasts for approximately ten months starting in January 2013 and comprises seven units as follows:

Personal Development as a First Line Manager

- Resource Planning
 - Meeting Stakeholder Needs
 - Managing and Communicating Information
 - Developing Individuals and Teams
 - Recruitment and Selection
- Improving Team Performance

Course participants are required to attend a two day tutorial once a month and to submit written assignments for each unit. Some units also involve assessment of role play exercises and presentations.

Cost: £1,800 per person. Closing 28th September 2012.

Labour market drives immigration review

THE future needs of the Falklands Islands labour market is the driving force behind a decision to review the Falkland Islands immigration system, confirmed Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham this week.

The review will establish whether it can be improved, "to better meet the economic development needs of the Islands," he said.

Asked by Penguin News what it was about the current system the government wished to change, Mr Fotheringham explained: "The Economic Development Strategy (EDS) identifies the immigration system as being one of the key constraints to economic growth in the Islands.

"The key issue is whether the current system is suitable for meeting future labour market and skills needs; at present there is very little spare capacity in the labour market but yet there are ambitious plans for developments in oil, tourism and for increased jobs in Camp."

He said all of those would require additional people to fill the new jobs that would be created, adding: "Undoubtedly there will be opportunities for local people to take advantage of these new opportunities but there is insufficient spare capacity in the labour market (with unemployment at less than one per cent) to meet all of these needs going forward."

Because of this there is a requirement for more people to fill these roles (and to fill the roles left behind by existing local people who move on to take up new opportunities, for example, oil

and tourism

Key issues for the review will include examining the current system and establishing how effective it will be in meeting those needs. The review will also aim to identify, "where changes might be desirable to facilitate the increased level of immigration needed to achieve the Islands' economic development goals."

Along with that the review involves consultation with all sectors of the community to establish how much and what sort of immigration they require in the Islands: "For instance, is there a desire for more permanent immigration and to avoid more 'contractorisation' of the Islands? Is it desirable to encourage people to become long-term residents and avoid the short-term 'churn' of people that the current system encourages?"

On the subject of what 'type' of expert would be required to undertake the review, Mr Fotheringham said: "The expertise we will be seeking will be of immigration systems and processes that will best serve the Falkland Islands in meeting the EDS objectives."

The person will need to bring knowledge and experience of immigration systems and best practice from around the world, not just the UK.

He or she will work under the day-to-day management of the Head of Policy who will provide the necessary direction in terms of the immigration requirements of the EDS.

Mr Fotheringham said: "Should the work result in recommendations for changes to the system, these will be subject to public consultation and will be presented to Executive Council (ExCo) for consideration. Any final decisions as to whether to adopt any recommendations will rest solely with ExCo."

Becoming a Falklands resident became slightly easier in the middle of last year when ExCo made a small change to the Immigration 'points system'. At the time MLA Gavin Short pointed out that the original points system that had been introduced had led to it being almost impossible for most "ordinary" people to achieve.

That led to an immigration review group being set up to look at the PRP points system and other related matters.

MLA travels

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly Gavin Short and Sharon Halford are currently attending the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Plenary and Small Countries Conference in Sri Lanka. This included MLA Halford chairing the second Plenary Session on The Impact of the Informal Economy on Economic Diversification in Small States. MLA Short will then move to the European Union OCTA in Greenland which concludes on October 17.

In September MLA Jan Cheek will attend the party conferences in UK accompanied by MLA Jan Hansen. From September 22 until October 17 MLA Mike Summers will attend the Commonwealth Games Federation Conference and undertake other government business.

From November 27 until December 9 MLA Cheek and MLA Halford will travel to the UK for the Joint Ministerial Council.

MLA Dick Sawle and MLA Barry Elshy most recently attended the ParlAmericas Conference in Panama.

Brother's appeal

MARK McLaughlin, brother of Corporal Stewart McLaughlin, killed on Mount Longdon by artillery fire in 1982, is seeking accommodation so that he can visit the Falklands in early December.

He told Penguin News: "My brother was the bravest of the brave and by sheer coincidence, if I am able to fly on December 9, two of my brothers will also be there in Stanley. This would be the first time this has happened. We are or were eight brothers, no sisters. If you help in any way it would be greatly appreciated." Illustrious due to retire BRITISH aircraft carrier HMS Illustrious is due to retire in 2014 and the MoD are seeking proposals from organisations interested in preserving the warship.

HMS Invincible, HMS Illustrious and HMS Ark Royal came into service in the early 1980s and have spent the last 30 years protecting the UK's interests across the world.

The last of the ships to be decommissioned, HMS Illustrious played a key role in the Falkland Islands, Iraq and Bosnia. Minister for Defence Equipment, Support and Technology Philip Dunne said:

"It is important that we preserve the legacy of the Royal Navy's Invincible Class aircraft carriers. When the last of these - HMS Illustrious - retires from the Royal Navy, we would like to see her preserved as a legacy to the work she, Invincible and Ark Royal have done to protect the UK over three decades.

"We would be keen to seek innovative proposals from a range of organisations, including private sector companies, charities and trusts.

As the out of service date for HMS Illustrious approaches, the MoD will look to industry to provide viable proposals to keep her available for future private use in a different capacity while still offering taxpayers good value for money.

Heartfelt thanks from Butler family

LANI, Laurie, Susie, Margaret and Sheila wish to offer sincere thanks to the too many to name kind people who have gave their support during our recent sad bereavement.

A sea of floral tributes, hundreds of cards, emails, phone calls and messages from across the Globe, from St Helena, New Zealand, Spain, USA and ships in the Southern Oceans all paying their respects to Jonathan and their condolences to us.

Perhaps now is the time to also thank the RAF Medical Team who brought our son/brother home; you guys were awesome and showed real compassion, and to Colin Patterson-Smith for his assistance in making this happen.

To the brilliant team at KEMH in particular Janice Dent and Dr Edwards and to Kathleen and Neil who granted Jonathan his last wish.

Again, thank you all
The Butler family

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800... Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 6 September 2012
 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

Continued stability this week with a only a slight drop. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market Indicator dipped to AUS927 cents/kg clean another drop of 7 cents. A moderate sale of nearly 37,000 just over two days this week saw a 90% sale rate. Wool continues to be challenged by cotton. Cotton has a huge world surplus at present which is decreasing the price further and increasing the gap between wool and cotton. In times of economic uncertainty this scenario is not welcome in the wool market. However the activities of wool week around the world this spring, will help boost its profile and hopefully premium.

Craft fair 2012

"AFTER several years of declining entry numbers it was encouraging to see 140 more entries this year than last," said one of the Craft Fair organisers Natalie Smith

The fair took place on September 8-9 at the Falkland Islands Community School.

Mrs Smith said, "The standard was as high as ever and displayed some of the amazing talent we have here in the Islands.

"It is not too early to start preparing your entries for next year's show which will as usual be in early September. For more information and a wonderful collection of photos from over the years (including this year) check out our Facebook page - just search for Falkland Craft Fair."

She asked that on behalf of the Falkland Craft Fair, "I would like to thank our sponsors, the judges and those who kindly helped to display the entries and clean up afterwards. Our thanks to Louise Taylor for the announcing, and to Nikki Buxton for presenting the prizes; thanks also to everyone who came to view the show and bought raffle tickets.

"We rely on the proceeds from admission fees and the raffle to cover the children's prizes and other running costs.

FI Cricketers to tour Caribbean

THE Falkland Islands Cricket Team is heading to warmer climes in November to tour Belize, Barbados and Jamaica while spreading the Falklands message and visiting local charities.

The team will play two matches in each country with Andy Brownlee captaining in Belize, Craig Paice in Barbados and arguably drawing the short straw, Ian Betts in Jamaica where the opposition is expected to include some former international West Indies players.

"Lots of protective gear will definitely be the order of the day – some of those West Indians come out of the womb fast bowling," said Tour Manager Steve Fowmes.

Departing the Islands on November 24, the first fixture is on November 27 against the Belize National Under 19 XI with the Senior XI the following day.

After transferring to Barbados the next matches are against local teams before coming up against the Clarendon Masters and finally the Jamaica Invitational Masters on December 5.

While the event is predominantly about cricket, Andy Brownlee added that it was also a good opportunity to use the tour in an ambassadorial manner "We can get the message out there first hand and do a good job within the friendly forum of cricket," he told Penguin News.

They also plan to visit charities which will hopefully benefit from funds the team are in the process of raising.

In Belize a visit to a Liberty Children's Home which cares for abused, neglected and abandoned children many of whom suffer with HIV is on the cards, while in Barbados Sport for life which provides sport, education and healthy lifestyle training to disadvantaged children who are failing to reach their potential at school and in society will be visited. In Jamaica the The Courtney Walsh Foundation which provides opportunities for youths and meaningful changes in their lives through cricket, will be the recipient of funds raised in the Falklands.

"These visits will be particularly good for the younger members of our team to witness how the less fortunate live," said Mr Brownlee.

They aim to take £1,000 to each charity and to raise this the cricketers are taking up the physical challenge to swim, cycle, run and row the distance from the Falklands to the Caribbean. The accumulative challenge gets underway soon and they hope to complete before November 24. Sponsor forms for individual squad members will soon be available.

The team members have personally funded a third of the tours cost with the remainder by local supporters. Fortuna Ltd has paid for the accommodation for the under 18s with the Governor's charitable fund and Stanley Services also making contributions.

The team: Martyn Collins, David Hewitt, Jamie Punter, James Bates, Alex Pearce, Ian France, Kalon Jaffray, Daelyn Peck, David Pickup, Mike Summers and Toby Poole will join the three team captains and manager on the tour.

Falklands' Brazil bound badminton team

THREE Members of the Stanley Badminton Club are South America bound for the Brazilian International Cup, scheduled to arrive in Sao Paulo on September 23.

Mike Brownlee, Doug Clark and Laura Minto will join their coach, British Commonwealth Gold Medallist Rebecca Pantanay, in Cheltenham, UK the week before for further training and then travel on to Brazil. Rebecca will also play for the Falklands team in the mixed and womens' doubles games.

Laura told Penguin News: "We know it's going to be a very high standard but at the moment we're not sure what to expect."

She said: "I'm a little bit nervous but I'm looking forward to it, it'll be a good experience and I can only do my best."

Laura also competed in the Island Games in 2009 and the Commonwealth Youth Games in 2010 and 2011.

Doug described the competition as a "toe in the water," as the club is considering attending the Canadian Panam competition in 2014.

He added: "It's also about promoting the Falklands. We are taking DVDs, pamphlets and pins to give away."

They also have a press conference scheduled for early in the week and Mike said: "We're happy to answer political questions if they come up but don't want to get into too much depth; we'll be honest but diplomatic."

Richard Short will accompany the team as Manager and also deal with Public Relations.

Mike, Laura and Doug head for Brazilian International Cup

Students awarded for preserving Falklands history

PEOPLE, buildings, industries and moments in Falklands' history, often never before recorded, continue to be captured by Islands' youngsters in projects submitted to the Jane and Alastair Cameron History Competition.

The invaluable contribution of Year 6 class (from last academic year) to preserving the past was rewarded with a reception at Government House on Wednesday night, hosted by Acting Governor Ric Nye, at which the winner's name was announced along with those deemed Highly Commended.

Darby Newman was the winner of the first prize award with her project, "The way of the horse-tamers".

Comments from judges included, "What a great record and well written." Darby appeared to capture the imagination of the judges with, "excellent information," along with, "humour."

Harriet Lewis' "The wonders of the FIC Blacksmith" received a Highly Commended award

as did Rio Thomas-Hayes for "Cooking and me - traditional cooking in the Falklands and St Helena" and Jessica Whalley King for her project "The Pitaluga Family Then and Now." The Jane and Alastair Cameron History Competition was set up by Alastair's sister Jane in memory of her brother who died in a vehicle accident; following the death of Jane, the competition was renamed in memory of both.

Infant Junior School and Camp Education Head Teacher Tom Hill praised the, "high standard of work," in a speech during the reception.

He also thanked, "mums and dads and the wider community," for their support for the students while information was gathered for the projects.

A prize-giving for the Year 10 Jane and Alastair Cameron Competition winners will be held at another time.

Winner of that category was Reece Harris with his project on Hill Head, East Falkland. Judges were impressed with the, "original source of material," and described it as, "well presented."

Tamsin McLeod received a Highly Commended for her project, "Archery of the Falkland Islands" and Laoisia Bishop-Newman for "Tuberculosis in the Falkland Islands."

Tourist Board 'disappointed' by political pressure at BA Seatrade

POLITICAL pressure on organisers of the Seatrade South America convention held in Buenos Aires, Argentina, last week meant the Falkland Islands was ignored during discussions as a tourist destination in the region.

Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) Managing Director Tony Mason, who attended Seatrade along with FITB Tourism Assistant Steph Middleton and Sullivan Shipping Services Ltd Tourism Coordinator Sammy Marsh, said he was, "disappointed," that the organisers had given in to pressure from the Argentine Tourism Authority.

He told Penguin News: "It's difficult for the convention to accurately evaluate the benefits to the South American cruise tourism industry without taking note of us."

Mr Mason said he felt, strongly the Seatrade organisers should hold their events in countries that are neutral to any political pressures between countries. "All of the countries involved in the cruise tourism industry are important and no one should be excluded or ignored. Figures given at the conference could not be accurate without the Falkland Islands tourism initiatives included."

He said FITB had productive meetings at the event, "which was why we were there in the first place," but criticised, "imposed restrictions against attendees."

He and Mrs Middleton had been approached by Seatrade staff at the event and asked that they, "keep quiet," about being from the Falkland Islands, as organisers feared protests, "if word got out we were there."

Mr Mason said: "I was put off by this as we met so many Argentine people at the event who welcomed us and actually went out of their way to be friendly towards us."

Despite the pressures, encouraging meetings took place between FITB and Princess Cruises as well as with Royal Caribbean said Mr Mason.

He also noted that the event was, "OK but not as good as other Seatrade events. I found the attendance a bit low and with less than expected exhibitors."

"The conference on tourism in South America was the first on the agenda and I enjoyed hearing what other countries in the region were doing in relation to cruise tourism."

Miss Marsh said she found the convention useful for meeting Sullivan Shipping Services clients, adding that attendance was, "imperative to understand what the future holds for South American cruising."

She said the three key issues repeated constantly were: cost, infrastructure and integration of the region.

"Ports in South America are the most expensive in the world, and the region needs to work together in order to reduce costs, improve infrastructure and to be in a position to compete with the northern hemisphere," Miss Marsh explained.

She said Chile had worked hard to reduce costs and lift restrictions in order to win back some of the cruise ship companies. Chile won an award at the conference from Seatrade for their efforts.

Miss Marsh said: "Unfortunately no country in South America, including the Falkland Islands is a destination on its own, so integration and working together to make the region appealing to cruise lines is very important."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

SINCE the title alone 'proposals for the introduction of Fixed Penalty Notices for certain motoring offences' sent a little prickle down my spine, it seems safe to assume it's a pretty immediately effective method in terms of moderating behaviour, particularly bearing in mind, according to my son, I 'drive like a granny' and am thus unlikely to have to fork out for too many fines.

It's been tried and tested elsewhere and is likely to be even more compelling in a tiny community like this, where after a few instant fines have been awarded, word of mouth will have us all rather more efficiently checking our speedometers, thinking twice about parking on pavements and snapping our seat belt catches as opposed to casually flinging it over one shoulder before a panic stricken wrestling match with the strap when the RFP appear around a corner.

While it doesn't really mean anything different in terms of what we're allowed or not allowed to do, the idea of having to hand over a wad of cash within a limited time-span instead of spending it online, on burgers, or in my case, on new wing mirrors, is distinctly off-putting.

In fact the whole thing is such a sensible idea I'm inclined to wonder why on earth we're even being given the privilege of being consulted on it?

You've got to stop treating us like grown-ups Len.

Continuing on the consultancy theme, numbers of responses to the Waterfront Masterplan consultancy seemed a little low bearing in mind its ultimate execution will impact heavily not only on the visual aspect of Stanley, but on the first impressions of every single one of our thousands of cruise visitors every year.

Personally I assumed the telling use of the word Masterplan (conjuring up images of little bloke stroking white cat and laughing evilly while planning world domination) would have had everyone rushing to their PCS - or Maes if they have any taste - to offer their tuppence worth.

But no, apart from an awfully cynical 46, it seems the populace has the utmost faith in the Falklands Islands Development Corporation and their worthy Board Members.

FOGL changes target following gas discovery

FALKLANDS Oil and Gas announced this week it had opted to switch the next test well from the Loligo prospect to an alternative target further east, after the most recent drill encountered gas, but not the more lucrative oil or gas condensate hoped for.

The discovery of gas in the field to the east of the Islands failed to give share prices any significant boost.

FOGL's chief executive Tim Bushell, said the well had demonstrated Loligo was a valid trap that contained gas bearing zones, adding that work would continue to assess the "potential and commercial viability of this discovery."

The Loligo well is the first drilled in FOGL's blocks since 2010.

Shares in the company hit a high of 267p in July that year amid high hopes that its Toroa well drilled in a joint venture BHP Billiton would strike oil. Shares plummeted after it emerged it had drilled a dry well and BHP Billiton quit the joint venture in March last year.

Since FOGL's fundraising earlier this year, the company has strengthened its financing through the sale of minority stakes in its blocks to Edison in June and a further farm out agreement with Noble Energy in August.

Further 3D surveys, followed by drilling in 2014 is expected from the company

C&W on the market?

CABLE & Wireless Communications has received an approach for its telecoms business in Monaco and various islands such as the Maldives, Seychelles and Falkland Islands from Bahrain Telecommunications Company.

The Financial Times reported this week that the Middle Eastern telecoms group was in early talks with CWC about the business, according to one person with knowledge of the situation, in an effort to diversify its business outside the region.

The various telecoms assets could be sold for as much as $1bn, which would be a boost for shareholders in CWC after it cut its dividend in half earlier this year.

"CWC has been long seen by analysts as a seller of its island assets as well as its business in Macao, given its longer term strategy of focusing on its core business in the Caribbean. The Macao business has also been studied by a number of groups, including telecoms operators from China," FT reporter Daniel Thomas said.

In a statement, CWC confirmed that it had received an approach from Bateleo regarding a possible transaction involving its Monaco & Islands business unit.

"At this point," it said, "there can be no certainty that the discussions will lead to a transaction. A further announcement will be made, if appropriate."

CWC was created as an independent overseas telecoms business following the demerger of Cable & Wireless in 2010. As well as Monaco, the islands business includes telecoms operations in Maldives, Seychelles, Falkland Islands, Channel Islands and Isle of Man.

Desire reduce losses to $2m

FALKLAND Islands explorer Desire Petroleum said its half-year to end-June period losses decreased from $39.3 million in the previous period to just $2m, due to a fall in exploration and evaluation expenses.

It also announced that it was looking for a farm in partner for the North Falkland basin, where the company is focused.

Commenting on the results,

Stephen Phipps, Chairman of Desire, said: "Recent developments have highlighted the exciting potential of the North Falkland Basin and it is Desire's intention to seek a high quality farm in partner to help us capitalise on this potential, with our share in recent discoveries, material positions in well defined prospects and the exploration potential across our remaining acreage."

Fiestas Patrias for Chilean Independence day

THE Falkland Islands Chilean community was hosted at a reception at Government House on Tuesday September 18, Chilean Independence Day. Their celebrations began earlier, on the weekend, with a lively patriotic party held at the Narrows Bar.

According to recent census statistics the Chilean community in the Islands has increased from 5.4 per cent to 6.4 per cent in the last five years. Stanley Growers Tim Miller told Penguin News his four Chilean employees began their independence day by raising the Chilean flag at the Garden Centre and singing the Chilean national anthem.

A declaration of independence was officially issued by Chile on February 12, 1818 and formally recognised by Spain in 1844, when full diplomatic relations were established.

RFIP get out of jail free

STANLEY residents have indicated they are fairly or completely satisfied with the service provided by the Royal Falkland Islands Police, (RFIP) according to a recent survey.

The survey conducted by local companies Synergy and Sealed PR randomly contacted 504 people of whom 463 agreed to participate. 114 (25%) were residents of East Stanley, 245 (53%) were residents of Central Stanley, and 104 (22%) were residents of West Stanley.

The most common reason given for contacting the police was with reference to vehicle licences with only 7% of respondents who had contacted the police using the emergency number 999 to do so.

Overall, both by location and gender, more than 50% of respondents said they were completely satisfied with the way their contact with the police had been dealt with. 85% of all respondents were completely or fairly satisfied with the way their matter had been dealt with.

Chief Inspector Len McGill said he was grateful for the level of response which would now provide realistic statistical information. A previous survey in 2008 received such a low response (119) that it was not really representative of Stanley, he said.

Cars and motorbikes speeding was perceived as being a problem by almost twice the number of residents of East and West Stanley than those living in the centre, but 91% said anti-social behaviour did not affect their day-to-day quality of life. CI McGill said that speeding in the east and west of Stanley had been noted and it enabled them to further concentrate on those areas.

96% of all respondents said they were not at all worried about being a victim of crime, which CI McGill said was very pleasing, "it's all to do with the quality of life," he added.

62% said there were no problems in their area of Stanley and this percentage was lower for residents of West Stanley, with 54% saying there were no problems.

92% of respondents answered that their level of confidence in the Police had not changed in the past 12 months.

More than 75% of respondents answering the question said they never see foot patrols in their area of Stanley, however, one third (118) qualified this by saying they didn't feel it was necessary, but 16% said it would be nice to see more foot patrols. CI McGill said he was, "extremely proud," of the public's confidence in the RFIP and they would, "continue to improve and deliver the best service possible."

The results of the survey will now be used for business planning especially in relation to staff deployment, method of operating and prioritising the issues which are most important to the community.

The survey only covered Stanley and CI McGill said it had seemed unfair to cloud the statistics by including the Camp where policing needs were, "specific and unique." It was planned to have meetings on both East and West Falkland in the near future to seek information from the communities as to what their needs were and what we can offer, he said.

Photographic 1982 montage on display

THE striking contrast between the "public portrayals," of the Falklands War, will be the subject of photographer Karel de Pauw at the Harrogate Photographic Society this month.

The photographer captured the images during visits to Argentina and the Falklands and conceived the montage as a documentary reflection on the 30th anniversary of the war.

He said: "Apart from the visible remnants - aircraft wreckage, mine fields - what I found striking was the contrast in the public portrayals of the conflict."

He added: "On the mainland (Argentina) defiant proclamations of ownership overshadow neglected monuments in forgotten hamlets honouring conscripts whose lives were sacrificed by the junta. The extermination of the indigenous population in the 19th Century, however, scarcely seems to register in the consciousness of those who rail against the perceived remnants of British colonialism."

"While the lethal fallout of the occupation is a constant reminder to the Islanders of the ultimate price paid by both sides in the war, they commemorate those who liberated them with understated dignity."

Old friends in high places

A FALKLANDS visitor in 2012, Conservative MP Philip Dunne was this month appointed Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for the Ministry of Defence. Mr Dunne visited along with MPs Mark Francois, Gemma Doyle and Ian Murray late last year. Perhaps happily for the Falklands Mr Dunne has specific responsibilities for the defence procurement budget.

Mark Francois has been appointed Minister for International Security Strategy.

Members of the Houses of Parliament are invited to visit the Islands each year accompanied by the Falkland Islands Representative in London.

Hi Fly best value

THE Ministry of Defence (MoD) has indicated that the selection for the preferred bidder for the South Atlantic airbridge was based on a careful evaluation and "best value for money."

It was recently announced that the MoD's Airline Broker Chapman Freeborn would use Portugal based Hi Fly as their sub-contractor to provide the service beginning October 1. The decision not to use a British airline was criticised by some UK media.

Karate skills on display

VISITING logistic partner of South Atlantic American Services Ltd (SAAS) Managing Director of Seafast Ltd David Halliday and Falkland Islands Government Auditor Rob Granger, both karate black belt holders, gave a vigorous display of their skills at the Infant Junior School Hall this week. While visiting for meetings with SAAS in 2011 David had made enquiries regarding the possibility of joining some karate sessions said SAAS General Manager Eugene Hurley, but the opportunity had not materialised. Eugene said during David's current trip he had been able to meet up with Rob to train and spar and share their knowledge of karate from the different perspectives from which they have studied it. Rob and David were joined by Karen Rimicans and Mark Lewis for the session.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

AS you read Penguin News the Hon Ian Hansen and I will be in Brighton with Sukey Cameron ready for the Liberal Democrat party conference. Although our London Representative regularly visited the conference we have only very recently had a stand there. I have long believed that as the third major party and one that could, and now does, hold the balance of power we should be working with them. It will be fascinating for me to compare the atmosphere and general interest with that at the Labour and Conservative conferences we attend in the following weeks. At the Labour and Conservative conferences we often have excellent stand positions in recognition of our loyalty in attending and paying for a position whether or not they are the party in power. The atmosphere at the conferences is always interesting, doom, gloom and recriminations if they have just lost an election, machinations and backstabbing as they gear up for the next. Our position is strictly neutral as we value the cross party support we receive.

WE will be joined for occasional days by a couple of younger Islanders which will be great, not only the injection of youth but, if past experience is anything to go by, they will enable us to talk to more people at the busiest times. We do get the odd really silly question but most visitors to the stand have a genuine interest and want to learn more. We also have to correct the many myths about the Islands, some from Argentine propaganda, also from mischief making tabloid headlines. The contact we have with party members helps spread knowledge of the Islands more widely; a never ending necessity if they are to support their MPs' support for our right to self determination. There is an International Day at each conference when we meet many international visitors including some of their ambassadors to the UK.

THE work we are able to do is complementary to the lobbying work done year round by Sukey Cameron and the London office. One never knows from where the future leaders may come.

Fixed penalties for motoring offences?

FIXED penalties of £50 to £80 have been proposed for some motoring offences.

The public is to be consulted via a paper on proposals for the introduction of a Fixed Penalty Notice Scheme for certain motoring offences, the Royal Falkland Islands Police announced this week.

A consultation paper on the subject notes: "It is felt that dealing with some motoring offences by using a Fixed Penalty Scheme would introduce an option for the police in dealing with motoring offences in a proportionate way in addition to the existing options of giving a warning or referring a case for prosecution."

The RFLP paper proposes that the fixed penalty be between £50 and £80. This is considered to be a sufficiently high enough amount to act as a deterrent but also be an amount that is affordable and can be paid within the proposed 21 day period.

Currently if you are caught by the police committing a road traffic offence then it could be dealt with by the police officer giving the warning.

Alternatively the police Officer could decide to pass the case to the Attorney General's Chambers to decide whether the person should be prosecuted.

If the person is prosecuted in Court and pleads guilty or is found guilty then the Court can impose a fine, take away the individual's licence or give a prison sentence.

A 'Fixed Penalty' scheme for some motoring offences would give the police a third option in addition to giving a warning or referring the driver for prosecution.

The scheme is seen as striking a balance between imposing a suitable penalty for an offence that would act as a deterrent and appropriate punishment and the person avoiding having to appear in court and be subject to the associated publicity, or having the offence on their record. It would still give a person issued with a FPN the option of having their case dealt with by the Court if they wished.

The consultation period begins today Friday September 21 and will run for a three week period.

Inspector Len McGill explained that a paper has been produced to explain the proposals and to encourage comment and feedback.

A copy of the consultation paper can be obtained from Gilbert House assembly@sec.gov.fk and includes information regarding who to contact with comments.

Your questions answered

Q Who authorised the unsightly planting of the electricity pole on the corner of the junction of Callaghan Road to Philomel Street causing another danger problem to motorists? Why could the service not have been provided under the road? Would that not have been preferable to creating a hazard for drivers.

A Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside provided the following response
The erection of the pole was agreed with the landowner and authority for such poles to be erected rests with the Director of Public Works.

The pole does not prevent sight of oncoming traffic on Philomel Street when waiting on Callaghan road at the junction and as it is sited on private land within the property boundary and set back from the kerb lines on the highway, the pole is not forming a physically projecting obstacle either and would not then appear to cause 'another vision/danger problem to motorists'. Service crossings are often made within roads, but this is usually when there are also other services to install such as sewers, drains and/or water and in this case those service connections are being made to existing provision within the site to the north and it was more effective to install an overhead electrical supply.

Travelmart Latin America

THE Falkland Islands was represented at the 36th Travel Mart Latin America Cartagena last week. Sally Ellis and Cathy Jacobsen were present on behalf of International Tours & Travel.

Mrs Ellis said: "As always this was a busy two days of pre-scheduled appointments as well as networking at social events and spreading information on the Falklands as much as possible." A full report on the event will be included in next week's Penguin News

Design website

LOCAL photographer and designer Julie Halliday has launched website www.studio52.co.fk in order to promote her gallery Studio 52 located on Stanley waterfront

Mrs Halliday said: "The gallery displays an ever changing range of photographic prints, art, locally designed modern gift items and photo products. There is a mixture of the amazing sights around the Falkland Islands, from landscapes to the small things that make the Falklands so unique."

Falkland Club members

Falkland Club celebrates a century

100 people attended at a gathering held for members and guests on Saturday evening to celebrate a centenary of existence for The Falkland Club.

Originally formed in 1899 and re-constituted in April 1911 by Vincent Arthur Henry Biggs and others it has been in continuous operation since then.

It has today, as in the past, membership from many backgrounds and several generations of families have continued as members.

A resume of highlights from its 100 years was given by Robert Rowlands during the evening.

The club has been very much a part of Falklands history having continued through years that included the Battle of Falklands in 1914, the Battle of the River Plate in 1939 and the arrival of several thousand troops in 1942.

In 1982 radio transmissions were made from the premises sending information by a member to England during the Argentine occupation. Harold Briley the BBC correspondent for Latin America in 1982, was made an Honorary Member of the club for the good work he did in informing the Falklands population from Buenos Aires at that time.

Crafty folk needed

THE first ever craft-a-thon in the Community School was held in celebration of Falkland Island crafts and also to raise money for local charities last year.

One of the organisers Louise Taylor said in the previous year, thanks to so many people generously giving their time and sharing their skills more than £2,000 for the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust was raised.

This year the event will take place on October 20 and the group would like to hear from 'crafty' people interested in sharing their skills.

"We already have offers to run wool-crafts, paper-crafts, wood-working and model making. But we'd like to have as many different things as possible on offer for children, adults and groups of mixed ages too," said Mrs Taylor, adding that an activity could be for just an hour or longer should it be preferred.

A café will be open throughout the day for refreshments between activities or for people who just want to go along and browse. Volunteers to help in the café, offer donations of sweet and savoury foods to sell and to welcome people as they arrive at the craft-a-thon are also needed.

"This year we'd like to donate the proceedings from the activities to the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and from the café to the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund," said Mrs Taylor.

If you can help in any way contact Louise Taylor or Sylvia Allen at ficraftathon@gmail.com, telephone or on Facebook.

Westers get together for first aid

AN enthusiastic group of people from West Falkland gathered together this weekend for a first aid course run by Steve Dent.

The course was held at Fox Bay on Saturday and Hill Cove on Sunday.

Dr Beccy Edwards said Steve gave excellent tuition on basic life support and in basic first aid including strapping, splinting and bandaging and how to deal with bleeding, burns and broken bones.

"Steve also took the learning a bit further to cover more complicated issues such as how to care for, and handle, a seriously injured casualty, an issue that can be quite daunting if faced with an incident on remote West Falkland."

Dr Edwards described the course as excellent for anyone who needs an update in first aid or wants to learn a bit more than the basics.

She said: "One important aspect Steve covered is how to recognise a serious injury that needs a helicopter to be sent, and how to assess if it is safe to wait a bit longer (for FIGAS the next day).

Another very useful part of the course is what information about the problem and the patient is useful to be passed back to the KEMH when speaking to the staff there," she said.

Everyone learned something from the day, including Dr Edwards herself who found it useful to cover the new and updated basic life support.

"I would urge anyone on West Falkland who is interested about the course to come along to one of these training sessions, she said.

1. What is your most prized possession? My sanity and my grand-girls: Pearl and Kira, however they don't go together very well

2. What is the worst piece of advice you have ever been given? Think before you speak. Yeah right, like I'm gonna manage that...

3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? My ancestors James and Margaret Biggs who were among the first settlers in the Islands. They could tell me how they found those early years

4. If you had a motto, what would it be? Live and let live

5. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I could sing! Then people could pay me to stop

6. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? People who put off doing things at the expense of others

7. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? This is a difficult one because Bean wants the job but I don't think the feathers would suit him. So going to say Glenda Watson because she tells it like it is, and would make sure we all kept in touch with our roots

8. What is your nickname and why? Mini (because my elder sister couldn't say my name) and Calamity which is self-explanatory

9. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I was the last girl born on West Falkland and I really am sane, honest

10. What is your happiest childhood memory? Gathering sheep at Shag Cove with my dad

11. What would your 'Mastermind' specialist subject be? I'd have to use my History degree and go for the Civil Rights movement and Malcolm X

Lyn is very proud to be the grandmother of the first of the Falklands 9th generation and lives with Bean (Adrian Minnell) and his kittens, "seriously he is a softy." For the past five years she has worked as a Business Advisor at FIDC.

Pay gap is widening

SO it's official: the Falklands' average annual income totals £20,100 and 20% of residents have a second job.

Meaning that in reality those 20% cannot survive on a single job because it is so low paid.

It further states: "However these averages mask significant variations in income levels across society - almost half of all residents (49.2%) report an annual income of less than £15,000 (with almost 12% reporting income of less than £5,000)."

This clearly shows a contrast with MLAs' statements that a mere dozen people are in need of extra financial help. This means that 12 out of every hundred employed do not earn enough to live on.

I assume that overall Falklands' individual average annual income totalling £20,100, includes those earning more than £100,000? Which would in turn indicate the widening gap between them and the lowest average earners.

Percentages on paper do make impressive reading, however, in reality hide the real figures. Look

Remembering Captain 'Paddy' Vincent

CAPTAIN Patrick Michael Causabon ("Paddy") Vincent CBE passed away peacefully on August 23, 2012 at age 87. Born in the Falkland Islands on February 7, 1925.

Paddy was the son of Patrick and Nora Vincent. As the family travelled back to the UK on home leave in 1933 his father died and was buried at sea, leaving Nora, Paddy, and his two half brothers Richard and John Lapsley.

Paddy attended Christ's Hospital School and the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth, graduating in time to serve in World War II in the Far East on the battleships, HMS Duke of York and HMS Ramilles. He spent much of his naval career at sea, including tours on HMS Implacable and on the Royal Yacht Britannia. Highlights of his long naval service also included shore duties with NATO tours in Norfolk, Virginia and Rome, and at RNAS Lossiemouth.

Paddy met his first wife Marion Jackson in Karachi in 1949. Marion, the widow of a US Naval Aviator, had two young sons, Peter and John Jackson. After Marion's untimely death in 1983, Paddy married Susan Anderson.

Upon his retirement from service with the Royal Navy, Paddy worked for the Institute of Chartered Accountants in London and later managed the very successful "Wishing Well Appeal" for Great Ormond Street Children's Hospital.

at it this way: if one person earns £100,000 and one person earns £5,000 the average would be £52,500 a far cry from the reality of that lowest paid individual.

The Falklands has become a top, middle and bottom class system in the last 25 years with massive sums paid to top workers and peanuts paid to the bottom.

Sadly it has also changed the working relationships of those three categories.

No longer are we all equal and those at the top have long forgotten how to show respect for the lower paid class or understand how the rest of society functions.

We are set to see this trend expand as we get ever closer to oil wealth and I fear this will lead to massive unrest within our society in the years ahead.

Cost of living naturally increases because the top layer can afford to pay it but this often comes at the expense of the less fortunate.

The results show that statements made in the past by MLAs that £20,000 per annum is a reasonable standard of living for Islanders is obviously based on an Islands average and not the reality faced by many individuals as they suggest.

While the future looks very bright for the elite, few others will be thinking the same I am afraid.

Thanks FIG for farming support

THROUGH your paper I would like to express my thanks to FIG for their support to the development of the Falklands farming industry.

From genetic improvement, pasture improvement, pasture management, ditching, sheep breeding and selection to the many other services offered by our Agricultural Department.

I have managed to change my sheep to a dual purpose breed that has good wool and meat characteristics, an average micron of 23, higher lambing percentages, 90% of wether lambs to the abattoir off their mothers through better pasture management, 80% of cull ewes to the abattoir and very good results at the sheep show.

Now, with the growing demand in beef I am diversifying into producing a lot more prime beef.

Having not long attended a beef production meeting, it was heartening to see this industry has great support from the Agricultural Department, be it in genetic improvement, pasture management, animal health etc.

The long term support of our councillors for the development of the farming industry and FIMCO, for me as a dedicated farmer is very much appreciated.

100th birthday for wireless coms

HAVE you ever wondered why we have a VPC Road in Stanley? If the hint is given that VPC is the radio call sign Falkland Islands "Victor Papa Charlie", you would be on the right wavelength, and indeed some may remember that the Old Wireless Station was located in that area.

It was 100 years ago on March 27, 1912 that Governor Allardyce laid the west mast foundation plate on the top of a ridge at the east end of the Murray Heights. The wireless station installation was finished in August, and formally opened in September.

On September 2, 1912 wireless communication was established with HMS Active at Montevideo and Governor Allardyce sent the following telegram via HMS Active to the Secretary of State: "Please convey to His Majesty loyal congratulations of Colonists Falklands on the establishment of wireless communications with HMS Active at Montevideo." Contact was later made with Rio Grande de Sol, Brazil and Cerrito Montevideo and a regular service to Europe through these stations and HM Ships in the area was maintained.

The 50th Anniversary of the establishment of radio communication was celebrated with a stamp issue in 1962.

Photographs of the radio station and various pieces of contemporary equipment in use were obtained from the Marconi Telegraph and Wireless Company, who installed the equipment.

The stamps were designed by Michael Gorman, with each stamp using dots and dashes of Morse code for VPC, the call sign of Falkland Islands radio in white, a subtle inclusion on the stamps.

way he could, it was highly appropriate that Paddy should have become active in the United Kingdom Falkland Islands Trust. He became a Trustee on 11th January 1993, and later served as its Chairman for four years (1997-2001) as successor to the founding Chairman Nigel Gribbon. Throughout that time he put his heart and soul into promoting the Trust whenever he could and took a huge personal interest in all its activities.

He served also as Chairman of The Burma Star Association for many years, devoting a great deal of time, thought and effort to that role. And he regularly marshalled the Royal Naval personnel at the service held at the Cenotaph in December each year to commemorate the naval Battle of the Falklands in December 1914.

Paddy was known by all as exuberant, loyal, and loving in both his personal and professional life. He was an avid fly fisher, amateur aviator, keen traveller, gardener, and birder. Children everywhere will long remember the lively games and songs he delighted them with.

Paddy is survived by his wife Susan, Susan's daughters Lucy and Harriet, step-sons Peter and John Jackson, his daughter Michele Vincent Smith and her husband Geoff, as well as twelve grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Patrick Vincent, Naval officer and charity fund-raiser, was born on 7 February 1924. He died on 23 August 2012 aged 87.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

IT'S all happening now, shrubs and trees are sprouting buds soon to cover themselves in leaves, and any seeds planted and over-wintered are germinating also.

I find it fascinating which seeds of plants are putting on growth at this time. As an example, hardy Cyclamens which flower either in autumn or the early spring have started to germinate, nature works well.

I see a lot of Sorbus (mountain ash) seeds have spread themselves about, with the help of birds, all over the garden and have germinated well; what a crop! It's such a shame they don't grow in the wild. Not only would they give colour and shelter but they would also feed a lot of birds and their berries are also good in jelly. Sadly they will never be invasive. In our climate and winds they might survive but would only thrive in gardens.

The same cannot be said of the gorse which keeps self-seeding everywhere. Anyone who has ever seen a gorse fire will know just what an intense heat it gives and how fiercely it blazes, as most of our homes are wooden I find that very worrying. It makes a wonderful shelter for animals in the Camp and that is where it belongs.

At last the potatoes planted last autumn in the tunnel are showing shoots. I will now put some more inside. Most of the seeds planted a couple of weeks ago are also up. The onions and shallot 'sets' over-wintered in the fridge are now in and making growth in the tunnel.

This coming week I hope to start in a propagator, and also on windowsills, seeds of tomatoes, peppers, pumpkins and aubergine and, this year, cucumbers, which we don't normally grow as we don't eat them but I will plant some for the children to see and maybe enjoy as when growing well they really climb fast.

The amount of daylight is growing noticeably now and so most seeds can be planted indoors. The outdoor ones can wait a little longer unless there is a sheltered spot or a supply of garden fleece to protect from cold winds and frosts. Broad beans could go in now, they are pretty hardy creatures.

Bill has been very busy in the garden, not only did he weed all around a shrub border in the vegetable garden, he also gave the lawns their first light 'haircut'. He's also built me three more raised beds, dear man!

As these have very good soil in them I shall take the opportunity to manure heavily and plant potatoes in those he built last year. The soil that went into those was not very good but this will improve it. He has now built a 'wonder-wall' tunnel in what used to be a hen yard. It is a well sheltered area and should, with its net walls, prove to be wonderful for dwarf fruit trees and anything else that needs a little protection from wind and birds.

I have almost finished weeding the flower borders, an hour or so should see it all done. The front garden (and I) will then carry that familiar whiff of eau-de-6X all around us till some ram comes. I'm delighted with the bulbs this year, they are clumping up wonderfully and I should be able to break them up and fill in other areas with them when they finish flowering.

I like daffodils, especially if they are slightly different colours, but the most beautiful ones of the lot for me, are the four inch tall miniatures; they are so very delicate.

The clumps of aquilegias (columbines) are really looking great too, but I'm really pleased to see that the plants I removed from the tunnels and put in the border a couple of years ago (and which had sulked and stayed underground all last year) have shown themselves again. Those include Alstroemerias (peruvian lilies), Acanthus (bear's breeches) Eremurus (foxtail lily) and fritillarias, it will be interesting to see whether they will flower outside or not.

Discovered that some of the onions in store were starting to get a little soft and so skinned and sliced them (with many tears) and gave them two minutes in the microwave before freezing. Blanching isn't really required but there is less of a smell in the freezer that way. They are no longer good for use raw but come in handy for cooking. The carrots too had to come out of the ground. Those I cleaned and sliced into fairly small pieces then blanched in the microwave for four minutes. All done and my hands are very orange.

I have started some seeds of beetroot, and more brassicas, leeks and lettuce in modules inside. It should save a lot of root disturbance and should mean bigger and better plants when they are put into the ground outside in a few weeks. Some carrot seeds in a large pot have also now been planted. They never grow that big but are lovely and sweet as baby carrots.

Bill has watched, with a slightly jaundiced eye, as over the weeks, during bad weather, the freezers have gradually become topped up with sausage-rolls, pasties, flans and pies. He knows this means we will be on reheated food whenever we are alone, poor man!

Friendly greeting from FICS students

Falklands war veteran Mike Cole gives a first-hand account of a Falklands 'yomp' undertaken thirty years after the 1982 War

ON the night of June 11/12 1982 two Royal Marines, Corporal Frank Spencer and Marine Gordon MacPherson of Zulu Company, 45 Commando Group, were killed during the attack on Two Sisters in the Falkland Islands. I had the privilege in 1982 of commanding Zulu Company that night and throughout Operation Corporate.

In October 2009, Simon Spencer, Corporal Spencer's eldest son, phoned me and told me of his idea to walk in his father's footsteps, to retrace the 1982 yomp of 45 Commando Group from Port San Carlos to Stanley. I immediately said that I would come with him, seeing this as an opportunity to honour the memory of his father and of Marine MacPherson. We were soon joined by Simon's brother, Gareth and David MacPherson, Marine MacPherson's brother.

We planned to do the yomp to mark the 30th anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands on June 14, 1982, and, if possible, to stop at the settlements where we had stayed on the original yomp of 1982. The distance from Port San Carlos to Stanley is 120 kilometres and we would need to carry kit and food sufficient for 6/7 days. Our visit eventually took place May 9-23, 2012, with the yomp May 13-18.

The single most important factor towards the success of our venture was the support given by serving and retired members of the Corps, and the people of the Falkland Islands. As soon as our yomp was made known in the Falkland Islands Gary Clement, a retired Royal Marine and Chairman of the South Atlantic Medal Association (Falkland Islands), and his committee offered to sponsor our flights and to provide accommodation before and after the yomp. This was a fantastic start to our planning and typical of our Corps.

Our luck improved further when Colour Sergeant Trev Law, currently the Training Officer with the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF), offered to join us. This meant that we had a contact in the Islands, and made planning at a distance of 8,000 miles much easier. Not only did the FIDF provide us with kit, for which we should thank the Officer Commanding FIDF, Major Peter Biggs, but also Trev Law and his family seemed to know everyone in the Islands and this made arranging our overnight stops very easy. En route we stayed at Port San Carlos, New House, Douglas Settlement, Teal Inlet and Estancia, with the last night on Two Sisters.

David, Simon and Gareth generously agreed that, although this was to be a personal journey for them, we would raise funds for the Royal Marines Charitable Trust Fund. We also decided that we would repay the cost of our flights to SAMA (FI) so that the relatives of other veterans would be able to visit the Islands in the future.

A link to the BFBS reports on the yomp are shown on our fund-raising web page at: www.virginmoneygiving.com/yomp2012. We will be keeping this fund-raising page open for a while longer, so any donations will be gratefully received.

Sadly we were to lose both Simon and Gareth Spencer from the team only weeks before departing south for a combination of health and family reasons. This was sad, especially since the original idea for the yomp had come from Simon. However, they continue to support us.

We arrived in the Islands on May 10, and were met by Gary Clement and Trev Law. We were then driven to what is probably the most comfortable accommodation in the Falkland Islands, Liberty Lodge, and manager Ellen Davis could not possibly have done more to make our stay more comfortable.

We were well received by the local Falkland Islands Royal Marines contingent at the Narrows Bar on the evening of our arrival. The next day David and I visited Stanley Primary School to deliver presents from Hazlegrove School near RNAS Yeovilton as part of a Falklands 30th Anniversary project run by the Fleet Air Arm Museum. We were very impressed by the displays that the children had prepared on life in the Falklands and the Conflict of 1982.

Early in the morning of May 12 we drove to the start of the yomp at Port San Carlos, stopping on the way for a short battlefield tour of the 42 Commando attack on Mount Harriet and a visit to the deserted ruins of the field hospital at Ajax Bay, where 45 Commando Group was held in a defensive position for six days before starting the yomp on May 27, 1982. The hospitality shown by John and Michelle Jones at Race Point Farm that evening was to be typical of the reception we were to be given at all the settlements at which we were to spend the night - a fantastic evening meal and breakfast the next morning. It is quite clear that the Falkland Islanders will never forget the efforts made on their behalf to liberate the Islands in 1982. We spent the night under a tent sheet in the garden, just to keep us in 1982 mode.

And so on May 13 the yomp began, as all who were there will remember, up a long, steep hill and then 18 kms on tracks and over marshy, tussock grass to New House. The first ten paces on tussock grass instantly brought me back to 1982, and although thankfully we were only carrying 20kg, it was clear that we had a challenging six days ahead of us. David MacPherson, with no military training whatsoever and a hamstring injury that only cleared a few days before we flew south, proved to be made of the same stuff as his brother Gordon. Trev Law was Patrol Commander and, as expected of an ML, his professional expertise was excellent - he was also carrying a few kilos more than the two of us! We spent the night at New House on the floor of a Portakabin used for the Resident Infantry Company patrols as the guests of David and Pam Lewis, who gave us a wonderful meal and we spent the evening with Falkland Islanders who had been there as children in 1982.

All things considered we were lucky with the weather because, although now we were often yomping in driving rain, in 1982 the temperature dropped and we were hit by snowstorms. On May 14 we covered 18kms across tussock grass in rain and late in the afternoon came to Douglas Settlement where we gratefully took up the offer of a bed and the chance to dry out sodden clothes. Jan and Tanya Clarke were our hosts that night, and again after a great meal the evening was spent in the company of Jan's parents, Michael and Jeanette, who had been at Douglas in 1982.

The next two days of yomping followed the road that replaced the track of 1982; that would take us 50 kms to Estancia via Teal Inlet. The first leg of 22 kms to Teal Inlet on May 15, covered the same route as 1982 including the constant uphill/downhill gradient and the endless horizon of moorland landscape. In 1982 this had been slow-going and completed at night, and I remembered the relative luxury of spending the night of our arrival with the rest of Zulu Company in a sheep shearing shed at Teal Inlet. Thirty years on the three of us spent the night in the same sheep shed, although this time on the newly built first floor with a patrol from 4 SCOTS occupying the ground floor.

We spent the evening talking to Gloria Thorsen and her daughter, Kris, who had been 12 years old in 1982, and who both remembered well the temporary burial of Frank Spencer and Gordon MacPherson at Teal Inlet before their repatriation to UK.

On May 16 we covered 28kms to Estancia, where we were the guests of Tony and Ailsa Heathman. In 1982 45 Commando Group took two days to yomp from Teal Inlet to the patrol base at Bluff Cove Peak from where reces were conducted on Two Sisters, prior to the night attack on 11/12 June. Another fantastic evening meal, a night in a Portakabin and a fat boy's breakfast the next morning set us up for a day back on the tussock grass that was to take us up onto Two Sisters where we were to sleep the last night of the yomp. We followed the same approach into the FUP (forming up place) that Zulu and Yankee Companies and Tac HQ had taken in 1982, initially marching on the Murrell track and then cutting uphill over rock runs and tussock grass before stopping in the FUP, 1,500m short of the Two Sisters objective. When lying in the FUP in 1982 we had Argentine 155 artillery fire come down close to us and I had been quite convinced that when we moved out we would be shelled all the way up to the objective. Fortunately, for whatever reason, this did not happen. We now followed the assault route taken by Zulu Company, up the steep slope over the rock runs and tussock grass, and I am still amazed today at the effort required of 45 Commando Group to fight their way up this mountain at night loaded with weapons, ammunition and kit against an enemy dug in to positions that totally dominated the ground below them. Climbing up the feature 30 years on only served to reinforce my admiration and respect for the men of 45 Commando Group who successfully took Two Sisters all those years ago.

Trev Law found a perfect sheltered bivvy site on top of Two Sisters on the Zulu/Yankee inter-company boundary. By this time the weather had cleared and we did not bother with tent sheets, but instead settled down with sleeping and bivvy bags after a good evening meal. For some reason I woke at 0300 under a southern hemisphere night sky that is almost impossible to describe. The lack of pollution and a thin ozone layer mean that you are able to see more stars than can be seen in the hazier skies of the UK in the northern hemisphere. The sight had to be seen to be believed.

We awoke the next morning to a perfect sunny day and having had breakfast and packed kit we moved at 0930 from the eastern peak of Two Sisters to the western peak where we were to hold a short service at the memorial cairn to remember

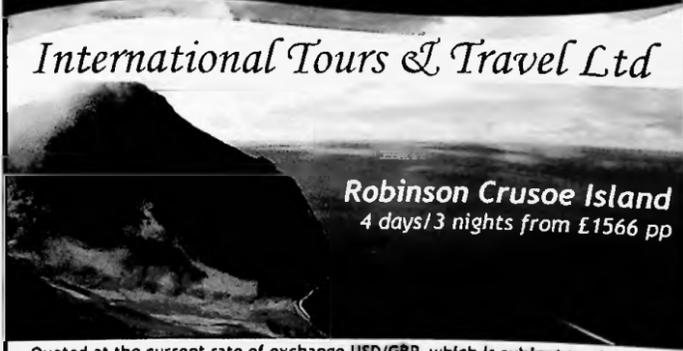

Corporal Frank Spencer and Marine Gordon MacPherson and the others of 45 Commando Group who were lost in 1982. When Gordon MacPherson was killed a song was composed in Gaelic, "Nam aonar le mo smaointinn" (Alone with my thoughts) to honour his memory, and although the song is the most popular in Gaelic requested by the public, it had never been played on the pipes before. A friend of David's in Oban prepared the pipe music and Trev Law arranged for a piper from 4 SCOTS to join us on Two Sisters for our memorial service.

An extract from the service can be seen on the second of the two TV reports using the links on our fund-raising web page.

We then set off down Two Sisters in perfect weather to yomp the last 15kms down into Stanley, where we were greeted by the children of Stanley Primary School and many others. We paid our respects at the 1982 Memorial and then made our way, as we had done in 1982, to The Globe Tavern where the first of many pints was waiting. In 1982 there had been several hundred Royal Marines crowded inside and outside having a pint in the sunshine before being taken on board the LSLs (Landing Ship Logistics) for two days R&R (rest and recreation).

That evening was spent in the company of Trev and his family, all of whom had done so much to make our trip a success.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland
Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110

 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

A change in the market this week has seen the first price rises this season. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market closed at AUS958cents/kg clean a price rise of 31 cents cents.

A modest sale of just over 33,000 bales had a great sale rate of nearly 94%, the most positive this season. It is thought that low stocks in the textile supply chain are being replenished causing the sudden demand and thus price increase. Wool stocks are low within the textile supply chain as sales of finished products to Europe continue to be poor.

New Zealand and South Africa also saw price rises this week. The market is unsure whether this positive outlook will continue or if it was a one off based on a spike in demand.

'Lloydy' duo are top Mr and Mrs

At the end of a lively afternoon of darts, reigning Governor's Cup champion Chris 'Lloydy' Lloyd along with wife Natalie were awarded the Mr and Mrs trophy for 2012.

The competition was organised and sponsored by Garry 'Boss' Thomas and held at Deanos Bar on Sunday.

There were 32 entries to the competition which Deanos manager Chris Sim hopes will become an annual event.

Not all those playing were able to persuade their spouse to play so several 'couples' were a temporary arrangement and for most a short lived marriage was in store as they came up against some strong pairings and exited the competition early.

Not so the combination of Paul Lewis and Ann Murphy 'however' who put up a strong front right from the start, defeating Julie and Jonny Ford who were tipped as being strong favourites.

The also strong pairing of Ali Bonner and Lisa Jaffray found wedded bliss was not all it was jacked up to be and went out in the second round while the real Mr and Mrs Smith (Natalie and Colin) failed to make it through the honeymoon period of the first round, with a defeat by Bean Minnell and Lyn Buckland.

Graeme Hay and Joanne Goodwin were also a partnership tipped for the top and progressed through to the semi-final where they were brought to a halt by Paul and Ann who were on a roll by this time.

Brother and sister team of Melvyn and Teresa Clifton were proving to be formidable opponents having evicted the two Pats (Berntsen and Pratlett) in the first round and Boss with his borrowed partner Ella Minnell in the second to make the semi-final.

It was at this stage Chris and Natalie demonstrated their united front to win the match and meet the formidable Paul and Ann in the final.

Seven legs of 501 double in and double out ensued with the enthusiastic support from a packed out Deanos Bar practically raising the roof.

But it was Natalie and Chris who managed to gain the upperhand to win four legs, three of which Natalie found the winning double on. "It was an absolutely fantastic day," enthused Chris.

With the Darts League games now finished for the season, those wanting to keep their arrow throwing skills honed can enter the friendly individual knockout

Bringing some romance to the occasion, Stevie Aldridge proposed to his long term girlfriend Jodie Poole and received a resounding yes. Champagne was produced and the happy couple's engagement was toasted as the dancing got underway.
Congratulations to you both.

CMI Level 3 Diploma in First Line Management

The Training Centre would like to offer the CMI Level 3 Diploma in First Line Management to private sector companies. The qualification is designed for supervisors and first line managers, to support development of their skills in maintaining and developing the effectiveness and efficiency of the operations for which they are responsible by motivating and developing the people who work in the team, fostering effective communications and developing a sense of corporate identity. The course lasts for approximately ten months starting in January 2013 and comprises seven units as follows:

- Personal Development as a First Line Manager
- Resource Planning
- Meeting Stakeholder Needs
- Managing and Communicating Information
- Developing Individuals and Teams
- Recruitment and Selection
- Improving Team Performance

Course participants are required to attend a two day tutorial once a month and to submit written assignments for each unit. Some units also involve assessment of role play exercises and presentations.

Cost: £1,800 per person. Closing 28th September 2012.

The family of the late Les Lee would like to express their thanks to everyone who sent such lovely floral tributes, cards, messages and phone calls from overseas as well as the Falklands, at the time of their sad loss. Your thoughts and care are very much appreciated. Special thanks must go to all the staff at the KEMH and the volunteers who regularly took Les out for his 'himbles'. You were so kind and understanding of his condition, to Workboat Services for laying on special ferry crossings so that we could take Les 'back home' to his final resting place at Port Howard and to FIGAS for the extra flight they put on to take some of the folk to Port Howard for the funeral service and waiting to bring them back to Stanley. To Monica Wolf, who came to conduct the funeral service at Port Howard. A big thank you must go to Critta and all at Port Howard for all their hard work in the preparations for the funeral, at the Social Club and at the Cemetery. Special thanks also go to Jackie Earnshaw along with Mike Summers, Norman Clark and Ian Goss who put together such a lovely remembrance and thanksgiving service, which was held in the Fabernacle on the 11th September. Thank you also to FIRS for recording the service so that we can share it with family members overseas. Thank you all very much

Happy 7th birthday Calvin. Miss you lots, love from Nanna & John x x x Love & kisses for Mia too x x x

Happy Birthday to my big sis Kiersten. Have a great day and enjoy your party on Saturday lots of cuddles and kisses from your little brother Kasyn. XXXXX

A special thank you to all the lovely people who work at the KEMH for looking after us last week. We really appreciate all your hard work, patience, dedication and loving care. Rebecca, Danielo, Daphne, Chiara and Phoebe Gomez

"The Loss of the Criccieth Castle: A True Account of Heroism and Survival"
In 1912, a three-masted iron sailing ship, the Criccieth Castle, was on a home-winter voyage from Chile when disaster struck off Cape Horn. It was mid-winter in the stormiest region of the world when Captain Robert Thomas, his wife Catherine, their four-year-old son Bobbie and all the crew were forced to abandon the sinking vessel and take to the boats. What followed was an eight-day fight for their lives as they made for the Falkland Islands.
This book tells Catherine and Robert's story in the last days of the great sailing ships.

2012/13 cruise ship season brings new luxury visitors

LUXURY super yacht MY Sherakhan, is one of four vessels new to the Falkland Islands visiting in the 2012/13 season beginning next month.

More often spotted in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas, she also ventures further afield to Patagonia, Antarctica, French Polynesia, Asia, and Panama.

Regatta (Prestige Cruises) Ocean Diamond (Quark) and Arcadia (P&O) will also pay inaugural visits.

The season will begin gently with the first vessel, Ushuaia arriving in Stanley on October 6, carrying 84 passengers and returning on October 20.

Two of the smaller class of vessels Polar Pioneer and Ocean Nova will also visit later in the month, with the far larger Costa Romantica planning to drop anchor in the Islands on October 27.

Approximately 50,000 passengers will visit Stanley according to the most recent cruise ship schedule released this week, with AIDA Cara, Star Princess, Arcadia, Veendam, Celebrity Infinity, Grand Princess and Golden Princess disembarking between 1350 and 2500 of their guests onto Stanley Seafont.

During the season which runs from October until early April, around 90 ship visits are currently scheduled, however, due to severe weather or various logistical difficulties not all normally take place.

Last season 35,159 visitors landed; this was reduced from the expected number due to eight vessel cancellations. Seven of those were due to bad weather and one was health related.

While Stanley will take the bulk of the visits, vessels also plan to call in to New Island, West Point, Carcass Island, Bleaker Island, George and Barren islands Sealion Island and Volunteer Point. Shipping agents Sulivan Shipping report that they will have five passenger exchanges using LAN this coming season, with one company also having a week long cruise extension in the Falkland Islands.

So far the schedule shows relatively few days where more than one large vessel will visit Stanley on the same day, however on February 19 Stanley tourist guides will be out in force to look after approximately 3,500 disembarking visitors.

MLAs at Party Conference meet senior members

THE Falkland Islands Government stand at the Liberal Democrat Party Conference welcomed a number of senior party members including the leader Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg, Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek told Penguin News this week.

The first of the party conferences MLA Cheek and MLA Ian Hansen are attending, ran from Saturday until Wednesday afternoon.

MLA Cheek said: "While not as busy as the other two conferences that I have attended several times in the past, we had a good number of interesting visitors to the new stand which was much admired with its huge Falklands map."

As well as the Deputy Prime Minister they welcomed Deputy Liberal Democrat Leader Simon Hughes, Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change Ed Davey and Sir Bob Smith Member for Aberdeen.

She added: "We had several visits from Jeremy Browne who repeated his thanks to everyone who welcomed him on his visit in June.

"I spotted the Argentine ambassador who made several passes by the stand before coming over with her companion. We had a brief conversation and gave her copies of all our literature which I said I hoped she would enjoy reading," said MLA Cheek.

Along with the Falkland Islands Representative in London Sukey Cameron the Falklands delegation was joined for a day by Michael Poole, "who managed to get to one of the medical related fringe activities and helped on the stand." She said the general ethos of the conference, "is intelligent and very much in support of human rights including that to self determination," and although they encountered the occasional odd comment had, "interesting debates with passing party members, but were made very welcome."

Faster cheaper broadband

GOVERNMENT has announced a new price control mechanism to regulate the prices of regulated retail services provided by Cable & Wireless.

Andrew Newman, Head of Regulatory Services said: "Overall the mechanism ensures that on average prices will decline in real terms for all the regulated services, but it grants discretion to Cable & Wireless to determine individual service prices. In practice this discretion may mean that some nominal prices could increase, but the mechanism is designed to protect the public by ensuring that prices averaged across all services will decline in real terms."

The start date for the price control mechanism is retrospectively set at April 1, 2011 and will run through to March 31, 2015. Customers can expect to see the following service improvements:

- Cheaper broadband packages from October 1, 2012 with monthly subscriptions falling by up to 25 per cent
- Faster broadband download speeds from April 2013 with Gold packages doubling in speed to 2mbps by April 1, 2014
- Increased broadband data allowance in current broadband packages over two years, commencing April 2013 with a 25 per cent across the board increase and a further 25 per cent in April 2014
- Continuation of the free night time window, available between midnight and 6am, through to 31st March 2015
- A review of mobile data services to be carried out by FIG Regulatory Services in collaboration with Cable & Wireless in July 2013

MLA Dick Sawle said the agreement was an important step forward: "Broadband prices will immediately reduce, with increases in data packages and improvements to connection speeds following in April 2013. The price control mechanism will ensure that prices continue to fall in real terms from now until 2015. It has only been possible to achieve this progress due to Regulatory Services having sufficient powers under recent amendments to the legislation - powers which FIG did not have previously."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

"If you want a job doing properly do it yourself," were the wise words Patrick Bernsen's father passed on to him (Two Minutes page 5) and it got me thinking about how Islanders are often described as resourceful and if, given how we are becoming increasingly reliant on others, we will be able to maintain that reputation.

That resourcefulness was born out of necessity in a small Island community when individuals were often isolated and had to be able to turn their hand to everything from shearing a sheep to fine tuning the generator, knocking up a batch of buns or shifting house. Do not be misled by the latter; in the Falklands shifting house can mean placing an entire house on massive sledges and quite literally shifting it to another location. The professional title for such people was "a good all-rounder," or "jack of all trades." It is an admirable trait which to my mind (although I may be a tiny bit biased) puts us head and shoulders above most others.

But, the days when a leaking pipe meant unleashing the stilsons, and a string of expletives to ensure the drip was stopped, or to keep the home fires burning you had to sharpen the spade and heave tons of peat on to the bank are rapidly disappearing. Now the most physical we get is reaching for the telephone book to find someone else to do the job for us - if we can afford it.

There are of course far more intricate tasks that have to be carried out and there are not too many who would mutter "if you want a job doing properly do it yourself," when the skills of say a doctor or a policeman are required. Or so I thought until yesterday when one friend returned triumphant from a third trip to the doctors to announce she was being treated for exactly what she had told the first one she was suffering from and another carried out some detective work Miss Marple would have been proud of.

Frustrated by the apparent lack of police excitement about her missing phone, Miss Marple got on the case and with a few well placed enquiries had soon tracked down the accidental thief. I say accidental because in fact he had picked it up in a taxi and not being able to speak English his attempts to pass it on had been misunderstood.

Case solved and my concerns that we might be losing our "good all-rounder" status dismissed, but I hasten to add I'll still be reaching for the phone book rather than the peat spade when the house needs heating...Peat Cutting Monday or otherwise.

RAF man flies out with a hefty fine

FAILURE by the police to check whether the engine of a stolen vehicle was still warm may have saved an RAF man from an immediate custodial sentence in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Sean Thomas Cannon (24) was found by police officers in a stationary military mini-bus at the main terminal car park at Mount Pleasant on the night of September 8, soon after the vehicle had been reported as missing.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the court that the keys of the vehicle were not in the ignition and a search of the vehicle and Mr Cannon had failed to locate them.

The keys were found on the ground by the passenger door of the vehicle later that night when police returned to the scene.

Mr Cannon was taken to the military police station where a lower Breathalyser reading of 158 mg per 100 ml of breath - almost five times the legal limit - was recorded. He was transported to Stanley police station during which journey he repeatedly removed his seatbelt and had to be handcuffed for his own safety, Mrs Inglis told the court.

Due to the arresting officer's failure to check the vehicle engine, Mr Cannon was consequently charged with being in charge of a vehicle while unfit through drink or drugs, to which he pleaded guilty.

Keith Watson representing Mr Cannon said the facts as related to the court had come as, "a bit of surprise," to his client who had very little recollection of the incident. Mr Watson said Mr Cannon apologised, although what he was apologising for was slightly unclear as he couldn't remember.

His client had been intoxicated to such an extent on a cold night wearing only a shirt, there was a possibility he had sought shelter in the vehicle, he said, adding that the prosecution had indeed commented on the inclement weather on the night and that the police had kindly sheltered Mr Cannon behind the vehicle while conducting their search. There was no evidence he had driven the vehicle or been in possession of the keys, he said.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said the police officers had indeed been, "very kind," to put him out of the cold and also to not check if the engine was warm.

Why the police had not made the proper enquiries as to whether the vehicle had been driven was, "beyond this court," he said, adding that it was particularly surprising given that an investigation into a vehicle being taken without consent was underway at the time. "Had we been sure you had driven the vehicle you would be facing an immediate custodial sentence," he told Mr Cannon.

Given the exemplary references put before the court by senior officers and the absence of any previous convictions, Mr Gumsley said he was able to pass sentence in the form of a "hefty fine."

Mr Cannon, who was due to leave the Islands today was ordered to pay £1,000 for the offence plus £85 prosecution costs and was disqualified from driving in the Falklands for two years.

Also in court on Wednesday was Stephen David Waterman (19) who admitted speeding on the Mount Pleasant Ring Road whilst driving a military Land Rover on August 31.

Mr Waterman was recorded driving at a speed of 41 mph in a 30 mph zone.

He was fined £70 plus £85 prosecution costs.

Year 2 reward for role-play rescue

YEAR 2 Lighthouse Keeper story enthusiasts have been rewarded for their 'search and rescue' of Mr Grinling the Lighthouse Keeper, a character in the David and Ronda Armitage books. Infant Junior School and Camp Education Deputy Head Karen Steen said the children received a letter on Monday from Mrs Grinling, the lighthouse keeper's wife, who was very concerned about her husband who had not returned on Sunday afternoon. The children created lost posters describing Mr Grinling, then used some things that were found in a search to think about what might have happened to him.

The busy little students were told on Wednesday that a note from Mrs Grinling had been received saying her husband had been found and that she had baked them a cake as a thank you.

The children enjoyed the lighthouse cake during their break on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Steen said: "The stories were brought to life to help the children develop ideas for their own story writing. They have even discovered a large lighthouse under construction in the corner of the classroom, they can often be found inside reading quietly or acting out parts of the Lighthouse Keeper stories."

Comms contract renewal for Babcock

BABCOCK have been awarded a contract to continue to support a communications system in the Falklands. The communications system is a UHF/VHF link for both voice and data communications through-out the Falkland Islands. It is operated by the UK Ministry of Defence, which provides first line system maintenance, with Babcock contracted to supply more complex system support.

Babcock provides a Resident Engineer (RE) providing support to the system as well as continuation training on the system for new military staff on arrival in the Falklands.

Babcock Defence HF Communications Service (DHFC) Head of Engineering & Logistics, Paul Herring, said: "We are delighted to have been awarded this contractual option, following successful delivery of an effective engineering support service over the last four years, demonstrating our skills and expertise in maintaining and operating legacy equipment. We will now continue to provide this service to support the communications system until 2014."

Portsmouth heads south

HMS Edinburgh left Portsmouth on Monday for her final deployment which will include the Falkland Islands.

It will be the last time a Type 42 destroyer deploys on operations as they make way for the new-generation Type 45 destroyers.

The largest of the RN Type 42 destroyers, she was launched in 1983 and will have completed 30 years of service.

HMS Edinburgh is scheduled to undertake a range of tasks across the length of the Atlantic in support of British interests worldwide. Her tasks will include supporting counter narcotics efforts in the West African region as well as providing reassurance to UK territories and dependencies in the South Atlantic such as the Falklands and South Georgia Islands.

Mike at games conference

MLA Mike Summers will today attend the Commonwealth Games Federation Conference (CGF). He told Penguin News this week, "as always there is opportunity to meet old colleagues and meet new ones."

"There is a fundamental review in progress of the CGF which will be interesting."

Penguin News hopes to offer a full report next week.

Doug wins first match

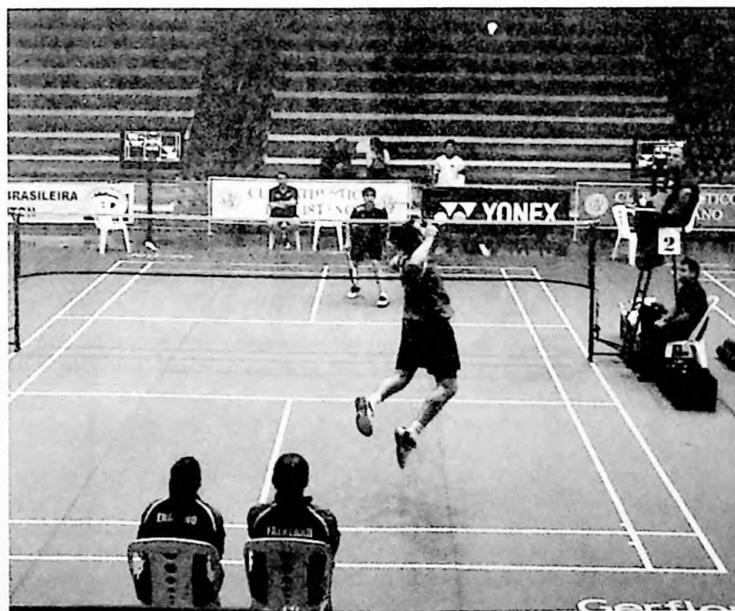

THE Stanley Badminton Club team got off to a roaring start at the Brazilian International Cup, after rapidly adapting to the different climate and court conditions.

The team made up of Doug Clarke, Mike Brownlee, Laura Minto and British Commonwealth Gold medallist Rebecca Pantaney met up in the UK for a week for training before arriving in Sao Paulo, Brazil on Tuesday where they met up with team manager Richard Short and wife Marlene.

Doug won his first round men's singles match in the qualification round 21-15, 22-20, Roxanne King who is also with the team reported on Wednesday, however Mike lost his 21-10, 21-13 so unfortunately did not proceed to the second round.

Doug then had to retire from his second round match due to a weak hamstring. He was down 21-11, 16-8. It was very frustrating, said Roxanne, "you could honestly see that had he not had an injury he would have proceeded through to the main draw of the men's singles." After a visit to the physio it was hoped Doug was fit enough for his doubles match.

Laura Minto put up a strong performance against Carolina Settani (Brazil) on Thursday afternoon, but lost the match 21-9, 21-15.

Doug playing in the first round of the men's singles qualification round. He won the match 21-15, 22-20 against 14 year old Brazilian Vinicius Eduardo Bombona Gori.

Rebecca Pantaney was leading in her match against Mariana Freitas (Brazil) at the time of going to print, while Doug and Mike were about to begin their game against Nakao Matheus and Bruno Soares de Moura (Brazil).

Mike and Laura were drawn to play Rafael Aurichio and Claudia Low (Brazil) later on Thursday afternoon and Doug and Rebecca Luis Martin and Carolina Settani.

Countries taking part in the competition are: Brazil, Falklands, Great Britain, USA, Norway, Guatemala, Peru, Cuba and Sri Lanka.

You can keep up to date with results over the weekend by checking out the Stanley Badminton Club Facebook page or www.tournamentsoftware.com

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THIS week all MLA's with the exception of Barry and I, are scattered around various parts of the world. I having just arrived back from my wanderings to Sri Lanka along with Sharon where we attended the 48th Commonwealth Parliamentary Association meetings. The theme of the conference this year was "ensuring a relevant Commonwealth for the future" and the themes of the various workshops did seem to reflect this. However, it has to be said that there are some serious underlying problems within the commonwealth grouping of nations with a chasm seeming to be opening between the African and other nations that will take some serious work and goodwill on both sides to bridge. The first and perhaps most relevant part of the week's activities was the small branches session, with such countries and branches as St Helena, New Zealand and Australia, Tasmania, the Caribbean and Indian Ocean boys, Jersey and Guernsey to name but a few being represented. The debates were interesting in as much that I could more readily identify with the problems and attitudes/solutions of the Australian/New Zealand/Indian Ocean delegations than with the more European ideals.

Both Sharon and I went with the attitude that we were going to have our tuppence worth at every opportunity and so it was with both of us getting into the debates wherever we could, although the format adopted in all the penuries didn't make for a natural debate or flow of ideas, something that was criticised and modified as the week went by (in the small Branches plenary sessions at least).

These gatherings are invaluable as it allows us easy access to politicians from many countries and an opportunity to put our messages across to people who, though not in power yet may well form governments in the future and who will have been told the truth by us before they are targeted with blatant lies and distortions from those across the way.

It is good to be back home though and am looking forward to wading back into local matters as no matter how important the international facet of the "job" is we should never forget it's our people and country who must be foremost.

Funds allocated for environmental projects

A TOTAL of £38,169 from the Environmental Studies Budget was granted to applicants for a wide range of projects at the most recent Environmental Committee meeting.

Projects amounting to £13,990 were either refused or deferred.

Jim McAdam of Queen's University, Belfast had two applications agreed. The first for £3,000 to set up a database of Environmental Literature for research and the second for £3,570 for a single year project to study the impact of invasive plant species on climate change. Senior Agriculture Advisor Andy Pollard noted that the data would be particularly valuable to his department and suggested the researchers link with the Mount Pleasant Met Centre. It was agreed that efforts would be made to find a Falklands student to do the work, prior to looking overseas.

Falkland Conservation's Al Bayliss had his application to conduct an Island wide census of Southern Sea Lions approved. The census costing £3,700 will be the first in more than ten years. Environmental Officer Nick Rendell said the results would fill a valuable knowledge gap in baseline population data.

A community engagement and interpretation strategy for a National Nature Reserve at Chartres Horse Paddock for Clare Cockwell and Falklands Conservation to the value of £3,000 was approved.

The opportunity for a Falkland Islands graduate to undertake a PhD studentship with the Shallow Marine Survey Group as a multi-year project was welcomed by the committee who acknowledged the good work undertaken by the group. £10,000 was awarded to the project.

A further application for a similar studentship to study Falkland Islands Seaweed Biodiversity for the same amount, however, was reluctantly refused. The committee acknowledged it was excellent value for money and the research would be in an area of which little is known, however, members were disappointed the PhD would be for an overseas student. They advised they would be willing to reconsider the proposal next year. Dr Paul Brickle of the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI) explained, there are very few people qualified in this area, none of whom are Falkland Islands students.

Mike Morrison will continue his survey of Nationally Threatened Plants of the Falklands this year having been granted £590 and Rockhopper penguin monitoring; camera traps for Dr T Hart to the value of £1,905 as a single year project was approved.

An application for £3,990 for travel costs for two scientists to operate a Rockhopper weighbridge at New Island was deferred pending the suggestion that a volunteer be found locally to carry out the work as the committee was not supportive of funding overseas flights.

The foraging ecology of Gentoo penguins for Falklands Conservation was granted £1,000 as was the updating Falkland Islands National Herbarium for at £999.

A £2,100 grant for invasive plant control at Saunders, Port Stephens and Stanley for Brian Summers as was £2,180 for invasive plant control; control and monitoring of spear and creeping thistles for Mr R Lewis and a trial in the control of Calafate for Richard and Toni Stevens at their farm Sussex for £1,080.

Two educational grants were approved the first being a Year 2 visit to Kidney Island for the Infant Junior School (£2,000). Andy Pollard suggested that the children could also get tussac tillers whilst on the island and do some planting in an allocated area in Stanley.

FOGL explores Scotia well

FALKLAND Oil and Gas Ltd (FOGL), the oil and gas exploration company focused on the south and east of the Falklands, announced on Tuesday that the Scotia exploration well FI 31/12-01 had been spudded.

The well is designed to test the Scotia prospect within the mid Cretaceous fan play and the well operation is expected to take around 75 days with a total depth of 5,000 meters drilled.

Scotia is the second of the company's two well exploration program using the Leiv Eriksson semi submersible drilling rig.

FOGL holds a 75 per cent interest in the company, together with its partner Edison International Spa, which holds the remaining 25 per cent.

Under a farmout agreement announced on August 6, Noble Energy Inc will also participate in the Scotia well for a 35 per cent interest, reducing the company's interest to 40 per cent.

FOGL shares closed at 69 pence on Tuesday.

Falklands play leading role at albatross and petrel conference

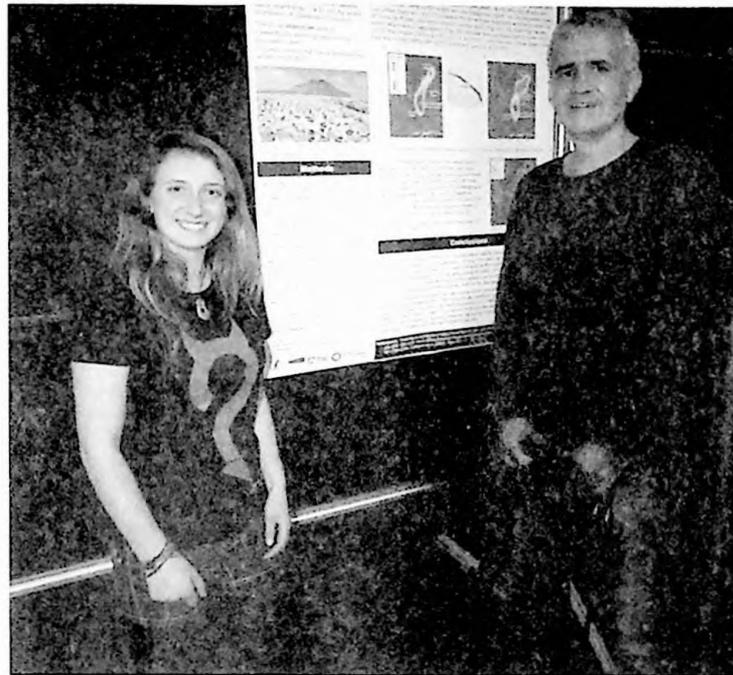

THE Falklands featured strongly at the 5th international albatross and petrel conference, recently held in Wellington, New Zealand. Skills and experience gained in the Falkland Islands was evident in many of the participants present. It was highlighted just how central the Falkland Islands is, not only to global research programmes for sub-Antarctic albatrosses and petrels, but also in playing a key role in the innovations directed at reducing the adverse effects of fishing vessels, disease and climate change.

Helen Otley, one of the participants, who is now involved with the management of penguins and petrels in New Zealand said she counted at least nine people present at the conference who had worked in the Falklands. "I'm sure part of the reason they are all considered leading scientists in the field of albatross and petrel science and conservation is due to the skills and experiences they gained whilst working in the Falklands," she said.

Those present with Falklands connections included Marilou Delignieres, the only conference participant whose family had their own albatross colony and Dr Ben Sullivan, who worked for Falklands Conservation during 2001 - 2003. Marilou has almost completed her final year of school in New Zealand and after her early life sailing to South Georgia and Antarctic, and living at Dunbar (West Falkland), has been inspired to become a seabird scientist. Marilou said: "I thought it would be such a great opportunity to go to the conference, especially because it was in the same country as I was in. It was a fantastic experience as I learnt so much and met lots of really interesting people!"

Ben Sullivan and his wife Janie had their two boys, Archie and Ziggy, now 10 and 8, during their three year stay in the Falkland Islands. Ben's role at Falklands Conservation included working on trawlers to investigate how they could be equipped with devices to reduce albatrosses getting caught on the warp cables. His work, completed together with other Falklands Conservation staff, FIFD staff, Falklands fishing companies and fishermen, resulted in tori lines being used, and the level of seabird mortality being reduced by a huge margin. "My Falklands experience meant I could spring board into a global co-ordinator role with BirdLife International's Global Seabird Programme."

Also present at the conference was Dr David Middleton, who was employed as FIFD's first locally based stock assessment scientist between 1999 and 2003.

Marilou Delignieres and Ben Sullivan at the conference

David lived in Stanley with his wife Rachel, son Sam and Falklands born daughter Fiona. The Middleton family made many friends in the Falklands and one of their many legacies was the rock path at Gypsy Cove, which was built by Rachel's father Brian Stringer. The Middletons moved to Wellington, New Zealand in 2003, where David has continued to work in the fisheries industry, with a focus on seabird mortality issues.

Dr April Hedd from Memorial University, in Newfoundland, Canada was also presenting her recent Falklands research on tracking sooty shearwaters on Kidney Island and black-browed albatrosses on Steeple Jason. April explained that sooty shearwaters link the Falklands to the North Atlantic; while breeding, shearwaters from Kidney Island feed over the Patagonian Shelf but after fledging chicks, the adults migrate far to the north and feed in waters off eastern Canada. "The shearwaters initially drew Bill Montevecchi and I to the Falkland Islands, however through collaborations with Al Baylis and Falklands Conservation, we have also identified the wintering areas of black-browed albatrosses from the world's largest colony on Steeple Jason," April explained. "While analysis of the data we obtained is still in the early stages, the data shows clear sexual segregation with females moving further north and wintering farther from the colony than males. So our tracking data is contributing to the assessment of environmental risk assessment for Falklands wildlife."

The other black-browed albatross research presented at the conference also came from the Falklands. New Island's black-browed albatross research team, which is led by Portuguese scientist Dr Paulo Catry, had a strong presence at the conference. Maria Dias talked about their research about how New Island albatrosses, when they are away from the colony during the non-breeding period, spend more time on the water during the day (probably feeding) and more time flying during the dark, except on moonlit nights. Portuguese PhD student Rafael Matias presented results on their work into how having ticks affects black-browed albatross chicks survival.

Also presenting some of the results of her PhD research on wandering albatrosses was South African Genevieve Jones who worked as a FIFD Fisheries Observer during 2005 -2006. She said, "the observer work in the Falklands taught me much about albatross and fisheries interactions." Genevieve continued her albatross work through the Percy FitzPatrick Institute of African Ornithology working on the South African subantarctic island, Marion Island.

Anton Wolfaardt, currently based in the Falklands as the UK Overseas Territories co-ordinator for the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP), reported that the conference was stimulating and productive. In addition to the formal presentations, there was a great deal of interest and discussion in the margins of the meeting about the increase in numbers of Black-browed Albatrosses breeding in the Falklands.

Talking tourism: Cartegna and commissions

SALLY Ellis and Cathy Jacobsen offered Falklands representation at the 36th Travel Mart Latin America in Cartagena this month under the auspices of International Tours & Travel. Falkland Islands Holidays were scheduled to attend but unfortunately had to cancel at the last minute.

Sally Ellis takes up the report. As always this was a busy two days of pre-scheduled appointments as well as networking at social events and spreading information on the Falklands as much as possible.

In addition to the meetings, a presentation given by the Latin America Travel Association provided a valuable insight into the UK market. The trend in UK market (by far our biggest) is for niche markets and this includes wildlife (wildlife and birding fairs are on the rise in the UK), but also charity groups and gastronomic tours both of which could be incorporated into a Falklands itinerary. Celebrity endorsement is always a big pull so of course I have been racking my brains over whom I might have been mooning over recently and who might care to give their thumbs up to a penguin holiday.

Having as many agencies as possible promoting and marketing the Falklands will help us to sell ourselves to those niche markets.

However, while many of you will think I sound like a broken record on the commission issue, it is the one that continues to be the largest hurdle for us in terms of

As the beginning of the tourism season draws near, Sally Ellis of International Tours and Travel in Stanley describes her visit to Travel Mart Latin America, held this year in Cartegna, and picks up on important issues that affect the success of land based tourism in the Falkland Islands increasing our marketing power and therefore sales and increasing income and visitor numbers to the Falklands for land-based tourism.

A Falkland Islander who works in the tourism industry overseas told me that her company is inclined to put the phone down on anyone who does not offer commission.

While our industry is too small for us to do that here it is almost the reaction of tour operators, and definitely the heavy weight wholesalers, when we advise that them that we have no commission structure in the Falklands.

Despite the fact that the internet allows customers more freedom to research and book their own holidays there is still a demand for tour operators and travel agencies but we are just expected to be much more knowledgeable about the destination we are selling so that we can endorse and add to the information already researched online by the client.

Particularly with long haul holidays such as the Falklands, the added attraction of booking through an operator is the financial protection it provides and the fact that we take away the logistical pressure when things do not quite go according to plan.

However, on a more positive note, it was interesting to hear reports from UK advising that value adding to holidays and services is critical in these times to ensure good value for money and increased income. The message was clear: it doesn't cost the earth to provide a good holiday, and in conjunction with offering a great experience you can also increase your revenue by some very simple measures: good guiding services, the opportunity to see the same sites but in different ways (walking, cycling, riding rather than in a vehicle), adding local flavour to your usual services (a Falklands themed packed lunch or gourmet evening meal) are all ways of making the client feel they are being offered an additional product for which you can then charge a premium.

The above is particularly important given the stiff competition Latin America (and indeed many other destinations) faces from Asian destinations which offer good value holidays. Often a two week all inclusive package will be similar in cost to just the flights to South America. However the flip side of the coin is that the Asian market is also going from strength to strength and I know it is one our new Managing Director at the Tourist Board rates highly as a new source of business.

Further, it was encouraging to hear endorsement of destinations offering accommodation to all markets. This further cements my belief that we are not stepping beyond our requirements in aiming for a high end market five star accommodation.

While for the North American market there is no doubt that it has to be developed in tandem with better air links (to accommodate the short leave time), for the British market the trend is for combining standards of accommodation throughout a holiday; probably concentrating principally on three star accommodation but treating themselves to a five star property for a couple of nights.

Attendance at such shows is always invigorating and makes me feel full of enthusiasm for the season ahead. I hope everyone is feeling positive and ready to give it our best.

Sex and race discrimination in recruitment

Alison Inglis of the Attorney General's Chambers offers information to employers in relation to sex and race discrimination

AS the economy expands and employers look to recruit more staff, now may be the time to review your current procedures to make sure they comply fully with the law.

The Sex Discrimination Ordinance makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against women (a) in the arrangements the employer makes for the purpose of determining who should be offered employment, or (b) in the terms on which the employer offers a woman employment, or (c) by refusing or deliberately omitting to offer a woman employment. The provisions apply equally to discrimination against men.

Discrimination can be direct, where a woman (or a man) is treated less favourably on the ground of her (or his) sex.

Discrimination can also be indirect, where an employer applies to the detriment of a woman (or a man) a condition which applies equally to the other sex but which fewer women (or men) can comply with, and which the employer cannot show to be justifiable.

Similar provisions apply under the Race Relations Ordinance, which applies the Race Relations Act 1976 to the Falkland Islands. The Act makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate directly or indirectly against any person on the grounds of their colour, race, nationality, or ethnic or national origins.

An example of direct discrimination is the school which refuses to employ male teachers, or the farmer who insists on employing persons born in Europe.

An example of indirect discrimination is the publican who refuses to employ bar staff who are less than six foot in height. Far fewer women than men reach this height, but the job itself cannot justify a height requirement.

Another example of indirect discrimination is the road-building contractor who will only recruit persons who speak Spanish. This discriminates on the grounds of national origins against anyone who was not brought up in a Spanish-speaking region.

Discrimination in recruitment, promotion, training or dismissal from employment is not unlawful if the employer can show that sex or race is a genuine occupational qualification for a particular job. In sex discrimination, genuine occupational qualifications usually relate to reasons of preservation of decency or privacy; they cannot relate to physical strength or stamina. In race discrimination, genuine occupational qualifications primarily cover actors, models and restaurant staff where for reasons of authenticity a person of a particular racial group is required.

Employers should take particular care when writing job adverts to make sure they cannot be interpreted as evidence of an intention to discriminate (eg. by using words applying to one sex only such as actress or salesman).

Anybody who can show that they have been discriminated against in recruitment on the grounds of their sex or race can bring court proceedings against the employer. If the court upholds the claim, it will make a declaration as to the rights of both parties. The court may also order the employer to pay compensation, or recommend that the employer take action to minimise the effects of the discrimination on the individual concerned.

In addition to recruitment practices, other forms of unlawful discrimination in the employment sphere include treating a married person less favourably than an unmarried person; restricting an employee's access to promotion, transfer, training or other benefits on the ground of their sex or race; or victimising a person for bringing proceedings or giving evidence in cases of sex or race discrimination.

The legislation also protects everyone against sex or race discrimination in the fields of education, vocational training, trade union membership, the provision of goods or services, and the letting of premises. Hard copies of local legislation are available in the Community Library or email bsteen@sec.gov.fk to request electronic copies. The Race Relations Act 1976 can be accessed on-line at www.legislation.gov.uk

VP-FAH as she was in the Falkland Islands and Sukey Cameron in Vancouver with the ex FIGAS Beaver float plane

Canada reunion with old flying friend

ON holiday on Vancouver Island, Canada, Falkland Islands Government Representative in London, Sukey Cameron was recently reunited with one of the ex Falkland Islands Government Air Service (FIGAS) Beaver float planes that she had flown in as a child in the 1960s.

Sukey told Penguin News the reunion took place at the Harbour Air Terminal in Victoria on Sunday August 26.

The plane, built in 1958 and first flown in the Islands by Jim Kerr on August 19, 1958, flew for FIGAS under registration VP-

Its last-known FIGAS flight was on January 5, 1967.

Sold in the USA, it departed (crated) on the RMS Darwin in late 1967 or early 1968 for Montevideo, Uruguay, and onward trans-shipment to the USA where it was registered as N17598.

The plane, still registered as N17598, is now operated by Kenmore Air in Seattle and regularly flies up to Vancouver Island.

Kenmore Air itself has an interesting history. Three high school friends reunited after World War II and founded the company in 1946. With one airplane and a single hangar near a swamp at the North end of Lake Washington, Bob Munro, Reg Collins and Jack Mines created what was to become one of the largest and most respected seaplane operations in the world.

Sukey said information about the aircraft was provided by Falkland Islands Aviation historian and Co-author of 'Falklands-The Air War' Douglas Rough and the reunion was made possible through his contact in Canada, Neil Aird who is recognised worldwide as the DHC-2 Beaver expert (see website www.dhc-2.com) and Rob Ritchie, the Maintenance Manager at Kenmore.

In addition to 'Falklands-The Air War' Douglas, between 2005 and 2007, wrote a series of eight, profusely illustrated (mostly colour) articles on 'The Falkland Islands Civil Aircraft Register'.

PDF CDs of those articles are lodged with the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust and the Government Archives in Stanley and are available for those interested to peruse at leisure and provide the basis of any individual's research on the subject.

Tucutuju and the public jetty

THE area surrounding the Public Jetty has much historical interest: for many years the place where visitors arriving by sea first stepped onshore as well as the crews from the hundreds of ships which had called for repairs, provisions or to bring cargo.

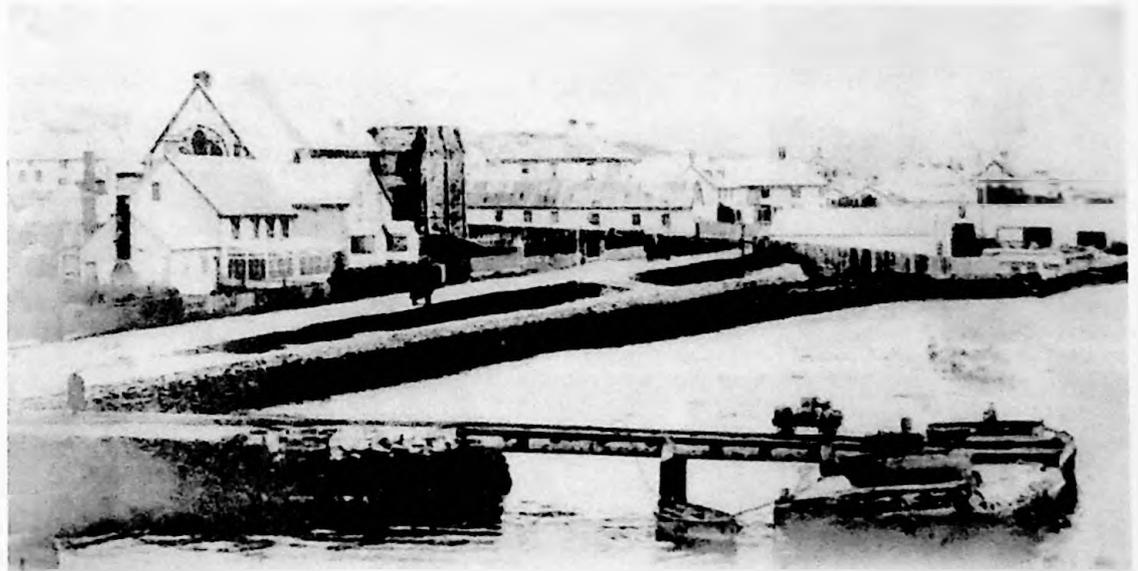

It was a busy waterfront from which developed the commercial part of the town with pubs, warehouses and business premises.

Sometimes known as the Alfred Pier after the Falklands first Royal visit, the original jetty went out only as far as the stonework section at the end of which was scuttled the Tucutuju an enigmatic old 80 ton schooner whose remains lie deep inside it when the jetty was extended years later.

The unusual name is that of a Peruvian Indian tribe; correct pronunciation has always been baffling, she was always known locally as the 'Chuckity Choo'.

Her first appearance in the Shipping Register was during November 1872 under the Uruguayan flag.

For many years afterwards she appeared sporadically, calling sometimes with survivors or wrecked cargo and other times 'off' on a sealing cruise'.

Falkland Islands.

Stanley looking South West

Once under the command of one Nelson O' Brian she called to report the loss of the Mate overboard.

It would appear that much of her time was spent lurking in the shelter of the steep sided mountainous inlets of desolate and wild Staten Island to the east of Cape Horn, lying in wait to go to the many vessels in distress or lost in that treacherous region.

Just how Tucutuju came eventually to be condemned at Stanley is not on record but she was scuttled during 1890 to form a head to the jetty.

Looking in the brief formal entries in the Shipping Register recording Tucutuju's movements, one is left with the distinct feeling that there is much more to be said about her goings on in the Falklands and Cape Horn region.

What is unsaid creates the most interest, but details of that will never be known. The Tucutuju has kept her secrets; her several Captains over the years must have been superb seamen with a sharp entrepreneurial spirit, which combined with initiative and acceptance of risk, enabled them to make much money from the misfortunes of others.

'Top dollar' fund raising at Conservation Charity Ball

FALKLANDS Conservation will be close to £25,000 richer following its glamorous annual charity ball held this year at the Town Hall last Friday evening.

Organiser Sarah Clement of SeAled PR confirmed more than £23,000 had been raised from the sale of auction items, sealed bids and from the raffle, however, bar sales had yet to be counted at the time of Penguin News going to print.

Guests of the Consolidated Fisheries Ltd sponsored event enjoyed a complimentary bottle of champagne on their table followed by a delicious cold platter and bread basket that included beef, toothfish mousse, chicken liver and Upland Goose parfait, smoked salmon, pork, hams chicken, asparagus and artichokes, bruschetta and sun blush tomatoes all provided by Malvina House Hotel.

An exciting dessert station catered to the fun atmosphere with toffee apples, a chocolate fountain, gingerbread men, Eton mess, brownies kebabs and profiterole.

If that were not enough, a massive and attractive cheese board was a perfect foil to the generous wine and champagne list at the bar.

The full bar also provided appropriately named cocktails such as Penguin Punch, Rocky's Revenge and Ugly Stinker.

Andrew Newman was the lively auctioneer for the evening and the top auction item of an Antarctic cruise with OneOcean Expeditions was purchased by Andrea Clausen.

Jenny Anderson won the travel raffle and Timmy Bonner the oil flight. After speeches thanking the sponsors and those who generously provided auction items, guests shook down their meal on the dance floor courtesy of music by the always popular local band The Pushers (of music).

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill

The Wool Market Report - 20 September 2012
 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

LAST weeks positive sales were a one of demand based increase. The Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market closed at AU$946cents/kg clean a reduction of 12 cents.

A particularly high sales volume was seen this week, nearly 10,000 more bales than last week. This caused a slip in sale rate to 89%. It looks like the general trend over the next few months will be for prices to decline or flatten, however due to the nature of the textile supply chain to keep low stocks the prices will spike randomly based on sudden purchases by large textile manufacturers, predominantly in China.

Although the prices look low in comparison to last year, looking back to 2010 prices in September we are still between 100 and 150 pence higher in the Falkland micron range.

| Week ending | Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category. | | | | | | | | | | | |

Martyn and Sharon claim top spots in Globe Tavern 32/16

THE 32 top men Stanley Darts League players and top 16 women gathered in the Globe Tavern on Saturday for one of the most popular tournaments of the season.

Sponsored by the Globe who provided prizes and a slap up feed for all and organised by Richard Bonner the 501 straight start competition provided a high standard of darts in a lively atmosphere.

Number one seed Toot Ford got off to a flying start with a 3-0 win over John Smith and followed it up with a 3-1 victory over Roy Shepherd with Angus Macaskill his next victim as he queued up on the semi-final oche. Meanwhile number seven seed Chris Lloyd who has enjoyed a successful season of tournaments was making his way through a list of good players which included David Phillips, Mike Moyce and number three seed Alan Bonner to take up the challenge. Toot ensured his place in the final with a 4-1 win over Chris.

Number four seed Lenny Ford made an early exit at the hands of Troy Bagley and Michael Goss fared no better. However Kevin Clapp was on a roll having beaten Phil Kearney and Bobby Short and he proved more than a match for Troy.

Number one seed Martyn Clarke had convincing wins over Mark Dodd, Jonny Ford and Jamie Lang to take Kevin on in the semi-final and seal his place in the final with a 4-0 win. The battle was on and the appreciative spectators were treated to a high class match with Martyn getting progressively stronger as he built the score up to five legs to Toot's three to claim the cup.

The ladies tournament was equally exciting as old darts friends and foes recalled previous matches and tried to better their opponents.

Number five seed Hazel Collins worked her way steadily to the final with 2-0 wins over Lynda Buckland and Nora Smith and a 2-1 win over Ann Murphy.

At the other side of the draw number two seed Sharon Jaffray mirrored her results with 2-0 wins over Kat Lowe and Cherry Robson and a 2-1 victory over Lizzie Newton. Sharon managed to hold on to her form in the seven leg final securing the match in the sixth leg with a 4-2 victory over Hazel.

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

Full-time/Part-time Customer Service Assistants are required for the Falkland Islands Company Limited.
Applicants must be aged 18 years and over and be willing to work flexible hours, including weekends, evenings and public holidays. You should be pleasant, confident, will need to be versatile and happy to undertake any aspect of work within the West Store Complex including Cafe, Peacocks, Warehouse, and Capstan Gift Shop. The position will include the operation of computerised tills and organising of new stock.
For further information, please contact Tara Francis on 27635
Application forms are available from the West Store Foodhall.

The Falkland Islands Company Ltd has immediate vacancies for experienced mechanics in the Crozier Place garage
The Automotive Department is currently undergoing a complete refurbishment and re-branding, and we are looking for experienced mechanics to help carry the business forward.

Applicants must be experienced in servicing and repair operations on light 4x4 vehicles and experience in HGV/PSV and small boat maintenance would be an advantage.
A full driving license is essential and HGV or PSV1 licenses would be an advantage. Rate of pay will be dependent on the successful applicant's experience.
Competitive rates of pay are available to the successful applicant depending on qualifications and/or experience.
Applicants should contact James Bates on telephone 27678 during working hours for further details of the post. Closing for this application is Friday 12th October 2012.

Part time assistant.
A new and exciting opportunity has arisen within the FIC Automotive Department, (shortly to be known as "Falklands 4x4") for a showroom/spares assistant. This position is a part time vacancy that will include Saturday's from 10am until 4pm, in the new purpose built showroom on Crozier Place, plus the possibility of a day during the week in the spares dept. It is envisaged that up to 20hrs per week are on offer initially. Primary roles will include answering calls, dealing with customers queries, sales, general clerical duties as well as assisting other members of the dept in the busy spares section. Candidates should be pleasant, well turned out, of sober habits and have excellent interpersonal skills and be able to work well within a team. Most crucially, they must be prepared to work most Saturday's.
Competitive rates of pay are available to the right candidate.
For more information and an application form, please contact James Bates, Manager on 27678 or e-mail fic.auto@horizon.co.fk
Closing date for this position is 12/10/12

We are looking to employ a manager to run our Electrical Department at the West Store Complex. The successful candidate will be responsible for the day to day running of the department. Key responsibilities will include ordering of stock, sales and customer service, stock presentation and management, people management, departmental operations and any administrative duties as required.
Applicant should ideally have a passion for retail, willing to face challenges and be able to motivate and develop staff whilst going that extra mile to ensure good customer service. Familiarity with the Epos tilling system would also be an advantage. Preference will be given to the candidate who has experience in a similar role.
The successful applicant must be prepared to work evenings, weekends and public holidays and be particularly flexible during the busy tourist season.
For further information, please contact the West Store Manager Tara Francis on 27635.

FALKLAND ISLANDS TELEVISION
Falklands Island Television Limited will have a vacancy for the position of Producer / Presenter / Editor from 5th November 2012. The successful candidate will have a major influence on the production of advertisements on the TV channel as well as the production of feature programmes on "Falklands in Focus" produced twice a week.
The successful candidate will be expected to have a flexible approach to working hours due to the nature of the job.
Interested parties must have at least one year of previous experience working for a television production company and have a full driving licence. Candidates must be computer literate and previous editing experience with Final Cut Pro is essential.
The successful applicant will be expected to read fluently with the aid of an autocue in front of camera and therefore all eligible applicants will be required to pass a screen test.
For further information please contact Gareth Goodwin on 22622. Applications should be submitted to Gareth Goodwin, Director, Falkland Islands Television Limited, Airport Road, Stanley. (e-mail ggoodwin@fitv.co.fk) by 19th October 2012.

SECRETARY - FALKLAND ISLANDS FISHING COMPANIES ASSOCIATION
Room 11, Stanley Services, By-Pass Road
A part time secretary is required for the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association. The hours, which will be around 12 hours a week, can be arranged to suit the Association and the successful applicant.
The Association represents the interests of fishing companies registered in the Falkland Islands which own fishing rights.
Duties will include communication with Association members, coordinating and drafting responses from the industry to issues raised by other bodies such as Conservation, FIFD and the Agriculture and Veterinary Department, dealing with correspondence, basic book keeping using Excel 2010, scheduling and arranging meetings, minute taking, arranging industry presence at international exhibitions and the normal range of office tasks.
Depending upon experience the successful applicant may be required to represent the Association on relevant industry and Government Committees.
For an application form or further information please contact Alison Nye on 22317 or at fifca@horizon.co.fk

VACANCY FOR FINANCIAL CONTROLLER
Stanley Services Limited will have a vacancy for the position of Financial Controller with effect from 5th November 2012. The successful candidate will have a major influence on the management of the Company and will have full responsibility for all aspects of accounting, administration, systems development and controls. The successful candidate must be a professionally qualified Accountant (ACA/ACCA/ACMA) with at least ten years post qualification accounting experience as a Financial Controller working in the fuel distribution and hospitality industry sectors.
To apply, please write enclosing your CV and current salary details to: Mr RJ Rowlands, Stanley Services Limited, PO Box 117, Stanley. Applications must be received by 19 October 2012.

Notification of Routine Military Training Exercises

British Forces South Atlantic Islands (BFSAI) will be undertaking routine Training Exercises during October 2012.
 These exercises are part of the normal training cycle for the forces at Mount Pleasant and are an example of the excellent joint service training benefits offered by the Falkland Islands.
 The exercises will involve a variety of joint service personnel and equipment and will take place in and around the Mount Pleasant Complex and other training areas. These may involve activities, such as simulated security threats, in order to test responses by the resident Armed Forces. These activities are not a cause for concern and members of the public are encouraged to continue with their normal business. Falkland Islands authorities have been notified about the exercises. Exercises routinely last only for a few days.
 Any questions regarding the exercises should be directed to the Civil Military Liaison Officer on 76845.

High catches lower prices

THE Falklands fishing industry has encountered the highest Loligo squid catch for 16 years, however, this could negatively affect the price for the industry.

The catch for the year was 70,700 tonnes (for both first and second seasons) although there have been a number of years quite close to that confirmed Director of Fisheries John Barton

Chair of the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association Cheryl Roberts said. "The oceanographic conditions have been excellent for the Loligo, plus the amount of plankton available to them has culminated in their abundance."

Asked how the bumper crop might affect prices she said: "Obviously any market which is suddenly saturated with an excess of stock will suffer an effect on price and this is an issue which obviously concerns the industry greatly and one we are all currently working on."

Hamish Wylie of Seafish Ltd said catches had also been unusually high on high seas: "This was due to an unusually strong Falkland current that has swept Loligo north of the Falklands zone from inshore earlier in the season."

Regarding price he added: "Positive as this may appear, the annual market consumption for our Loligo is generally accepted to be in the region of 40 – 45,000mt per annum."

"Not accounting for highseas catches, the average for 2010 - 2012 comes in at just over 57,000mt. So the surplus supply, most of it generated this year, is having a negative effect on prices, and we expect prices to fall significantly further this year."

The average for 2009 to 2011 stood at 44,200mt, and prices up until now were good, protecting the industry to a degree against much higher fuel prices, however, "the fear is that a poor season next year, as is statistically highly likely, coupled with very low market prices will mean that there are probably a couple of difficult years ahead. That of course is the nature of the industry, so we need to retain reserves from the good years to see us through the lean years," said Mr Wylie.

Delegation thanked for conference loyalty

GENERAL Secretary of the Labour Party, Ian McNicoll made a point of thanking Falkland Islands representatives for their twenty four years of support for the Labour Party Conference while visiting the stand at the conference this week.

Member of Legislative Assembly Ian Hansen who attended with MLA Jan Cheek and Falkland Islands

Government Representative in London Sukey Cameron, told Penguin News yesterday. "We had a number of visitors from the diplomatic community and, encouragingly, a large number of students who were very interested to learn about the Islands."

On Wednesday, Michael Poole, Hospital Manager, joined the group for the day, attending a fringe event and a two hour question and answer session with Ed Milliband.

They also met, "most of the shadow cabinet," and a dozen or more MPS who had visited the Islands over the years. He said interest in the Falklands was, as always, high.

On Saturday they travel to Birmingham for the Conservative Party Conference which begins on Sunday.

Blacksmith Shop history in shiny new showroom

ORIGINAL features in a building of huge historic significance will be displayed to the public alongside gleaming new vehicles in the new FIC automotive showroom when it opens to the public next month.

The old Blacksmith Shop has had a complete re-fit explained Automotive Manager James Bates this week.

"We want to attract new business and to do so we need to meet certain standards," he said adding, "we are taking the business in a new direction, it's a Land Rover dealership and we want it to look like one."

At the same time Mr Bates was determined that the beautiful old features, including gigantic ship beams in the roof, an old chimney, brick walls and many of the old windows should be retained.

New windows allowing light

into the showroom have been added along with white walls that call attention to the original features.

Around three quarters of a million pounds has been spent on the showroom including a total re-fit of the garages plus a parking hard stand, and the showroom will also, include exciting new lines for sale, said Mr Bates.

Modern offices to the rear of the showroom have been included as part of the renovation.

The premises which had been in a state of deterioration for many years, and has now been given a new lease of life, is thought to date back to 1890, and as well as being a Blacksmith shop was also a ship repair facility.

Historic photographs of the FIC buildings and early vehicles will also adorn the walls.

The champagne reception to launch the showroom will take place on November 5 and it will be open for business the following day.

Mr Bates said he would like to invite the general public, "just to have a nose and see the transformation for themselves."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE most young Islanders today can happily list a host of educational advantages that far outstrip those available in years gone by, I still claim that nothing quite compares to my own childhood blessing of having an FIC warehouseman for a grandfather. Odd as that sounds, its boon was to offer a sneaky first peep at the crates of charitably donated Ranfurly library books shipped to countries without access to larger libraries.

While advertising my early years as a lurky little book thief probably isn't entirely appropriate, I can't apologise for the interception of some fascinating subject matter without which I would not have become an eight year old expert on 1920s boxer Jack Dempsey, or developed the ability to bore grown-ups rigid with a ridiculous amount of detail about Louis Armstrong's teenage years.

Probably the most fascinating treatise I ever misappropriated was a dusty copy of Dale Carnegie's best selling self help book, 'How to win friends and influence people'. Now while its rules are not ones I've always followed by any means slavishly, his wise advice that you cannot change a person's opinion with rude and aggressive argument stuck in my head. To this day it has me diligently toning down parts of the editorial minutes before going to print or holding back from bashing the 'send' button immediately after rattling out a ranty email.

As such, when I read the readers letter (page 7) it was immediately clear this wasn't a person who had ever read Dale Carnegie. How he believes that by referring to Islanders as 'narrow-minded' and 'insular' and insinuating they are led by the nose by governments, will persuade them to his point of view is beyond me. But this is a country that moots freedom of expression so I won't dwell on the subjective but turn to the objective. The writer notes, "if you are going to have a fair referendum then you cannot simply just hold a referendum without any kind of associated campaigns for and against. Argentina should be given every opportunity to mount a 'yes' campaign for full or shared sovereignty."

Well happily for us it seems we're not such a bunch of ignorant hillbillies lead by a manipulative and corrupt regime. The most recent Executive Council paper on the referendum made it clear the question will be submitted to an independent international body; that the referendum will be observed by representatives from different countries (including South America) and finally on the issue of campaigning: "It is inherent in the concept of a referendum that there is an opportunity in the run up to the referendum for voters to explore and debate the subject matter of the referendum. This can manifest itself in distinct yes and no campaigns, advertising posters public meetings and debates demonstrations etc."

I'm sure the Argentine Government is very welcome to give their tuppence worth; but I rather think they will be the ones reluctant to become involved, bearing in mind to do so would recognise the authority of the Falkland Islands Government over the Falklands.

There's so much more I could say about the gentleman's opinions but how about I leave that to you?

The pitter patter of Happy Feet

PARENTS with young children will have more choice of where to send their offspring for day care in the new year as Happy Feet opens its doors for business.

The brainchild of Islander Linda McRae who recognised a need in the market, Happy Feet is a new child care centre which will be operated from 2 H Jones Road and will cater for 0-8 year olds. Places are being snapped up at an amazing speed, said Linda who added that some expectant mothers had even expressed an interest in places for their new arrivals.

Linda has two grown up children of her own and three grandchildren and spent nine years working as a Learning Support Assistant (LSA) at the Infant and Junior School. "I missed the kids from school and talking to parents there seemed to be a real need for more child care facilities so as to offer more choice," she told Penguin News.

Assisted by her equally experienced sister Valarie Dickson, Linda hopes to eventually be able to take on between 15-20 children, and intends to follow UK guideline ratios for carers and children.

Interest has already been shown from people who would like to work with Linda at the nursery in the future.

Healthy meals and lots of activities are on the agenda for Happy Feet attendees and there is a secure and sheltered play area around the house. "I'm not a great believer in children sitting in front of the television for most of the day," Linda said.

Call Linda on 55991 for more information on what the nursery can offer your child.

Fun day and flyaway raffle

THE Falkland Islands Girl Guides Association held a Fun Day on Saturday raising funds for the Association.

The day was filled with crafts and activities for all children to make or win. There was design your own mugs and candles, bracelet making and seafish mobiles to name but a few of the activities, as well as hoopla, tom-bola, hook a duck, penalty shoot out and bean bag throwing with the bouncy castle kindly donated for the day by NCB Solutions.

The Flyaway Raffle and Multi Raffle draws ended the day. The Guide Association would like to thank all the companies and individuals that donated to the multi-affle.

The winners of the Flyaway raffle were 1st prize - £1600 - Ticket No: 31511: Gavin and Deidre Marsh, Tracey and Rag Macaskill, Ally Bonner and Johnny Summers. 2nd Prize - £300 - Ticket No: 31331: James Lee. 3rd Prize - £150 - Ticket 30441: Regan Newman.

All funds raised will go towards repair works on the Guide Head Quarters, the Brownie Centenary next year and general activities for all three sections. If you would like to join one of the sections or help out please contact Cherie Clifford on 52402.

First birthday for Beavers

Beavers, Cubs and Scouts gather around a sparkling beaver cake made by Mrs Lee

Les Harris collects his Group Warrant from the Governor

BEAVER Scouts celebrated their first birthday on Tuesday, and were joined by special guest HE the Governor Nigel Haywood.

Before the party could get started the Beaver gang welcomed two new recruits, Brooke Whistler and Harry Goodwin. Richie Short joined the Cub Scouts and Scouts were re-established by Max Rowlands, Glyn Morrison and Morgan Harris making their oaths of allegiance.

The Governor presented badges to club members and official Scout Group Warrants to Mark Neaves (Assistant Cub Scout Leader) and to Les and Jill Harris, who will run the reformed Scout Group. Pack Helper Certificates were awarded to Karen Lee for helping Beavers and Cynthia Williams for helping Beavers and Cubs. In rejoining, Les and Jill Harris also received their five years service awards.

Industrious organiser Jan Miller thanked the many helpers who make the group a growing success; and they in turn expressed their appreciation for her hard work with the children.

The Scout hut is benefiting from ongoing refurbishment, with new hardwearing flooring, repairs and with a lick of paint it is hoped the revamped hut will serve the Scout groups for many years.

Tanzania meetings 'positive'

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers described his meeting on Tuesday with the Tanzanian Ministry of Foreign Affairs as, "positive."

MLA Summers had an appointment with Tanzanian Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation, Mr Bernard Membe, in Dar es Salaam to discuss the Falkland Islands post-colonial status and the referendum planned for 2013 in the face of continued sovereignty claims from Argentina.

He told Penguin News, "they were very grateful to have heard directly from the Falkland Islands and are much more likely to be persuaded to take a position. They are members of the C24."

Speaking to Tanzanian newspapers earlier in the week he was quoted as saying: "Falkland Islanders are comfortable with the post-colonial relationship with the UK and do not wish to be re-colonised by Argentina."

He was accompanied by the Deputy British High Commissioner to Tanzania, Mr Julian Chandler.

MLA Summers explained he was seeking Tanzania's support as a member of the UN Committee on Decolonisation (C 24), and, "it would be wise for it and other countries that are part of the process to look at the wishes of the people of the area rather than interests of the colonial powers."

He added that the post-colonial position under Britain is also confirmed in the Islands' constitution of 2009. He said a number of countries supported the wishes of the Islanders but there were a number, particularly the Latin America nations, that backed Argentina.

CGF

Also during his overseas trip MLA Summers attended the Commonwealth Games Federation (CGF) Conference.

He said: "The CGF meetings went well. Much of the content was about the review of the CGF and the Commonwealth Games, and there is a lot to look forward to for the Falklands. The CGF is likely to do a lot more development work which will help us. Preparations for Glasgow seem to be going well."

MLAs at work abroad

CHIEF Minister Fabian Picardo hosted the annual Gibraltar Government reception at the Labour Party Conference in Manchester on Sunday. The reception was attended by a large number of Labour MPs and Councillors from the United Kingdom as well as Falklands MLAs Jan Cheek and Ian Hansen.

Badminton team return from Brazil

THE Stanley Badminton Club completed the Brazil International Gustavo Prata Badminton Cup defeated on the court, but triumphant in their ability to make new friends for the Falklands.

The team consisting of Doug Clark, Mike Brownlee, Laura Minto and Rebecca Pantaney departed Sao Paulo on Monday.

As reported last week Doug won his first round men's singles match but had to retire from the second round due to a weak hamstring. Laura Minto put up a strong performance against Caroline Setanni, but finally lost the match 21-9, 21-15. Rebecca Pantaney won her match against Mariana Freitas 21-13, 21-13 and went on to beat Renata Faustino 21-18, 17-21, 21-9, however her luck ran out against Brazilian Yasmin Cury with a 21-11, 21-12 defeat.

Doug and Mike put up a good fight in the men's doubles managing to get to 18 points in each set while no score was available on the official website for Mike and Laura's mixed doubles match which was declared a walkover. Doug and Rebecca achieved one set in their mixed doubles match.

PPL with flying colours

FLYING the Falklands flag in style on Thursday was Marilou Deligniers as she earned her Private Pilots Licence (PPL) in New Zealand.

Marilou from Dunbar farm on West Falklands travelled to New Zealand in February last year to continue her studies at Mt Aspiring College, having successfully completed her GCSEs with English as her third language.

Her examiners at Wanaka Flight Training (a fully certified and approved CAA Part 141 flying school located at Wanaka Airport in the South Island of New Zealand) said she had diligently worked through all her flying exams getting fantastic results, plus managing to keep up good grades with her school work. "She has proved herself to be a safe and talented young pilot and a most respected student.

"We are all so proud of her today as she gained her pilots licence," said a spokesperson for the flying school.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

WELL, here we are almost a year away from the next election and rather than the 'lame duck' feeling setting in, there seems to be more and more that needs doing. This is truly an exciting time we are entering and I am so glad that I am part of it. We must get this right first time, to make sure we get the maximum benefit for our country and people.

I am happily starting to get stuck into the local scene again and I guess this week's ramble could be titled 'of lamp posts and noisy neighbours'. The erection of the leaning lamp post at the top of Philomel hill plus the digging of ditches at the bottom of the harbour was not our finest hour. FIG do not need to go via the planning route at present, but these two instances made me ponder on whether we should. I did ask that the matter be discussed at GPC but due to work commitments I was not present. I am certainly not giving up on this. I believe that FIG should (for new projects/builds etc) subject itself to the planning process. This allows for public scrutiny and input. I don't believe we even need to change the law. An undertaking by ExCo to comply with planning should be enough, although there might need to be a clause for any emergency works to be exempt.

Similarly, I think that we should now be aiming to put power underground in old Stanley (the newer parts already go underground). It would be a gradual process, being undertaken as and when lines or poles require replacing but the downside would be that there would have to be intermittent disruptions as roads were cut to allow cables to go under. I really would like to know what the public thinks about this.

I believe the problem of noisy neighbours was raised at the last Police Committee and the St Helenian legislation that we had hoped may work for us was deemed not to be suitable. Likewise the UK laws seem to be too complicated. Going back to the CPA, I made some good contacts there and some will be hearing from me as I would like to know how they deal with this problem. It is an issue that I am not going to allow to be put into the 'too difficult' tray. There has to be a relatively simple, common sense way forward on this.

Invasion leader Büsser dies under house arrest

REAR-Admiral Carlos Büsser, the Argentine naval officer who led the invasion of the Falklands by Argentine troops on the night of April 1, 1982 has died aged 84.

He was the man to whom the Falklands Governor Rex Hunt uttered his famous words, "This is British territory. You're not invited. We don't want you here. I want you to go now and take all your men."

Like many 'heroes' of the invasion, Büsser was later accused of having overseen torture and human rights abuses during the 1970s and spent his final years under house arrest.

In 2009 Büsser was arrested and taken into custody for his alleged participation in human rights abuses at Argentina's main naval base, Puerto Belgrano, in the 1970s. Prosecutors accused him of involvement in the torture and disappearance of three men, including a former intelligence officer said to have been tortured into confessing that he was a Chilean double agent. Although he was never convicted, Büsser remained under house arrest until his death.

Büsser during the 1982 occupation

Carlos Alberto César Büsser was born on January 10, 1928 in the city of Rosario, in the Santa Fe region of Argentina. He trained at Naval School and later obtained a degree in Business Administration.

He was close to Admiral Eduardo Emilio Massera, the Navy's representative on the military junta that ousted President Isabelita Peron in 1976 and served for a time as Under Secretary of Public Information.

In April 1982 Büsser was given responsibility for 'Operation Rosario' as head of the Argentine Marines Fifth battalion and after the Argentine surrender to British troops on June 14, he was appointed chairman of the Argentine Joint Chiefs of Staff, a post he occupied until the restoration of democracy in Argentina in 1983.

Carlos Büsser is survived by his wife Delia and their children.

Change of directors role

THE appointment of David Jenkins to the post of Director of Health and Social Services was announced on Tuesday. Mr Jenkins is the current Director of Health and Education and will take up his new role with effect from January 2013 following a restructure which will see Education form a separate directorate.

Mr Jenkins said he was happy that the appointment provided some much needed continuity to the Health service. "I look forward to continuing to work with the health team, whose consistent hard work is such an asset to the Islands and whose continuing support will be vital to take the Health Service forward."

"Managing Health is a complex and demanding role that involves balancing sometimes competing objectives. I see the key task as continuing to increase efficiency and effectiveness in the health and social services, and I am confident that, given time, that further improvements can be made. I am especially keen to continue to develop systems, policies and procedures that will stand the test of time and will best position the FI Health service for the difficult challenges that lie ahead."

New website for SS Fund

THE Shackleton Scholarship Fund (SSF) has launched a new website which is hoped will prove user friendly for potential scholars and provide a platform to more readily update the public on activities, projects and research funded by SSF.

SSF are soon to welcome 2011 Academic scholar Max Hull to research his project, 'Understanding the Falklands in the period 1965 to 1982 - and their significance in a wider context'.

On the scientific front, Melanie Mackenzie, a 2012 Academic Scholar, will be in the Islands in February/March 2013 to research holothuroids (sea cucumbers) while the Falkland Islands Archery Association, 2012 Quality of Life scholarship winners, will soon welcome a coach and technical adviser to coincide with their first anniversary celebrations.

The Committee is also pleased to announce that Patrick Watt's book on the history of the Stanley Sports Association (SSA) should be in the Islands in time for Christmas and in time to mark the 100th race meeting of the association in December. Mr Watts was the first Falkland Islander to receive an Academic Award.

Motocross season opens

WITH bikes and bodies well rested over the winter, the motorcycle enthusiasts of the Falkland Islands descended on Goose Green to kick off the 2012/13 Falkland Islands Motocross season.

A misty Boca Valley had an eerie feeling of a calm before the storm.

With the parents of nine Pee Wee class riders straining back on the leashes attached to their eager offspring, the arrival of Janice and her trusty driver Hamish gave us no choice but to get the first race underway.

Adam Dickson once again stamped his authority on proceedings with a double win. Kia Alazia and Travis Jaffray battled it out for second and third; Travis getting the nod for second position in the first race and Kia in the second. Rebecca Clarke and Regan Newman had great rides which will no doubt see them in the hunt for the title at the season's end. Lane McKay, Kyra Smith, Skye Lowe and Zoe Hawksworth also performed admirably. To see how well the little whippersnappers handle their machines really is a sight to behold.

The Ladies and Junior classes were run together. Elaine Turner cruised around on her new steed gaining confidence as the day went on as James Tyrrell and Angeline Joshua swapped positions throughout to provide some great entertainment.

The Clubman Class saw Joe Clarke, Adrian Sim and Ewen Bonner join the ranks to have a crack at De-throning last year's champion Nathan Lowe. The first race saw Nathan taking the lead early on. Adrian Sim managed to pass Nathan for the lead only to take a tumble and fall back to third. Nathan took the win followed by Joe. The second race had them as tightly packed as the first. Adrian took the lead with Joe all over his back wheel. Joe went on to take the lead and never looked back.

The expert class launched off the line with Jay Mollatt taking his KTM to a run away victory. Nathan Gemmill and Scott Henry Roberts mixed it up and came away with a second and third each. The last race of the day known as the beer leg saw Arthur Turner, Joe Clarke and Jay Mollatt all take turns of the lead. Arthur took the hole shot with Jay riding a borrowed KTM 125 and Joe Clarke hounding him from the start. Jay managed to take the lead for a lap before crashing and dropping to third. The front three were wheel to wheel. The big end bearing on the little KTM 125 could no longer take the punishment and gave up. Jay was out with a blown engine. Joe and Arthur continued an epic battle and it was Arthur who emerged victorious.

A huge thanks goes to Goose Green, the lap counters, marshals, media, medical crew, Lifestyle Ltd for sponsorship and of course all the riders and supporters for making it such a fantastic day

Mount Pleasant Airfield weather for September 2012

MAXIMUM and minimum temperatures were slightly above average for September. Rainfall and sunshine were below average with rainfall 92.4% per cent of the average and sunshine 74.5 per cent of the long term average, making it the second dullest September on record, the dullest was back in 1991.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 8.9 Celsius compared with the long-term average for September of 7.7 Celsius. The highest temperature recorded was 16.0 Celsius on the 27th and the lowest maximum was 4.9 Celsius recorded on the 16th.

The mean minimum temperature was 2.1 Celsius, compared with the long-term average of 1.0 Celsius. The lowest minimum was -0.5 Celsius on the 18th and the highest minimum was 5.0 Celsius recorded on the 27th.

Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 29.2 mm with the long-term average for September being 31.6 mm. The wettest day was on the 21st with a total of 9.0 mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 17 days with 1.0 mm or more falling on eight days.

Sunshine

Sunshine was below average for September. There were 98.0 hours of sunshine, compared with the monthly average of 131.5 hours. The highest daily total was 9.1 hours on the 2nd September.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog

There were seven days of sleet or snow but no days of lying snow, four days of hail and seven days of fog.

Wind/Gales

The monthly mean wind speed was 15.5 knots, which is slightly above the average of 15.2 knots. The highest hourly mean speed of 38 knots occurred on the 3rd and the highest gust of 57 knots was also recorded on the 3rd. Gales occurred on six days, and 17 days had gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Warning Bell for BAS

BRITAIN'S reputation for Antarctic exploration and scientific research is second to none. Even when we failed (Scott and Shackleton come to mind) we did so while burnishing our reputation for hair-shirted determination to be a major presence on the continent.

Today's British Antarctic Survey carries this spirit forward. The organisation evolved from the Falkland Islands Dependency Survey, which in turn grew out of the Second World War's Operation Tabarin. We are quietly proud of this history, and pleased that the Falklands maintains its role as a forward base for British activity in the far south.

Keeping this spirit alive and ensuring the Falklands' continued role is important, which is why I was disappointed to learn this week that the British government may merge BAS with the lesser-known National Oceanographic Centre. There are similarities of purpose between the two organisations, of course, and therefore uniting their administrations could save money. BAS ships are equipped to carry out polar oceanographic work, but there has to be a risk that their ships will be diverted to conduct oceanography in the temperate and tropical areas of the world. That would surely have some impact on their other role: logistical support for the bases.

Those within BAS are said to be concerned about the risk of losing their autonomy and compromising their capability. I think there should be a little bit of concern in Stanley too. It would be a shame if British activity in the far south is reduced and if, as a result, those bright red planes and ships wind down their use of Stanley. BAS contributes to the Falklands economy and gives London a good practical reason for keeping the Union Flag flying. The further evolution of Britain's Antarctic presence should, therefore, be watched carefully.

Act soon to save the Lady Liz

WHAT would Londoners do if they realised that the fabric of one of their most iconic landmarks – say Tower Bridge – was rapidly deteriorating and threatening to become a heap of less than iconic rubble? They would, I believe, emit an anguished cry of alarm. And this would be followed by a very quick and successful corporate and individual whip-round to raise enough money to save the icon and tourist attraction. Stanley may be about to face just such an issue.

The hulk of the 19th Century sailing ship Lady Elizabeth is every bit as emblematic of Port Stanley as Tower Bridge is of London. No Falklands ship, afloat or beached, is more beautiful, more photographed and more symbolic of both Stanley and our maritime history. The Lady Liz, as so many affectionately call her, is the last major hulk to remind us that Stanley was once a life-saving haven for sailors and passengers seeking shelter from the gales of the roaring 40s, the furious 50s and even the screaming 60s.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of the Penguin News

The iron barque has lain beached at the east end of Stanley Harbour since she broke her moorings well over half a century ago. She was built in the 1870s in Sunderland on the east coast of England, and is an example of the last phase in the development of large commercial sailing ships. This, if nothing else, makes her important. She made several visits to the Falklands, and on at least one trip brought materials to build Christ Church Cathedral. Finally, she hit a rock near Port William, and she was sold locally to be used as an ignominious floating warehouse. Finally, a gale drove her to the sand bank where she rests today.

But she does not rest. According to a concerned Islander, her rudder still swings in strong winds and waves. It is, he said movingly, as if the old lady wants to be released and to sail off for one final trip. That is a lovely fantasy, but in reality a storm may soon render her an ugly heap of shapeless iron. She will become a memory like those other once famous Stanley hulks, Charles Cooper and Jhelum.

It is not too late to stabilise the Lady Elizabeth. Some basic engineering would keep her intact for another 50 years or more. In an on-line discussion, someone connected to the oil industry suggested that cement left over from the drilling programme could be used to create a rough breakwater around her west side, and perhaps poured inside her hull. At the same time, some basic and cheap engineering could raise the bowsprit that gave way and bent 90 degrees a few years ago, as if warning us of worse to come.

The counterpoint to my argument will be that one cannot stop the ravages of time, and there is, anyway, no place in anyone's budget for such sentimentality. I – and I think many others – would say that you can certainly delay those ravages, and this is not only about sentimentality; there is a practical reason to justify spending some money.

The old ship has real value as a symbol of Stanley and as a visitor attraction. Every driver of every coach and Land Rover that carries cruise ship visitors to Gypsy Cove stops briefly on the rise above the Lady Elizabeth to tell her fascinating story. I would bet that as many photos are taken of this old-timer as are snapped of penguins in Gypsy Cove, perhaps more.

That surplus cement would cut the bill if donated to the cause rather than dumped or shipped back to the UK. And a public subscription would be more than helpful. It would even be worth approaching those who care about the maritime heritage of England's northeast. The Lady Elizabeth is as much theirs as she is ours, and they could take pride in the fact that they have helped to preserve a fine old Sunderland ship where she finally came to rest.

If we do not take action, the girders and plates of the Lady Elizabeth will very soon slip into a sandy grave to be revealed only by the very lowest of tides. We won't be the only ones to miss her when she is gone.

How will a proud local guide respond to a returning tourist who says, "Whenever I think of Port Stanley, I also think of that lovely old ship. What a shame she's no longer here."

Talk to Argentina

I HAVE been following with great interest the developments in the Falkland Islands over the past couple of years. I am 35 years old and a born and bred Falkland Islander currently resident in the United Kingdom. However, it deeply embarrasses and angers me that the government refuses to engage in a dialogue with Argentina to at least hear what they have to say about the Falklands sovereignty issue.

Argentina is simply asking for a discussion as to the proposals they can offer. They are not asking the British government to confirm a sovereignty agreement, just to talk over the options. There is no harm in just sitting down and listening to what Argentina has to say, out of respect for a fellow UN member if anything.

From my many years spent in the Islands, it was apparent to me that the Islanders have no idea whatsoever what Argentina may offer them in terms of benefits that either full or shared sovereignty may bring. The Islanders seem to be under the impression that should Argentina regain full control of the Islands they will lose their British citizenship, be forced to speak Spanish, and have their way of live compromised. This is not the case, and has never been the case as the Argentine Ambassador to the UK Alicia Castro previously affirmed the Argentine government's commitment to respecting the Islander's interests and way of life and also their Britishness and identity. Ambassador Castro has even affirmed that the Argentine government are willing to offer safeguards to preserve the Islander's way of life.

However, this information does not seem to be have been fed to the Islanders as all they seem to be provided is a stream of anti-Argentine propaganda from both the Island and the British government, and through local media outlets. As a result, the Islanders remain deeply suspicious of Argentina and they are painted as 'the enemy'.

Argentina is a wonderful country with a rich, varied, and exciting culture, vast space, diverse landscape, fantastic food, beautiful towns and cities, and a friendly, intelligent, courteous people. A forward thinking, liberal, freedom-loving country (the first in Latin America to legalise same-sex marriage, unlike the UK). In terms of infrastructure the schools, colleges and universities are second to none, and it features an excellent health care system with modern, well equipped hospitals and a highly educated professional workforce. Argentina has thrown off the shackles of dictatorship and is now a democratic, liberal, respected country. Some of the benefits of being part of Argentine could be:

A much better, regular, and reliable postal service, routed through Argentina.

A modern telephone system with high speed and affordable internet.

Access to the Argentine health and education system including Secondary schools, and universities.

Regular shipments of food including fresh produce, clothes, and electrical items rather than relying on imported goods from the UK and Chile.

Regular flights to the mainland such as Buenos Aires, and other destinations within Argentina, across the South American continent, and beyond.

Islanders having full access to all the benefits of the Argentine state.

Much needed population growth and an increase in the skilled and unskilled labour force.

This leads me on to the proposed referendum in the islands that will ask the Islanders to confirm which country they wish to be governed by, and I am concerned as to the way the actual 'referendum question' will be mooted amongst the electorate. It all seems very one sided in favour of retaining British sovereignty without any opportunity for Argentina to put across their proposal for a 'yes' campaign. The very fact that neither the Falkland Islands government nor the islanders have any knowledge whatsoever of what Argentina could offer them in terms of governance and infrastructure brings into question the validity of such a referendum. After all, how can you make an informed choice if you have no idea what might be on offer?

The Islanders should be made aware that they may benefit hugely from closer links with Argentina, whether it be some kind of shared, or full, sovereignty settlement with Argentina. I feel that it is only right, in the true spirit of fairness, democracy, and the principles of self-determination, to allow the Argentine Government to put their offer across in the proposed sovereignty referendum.

If you are going to have a fair referendum, then you cannot simply just hold a referendum without any kind of associated campaigns for and against.

Argentina should be given every opportunity to mount a 'yes' campaign for full or shared sovereignty.

This campaign should allow the Argentine Government access to the Islands and should allow them to produce a solid, well rounded, fair campaign in favour of sovereignty. In turn, the Island government would no doubt mount a campaign against Argentine sovereignty, which they have a right to do so.

Just like the 'yes' campaign that the Scottish government are holding in their independence referendum in 2014.

Not having a 'yes' campaign led by the Argentine government would be no different to the British government not mounting a 'no' campaign for the Scotland independence referendum.

If the sovereignty referendum goes ahead without a balanced presentation of both a 'yes' and 'no' campaign then this would be an unfair, unbalanced referendum, and would be looked upon as such by the rest of the world.

Times change, and it is time for the Falklands to stop being so insular and narrow minded and to really truly consider what benefits a full or shared sovereignty agreement with Argentina may bring. It doesn't do ANY harm do just listen to what they've got to say.

Bishop Stephen October visit

BISHOP Stephen Venner will visit the Falkland Islands at the end of October.

Arriving on October 25 the Bishop's schedule will include a day at Mount Pleasant, a meeting at the Deanery and lunch at Government House with representatives of all three Churches and the MPA Padre.

The local media will be given the opportunity to meet with Bishop Stephen and he will also meet with the Cathedral Youth Group and have an informal supper at the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre.

Sunday October 28 will include church services and meetings with Cathedral Council and Trustees and other individuals.

He will leave the Islands on Tuesday October 30

Veteran vents at wrong name

COMMONWEALTH Games 2014 organisers have apologised after referring to the Falkland Islands as Islas Malvinas.

Veterans from the 1982 War reacted with fury after the Glasgow event's official website used the name twice.

The Daily Mail reports that Mark Dilworth (49) a merchant seaman on the British Tay during the war, said: "I nearly fell off my chair. We've just had the success of the Olympics. This will upset so many people.

He added: "If the government of the Falklands had seen the mistake they would have made an official complaint. For those of us there at the time, we feel very strongly that it's the Islanders' right to decide with a referendum to change the name. It is not for other people to be leading the way and changing it themselves."

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

It is frequently said to me, "You must have a lot of time on your hands now you have retired." Really? The truth is I wonder when we ever had the time to go to work as well. Every day is so full that we are never really aware of the time, let alone the date and so week-ends and bank holidays, invariably arrive as a total surprise.

It is fortunate that most shops are open seven days a week or we would be vegetarians by now.

I keep a diary because I have a dreadful memory and so most happenings in our lives and the garden are jotted down every couple of days (or when I remember).

So I wrote down the weights of vegetables as they were harvested, mainly because I wanted to compare the weights of vegetables grown in a raised bed as opposed to those grown as normal in rows in the garden.

Well, there really is no contest. The final weight for all carrots lifted was 47 kilos, not counting of course, those lifted by our little two-legged mice. Not bad for a raised bed measuring just 4' x 12' is it?

These were rows planted 6 inches apart. However, as all work needed in the bed can be done from either side quite comfortably and without a need to step on the soil, I shall be putting the carrot rows 4 inches apart this year, and the parsnips too. Although they did not fill out as well as the carrots, they certainly grew long enough in those conditions and they have provided a few bags for the freezer.

Speaking of freezing, I have had a couple of calls regarding the way I freeze carrots so I will provide details of my methods, using a microwave oven, as follows:

All measurements are approximate but here goes:

I use a bowl large enough to take a kilo (two lbs) of vegetables.

The beautiful little-big house

Having cleaned and scraped them I slice them into 1 inch lengths at the bottom end graduating to 1/2 inch at the fat end. I then add about six tablespoons of cold water to the bowl, stir it to ensure all surfaces are moist, cover with cling film, make one small hole in the centre and microwave for four or five minutes. After that I plunge the vegetables into a colander sitting up to its brim in a sink full of cold water.

By the time the second bowl is ready the first lot of vegetables is ready to come out of the sink in its colander and continue to drain and cool for a few minutes before bagging up, removing the air by sucking it out with a straw then tying and freezing. This works with most root vegetables, though beetroot needs to be nearly cooked before slicing and freezing and potatoes really do not take to freezing raw unless they are baby new ones; ours never get that far.

I will be processing any of those still remaining in a couple of months time when hopefully, we will be starting to eat fresh new ones. It would be nice to hear from anyone who cares to pass on their hints and tips on preserving and freezing vegetables and fruit.

At last the flower borders are reasonably clean. The Cock chaffer beetle grubs (weevils) have had a field day with the roots of some of the primulas but most of them are growing strongly enough to recover when planted elsewhere and fairly deeply. Most are flowering or preparing to and as they come into their best the seeds planted of that family have started to germinate also. (Which is what I tried to say last week but I guess my thoughts were faster than my fingers). I did put in a few more plants in the flower beds and really I could 'play' in there forever but I must turn my attention to the vegetable garden now. However, before that I must put some more Sweet-pea seeds into pots in the tunnel, these will flower much later but for longer than those sown in the autumn

All seedlings of the brassica family are up and needing to go into modules or small pots now before they become too leggy trying to reach for the light. If they are in pots it is quite simple to gently prise the lot out and to just as gently get a small plant by its leaves (never the stem) then pop it into the hole made in the soil of a pot or module with either a pencil or a finger. The plant should be put in right up to its leaves, then 'firm in' gently, water and that is it. If they are in trays then I find it easiest to use a small kitchen fork to lift the little plants out though a bit more care has to be taken with this method.

The season is well under way now and all the tomatoes are up (did I really plant so many seeds?) and all of those and the various pumpkins and marrow seeds that the girls planted have been pricked out into individual pots. All are sitting on various windowsills in the house, the weather is still far to unpredictable and rather too cold to put them in the tunnel or greenhouse as yet.

Some years ago we got a wooden play-house for the kiddies; it was named 'My beautiful little house', and has been known as that ever since. However, there are now rather more children and all are growing bigger and they really were getting a bit short of space. One of the Daddies decided he no longer needed a garden shed so he gave it to us. Bill and 'helpers' including myself, shifted forward the original house then fitted the other one behind it. We now have 'My beautiful little-big house'.

A hopeful prelude to the World Championships

THE Falkland Islands Deck Hockey Stanley Cup Final was played on September 25 between the Panthers and the newly formed military team Coyotes.

The Coyotes have proved their worth and shown other teams that they are not a pushover. A great passing team with lots of movement and full of energy, only missing a big hitter.

Everyone had the final down to be a close game with both Panthers and Coyotes being a match for each other. This was not to be the case on the night as the Panthers triumphed over the Coyotes 8-0 ensuring a shut out for Clifton, the second on the night after Morrison had claimed a shut out in the third place play off against the Blackhawks. Another thrashing as the Penguins won 9-0.

The Panthers play was simple, man mark, pressure the puck holder and pick up the rebounds and pepper the goaltender. It worked as the Coyotes ran out of options and simply could not deal with the onslaught of pressure from the Panthers who shot continuously at guest goalie Stu Duncan playing in goal for the Coyotes. Duncan was not his normal self and recently had been outstanding in goal.

It looked as though final game jitters had gotten the best of the Coyotes. For the spectators this was to be a great shame. Nothing can be taken away from the Panthers however, they played to their game and showed other teams how to beat the Coyotes and do it well. France was pivotal in the centre ensuring passes met their targets, loose pucks were swept up and big shots were fired in. The hat trick proved the tactic was working.

At times the Coyotes looked to hit the Panthers on the break and found themselves open and one on one with Clifton. However they were unable to find the net with shots going high wide and handsome and others easy pickings for the goaltender. The fight was there but the lack of a plan B was clear.

Panthers were not giving up the goals and simply ran down the clock when they could. It was a deserved victory for the Panthers who should hold their heads up high after claiming the double cup wins of 2012.

The Falkland Islands team is also currently training and fund raising to compete in the 10th International Street and Ball Hockey Federation (ISBHF) 2013 World Championships in St. Johns, Newfoundland, Canada.

The Falkland Islands application has been accepted and other countries such as Czech Republic, Slovakia, Switzerland, Canada, Cayman Islands, Austria, Portugal, Greece, France along with new member countries Armenia and Italy will be there. The Falkland Islands will be entered into pool b, the growing nations table and may face the likes of Great Britain, France, Italy, Armenia and Cayman Islands.

Countries are still applying to compete with a final total of 25 countries to be matched against each other.

The Falkland Islands Dek Hock-

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 27 September 2012
 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market closed at AU$940cents/kg clean a reduction of 6 cents.

21 and 22 Micron prices fell in all three regional sales in Australia, reflecting a slight change in recent weeks with the super fine end of the market experiencing the biggest drops. All wool producing countries are facing a flat market at the moment.

The first wool bales for coring have arrived in Stanley, more than 1 month earlier than normal. Potentially the wool warehouse will fill a bit quicker this year with more people wanting to sell early to achieve, on average, better prices.

| Week ending | Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category. | | | | | | | | | | | |

Sheila Stewart and Tamsin McLeod

TAMSIN McLeod was the awarded the Argos Junior Trophy this month. It was a well earned achievement and is one presented to under 18's who the committee believes has shown the most improvement in score, attendance and character.

Tamsin has real commitment to archery and has demonstrated continuing effort in improving her shooting.

Many Thanks to Argos Group Ltd for their continued sponsorship, and to Sheila Stewart for giving up her Sunday morning to present this award.

Archery has moved temporarily up to the FIDF Hall while work is being carried out at the Leisure Centre Gym.

Mark Lewis

Excellence at Oslo Marathon

Governor Nigel Haywood and Martin Collins

TWO of the Falkland Islands' top marathon runners, His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood and Dr Martin Collins Chief Executive and Director of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, took part in the Oslo marathon last week.

The keen long distance runners were in Norway for meetings with the Norwegian Nature Inspectorate, with the British Embassy, with Aker Biomarine (krill fishing company) and the Norwegian 'Friends of South Georgia Organisation'.

"It was very fortunate that this all coincided with the marathon," said Martin.

"It was two laps of a reasonably flat course. Nigel did 3:18, which was his quickest for a few years and I managed a new PB of 2:59."

Martin competed for the Falklands in the Isle of Wight Island Games last year at half marathon distance, and both are veterans of the Stanley Running Club Cape Pembroke Half Marathon and the gruelling Standard Chartered Stanley Marathon.

It is with much regret that we have to announce, and only after much deliberation, that will close its doors for the last time possibly in the first or second quarter of next year 2013.

Our entire stock is offered for sale as a job lot or in parts along with the various agencies we have built up over the last 40 years.

Our last shipment of general cargo should arrive here 12th December.

Until our final closure or a suitable representative is found to replace us we will continue to import Icom Radios and radio equipment.

All Icom guarantees will be acknowledged even after our closure up to the date on which they expire.

Interested parties in all or part of the stock is asked to contact Peter Short on 21297 or 21849 for further details.

VACANCIES/ADVERTS

Full-time/Part-time Customer Service Assistants are required for the Falkland Islands Company Limited.

Applicants must be aged 18 years and over and be willing to work flexible hours, including weekends, evenings and public holidays. You should be pleasant, confident, will need to be versatile and happy to undertake any aspect of work within the West Store Complex including Caf , Peacocks, Warehouse, and Capstan Gift Shop. The position will include the operation of computerised tills and organising of new stock. For further information, please contact Tara Francis on 27635. Application forms are available from the West Store Foodhall.

The FIC Agency has an immediate vacancy for a Logistics Officer for approximately 6 months.

The Logistics Officer will be expected to undertake tasks in all areas of the Agency, Tourism, fishing & oil development.

Candidates would hopefully have excellent communication skills, experience in working in a busy environment, and able to work under pressure to meet deadlines. Candidates should be fit, self motivated and willing to work weekends and public holidays.

For more information please contact Mrs Sue Luxton on 27630 or submit a CV and covering letter by email to: fic.agency@horizon.co.fk

The Falkland Islands Company Ltd has immediate vacancies for experienced mechanics in the Crozier Place garage.

The Automotive Department is currently undergoing a complete refurbishment and rebranding, and we are looking for experienced mechanics to help carry the business forward.

Applicants must be experienced in servicing and repair operations on light 4x4 vehicles and experience in HGV, PSV and small boat maintenance would be an advantage.

A full driving license is essential and HGV or PSV1 licenses would be an advantage. Rate of pay will be dependent on the successful applicant's experience.

Competitive rates of pay are available to the successful applicant depending on qualifications and or experience.

Applicants should contact James Bates on telephone 27678 during working hours for further details of the post.

Part time assistant.

A new and exciting opportunity has arisen within the FIC Automotive Department, (shortly to be known as "Falklands 4x4") for a showroom spares assistant. This position is a part time vacancy that will include Saturday's from 10am until 4pm, in the new purpose built showroom on Crozier Place, plus the possibility of a day during the week in the spares dept. It is envisaged that up to 20hrs per week are on offer initially.

Primary roles will include answering calls, dealing with customers queries, sales, general clerical duties as well as assisting other members of the dept in the busy spares section.

Candidates should be pleasant, well turned out, of sober habits and have excellent interpersonal skills and be able to work well within a team. Most crucially, they must be prepared to work most Saturdays.

Competitive rates of pay are available to the right candidate.

For more information and an application form, please contact James Bates, Manager on 27678 or e-mail fic.auto@horizon.co.fk

FALKLAND ISLANDS

FALKLAND ISLANDS
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

BUSINESS ADVISOR - FIDC

FIDC has a vacancy for a Temporary Business Advisor. The position will be for a period of three months in the first instance to December 2012, following which the future of the post will be reviewed.

The successful individual will work with private-sector applicants looking for business support and potential funding opportunities to support the growth and diversification of the Falklands' economy and infrastructure.

Applications are invited from individuals looking to work on either a full or part-time basis.

Reporting to the Financial Controller and working with our existing Business Advisor, this is an exciting, hands-on role that requires an understanding of the Falkland Island's economy coupled with Business Advisory capabilities. Candidates will be able to demonstrate past experience of Business Plans, be commercially aware and financially literate, have a 'can do' attitude and be results driven whilst having a 'feet on the ground' approach. Excellent written and oral communication skills, experience of using Microsoft Excel and Word, and the ability to work in a confidential environment are a must. Experience may have been gained in a Banking, Business Advisory or Business environment either within the Falkland Islands or offshore.

For an application form and job description please contact pa.admin@fidc.co.fk or telephone 27211.

Applications should reach the General Manager no later than Wednesday 17th October 2012.

Notification of Routine Live Firing Exercise

British Forces South Atlantic Islands (BFSAI) will be undertaking a routine Rapier live firing exercise from 8th to 19th October 2012 from Port Harriet range.

The exercise is part of the normal training cycle for the Resident Rapier Battery.

This type of exercise has been conducted in the Falklands for many years and is an example of the excellent training benefits offered by the Falkland Islands to those serving as part of BFSAI. Rapier missiles provide short-range surface-to-air defensive capability out to a maximum range of 8.2 kilometres.

The firings will take place from the Port Harriet range out to sea, in the immediate proximity of the Falkland Islands and will remain well within Falkland Islands territorial waters and airspace.

The UK has an exemplary safety record with these exercises, and takes its responsibilities in these matters very seriously.

Members of the public are requested to avoid the Port Harriet range until notified.

Any questions regarding safety and access to the range should be directed to the Range Safety Officer on 76012 or mobile 53433.

Luxton on impact study 'no major new concerns'

A SOCIO-ECONOMIC impact study on the effects of an oil development project on the Falkland Islands did not reveal any "major new concerns which had previously escaped attention" Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton told Penguin News this week.

The Falkland Islands Government (FIG) is also planning to commission its own independent socio-economic impact assessment, said Mr Luxton.

The study presented to the public on Wednesday evening at the Narrows Bar was undertaken by Plexus Energy Ltd on behalf of Rockhopper Exploration in relation to its Sea Lion development and made 68 recommendations. It addressed a number of issues including the impact on employment, economic development, accommodation, local business development, immigration, infrastructure and culture.

At the presentation Plexus representatives, Director Jay Wagner and consultant Susan Dowse, outlined the benefits of the industry including a possible additional £195 million paid to the Falkland Islands Government in tax and royalties after production begins in 2017 plus an estimated annual GDP of £275 million.

Onshore employment requirements during the production phase were expected to be similar to that experienced during exploration (around 75 both directly and indirectly related to the industry) although that would be higher by around 50 per cent during the installation of the production facilities.

Direct onshore opportunities might include a range of positions related to administration, warehousing, dock and oil yard support transportation, catering IT and also accommodation primarily through subcontracting.

Mr Wagner noted that in order to support the oil industry existing businesses could be expanded or new ones created via international joint ventures if local funding was inadequate. While it was suggested that would require a willingness to take business risks there also existed the danger of a boom followed by a decline.

Other benefits suggested were, new stable sources of income, local training, the import of fresh products via oil flights and revenue available to develop the Camp. Plexus warned, however, that the industry might also draw labour from other industries such as tourism and farming.

On the subject of accommodation, in the first three years around 25 units would be required, however, this would likely subside to 15 and later ten as things stabilised in the production phase. If accommodation was unmanaged demand could increase due to worker influx. This might be met through new housing, apartments and/or hotels. At the same time this might also put upward pressure on housing prices and rents. The report recommended an investigation of suitable strategies to address its accommodation needs in ways to minimise that impact.

Plexus also warned about the dangers of overbuilding accommodation units that might later no longer be required.

Although the numbers of full time non-local onshore workers and families were likely to be small, in a place the size of the Falklands that might also affect certain services including schooling and health Plexus advised. At yesterday's meeting of the Health and Medical Services committee meeting, however, Director David Jenkins noted following meetings with the company he did not anticipate any major difficulties.

Observations were also made by Plexus about the impact on water resources, FIPASS and the potential for inflation.

The representatives noted there was a strong sense in the Falklands that oil development would be positive although the FIG would face challenges relating to regulations, strategic planning and infrastructure, however, they reassured the meeting that FIG already had many things 'in train' ahead of the publication of the report.

Mr Luxton commented this week: "It is very detailed piece of work which has been a year in the making, and from our perspective represents an excellent summary of all of the issues and concerns in the Falklands at the time of preparation."

He said it was significant to note that although it was a recent report, "we have already moved on significantly from the position stated in the report in a number of key areas with regard to oil readiness and good progress is being made towards the position we need to be in by first oil."

He added that it was satisfying to note that all of the significant issues that had been identified were ones that were already known and were not "insurmountable."

Three rigs

AS the final drill in the exploration round nears completion Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton said it was a safe assumption to plan for three rigs rather than two in the next two to three years when extraction would get underway.

Although the Liev Erikssen rig would be demobilised once Falkland Oil and Gas (FOGL) had completed its current operation in the Scotia prospect, Border and Southern was expected to begin seismic work in the new year which would bring more vessels into Falklands waters. Mr Luxton told the Mineral Resources Committee on Tuesday.

Government readiness planning was in a good place with legislative reviews progressing well and a draft report expected at the end of this month.

Premier (Rockhopper Exploration partner) had indicated that they were happy with how things were moving in preparation for first oil and while there were bound to be a few challenges there were no particular worries, said Mr Luxton.

Two proposals regarding the development of FIPASS floating dock will be placed before Executive Council this month.

Wrong name

THE Glasgow 14 Commonwealth Games website still displays the words 'Islas Malvinas' under the words Falkland Islands on its website map, despite stating again this week that there was never any intention to cause offence.

The use of the words on the Commonwealth Games site was highlighted in The Sun newspaper on September 30 when a Falklands War veteran drew attention to it.

Responding to an email on the subject from Chair of the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association Mike Summers the Director of Games Family Relations and Protocol, Kate Randall, said on Wednesday: "It was absolutely not our intention to cause offence to a very valued member of our Commonwealth Games Family."

Although Penguin News contacted Ms Randall regarding the wording, no reply has yet been received.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

ROCKHOPPER'S Socio-economic Impact study of the Sea Lion oil development project is intimidating for a number of reasons, not least because it was too large to be delivered by email. But ignoring my fear of documents of a size that must be hand delivered in CD format, a perusal of the contents itself truly brought home to me the overwhelming reality of what an oil industry might bring.

While it would be rude to pre-empt Grant Munro's very thoughtful letter on page 7 in too much detail, his questions with regard to potentially unwise infrastructure developments in Stanley, combined with the sheer amount of complex actions outlined in the Plexus report, illustrates the shocking amount of work to be undertaken in an extremely short space of time if social equilibrium is to be achieved, particularly, as the study refers to only one development project and not the oil industry as a whole.

Not that I suggest the report is anything other than positive (and the Director of Mineral Resources has assured that FIG is already ahead of many of the recommendations). In fact it emphasises that the industry and the Falklands as a whole must work together. At the same time the success of that is based on a host of decisions to be made and a variety of relationships between the government, the private sector, the company, "consultants," "other groups or experts."

The danger of course is where decisions must be made rapidly (and even the low priority actions, "should be underway within six months") and without, as Grant notes, a clear plan, ugly mistakes might be made; and ones that are likely to remain with us for the duration of the presence of an oil industry: potentially a very long time.

But how can we make sure this doesn't happen? In the first place we should accept that we all have a degree of responsibility. This is not the time to leave decision making solely to establishment and then complain at a later date. As MLA Elsbey suggested at the presentation on Wednesday evening if residents have ideas and concerns then make them known, whether they relate to immigration, use of revenue, the natural environment, future employment opportunities, our culture, social equity or the appearance of Stanley itself.

Many of us consider we've had the best of the Falklands, let's make sure there's something for the rest.

As an afterthought: a comforting comment made on Wednesday came from a visiting journalist with many decades of experience penning thoughts on the world of oil and energy. After the presentation by Plexus and Rockhopper he turned to me and said surprisingly approvingly, "they're not the patter-merchants the bigger companies send out."

Building plans get the go ahead

A TOTAL of 15 planning applications two of which were outline, were approved with conditions at Thursday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee with another deferred and one refused.

Onshore development for the oil industry continues to the east of Stanley with an outline application given approval for the erection of a warehouse and full application for the excavation of ground footprint and backfill at 25-31 Coastel Road for Byron Holdings Ltd. The Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne said details regarding the quantity, location and method of disposal of spoil from the site are to be submitted and agreed by the Director of Public Works before work at the site commences. Also at 25-31 Coastel Road permission was given to extend the supply base by constructing a geogrid/geotextile laydown area with security fencing and the creation of surface water drainage.

An outline application by Nadia Smith to build a house at 9A Anderson Drive was refused on the grounds that the land made a useful contribution to the amenity of that part of Stanley and should revert to green space in the next review of the Town Plan. Six objections were received from residents of the area along with a petition against any building in that area.

An application to replace the roof covering of the Old Smithy at the Dockyard, one of Stanley's oldest buildings was approved as part of the Museum and National Trust's project to re-site in that area.

The re-siting of a shed within his property at 9 James Street for Andy Watson and the extension of a porch at 2 Glasgow Road for Dan Fowler and Zoe Luxton was approved as was the erection of a porch at 11 Murray Heights for Robbie Maddocks.

The demolition of a shed to be replaced with a new one at 60 Davis Street for Kathleen Dobbins was approved as was the replacement of the present tote hut at the racecourse for the Stanley Sports Association.

Approval for a new build was given to the Falkland Islands Company Ltd for a one and a half storey house at 2A Hebe Street and outline approval was granted to Valodia Sytchov for a house at 1 Felton Court.

Creation of access drive and off-street parking at 11 Ross Road East for Steve Vincent and installation of a chimney for a Rayburn at 10 James Street for Rachel Crowie were granted approval as was the erection of a garage at Maidenhaven Cottage on the Moody Brook Road for Carl and Diane Freeman; a house extension at 9 Jeremy Moore Avenue for Tim Cotter and the siting of containers for storage containers for Nigel Bishop on land to the south of the FIDF on Kiel Canal Road.

The final item to be considered at the meeting was that of an appeal against the refusal of outline planning permission for the erection of a dwelling and the siting of an accommodation unit during construction on the land north west of the Old Esro Station, Moody Brook Road for Donna Henry. The committee made no comment on Mrs Henry's comments in response to the earlier refusal, however Mr Payne said it was his intention to present a paper to this month's ExCo.

CMO resigns

DOCTOR Rob Queenborough who took up the role of Chief Medical Officer in June, resigned this week.

The Director of Health and Education David Jenkins said Dr Queenborough had confirmed that following a period of mutual assessment, for personal reasons, he had decided to leave the hospital in December.

Mr Jenkins added: "The departure of Rob Queenborough, for personal reasons, is respected and understood. He has, even in his relatively short time here, already helped the Health service enormously by highlighting the strategic clinical issues that need to be taken forward."

Credit union could help small businesses

Brian Branch of WOCCU

WORK to establish a Credit Union in the Falklands is ongoing with a possible visit to the Islands by the President & Chief Executive Officer of the World Council of Credit Unions (WOCCU).

FIDC Business Analyst Michael Betts is currently investigating how a credit union functions, the purpose and the products and services available.

Mr Betts explained that at the moment the Islands had only one financial institution (Standard Chartered Bank) which provides limited services and tends to be adverse to risk when considering loan applications. The situation had forced FIDC to become a last resort lender to ensure small businesses and in particular farms, had access to finance. The situation was unlikely to change until an element of competition was introduced, he told the Development Corporation Board on Wednesday.

Mr Betts said correspondence had been exchanged with two institutions and discussions had developed with Mr Branch.

WOCCU is the global trade association and development agency for credit unions which promotes the sustainable development of credit unions and other financial cooperatives around the world to empower people through access to high quality and affordable financial services.

Following a conversation with Mr Branch, Mr Betts said he had requested information regarding the Falklands so he could start to build up a financial case for establishing a credit union in the Falklands and had also mentioned a possible visit in the near future to assist his evaluation.

Midwifery paper

A REPORT from a Consultant Supervisor of Midwives, who visited last August in order to review the midwifery services at the King Edward Memorial VI Hospital will form part of a paper that will be put to Executive Council by the Director of Health and Medical Services David Jenkins this month. He described the report this week as "comprehensive" and including a number of recommendations.

Waterfront project at a crossroads

THE Development Corporation Board approved the proposed master plan for the Waterfront Project on Wednesday, however how it will progress and who will take it forward is yet to be decided.

FIDC's project assistant Michael Betts said the approval did not commit either the Government or FIDC to constructing the master plan.

Approval also has to be sought from Executive Council with a programme for the next stage of development to be put before a meeting before the end of the year.

Marina Projects Ltd who were awarded the contract a year ago to develop options for the Stanley Waterfront have produced a detailed report which includes the projects objectives, its background, development strategies, the market and users and the final master plan.

MLA Mike Summers, however, said he remained confused as to whose project it was and who FIDC was reporting to.

He said the project had come out of the Tourism Development Strategy with FIDC tasked to obtain approval of the master plan. "We've done what we've been asked to do," he said while Mr Betts confirmed that all allocated funding had been used up.

"It's crucial we find out who is coming up with the money and who manages it," said MLA Summers.

The government would probably carry out the infrastructure such as the jetty and walk front but the development of the commercial areas was the responsibility of private investors, he said.

Mr Betts suggested the subject should be raised at the next Tourism meeting to get a broader view and to find out, "where the next stage fits."

Board members agreed that if the suggested move of the Tourist Board from its current status as a company limited by guarantee to a statutory corporation was to take place, the Waterfront project could become its responsibility.

Distinguished visitors to Falklands stand at Conservative Conference

Zoran Zuvic, Hugo Swire MP, Sukey Cameron and Richard Graham MP

FOREIGN Secretary William Hague and Defence Secretary Philip Hammond along with Theresa May, Chris Grayling and Grant Shapps were all visitors to the Falklands stand at the Conservative Party Conference this week.

Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek said: "The conference was considerably busier than the other two and we had many useful discussions and many distinguished visitors."

She added: We also had a useful meeting with our 'new' minister Hugo Swire and were fortunate that Zoran (Zuvic) was able to hold the fort while we did so. We also met the new Overseas Territories minister Mark Simmonds and spoke with David Willetts who has responsibility for Science and technology."

This was also the fiftieth party conference, with a stand, attended by Falkland Island representative in London Sukey Cameron.

Ms Cameron accompanied MLA Cheek and MLA Ian Hansen to all of this year's party conferences.

Appalling abuse

MLA Sharon Halford has forcibly criticised patients guilty of verbally abusing staff at the Falkland Islands Government Office (FIGO) in London, involved in arranging their treatment overseas. She said during a recent visit to FIGO she was appalled that patients swore and shouted at staff, adding, "some people are very ungrateful."

Director of Health and Medical Services David Jenkins endorsed her comments made at the committee meeting yesterday.

Also at the meeting it was confirmed that in a paper being drafted by the Senior Dental Officer options would be looked at for the development of the dental service, including a new build separate dental suite or restructuring of the current facilities.

Lodge package

THE Development Corporation has completed an investor's package which has been distributed to individuals and businesses who have indicated an interest in establishing a lodge in the Falklands. FIDC's General Manager Marc Boucher said the opportunity was open to any interested parties, however, he stressed that FIDC did not have any funds for investing in lodges, but were merely facilitating the project.

He added that it was up to the investor to decide what market sector they wished to work towards. Michael Betts will be accompanying the Falklands delegation attending the World Travel Mart in London next month to collect information on lodges and to promote the opportunity for investment in the Falklands, said Mr Boucher.

Coast Watch

THE Police have asked that residents remember 'Coast Watch' an initiative to help protect the waters, coast line and outlying areas of the Islands.

Chief Inspector Len McGill said: "We need your help to let us know of any suspicious activity or threats to our Islands and coastal waters. If you see or witness something that makes you suspicious while you are out and about we want to hear about it. To make a report, call, email or fax the Police Station or obtain a copy of the relevant form to take, "and carry in your vehicles."

SA onslaught

THE opening session of the UN Fourth Committee on decolonisation was dominated by a joint verbal assault on Britain by South American countries over the issue of the Falklands. In a right of reply at the close of the session, the British representative said the UK had no doubt about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

ANOTHER bouncy little week comes to an end. By the time this goes to press there should be five of us back here.

We have just had a visit from a group of Caribbean journalists and if the pieces that they are publishing are anything to go by they were extremely impressed by what they saw here and once again we now have some new friends. It's amazing what a difference it makes when folk can actually see for themselves what the Falklands and we Falkland Islanders are all about rather than just being fed the normal load of lies by those across the way.

I would like to take but a moment to mention the printing the anonymous letter in last weeks PN. I sincerely hope PN has the real name and address of the person or Argentine ministry who wrote that piece of rubbish, otherwise it may be rather naughty to claim "name and address withheld" if you don't actually have one. We do have a free press here and as much as that load of twaddle may have wound people up, we, unlike the country where I suspect that letter emanated, do have a fully functioning democracy. All I will say is this: Yes I may be intransigent, rabidly unreasonable, (maybe even inbred) and unable to feel the love from those totally fluffy, peace loving people in Kirchner's government, but I am not going to be giving an inch to those thugs across the way and as for direct flights? Over my dead body. End of. Punto final. I suspect the forthcoming referendum may well be what has caused the onslaught by this person or ministry. Well Mr Gosling you just keep it up lad, you're doing a fine job of making sure we get an extremely good turnout on the day.

I can clearly hear the wailings from across the water regarding the normal Rapier missile testing that's only been happening for about 30 years. For one of those wee things to cause any damage to an Argentine vessel or aircraft they would have to be WELL inside our territorial waters or airspace. As an Australian parliamentarian that I met at the CPA would say, "suck it up buttercup," what we do in our own country is our business and has now to do with you guys in the Casa Rosada.

Archery auction artwork

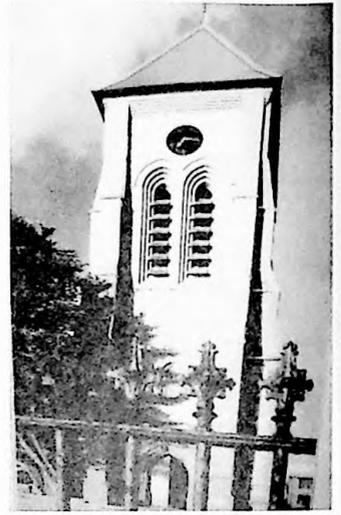

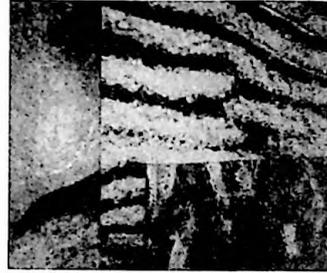

ARTWORK which previously graced the walls of the Brasserie is up for grabs in a sealed bid auction to raise funds for the Archery Association.

Nine canvas prints and nine framed photographs by Julie Halliday have been generously donated by Fortuna Ltd along with four of Jamie Peck's works listing Jim Reeves song titles.

The Falklands Archery Association will be having a sealed bid auction of the original art work, with all items on display in what was Wilkins Kennedy Office next door to Workboat Services on Saturday October 13 from 2pm to 5pm and Monday through to Friday from 5pm to 6.30pm.

The final chance to view the works and place a bid will be on Saturday October 20 from 2pm to 6pm with the bids being opened at 5.45pm on Saturday 20th October.

"Come along and support us, so that we can send a team to the Guernsey Games in 2013," said keen archer Jo Lazo.

HM Coroner Carl Gumsley

Advance hearing

A PRE-INQUEST hearing was held in HM Coroners Court on Monday. The hearing was in advance of the inquest into the death of Eileen Larrimore who died in January this year on South Georgia. Mrs Larrimore was on the cruise ship Adventurer when the ship visited South Georgia. She and her husband were on the Shackleton trail when they fell. Mrs Larrimore died soon after.

Her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley said that the inquest is being held to establish the identity of the deceased, and when, where and how Mrs Larrimore died. The hearing included discussions on the availability of witnesses for the inquest with several witnesses due to give evidence via videolink.

The inquest is due to commence in January next year and has been scheduled to last for two weeks. FIRS

Camber volunteers revive Falklands naval history

ALTHOUGH HMS Beagle was the first of the Royal Navy patrol vessels to visit the Falklands, it was HMS Barracouta crew who began the custom, in December 1896, of creating their ships name in stone on the Camber. Only vessels that have had a significant long term attachment to the Falkland Islands have been granted permission to have their name on the hills.

On Saturday around 40 volunteers organised by Team Tranquil spent six hours, complete with 25 tins of white paint, freshening up this very visible evidence of Falklands History.

The task was completed with assistance from 11 able bodied seamen from the RFA Gold Rover. Steve Massam and the children from the museum's Pathfinders Group who painted everything enthusiastically (including themselves) and other Islanders who painted, organised and transported the group.

The History

HMS Beagle first arrived in Stanley on January 27 1891. She also visited on March 3 1892, February 3 1897, October 9 1897, January 6 1898, February 2 1899, November 14 1899, November 26 1903 and March 9 1904.

HMS Barracouta only visited the Islands twice; October 14 1895 and September 28 1896. According to the Falkland Islands Magazine of January 1897: "The Barracoutas have left a memento behind them in the shape of the name in stone of their ship on the opposite side of the harbour. Parties of blue-jackets used to land, and under the supervision of the doctor whose idea it was, they built up the letters, each about six feet high, and then painted them white, so that the name on the hill side can be distinctly read from the Stanley side of the harbour."

Barracouta also established a firing range at Fairy Cove. She left on December 18 1896.

HMS Protector arrived in Stanley in November 1955 as Antarctic and Falklands patrol ship, returning to the UK around April each year. She continued to visit for each summer season until being replaced by the Endurance. We know the exact date for the erection of this name as there is a very amusing article in the Falkland Islands Monthly review of April 7 1961 entitled 'Operation Nameplate'. It seems that early in the morning of Saturday January 28 1961, immediately prior to sailing, the crew set out and white-washed the name so that when the Stanley residents woke up it was as if the name had appeared, "as if by some magic hand."

HMS Endurance first arrived in Stanley in November 1968 to take over the summer season patrols and continued until the invasion in 1982.

HMS Dumbarton Castle was brought to the Islands in 1982 and remained closely connected by protecting the Islands with assistance from her sister ship the HMS Leeds Castle. HMS Dum- barton Castle remained in service to the Islands for a further 25 years, until this role was taken over by the current protection vessel the HMS Clyde.

If you are interested in more detailed information please contact the Falkland Island Museum & National Trust.

Thank you to Tansy Newman, John Smith and Mr Steve Massam for providing information on the history of the ships.

Team Tranquil asked that a huge thank you be passed to, "all of the volunteers who helped paint the Camber Stones, the fine gentlemen from the RFA Gold Rover: Andrea at FITT for the minibus, Sue for being our driver, FIC for donations and discount, Lifestyles for discount, Susan and Lucille at Jaes for some fine cup cakes and swift sandwich making, Marilyn, Paul, Jenny, Greta, Alison, Lorena, Derek, Gwyn, George, Nathan, Tom from RFIIP for assistance, Paz for the flasks, Ross and Steve for planning and the Pathfinders Kirsty, Connor, Craig, Dulni, Devni, Flora and Alisa for some fine painting. Finally Rob for hero duties, when the paint ran out."

Give us two minutes...

Not spoon-fed propaganda

DEAR Mr 35 year old embarrassed, born and bred Falkland Islanders. Congratulations on a well written letter – shame about the content.

If you really are a 35 year old and lived in the Falklands for 'many years' you would be fully aware of our suspicions of Argentina. You would also be fully aware that we have first hand experience of having our lives compromised by Argentina – or maybe like Argentina you conveniently have memory lapses that exclude specific events in our history.

We are not spoon fed anti-Argentine propaganda. If you believe that then you are obviously not as well educated as your letter would suggest. We live in a democracy with freedom of speech, access to information and are free to make up our own mind about our stance towards Argentina.

Argentina is a democracy, liberal and respected? Remove your rose tinted glasses. Argentina is corrupt, imploding and in debt to its eyeballs. Are the people and media in Argentina afforded freedom of speech? Why do increasing numbers of corruption scandals appear to snake their way towards Mrs CFK and her cronies' doors? Why has Ghana impounded the Argentine flagged ship – oh yes – to try and recover debt that Argentina owes.

As for Argentina being respected: apart from Chavez and Co respectfully acting as Mrs CFK's Andrex, the only respect afforded is for their amazing ability for own goals.

Why would we want direct flights to Argentina? In case you have had another memory lapse, the last time that happened they controlled who could fly into and out of the Islands.

I would like to ask you a question. Are you employed? If not I'm sure Mrs CFK would give you a job as an ambassador with rapid promotion to the roll of personal Andrex.

From a 43 year old born and bred, but not embarrassed, British Falkland Islander who is not ashamed to sign a letter.

Oh, and if Argentina is so brilliant why are you living in UK?

Putting it politely

IN response to the letter in last Friday's PN from your 'name and address withheld' correspondent I would like to ask him (for this letter I have assumed it is a him) what his response would be if I asked to, er, how to put this politely, "have sex" with his wife or, possibly, daughter.

Would he sit down to discuss the merits of my proposal and benefits to wife or daughter or would they all just give me a resounding "NO!" (and probably be affronted by the suggestion).

Since, despite all it says, Argentina simply wishes to, um, "have sex" with the Falkland Islands I think it is only fair that the British Government and the Falkland Islanders respond with a polite and firm "NO!" There really is nothing else to discuss.

Annoying

THE views in the letter published in last weeks paper were very annoying and showed no understanding of Falkland Islanders as a people.

I will however, not lower myself to respond at any length to what can only described as utter drivel. Discussion over.

Go live there

REFERENCE the ridiculous letter from someone claiming to be an Islander, he obviously knows nothing about the Islands or the Islanders and if he supports the Argentine regime to such an extent, best he goes to live there (although he probably already does live there).

Team praised

The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Stanley Badminton Club following their participation at the Brazil International Gustavo Prata Badminton Cup.

WE want to thank the participation of athletes of the Falkland Islands in this event.

All were impressed with the joy, hospitality and generosity of the Falklands Team.

We hope to see them at the 28th International in Sao Paulo next year and also in other tournaments around the world

I, in particular, was very impressed with the Falkland Islands and maybe next year I'll make a trip to learn more about your country.

For me it will be a great pleasure to meet the Falkland Islands and also be able to review them ...after all Brazilians now consider you the Falkland Islands as great friends.

What future for Stanley?

OIL is forecast to flow in 2017 and over the next two years, until the drill rigs and ships arrive to commence work, preparatory development ashore will accelerate – yet without any coherent plan of how the community wants this development to proceed, it is already happening. If planning decisions are not taken now, in two years' time it will be too late and we will be left with developments already built on a case by case basis with no greater vision of how this will affect the society and community it has been placed within.

Currently submitted by only one applicant are planning applications for five new houses running up the hill on Hebe Street, where formerly there was one. The upper four houses will replace an existing traditional central Stanley plot, the lower house will infill on a plot that had originally been designated as a communal and parking area for three previously built new houses. If the last few years are considered, potentially eight new houses will have been built on Hebe Street where formerly there was only one. Further along Fitzroy Road a terrace of semi-detached houses have already been built and extensive plans to in-fill the area of the Ross Complex to the rear of the FIC warehouses with multiple units is being re-submitted. None of these developments can be said to be in a style traditional to the historic centre of Stanley.

Planning permission should not just be based on building regulations alone but on a larger consideration of amenity values, visual impact, compatibility with the surroundings, and the potential social impact of the proposed land-use, especially if rental property on a larger scale is to be considered as opposed to first-time buyers or family sub-divisions where this may meet an integral need of the community.

Is wall-to-wall high-density rental accommodation/housing a predominantly contract workforce, with no open space and associated increased traffic what we want in central Stanley?

The development of oil will undoubtedly require greater levels of accommodation but we as a community need to think carefully about how we want this to proceed. If current applications from speculative builders give an indication, the heritage of central Stanley will die by a thousand individual cuts, if only considered on a case by case basis, and we may end up with an oil encampment in the centre of Stanley. What impact will this have on the scenic heritage or social and cultural fabric of the town? A greater overall plan of where and how we want development to proceed is required.

This week Plexus have released the Socio-Economic study on the impacts that the Sea Lion development may bring. The personnel need for the immigration of both longer-term imbedded contractors and short-term back-to-back contract workers for onshore and offshore infrastructure development is addressed. We as a community need to take decisions on this now, not next year or the year after, development is already occurring without a wider plan.

The effects may not be as large as the fears of a 'garrison town' that in part led to the siting of MPC at a distance from Stanley, but some of the effects of a temporary contract work-force may be similar and we should think carefully about where such a work-force should be housed and how we want Stanley to function and look in the future.

This is a community decision and it should not just occur by default based on where developers' current land-holdings happen to be and how many units can be squeezed in.

As a nation we are not short of land and with planning, both housing and infrastructure development, protection of our heritage and maintenance of the scenic centre of Stanley, so appreciated by the many tourists that visit, should be possible. There is an urgent need for a greater town plan to achieve this.

No understanding

REGARDING the letter last week entitled 'Talk to Argentina' the writer obviously has little or no real understanding of the Falklands' situation. To start with he/she would have been five years old in 1982 so would not have seen the changes that were imposed on our country under Argentine rule. Don't kid yourself; you could not be further from the truth.

The fact is Islanders are and always have been willing to talk to Argentina about an economic relationship but not about our sovereign rights. They were invited to share in fisheries and oil but they chose to walk away when Falkland Islanders offered an open hand again. Also, if the writer did a little research he/she would know that Argentina refuses to recognise us as a people and will not consider talking to us.

Their country is riddled in debt and poverty, not to mention the high crime rate.

Just look at the current Argentine leader; does she come across as the kind of person the Islanders want to get to know? Hardly, given her stance towards us! Blockades, air link disruptions, refusal to allow Falklands or UK flagged vessels entering most Latin American ports, the list is endless.

Clearly the writer has had a bad time on the Islands so left and now has scores to settle. Maybe he/she even married an Argentine or is in fact a Falklands born Argentine – who knows or actually cares? What does matter is the security of the vast majority and their wishes.

Contrary to the opinion that we should contemplate a shared sovereignty, why can't Argentina leave us to enjoy the lifestyle we already have, and live under the flag of our choosing. There's nothing wrong with that. The real problem is that Argentina would not stop at any of the writer's proposals because at the end of the day all they want is full sovereignty of our home.

It is not up for negotiation and that is what the referendum is being held for, to determine the exact wishes of the Islanders, not shared sovereignty or a sell-out of any kind or compromise.

We are Falkland Islanders and wish to tell the world what we want.

It is also worth noting the fact that the writer is hiding by having their name withheld because he/she knows that what has been written is nothing short of treason in the eyes of genuine Falkland Islanders. It would be most interesting to know why the writer has not moved to Argentina to live given all the niceties penned about the country and the remarks made against Britain.

I suspect the reason being that this person knows how bad Argentina actually is and knows that Britain has everything to offer otherwise surely there is no logic in remaining in England.

The other interesting point is that this is a 35 year old so is someone from the very late 1970's; and as there were few Islanders born at that time, one could easily work out who they actually are and no doubt somebody eventually will.

It is the act of a coward to hide behind a cloak, so the comments made in the letter should be taken as someone simply out to cause trouble.

Of course you being so young at the time you would not have had the first hand experience of aggression.

You obviously have little or no respect for the Islanders who you paint as misinformed. You could not be further from the truth, because we are very well informed first hand of what is going on in Argentina.

Yes I know that the whole idea of democracy includes freedom of speech etc but try convincing the Argentines that we have rights and then maybe we might start believing in what you are saying. I also strongly believe that if someone wants to say something in the PN they should be made put their name. For all the reader knows you may actually be an Argentine posing as an Islander.

Robin Goodwin
Corriedale Farm

Out of touch

MANY people will have been annoyed by the anonymous letter published in last weeks Penguin News in which the writer criticises the Falkland Island Government for not engaging in discussions with Argentina or inviting them to take part in the planned referendum.

The author claims to be an Islander, something I do not believe, and he/she may well be one of our neighbours masquerading as an Islander.

However, on this occasion I feel it is worth responding in print, even if only to reassure concerned readers.

He/she seems to be out of touch with our approach to Argentina since we frequently ask them to join with us in discussions on any matter but sovereignty. However, they always refuse.

During the most recent meeting of the C24 at the United Nation in New York, MLA Mike Summers invited President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner to meet for discussions on matters of mutual interest, such as protecting shared fishing stocks etc. He tried to hand her a letter inviting her to talks but she refused to accept it.

Argentina often calls for discussions on sovereignty but fails to tell the world that their constitution forbids them from agreeing to anything other than complete annexation of the Falkland Islands.

The author of the PN letter fears we will not allow Argentina to present their case at the referendum in 2013; again, he or she is very much out of touch.

We have always said that we want this referendum to be seen by the world as a free and fair democratic process and have consistently said that anyone will have the right to present their views.

We are a democratic society and our Constitution guarantees everyone the right to Freedom of Speech.

The Government of Argentina would have the right to hold meetings in the Islands, allowed to distribute their views in pamphlets etc and apply to this news paper to buy space to present their views.

However, despite what the letter writer says, I believe that the Government of Argentina will not take up this opportunity as to do so would recognise the right of Falkland Islanders to exist and to determine our own future.

April and Pame in their new salon

Karma beauty in a Stanley setting

A HOT stone massage, aromatherapy, facials and waxing are just a few of the treatments on offer from Stanley's newest beauty salon, situated in the old Beauchene Complex on John Street.

Recently qualified beauticians, Islanders, Pame D'Avino and April Faria launched Karma Hair & Beauty Salon on Monday and the telephone barely stopped ringing when Penguin News paid a visit.

The pair undertook three year courses at Chichester College, Pame qualifying in 2011 and April earlier this year.

While April took 'the massage route', studying hot stone, aromatherapy and Swedish massage amongst other therapies, Pame qualified in the traditional course that includes electrolysis and similar treatments

Establishing their own salon was, "both of our ideas," said the girls. They applied to the Falkland Islands Development Corporation for assistance and were eventually offered 80 per cent of the funding in August.

A recent set-back involved the hairdresser deciding against moving to the Falkland Islands, however potential stylists for the salon are currently being interviewed in Chile they explained.

Karma hours are from 10am until 1pm and 2pm until 5.30pm Monday to Friday, but if your weekdays are too busy the girls are available on Saturday from 10am until 6pm.

Prices run from only £4 for a lip wax, with eyelash and eyebrow tints costing under £10, all the way through to a one hour and 30 minute aromatherapy massage for £30. So if you want to feel beautiful, body hair-free and soothed book an appointment on 52729.

The girls asked that their thanks be passed to FIDC, R&B Painting and Decorating, Maria, Steve and Beth and all their family and friends for support.

Bikers pay their respect at the National Arboretum

ALMOST 5,000 bikers descended on the National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire on October 6 in a mass act of remembrance for all the military and civilian lives lost in service to Great Britain.

This was the fifth year for the Ride to the Wall (RTTW) which is the biggest regular event at the Arboretum.

Among the bikers was Falklands veteran Andrew Weston (RN) who told Penguin News the venue held a special place in his life. "I was using the event to re-visit the South Atlantic Medal Memorial after being at its dedication earlier in the year," he said.

The service of remembrance was conducted by the Reverend Michael Brotherton MBE, Chaplain for RTTW 2012 who is currently the Chaplain on HMS Ocean, a member of the Armed Forces Scooter Club and the keen owner and rider of three scooters.

During his eulogy, he talked a lot about the war in 1982 as he had visited the Islands himself in 1985, Andrew said.

Later as Andrew walked around the thousands of bikes, he was delighted to see a bike flying a Falkland Islands flag and kindly took the opportunity to share it with Penguin News readers.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 4 October 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE Australian Wool Exchange's (AWEX) Eastern Market closed at AU$956cents/kg clean a increase of 16 cents this week. A high offer of over 44,000 bales kept a good sale clearance of 93.5% which was a positive sign for the market.

21 and 22 Micron prices regained their position this week with the only positive price rises in these finer ranges.

Wool sales in New Zealand remained flat this week with only 85% sale rate but South Africa seems to have had a better start to the season in general and sale rates from last week were 98% but a tightening in domestic supply is causing the price to stay up in this region.

Forging ahead to FC field season

WITH winter now behind us and spring in the air, we at Falklands Conservation are busy getting ready for the field season which is now upon us. That is not to say we have been idle over the winter months for we had two teams on Steeple Jason throughout August. One team, ably led by Kalinka Rexer-Huber, was discovering if it would be feasible to eradicate house mice from the island, owing to their impact on the smaller bird species.

The other team, led by the veteran naturalist Robin Woods, was looking at the winter ecology of Johnny Rooks: they estimate a population of 270 birds there, about half of which are juveniles.

Our three-year Darwin-funded raptor project, where Micky Reeves is project officer, is looking at these birds in more detail; as it is lambing time, Micky is currently investigating any interactions between sheep and raptors. Please remember to contact Micky if you have any issues you would like to discuss with him.

Our conservation officer, Andy Stanworth, is putting the finishing touches to our FIG-funded annual seabird monitoring programme where populations around the Islands of Black-browed albatross, Gentoos, King and Jackass penguins are to be counted. Penguins are counted both early in the season, when the birds are still on their eggs, to get an idea of the number of breeding pairs, and the chicks are counted later in the season to determine how successful the breeding has been.

Jonathan 'Jono' Handley, from the Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University in South Africa, is about to arrive in the Falklands for his second season studying the feeding behaviour of Gentoos, and he will also be helping us with the penguin counting. Still on penguins, Sarah Crofts has recently returned from the UK where she has been visiting Glasgow University and the British Antarctic Survey for help with analysing her two-seasons' worth of tracking data on Rockhoppers. This OTEP-funded work is still being written-up and will, amongst other things, soon result in an action plan for the species. Sarah is also overseeing the fitting-out of our new penguin rehabilitation centre behind the new Fisheries Department building.

Rebecca Upson, our botanist of four years, has been based in Kew over the winter and recently, in partnership with Kew Gardens, we have been successful in gaining EU BEST funding for a project looking at the potential impacts of climate change on the plants of the Falklands. Rebecca will be the project officer, and, although mostly based at Kew, this means that her expertise will remain available to us. Tim and Margaret Carr will be down in December to carry out fieldwork on the new species of Nassauvia unique to West Falkland, which was first found by Rebecca two years ago. This work is being funded by the Mohamed bin Zayed Species Conservation Fund. Richard Lewis, our invasive plants specialist, will be returning to the islands in November to continue his Defra-funded work on thistles and other invasives, and will be producing an invasive plant strategy for the islands. He will also be carrying out a botanical survey of the Mount Weddell area.

We have a new botanist, Alicky Davey, who arrived this week and will be investigating the possibility of using native seed mixes in habitat restoration work. This is a Darwin Challenge Fund project and she will be in the islands until the end of May. We have two other Challenge Fund projects underway, one surveying Commerson's and Peale's dolphins, led by Grant Munro, and another led by the Durrell Institute in the UK investigating the feasibility of producing a Island-wide vegetation map.

Clare Cockwell, our project officer based at Fox Bay, is now about halfway through our OTEP-funded project which is looking into the most suitable nature reserve system for the Islands. Currently she is involving the local community in producing management plans for both the Patricia Luxton Nature Reserve at Char- tres and the Lyn Blake Reserve at Hawks Nest Pond. Still in the west, the good news is that Helen Marsh has recently agreed to become our voluntary herbarium curator.

We have recently received our building permit for the redevelopment of the sheds behind Jubilee Villas, where a new Watch Group building is to be constructed, and also for expansion of our office space within Jubilee Villas. Talking of which, we must not forget the two other stalwarts of Falklands Conservation: Maggie Battersby who, with the assistance of Standard Chartered Bank, will continue to lead an exciting programme of activities for our Watch Group throughout the summer, and Farrah Peck without whose organisational skills none of this would be possible. Falklands Conservation currently has a vacancy for a trustee, so if you are a member and would like to get involved in helping run the organisation, please contact Farrah on 22247.

There is a lot going on...

Our Badminton ambassadors win the support of Brazil

THE Falkland Islands Badminton Team were given a first class welcome by their Brazilian hosts at their first participation in a Pan Am tournament held in Sao Paulo for the XXVII Brazil International Badminton Cup.

Marlene Short takes up the story: By all accounts, we made a memorable impact; both hosts and world players were very interested in learning about our Islands.

Richard Short was asked if he would join the team as Manager, with players Doug Clark, Mike Brownlee and Laura Minto, and player/coach Rebecca Pantaney of England. Roxy King also accompanied the team, feeding the social media from the court side with point by point action.

As well as managing the team, we also did up front public relations, settling the curiosity of many who were more than keen to learn about the Islands, it's people, our way of life.

We spent the entire week answering questions, handing out DVDs, flags, literature on the Falklands, pens and tee shirts and were also invited to the British Consulate to do a video interview for their website.

It was an interview based on life in the Falklands, and of course the obvious question, the significance of us remaining British.

Everything went smoothly, with the exception of an incident during the matches, which was handled very professionally and discreetly by the tournament officials when two Argentine officials turned up at the courts questioning the legitimacy of the Falklands entry into the tournament.

They were somewhat upset that the Falklands Flag was beside our players names on the scoreboard, and wanted to have it removed or changed to the Argentine flag.

Basically they did not want the Falklands to be recognised. But the cool calm resistance from the organisers of the Brazilian Badminton Confederation put the situation in order when they brought out the rule book, and pointed out that the Falklands were indeed members of the Badminton World Federation (WBF). The Argentines duly left.

We had great support from all of the Brazilian people we met, they support our right to self-determination and understand our wish to remain British.

They were so overwhelmed that they extended the invitation to the Falklands Team to attend the tournament on a regular basis and said that they hoped to see the Falklands participate in more World tournaments.

Declan secures his first win of the season

THE golf season is now firmly underway with weekly competitions until April.

On Sunday, the Decor Services Medal attracted a strong field of 23 golfers. Mixed weather, made for tough scoring conditions but nevertheless some players mastered the challenge. None better than Declan Bonner who posted a personal best for the Par 67 course earlier in the week of 74, and followed it up with an excellent 75 for a nett 62 and his first win of the season.

This week the prizes were an all family affair, with dad Tim Bonner taking second place three strokes back with a nett 65.

Declan's score was only bettered on the day by Club Captain Troyd Bowles's solid 74.

The fine condition of the greens produced a glut of birdies and the jackpot rolls-over until the Fortuna competition.

On October 27 there is the annual Member/Non-Member event with once again the club offering one season's membership to the winning non-member.

The entry list for the Matchplay has been posted on the Notice Board and the draw will take place after the November Medal.

This Sunday the club host a Team Alliance, three players per team, Stableford format, with two of the three scores to count on each hole.

Players are asked to sign in by 9am for a 9:15am Tee-off.

Generous and transparent Islands say Noble visitors

REPRESENTATIVES of Noble Energy, farm-in partners with Falkland Islands Oil and Gas (FOGL) flew in from Houston by private jet this week in order to attend meetings with their partners and the Falkland Islands Government and to view the Islands oil related infrastructure.

At a reception hosted by His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood on Wednesday evening Noble Energy's Regional Vice President International Division Charles J 'Chip' Rimer told invited guests: "Noble has been in different areas all over the world but one thing that jumps out at me here, I feel a generosity and openness and transparency."

He added that Noble Energy emphasised "communications," in its relationships and commented, "we may not always agree, we may not always understand but if we can communicate we can find avenues to go forward to our future."

In August when FOGL sealed

Noble's Charles J Rimer with the Governor Nigel Haywood

the deal with Noble Energy, FOGL Chief Executive Tim Bushell, who was also in the Falkland Islands this week said: "We are delighted that Noble is joining us in our exciting exploration programme. Noble brings strong technical expertise and an excellent track record of exploration and development success."

FOGL also have a farm-out agreement with exploration and production company Edison; set up in June 2012.

FITB showcases Falklands worldwide

MANAGING Director of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board Tony Mason is to lead a team of delegates from the Islands to World Travel Mart in London next month.

He told Penguin News yesterday he was very pleased to be leading the team of "highly qualified delegates," adding, "Support for this has been amazing and we are well on our way to presenting the Falkland Islands to a worldwide audience."

Mr Mason made the decision to attend this year's event with a large presence as he believed, the time for tourism expansion in the Falkland Islands was now. With focus on investment in the tourism sector he said expansion and growth will come over the next few years.

"It's a strategic and exciting time for us, planning and development is paramount to our success. We must move forward as a team and ensure that all of our departments are fully engaged in meeting the growing demand in the tourism sector."

World Travel Market, is the leading global event for the travel industry; a vibrant must attend four-day business-to-business event presenting a diverse range of destinations and industry sectors to UK and International travel professionals. Mr Mason feels it is a unique opportunity for the whole global travel trade to meet, network, negotiate and conduct business under one roof.

"I am very pleased with the response I've received locally and in the UK supporting this event. It clearly shows a community-wide passion for increasing, not only tourism to the Falkland Islands but also a dedication to fulfilling the growing demand for infrastructure."

Mr Mason also noted that Falkland Islands Development Corporation, Conservation and Government would be represented at the event.

Smoke law overlooked

DESPITE legislation banning the sale of tobacco products to anyone under the age of 18, which took effect in 2010, it has neither been enforced or publicised; and two retailers confirmed to Penguin News this week they had not been made aware of the law change.

Manager of Kelper Stores Ailie Biggs told Penguin News: "As far as we were aware the law had changed in the UK but not in the Islands; we hadn't been made aware of it. In fact, when I made enquiries amongst the staff one commented that cigarettes had been sold to 16 year olds in front of Police Officers on a number of occasions."

Manager of Seafish Chandlery Neville Hayward commented: "Around October 2008 we took the decision ourselves before the law was enforced to ban the sale of all tobacco products to under 18s. When the new store opened in April 2009 it was designed to not display the sale of any tobacco product. All our tobacco products are kept below each checkout out of sight from all customers."

Falkland Islands Company Managing Director Roger Spink said: "It is always our intention to operate within the law. Having now heard of this change we are making our staff aware of the requirements."

The legislation also prohibits the possession of tobacco products by anyone under the age of 18.

When Penguin News made enquiries at the Falkland Islands Community School, a poll was taken that showed 37 per cent still thought it was legal to possess tobacco products at 16; seven per cent thought it age 17, with 56 per cent aware that it was 18.

A separate poll of 16 Year 11 students showed that 37 per cent were unaware of the correct age.

Chief Inspector Len McGill commented: "Enforcement of the relevant law is a joint responsibility between the RFIP as investigatory authority for most areas of criminal law (excepting, for example, offences under fisheries and customs laws), and the Attorney General's Chambers as prosecutors for all areas of criminal law.

"When it was proposed in 2008 that the law in connection with children and tobacco change; to incrementally increase the age at which tobacco can be purchased/supplied to children, it was intended there be advance publicity of each change to the law (ie in 2009 and 2010). Unfortunately, no effective publicity seems to have taken place, and enforcement of the new law has been similarly overlooked.

"To rectify this situation, the RFIP intend approaching all retail outlets very shortly to advise them of the requirements of the law, and to try to ensure that those affected more widely have the opportunity to familiarise themselves with the correct information about the law."

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THE subject of Camp road designation is to be considered at Executive Council next week and will no doubt bring further comment in the Legislative Assembly meeting on Thursday.

FIG officials have claimed that work on this and many other road related issues was already in the pipeline and was not solely in response to HM Coroner's comments following a recent inquest (see page 4). While it would be difficult to argue with that, I personally think those comments may have been the poke with a sharp stick that was needed to flush the work in progress out of the aforementioned pipeline and on to the legislative table.

We can only speculate what the outcome will be at this stage, but it seems fairly safe to assume that all road users will soon have to conform to the same laws and given that they are roads, all weather tracks, call them what you like, built with public funds, this has to be the case.

I sincerely doubt it will make much difference to everyday life in the Camp, after all there are plenty of alternative tracks for those who don't have or refuse to obtain a licence and Westers having to pay vehicle tax after all these years is not such a hardship really.

There may be a few inconveniences as a short adjustment period is made but at the end of the day it would be totally irresponsible to ignore the evidence put before the Coroner and subsequently passed on to the relevant officials as Rule 39 of the Coroner's Rules requires

MY MLAs of the week are the unusual combination of Sharon Halford and Mike Summers. As one of the horse owners who had made representation to Assembly Members and the Lands Committee to review Common grazing fees (report on page 5) it was with some trepidation I attended the meeting last week. I need not have worried though, as it was clear from the start that Mike and Sharon were sympathetic to our concerns about future management of the Common and appreciated that as a group we felt discriminated against by being the only users to pay. While I am among the first to grumble when I don't agree with decisions I also like to give an accolade where it's due.

There's still a lot of work to be done, but I am sleeping a bit easier now in the knowledge that at least two of our esteemed leaders are ready to ride shotgun in our bid to preserve the Common and ensure equality for those who use it.

Drink driver fined and banned after losing control of vehicle

MOUNT Pleasant man Robert John George (34) was fined £350 and banned from driving for a year in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Mr George pleaded guilty to drink driving on September on the Stanley to Mount Pleasant Road.

Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis told the Court that the Police had received a 999 call in the early evening of September 27 and had attended a single vehicle accident near the Bluff Cove turn-off.

A white Land Rover Discovery (F700E) was on its side at the north side of the road and Mr George identified himself as the driver. There was one passenger. Mrs Inglis said it appeared the driver had lost control of the vehicle after a front near side tyre blew out.

A road side breath test proved positive and a later test at the Police Station gave a lower reading of 40mg per 100ml of breath (35mg is the legal limit).

Mr George apologised to the Court saying he had only consumed three to four beers and thought he would be OK to drive.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley told Mr George that after four beers he would have known he was over the limit but had still chosen to drive.

"If you want to drink and drive and kill yourself that is a matter for you, but don't go driving on public roads where you may kill other people," he added.

In addition to the fine Mr George was ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Date for Duke of Kent visit

GOVERNMENT House has announced the dates for the visit to the Falkland Islands by His Royal Highness The Duke of Kent.

The Duke will visit from November 8-13 as part of the events being held to mark the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen.

During his visit he will undertake a number of official functions including opening the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute and unveiling a plaque at the site of the Historic Dockyard; he will also visit the hospital and the Community School.

The Duke will participate in remembrance activities with visiting veterans at San Carlos on November 9 and at the Liberation Monument on November 10.

He will also attend the services in Christ Church Cathedral and at the Cross of Sacrifice in Stanley on Remembrance Sunday.

Alicia Castro meets with HM Queen

THE Argentine Ambassador to the UK, Alicia Castro, had what is reported to have been a "warm" meeting with Queen Elizabeth II on Tuesday.

The Ambassador told reporters that the meeting, "was an opportunity to improve bilateral relations and understanding between both countries." She also commented on the Queen's sense of humour. The meeting was an opportunity to present the Ambassadors' credentials to the Queen. Ms Castro highlighted that Argentina was the Latin American country with the highest rate of British expatriates, particularly the strong community of Welsh people living in Patagonia.

FI students illustrate new book

DISASTER relief charity ShelterBox are launching a new book to help children understand the impact of major disasters like the Japanese tsunami which includes prize winning illustrations from Falklands students.

The book, titled The Day the Sea Changed, has been illustrated by renowned children's author Michael Foreman and primary school pupils from all over the UK including the Falkland Islands.

It tells the story of a community hit by a tsunami and the devastating impact it has on them, but how ultimately they come together to rebuild their lives. Hundreds of primary school pupils entered an illustration competition to have their drawings published in the book which is being launched on Thursday November 8, at a special event organised by ShelterBox and The Reading Agency. At the London event, the 21 winning young illustrators will be presented with certificates.

Competition winners included Daphne and Chiara Gomez Reid and Jessica Whalley King.

Laquisha Ellick and Emma Jayne Burston received runner up certificates from ShelterBox.

Teacher Anna Stenning, from the Infant and Junior School/ Camp Education, said: "For the second year in a row, the children have produced some fabulous works of art. It was difficult enough for us to choose the entries to go to ShelterBox, let alone for them to then choose the final illustrations for the book. Many thanks to Karen Armstrong Ford for helping me with the final choices we sent, and to all the children for their hard work."

A spokesperson from the Infant/Junior School and Camp Education said, "to have three children as winners out of the 21 in total is a fantastic percentage."

Rockopper licence changes approved

THE Falkland Islands Government has approved changes to Rockopper Exploration's production licence interests held in the Falklands to permit the assignment of 60% of Rockopper's licenses to Premier Oil and the approval of Premier Oil to become the operator of the licenses.

In July 2012 Rockopper announced that it had entered into a conditional farm-out agreement with Premier Oil plc, whereby Premier agreed to acquire 60% of Rockopper's interests in its North Falkland Basin licences. Formal completion of the farm-out process is anticipated shortly.

Pupils with their 'mind apples'

Apples for mental health

INFANT Junior School and Camp Education pupils took up the theme of World Mental Health Day last week with the help of the hospital and Team Tranquil. The group produced 'Mind Apples' which illustrated what made them feel calm, while the Falkland Islands Community School looked at emotions as an art project producing some inspiring portraits as a result.

Two students Leo Clarke and Michaela Clifford also approached members of the public and invited them to complete light hearted questionnaires about mental health and diet.

Thank you Islanders

OVER the past two weeks Islanders have probably seen some increased activity at Mount Pleasant with six monthly routine training exercises taking place in and around the base, including on Onion Ranges.

The routine joint service training exercises, which have taken place on the Islands over many years, have been designed to test the ability of BFSAI in deterring any aggression against the South Atlantic Overseas Territories, including the Falkland Islands. To a greater or lesser extent all of the soldiers, sailors, airmen and civilians (including contractors) based at Mount Pleasant Complex were involved in the exercises, as were members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF), and the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP).

Commander British Forces, Brigadier Bill Aldridge has paid tribute to the support and assistance the Falkland Islanders have given him and his forces during a very busy time. He said: "The Falkland Islands delivers one of the best tri-service training environments anywhere in the world, allowing troops to prepare and fully comply with the British Forces South Atlantic Islands' mission: to deter any military aggression against the South Atlantic Overseas Territories."

Brigadier Aldridge said operationally, the three Services and their specific skills were confronted with all manner of challenges on a daily basis. "The exercises were demanding and realistic and were designed to test the whole range of BFSAI assets. They also reinforced the constant and continuing need for flexibility, tenacity and robustness from all elements at MPC and beyond."

He concluded: "Such routine training exercises allow for continued preparation and training; proving that military personnel can work efficiently alongside the civilian agencies, including the Falkland Islands Defence Force. I thank both the Government, and, most of all, the Islanders, for their continued support and forbearance in allowing these important exercises. Without their tolerance and good humour, we would find it much harder to perform our defence tasks."

He is also very pleased to welcome attendees from, International Travel and Tours and Falkland Island Holidays. "This year we are stepping outside the box and moving in new directions and at a larger scale." Focus on upcoming events include, participation at this year's USTOA conference in Hawaii, where Mr Mason has accepted three private speaking engagements during the conference. Following USTOA, The Falkland Islands will be represented at The Travel and Adventure Shows in Los Angeles, California in January and Santa Clara, California in February 2013.

During the later part of 2013 and throughout 2014 the Falkland Islands will be represented in new destinations around the world and he hopes to find the same level of support from all sectors at upcoming events as well.

Mr Mason says he is looking forward to meeting with Carnival Cruises during the event and notes Carnival Corporation Chairman and CEO Micky Arison will make a rare public appearance at World Travel Market this year.

Arison will be taking part in the Travel Weekly Cruise Debate on Tuesday November 6 as the industry seeks to make sense of what has been a tumultuous year for the sector. Having been Chief Executive of the Carnival Corporation since 1979 and its Chairman since 1990, he will have plenty of insights when he discusses the industry with session moderator Travel Weekly Group UK Editor-in-Chief Lucy Huxley.

Arison will be joined in the debate by Carnival UK Managing Director David Dingle who will not only draw upon his extensive experience from working in the cruise industry but also from the wider perspective of the industry he gained working on the ABTA board. The third confirmed speaker is Costa Cruises and AIDA Managing Director Michael Thamm who as early as 1993 was holding senior positions in the cruise industry. They will be joined on stage by a fourth speaker yet to be confirmed.

The four speakers will discuss the industry which was marred by tragedy in January this year when the Costa Concordia ran aground off the coast of Italy, killing 32 crew and passengers. The industry has also dealt with fluctuating oil prices but despite this has remained strong with growing numbers of customers and a number of new ships commissioned.

World Travel Market, the leading global event for the travel industry, attracts nearly 3,000 journalists - all looking to learn about the latest trends, travel hot spots and industry developments.

During the World Travel Mart Event, Video footage will be shown on FITV.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

FOUR weeks, three conferences and a talk at the International Institute of Strategic Studies has been physically tiring but intellectually stimulating. The question and answer session after my talk seemed to go well (or so I was told by people in the audience). With attendees from a number of embassies including those of Italy, Sweden, Russia, Slovenia and Serbia, defence analysts, journalists and researchers it was a great opportunity to reach new audiences.

The jury is still out on the relative value of the Liberal Democrat conference which was considerably less busy than the others. I believe we need to do it because it is the one where we had to answer the most searching questions and work hard to convince a good number of the justification for the defence of our right to self determination. Arguably at the Conservative conference we talk mainly to the converted while at every Labour conference we have to make a few more converts, and at the Lib Dems even more so. Unfortunately next year's Lib Dem conference is in Glasgow which creates logistic nightmares. It is easy to get people there but getting the stand up there and erected and then dismantled and back to Brighton for the next conference is an alarming prospect, not just for us but for big operators like the BBC and Sky.

There are always comedy moments, for example Paddy Ashdown allegedly telling the Argentine ambassador that she is 'bonkers' if she thinks any sensible UK politician would deny the Falkland Islanders' right to self determination. We did not see her at the other two conferences. One Lib Dem person suggested we sell West Falkland to the Argentine 'as no-one lives there': this gave me flashbacks to some of the crazier ideas mooted in '82. I don't think Ian would mind me saying that I was quickest to recover when a Conservative lady marched briskly to the stand and demanded a knitting pattern. Scrabbling for any appropriate response I said that any pattern would do as long as it matched the wool thickness. She marched off again, seemingly satisfied.

Camp roads designation on the cards for next week's ExCo

PROPOSALS for the designation of all roads are to be put before this month's meeting of Executive Council, said Chief Executive Keith Padgett in response to HM Coroner Carl Gumsley's comments following the inquest into the death of Gil Giles on West Falkland in January 2011.

Mr Giles had been the passenger in a Land Rover driven by his friend. The vehicle had been travelling south along the Hill Cove road towards the bottom of a descent when it left the road, launched into the air, flew through the air for approximately 14 metres, landed on its front end, and then as a result of the momentum built up effectively somersaulted before landing on its wheels again. He was pronounced dead at the site of the incident.

Mr Gumsley stressed that the incident took place on a road built by the Falkland Islands Government, and one to which the public had access. He announced he would be writing to the authorities about the matters that were revealed at the inquest to share the evidence he had heard with them in an attempt to minimise the chances of such a tragedy occurring again. He duly contacted the Chief Executive and Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside following the conclusion of the inquest on June 8, which found that Mr Giles had died as a result of the injuries sustained in the accident.

Two of the most disturbing aspects of the evidence heard by the Court were in relation to the state of intoxication of the driver and the condition of the vehicle itself.

"Despite the driver in this case driving the vehicle in a heavily intoxicated condition, and despite the fact that the vehicle being driven was in a dangerous condition, the driver had committed no criminal or regulatory offence notwithstanding that the vehicle was on a public road," said Mr Gumsley in a letter to the Chief Executive.

"This is because the vast majority of road traffic laws do not apply to West Falkland as their roads are not declared or designated. Indeed, as you will undoubtedly know, the road traffic laws do not apply to large swathes of East Falkland either for the same reason," he stated, adding: "During the Inquest I asked why the law did not apply to all roads to which the public have access, wherever they may be in the Falkland Islands. No explanation could be given."

Responding on October 2, Mr Padgett said proposals would go to the October ExCo and if approved and once implemented should address the issues of drink-driving and the manner in which vehicles are driven. The designation of roads would be accompanied by appropriate signage, he added.

Further investment was to be made in the road network to improve its condition in response to a number of inputs and demands and was not being made solely due to the incident in question, Mr Padgett said.

Mr Keenleyside responding to his letter from HM Coroner, said the designation of all roads built at public expense would be considered at Executive Council.

"There will be a recommendation that all road traffic law be applied and will include all offences relating to: driving a motor vehicle whilst over the prescribed limit, driving a motor vehicle without a valid policy of insurance, exceeding the speed limit, reckless driving and offences dealing with the road worthiness of vehicles."

Approval had been given to a prioritisation system for maintenance and improvement to the Camp road network, a programme of works approved and an asset management plan to be developed, said Mr Keenleyside. He added however that this would not provide an instant fix and the road network would continue to be variable and contain less than ideal gradients, sections of running surface which would be variable with weather conditions and elevated sections without side barriers for the foreseeable future.

Your questions answered

Q: Who makes the rules for the hire of the Town Hall

A: Answer provided by the Public Works Department

In terms of 'who makes the rules', the hire agreement is a document which has been developed over a significant period of time, with the current version taking into account relevant legislation, ExCo decisions, within input and recommendations from various parties including Chief Fire Officer, RFIP, Attorney Generals Chambers, comments from the Courts and other building users.

In relation to alcohol - the issue of temporary licences for those wishing to hire the hall for functions requiring those - is of course separate from the Hire Agreement itself and any terms relating to the issue of those licences is a matter for others.

Lands Committee takes a look at Common issues

RESPONDING to concerns voiced by a group of Common Land users and horse owners, the Lands Committee chairman MLA Sharon Halford has asked that papers be prepared by the relevant government officers exploring the need for a Common Land Manager and a review of grazing fees before the next budget process.

Following the extensive ditching in the Whale Bone Cove area carried out by FIG a group of alarmed Islanders got together and made representation to Assembly Members concerning the possible misuse and future conservation of the Cape Pembroke area.

The dumping of materials which possibly release toxins in the Mary Hill Quarry, waste soil containing rubbish being spread out and the lack of protection for a designated area were among the issues raised and discussed at the meeting on Thursday.

Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne said the issues surrounding the designation and management of Common Land were very complicated and work had been ongoing for more than a year due to a shortage of resources.

MLA Halford said a dedicated Common Ranger should be recommended, adding, "Ownership is needed, otherwise nothing is going to happen and the situation will get worse."

MLA Mike Summers said some important issues had been raised by the group, and if toxins were being dumped in Mary Hill Quarry it was due to, "a lack of supervision or laziness."

Waste soil being spread on barren areas would improve the area if planted, MLA Halford pointed out, and Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside added that natural regeneration was the preferred method as native seed was difficult to obtain. Mr Payne confirmed that experiments in the Surf Bay area with planting had been less successful than natural regeneration.

The ditching in the Lady Liz area was, "serious," said MLA Summers adding that there was no doubt it would have an impact on the vegetation. "If work on that scale is to take place again we need some assurance that there will be some process in place so that FIG is not doing things without consulting people who have knowledge of the long term impact," he said.

Horse owners had also pointed out in a separate document that they were the only users of Stanley Common who were charged for the privilege and while they were not against a charge, it was unfair to charge some but not others.

MLA Halford said it was unfair that those people who helped to manage the Common were the only ones who were charged for using it. She said that while there had always been grazing fees it was getting, "a little over the top now." If we are going to charge one group we have to charge the others, she said and MLA Summers agreed, saying the current arrangement was "inequitable" and not justifiable.

More than £6,000 per year is paid for grazing on Common Land with a further £7,000+ generated from the lease of Government land in and around Stanley for grazing. This goes to FIG's consolidated fund with £1,000 allocated to the Dept of Agriculture for fence repairs which have historically cost between £300 - £1,000.

Horseowners had suggested that if charges were to continue they would like to see some return possibly in the form of a stable and suitable corrals for working with horses, however, this was not discussed at the meeting with MLAs Summers and Halford indicating they were in favour of not setting a charge.

It was agreed a set of grazing proposals from the Department of Agriculture should be prepared in advance of the budget process, however the issue of leased grazing plots was completely different and would not be considered, said MLA Halford.

Papers further exploring the issues and the way forward are to be put before the next meeting of the Lands Committee scheduled for November 8.

One of the ditches by Whale Bone Cove

FROM Victory Green and several other points in Stanley it is possible to see names of several ships of the Royal Navy set out in white painted stones on the hill on the north side of the harbour. The oldest dates from 1895 and the most recent set out in 2006. Warships of the South-east America station of the Royal Navy, with the Senior Officer based at Montevideo were regular visitors to the Falklands in order to carry out duties as protection vessels for the seal rookeries which during the latter half of the nineteenth century were being plundered by poachers from other nations. The earlier vessels often referred to as gunboats, were small ships powered by both steam and sail and classed as sloops.

Barracouta

Barracouta came in 1895 to establish a naval firing range at Fairy Cove which had up until that time been at Montevideo. The Falklands Governor commented in a report that this was a welcome move as it would mean more frequent calls by, as he so splendidly put it 'Men of war of Her Majesty's Navy' to the Falklands.

Beagle

Not to be confused with Fitzroy's and Darwin's earlier Beagle, she first came in 1897 to continue the protection duties. The first Beagle made her calls at the then principal settlement Port Louis in 1833 and 1834 before the establishment of Stanley.

Protector

Protector was built for the Royal Navy as a net layer and target towing vessel by Yarrow & Co in 1936. In 1955 she was converted into an Antarctic Patrol Vessel when the bridge was updated and enclosed, a hangar and flight deck for two Whirlwind helicopters was added at the stern, her hull strengthened for ice navigation, with a tripod mast and crane added shortly afterwards. Her main armament was a pair of 4in guns. For ceremonial purposes four three pounder saluting guns were fitted. Her complement of 270 officers and men including a detachment of Royal Marines usually remained on board for two years.

She arrived in Stanley in November 1956 to take up duties in the Falklands and the Antarctic during the southern summer months, returning to the United Kingdom each year for refitting and refurbishment until finally being replaced by HMS Endurance in November 1968. Protector was eventually sold to the Royal New Zealand Navy for Antarctic duties.

Endurance

She was formerly the cargo vessel Anita Dan owned by J Lauritzen of Copenhagen. Because of her ice strengthened hull she was purchased by the Royal Navy for duties in the Falklands and Antarctica. This

Exploring a unique naval connection

FOLLOWING on from last week's article relating to the painting of the Camber ship names, Falklands Islands historian John Smith has kindly provided an expanded history of the relationship between the vessels and the Falkland Islands.

HMS Endurance

involved considerable structural changes for the addition of a flight deck and hangar to take two Wasp helicopters, as well as increasing the accommodation to carry a complement of 138 personnel which included a detachment of Royal Marines. The new accommodation though conforming in some respects to Royal Navy standards still retained some of the elegance of her passenger role in fittings and panelling.

She was commissioned into the Royal Navy in 1968 and renamed Endurance by Sir Ernest Shackleton's granddaughter the Hon. Alexandra Shackleton, the ship's name being part of the Shackleton family motto 'Fortitudine Vincimus' meaning 'by endurance we conquer' and also that of Shackleton's Antarctic expedition ship in 1914-16. Thus she became another Falklands and Antarctic guard ship replacing the aging Protector.

She soon became affectionately known as 'The Red Plum' possibly because of her colour or maybe that a draft or an appointment to serve in her was considered to be the 'plum job' in the Royal Navy. The southern summer months were spent in assisting in scientific work as well as moving personnel on field expeditions and around the bases of the British Antarctic Survey and always carrying out considerable hydrographical work in the Falklands, Antarctica and South Georgia.

The pinnacle of her career was the part she played in the 1982 war in the South Atlantic under the command of Captain Nick Barker when she played cat and mouse with ships of the Argentine navy in and around South Georgia carrying out a vital listening and communications role in the events which were to follow. A term attachment to the Falkland Islands. However HMS Lynx did have a unique connection with the Islands which took place in 1967, which is explained by Jan Cheek in David Tatham's 'Dictionary of Falklands Biography'.

Betty Biggs at that time resident with her family in South Georgia was expecting a fourth child and was sent to Stanley on the mid-winter trip of RMS Darwin. The doctor on board became anxious and asked if there was anything faster in the area. Fortunately and fortunately, HMS Lynx was on passage from South Africa and so came to the rescue. After a dramatic mid ocean rendezvous at night when Betty was tied onto a stretcher and winched into and out of a small boat for the transfer, Lynx set off at speed for the Falklands.

The captain famously announced to the ships company that Mrs Biggs was no more likely to give birth on board than he was. Pauline Lynx Biggs was born as they sailed into Stanley Harbour.

The arrival of a 'Man o War' as HM ships were invariably called years ago was always a great event with dances in the Town Hall and often a children's party on board, best recalled by an extract from 'Those were the days'

"The dances put on for visiting ships were always very much looked forward to. Besides being a good social occasion it was an opportunity to meet new people, or sometimes to meet up with old friends who had visited before on other ships. The lads on board were a good crowd so we'd often during the dance invite them up next day for a meal. Many of them still write to us now especially at Christmas time. We knew most of them only by their nicknames which was the custom in the Navy then. Smudger, Tanky, Knocker, Hookey, Snowy or Tinker.

Those were the days when the sailors and marines had to come ashore in the 'Number Ones' best uniforms with gold wire badges. They had to remain smart as well as behaving themselves properly at dances as well as in the pubs too, as 'pickets' from the ship were always on patrol in Stanley. They went around in twos looking formidable and much bigger than they really were; impressive figures in long greatcoats with their red and white 'shore patrol' armbands along with whistles on a long silver chain around their necks. Sometimes they carried long wooden sticks like pick axe handles. Any breaches of discipline or uniform, as well as fights and scuffles were quickly dealt with. Offenders being smartly dragged off usually struggling and swearing over to the Police Station where they were placed in the 'cooler' until ready to be taken back on board ship. Many were the times when they would come ashore next day to apologise for any trouble they had caused."

Dumbarton Castle

Dumbarton Castle, having the longest name of any ship in the Royal Navy, her name and class is perpetuated in the stones on the hill. HMS Dumbarton Castle was launched and soon afterwards sailed straight into action as part of the Falklands' Task Force in 1982. She remained closely connected with the Falklands for the next 25 years as the Falkland Islands Patrol Vessel, being tasked overtly at times to patrol the waters of the Islands in a large variety of roles including transportation and insertion of troops, to conduct search and rescue operations, to provide a seaborne helicopter platform and often visiting South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands. She was assisted during those years by her sister ship HMS Leeds Castle, both being welcome visitors to Camp settlements during routine patrols. They took it in turns spending two years on station in the South Atlantic while the other was in the UK for maintenance and other duties. Their crews of southern deployments were changed every six months except for her last crew who remained with her for the final twelve months. Both ships were replaced in 2007 by HMS Chyde as the now permanent Falklands' patrol vessel.

Lynx

The name Lynx used to be there but is no more; possibly because the entitlement to have a name on the hill was only granted to vessels with a significant long

Tsunami buoys a necessity

As you know, I have highlighted in the past my deep concerns for the populace of the Islands being exposed to tsunamis.

In no way are these concerns intended to cause panic, but I keep getting reassuring platitudes from MLAs. Indeed we do not live on the Pacific Ring of Fire, but we must take into consideration that we are living within an active seismic area ie South Sandwich Islands, the Scotia Arc and Drake Passage. Unfortunately, if there is a tsunami, the Falkland Islands would be in a very bad position because the wave would be amplified by being on a continental shelf and the Falklands would receive its effects from the south, north, east and west.

Around March 2011, I informed the police of a tsunami warning and the reply from the now resigned Chief of Police was, "What do you want me to do about it?" which did not give me any confidence whatsoever.

At a public meeting held on August 27 2012, I asked "What are the evacuation procedures in the case of a tsunami?" The following is part of the reply provided by the Director of Emergency Services: "On April 14 this year there was an earthquake in Drake Passage and initially it was believed it would not affect the Falkland Islands. However later in the morning I received a call from the JOC at MPA informing me that they had received a tsunami warning and if correct it would hit the Falklands in 15 minutes. The decision I had to make in quick time was, do we inform the public and potentially worry then unnecessarily or inform then and wait to see what might happen.

On this occasion I liaised with the military and a SAR helicopter was mobilised to provide an aerial platform and to be on location near North Arm if evacuation was necessary. Simultaneously I instructed my officer on duty to telephone North Arm and the outlying islands so they were aware of the warning also to report back any unusual sea behaviour. In this event no noticeable changes were reported in sea levels or state."

My problem with this response is that a shockwave, which is what a tsunami is, expands in deep water. Therefore on the surface you could be in a rowing boat and only feel a slight ripple, whereas when it hits a continental shelf, which our Islands sit on, the shockwave is compressed by the bottom pushing the water up. The water on top travels faster than the water at the bottom, causing a drag at the bottom and no drag at the top, hence the wave. Therefore surface visual observation, unless you are flying over the continental shelf, is thus far the only way to know that a wave is coming.

Therefore I strongly suggest we position seismic buoys to record the shock wave from the surface and give our people better opportunity to take precautions as I think the present situation is totally inadequate.

If everyone was given the first warning of just 15 minutes I am sure a large number of lives could be saved. For people getting to high ground as in Stanley, a lot of people could get up to Murray Heights (184 feet above sea level) in that time. People in low lying grounds, islands and farms could again go to higher ground.

Better still, if we position seismic buoys it would not be minutes warning, it would be hours even though the shockwaves travel at 500mph submerged.

Let us hope this unlikely situation does not take place, but if it takes place during the referendum, the question of self determination will be answered by other means.

'82 vet responds

I HAVE been following with interest the letters in the Penguin News over the last couple of weeks as I was with 2 Para in 1982 and am here for my second visit since the conflict. I am now a secondary school teacher.

The unnamed author made a point of listing the benefits of being part of Argentina, briefly they were:

1. Post through Argentina.
2. Modern phones & internet.
3. Regular shipments of food
4. Direct flights.
5. Access to Argentine health & education systems.
6. Population growth, skilled and un-skilled labour.
7. Full benefits of the Argentinean state.

The first four of these benefits should be available from any good neighbour and the fifth could be paid for by the Falkland Islands Government as required if Argentina was a good neighbour.

The sixth 'benefit' is nonsense

ARGENTINE President Cristina Kirchner has sacked Navy Chief of Staff Carlos Paz over Ghana's seizure of an Argentine frigate, a presidential spokesman said on Monday.

Carlos Paz is to be replaced by Vice Admiral Daniel Martin, a veteran of the 1982 war between Argentina and Britain.

Paz's dismissal came after Argentine naval training ship Libertad was seized on October 2, at Tema Port in Ghana, where a judge ruled Argentina had an outstanding debt with investors over expired bonds dating from December 2001.

Two other top naval officials have also been forced to step down. The spokesman said the naval officials were responsible for making changes in the itinerary of the warship, and, in par-particular, making a visit to Ghana.

When it was seized, the Argentine warship was reported to be on a "goodwill mission" with a crew of 220 aboard including 110 students, some from Uruguay and Chile.

The move to capture the ship was sparked by a claim by NML Capital Limited, which is suing the Argentina over its 2002 bond default. NML Capital claims that Argentina owes it more than 370 million US dollars and international investors have put a $20 million price tag on the ship.

US creditors are demanding payment in full on Argentine bonds for which most investors accepted 30 cents on the dollar in 2005. Justice Richard Agyei-Frimpong had ordered the tall sailing ship held at Tema harbor days earlier after creditors cited judgments in the US and Britain approving the seizure of Argentine assets anywhere in the world.

Argentina's government said the ruling violates international norms as well as rulings by judges in the US, Germany and France that found Argentine military vessels immune from the seizures.

As for the seventh, the Islanders have already had a short taste of the benefits of being part of Argentina in 1982.

As the Islanders take a great interest in regional politics and have a huge presence on the internet, they are already extremely well informed as to what Argentina wants.

They have been raped once and have no wish to get into bed with the rapist as I believe the referendum will clearly show.

Thanks to FIGO

I FOR one would like to, in response to MLA Sharon Halford's rant in PN last week, thank the FIGO office.

I also find it hard to believe that anyone would verbally abuse the staff there. Having recently had to use the system, I found Colin's devotion to helping me out when I was in need, amazing. He did not seem to be able to do enough for me in a very difficult situation. So I wonder how bad it has to be for someone to be swearing on the phone at them. I also am appalled to hear this.

Also, whilst I am writing I would like to take a little more space if possible to thank the staff in our hospital, from the lady who comes sweeping around your bed to the doctor at the top of the tree. Having spent some time in a very modern hospital in the UK recently I can only say how lucky we are and how well we are looked after by our hospital staff here in the Falklands.

New health and safety company

A NEW health and safety consultancy and training company was launched by Falklands resident Steve Dent this month.

Invenio Falkland Islands has been established to offer accredited training and health, safety and the environment consultancy to South Atlantic organisations.

The company offers support for ongoing management of Safety Management System Policy and advice to safety managers and senior managements of any new safety legislation changes in existing best practice.

The company also offers assistance with initial implementation of any changes to safety legislation and practices along with training in awareness of accident prevention and hazards to health for employees of all levels.

Mr Dent has also distributed invitations to a free health and safety seminar on Thursday October 2012. A training diary can be accessed at trainingdiary@invenio.com

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

THAT very cold spell some days ago really caught me out! The day began so nice and calm that I thought it was a good time to put the potted up tomatoes and also plants of the marrow family sitting on our windowsills out into a greenhouse.

All went well, and I was congratulating myself on having rather good weather for the job when everything started to go pear-shaped. Not only did the wind get up, but the hail and snow that followed was a complete shock to both the plants and my system. It was much too windy and cold to take them from the protection of the greenhouse back to the house so they had to take their chances; surprisingly they don't seem to have suffered and are all looking rather good.

Also looking good inside, in their individual chamber pots are the regal pelargoniums. Their flowers remind me of small, colourful azaleas, and what some glorious colours they come in. I think they are lovely and need very little care. The dahlias have produced masses of cuttings this year, they are all planted up in little pots now and are achieving some growth and so I guess they have started to root, wonderful stuff! As they cannot go outside for some considerable time yet (a frost will kill even a mature plant) I'm content to let them grow on.

Repaying a very small amount of care is the ice-cream tub full of cress sitting on the kitchen window-sill (this has no drainage holes in the bottom). The two inches of compost on which the cress seeds have been planted is kept moist at all times, but not wet, it gets cut down on a daily basis and is used in salads, egg sandwiches and suchlike. It is now becoming a little 'tired' so I shall replant it for another fresher lot. Sadly I always forget the cress when other greens become available, stupid really, as it will grow throughout the year and is very good for you too!

The ground has warmed up considerably now and so I'm waiting for a reasonably calm day to plant the 'small seed' and keep it in our garden rather than all the neighbour's ones. Meanwhile with the plots having been cleaned up I have started planting the second-early spuds, 'charlotte' the favourite, is a lovely waxy potato, perfect for salads, and 'estima' is another second early spud we quite like. Our potato plots get smaller every year on purpose, because I find it harder every year to get all the potatoes up before winter.

The small cabbage plants are just starting to be hardened off now as are the peas in the guttering; in about a week's time I will begin leaving them out at night and after that it should be safe to plant them in the plots. Bill has rotavated the area I plan to put the brassicas in, to allow the soil to become as firm as possible, which they prefer.

So far in the greenhouses there is precious little happening and I'm using the time to clear out unwanted plants which have failed to over-winter successfully in an effort to make space for the tomatoes and other non-hardy vegetables such as cucumbers and marrows; and of course it is a chance to get rid of the weeds which somehow always thrive in there.

There are masses of eucalyptus seedlings which I really need to prick out but I somehow don't get around to doing so. I shall have to get a stool or something comfortable to sit on and get down to it. It's a great feeling once it is done, but oh it's very time consuming and it is far more enjoyable to get amongst the flowering plants.

The snowdrops are over but it is best to split them whilst they are still green and so I have been doing that and what seemed like quite large clumps are no more, and rather smaller clumps are now spread right around the garden.

The daffodils, originally planted in very small amounts, have also clumped up beautifully; there's really quite a mixture of colours out there, not to mention sizes. I really ought to grade them but would not know where or how to start. The muscari (grape hyacinth) are looking lovely too. Many variations of blue on show and they really look good amongst the daffodils.

The various types of primrose are coming into their own now with single and double primroses looking gorgeous and the young drumstick primulas standing proud, however for sheer mass of colour it would take a lot to beat the range provided by the auriculas. All in all I find it very hard to actually have a favourite plant because everything changes so quickly in a garden.

In a week or so the rhododendrons will be starting to flower, lovely! But then, not long after that the paeonies and roses will start and so it goes on, each as pretty or even better than the last. Ah well, enough already; they are all wonderful!

A crafty Saturday

WE now have final plans in place for this year's craft-a-thon. The day will begin at 9.30am with the opening of our café and a chance for people to come along, find out what is happening, book and pay for activities if they wish. The activities themselves start at 10am and continue until 5 pm.

We have lots of different activities and fun for all the family throughout the day. Alginate casting, very popular last year with people taking home casts of their fingers, lips and noses, is on offer again along with a chance to make models from blue clay. We have a range of different wool-crafts from spinning and weaving, knitting and crochet to felting. There's wood crafts too: wood turning and pyrography. A lovely idea from the newly established quilting group is to create a quilt to raise additional money for breast cancer awareness; so people can have a go at quilting or sponsor a square.

More unusual crafts include macramé, glass painting, candle making, candle holders from driftwood, paper making, appliqué, a digital photography presentation, a chance to use the computers to make a calendar. Quite a few people have picked up the theme of Christmas, to make quilted cards for example and embroidered ornaments and, of course, you can take anything you make home with you so there's the opportunity of creating a Christmas gift.

We have some activities aimed at parents with younger children, silk painting (for older children too) and balancing butterflies.

A full list and timetable of what is on offer can be obtained from myself. There is a special email address ficraftathon@gmail.com or just give me a ring. Some activities are likely to be very popular so booking in advance is recommended.

It's still not too late to offer extra activities if you'd like to, or to help out in the café or help us run a welcome desk. We would also really appreciate donations of sweet and savoury foods for the café. Also, if anyone has any materials that they think might be useful, the Pink Shop is willing to accept these and pass them on to us.

Please come along and support the event; have fun, learn a new craft and raise money for charity. All profits made will go to two local charities, the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. We achieved a great total last year so thanks to everyone who supported us in any way; please do the same this year.

It will be held at the Community School on Saturday October 20. Just drop in for a look, any time after 9.30 and have a cuppa in the café if you want to browse but better still sign-up for a workshop and get involved. Louise Taylor

A popptastic murder

TEAM Tranquil and FIODA entertained 'detective' guests at a well attended Murder Dinner last Friday evening.

With a pop factor theme, the TV talent show's publicist 'murdered' last year's winner in order to improve ratings and guests were tasked with questioning the groups of suspects.

Prizes were plenty including one for the table that achieved the most and least accurate answers. Val Padgett won the 'best dressed' prize on the theme of 'popptastic' as voted for by the cast, while the audience chose to award the 'best actor' prize to Edmonde Openshaw for her portrayal of a drunken ex-rock star now working as a talent judge.

Show presenters were the twins

Krystal Dynasty (Helen Bell) and Alexia Dynasty (Alison Inglis) The Judges were Bob Sterling (Keith Biles) and Connie Styler (Edmonde Openshaw). Contestants were Cher Sherwood (Polly Lennie), Jane Brown (Cat Catton), Peter Putrid (Steve Gill) and Joan Jetta (Louise Taylor). The part of cameraman Mike Boom was played by Ben Walters, make up artist Elizabeth Ardent played by Hilary Walters and the Publicist Larry Garry by Geoff Pring. Producer Brian Rich was played by Jason Lewis.

Team Tranquil undertook much of the organisation while FIODA provided the entertainment.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falkland and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The Wool Market Report - 11 October 2012

by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

THE Australian Wool Exchange (AWEX) Eastern market indicator (EMI) increased by 2.0%, to reach 975 Australian cents per kilo clean, its highest level since August 9th.

The volume of wool offered this week, at 37,118 bales, was relatively modest. However, the clearance rate of 96.4% was very high.

18 to 20 micron lots in Melbourne attracted good buying support from Chinese buyers, and prices firmed by between 5.0 and 10.0%.

Low score brings big bucks for charity

DEANOS Demons darts team combined motivation with generosity recently, by fining their players 50p for any under 21 score and £1 for any under 10 score, and in doing so raised £425.99 for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund.

Proving size does matter, Fudge Smith donated the most money paying a total of £42.

Chris Poole, Stephen Aldridge,

Maryn Ford, Karl Nightingale, Ewen Bonner, Karl Manners and Sara Molkenbuhr-Smith made up the rest of the team.

Deanos Demons would like to thank The Dolly Mixtures for a continuous supply of snacks, Deanos staff for keeping them topped up with drink, Janet for frisking the team on the way out the door in order to obtain more pennies, David Phillips for getting bullied and/or encouraged into giving up £10 for the fund, Secretary Sara for making sure no low score went unmarked, and to the other teams played that also donated cash.

A team spokesperson said: "a big mention to the Pale Maidens who donated a lot in the last game of the season thanks to using mini darts, and to Lisa for attending the presentation."

Golf: 3-Ball Alliance

LAST Sunday, seven teams contested the three-ball Alliance competition. With the two best stableford scores to count on each hole, teams normally need to score in the mid 80's to be in contention. The record for this format of play is a score of 90 by team Bonner two seasons ago.

Despite a bright sun and mild temperatures, a strong wind from the west curtailed scoring. A glut of teams on 75 points missed out on the prizes.

Teammates Roy Smith, Gordon Lennie and Steve Vincent nipped in and secured second place on 76 points by collecting 39 points on the front nine and coming home with 37 points.

The day's honours went to Carole Lee partnering Sarah and Troyd Bowles, the trio were clear winners on 79 points. Nearest the pin on the 4th went to Glenn Ross and Ian Stewart powered the longest drive down the 18th.

On Saturday October 27, Stanley Golf Club is hosting the annual Member/Non-Member event, with one season's membership to the winning non-member.

The entry list for the Matchplay has been posted on the Notice Board and the draw will take place after the November Medal.

This Sunday it is the turn of the keenly contested Fortuna competition, individual Stableford Format. Players are asked to sign in by 9 AM for a 9:15 Tee-off.

Archery coaching by experts

TWO visiting archery coaches Tony and Steve from the UK and Channel Islands, under the auspices of the Falklands Archery Association offer a unique opportunity for Falklands residents to try their hand at archery.

A spokesperson for the club said the coaches are visiting to help the FAA begin their preparation for the Guernsey games in 2013.

If you would like to have a go, call along to the FIDE hall on Sunday morning (October 21) from 9am until 12 noon and try out archery with expert help. There will be balloons to pop and fun targets to shoot at. No need to book, just turn up. The event is suitable for ages 10 - 100 Jo Lazo told Penguin News.

Also do not forget tha the FFA is holding a sealed bid auction of original artwork, framed photographs and canvas. To view and place your bid go along to the Office next door to Workboat

Too many young smokers

FORTY six per cent of individuals in the Islands aged between 15 and 25 are smokers according to the latest census, confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly Sharon Halford at yesterday's meeting of the Legislative Assembly.

Responding to a question from MLA Barry Elshy she added: "Depending on the source, UK estimates for the under 25 age group differ slightly, but it is widely accepted to be somewhere between 24 per cent and 30 per cent from the latest figures in 2010."

MLA Halford said in the recent past the Health Department had been instrumental in helping devise and implement the ban on smoking in public places: "which evidence from other countries suggests will help to reduce the incidence of smoking over time."

She said the Health Service would continue to offer free support, including aids, for those that wished to give up smoking.

MLA Halford said the Health Service would also continue to try to raise awareness of the dangers of smoking for all ages, and especially those younger members of the community. She said it was recognised that more could be done out in the community itself.

She added that due to the nature of the budget structure within the Health Service it was not easy to ascertain what percentage of the annual medical budget was spent on preventative medicine, however, based on the current 2012/13 budget, it was estimated that just under three per cent of the annual budget was spent on public health or preventative medicine.

Comparing it to 'Health England' she said it was estimated that in 2006/7, four per cent of the total UK NHS budget was spent on preventative medicine. MLA Halford added: "However, it should be noted that across FIG as a whole some further funding is expended on public health and preventative medicine, for example the Occupational Health service and programmes within the schools."

Marjorie's work honoured

MARJORIE Hayward was this year's recipient of the Queen's certificate and badge of honour in recognition of her dedicated work caring for the elderly.

His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood welcomed Mrs Hayward, and a number of those she cared for, at a reception at Government House on Tuesday in order to celebrate her award with a formal presentation.

Mr Haywood said Mrs Hayward had quietly assisted with the daily life routines of Stanley's elderly population for many years, and secured seventeen nominations for her work.

Road designation gets a green light

DESPITE some strong opposition from MLA Roger Edwards on Executive Council, the decision to designate all roads has been agreed in principal subject to a number of provisos.

Speaking at Legislative Assembly on Thursday morning MLA Edwards said he was a "lone voice" in trying to throw out the move to designate all roads, although he had been successful in getting it delayed for relevant issues to be worked through.

Also representing the Camp, MLA Sharon Halford however disagreed. "Surely it is not right that only those living on East Falkland should have to pay a vehicle licence? I am aware there is currently provision in place that does not oblige people living on West Falkland to comply, and it is questionable as to whether this is actually constitutional," she said.

"The laws in the Falklands should apply equally to one and all," said MLA Halford.

The third Camp MLA Ian Hansen said his views remained unchanged and that roads should not be designated until vehicle tax was reduced or aborted and insurance sorted out. He added that on occasion during the winter he felt embarrassed to be part of a government that charges to use the roads in the state they are in.

MLA Mike Summers disagreed saying he was, "proud of the system," and a lot of time and money had been spent on it. "It's a beginning, something to build on: that's the nature of life," he said.

Favouring the designation of roads he suggested that if tourists had to be told that after a certain distance they had no insurance cover they probably would not go anywhere.

MLA Dick Sawle said: "We've moved on and driving without any licence, road tax or insurance is a thing of the past. With powerful modern vehicles comes a far greater risk and we have to offer the protection of the law to all road users. I believe the approach we have agreed which is a far more gradual progress towards this goal is a good one. We do have to make our roads safer and afford legal protection for those who use them," he said.

MLA Jan Cheek said that with the application of common sense there should not be too much problem in implementing the designation.

The community was generally law abiding and if the lack of anticipated problems with the smoking ban had been anything to go by then such issues tended to be pretty much self policing, she said.

Budget surplus for FIG

THE Falkland Islands Government showed a surplus of £4 297 million compared to a revised budget surplus of £2.448 million (a positive performance of £3.190 million) for the first three months of the 2012/13 financial year, according to the Financial Management Report presented to the Standing Finance Committee yesterday.

The Management Accountant Daniel Heath noted the figures excluded unrealised gains and losses on investments.

During the first three months of the financial year net liquid assets (funds that are readily available for use) increased by £6.2 million to an estimated £125.2 million.

Under operating revenue Natural Resources were reported at £146,000 adverse due to a £190,000 shortfall in Fishing License revenue against the planned estimate. The Director of Natural Resources advised that may largely be a phasing issue and linked to repayments from the previous season made in July.

Health & Education were £196,000 favourable driven by unanticipated Medical Service Tax receipts of £197,000 mainly paid by oil industry workers.

The Public Works showed £394,000 favourable due to quarry sales being currently £201,000 ahead of plan. This was largely due to higher sales to FIG projects than had been projected, primarily Sapper Hill.

The Treasury showed £852,000 favourable with taxation revenues for the first quarter being £1.52 million above estimate. This was partially due to higher taxation receipts from oil exploration than were projected in the original budget. However corporation tax receipts from local companies were also £996,000 higher than planned.

Mr Heath said in his report that the Taxation Officer advised that, due to further oil-related revenues later in the year, income and corporation tax for 2012/13 was currently estimated to be £3.77 million favourable for the full year. Continued on page 3

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

AT the public meeting on Monday evening Stella Middleton raised a point that likely struck a chord with the large majority of the community.

If she will excuse me paraphrasing, Stella indicated that although she felt a responsibility to put forward her thoughts on the future of the Islands in relation to an oil industry and a much increased income for the Falkland Islands Government, she didn't know where to begin: what questions to ask or what thoughts to form.

That's hardly surprising, as it is a question that overwhelms us all; however, having then read a letter to Penguin News from James Fenton, I felt the first forming of a note of clarity. James emphasised the concept of quality and then gives very specific examples relating to the quality of the physical environment (as noted in my last editorial I won't be so rude as to overly pre-empt a readers letter but simply point you towards it on page 7). It seems likely then that like him, we all have quite specific things that we most value when we think about what the Falklands means to us as individuals, and in turn, what we wish to preserve, enhance and develop. We might be passionate about craft or music, history or education; sport might be our thing, or our expertise and interest might be in areas of social care, architecture, the church or particular charitable causes; or we might have particular concerns about pensions or the cost of childcare. My point being that the place to start is with what we know best.

So assisting the government by making it clear what matters to us, need not involve every individual coming up with ideas for a complicated over arching strategy, but should be a combined effort of individual and original thoughts leading to a whole.

While the Falkland Islands Government concerns itself examining laudable investment scheme models around the world, such as the impressively controlled, ethical and highly transparent fund used by Norway, in the mean time it is we who can begin thinking about the social and cultural detail. And who knows, ideas might eventually come to fruition under the auspices of a trust similar to that set up in the Shetland Islands after the Sullom Voe Terminal began operating, aimed at preserving the quality of life there.

A Falklands family suffered a horrific blow last weekend with the loss of a son in tragic circumstances. The staff at Penguin News wishes to offer their love and supportive thoughts to all of Dan Colfre's family and friends.

Customs cause public an injustice

THE Falkland Islands Principal Complaints Commissioner (PCC) Phyl Rendell has found three areas in which the conduct of the Customs and Immigration Department caused members of the public wishing to import satellite television receivers to, "suffer injustices."

The complaint was made to the PCC in July by MLA Dick Sawle on behalf of Gary Clement and other members of the community. Mr Clement said in his letter: "It is submitted that I and other people aggrieved do not have the option to pursue matters through the Court as it is accepted that the Receivers purchased in good faith appear to be unauthorised decoders and as such are not lawful. As such the complaint relates to maladministration on the part of Customs as to the way in which the matter was dealt with and the fairness of the way we have been treated."

In September/October 2011 adverts appeared in Chile stating that FTA (free to air) receivers were available for purchase and a number of residents contacted Customs to seek advice regarding importing FTA equipment. The advice given by the Collector of Customs Robert King was that it was legal to import FTA (standard encryption) satellite TV equipment into the Falkland Islands provided it was genuine.

Receivers were later seized by Customs and tested to establish whether they conformed to the current legislation. The importers asked that local television provider KTV not be involved in any way in the testing of the equipment as there was a vested interest in the receivers not being allowed into the Islands and that they (the importers) be present when it was tested. The importers became concerned when it seemed both requests had been denied and the situation became tense between the two parties.

PCC Mrs Rendell said she had chosen to release her finding in the public interest as so many people had been involved with the importation of satellite TV decoders. She stated: "Having carefully considered all the evidence provided by the complainants and the department of Customs and Immigration it is evident that Customs officers were dealing with highly technical issues without access to independent advice. Furthermore, the depth of feeling in the community after the introduction of the Broadcasting Ordinance added to the pressure under which the Collector of Customs had to work and make judgements."

She said none of the complainants wanted to break the law and the matter escalated to a point where a great deal of stress was suffered by both the complainants and Customs officers.

"It is regrettable that no apologies were offered when the complainants first wrote to the department, as this would have defused issues in a more timely way. It is not a weakness to accept that an error of judgement has been made and to apologise to a complainant. A willingness to apologise promptly strengthens relations with the public. This regrettable chain of events highlights the need for the Falkland Islands Government to address customer care provision across all services in order to respond to a growing demand from the public to be treated fairly."

Mrs Rendell said she did not believe that the Customs and Immigration Department caused the complainants injustice through maladministration, but found three areas in which the conduct of the department caused the aggrieved to suffer injustices:-

- The Collector of Customs took no formal action during that week of October 10 to inform the community of his concerns, knowing that people, having sought his advice, planned to import decoders.
- It was an injustice not to inform the individual that it was the role of Customs officers to seize imported items and there was a intention to retain any decoders imported from Chile that were considered illegal for testing.
- In spite of the pressures that Customs and Immigration were working under, it was an injustice not to keep the complainants fully informed about the procedures for testing the retained equipment in order to prevent misunderstandings arising.

The Principal Complaints Commissioner has recommended among other things that the C&I Department write a letter, apologising for the unhelpful actions taken during the seizure of the satellite TV receivers.

Those gains were partially offset by investment revenues being £660,000 lower than anticipated for the period for July to August.

Under operating expenditure Health & Education were £219,000 favourable and Mineral Resources were £129,000 favourable with Executive Management at £172,000 favourable and Public Works, £133,000 adverse. Mr Heath noted the quarry was overspent by £129,000 against budget largely due to the increased labour and plant hire required to maintain the current levels of production. Likewise the Power Station was £122,000 adverse to plan primarily because of the amount of fuel being used to meet current levels of demand. That has partially been offset by £40,000 of Repairs and Maintenance savings within the Property and Municipal and Housing, although that money was likely to be spent later in the year. There was also a £30,000 saving in the PWD/Admin salaries budget due to vacant posts.

Capital receipts were reported to be slightly less than estimated due to slower sales of land and buildings than originally projected.

Under Capital Expenditure, capital schemes were noted to be currently behind schedule by £1.671 million.

Highways Projects and Infrastructure Development were described as both currently behind schedule.

However, the Director of Public Works has advised Mr Heath that progress in both these areas should accelerate later in the year and spend should be achieved.

He also noted there were no bids for the Public Toilets project and that will be re-bid in early November.

The FIG Housing contract has been awarded, however due to the nature of the agreement full spend was not anticipated to be achieved this year.

Voting rights

IN the lead up to the 2013 referendum on the future of the Falkland Islands and the next General Election, the Registrar General has released a leaflet advising on qualification for the electoral register.

The leaflet answers questions that range from, 'Am I qualified to apply for registration'; 'What is Falklands status'; 'What does it mean that I have to be resident'; 'Are there any exceptions to qualifications for registration'.

The leaflets have been distributed via the Post Office. For an application form or further information contact email registrargeneral@townhall.gov.fk or telephone 27269.

Fatal single vehicle accident

A SINGLE vehicle accident on Long Island sand beach on Saturday resulted in the death of a young Islander.

Twenty year old Danny Miguel Cofre was severely injured when the vehicle he was driving rolled on the beach at the end of a fundraising Rover Rally from Stanley to Long Island.

First aid and CPR was administered at the scene and a Search and Rescue helicopter was mobilised from Mount Pleasant. Danny was transferred to the KEM Hospital where further treatment was carried out, however tragically he was pronounced dead at 3.30pm.

Danny was the son of Elviro (Migs) and Anya Cofre and brother to Atty and Reuben and a much loved character within the younger community.

An inquest was formally opened on Tuesday and adjourned to a date to be notified for further investigation.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police have requested the assistance of the public in their investigation of the incident and ask that anyone who has photographs or video footage of the event or incident to contact them by telephone on 28100.

Legion gift to Liberty Lodge

LIAM Shelbourne representing the Falklands branch of the Royal British Legion this week presenting £200 worth of fishing gear to Liberty Lodge Manager Ellen Davis for use of Falklands war veterans while residing at Liberty Lodge. Mr Shelbourne said this week that Falklands Legion members were delighted to be able to replenish the Lodge fishing gear; the activity being a particularly popular one with visiting veterans.

Darwin Lodge sold to SSL

DARWIN Lodge and approximately 50 acres of surrounding land has been purchased by Stanley Services Limited (SSL) the company announced this week.

SSL's Managing Director Tom Swales said he was delighted with the opportunity that the purchase of the company's first lodge in Camp presents. He added that it was part of SSL's strategy in developing and expanding into a very exciting sector with significant growth potential.

Mr Swales said the Falkland Islands was a great holiday destination, but development of the tourist/leisure industry required more capacity in Camp for it to develop.

The company's plan is to build on, "the excellent work undertaken by the Greenlands and continued under the management of the Didlicks."

He said the Didlick family would continue to manage the Lodge and long term plans include additional bedrooms and dining facilities, and expanding the infrastructure of the site. He concluded by saying that it demonstrated SSL's continued investment in the Islands.

Tourist arrivals to increase

TOURIST arrivals to the Falkland Islands are expected to increase by 14.6 per cent in 2012 with a significant 28 per cent increase in the number of leisure visitors, mainly driven by the 30th Anniversary of the Falklands war according to the September Falklands Forecast from the Falkland Islands Tourist Board.

In total 7,616 overnight tourists are expected to visit the Islands in 2012 spending around £6.3 million.

Cruise passenger arrivals are forecast to remain unchanged in the 2012/13 season, totalling around 35,000 day visitors. However, the sector is highly vulnerable to the weather, with almost 10,000 passenger arrivals lost in 2011/12 season due to cruise cancellations. Expenditure by cruise visitors is expected to total over £1.8 million over the season.

Domestic tourism is forecast to grow in 2012, albeit at a moderate rate of 3.5 per cent and will generate 14,300 trips and £1.25 million in expenditure.

Overall, visitor arrivals in 2012 by inbound overnight tourists, cruise passengers and domestic tourists are expected to total over 57,000, spending over £9.3 million.

Teacher funded

ADDITIONAL funding was approved at Standing Finance Committee yesterday to employ a supply teacher for Camp Education.

£24,740 was approved as the operating budget for the teacher for two thirds full time equivalent. Since the closure of the 2012/13 budget an additional seven children have registered to be educated in Camp.

The Director of Health and Education David Jenkins explained that the registrations were unexpected and could not be budgeted for. Three families moved into Camp from Stanley and another family is returning to the Falkland Islands to live in Camp.

Price index

THE Stanley retail price index for the quarter ended September 30, 2012 increased during the quarter to 162.29, a net points increase of 0.9; this equates to a 0.6 per cent increase.

This compares to a 1.4 increase in the quarter ending June 30, 2012 and 1.7 March 31, 2012.

Some of the items used in the points movement show an increase in the price of lettuce, minced mutton, chicken breasts petrol, diesel, vehicle tax and rent.

A decrease in price is shown in potatoes and kerosene.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I WAS pleased to see that PN last week picked up on the smoking issue that I raised in the public session when standing in on the Police Committee at its meeting in the first half of September (minute 6.2). It is somewhat surprising that more than half of the school population are apparently better informed than many of their elders, but perhaps encouraging that we do not have to worry about the supposed shrinking of the juvenile attention span. They clearly remembered the staggered change in the law made by the last Assembly. I raised the question because of the evidence in the recent census about the number of very young people smoking, as whoever is supplying them is clearly breaking the law. While adults are free to do all the damage they wish to their own health, we have a duty to protect the young.

WITH representatives from many of the oil companies in the Islands this month it is encouraging to see a good number of private sector companies seizing the many opportunities to supply support, logistic and other services. One of the most frequently quoted limitations across the board is manpower but we have to be careful how we manage immigration, whether short term or permanent. Hence the need to get additional advice before we make definitive decisions which could, if we make the wrong choices, damage the way of life we value. That applies to many other aspects of our lives as highlighted at this month's public meeting, for example the extensive infill building in Stanley which is a matter of great concern to many. I hope the accelerated development at Sapper Hill will alleviate the necessity to overdevelop the historic parts of 'old Stanley'. I'm already on side so make sure that other MLAs and members of the Planning Committee know how you feel.

MY advance apologies because I'll be out of the Islands all next week on private business, but I will, as always be picking up e-mails and Gilbert House have my mobile number if anyone needs to contact me urgently.

B Slip rededication

TO mark the 30th anniversary of 17 Port & Maritime Regiment's involvement in the Falklands War, a memorial service for Harold Rowlands and a re-dedication parade is to be held at B Slip on Ross Road East.

In 1982, 116 soldiers from the regiment were deployed to the Falklands with the Task Force on six ships including the Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram.

During their deployment they worked ship to shore operations often under heavy fire from Argentine aircraft which led to Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram being hit.

Between 1982 and 1984 more than a million tons of cargo passed across B Slip and throughout that period and beyond, Harold Rowlands then the Government's Financial Secretary, provided food, shelter, hot beverages and on occasion something a little stronger for the Port Troop soldiers.

The friendship between Harold and the Port Troops became legendary and right up until his death

Harold never forgot a face and regularly visited the UK where he would meet up with many of the lads he had encountered.

In 1995 WO2 Jim Bowie who was the quay foreman at the time unveiled a plaque on B Slip to mark the Regiment's efforts during the war.

17 years later his son, WO2 Stuart Bowie who is currently serving with 460 Port troops has arranged for the weathered and now unreadable plaque to be replaced and the occasion appropriately remembered.

"Harold was instrumental in assisting my father in the 1995 dedication and his nephew Robert Rowlands has provided me with the same support with the planning of the 30th dedication," WO2 Bowie told Penguin News.

The service at Christ Church Cathedral will take place at 10am on November 7. 460 Port Troops will then march to B Slip and the rededication will take place at 11am followed by a reception at the FIDF Hall.

New lawyers directory now available

THE Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley, has been looking at other ways to promote a greater understanding of what role the Courts have in society and to promote greater access to the justice system, and this week announced the publication of a Lawyers Directory.

He said the Falkland Islands was lucky to be presently served by two committed lawyers, however, on occasion, they were unable to act for, or even advise, a member of the public who needed help because they may have a conflict of interest, such as when they have previously acted for another party. In addition there are cases which need more than two lawyers.

After a number of cases where people were unrepresented but indicated that they would have liked to speak to a lawyer but didn't know where to start in finding one, I thought it was necessary to at least have some form of database of lawyers that they could turn to, said Mr Gumsley. "I don't pretend that this Directory is an answer to the problems and challenges that exist in obtaining legal representation but I hope, with the new legal aid scheme that it is a start in making the law and the Courts more accessible to the people," he concluded.

Copies of the Directory will be available for people to look at in the Courts and copies will be sent to the Library and to the new Citizens Advice Bureau.

STANLEY man Dylan Stephenson was fined £175 plus £85 prosecution costs in the Senior Magistrate's Court on Wednesday after he pleaded guilty by post to using a mobile telephone whilst driving on October 1.

The Senior Magistrate commented upon how prevalent the offence seemed to be. He said that only a few days ago he had been sitting at a junction when a driver using a mobile telephone in one hand, whilst turning a corner, had at the same time actually waved at him thereby taking both hands off the wheel. He said that he had tried to take the registration number of the vehicle but that it was so obscured with mud he had been unable to do so.

Ms Carter indicated that it was the intention of the Attorney General's Chambers to prosecute offenders for illegal mobile phone use when they were reported to them by the police.

Oil revenue statement

THE Falkland Islands Government is likely to earn somewhere in the region of 25 to 30 per cent of the gross value of the oil resource spread over an expected field life of 25 years, it was stated at a public meeting on Monday night.

MLA Roger Edwards said: "The principal sources of revenue to FIG are a nine per cent royalty on the market value of each barrel of oil sold, and 26 per cent corporation tax on the profits derived from sales. In common with any business, there are certain costs which are allowable in assessing taxable profit.

"The final tax take therefore depends on the allowable costs claimed by operators in the course of exploration and exploitation of the resource."

The actual total taken in any given year will depend on numerous variables including the prevailing oil price and the rate of production, both of which will vary over the anticipated field life of at least 25 years.

Also during a discussion relating to the oil industry MLAs noted that the nine per cent royalty was set some years ago.

They said it was considered very reasonable by the oil industry and was set at a consistent rate in order to attract the industry to an area that had at the time no proven oil resource.

Jolly Christmas cards

THE Islands youngest school children showed off a talent to both amuse and surprise with some outstanding Christmas card competition entries last week.

The competition was open to all ages within Infant and Junior School and Camp Education and organiser Rachael Crowie was very impressed with the amount of entries. Judge Teslyn Barkman picked eight winners from over a hundred adorable designs and said the winning artists, Soraye (Yr3), Sam (Yr5), Nell (Yr4), Conner (Yr5), Lyndsey (Yr3), Madeline (Yr5), Taylor (Yr1) and Jack (Yr6), demonstrated originality and imagination with their well thought out designs. Packs of cards will be available soon from the IJS Office and order forms will be distributed to parents. Money from the cards will go towards the IJS Donation Fund.

Chefs showcase local produce

FALKLANDS produce was showcased alongside military issue produce at a cookery demonstration at the Officers Mess this month.

"It's been something I have wanted to do for some time," said Sodexo Head Chef at Mt Pleasant Phil Ovenden. He explained that he and House Manager and Chef to Brigadier Aldridge Sgt Steve Bristol, "have worked together on several projects in the community and he was as excited about it as I was."

On October 16, Mr Ovenden presented the cookery demonstration to the Wives Club and other parties interested in the Falkland Islands produce that was provided by the Falkland Islands Meat Company and Falklands Fresh; alongside some of their own creations.

On the menu were a hake rarebit, inspired by Gary Rhodes; a "taste and compare" of locally raised roast pork and military-issue pork; Toothfish in oats with whisky butter; sea trout in Pernod; barbecued leg of Falklands lamb; Upland goose pate with two different Diddle-dee sauces; smoked Toothfish; Hake fillet brushed with curry oil; deep-fried squid quills with chilli sauce; stir-fried beef and a Mediterranean style hake cassoulet.

The cookery was frenetic, animated and humorous and all dishes (except the pate) were cooked and presented within an hour and fifteen minutes.

Sgt Bristol said: "The main aim was to show off some of the local produce I have had the privilege to cook for the Boss and maybe inspire the ladies to try some of it as well. We would like to thank John and Nigel at FIMCo and Ray Robson and Charmaine at Falklands Fresh for all their help."

Playing her own compositions, to set the tone for the evening, was Scottish folk singer, and Goose Green resident, Andi Neate, who played two sets either side of the cookery.

All dishes were well received said Mr Ovenden and many were surprised at the breadth and quality of the local fish and meat. Brigadier Aldridge was extremely impressed with the quality of the pork and many are now looking forward to trying out one or two dishes for themselves.

The evening was viewed as a complete success and Gill Aldridge has suggested that something similar be held again in the New Year, said Mr Ovenden.

Shaun (34) arrived in the Falklands from Barnsley to work for Paul Chapman a year ago, and despite the ragging he gets about his broad accent he says he doesn't think he could leave now, "thanks to the Rose bunch."

A keen darts player and fisherman he once attempted to combine the sports when he deposited his darts in the harbour after a particularly bad match.

Off Road Driving—Level 2

Friday 30th November and Saturday 1st December 2012 8.00 am to 5.00 pm

A two day course aimed at those wishing to further explore their vehicles and discover its limitations. Day two of the course will include a full day 4X4 safari including solo de-bogging practice as well as communication techniques from remote areas.

£460.00 per candidate. Includes a packed lunch on both days to be eaten 'on the track'.

Please Note— All driving courses are owner driver courses

Our aim is to meet the needs of our clients who want to discover their own vehicle's capabilities. We understand that familiarisation of your vehicle is especially important. Courses are offered with clients driving their own vehicles in our safe, but challenging environment.

Quality needed

I WOULD like to support Grant Munro in his letter two weeks ago 'What Future for Stanley?', and supported I am glad to say in your editorial.

With increasing wealth in the islands, there is bound to be increased pressure for development, and, as your editorial states, 'ugly mistakes are likely to be with us for a very long time.' To avoid this, in my view, there has to be attention to detail and quality: adding detail and quality may cost more, but why should the town and country we live in not be a high quality environment? When the Falklands really were frontier country, then cheap and cheerful solutions were understandable, but nowadays?

As an example of detail, I know there have been discussions in the past about the design of bridges and culverts under Camp roads: the cheap and cheerful solution is to dump rocks around the stream or river (perhaps taken from stone runs), and this generally looks like what it is – a careless dump of rocks (stone runs at least have a more ordered look!). However, if a bit of skill goes into the making of the crossing, whether building a carefully crafted stone wall or quality stone facing, this approach, once it is widespread, does illustrate a desire to create a quality environment: it gives the message that we care about the country in which we live. The message may be subtle, but over time it does creep into the unconscious so that, once used to a quality-crafted bridge, when you then see a careless one you become outraged!

 or send to PO Box 319

Interestingly, I have heard that in Norway there is a trend, instead of building bare concrete supporting walls along roads and bridges, of bringing back the craftsmanship of wallers and stonemasons (a message for Stanley Waterfront and any new harbour?). And indeed in parts of Britain, particularly within the National Parks, Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty (England, Wales & Northern Ireland) and National Scenic Areas (Scotland), the creation of quality buildings and structures is a key aim, generally using local or traditional materials.

I always think that the best way to find out how a country really cares about the environment is to visit the waste dumps and industrial estates: why do industrial estates the world over always have to be ugly, with that symbol of modern times – shredded plastic caught in untended fences and blowing in the wind, normally surrounded on the ground by other windblown or dumped debris? How does Stanley stand up in this? And where does the spoil from new industrial sites get dumped? – on a National Nature Reserve! Surprising, really, when, as Grant points out, the Islands are not short of land!

In terms of Stanley itself, economics might dictate that it would be more profitable if every square inch of land were developed, but is it not a characteristic and an endearing feature of the town the fact that the countryside can still be found within it? Should we not think carefully about what kind of landscape we want to live in, and then strive to achieve it?

HMS Protector

CAN I make corrections to John Smith's article about the Camber ship names, especially HMS Protector:

She in fact arrived here in Stanley Harbour at the end of 1955. I think it was actually on the 31st of October and I clearly remember our class at school being allowed time off during the afternoon to assemble in front of the church to witness one of the Whirlwind helicopters taking off from her flight deck, this being the first ever visit to the Islands by a helicopter. I think it flew up to the racecourse where it landed. Also following the Protector's decommission from the Royal Navy she was scrapped in Scotland in 1970. It was I believe the first John Biscoe that was taken over by the Royal New Zealand Navy for service in the Antarctic.

Got it all wrong

IT was revealing to hear from the MLAs at this Public Meeting that if you see an Argentine flag being displayed at Darwin cemetery, or I guess, anywhere else in public, don't waste time calling the Police. It's not against the law and no crime.

But, if you as an Islander, feel affronted and insulted and ask the offender to put it away and he refuses, do not force the issue, better give in and let them wave it your face, as if trouble occurs it will be the Islander who, "feels the touch of the law on their collar."

Whose rights and freedoms did 255 die for 30 years ago? Seems we have got it all wrong.

Airsoft: the new target sport

IF you are looking for a gun target sport without the restrictions of obtaining a firearm and ammunition licence then Airsoft could be your sport and Daniel McGill your man.

Airsoft is a modern shooting sport using non-lethal replica weapons firing small plastic balls, 6mm in diameter with approximately one joule of energy.

This energy level is very low when compared to most other shooting genres and is a safe for use with both paper and human targets. You can be hit by a BB fired from one of these guns and barely notice it, but it can usually still put a small hole in a paper target).

Daniel explained that the guns are full size replicas made of plastic with only a few metal parts inside to increase the reliability and durability of moving parts and are powered by electricity (a battery pack inside the gun)

It is important to note that Airsoft replicas cannot in any way be converted to fire live ammunition.

Your questions answered

Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside replied.

A The fill done to date is not the finished job but the first stage and I would expect it to look less stark once all of the works are completed. Part of the reason the stone looks so different is that there has not been time for natural growth such as lichens to appear as it had on the original section.

It is not intended at this stage that the face of the new work will be a mortar jointed stone finish but will be left without the joints being filled. The manner of construction would allow though for a facing of smaller mortar jointed stone to be added at a later stage.

The original construction and finish is of course still visible on the eastern face and the intention is to try and retain the majority of the straight section of the timber part, with additional support so that the original form is not lost and will still be visible to those landing.

Daniel demonstrates his Airsoft gun

Law Enforcement groups around the world now use airsoft replicas to improve their training scenarios with a reliable weapon that is safe to use for training, while providing a level of realism not found using any other training device. The comparatively low cost of using Airsoft for training purposes also helps to ensure that officers have as much training time as they need, without financial restraints kicking in.

Daniel would like to hear from anyone who would like to see such a gun in action or with an interest in forming a club in the Falklands.

Veteran's art is gift to museum

Veteran Mel with Leona Roberts
ONE of a very limited edition of prints of a painting by Falklands war veteran Mel Edwards has been presented to the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust by the artist.

Mr Edwards was a 19 year old Guardsman and a survivor of the Sir Galahad bombing at Fitzroy. The original painting was auctioned on June 8, 2012 in order to raise funds for Falklands veterans and it raised more than £1,000. He had only five prints produced and chose to give one of those to the museum during his recent visit, his first since 1982. The painting will be included in the 1982 30th Anniversary exhibition very soon, confirmed museum curator Leona Roberts.

Mrs Roberts said: "It is a very emotive, moving painting. We are very grateful to Mel for thinking of the museum and will be proud to display it."

Mr Edwards told Penguin News this week it was an image that had been with him since 1982 and was a particularly difficult one to paint: "an image of pain and suffering that has been with me all of these years."

Anniversary exhibition of Falklands photographs

AN exhibition of Falklands photographs resulting from a Facebook photography competition launched in July by the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust (FIMT) can now be viewed at the museum

Assistant Manager Andrea Barlow explained: "We have some wonderful amateur photographers here in the Islands and we wanted to give them the opportunity to show off their skills whilst at the same time, show off our beautiful Islands to our visitors. Five categories were chosen: Portraits, The Natural World, Maritime, Landscapes and Falkland's Heritage."

On Facebook the public was invited to "like" their favourite pictures with the aim that the most appreciated photographs would win. Mrs Barlow said: "The competition took off and some wonderful photographs were submitted but sadly we have limited space and couldn't print them all."

The youngest photographer is Shaun East (9 years old) with an eye-catching photo of a red anemone. His sister, Carly East also features as does Jess McPhee who is now in college taking (not surprisingly) photography: "They are our under 18 photographers. Our over 18s feature people like Petra Gilding, Nick Bonner and Donald Betts to name but a few," said Mrs Barlow.

Those with photographs in the exhibition should by now have received 'free entry' tickets to view the exhibition as a thank you.

Mrs Barlow said: "We have also decided to continue with the voting system inside the museum and have set up a box with voting slips so people have the opportunity to vote for their two favourite pictures."

"The two winners (under and over 18) will have their winning photo printed on canvas and presented to them. We would like to thank the Print Shop for their generous support with providing the prizes. We would also like to thank everyone who submitted their photographs to us. Please do come and see the exhibition and vote for your favourite photo."

Because of the success of the competition the FIMT is likely to run it annually.

Arty pursuits at fund-raising craft day

A SECOND craft-a-thon was held in the Community School last weekend and proved a hit with people of all ages. As ever, the young and young-at-heart enjoyed having body parts encased in plaster to take away an alginate casting of their finger, hands or nose though stopped short of the full face. Modelling with blue clay was also popular with finished models of animals, lighthouses and magical figures.

Wool crafts were well represented with spinning and weaving on display in the School Street for any passers-by to try their hand. Expert felters gave a class in making mittens whilst felting soaps offered the opportunity to felt in a slightly different way. Knitting and crochet advice were given with individuals learning new and remembering old skills. Wood-turning was booked well in advance and created beautifully finished wooden bowls in less than two hours.

The pyrography session was well attended with items proudly carried home. The recently formed quilters group shared their skills to make quilted cards whilst working busily on a larger project, a pink quilt for which squares can be sponsored and the finished article will be donated to the 'Run Together' raffle next year. Many also enjoyed learning the arts of applique and embroidery. A range of painting classes produced works of art in many media - on glass, silk and watercolours on paper. Other more unusual crafts included macramé, candle-making and the chance to make a candle holder from driftwood. Cookery took the form of cake decoration whilst those with hunger pangs were able to take a break in the café and enjoy delicious soup, hot-dogs and home baking. Last but by no means least, a great presentation was given on digital photography and calendars created using computer techniques.

The organisers of the event would like to say a huge thank-you to everyone who ran an activity, donated food and other items and, of course, to those who came along to have fun, learning a new, or perhaps re-visiting an old, craft or two throughout the day. Proceeds from the event will go to the Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund; just over £620 in total.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters.

Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

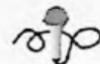

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFPF may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:

Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

 by Agricultural Advisor Helen Thoday

YESTERDAY the EMI increased by 29 AUS cents/kg (clean), rising by 34 US cents to hit 1,039 US cents/kg. The EMI closed this week at its highest level since August 7th in Australian currency and August 15th in US cents.

There was the biggest sale of the season with an offering of 59,760 bales across the week. Merino fleece wool dominates, particularly in the fine to medium range.

World demand remains an issue, auction offerings are still down on last year, which could be seen as a production issue or symptomatic of growers hanging on to wool waiting for a better price.

Coach Tony checks a bow

Archers take aim for the Guernsey Games

ONE year from its inception the Falklands Archery Association is preparing for its first international competition in Guernsey next year.

Looking to develop their shooting the club members recently made use of the Shackleton Scholarship to bring experienced coach Tony Drabble to the Islands.

FAA member Justin McPhee was recommended to recruit Mr Drabble by fellow Cable and Wireless employee Steve Yates.

Mr Drabble coaches Mr Yates team in the Channel Islands and is a member of the Grand National Archery Society with a wealth of valuable experience having trained Team GB at Olympic level.

At their first shoot with the Falklands Archery Association Tony explained he wanted first to assess what level the archers were playing at and ensure all of their equipment was set up correctly.

The club organised a rigorous training schedule over the nine day visit, with shoots almost every day and plenty of one-on-one sessions to deliver focussed assistance too. They are hopeful the visit will be the first of many in order to improve their shooting.

Mr Yates paid his own way to the Falklands having been intrigued by the opportunity to visit and was very enthusiastic about Mr Drabble's skills as a teacher: "The good thing about Tony as a coach is that he won't tell you you're doing it totally wrong he'll work with what you can do, to improve."

The Bermuda Island Games 2013 will not host the sport of archery, so the group is looking forward to the Guernsey games which will hold tournaments in archery, bowls and table tennis.

THE Falklands Archery Association opened up their bidding box on Saturday from their recent sealed bid auction of original canvas, photography and artwork, all of which was generously donated by Fortuna Ltd.

The auction was a great success, all pictures secured bids and £1410.50 was raised to go towards sending a team of six to the Guernsey Games in 2013.

The club would like to thank Fortuna for their generous donation of the art work and allowing the club to use their premises to display the items.
Jo Lazo

Fortuna pacesetter from Ric

LAST Sunday, twenty players contested the Fortuna stableford competition. In this format players score points on each hole and should they play to their handicap will return a score of 36 points over the 18 holes. Any higher score means playing better than their average.

Fine weather at the start and a well presented golf course meant good scoring conditions. It was the early season pace setter Ric Nye who prevailed as the winds freshened and temperatures dropped, securing his second win of the season after posting 39 stableford points.

Ric has now established a clear lead in the League Standings on 45 points. Wayne Clement marked his return to competitive golf with solid 38 points and edged Ken Humphreys into third place on a count back.

Sarah Bowles took the prize for the best front 9 and David Beynon the best back 9 and the nearest the pin prizes.

Ian Stewart thumped an unmatchable drive into the windy 14th. Our thanks to all at Fortuna for their generous sponsorship of this event and their long standing support of our sport.

This Saturday the 27 of October, Stanley Golf Club hosts the annual Member/Non-Member event, with one season's membership to the winning non-member. This is a Texas Scramble strokeplay over 9 holes. Players are asked to be at the course for a 1:45pm sign in and a 2pm start.

The entry list for the Matchplay has been posted on the Notice Board and the draw will take place after the November Medal.

This Sunday it is the turn of the Cable & Wireless competition, Bogey Format.

Players are asked to sign in by 9 AM for a 9:15 Tee-off.
