Absolutely nobody loves noise nuisance

A WORKING group that will include a victim of noise nuisance as well as a Falklands youth and a Member of Legislative Assembly, is to be formed to examine the problem of noise from late night partying.

The issue was first raised at the Police Committee in December 2012 when members requested that the Environmental Committee consider the options for tackling noise nuisance.

The Environmental Committee was having none of it however, and suggested the nature and extent of the problem be ascertained before it was addressed; as such it was passed back to the Police Committee.

On Wednesday the Police Committee examined three options presented by the Attorney General, two of which suggested it be passed back to the Environmental Committee.

In a valiant attempt to halt what appeared to be a rather long and drawn out game of pass the unloved parcel, Member of Legislative Assembly Gavin Short suggested a fourth option, involving the creation of a new group, in order that the issue be passed to them.

This group, which will include at least two members of the public, will be formed under the auspices of the Attorney General Mark Lewis and the Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne.

It will form policy suggestions which will ultimately be presented to Executive Council after the election in November.

Interested in being part of the committee on noise nuisance? Let the Attorney General know.

Good luck Team Falklands at Bermuda NatWest Island Games

Just part of the Falklands team that will compete in Bermuda

"COMPETING for your country, you can't do anything better," Overseas Games Chair MLA Mike Summers told the Falklands team in a speech delivered at Government House on Tuesday evening.

At a reception hosted by HE the Governor Nigel Haywood, for this year's Falklands' NatWest Island Games team, MLA Summers described the team as not the biggest but, "as good a team as we've ever had."

He said with Bermuda being so expensive, they had had to work quite hard, on the commercial sector, in order to raise enough money for the teams to attend.

It was costing, "the best part of £160,000," in addition to money raised by the clubs themselves, to send the team, said MLA Summers.

The Falkland Islands Government in addition to the usual £10,000 donation, gave an extra £40,000 this year, the justification being that Falklands attendance at the Overseas Games was, "a big part of Falklands diplomacy overseas."

MLA Summers went on to thank the sponsors including the FIC and Caribbean Alliance, Cable and Wireless, Stanley Services, Consolidated Fisheries and Argos Resources, the Noble FOGL and Edison group, Sullivan Shipping, Beauchene Fishing Company, Desire, Rockhopper, Fortuna, Byron Marine, Seaview, the FCO, Ken Humphrey and RBC.

He also described the general public as supporting the Overseas

Games, "to the hilt."

Including managers and coaches the entire Falklands delegation attending the games numbers 58. Thirteen of those are under the age of 18.

The games take place between July 13 and 19 and the Falklands will be represented in athletics, badminton, swimming, shooting, golf and football.

The International Island Games Association is made up of 24 member islands who come together every two years to compete in friendly competition in up to 14 sports.

The last games were held in the Isle of Wight in 2011, and after Bermuda, the 2015 Games will be held in Jersey.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

YOU have to be tough to be a farmer and on this occasion I am not referring to long days in the shearing shed, or an eight hour gather/battle with those little woolly 'darling's. Oh no, those things are a doddle, a mere walk in the park compared to putting in a full day on the Town Hall chairs!

But I can vouch for a good 30 or more of them doing just that every day this week even if there is after the first hour of perfect posture and stillness, a perceptible movement in the hall as the battle to be comfortable and keep the buttocks awake takes hold. It's a form of torture even for an office dweller like myself, and only the toughest can sit it out - but they have.

Farmers' week concludes today and no doubt the Camp Education knees up tonight will be a welcome reprieve for the numb bums and cramped muscles of these hardy outdoor types, more accustomed to bouncing around on a quad or tractor than sitting still all day.

But while the nether regions may have been severely deadened, not so the minds as all manner of subjects from ditching, farm mapping, wind power to erosion prevention and even a rather brilliant overview of how Premier intend to extract oil was literally soaked up, discussed, picked to bits at times and possible solutions offered or shared.

However I sensed an air of disappointment from both abattoir staff and the farmers at the revelation the Meat Company had not managed to break even again this year, and I shared their pain.

It is such a huge, combined effort to pull everything together within an operation that has grown even faster than was anticipated in some areas and some long hours are put in getting the animals up to speed and to their final destination.

10 years ago about 2,500 lambs were supplied to the abattoir from just six farms, this year 28,000 from 45 farms were processed along with another 30,000 older sheep. Add to that the £2.6 million pumped back into the local economy and to my mind the subsidy operating loss becomes relatively minor. It's still a success story.

I hold my hands up and admit I wasn't an early supporter of the abattoir, and if I hadn't subjected myself to the annual chair torture for the last decade, I probably wouldn't be now.

There's a new breed out there - sorry chaps it's not a sheep with four hind legs - I call it Farmus Wotowatus because the 'let's get wotivated' call of that rare breed occasionally spotted in the Rincon Grande area has been well and truly answered.

Year 11 transition week

LEAVING structured school life can be a daunting experience for some and in order to prepare this year's graduating students for the change, they have spent the week listening to advice and expanding their life skills.

Their busy timetable of different sessions was designed to inform them on the many directions their life could take and what to expect on the transition to the workplace. At the FIDF Hall classroom they attended focused talks on the future of the Falklands by MLAs, mental health by KEMH staff, and how to stay safe in various ways. Students were encouraged to take an active role in the discussions and ask as many questions as possible.

Trainer Steve Dent talked to the students about what it's like to be self employed, offered business plan assistance to the students should they need it, and cost-price training courses for those not going to college. "Things in the Falklands are going to change and it's essential to have qualifications to put yourself above the next applicant for a job," he said.

Racquel Francis adds some decoration to her team's cakes

There were more light hearted elements to the week as well with team building activities at Hillside, and a 'Ready, Steady, Cook' challenge where groups demonstrated how they could plan and prepare a balanced meal, including a dessert, for three people with a budget of £5. "Not surprisingly, the team who scored highest were the team who sat down and planned how to spend their money before running off to the West Store," joked the organiser of the event HE Teacher Simon Isaacs.

Planning permitted this week

OF twenty two applications only one was refused at the Planning and Building Committee on Thursday. Permission to construct a single storey dwelling at 3A Hebe Street for Mr Neil Rowlands was not approved by the committee as they agreed it would result in overcrowding of the area.

Two applications from FIC Ltd and Morrison Byron Marine to develop Plot 8 Coastal Road were deferred for the third time by the committee pending additional information from both applicants.

Approval was granted for the 19 other applications; the relocation of the RT Building from St Mary's Walk and the associated removal of Unit 4 at the Dockyard, the site of the relocation, for the Museum and National Trust; the erection of a three metre fence along southern and eastern boundaries of Lookout Lodge for Wickham Heights Ltd; the creation of off-street parking at 8 Brisbane Road for Jeremy Poncet; the change of use of Plot 24, Lookout Industrial Estate to allow office and retail activities for Paul Ellis; and extension to the dwelling of 38 Ross Road West for Stuart and Lilian Wallace; an extension to the warehouse at the Chandlery Estate on Airport Road for Goodwin Offshore Ltd; and an extension to the shed at 19A Mink Park for Jimmy Curtis' close family to use as a residence.

Also approved by the committee was the construction of one and two storey dwellings at 26 Davis Street for JK Marine, 14 Mink Park for Callum Middleton, Plot 1 Fitzroy River for Neil Rowlands, 5 Mink Park for Marcus Morrison, and at Sapper Hill Plots 43-69 for Falkland Islands Government.

Two years temporary permission was granted for the siting of a mobile home at 9 Callaghan Road for Chris and Lindsay May's close family to use as a dwelling, and permission was also granted for FIG to create road access and service provision for 61 mobile homes on land south of Murray Heights.

Permission was granted for the construction of a two storey building for both residential and commercial use at 60 John Street for Mr Jeff and Mrs Julie Halliday, as was the building of a two storey block to contain seven flats at 76 and 78 Davis Street for Stanley Services Limited.

Outline permission was granted to create a portable hotel system and long-term facilities with up to 240 bedrooms at 8 VPC Road for Goodwin Offshore Ltd, and for the former YPF Site on Ross Road East to be used for residential and office development for FIC Ltd.

Falklands Meat Company generates £2.6 million

RECORD numbers have been processed at the Sand Bay Abattoir during the export season with £2.6 million paid to suppliers, local businesses and government.

However Meat Company manager John Ferguson told farmers this week that the financial loss of £526,000 was higher than projected and was attributable to a number of factors.

The Euro crisis had seriously affected the market with sales prices down 25-30 per cent and an unexpected 11,000 mutton had been processed with little or no notice. Mutton are the hardest to process and result in a loss per head, therefore increasing the required government subsidy.

Last year just £165,000 subsidy was required while the 2010/11 season had resulted in no subsidy at all being needed.

Of the £2.6 million £1,174,000 was paid to farmers, £765,000 to Stanley businesses and suppliers, £454,000 to staff and £299,000 to Government.

A total of 57,771 sheep were processed, 27,981 of which were new season or yearling lambs and Mr Ferguson paid tribute to the farmers for the overall quality of the animals. "You people are just getting better and better at finishing livestock," he said.

North Arm farm manager Steven Dickson said the season had gone well for him with around 11,000 sheep, grossing more than £200,000 and totalling more than all of mainland West Falkland, sent to the abattoir.

The supply of beef however was not meeting demand with 30 animals per month needed to supply the shops alone. There was still a large amount of beef being imported said Mr Ferguson and he urged farmers to increase the mature cattle supply to meet emerging opportunities. Demand would increase over the next few years and there was no danger of over supply as any excess could be exported, he said.

While one farmer disputed the pricing structure for beef, others said it was fair and a target was needed to improve standard.

Prime animals (18-36 months old) obtain a price of around £400 while one farmer had achieved the top price of £670 for a single animal.

Premier plans in the pipeline

BUNDLED or reeled production flow lines could be constructed in the Falklands for Premier Oil with a decision to be made early next year.

Ken Humphrey of Premier Oil said on Wednesday that the work would require a site with access to the sea and about 6.5 kilometres of fairly flat land for the large steel pipes to be constructed on.

Several sites had been sourced and consequently whittled down to two and land owners had been approached said Mr Humphrey who added that the concept paper had been provided to the government for the idea to be explored in principle.

The Falklands was being considered because it was problematic to tow the large pipes for more than a thousand miles, said Mr Humphrey. The pipes which could be up to 6.5 kms long connect the floating production, storage and offloading (FPSO) vessel to the Sea Lion reservoir.

He described the Falklands project as more challenging than other developments because it was the first to take place and therefore the regulatory and approval regime was evolving and also because of the remoteness and lack of infrastructure.

Strictly legal

FALKLANDS Legal is the new name for Falkland Islands Legal Services.

The snappier appellation was revealed at the Rural Business Association Farmers Week Expo on Monday morning. Mark Neves the lawyer at Falklands Legal said the Expo was a great opportunity to launch the new name and emphasise the company's commitment to being a local firm in the community.

First class family honours

A FALKLANDS mother and son have achieved a First Class each, in their recently completed Honours Degrees, both undertaken in the UK.

Joshua Peck has obtained 1st in a BA (Hons) International History with International Politics sponsored by the Falklands Islands Government, and his mum Carol Peck took a 1st in BSc (Hons) Human Nutrition, funded by the Commonwealth Scholarship Committee.

Joshua attended UWE Bristol and Carol, the University of Worcester.

Further great results achieved by Falklands overseas students include a 2:1 for Saul Zuvic in BA (Hons) Product Design including a Placement Year, and another 2:1 for Karen Minto in BSc Sports Studies & Physical Education.

Roxanne King obtained a Dis-

First class degrees for mum and son, Carol and Joshua Peck inction in a Foundation Degree in Business Management at Newcastle College. Her mark of 74 per cent was the highest in her year.

Daniel Biggs, who already had an Honours Degree in Sports

Science and a Masters in Sports Coaching, has now added to them with PGCE Physical Education SCITT, making him a fully qualified PE teacher. ●Let PN know about your achievements.

Changes to immigration laws needed says Regeneris

A MORE permanent integrated type of immigration for the Falklands is a strong message that has come out of a consultation with Falklands residents, in the preparation for a socio-economic study of oil and gas development in the Falklands.

This may mean changes to matters such as the ability to own property for those on work permits and changes to the system to encourage a move to PRP status.

The study commissioned by the Falklands government and undertaken by Regeneris Consulting has now been made public following an examination by Members of Legislative Assembly last week.

In its numerous key findings it was noted that while development of the Sea Lion field by Premier Oil, would create a very significant short/medium term spike in labour demand with employment potentially peaking at around 550 extra on-shore in the short term, in the longer term the development will overall support around 170 jobs in the Falklands, plus 125 offshore jobs. However under other scenarios the longer term increase in jobs would be much larger at 600 to 800 plus. The potential development of an onshore Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) plant would require several thousands of workers in its construction over a three to four year period and several hundreds in its operational phase.

It says the Falklands will have to allow extra workers to come to fill the increase in jobs driven by oil and gas: "There is no other solution to the demands that will be placed on the economy and labour market."

Under housing and accommodation in its summary of policy recommendations Regeneris believe FIG should lead or support the private sector to increase the rate of house building over the period 2013-15 to around 40 homes per year. Also the FIG will need to plan for the provision of temporary workers accommodation for 200 to 300 workers.

In one extreme scenario ('big oil' plus land based LNG) it suggests the population could increase by 1,760 by 2030. The smallest increase of 240 anticipated by 2030 would be under the model 'Sea Lion plus exploration'. The authors express concern that economic growth could lead to migration from the Camp to Stanley: "there is a need for FIG to consider ways to counteract the migratory pressures towards Stanley," including continued investment in infrastructure and services to support farms and settlements.

They also recommend that FIG resurrect plans to expand Fitzroy potentially for it to become a base for contractors working at MPA.

The report also examines the overall economic effects of oil development, population and migration, infrastructure, public services, the labour market and skills and business opportunities. Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham emphasised however, "that at this stage the views in the report remain those of the consultants - FIG will respond to this in due course but we wanted to publish the full report to stimulate debate rather than sit on it whilst we considered its findings."

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

WITH the release of the Socio Economic report which examines some of the possible scenarios for oil development there is another opportunity for people to make their views known. The report raises some very pertinent questions which require thoughtful responses. In parallel the publication of the Migration Review deals with the practical implications of increased temporary and permanent immigration and how it can be managed. As with other consultations I would urge people to get involved, the more views we receive the better. While I imagine that people would wish for practical and structured means of allowing necessary immigration to ensure an adequate work force, I'm sure it is also important to be assured that adequate controls are in place. Likewise the controls on land acquisition by non residents that have been in place for some years for very sound reasons can only be replaced if we are satisfied that similar safeguards are in place.

I WISH I had kept a detailed tally of the different meetings and events in the very busy few years of the life of this Assembly. My diary simply lists meetings but of course does not record all the informal meetings, phone calls and conversations and queries answered. I am concerned that no sooner do we as MLAs feel we're near to solving some difficult problems than they pop up again in other guises. We have some excellent people working for FIG but the lack of any real corporate memory in departments with a high turnover of contract staff creates real challenges.

THE opportunity to present budget details and repeat the report of the Roles and Remuneration panel is being taken this week while many Camp residents are in town. Unfortunately we had to abandon a planned trip to the West in a couple of weeks because there seemed to have been a mass exodus of residents from Port Howard and accommodation became a problem. One of the potential advantages of having full time Assembly members should be that members for Camp can dedicate more constituency time than they are able to do part timer.

Museum development brings a taste of Camp to Stanley

THE Museum and National Trust complex at the old Dockyard site has been extended to include more buildings and also incorporate the re-siting of the old Radio Transmission (RT) building.

At last week's Executive Council meeting parking issues were also discussed.

The M&NT proposed that customers arriving by coach could be adequately serviced by the Malvina House Hotel where an off-road drop off point is to be provided by hotel owners Stanley Services Ltd. This is not expected to cause any disruption to the flow of traffic on Ross Road.

Museum Manager Leona Roberts said it was accepted this would not be a permanent option, but ExCo's support had been sought in the interim while the future use of the infill area adjacent to the Museum complex was determined.

It is anticipated that with the move of PWD staff to the new site at Megabid there will be increased parking available behind the Town Hall and parking is also available behind Malvina House Hotel as well as an area behind the stone buildings for Museum staff and non coached customers. Mrs Roberts said the vast majority of museum customers would arrive in coaches or on foot.

The RT station which was a vital link between Stanley and Camp for many years is going to be used to illustrate the history of communications in the Islands.

Mrs Roberts said the plan was to recreate the RT that Islanders remember, but also to show how telecoms have developed over the years.

Part of the old Telephone Exchange switchboard will also be incorporated into the display which will no doubt prompt many memories of shared lines and conversations with the operators who notoriously kept their fingers firmly on the pulse of Stanley life.

"We had a pretty distinctive system of keeping in touch until very recently and I think this will be an interesting exhibition - it's difficult for anyone new to the Islands to imagine the doctor's half-hour, for example," said Mrs Roberts.

Bringing a taste of Camp life to Stanley will be Hawk's Nest Shanty which is currently situated on West Falklands and was gifted to the M&NT by Tony Blake in memory of his late wife, Lynn.

"Located in the Dockyard we think it will be a wonderful means of telling the story of Camp life, along with our display of traditional horse gear and exhibitions inside the main museum itself. We have always been very conscious of the fact that the museum doesn't really say much about our agricultural/rural heritage - but the Camp has always been an enormously important part of life in the Falklands and it deserves full recognition in the museum," said Mrs Roberts.

"It's a fabulously simple little building, packed with character and history that you just cannot fake. We hope that by bringing it to the Dockyard we can preserve that authenticity so that both Islanders and visitors can enjoy it for years to come."

Weather for June

BOTH the mean maximum and minimum temperatures were around 2 degrees Celsius above the long-term average for June, making it the second warmest June on record, 1998 being the warmest. Rainfall was well above average, being 133% of the long-term average, the fifth wettest June on record. Sunshine was slightly above average, being 109% of the long-term average.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 6.6 degrees Celsius compared with the long-term average for June of 4.6 degrees Celsius. The highest temperature recorded was 12.4 degrees Celsius recorded on June 24, making it the third warmest June day on record. The lowest maximum temperature was 2.8 degrees Celsius recorded on the June 18.

The mean minimum temperature was 2.2 degrees Celsius, compared with the long-term average of 0.5 degrees Celsius. The lowest minimum was -3.2 degrees Celsius recorded on the June 22 and the highest minimum temperature was 7.5 degrees Celsius recorded on the June 25, making it the fourth warmest June night.

Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 75.4 mm compared with the long-term average of 56.9mm. The wettest day was on the June 15 with a total of 10.8 mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 24 days with 1.0 mm or more falling on 18 days.

Sunshine

The monthly sunshine total was 66.5 hours compared with the long-term average for June of 61.1 hours. The highest daily total was 6.0 hours recorded on the June 28.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog

There were 11 days of snow or sleet with 3 days of lying snow, 8 days of hail, 6 days of fog and 1 day of thunder.

Wind/Gales

The monthly mean wind speed was 15.1 knots, which is above the average of 13.5 knots. It was the 4th windiest June on record. The highest hourly mean speed of 35 knots occurred on June 15 and 21 with the highest gust of 59 knots recorded on the June 8. There were 6 gale days recorded for the month and there were 19 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Jay in Wales

Jay roars to second place at Welsh Enduro

JAY Moffatt headed north to take part in his fourth Welsh Two Day International Enduro last week, all the while hoping it was not going to be a repeat of last year's atrocious conditions.

Having taken delivery of his new bike, a 125cc KTM stroker, Jay said he was a little nervous of the characteristics of a two stroke compared to an easier-to-ride four stroke. He need not have worried and took off in a clatter of engine noise and burnt oil fumes.

Leading the field on day one, it was not without dramas. In one of the tight forest sections he discovered he had no front brake.

Tearing down steep forest sections and tight switch-backs with no engine braking and only light purchase on the back brake, "it was very hairy to say the least," said Jay.

The next check fixed the brake and he was on his way to finish a very successful first day.

On day two, a mix up with time penalties left Jay in a confused state as he screamed off creating a vortex of swirling burger cartons. True to the traditional British summer, the rain, which had started the previous afternoon and continued all evening, had rendered the coarse a gloppy, slippery mess. With eyes wide shut and throttle pinned he again completed the second day without penalties, while posting good times on the special tests.

Jay finished a very creditable second place in his class, an excellent result considering he had had no race season or beat-up and on a bike which required a completely different riding technique.

Jay said: "Once again, a big thanks to ET James who stepped up to the mark in helping with pit stops, spares back-up and expert advice."

Government appointments

The Falkland Islands Government has announced a number of new appointments in the latest Gazette.

At the Public Works Department Colin Summers has taken up the role of Deputy Director.

Christopher Reynolds is now General Handyperson and Sarah Faria a Clerk.

Karl Nightingale has been employed as Skilled Handyperson and Dennis Summers, Plant Operator/Handyperson/Storeperson.

Sandy Kelly has become General Assistant with the Health and Social Services Department.

At the Natural Resources Department Kate Dunn has been employed as Agricultural Adviser and Francisco Gonzalo Sobrado Llompart as Scientific Fisheries Observer.

Emeka Okechukwu Nweje has now completed his contract as Laboratory Manager with the Health and Social Services Department.

A renewal of contract is recorded for Staff Nurse Robyn Culhane at the Health and Social Services Department.

William Bowles has resigned as Handyman at the Education Department and Bernadette Pring has transferred from Flight Information Officer, Central Services to Assistant Taxation Officer, Tax Office.

New members for the Media Trust

MICHAEL Poole, Pat Pratlett and Ailie Biggs were appointed to the Media Trust by His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood for a period of four years from June 6.

The three join Cheryl Roberts (Chair) and trustees Derek Clarke, Janet Robertson, Sian Nightingale and Nancy Jennings.

The aim of the Trust is to ensure the independence of the Penguin News and Radio Station and approve their strategies, budgets and general performance.

Crystal cruise

CRYSTAL Cruises is planning a magical winter wonderland holiday that includes the Falkland Islands this Christmas.

In addition to three days sailing Antarctic waters, the December 21 Buenos Aires/ Valparaiso voyage on board the award winning Crystal Symphony will sail through Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Falkland Islands, Drake Passage, Cape Horn, and the Chilean Fjords, and will include multiple excursions to the Antarctic continent.

Crystal is one of the few cruise lines permitted to sail to Antarctica, due to the strict environmental regulations, for which Crystal has incurred extra cost and planning efforts.

Director of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board Tony Mason referred to the new addition to the Falklands cruise ship schedule when he spoke this week about the, "past years success and forward plans."

Tracing Trevor

IN March 1968 I was working as an Occupational Therapist at the Lord Mayor Treloar Hospital in Alton, Hampshire and treated a young man on the orthopaedic ward. His name was Trevor and he came from the Falkland Islands and was of a sheep farming family.

My memory of this was jogged recently while looking for photographs of Rose and George Stewart who visited us in England so that I could send them to Ginge Kidd and I found another photo. This was of me taken by Trevor on the ward of the LMT hospital. Is Trevor still around? It would be interesting to find out.

Since that day in '68, my husband served with the Task Force in 1982 and when he retired we decided to visit the Islands. We have been three times, staying in Liberty Lodge, The Malvina Hotel and on many of the outer islands and making acquaintance with Ginge and Bill Kidd.

We intend to visit again next year – programme not yet finalised – but if Trevor is still around, it might be fun to meet up.

Fuel supply monopoly versus competition

AT a meeting of Executive Council last week, Members of the Assembly examined a paper that recommended an exclusive Fuel Supply Agreement to be the preferred arrangement, "for ensuring a guaranteed supply of domestic fuels to the Falkland Islands."

In her summary of the meeting MLA Cheek said the paper was, "taking the first steps in examining a review of the Falkland Islands Fuel Supply Licence."

In the paper it is noted, "our local domestic market for fuel, although larger than it was 25 years ago, still amounts to no more than a small town in size and it is certainly questionable as to whether there is capacity for multiple suppliers of fuel to earn a worthwhile living."

The paper examines two options, exclusive licence (monopoly) and competitive market. In relation to the monopoly option it is noted: "The reason that FIG created this monopoly in 1987 was – and remains – because the market size is too small to support competition; and that such an approach was needed to secure the overriding aim of achieving security of supply of fuel to the Islands (something which would be far more difficult to achieve if there was true competition in the market given the political situation)."

Advocates for government-granted monopolies often argue they ensure a degree of public control over essential industries, without having those industries actually run by the state. Opponents criticise them as political favours to corporations. Government-granted monopolies may be opposed by those who would prefer free markets as well as by those who would prefer to replace private corporations with public ownership. Also, opponents of government-granted monopoly often point out that such a firm is able to set its pricing and production policies without fear of breeding potential competition. They argue that this causes inefficiencies in the market place, such as unnecessarily high prices to consumers for the good or service being supplied (government-imposed price caps, as happens currently, might avert this problem, however, it is still possible that competition would supply the good or service at a lower price albeit conversely with no guarantee the Islands will be able to guarantee fuel supply).

In relation to the second option competitive market, it is explained that in the case of the Falkland Islands a competitive market would likely be limited to a very small number of suppliers and even if the Falklands was to have competition in the fuel market it would still suffer from problems of dominant market positions/oligopoly, "such that it would still require strict Government regulation in order to protect consumers."

A competitive market achieves efficiency in the use of scarce resources if there are no market failures present and because the conditions for perfect competition are normally strict, there are few if any perfectly competitive markets.

Following public consultation on the matter over the next two months, a final decision on the structure of future fuel supply to the Islands will be made in September.

Change to Justice Bill

AT the meeting of Legislative Assembly on Tuesday a Bill was passed that will allow the Magistrate's Court to sit outside the Falkland Islands in certain circumstances and subject to certain conditions.

A court may sit anywhere in the Falkland Islands (apart from places of worship and licensed premises) and the Supreme Court currently has the power to sit outside the Falkland Islands to deal with certain issues that arise during a case.

This Bill allows the Magistrate's Court to also sit outside the Falklands for the same reasons.

It also imposes three conditions that would have to be met for that to happen. Two other sections of the bill deal with exceptions to those conditions.

Structured immigration

A MIGRATION review undertaken by Claire Hoskins will be published for further consultations confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly Jan Cheek this week, commenting on last week's meeting of Executive Council. MLA Cheek said: "It recommends, among other things, a more structured approach to immigration and one that it is hoped will be able to handle extra pressures anticipated with more oil exploration and potential development."

New openings in government

AN, "increase to the Infant Junior School establishment to cater for additional numbers in Camp and Stanley," was approved at Executive Council, as was a paralegal post in the Attorney General's department. MLA Cheek said this was welcomed as an opportunity for someone with 'A' level equivalent or better qualifications and an interest in law to get some basic training. If successful there would then be a possibility of further career development.

Policy papers

UNDER policy papers ExCo noted a report on the FIG performance management system. The Head of Policy updated MLAs on progress toward a more efficient system.

They also examined an updated version of the Oil Readiness action plan which gives an idea of the breadth of activity that FIG has to undertake to ensure appropriate measures are in place.

MLA Cheek also confirmed that the draft Minimum Wage Legislation is near completion and should go to the July or August Assembly meeting.

Your questions answered

Q: Does FIG own Lookout Lodge? If yes, is it leased or contracted out to the private sector? If contracted, how often is the contract put out for tender?

A: Provided by Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham: FIG is the current owner of Lookout Lodge. ExCo approved the sale of the lodge to the current leaseholder and negotiations are ongoing in relation to final terms, although are expected to be finalised soon.

Q: Is there a legal requirement for FIG to seek tenders when selling any assets to the private sector?

A: There is no legal requirement to tender, however FIG seeks to achieve best value in all sales and Lookout Lodge is being disposed in this manner following approval from Executive Council.

Q: Will the Falklands will be getting 'credit card' sized driving licenses soon?

A: Provided by Director of Emergency Services Barry Marsden: The RFIP have the necessary equipment to create the new driving licences and work is ongoing between the police and computer department to automate part of the process to enable a quicker response time in issuing the credit sized driving licences. A trial has been conducted using the new driving licence abroad to hire a car which was successful. Some minor additional work is being conducted to improve the appearance of the driving licence but it is hoped as soon as this has been completed the public can be informed by the RFIP how they intend to manage the process of issuing the licences.

Q: Are there are plans for a urologist to visit the Islands?

A: Acting Hospital Manager Jeanette Vincent: Unfortunately we do not have a visiting Urologist planning to visit the Islands. What does happen is that female patients are seen by the visiting Gynaecologist who in turn will either treat the patient or refer to a specialist, including an urologist if necessary. Males will be seen by our resident surgeon who again will treat or refer the patient.

Farmers browse business at Monday's RBA Expo

FIFTEEN local businesses presented their wares and promoted their services at the Rural Business Association Farmers Week Expo and breakfast on Monday.

As well as the usual organisations, such as the Tourist Board, Department of Agriculture and Wilkins Kennedy, this year a number of new businesses attended, including Decor Services, BFBS and AgriGap.

Decor Services Marketing Manager Sarah Clement said "The Expo provides a great opportunity to meet and chat with people from Camp who might otherwise not be in Stanley much, it was fantastic to be able to go along with samples and information that they could take away with them.

"We were expecting it to be quite busy as we launched a discount offer on selected carpets which has run throughout the week and we weren't disappointed. It was definitely a valuable exercise and we sold quite a few carpets and organized follow on meetings with farmers for later in the week

"Having been at all the previous RBA Farmers Week Expo's, I would say this was the busiest, and it was great to see so many different companies attending," said Mrs Clement.

Mark Lewis collects gold

IT was a packed week for the six Falklands archers at the Guernsey Games. After some 36 hours travelling, including a four hour rough crossing on the Condor ferry, Joanne Lazo, Steff Thain, Javier Lazo, Justin McPhee, Mark Lewis and Jason Lewis were straight in at the deep end with three days of intensive coaching by experienced GB coaches Tony Drabble and Clive Jaecock.

Marking Liberation Day is important wherever you are in the world, and the occasion was celebrated with an invitation of a barbecue at the home of Robert and Leslie Titterton. "On behalf of the team we would like to extend our thanks for a wonderful evening on such an important occasion," said Falkland Islands Archery Club Secretary Joanne Lazo, who provided Penguin News with a day-to-day record of how the competition went....

Golden Guernsey Games for Falklands Archery

On Sunday all competitors had a practice session and it became apparent that our Falklands team was not just there to make up the numbers, and might even be the dark horses of the tournament. The official opening on Sunday evening welcomed the teams and got us all together for the first social event.

Monday's competition got under way in bright and breezy conditions with a full round FITA. The other teams were worried that the weather might suit our Falklands team and as it happened we performed well. The shoot comprised 144 arrows at four different distances starting at 90 metres for the men and 70 metres for the ladies - the coaching clearly paid off as team Falklands won a team bronze, beaten by the hosts Guernsey and only narrowly beaten by the Orkney team.

There was patchy weather on Tuesday for the individual and team head to head competitions. Javier performed well coming fourth in men's recurve competition. He shot alongside Dylan from Shetland with the scores only one point between them. Steff, Javier and Mark came fourth in the team head to head being piped to the post by the Shetland team. There was also a mixed pairs competition with Jason paired with Jason Le Page from Guernsey. I was paired with Richard Poncia from Guernsey and Justin was with Rhys Moore from the Isle of Man. The Jasons got first place and Richard and I came closely behind in second place. Justin and Rhys came fourth.

On Wednesday teams were given the option to go sight-seeing around the beautiful island setting. Jason visited Island FM for an interview. Steff caught up with Sandie Harrison (nee Booth) and Jo, Jay and Mark went sightseeing. (Thanks to Steve, Chantelle and Laura for taking time out to show us around.) The day was rounded off with a raffle and horse racing with lots of betting, shouting and hollering from all. We were presented with our team bronze medal at this event.

Medals were specially designed for the event, with an arrow head pointing on an outline map of Guernsey to indicate where the event was held.

Glorious weather greeted archers on Thursday and the Falklands team ladies shot a Hereford while the men turned their hands to a York - this is shot over four imperial distances with the men starting at 100 yards and the ladies starting at 80 yards.

All of the team achieved their first individual personal bests and I made it to the individual score board and maintained the position to achieve an individual bronze medal. Medals were presented by Michelle Le Clerq who some of the team had met earlier in the year when she visited the Islands for the CPA conference.

The combined indoor FITA was shot on Friday. The team found this event tough after a tiring week of shooting and with the small targets requiring lots of concentration. Personal bests were beaten again and there was even a surprise win for Mark who beat top players from Guernsey and the Orkneys to bring home a gold medal. The day ended with a farewell dinner, speeches and disco until the small hours of the morning.

The team was well supported with Karen and Derek Summers, Gaye and Ray Robson, Dave and Pam Lewis with Ray supporting the team head to head by cheering and whistling rather loudly.

Thanks to all the families who came and supported the team: Coaches Tony and Clive, Steve and all our friends at Guernsey Bowmen for a fantastic week of archery; and all those that followed us on Face Book, FIRS, FITV and Penguin News.

Art in abundance at the Sue Whitley Exhibition

THE Susan Whitley Art and Craft Exhibition is one of the leading events in the Infant Junior school and Camp Education year. "where we showcase the outstanding art and design work that our children in Stanley and in Camp create." Head Teacher Karen Steen told Penguin News this week.

The exhibition takes place during Farmers' Week so that as many parents and friends as possible have the opportunity to go to the school and share the children's achievements.

"We are proud to hold the exhibition in memory of Susan Whitley," she added.

Mrs Whitley was a teacher of Home Economics and Art in the Falkland Islands. She was killed during the war in 1982, while sheltering in a stone house on Ross Road West. With reference to her artistic talent, and love for the Islands, her family set up a trust to host an exhibition of art and craft throughout the Education Department. The Trust sponsors four awards which recognise effort, endeavour, skill and ability.

"The high calibre of the display is thanks to all staff for their creative teaching, and hard work and attention to detail when exhibiting the children's art," said Mrs Steen.

Saint Troy marches home with the Governor's Cup

Cup winner Troy Bagley focused on his game and celebrating with Governor Nigel Haywood

THE Governor's Cup darts tournament took place in the Town Hall on Saturday June 29. 79 men entered, 10 more than last year.

As usual there were a few 'interesting', ie tough, games in the early rounds, most notably Rochel Regalado v Roy Shepherd (Roy won 2-1), Peter Goss v Kevin Clapp (Kevin won 2-0), Colin Smith v Rag Macaskill (Rag won 2-1) and Toot and Len Ford (Toot won 2-1). Of those making it through to the last 16, I will mention Peter Cox and Ken Bebbington, both making a return to the Falklands darts scene, and Toby Poole who beat Robin Smith and Phil Kearney to secure his place.

The quarter final line up was Paul Lewis v Ali Bonner, Toot Ford v Kevin Clapp, Jonny Ford v Troy Bagley and Steve John v Bobby Short. The best of five leg semi finals were between Ali Bonner and Toot Ford (Toot won 3-1) and Troy Bagley v Steve John (Troy won 3-0). Of these only bandit Troy was making his semi-final debut; Ali Bonner reached the semi finals nine years ago and Steve John was 2nd in the 2010 Governor's Cup.

Troy took the first leg of the best of seven final, Toot won the next three legs and just needed one more to win the cup. However Troy won the next two legs to level the score at 3-3 and then took the 7th and final leg to become the first St Helenian to win the Governor's Cup.

Rose Bowl

As with the men's competition entry numbers were slightly up on last year with 43 ladies taking part in the Rose Bowl. Most of the ladies games were fairly evenly matched and were won by "consistent scoring and ability to finish" (one of my favourite quotes from the 1961 Governor's Cup report).

An unusual occurrence this year was three generations of one family reaching the last 16 - well done to Hazel Minnell, Ella Minnell and Jody Poole.

Winning through to the quarter finals were Maggie Goss, Cherry Robson, Julie Ford, Cathy Jacobsen Snr, Ella Minnell, Lisa Jaffray, Jody Poole and Jackie Thomas. The first semi final was between Cherry and Cathy (Cathy won 2-1) and the second between Ella and Jackie (Jackie won 2-1). Having checked my records I see that all these ladies have been in the semi finals before although this was the first appearance this century for Cherry and Ella!

Cathy then beat defending champion Jackie 3-1 in the final to win her 3rd Rose Bowl.

Thank you to His Excellency the Governor for presenting the prizes and to the Darts Club committee and helpers for their organisation.

Crane ride onto Gough

Landing at Gough Island

A COUPLE of months ago, I finished working with the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department, and joined a scientific research cruise onboard the RRS James Clark Ross (JCR).

The JCR generally travels from Antarctica, through the Atlantic to the Arctic Ocean at this time of the year, so a collaboration of groups (BAS, SMSG, Pew and the Tristan Government) had applied, and been granted, funding from the Darwin Initiative to detour the ship and spend some time sampling around the Tristan da Cunha archipelago.

Tristan da Cunha is the most remote inhabited island in the world, lying 2,400km (1500 miles) away from the rest of civilisation, between South Africa and South America. With a population of 275 people, and the only access being by ship (and even then only a few times per year), opportunities for research have sometimes been limited.

A Norwegian expedition undertook a lot of research on and around the Tristan group in the 1930s, providing a lot of the baseline data.

The shallow marine environment has recently been the focus of dive surveys, from the intertidal zone down to depths of about 40m.

The major focus of this expedition was to collect data from greater depths, using a variety of science platforms, around the Tristan Islands and also Gough Island which lies approximately 200km further south.

On April 30 I joined the JCR, my presence on behalf of the Falkland Islands Shallow Marine Surveys Group (SMSG). Almost immediately, our cruise schedule was changed, and we were tasked to spend a few days around South Georgia.

A few days later, a small part of the science team were put ashore at King Edward Point (KEP) to do some intertidal and terrestrial sampling, whilst the ship headed around the islands to do some trawling with very specific nets to sample both pelagic and benthic communities around South Georgia. This was an incredible experience for me, as I have always wanted to go to South Georgia and I was able to spend a few days doing shoreline surveys around KEP.

These surveys were to provide a comparison for previous SMSG intertidal work that took place in November 2010. One of the benefits of sampling in May was the availability of space on the beach; fewer fur seals to weave through with a tape measure and so less harassment when concentrating on taking quadrat photos.

Departing from South Georgia had us steaming north towards Gough Island where we landed on May 19.

There is a small South African weather and science station on Gough, although to reach this involves moving from the JCR on small inflatable boats, and then being craned up the cliffs in a cage.

The base crew don't get many visitors and were very friendly, leading us off in two teams to sample a beach or up into the island to collect terrestrial samples including moss, peat and water.

Despite our short time on the island, we were treated to a braai, a South African barbeque that had been prepared whilst we were out. Gough Island has a very strict policy where no fresh fruit or veg can be imported, so the base team have become pretty inventive with tinned and frozen food.

The reason for this is the devastation caused by house mice, which were introduced before 1880 and prey on the many species of breeding birds, including the endemic Tristan albatross.

The waters around Gough were sampled using a pelagic trawl net called the RMT8. It was deployed during the dark, as the planktonic organisms we were looking for rise in the water column at night. Despite only being a few kilos of organisms in most hauls, once looked at closely, we were seeing some incredible little animals. After sorting into family groups most of these were photographed under the microscope, and either frozen or preserved in ethanol for identification by experts back at BAS.

Leaving Gough Island, our next stop was Tristan da Cunha, where we arrived on May 21. After clearing customs, more shore parties were arranged, one heading to the base of the volcano (Queen Mary's Peak, which erupted most recently in 1961), and the other to examine the intertidal area. The coastal collection was limited due to the heavy swells that Tristan is renowned for, but did allow time to visit the small museum, send a few postcards and explore the settlement.

Our short shore expeditions were only a small part of the work we were doing, with large areas of the seabed being mapped using sonar. This mapping was used to determine the relief of the area, and then used to decide where we would be deploying our benthic trawl gear. The benthic trawls need a relatively flat surface to be trawled along with sustaining damage, but as we were working off volcanoes, this occasionally proved a challenge.

We were also deploying an underwater camera system, which took photos of the sea floor, allowing the team to look at sediment types and to see what communities were living on bottom. Remaining in the area, we moved on to trawl around Nightingale and Inaccessible Islands, and were lucky enough with the weather to land a small team on Inaccessible Island to take further coastal samples.

Once our ship time had been used, we headed further north to Ascension, where the team would disembark the JCR, and whilst most of them flew back to the UK, I joined the SMSG team for a couple of days before flying back to the Falklands.

The trip did involve a lot of transit time between the islands, although a second science team of oceanographers onboard were doing a lot of work with deploying various buoys. It wasn't all work during the five weeks onboard, there were also a few downtime events, such as a Big Lebowski night (complete with pajamas and white Russian cocktails), a bbq on the aft deck (tasty fresh crayfish from Tristan) and a quiz night to keep us entertained.

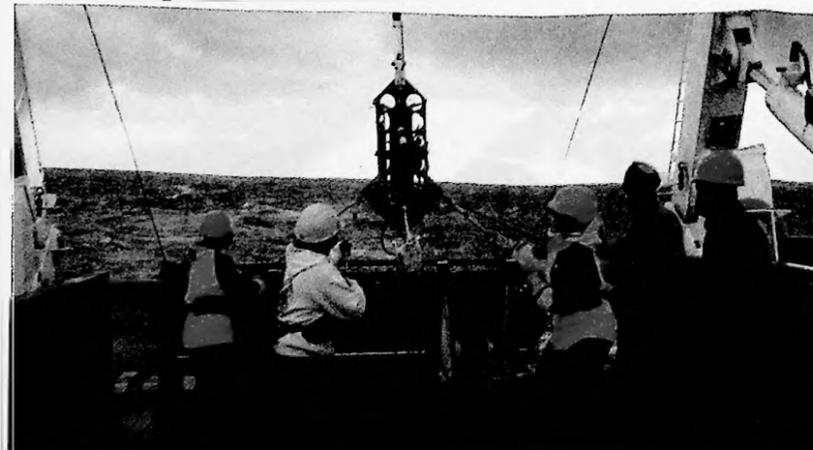

It was the trip of a lifetime, and a privilege to visit so many South Atlantic Islands whilst working alongside some really great scientists and crew.

Thanks to everyone who was involved.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Artist Louise focuses on Falklands

THE Falkland Islands is the focus of an art exhibition at Parliament Buildings in Northern Ireland.

The artist, Louise Clarke, is half Falkland Islander, the daughter of Veronica Clarke (Nee May). Her first trip to the Islands to spend time with her Falklands family earlier this year provided the inspiration for the exhibition. Entitled 'Forces of Nature', the exhibition marks Armed Forces Week by showcasing wildlife in areas where the British Armed Forces serve, with a very special focus on the Falkland Islands.

The exhibition is hosted by

MLA Brenda Hale, and will run at Parliament Buildings until July 5. The official launch event took place on Monday June 24 and was attended by a number of special guests, including the First Minister of Northern Ireland, the Rt Hon Peter Robinson. As well as showcasing Falkland wildlife art, Louise gave a presentation about the Falkland Islands using photographs which she took on her trip.

This is Louise's first solo exhibition. She is an entirely self-taught artist, passionate about wildlife and the natural world, and has been drawing from a very early age. She works mainly in graphite and coloured pencil.

"The launch event was a great success, and I enjoyed being able to promote the Falklands in this way," said Louise.

Needless to say that all of Louise's family in the Falkland Islands are very proud of her and wish her all the best for her future as an artist.

Prints and originals of Louise's work will be available in the Pink Shop. For more information, or to commission any work, please visit her website at www.louise-clarkart.co.uk

Budding nine year old hockey star

A FORFEITED Dek Hockey match between Panthers and Flyers opened a window of opportunity for a nine year old protege on Sunday. Panthers were absent goalie Melvyn Clifton so lost the match automatically 3 - 0, but players who showed decided to play a friendly with Panthers collecting players from the viewing stand. Coyote goalie Clayton March stepped into goal and nine year old Malachi Budd suited up as an additional outfield player for the team.

The friendly match was eventually won by Flyers but Malachi showed great promise playing with the adults. Coyotes and Hurricanes met in the second match of the afternoon. Coyotes had no substitutes for the match so under advice from Malachi's father Hurricanes outfielder, Grant Budd, Malachi joined the ranks of the dogs as a fourth outfielder again. Budd senior regretted this decision later.

The game was a good one with plenty of energy, tackling and bruises but dwarfing any achievement of the adults was the skill and energy of the bright young thing who scored four goals for Coyotes. He held his own, tackling the ball from men more than twice his size and worked into the club records by being the youngest player ever to achieve a hat-trick.

Malachi's four goals secured victory for Coyotes against Hurricanes. "My dad said I caused him a few headaches," he said.

Malachi has been a regular spectator at hockey club matches and has clearly been influenced by his parents interest in the sport. Grant Budd played ice hockey for UK team the Peterborough Pirates before joining the Dek Hockey club in the Falklands and his mother Stacey also played with the Falklands club.

Malachi told Penguin News he has been playing hockey since he was very young and honed his skills just playing on the street.

He played again on Tuesday, for his father's team. It can be a very dangerous and physical sport but he hopes to appear again as a guest for an adult team.

Young and old archers compete in fun shoot

LAST weekend the Infant Junior School and Camp Education and Falklands Archery Association Juniors took on grown ups, parents and adult FAA members, including Gold Medal winner at the Guernsey Games Mark Lewis and Bronze Medal team medallist Jason Lewis, in a head-to-head team shoot at the FIDF Hall.

While the outcome was in little doubt, the juniors stood their ground, shot their best arrows, had a great deal of fun and showed they were not going to be intimidated by anyone.

This was only the fourth shoot for the IJS & CE Juniors 10m shooting three arrows per end as per standard archery indoor rules. Shooting a total of 60 possible scoring arrows, plus sighters to get warmed up for the event, there were many tired arms by the end of the shoot.

They did themselves proud and will be most welcome additions to the main club should they decide to join in the future. Many participating parents had only taken up archery recently in order to take part in this shoot but showed they too would make very good additions to the club. One had not shot for some 34 years, since the demise of the first archery club in Stanley in the early 80's: Welcome back David.

Top Junior/Adult team were Mark and Tamsin but they forfeited their scores in favour of the less experienced teams; a very sporting decision in the best tradition of archery.

A big thank you to Steve Gill for helping with the event and hosting the young archers over the last four weeks, and to all the family members that came to take part or show support.

AN Under 18s tournament was held in the Victory Bar on Sunday afternoon with a new generation of Fords and Smiths taking top honours. leau Ford, son of Toot and Leanne worked his way to first place with Kane Smith, son of Colin and Natalie, settling for second on this occasion.

Macaulay Middleton and Declan Bonner shared third place while Demi Greenough was best girl player.

The competition was generously sponsored by Ali Dodd, and Darts Club Chairman Mark Pollard reported that although entries were low, all seemed to enjoy themselves as did the adults who turned up to offer support.

Department of Agriculture

National Beef Herd : Cattle for Tender

The Department of Agriculture has for sale by tender 2 mature bulls, 4 heifers, 2 steers and 4 cows in calf of varying age which are surplus to the requirement of the herd. Tenders in writing are invited by the Department of Agriculture at a reserve price of £250 per head for the bulls, £200 per head for the heifers and steers and varying prices for the cows based on age. Tender forms are available from the DoA.

Tenders should reach Katrina Stephenson at the Department of Agriculture by Tuesday 1st July 2013. The Department does not bind itself to accept the highest or any tender.

Andy Pollard
Senior Agricultural Adviser

Applications are invited for the post of Receptionist/Clerk at the Museum - Suitable for Job Share

This position would suit a mature and responsible individual able to work as part of a small team with minimal supervision.

Roles are wide-ranging but most involve dealing with the public so a high standard of spoken and written English, clean and tidy appearance and good knowledge of the Falklands are required. Patience and excellent manners are essential. Confidence and a sense of humour are preferred.

Additional knowledge, skills and experience should ideally include the ability to handle cash, operate a till and manage stock. Candidates with book-keeping experience and a working knowledge of Microsoft programmes would be preferred. A clean driving licence is beneficial.

Additional or unsocial hours may sometimes be called for, but some flexibility on hours may be considered for the right candidate.

This is a permanent position but would suit a job share arrangement and applications are welcomed from individuals interested in this option.

PORTABLE TOILET CONTRACT EXPRESSION OF INTEREST

The British Force at Mount Pleasant Complex has a requirement for a transportable toilet service throughout the year and at various locations within the Falkland Islands, such as New Haven, Victoria Harbour and Port Harriet but could include any location on either mainland East and West Falklands.

The anticipated annual events will be in the region of 25 to 50, span anything from 1 to 14 days at a time and for a population ranging between 20 to 100 personnel. The anticipated date for service commencing is 1 October, providing satisfactory expressions of interest.

Expressions of interest are invited from companies based in the Falkland Islands to provide this service. Two expressions of interest are requested from each company; the first, the ability to provide a complete service which is to include providing the transportable toilets for the event, their transporting, siting, cleaning and collection of the toilets after the event. The second, to provide an expression of interest where the portable toilets would be provided as Government Furnished Equipment from the British Forces Mount Pleasant Complex and companies to provide the transporting, siting, cleaning and collection of the toilets after the event. Companies wishing to express an interest are invited to provide their company details, the types of transportable toilets they propose to provide, the cleaning equipment held, detail how the service would be delivered as well as a brief statement of their experience in providing this service to other organisations and events. Expressions of interest should be sent to: Mr Richard Lee-Heung, J8 Contracts, Command Secretariat, MPC, BFPO 655, Email: J8Contracts@mountpleasant.mod.uk by 1 September 2013.

For further information please contact: Flt Lt Mick Knights, Tel: 005 007 4383, Email: J4SO3CMO@mountpleasant.mod.uk

This notice is looking at the level of interest so there is no requirement for any quotations.

International standards from local shearers

FALKLANDS shearers Lee Molkenbuhr and Stefan Clarke have secured top positions in an international shearing competition in the UK, and will be a hard act for our team in Bermuda to follow as they also set out to fly the Falklands flag.

Top shearers from across the world competed at the annual Lakeland Shears International Sheep Shearing Championships, held at Cockermouth in Cumbria.

Farmer and shearing contractor Lee and contract shearer Stefan joined forces and convincingly claimed second place in the team shear just behind the Scottish team and beating New Zealand, England and Wales.

The on-form Stefan who might not be as experienced as Lee but has youth on his side, also shored his way to second place in the Senior Final finishing up just one point behind Scot Wilson shearing for Scotland and ahead of Jon Roberts from England.

Stefan (22) who learned to shear in his early teens took up shearing as a profession in 2009 when he joined Lee's Falklands contract gang.

During the winter months he travels overseas to shear and can also be found hopping horses over fences English style, a new skill he has mastered to replace his Falklands summer horse racing.

During the 2012/13 Falklands shearing season Stefan won the Rose Bar Speed Shear against Evan Jones who holds both Falklands shearing records (see right).

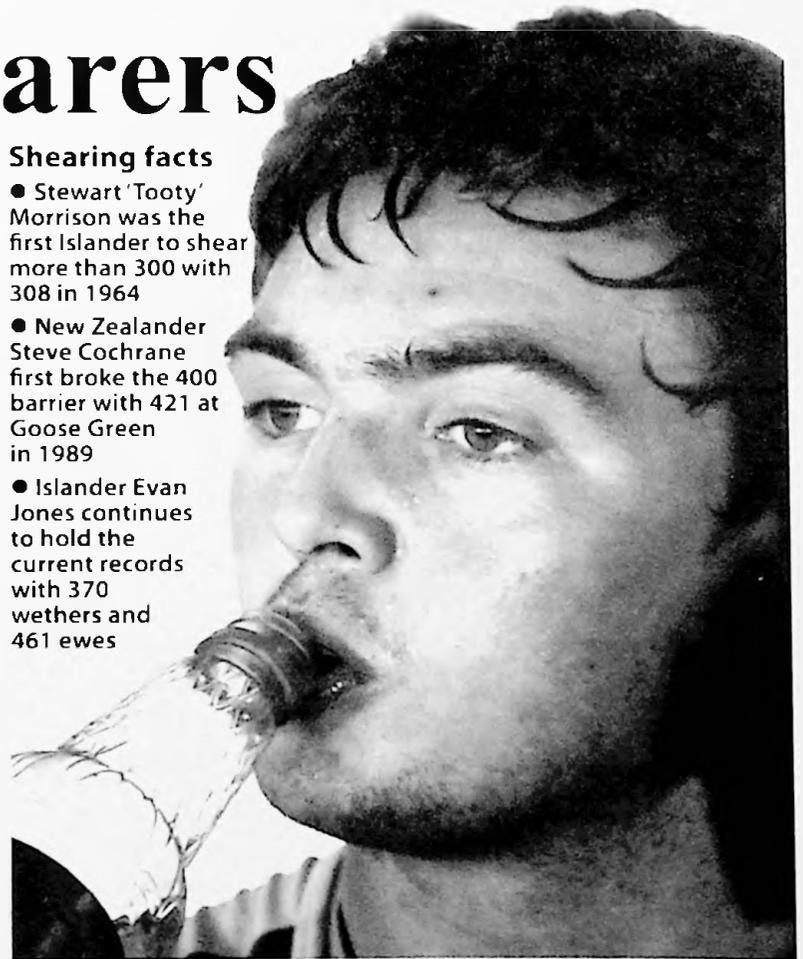

He went on to shear his personal best of 360 at Teal Inlet on January 31 and just a week later knocked out 408 at Port Howard.

Johnson Harbour farmer Lee fought his way to fifth place in the Lakeland Open Final with top New Zealand shearers such as Roly Smith and David Fagan (who has won the NZ Golden Shears a record 16 times and set 10 world records making him the most successful competition sheep shearer) and Adam Berry from the UK taking top spots.

Lee's wife, Cumbrian born Martha explained that Herdwick sheep, recognised as one of the hardest British sheep breeds are used in the competition. "They are pretty small compared to our sheep and their wool is open and hairy, but they are very good shearing," she said.

Shearing facts

- Stewart 'Tooty' Morrison was the first Islander to shear more than 300 with 308 in 1964
- New Zealander Steve Cochrane first broke the 400 barrier with 421 at Goose Green in 1989
- Islander Evan Jones continues to hold the current records with 370 wethers and 461 ewes

Belt up and don't drink drive

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police are tackling two driving issues this month which, Sgt Gary Webb said are still occurring with, "worrying frequency."

Seatbelts and drink driving are being focused upon as well as periodic checks of vehicles on the road to ensure all documents are in order.

Since March 1996 it has been a legal requirement for drivers and passengers in motor vehicles to wear seatbelts on all roads, designated or otherwise.

Anyone found not wearing their seatbelt can expect a warning in the first instance and on a second a court summons for the offence.

"All such incidences are being logged. The seatbelt is there for your own safety and serious injuries can arise from failure to wear it," he added.

With regard to drink driving he said the RFIP are still seeing a worryingly large number of drink drive cases and these are all ending up in court, an issue recently highlighted in Penguin News by Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley.

"There is a zero tolerance approach to drink driving," said Sgt Webb, adding, "Do not attempt to guess your limits; if you are driving do not consume any alcohol."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

IF the old saying were true that school years are the best of your life, then it must follow that an enormous proportion of the worlds' population endure a pretty miserable time of it in their post school years.

Not that they would necessarily blame the school for any distress experienced; just being a teen is difficult enough. All of those insecurities and worries and scrambling for the motivation to study while parents tremulously demand decisions about combinations of GCSEs and whether or not those specific qualifications will lead to a glittering career.

I don't know about you but I vaguely recall, at that age, finding it difficult enough deciding between Marmite or marmalade on my toast in the morning, let alone giving serious consideration to potential academic attainment or future employment. As such, it's always seemed to me a terribly young age for an individual to be making a decision about such an important matter. (I should point out that many moons ago, my parents while supporting my further education didn't put any undue pressure on me, and always seemed pleased but vaguely surprised when I kept turning up back in the Falklands waving pieces of paper which declared I'd managed to pass something).

It was quite reassuring then to hear Deputy Head Helen Bell's comment (see page 5) that at GCSE level the aim is to offer as broad an education as possible - a gateway as it were - so that students have a choice in terms of their next step, whether it be towards vocational training, academia or a job. And in the unlikely situation that if a student does make a wrong decision there's really no reason for them not to return at a later date and pick up the qualification required for his or her newly planned path to preferred livelihood.

Mrs Bell also makes a number of practical points in the article in relation to future developments within the school for both staff and children. One of those, which I hadn't considered fully before, was the need to build on current Continued Professional Development (CPD) opportunities for teachers, both to rejuvenate enthusiasm in local teachers and to potentially retain contract teachers. Enthusiastic and opened-up-to-new-ideas teachers are good teachers, and what's more a contract teacher could be encouraged to stay a lot longer in the Falklands if they have the chance to continue to develop their careers in qualification terms. More than two years is an awful long time out of the educational career loop after all.

No parent wants to see their offspring unsettled in school subjects as a result of the constant change-over of teachers. And who wouldn't want their child to benefit from the bouncy and newly-motivated local teacher who might only ever have left the Falklands once or twice in order to obtain their original qualification.

So while CPD might sound like new-fangled nonsense to some, the truth is it's arguably even more important to our teachers than those teachers in the UK at the centre of modern ideas within the education sector.

Scout Hut noisy night

Award winners Tyrone, Archie and Kelly

THE Scout Hut was extremely noisy on Tuesday evening when Beavers, Cubs and Scouts all met up for a joint evening of games, food and singing, said Leader Jan Miller.

The evening was organised as a farewell to five members of the group leaving the Islands over the next few weeks; George Hill in Beavers, Sam Hill, Alfie Evans and Hamish McKee in Cubs and Jess Cooper in Scouts.

After some noisy games, everyone tucked into hot dogs, cream cakes, sandwiches and juice followed by a camp-fire singing session led by Cub Leader Kaa.

The evening was rounded off with special awards being presented to Beaver Scout Archie Paice - who has gained his Chief Scouts Bronze Award (the highest Award in Beaver Scouts) and Cub Scouts Tyrone Henry and Kelly Harris who have gained their Chief Scouts Silver Award.

"All three have worked really hard to gain these awards," said Mrs Miller.

UK voting rights questions in the House

CONSERVATIVE Member of Parliament Peter Tapsell asked in the House of Commons this week: "Is consideration being given to the possibility that residents of the Falkland Islands will be given the right to vote in British elections in the same way that the French give people living on the island of Réunion the right to vote in French elections?"

Minister for Political and Constitutional Reform Chloe Smith replied: "There are various categories of eligibility depending on the status of the country in question - for example, the rules that relate to Commonwealth voters who are resident in this country. I would be happy to take a further look into that question in the light of any changes that my right Honourable friend might be referring to."

The question followed a number asked about regulations affecting voting rights for British Citizens living overseas.

Town fun time for Camp kids

Camp children enjoy Farmers Week activities

WHILE their parents were in Farmers Week meetings every day, Camp children spent their time out and about with their teachers in Stanley, reports teacher Anna Stenning.

The theme for the week was 'machines', and the children were given the challenge in groups to design and build farms using K'Nex, in between other activities. They had different aspects of the farm to create, from animals to actual machinery with motors.

The main attraction of the week however, was as always, the swimming, and thanks to Abbie and her staff the students all made fantastic progress in the water over the four days. There was also a visit to the art department at the Community School, where the children produced a line drawing of a bicycle under the expert tuition of Larla Salt. There was also an impromptu visit to the library where Librarian Coleen Biggs gave a warm welcome.

Health checks were given by various staff at the hospital, and lunches were eaten in Stanley House.

As well as enjoying healthy snacks through the week, the children also had the opportunity to eat out and sample hot chocolate with cream in the West Store café.

Anna said: "As usual the verdict was a resounding success from the children, exhaustion from the staff and a huge thank you to everyone who helped out in anyway through the week.

"Thanks as always to the parents for dropping off, picking up and coming to see what we had been doing. To the IJS staff, thanks for having the children with their peers on Friday, and finally a big thank you to all the children from Camp Education teachers for being such a super group."

Drivers Ramon Miranda and Kristina Vincent

THE Island's oldest and newest drivers were the first to receive the credit card sized supplementary photo card driving licence from the Licensing Bureau on Wednesday.

Ramon Miranda, who is 88, recalled his early driving days in a two-seater Ford truck which his friends would happily tumble into the open back of to get a lift to the Monstar out of town bar, at the bottom of the harbour.

Senior Staff Nurse Kristina Vincent on the other hand had only passed her driving test that day and described it as one of the most stressful days of her life.

Kristina had started driving under the tuition of her friend Jimmy Smith, (who by coincidence is the same age as Mr Miranda) and completed her lessons with June Clarke of Invenio.

Sgt Gary Webb explained that the card licence had been adopted under the same rules as the UK. He said that if a driver was stopped by police (either here or overseas) and asked to produce their licence it was the paper version which was required.

Drivers may pop into the Police Station and fill out a form to obtain their supplementary licence which will cost £1.50.

Mr and Mrs Bonner with their two children Marcy and Ollie

Congratulations Richard and Lizzy Bonner

IN an elegant winter wedding, Richard Bonner and Elizabeth Newton were married at Malvina House Hotel at 2pm on July 6 in a ceremony conducted by Jan Parke.

The bride wore a white satin full skirted dress with a beaded bodice and long flowing train.

The groom, best man (Richard's brother) Ewen and page boy Calvin wore black suits with bronze ties to match the bridesmaids dresses.

Bridesmaids Cathy Jacobsen, Teenie Ross and Jodi Poole all wore full length bronze dresses, while flower girls Marcy (the couple's daughter) and Mia looked adorable in white frocks.

The couple celebrated with family and friends at their reception at the FIDF Hall that evening.

Clarifying oil

A POLICY for Hydrocarbon Development was put to the Mineral Resources Committee on Thursday. The paper aims to provide guidance to any party affected by hydrocarbon development and suggests eight policies that the Falklands should consider adopting to encourage a prosperous industry, and clarify its purpose.

This is the first statement of its kind issued by FIG and closely follows the Norwegian Government's approach. Director of Minerals Stephen Luxton said feedback on the paper had been received from the public, but he welcomed any more reaction before it goes for consideration by Executive Council.

FC change over

THIS month Dr James Fenton completes his two-year term as Chief Executive Officer of Falklands Conservation. His replacement, Dr David Doxford, arrived in the Islands on Thursday and will be taking up post on July 19. David is from the north of England and has a wide-ranging background in practical conservation, national parks, education and conservation policy.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

FARMERS' week appeared to go well but there seemed to be little interest in the early evening Budget presentation and the Roles and Remuneration review report which were open to all, with the audience heavily outnumbered by MLAs and presenters. Initially there were five in the audience later made up to seven by a couple of latecomers. It demonstrates clearly that you can offer any amount of information and consultation but you cannot compel people to take it up. The question and answer session exclusively for the RBA was a little better with possibly over twenty rural businesses represented and some positive discussion interspersed with the usual complaints about costs on FIGAS and the state of some of the roads. We will now attempt to see more by doing day trips next week to Fox Bay and Goose Green which will dispense with the need for accommodation on the West which was proving problematic.

IT is always good to hear from those who have seized the opportunities created by the abattoir to add some genuine diversification to their businesses. Farming is always going to be an important element of the Falklands economy and way of life and those working to improve it deserve their success.

CONGRATULATIONS to those who have recently graduated and good wishes to those awaiting their GCSE and A-level results. I am watching carefully the proposed reforms in the UK as they will soon begin to impact on our schools here, both the new curriculum and the changes to introduce more rigorous exams. In recent years the UK, despite great efforts, has fallen behind many other countries in terms of attainment in essential subjects. This can apparently have a considerable long term effect on their economy. Teachers have already undertaken a great deal of extra work and paperwork in recent years and will now have to gear up for the changes ahead if we are to be able to continue to produce students well qualified to compete for places in further and higher education. I'm confident that the department is already aware of what may be required.

No more loans for Argentina plead 10,531 petitioners

SECRETARY of State for International Development, Justine Greening has confirmed that due to recent actions by the Argentine government she is no longer confident that further investments in Argentina would be consistent with the objectives she laid out in February this year, in an answer to a House of Commons Written Parliamentary Question.

This recent development is in response to an HM Government e-petition sent to the Department for International Development which read:

"Despite repeated attacks on Britain and the right of Falkland Islanders to remain British, Argentina receives substantial loans from the World Bank, an organisation in which Britain is a major shareholder. But the Government does not use our votes to oppose those loans.

"The Government has told Parliament that, as of March 2012, total outstanding loans to Argentina from the World Bank were $16.2 billion. That means Britain's share of the outstanding loans is over £200 million, based on our shareholding in the two World Bank institutions lending to the country.

"The Obama Administration in the United States has already announced a policy of voting no to any new loans thanks to Argentina's failure to respect its obligations to earlier lenders. We call upon the British Government to - at the very least - support that and vote against any new World Bank loans to Argentina."

The petition set up by Mathew Sinclair received 10,531 signatures in support and prompted the following response from the International Development Dept.

"In February 2013, the Secretary of State for International Development, Justine Greening, confirmed in an answer to a House of Commons Written Parliamentary Question that she has instructed her representatives at the Inter-American Development Bank and World Bank to vote against all new proposals for financial support to the Government of the Republic of Argentina presented by these institutions, while reserving the right to support proposals that can demonstrate exceptional benefits to the poorest people of Argentina. These are the only Multilateral Development Banks (MDBs), in which the UK is a shareholder, from which the Government of Argentina borrows.

"She has also made public that this is because in her view, the UK must ensure that the scarce resources of the MDBs are used as effectively as possible to foster development and economic growth. In light of recent actions by the Argentine government she is no longer confident that further investments in Argentina would be consistent with these objectives. The actions include the failure to comply with the World Bank's International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes rulings; failure to agree to standard IMF Article IV surveillance since 2006; and the recent IMF censure, the first of its kind, as a result of continued failure to remedy breach of data obligations under the IMF Articles of Agreement, seriously undermining our ability to properly assess proposed future loans by the MDBs. She has also advised that this position will be kept under review, subject to the future actions of the Government of the Republic of Argentina and its compliance with its international obligations."

Cleaner admits stealing from the homes of clients

VERONICA Mieres Tromo (34) pleaded guilty to five charges of theft and agreed that a further 19 offences be taken into account in the Senior Magistrates Court on Friday.

The case was adjourned until August 14 for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley told Miss Mieres, who had worked as a cleaner in the homes of her victims, that the offences were a serious breach of trust.

The fact the case was being adjourned should not be taken as any indication of what the sentence would be, he said and warned that an immediate prison sentence was an option.

Inquest adjourned

THE inquest into the death of baby Scarlett Louise Berntsen was opened and adjourned in the Coroners Court on Tuesday, July 2.

The inquest will resume in several months after a post mortem has been undertaken in the UK to discover the cause of death, which is currently 'undetermined'. HM Coroner Carl Gumsley said, "it's important that we do the best for Scarlett," and offered his sympathy to the family and friends of the baby girl."

Community School bids farewell to Deputy Head Teacher Helen Bell

ALMOST five years since she arrived in the Falklands, Deputy Head Teacher at the Falkland Islands Community School Helen Bell and husband Chris are heading home to England.

"When we came here we made the conscious decision that we wanted to be involved in everything," Helen told Penguin News. They did, and as a result, loved their time in the Islands.

After 18 years working in a school in South Gloucestershire it was a big step taking up a post 8,000 miles away from home. Helen was encouraged by her husband who had recently retired from the Ministry of Defence and was happy to follow her, "for a change," on a new adventure.

But, children are children wherever they are, said Helen. Here in the Falklands however, you get to know them more quickly and also know their parents better, as well as socially.

A number of changes have occurred over the past five years she said. On arrival Alastair Baldwin was Head Teacher, "and we were just establishing the positions of responsibility, and I had no knowledge that that wasn't what the staff wanted."

The staff felt the system already worked well, "and it may have done," said Helen who confessed she was initially unaware of the animosity towards the changes.

"Over five years I hope that I have made everyone aware that the position is a valuable one and that probably it is the right way for it to go. Leaving now is good because I can leave Louise (Taylor) in the post of Deputy Head Teacher and I think she will be excellent in that role and possibly Head Teacher within time."

The originally, fairly traditional curriculum has also changed, said Helen. Her background was in vocational learning, apart from teaching food and textiles, and also Health and Social Care and Travel and Tourism.

"I changed almost immediately Child Development which is quite a narrow option GCSE to Health and Social Care which allows people to go in lots of directions and also encourages boys."

Personal Health and Social Education (PHSE) had been re-established the year before her arrival and Helen said she enjoyed working on that with fellow teacher Veronica Fowler. "The Ofsted inspection rated it as good and I think it is even better now," said Helen.

Something of a jolt to the system was in November 2009 when at an hour's notice Helen was promoted to Deputy Head Teacher when Alastair Baldwin did not return to the Islands. She was told on the Friday and on Saturday met with every member of the leadership team, who offered support and advice. She fulfilled the role for 14 months before the arrival of Head Teacher David Tongue.

Speaking of the next Head Teacher, Martin Winward, she said: "I've been communicating with him quite a lot and am convinced he is the right person for here."

Asked what challenges face Mr Winward, Helen referred to changes to the UK curriculum, "which we will have to get our head around and this might involve more training."

From 2015, GCSEs will move from course work to exams at the end of two years and will be graded from 8 to 1, rather than A* to G.

Also: "We are still waiting for the breakthrough with the students really fulfilling their potential, they do well and around 50 per cent of any year group go to college, but I would still like to see more of that so that is still a work in progress."

Confidence to speak in front of others is also still a difficulty for many Falkland students: "I thought children here would be able to speak up in front of people but they are not ... and they need to do more of that and gain more confidence."

She has encouraged assemblies, "for good or bad," adding, "It would be a very strange job if you didn't have to communicate with anybody, no matter what job it was. I say to them I know you are a bit nervous, a bit shy about it but it will get better."

Helen also feels more work should be done on finding ways to retain children in their places of education when they go overseas.

"I'm always amazed that they want to go at 16, I couldn't have done that at 16. They are really intrepid. And I know it doesn't always work out, but we have to try and keep those links with those two colleges, possibly expand them in order that children do get that chance to go."

Professional development for staff is also vital feels Helen: "Many teachers come here for a long period of time and they do need to have some professional development."

Local teachers could benefit from spending time in other schools as a "broadening," experience.

Another challenge is the expansion of apprenticeships said Helen. Currently there are 15 openings, but she feels this could go further.

Asked if she felt students were being adequately guided in terms of future careers she said: "For the most part students here have very little idea about the number of job opportunities there are, because they don't see very many jobs."

Helen envisages better links with the oil industry, "or wherever jobs are coming from."

She said, "The vast majority of students will end up working in areas that haven't even been thought of yet, or that we haven't got, it is all very much a guessing game."

In terms of GCSEs though, "the aim is to give them the broadest possible education," and then look at what the student wants later, "academically or vocationally."

Are teachers' salaries in the Falklands restricting recruitment, she was asked. Helen replied: "It's always going to restrict people that you can recruit."

She explained that at some points in their lives people are able to take a drop in salary, but some aren't. Teachers in the Falklands are paid roughly £3 - 4,000 less than in the UK.

Is there anything she would have liked to have achieved but didn't?

"I would have liked the vulnerable persons strategy to have got going," said Helen. "Some students are going to need support from 16 to 19 or 25 or further. There are probably all sorts of reasons why it isn't in operation, but it is something that they have to think about. There are plenty more children coming along who are going to need that kind of support. And they can't all go away (overseas) and they don't all want to, we should be able to provide something 'of a quality here'."

In conclusion Helen said: "I hope over the time that I've been here that I've made the staff see what I do is valuable and has been helpful to them, not necessarily what they wanted all of the time, but it has been for the right purpose."

On returning to the UK, while Helen doesn't aim to work full-time as a teacher, there are still plenty of opportunities. She said she might pick up some supply work or assist people with English skills.

She sincerely believes: "Once a teacher always a teacher."

ISLAND Games competitors Tracy Porter and Donna Williams do the Islands proud by winning a bronze medal in the half-marathon team event, while Graham Didlick achieved fourth place in the Police Pistol Competition. Hugh Marsden came 24th after a creditable run, finishing a mere seven minutes after the winner from Aaland.

The residents of South Georgia write to the Governor, asking that he consider turning the zone around the Island into a whale conservation zone.

Three countries (Trinidad and Tobago, Sierra Leone and Papua New Guinea) at the United Nations Committee of 24 (C24) expressed strong reservations on the lack of reference to self-determination in a draft resolution that suggested that Britain and Argentina should talk over the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands that was passed without vote.

More than £500 was raised for a local charity after a number of people, including Roger Howells, had their hair shaved off by Errol Goss in Deano's Bar.

Gene Williams BEM, "Nanny" Fullerton and Don Bonner BEM, are presented with silver salvers by Governor and Mrs Tatham to mark the end of "long and loyal service," after working at Government House from 1946 to 1993. The salvers were engraved with the words, 'From the Governors of the Falkland Islands' and roughly one hundred close family and friends were in attendance at the reception.

The Malvina House Hotel celebrated its tenth anniversary on July 18.

A Fisheries Conservation and management regime is officially set up around South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands. The legislation to establish the zone is to come into effect from August 2.

DESPITE having the third smallest population of the 23 competing islands, the Falklands team finish in sixteenth place at the tenth NatWest Island Games in Guernsey. Graham Didlick established himself as the most successful competitor since the Falklands first competed in the first Island Games in 1993 after winning the silver medal in the Police Pistol 1 Competition and bronze in the NPA Service Pistol B discipline. Shooters Gareth Goodwin and Chris McCallum won a well-deserved bronze medal in the Queen's Pairs competition. In addition to winning three medals, the Falklands team also picked up a gold certificate in the ISSF

There was an uproar amongst many people in the community after the Health Service decided that it would no longer fund flights to the UK for the termination of pregnancies, despite the fact that patients already have to pay for the termination itself. Penguin News asked a number of Islanders and residents their opinion on the decision and half those who responded believed that "women's rights were being eroded." A vast number of residents were hugely supportive of a petition introduced in the wake of the government's decision to no longer fund flights. FIG eventually reversed the decision.

The Falklands coroner begins the investigation into the death of British Antarctic Survey (BAS) scientist, Kirsty Margot Brown (28), killed in the Antarctic sea by a leopard seal. She was attacked while snorkelling at her study site and a rescue boat was launched immediately in an attempt to save her. Despite their best efforts, Kirsty's colleagues were unable to resuscitate her after pulling her from the water.

Year Six students from the Infant and Junior School celebrate their graduation from the DARE programme run by Sergeant Dave Roberts of the Royal Falkland Islands Police. The aim of the programme is to prepare children to resist drugs, alcohol, cigarettes and violence.

Director of Fisheries John Barton confirms that fishing revenue at £26.4 million is £3.6 million more than originally estimated.

Development Corporation General Manager Julian Morris recommends a tactical withdrawal from the export market for the Meat Company, unless value can be added through a joint venture, such as with Chilean Company Sumonivic.

This position would suit a mature and responsible individual able to work as part of a small team with minimal supervision.

Roles are wide-ranging but most involve dealing with the public so a high standard of spoken and written English, clean and tidy appearance and good knowledge of the Falklands are required. Patience and excellent manners are essential. Confidence and a sense of humour are preferred.

Additional knowledge, skills and experience should ideally include the ability to handle cash, operate a till and manage stock. Candidates with book-keeping experience and a working knowledge of Microsoft programmes would be preferred. A clean driving licence is beneficial.

Additional or unsocial hours may sometimes be called for, but some flexibility on hours may be considered for the right candidate.

This is a permanent position but would suit a job share arrangement and applications are welcomed from individuals interested in this option.

A full job description can be obtained from the Museum Manger, Leona Roberts on telephone 27428 or e-mail: museum.manager@horizon.co.fk

Closing date for applications is Friday 19th July 2013.

Embracing the diaspora

UNTIL recently, I did not give much thought to the Falklands' relationship with the many Islanders who decided to live, more or less permanently, overseas. Strong personal links persist between those who left the Islands in the tough decades and their families back home, of course. But I don't recall seeing much evidence that the hundreds - perhaps many hundreds of Falklands emigres, all of whom still call themselves Kelpers (that antiquated term seems to be popular among the diaspora) - are considered part of a greater Falklands community.

I only began to think about this as Islanders overseas began to gather in virtual groups on the internet, particularly on Facebook. There, memories, photos and dialogues made it sometimes poignantly clear that the Falklands will always be the true home for those who chose to leave - usually because of lack of opportunity - and create new lives in New Zealand, Australia, the UK and other parts.

These days, Islanders still leave, but rarely because of any lack of opportunity at home. Instead they do so because leaving is easy. Indeed, thanks to improved education, they are, one might argue, even encouraged to leave the South Atlantic, at least for a while. But these emigres are fortunate, as they do not have to face the heart-breaking belief that must have distressed their forerunners - that knowledge that when the red roofs of Stanley had faded from view, they would probably never see them again.

It pleases me to know that at least some of those who left in the bad old days have returned to visit, and that although Islanders today may settle elsewhere, they tend to visit their Falklands families and friends every few years.

I am sure of one thing. Even among those Kelpers for whom exile seems permanent, there is an abundance of good will and love for the Islands that bred them. I believe it is time to think about them a little more generously - not just by showing sympathy for their homesickness and nostalgia, but by acknowledging that they and their children (who may never have seen the colourful roofs of Stanley) may have a lot to contribute to the dynamic Islands of today.

Bound Ungagged

I am sure I am not the first to say that our emigrants are natural ambassadors. But, with a little more originality, I would point out that many of them have developed professional careers and skills that could be drawn-on when any lack of knowledge or experience is evident in the Islands. I can think of one good example: in the immediate aftermath of 1982, Islander Bill Richards, who had left the Islands decades earlier and carved out a fine career in the UK's Metropolitan Police, was invited back to lead the Stanley Force as the community was rebuilt from the chaos of war. Bill did a great job.

The more I think about it, the more I believe that the Falklands can be proud of those far-flung Kelpers. Just by doing well in their chosen fields, by being good citizens, and by always stating proudly that they are Falkland Islanders first, and New Zealanders, Australians or Brits second, they demonstrate the calibre of the people the Falklands can produce.

The Irish and the Scots set examples that we might choose to follow. They have never limited their nations to only those who walk the streets of Dublin, Cork, Glasgow and Edinburgh. As a result, "greater" Scotland and "greater" Ireland are present around the globe. The Irish have sponsored a massive "homecoming" for their diaspora, and the Shetland Islanders (a good comparator for the Falklands) have organised repeated festivals specifically designed to bring their people home, at least for a while, from all corners of the Earth. How about a Falklands homecoming festival? Perhaps it could be promoted with the strap line, "Welcome Back, Che!"

Of course, such a homecoming festival could be much more than simply a warm hand extended towards Kelpers around the world. It could also be a statement that the Falklands have shrugged off the British colonial status of old, have accepted responsibility for their own future, and now have so much to be proud of. Why not invite the world press, cultural tourists and some South American neighbours to see a coming of age showcase?

Yes, I know it would cost. It might even cost a lot. But if scheduled for 2018, the Government's coffers should be replete with oil money, and an economic revolution would be underway.

That would be the time to proudly say, "We're proud of what we've done. And we're proud of our people - both those who have never left the Islands and those who chose to represent us overseas."

EU millions assigned

THE Falkland Islands has been assigned £3.5million from the tenth round of the European Development Fund (EDF) to support economic development priorities.

The money, which will enable FIG to drive forward the implementation of its tourism and rural development strategies, was reflected in the recent budget.

A single programming document was signed on July 3, 2013 by the Falkland Islands Government and the European Commission and sets out the priorities, objectives and specific activities to which funds will be directed over a three-year period and the targets against which progress will be monitored by the EU Commission.

The document was signed by Falkland Islands Government UK Representative Sukey Cameron MBE and Director of Latin America and Caribbean Directorate of the Directorate-General for Development and Cooperation - EuropaId, Jolita Butkeviciene.

The EDF is a programme funded by EU Member States specifically to support economic and social development programmes in Overseas Countries and Territories (OCTs). The Falkland Islands has previously received EDF funds in the ninth EDF between 2006 - 2009.

Praise for Peter Symonds

INSPECTORS have praised as outstanding the boarding facilities and services at Peter Symonds College in Winchester.

According to the Southern Daily Echo, Ofsted also hailed the pastoral care of the 80 students, many from the Falkland Islands.

Inspectors noted the "very strong affiliation (students have) with the houses that they live in," as well as the "palpable sense of harmony within the (two) residential houses."

Andy Pond, head of boarding, said: "I am really pleased that the report endorses the positive environment we offer to our boarding students."

Argentina broadcasting

RADIO Nacional from Radio Grande, Argentina, is broadcasting news in English, intended to target the Falkland Islands, reported Mercopress this week.

The news bulletin prepared by Radio Nacional, Buenos Aires through Radio Argentina al Exterior will be broadcast at the break of every day.

It is reported that so far the bulletin only produces Argentine news.

Not surprisingly it has been named the "Calling the Malvinas" service.

No freight subsidy for West farms

FARMERS were pleased to note that after a decade the Meat Company was providing a realistic alternative income stream for many farms, but unfortunately West Falkland still lagged well behind East Falkland in the number of animals supplied.

Rural Business Association (RBA) chairman Justin Knight said that a big issue for West farmers was the cost of haulage, particularly since the Development Corporation haulage subsidy had been so reduced it was now largely irrelevant.

At a meeting with Assembly Members on Friday he asked if any consideration had been given to at least removing the ferry section cost of haulage from West Falkland and outer islands to the abattoir.

MLA Roger Edwards said that to date no consideration had been given to removing the ferry section cost of haulage adding that some West residents were content with the service as provided.

MLA Mike Summers said whose responsibility freight costs were had been the subject of much discussion at the Meat Company and reminded farmers that they were in fact running a business. "If the freight is costing around 50 per cent of the value of the product then obviously something is wrong, however if it is five per cent then that is not too bad," he said.

Costs can be between £1.30 and £4 per animal depending on farm location with the value of varying between £25 for prime lamb and £6 for lower grade mutton.

MLA Summers said it would not be sensible to provide a subsidy to send uneconomic animals to the abattoir and it was in the farmers and the Meat Company's best interest to send animals with the highest net value.

Goose Green manager Keith Alazia reminded suppliers that even if freight costs were up to 40 per cent, they were still making 60 per cent which ten years ago was not available.

Explore the shore with a pocket book tour

THERE are plenty of bird guides to the Falklands, there's even a plant guide, but never has there been a marine guide to the ocean around the Islands until now.

The colourful pocket book 'Marine Life of the Falkland Islands' produced by the Shallow Marine Surveys Group documents, describes and illustrates over three hundred species that crawl, swim, float and grow in our waters, many of which are new discoveries.

Dr Paul Brickle, one of the book's authors, explained that the publication is a lead up to their eventual goal of a more comprehensive book, a definitive scientific guide to encompass the wonders of this region. But this latest publication, alongside its even smaller waterproof companion for divers, are the handy versions for people looking to explore the Falklands coast and seas.

"I remember when I was a kid I just loved going rock-pooling and seeing what I could find. In the UK they have little pocket guides of what you can find; seaweed, molluscs and even small mammals," said Dr Deborah Davidson of the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI), adding that she hoped this Falklands version would encourage many people to get out and explore for the fascinating creatures and plants around our shores.

The handy guides will also assist in new discoveries as people will be able to check if what they've found have already been documented by SAERI.

The extensive amount of work that went into producing the guide was a collaborative effort from many researchers, credited in the book are Judith Brown, Claire Goodwin, Wetjens Dimmlich, Vladimir Laptikhovskiy, Steve Cartwright, Dion Poncet and Steve Brown; not forgetting its authors Paul Brickle and Karen Neely.

This is a culmination of research from since the Shallow Marine Survey Group started in 2006, "before then there hadn't been any documented research into Falklands marine life since the 1920s and 30s," said Dr Davidson.

A lot of the content in the guide is new to science said Dr Brickle, previously sponges were discovered by trawling from the surface, but many more species were found in caves and under rocks. With so many new species discovered it was becoming difficult to name them all and so local children were asked to help create common names for many of the discoveries, "we tried to use local names where we could as well," added Dr Brickle.

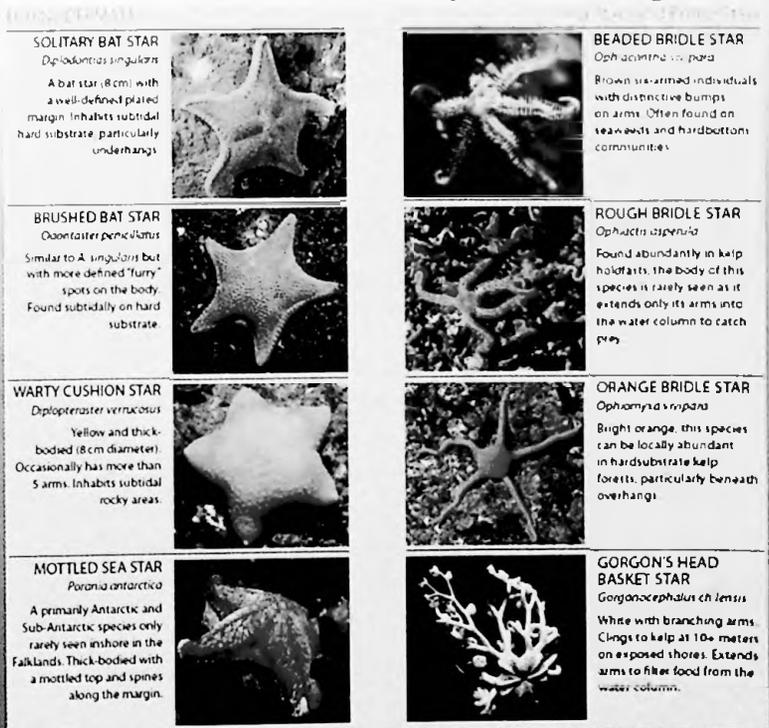

The book was only made possible thanks to SAERI's sponsors; Falklands Conservation contributed a huge amount, said Mr Brickle adding that funding for the book came from an OTEP (Overseas Territories Environmental Programme) grant awarded to SAERI and Falklands Conservation. "But it wouldn't have been possible without our sponsors Beauchene Fishing Company Limited, FIG, the Antarctic Research Trust, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds' South Atlantic Invasive Species Programme and especially Fortuna Fishing Company who paid for the publication costs," he said.

The group are looking for qualified divers to help with their research, and hope to start training soon for those without qualification who are interested in exploring the waters around the Islands. Contact Steve Cartwright, Paul Brewin or Deborah Davidson for more information.

The book is available from the Capstan gift shop, Rightlines, the Harbour View Gift Shop, the Mount Pleasant Complex Dive centre, Falklands Conservation, and the SAERI office for £10.99

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

A LOVELY winter's day, brisk and cool but sunny sent me outside. I'm still unable to do anything in that rather hard, cold ground but my excuse was to take some photographs, I'm no David Bailey but I do like to keep some sort of record of various plants at their best at any given time

And the results were rather unpredictable but pleasant nevertheless. Like most of us, I suspect, I tend to take the Hebe (boxwood or veronica) very much for granted. That is rather sad; in their various guises they really do give their best most of the year. I don't mean the 'every-day' lilac to purple and white flowered ones either. Those are bone hardy and wonderful but most people with a garden will have some anyway. No, I'm talking about the variegated ones with their large, deep purple flowers, the willow leaved ones with their lilac or white flowers, or the slightly larger leaved one with both lilac and white flowers in each raceme. Then there are the purple leaved ones with lovely flowers too, even if they are hardly noticeable with such eye-catching foliage!

There are the whipcord leaved ones with their small white flowers (though not at the moment) and the rather miniature Young ii which forms a mound no more than a foot tall and flowers fairly frequently throughout the year with white or dark lilac flowers. Who can forget the small, medium or large Hebes, with corresponding sized leaves and their glorious racemes of bright pink flowers? There are so many to choose from and I'll bet there will be some more irresistible ones at the garden centre this spring as well, can't wait! Before then I have a hulkeanna Hebe grown from seed which will come into its own in spring. This one has a totally different leaf, tends to sprawl and its flowers are gorgeous and very large open lilac racemes. hmmm!

Also very noticeable on my plant patrol were the leaves of the Bergenis (elephant ears) which have turned every shade of red and purple. With the cold weather, they are starting to produce flower buds for their early spring show. The Muscari (grape hyacinth) meanwhile have completely beaten the snowdrops this year and their lovely blue flowers are wonderful to see. This year's anemone corms continue to flower, time will tell whether they will ever reappear, but they are wonderful to see anyway. Some of the rhododendrons are also getting geared for the season with lovely big juicy flower buds too.

The roses from cuttings are really doing well, both in the pots outside and also those in pots in the 'wonder-wall'. One of the greenhouses was totally empty and so a whole load of rose cuttings went into one of the borders in there as well. They are looking very healthy and now well leaved too but have resisted the temptation to check underground for roots. So far anyway. They are in new soil, to roses, so should be fine. Had to cut down a rhododendron when one of its branches grew too lanky, also the embthorium (Chilean fire-bush) so am trying a new way of propagating. More on that if it works.

Once again I was caught out by winter, the older I get the more I have to learn it seems. Anyway, today I was able to cut some parsley, mint and whatever other herbs I could find; better late than never and so all available ice-cube trays now contain different chopped herbs in each. These will go into separate freezer bags later and be kept in the freezer till required. I have also started removing swedes and carrots to scrape and blanch in the microwave before freezing for later use. Some carrots I will hang on to though, to use fresh for a while longer.

I hope, if this mild weather spell continues, to get outside and operate the hoe wherever I can reach, among the plants, they might be finally slowing down for winter but sadly the cold wet weather does not seem to hamper the weeds. But, it's not pleasant, or wise, to walk on the ground at the moment so will just have to be patient and gnash my teeth.

All the tunnels and the greenhouses too, have got their doors wide open whenever it is mild and not too windy, they really need as much ventilation as possible at all times. It doesn't take much for botrytis to form and then the bugs will attack and finish off the plant too.

It is only too easy for me, when boredom sets, in to turn to cooking. And the freezers (and probably our diets) are suffering for it! Pastry is a joy to make when going outdoors is not possible and all sorts of pasties and goodies such as sausage rolls are put away at this time. Very handy when the weather improves and I don't feel like cooking. Soups and home made bread also make such a satisfying meal when the weather is cold and it is such a good way to use up surplus vegetables and the stock made from cooked or raw bones and vegetables make a good and tasty base for it.

Big fun for fancy tots

SIXTY four children entered this year's Jelly Tots fancy dress competition, with even more just showing up to enjoy the games, raffle, food and fun. The children had a fantastic party that packed out the Town Hall with laughter. Organiser Louise Ellis said, "it was lovely to see the children (and grown-ups) enjoying themselves." Once again there were some amazing costumes and all the children behaved impeccably (and it was great to see that even the judges got into the fancy dress spirit this year). Thanks need to go out to everyone who helped, donated prizes and baking and just to all who came along and made the day so special.

It was a difficult job for judges Vimbat Doherty, Natalie Hiff and Andrew Gowdie picking winners from a huge number of adorable entrants. Fortunately the age groups were split into different categories, so the impressive costumes all had a chance to shine in front of the judges and be rewarded for their effort.

Winners

Category B, 2-3 years (part one): First - Chef Niko Clarke, Second - 80's girl Keysha Crowie, Third - Cow-girl Nia Elbakidze.

Part two of the category B, 2-3 years group (part two): First - Peppa Pig Sophie Mclean, Second - Pirate Ali Ray Marsh, Third - Lily Lapham as Tinkerbell.

Category C, Preschool/FS2 (part 1): First - Cupcake Anna Lee, Second - Cowboy Tyler Stevens, Third - Fishing Cat Lucy Blake.

Category C, Preschool/FS2 (part 2): First - Kai Heathman, Second - Power ranger Oliver Goodwin, Third - Kyland Ford as Thomas the Tank Engine.

Category D, Year 1/ Reception group: First - Geisha girl Bragnae Nannig Wallace, Second - Angry Bird George Lee, Third - Mermaid Mia Harris.

Category E, Year 2 and older: First - Harry Goodwin as Jim the cabin boy, Second - Amy Payne as Pocahontas, Third - Molly Roberts as 101 Dalmatians villain Cruella Deville.

In Category F, the groups and pairs, first prize went to the Alice and Wonderland miniatures: Alice Bernsten was Alice, Ollie Eccles was the White Rabbit, Harry Phillips was the Cheshire Cat, and Benjamin Hewitt was Alice, Ollie Eccles was the White Rabbit, Nick and Nat Cockwell scooped second prize as Mexican bandits and donned a top hat as the Mad Hatter. Theo and Nat Cockwell came third as Serat and his nut from the Ice Age films.

Jelly Tots is on every Tuesday 2pm - 3.30pm and Thursday 10am - 11.30am in the Parish Hall.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800 - Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIIP may be contacted direct on 156.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
 Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

Billings correct at time of going to press but subject to change until actual transmission. Time into BFBS Radio/Television for m-dates.

Warming up for Bermuda

Swimming

SORREL and Sophie splash off first for the swim team on Monday in the heats of the 50m Breaststroke. The Pompert Robertson sisters compete for a place in the final of the 100m Breaststroke on Wednesday and the 100m individual medley on Thursday. Sorrel, as the eldest and most experienced swimmer, has the busiest week of the group and will be competing in the 50m Freestyle on Wednesday and 100m Freestyle on Thursday as well. Kirsty McLeod will also be competing in the 50m and 100m Freestyle heats. Daniel starts his games on Monday too with heats for the Men's 50m Backstroke. Wednesday he will compete for a place in the final of the Men's 100m Freestyle and the 50m Freestyle on Thursday. Nikita will be competing over longer distances than the others on the swim team with heats for 200m Freestyle on Monday, 100m Backstroke on Tuesday and 400m Freestyle on Wednesday and 50m Backstroke on Thursday. Emily Barker will also be contending for a place in the Women's 50m Backstroke on Thursday. Emily, Sorrel, Sophie, Kirsty and Nikita will compete as a team in the Women's 4 x 50m relay on Monday.

Athletics

Hazel Fowmes' short distance heats for the 100m and 200m are Monday and Thursday as are the heats for Kate Stenning's events, the women's 400m and 800m.

Bill Chater will be focusing on middle distance events but has an exhausting week planned with heats for 800m on Monday, the final for the Men's 5,000m on Wednesday evening and qualifying for the Men's 1,500m the next day.

Rex Eagle is flying the flag in the individual Half Marathon this year. His race starts on Friday evening.

Shooting

Michael Goss is first to compete for the Shooting Team on Sunday in the ISSF 50m 3 Position Smallbore Rifle event, he shoots again in the ISSF 50m Prone Smallbore Rifle on Monday.

Murray and Nevin Middleton will be taking part in the Individual ISSF 10m Air Pistol event on Sunday and the Team event at the same distance later in the day. Nevin and Murray will also be competing individually in the ISSF 50m Free Pistol shooting on Monday.

Matthew Vincent is shooting in the Olympic Skeet Individual competition on Tuesday. Bono Mekay and Saul Pitaluga are shooting in the Automatic Ball Trap Team event qualifying on Monday, and Automatic Ball Trap Individual qualifying on Wednesday.

Badminton

Group B matches for the Team Event are first on the list for the Badminton Team. They play the Isle of Man, the Faroe Islands and Gotland on Sunday and the Isle of Wight on Monday. The team will face Group A placements later on Monday and are hopeful to progress to the final scheduled for the evening.

The Men's Singles and Women's Doubles events start on Tuesday. Competing in the Men's Singles are Michael Brownlee, Doug Clark, Duane March and Ross Stewart and pairing in the Women's doubles will be Anna Luxton with Cheryl March, and Laura Minto and Anastasia Markina. Men's Doubles and Women's Singles events are on Wednesday. Pairing in the Men's competition will be Michael Brownlee and Duane March, and Doug Clarke with Ross Stewart. Competitors in the Women's singles are Laura Minto, Cheryl March, Anastasia Markina and Louise Williams.

The Mixed Doubles pairings, Anna Luxton and Doug Clark, Cheryl March and Duane March, Laura Minto and Michael Brownlee, and Louise Williams and Joe Clarke play on Thursday.

Finals for all the doubles and singles competitions are scheduled for Friday.

Golf

The golf team, Glenn Ross, Roy Smith and Ian Stewart will tee off in the Men's Individual golf competition at the Port Royal Golf Course on Monday. Youngster Declan Bonner was due to play for the Falklands but unfortunately misses out this year due to injury.

The games are played in different rounds to accommodate all golfers in the competition.

All three golfers will go on to play in the Men's Team Event on Tuesday.

Football

The Falkland Islands Football Team face Froya on Sunday in their first Group stage play-off.

They play hosts Bermuda on Monday and Greenland on Wednesday.

If they progress well, play-offs for medal positions start Wednesday evening with finals on Thursday.

Troyd wins the July Medal

THE Décor Services sponsored July medal was played on Sunday July 7. The club had a good turnout of players, considering the cold weather, including four players from MPC. Scoring was reasonably good in the conditions. Troyd Bowles won the event and Eugene Hurley was runner up with Bob Gilbert finishing third.

The next medal is scheduled for August 4. The club is open for memberships at Full and Junior level. Please contact any of the committee if you are interested in joining.

VOTE

ST HELENA GENERAL ELECTION 2013

There will be one Election on Wednesday 17 July 2013, to elect 12 Councillors to represent St Helena. This means that all the candidates' names will be on one Ballot Paper. Each voter will be able to select up to 12 candidates. But you do not have to use all 12 votes - you can just select your favourite one, or two or three - in fact any number up to 12. If you select more than 12, your Ballot Paper will be invalid, and none of your votes will be counted.

There are 20 candidates, as follows

- Leslie Paul Baldwin: of Half Tree Hollow
- Audrey Mavis Constantine: of Maldivia, Jamestown
- Nigel Dollery: of "Pleasant View Cottage", New Ground, St Pauls
- Wilson Charles Duncan: of Old Millsite, Nr Harford Community Centre, Longwood
- Gavin George Ellick: of New Ground, St Pauls
- Cyril Robert George: of "Cliffon Cottage", Sapper Way, St Pauls
- Stedson Robert George: of "Utopia", Two Gun Saddle, Alarm Forest
- Anthony Arthur Green: of "Oltonia", Knollcombes, St Pauls
- Cyril Keith Gunnell: of "Cashem House", Napoleon Street, Jamestown
- Earl Hilton Henry: of Thompson's Hill, St Pauls
- Lawson Arthur Henry: of Sea View, Alarm Forest
- Brian William Isaac: of "Elizium", Longwood Road, Longwood
- Brenda Elaine Moors: of Alarm Forest
- Bernice Alicia Olsson: of "Association Hall", Main Street, Jamestown
- Ian Sebastian Rummery: of Alarm Forest
- Christine Lilian Scipio-O'Dean: of Black Field, Longwood
- Derek Franklin Thomas: of Cow Path, Half Tree Hollow
- Lionel George Williams: of "Brenville", Nr Half Tree Hollow, St Pauls
- Raymond Kenneth Williams: of "Saddle Cottage", Nr Horse Pasture, Blue Hill
- Mervyn Robert Yon: of "High View Cottage", Nr Red Hill, St Pauls

Persons absent from St Helena whose names are on the 2013 Register of Electors can vote by Proxy. Application forms for voting by Proxy, are available by email from the Returning Officer, Gillian Francis at deputychiefsec@sainthelena.gov.sh or the Assistant Registration Officers, Derek Henry at manager.ca@sainthelena.gov.sh or Gina Benjamin at cofcouncils@sainthelena.gov.sh. Completed forms must be returned by email by 10am Monday 15 July, with an original (hand-written) signature.

A copy of the Register of Electors can be accessed on the SHG website at www.sainthelena.gov.sh/government-gazettes. Counting of votes will begin in the main hall at Prince Andrew School at approximately 8 pm on 17 July - after which the results will be declared.

Falklands team personal bests beat sun and bugs in Bermuda

DESPITE searing heat, and palpable nerves from younger members, the Falklands team competing in Bermuda at the NatWest Island Games has produced creditable scores, personal bests and even a few much appreciated wins.

Athletics, badminton, swimming, shooting, golf and football were all competed for by Team Falklands and at the time of Penguin News going to print on Thursday afternoon, three of many exciting moments recorded included the football team's victory over Froya to win the Small Islands Cup on Sunday, and badminton players Laura Minto and Anastasia Markina's wins over Isle of Wight players in the singles matches. To the delight of the rest of the team and Falklands' spectators Laura took the match in 21-16, 21-13 and Anastasia in 21-16, 21-16.

Also in Badminton Doug Clark and Anna Luxton achieved a win in the Mixed Doubles with 21-10, 21-19 against the Isle of Wight. All other games were lost, but with very reasonable score lines from the rest of the team, Cheryl March and Louise Williams, and the men Ross Stewart, Doug Clark, Duane March and Joe Clark played, "with amazing effort and tenacity," said team managers.

Two more exciting matches were Men's Doubles with Ross and Doug losing 21-13, 13-21, 21-13 to the Isle of Wight and Anastasia and Laura's Women's Doubles match also against the Isle of Wight 20-22, 21-13, 21-10.

Reporting from Bermuda, assistant swimming coach Janet Robertson told Penguin News yesterday, that having completed day three of the swimming events, "both Tom [Whistler] and I are very happy with the outcomes for everybody."

She listed the highlights as Sorrel Pompert Robertson's 50m Breaststroke Falklands record, 100m Breaststroke record (both held by Claire Kilmartin since 2001) the girl's (Sorrel, Sophie Pompert Robertson, Kirsty McLeod and Emily Barker) Falklands 4x50m relay record, held since the 1999 Gotland Games, and Daniel Clarke's, "breath-taking," 11 second improvement on his Personal Best in the 100m freestyle, on Wednesday.

At the time of Penguin News going to print, Sorrel was preparing to try for two more FI records, the 100m Individual Medley, where she only has to beat her own record from the Isle of Wight two years ago, and the 100m Freestyle record also held by Claire Kilmartin since 2001. Emily and Nikita were hoping to gain PBs in their 50m backstroke.

Sophie and Kirsty were also aiming for PBs in the 100m Individual Medley and the 100m Freestyle respectively.

Also speaking from Bermuda on Thursday morning athlete Bill Chater said he was, "very happy with it so far, great place, great people and they have an amazing facility for competition."

He was satisfied with his 800m time (2:15.94 a new Falklands Island games record) adding, "I learned a lot about how I could have done much better if I had ever run a proper one before."

Bill added: "I put what I learned into the 5000m and it worked (time 18:15.21) but the heat and humidity was just too much so I missed the time I had trained for by nearly a minute and failed to beat Tony Burnett's long standing record. I felt better though when the other runners told me they missed their targets too."

Bill was scheduled to run yesterday in the 1,500 metres heats but due to withdrawals they were cancelled so he progressed to the final in the event to be run this morning (Friday).

Athlete Kate Stenning (15) ran in the 400m final on Tuesday evening.

Janet Robertson speaking to Penguin News said: "We had a thrilling experience in the stadium."

Withdrawals from Kate's event meant that the heats were skipped.

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

I HAVE to confess if just one more picture of somebody's feet in the foreground of a white beach and blue Bermuda sea had popped up on Facebook news-feed late last week, my computer monitor might have found itself crashing into the white board.

Happily the sterling actions of the football lads soothed an increasingly jealous Team Penguin News when the boys nabbed the Small Islands Cup last Sunday; so with frustrated teeth gnashing quietened and morale heightened, we were able to get on with enthusiastically following the progress of our gang in the sun.

And let's face it, unless huffing and puffing on a running machine, darts, poker, or toddling about on horse-back becomes a bona-fide competition sport, certainly the older members of PN have no reason to day-dream about lost opportunities in deliciously, adorably, sun-drenched climes - cue more sighing.

The truth is, while we would have loved to have been there reporting first hand, and enjoying the odd glass of homemade lemonade, it's difficult to envy the nerves that must have been suffered by the team (particularly the younger members) forced to compete, often for the very first time, in front of a large audience and against some top calibre athletes. I don't doubt that the hearts of every member of the audience at home went out to the youngsters so clearly overwhelmed by the atmosphere, but nevertheless throwing themselves into the competition with everything they had.

And while armfuls of medals were never expected, the great scoring in some sports and personal bests in others is, I think, all the assurance we need that our athletes, to coin a phrase, worked their butts off for us. Well done to you all.

We also offer our grateful (and relieved) thanks to FITV for providing us with enough stills to produce a colour spread in time for our Tuesday lunch-time colour page deadline.

WHILE on a theme of 'wish you were here,' a quick read of the Mercopress story outlining the Argentine Foreign Minister's written attack on Clarin earlier in the week, underscored once again precisely why I don't 'wish I was there.'

How any minister of any country can be under the impression that berating a newspaper for not backing to the hilt government policy, is acceptable in the eyes of the world, is breathtakingly idiotic.

I'm aware that some Argentines refer to him as The Clown, but if he's meaning to be funny, his routine needs a little work.

C&W are Sure change is good

THE Falklands sole telecommunications provider Cable and Wireless changed its name to Sure on Monday (July 15).

In April this year Cable and Wireless South Atlantic Ltd, along with the Channel Islands, Isle of Man and Diego Garcia were acquired by the Bateco Group, a leading telecommunications provider to 16 markets spanning the Middle East and Northern Africa, Europe and the South Atlantic and Indian Ocean. This marks the start of an exciting new phase for the business, as they join an international organisation, "which is committed to delivering value and excellent customer service," said a spokesperson.

The company chose to adopt the already well respected and popular consumer brand, Sure, that is used across Channel Islands and Isle of Man and roll it out across the South Atlantic islands of Ascension, Falkland Islands and Saint Helena, said Justin McPhee, Chief Executive of Sure in the Falkland Islands.

Alongside the re-brand, Sure has refreshed its existing brand, introducing a new look logo that represents a modern, optimistic outlook for the future. Serving the communities where Sure operates is at the heart of the company's approach, he added. "The acquisition by Bateco is excellent news for customers and marks the start of an exciting new phase for our business," said Mr McPhee. "We will continue to make decisions according to the needs of the markets that we know best and as a global company, we have the resources to enable investment in the Islands as we continue to develop and grow."

Timerman attack on Argentine newspaper

ARGENTINE Foreign Minister Hector Timerman has accused Buenos Aires daily newspaper Clarin of silencing, distorting, hiding and even lying about events in Argentina particularly regarding the Falklands issue and says in the March referendum Clarin played, "to the (British) Foreign Office strategy," reported Mercopress this week.

In a piece for Pagina 12, a newspaper known to be pro-Argentine Government, Mr Timerman claims that Clarin hid that the "British Foreign Office strategy of promoting a referendum in the Islands failed before the UN, nor did it publish other important events in which the Argentine position came out strengthened," even when all this was underlined by the British media.

He adds that in the Clarin article a cheap opinion-writer described the Argentine position before the UN C24 as a "word salad" while at the same time supporting the British position. When the world and multilateral organisations decided not to legitimise the Falklands referendum, they did so because the Argentine "word salad" was more forceful than London's arguments, "now sponsored by Clarin," claims Mr Timerman.

Falklands team in Bermuda

As a result said Janet, "in her very first international competition she was faced with the best the Island Games could offer in the final. Very nervous and emotional as she walked up to the start, she had the whole Falkland Island support group feeling for her deeply. But once the whistle went and she was on her way, she ran a smooth, even and extremely fast race achieving a PB of 1:08.83 minutes - a truly excellent effort."

She also ran in the 800m with a time of 3:02.03. Hazel Fowmes completed the 200m Heat 3 in a time of 31.92 yesterday and Rex Eagle will run the Half Marathon today at 6.30pm Bermuda time. Bib number 45, Rex will run against 33 other athletes.

The shooting team did the Falklands proud with some excellent scores. Nevin and Murray Middleton took 4th in the Team ISSF 10m Air Pistol Men event. Nevin shot 519 and Murray 488 for a combined score of 1,007 which beat teams from the Isle of Wight and Htra.

In the Men's Individual ISSF 10m Air Pistol event Nevin placed 8th from 11 entrants with a score of 518, Murray came 10th in the same event with a score of 483.

Nevin shot 437 in the ISSF 50m Free Pistol Team event and although he lacked a team partner to boost his score he secured 5th place above an entrant from the Isle of Wight.

Michael Goss shot 526 in the ISSF 50m Prone Smallbore Rifle Men event. He also entered the Team event for ISSF 50m Prone Smallbore Rifle and managed a decent score of 526 but had no partner to compete alongside to post higher than 7th from 7

Earwigs beware

THE invasive species control plan to tackle the earwig invasion of the Falkland Islands is about to enter the first stages of a feasibility study, it was reported at Wednesday's meeting of the Environmental Committee.

The plan to introduce tachinid flies that solely eat earwigs to the Islands has been approved by Executive Council and Environmental Officer Nick Rendell reported that the first studies to collect data on the practicalities and risks of introducing the fly to the Falklands are about to begin in Europe. He added that should everything progress as hoped the introduction of flies could start as early as next Autumn.

To ensure there are no risks of creating a disastrous infestation all possible outcomes are being researched, said Mr Rendell. The Camel Cricket is to be used in the tests as the most similar native specie to the earwig to test the fly's appetite for local cuisine.

Daniel, Rafa and Andres play Bermuda Picture: Bermuda News entries.

Bono McKay and Saul Pitaluga in the Automatic Ball Trap Team event, secured 7th ahead of hosts Bermuda with a combined score of 116.

There were 16 shooters in the Automatic Ball Trap Men's Individual competition which started on Wednesday, and the event continued with rounds four to six yesterday. With a score of 82, Bono took 8th place and Saul 12th with 76. Only six go forward to the final so Bono, using a borrowed weapon, only missed out narrowly on that opportunity. Matthew Vincent in the Olympic Skeet Individual Men event came 9th from 10 entries with a score of 69.

The Golf Team told Penguin News the heat was tough, but they were allowed to use buggies around the course which made it more bearable. Roy Smith said all of the team were losing most of their shots on the greens which are very undulating and the pins tucked in difficult spots.

Ian Stewart added that the fairways were generous and the rough, "not brutal," and they were all hoping to improve as the week went on.

Going into the final round of the Golf Men's Individual event yesterday, Roy Smith was 49th with combined scores of 284, Ian Stewart was 38th with 267 and Glenn Ross had posted a score of 258 which tied him at 33rd with two golfers from Orkney.

The Men's Team event final round was also yesterday. Roy, Ian and Glenn were 12th at time of going to print, with a combined score of 809. They were ahead of the team from St Helena and nine strokes behind the Faroe Islands.

A fantastic first game against Froya (2-1) last Sunday means the Football team will come home with medals and the Small Islands Cup. Goal scorers were Wayne Clement and Rafa Sotomayor. The game was something of a revenge match, the Falklands having been beaten by Froya at the last Island Games. The greater experience of the host island team, Bermuda, showed in the next match, however, when the Falklands lost 8-0 followed by a 9-0 loss to the mighty Greenland. For a chance at the bronze medal the Falklands were scheduled to play Froya once again last night.

Hell bent on crossing the Islands

AN RAF team will begin an attempt to run 235km across the Falklands in five days on Monday to raise funds for a five-year-old girl battling a rare cancer.

Survival equipment specialist and Iraq veteran Corporal Joe Broadbent (28) said he was delighted to be able to ensure efforts to lower Leeming RAF Community Primary School pupil Fraja Simpson's chances of suffering a relapse of neuroblastoma now stretched from Stanley, in the Falklands to Stanley, County Durham.

Cpl Broadbent said he had been inspired to try to become the first to run across the Falklands after his wife, Jenna, had joined a group of women at the base having their heads shaved in March for the Fraja Ellie Appeal.

He said the RAF Mount Pleasant base had adopted the £500,000 appeal and the team had already been sponsored £4,500 for the run.

Cpl Broadbent, and his team will be running 50km a day in Falklands winter conditions. He said he had been training twice daily on the Islands' testing mountainous terrain and that his experiences with RAF Leeming's mountain rescue team would help him, "battle through the tough times."

During the challenge the runners will stay overnight at settlements and a helicopter will transport them from the east to West Falklands.

Almost £80,000 has been raised for the fund since March.

Regeneris report public

REGENERIS Consulting was commissioned by the Falkland Islands Government in November 2012 to carry out a socio-economic study on hydrocarbons development in the Islands, in order to inform FIG planning for the emerging oil and gas industry.

The study examined the potential impacts of a number of possible scenarios for oil and gas development in the Islands, and the possible impacts on population (both temporary and permanent), jobs, business opportunities, housing and infrastructure.

One of the key findings of the report was that the proposed development of the Sea Lion field by Premier Oil, along with known forthcoming exploration and related infrastructure development will generate significant employment, development and economic opportunities for the Falkland Islands over the next five years.

The consultants have proposed a series of recommendations that will be the subject of review within FIG. A period of public consultation is also planned, with further details to be announced in the near future.

The report is available to download from the following link: <http://bit.ly/1dqsMhd>. Copies of the report can be obtained by contacting the Policy Unit on 28421 or emailing snightingale@sec.gov.fk

FIG take action

FOLLOWING on from a recommendation that the Falkland Islands Government should take a more proactive stance on tackling all invasive species, a proposal was made by the Environmental Planning Department, with the support of Falklands Conservation, that £4,000 of the Environmental Studies budget should be dedicated to invasive control.

The committee stressed that a lot of valuable work was being carried out by dedicated individuals but agreed it should be a responsibility of the Government to help focus and co-ordinate efforts, process and collate data. The committee agreed that by providing a means to fund projects for the longer term continuity would be maintained.

Bisley in brief

WHILE the Island Games team struggles in the Bermuda temperatures, the Falkland Islands Rifle Association is also dealing with a heat wave at Bisley shooting range in the UK, reports competitor Gareth Goodwin. Gareth achieved 71.6v and Ken 70.4v in the St George's competition. Neither qualified for the second round. More news on penguin-news.com

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THIS week should be an interesting one with a couple of escapes from the seemingly endless round of meetings in stuffy rooms. On Monday we spoke to Russian state TV, Tuesday a day trip to Fox Bay for the public meeting on the West and Thursday a quick run to Goose Green for another public meeting. All Tuesday's normal meetings moved to Wednesday. Next week will see the second to last Assembly meeting before the dissolution in September. The final Assembly of this term is scheduled for August 22 as that is the last time we will have the necessary quorum of six elected members before people head off to the CPA in South Africa and the party conferences in the UK. Once the Assembly is dissolved only the statutory committees continue to operate with Exco available for urgent business.

I HAVE been encouraging individuals to think about standing for election in November. It is a big commitment but we hope that the financial barriers have now been overcome and for those who are able and willing even just standing is a good experience. You may not be successful first time around, I was not, but that should not deter you if you are truly passionate about the way ahead for your country and show yourself willing to do the work and take the inevitable criticism. It is not just about meetings and policy, it is also about representing the electorate, and on occasions the country. Equally important is being an advocate for constituents when they have exhausted all other avenues in their dealings with government.

IT'S GREAT to see and hear coverage of the Island Games in Bermuda especially as so many people have worked and trained so hard for months in far from ideal conditions. It is a reflection of the range of sports and activities available thanks to the dozens of people who give their time and skills voluntarily. I believe that we could challenge any similar sized community and I would be surprised if any could match the range of skills and talent in the Islands.

Volunteer group take PNews-Aloud digital

AFTER almost 20 years as Penguin-News-on-Tape, the audio edition of the Penguin News has spent the last six months making the change to PNews-Aloud – using digital mp3 files on computer memory sticks to take the service to clients.

Coordinator Margo Smallwood said: "Going digital had been on our minds for some time. Cassette tapes and players were getting harder to find, as was support for tapes, for example at one time we used the bulk eraser at FIRS and that is long gone. It was when we noticed reasonably priced USB play-back boxes and portable studio packages available on-line about a year ago that the time seemed right to make the change."

Affordable players were a key component to the change since few clients of the service had computer experience or the equipment to playback digital files. "We approached the KEMH Eye Fund who kindly funded the purchase of enough play-back boxes for our listeners, mp3 memory sticks and a USB microphone," Margo said. "South Atlantic Trading pitched in by generously handling the initial order at cost." Michael Smallwood provided and set-up a refurbished second-hand laptop and wrote the programme scripts to manage the recordings and transfer files to the memory sticks. Margo thanked the volunteer readers as well: "We are always grateful to the readers who give their time to the project. They have been particularly helpful while going digital – patiently learning to use the new set-up, providing feed-back and helping listeners adapt."

The audio service began as a socio-economic development project of the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Stanley in late 1993. The Baha'is have continued to supply the coordinator, continuity, moral support and occasional new batches of consumables such as cassette tapes. Support from the local BFBS station (British Forces Broadcasting Service) in the 1990s provided technical support and basic equipment such as a professional portable tape recorder, microphone and one-to-one cassette duplicator.

Other support came from the local broadcast station by way of their one-time bulk erasing facility and even the Department of Agriculture who loaned the project their old cassette recorder as back-up.

The service is provided entirely by volunteers. The equipment moves between readers; each reader reading two to three weekly issues and delivering the recordings to clients. There are currently seven readers and six clients.

This 'Talking Newspaper' service provides our local paper in audio format free-of-charge to anyone who has difficulty reading the newspaper for any reason.

If you would like to help read for PNews-Aloud, or if you know of anyone who could benefit from the service, please contact Margo Smallwood on phone 21031.

New curator for Herbarium

FOX Bay resident Helen Marsh has been appointed as the curator of the Falklands National Herbarium.

A herbarium is a collection of preserved plant specimens, most commonly pressed and dried, mounted on sheets of card, clearly labelled and filed in such a way as to make it easy to access. It can also contain bulkier items such as conifer cones. Delicate plant parts such as flowers can be stored in liquid.

The Falklands herbarium was first established by Robin Woods MBE and David Broughton and was officially opened by Governor Donald Lamont in April 2001. It is hosted by Falklands Conservation in their offices at Jubilee Villas.

Mrs Marsh said while the herbarium is on the smaller side in global terms, it was still of great importance, interest and use.

"The aim is for the collection to represent the plant diversity of the Falkland Islands and to have all relevant plants represented, particularly those that are native but also those that have been introduced. The labelled specimens can assist investigations about changes in plant distribution over time," she explained.

Over time the collection continues to grow, added to by those undertaking botanical fieldwork here. All specimens are pressed and dried then sent away to Kew for mounting, labelling and their identification is determined or verified.

With funding assistance from Falkland Islands Government through an Environmental Studies Budget grant the collection is now up to date with all specimens checked and filed.

Mrs Marsh said the next step for her was to head to Kew for three weeks training in herbarium management. "I am very grateful to the John Cheek Trust Fund in the Falklands, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (through the FIG Environmental Officer), Falklands Conservation and RGB Kew for financial support, and also to members of the UKOT team at RBG Kew and staff at Falklands Conservation for their on-going advice and assistance," she said.

Creating a picture of the Great Britain's time in the Falklands

IF you have any memories of the SS Great Britain's time in the Falklands then James Muirhead would like to hear from you.

Stories, pictures, the smallest recollections of being on board the mighty steamship, working on the project to refloat her or even just recalling her presence in the Islands are all of vital importance to James who is building up a picture of those years.

Designed by Isambard Kingdom Brunel, the SS Great Britain was launched in 1843 and at the time was the largest vessel afloat and the first iron steamer to cross the Atlantic which she did in 1845 taking 14 days. However, her protracted construction and high cost had left her owners in a difficult financial position, and they were forced out of business in 1846 after the ship was stranded by a navigational error.

Sold for salvage and repaired, Great Britain carried thousands of immigrants to Australia until she was converted to sail in 1881. Three years later, she was retired to the Falkland Islands where she was used as a warehouse, quarantine ship and coal hulk until scuttled in 1937.

In 1970 a massive operation

was undertaken to refloat the vessel, secure her on to a huge pontoon and return her to the Bristol dry dock where she was built.

Now listed as part of the National Historic Fleet, Core Collection, she is an award-winning visitor attraction and museum ship in Bristol Harbour, with 150,000–170,000 visitors annually.

James is from the University of Bristol and is working in collaboration with the SS Great Brit- ain Trust with his Falklands trip funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council which offers post graduate and research funding opportunities in knowledge exchange and international research. He will be in the Islands for a month, based mostly at the Museum in Stanley and is happy for people to pop in for a chat or if they prefer, drop him an email at jm8648@bristol.ac.uk or give him a call on 61906.

Give us two minutes...

Jess McPhee

- 1. What is your most prized possession? My camera
- 2. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? It'd be useful for me if there was a proper photography studio or camera shop down here
- 3. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I can play guitar (badly) so that I suppose?
- 4. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? This is more something that happens back in Chichester, but I still get people asking me where I'm from because of my accent – I'm constantly having to tell one of my lecturers and some of the people I live with in my halls that I'm not American or Australian
- 5. What is your nickname and why? Jess or Jessie, just because I prefer being called that instead of Jessica
- 6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Probably Venice or New York City. I've never been to America or anywhere in Europe besides the UK and I'd love to be able to photograph both places, especially New York at night
- 7. What song makes you feel happy (or sad) when you hear it? This is going to be unbelievably soppy, but 'The Ground' by Orla Gartland always makes me feel happy because my boyfriend plays and sings it to me a lot
- 8. What would people be surprised to learn about you? One of my photos was on exhibition in the Saatchi Gallery in London for six weeks
- 9. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently? Unwholly by Neal Shusterman
- 10. What would your 'Mastermind' specialist subject be? Probably biology or psychology or something along those lines.

Islander Jess is 16 and currently lives in Chichester, England where she is attending college. She is studying Media Studies, Film Studies and Photography and intends to apply for a degree in Multimedia Journalism or Film and TV Production. Getting her first taste of the newspaper world, Jess has been helping out in the Penguin News office since she returned to the Falklands.

Your questions answered

QIt is understood that recent changes have been made to charges, thresholds and allowances for patients referred overseas for medical treatment. For the information of the general public would the Director of Health please explain the new criteria, what expenses FIG pays and what patients are now required to pay

Interim Director of Health and Medical Services Derek Muhl provided the following information

A Basically, for patients referred overseas for medical treatment, FIG pays the hospital bill (Chile), separate arrangements exist for patients treated in the UK.

FIG pays for flights, but with a £300 contribution from the patient if referred for a new condition or a follow up appointment for an existing condition if there has been no payment under the previous arrangement for elective referrals. FIG normally pays for travel expenses and accommodation, but this will be affected by any number of factors e.g. which hospital is being used, where the patient wishes to stay, whether the patient stays with relatives/friends. Where a patient chooses to stay in more expensive accommodation than that provided by FIG, he/she pays the difference.

Some patients will be entitled to a subsistence allowance and additional support from Social Services. We also know that the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust, and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund also help out in certain circumstances. There are specific arrangements where patients are going on holiday and a hospital referral is arranged during that period.

In all cases, patients should keep in touch with FIGO throughout their stay when in the UK. FIGO strongly recommends that all those travelling overseas take out appropriate travel insurance.

The Medical Treatment Overseas policy is kept under review to ensure that this reflects changing circumstances. Discussions with individual patients prior to their leaving the Islands will clarify their particular circumstances and, as far as possible, individual needs are taken into consideration in making appropriate arrangements.

An updated handout for patients is being prepared with key points highlighted.

Patients are required to pay for any damage caused to rented accommodation, such as a recent incident where a carpet was burned by a cigarette in non-smoking accommodation and additional cleaning costs incurred. FIGO will not pay the extra cost of a larger taxi required to return to Brize Norton because of the volume of luggage to be carried; nor will FIGO disclose details of other passengers on southbound flights. FIGO will not be liable for any legal costs arising from proceedings against patients who have ordered but not paid for goods delivered to a FIGO rented house.

Where patients vacate their FIGO-funded hotel or guest house for a short period during their stay, this must be notified to FIGO so that the accommodation can be cancelled for that period. In cases where FIGO are not notified, patients will be responsible for the cost of that unoccupied accommodation. Patients are responsible for any costs of not checking out of their accommodation by the designated time on the day of their departure for home.

The policy aims to strike a balance between an appropriate level of support for those who undergo medical treatment overseas and proper stewardship of FIGO resources. In all cases the MTO Clerk at KEMH or FIGO are happy to assist in resolving any issues.

AS Argentine diplomats at the UN's Committee of 24 successfully challenge Islanders rights to self determination, the BBC World Service reveals that several of the organisation's officials are under investigation for forging documents concerning the committee. It is reported that the secretary general has initiated an enquiry into allegations that two (non diplomatic) officials have created false memorandums pretending to be communications between British and Americans suggesting a scheme to discredit the committee and hasten its abolition.

Argentine pilot Ernesto Barcella who landed in the Islands in June, nearly causing a diplomatic crisis does not receive the maximum fines in Argentina as promised and merely has it written in his file that he committed an offence because he did not file a flight plan.

Shares in Desire Petroleum continue a downward trend closing at £1.45 on July 16. Prices soared when it was announced that their first exploratory well had shown minor indications of the presence of hydrocarbons.

A whistle-stop tour of Stanley reveals that the last year has been a flurry of construction with the Chamber of Commerce, Argos and Development Corporation buildings popping up in the Davis Street area and work getting underway on Shorty's Diner. Stanley Services complete their warehouse and offices, the Archives are completely renovated and work gets underway on Lookout Lodge as well as houses being built on the new east Stanley housing development.

Proving that the same debates can span many years is a public meeting which attempts through discussion to define the Falklands lifestyle and what influencing factors lead to change in the community. It was hoped the discussion would assist Mark Shrimpton, a visiting consultant who was "evaluating the possibility of conducting a sociological survey on the potential effects on the community whether or not oil is discovered." However the first point raised from the floor was whether or not such a study was viable, given that councillors had recently alluded to a need to "tighten belts."

A change to military rules governing access to the NAAFI at Mount Pleasant impacts on Falklands residents. From July 17 only MoD civil servants and Mount Pleasant resident MoD contractors are authorised to use the NAAFI.

Public consultation is to be carried out on 19 policy issues identified by the road traffic bill working group. Working group chair Councillor Janet Robertson said some of the issues relate fundamentally to Camp road designation and will be raised at this year's Farmers Week.

Meanwhile 'Scooter Boy' John Birmingham finds himself with a £175 bill (plus helmet costs) to legally ride his electric scooter with a maximum speed of 12 mph on the roads. Stressing that he was not knocking those who enforce the law, he suggests councillors look more closely at the ordinance regarding low-powered eco-friendly machines. Ironically the chances of an eight year old on a push bike over taking John are high and there is no legal requirement for them to wear a helmet.

FISHERIES RESEARCH VESSEL CONTRACT FALKLAND ISLANDS

INVITATION TO TENDER

The Government of the Falkland Islands seeks tenders for the provision of Fisheries Research Vessel capability.

The vessel must be entered into the Falkland Islands Register of Ships or other registry of similar quality for the duration of the contract, which will be for a period of 3 years with an option for a 2 year extension, commencing on or about 1 October 2014.

Tender documents are available from the Secretariat, Stanley by contacting Lynn Brownlee (email L.Brownlee@sec.gov.fk, Tel: (+ 500) 28430).

Tenders must be received by 1200 hours local time (GMT -3 hours) on Monday 30th September 2013.

Overseas bidders who wish to submit a bid by e-mail or facsimile, should first contact Lynn Brownlee (+500) 28430 or e-mail lbrownlee@sec.gov.fk to arrange a time when the bid will be transmitted. On receipt the bid will immediately be stored securely until considered by the tender board.

Enquiries concerning the tender should be directed to the Senior Fisheries Scientist, Fisheries Department, Stanley (Tel: (+ 500) 27260), email: aarkhipkin@fisheries.gov.fk.

Thoughts on recent happenings

I WISH to make some comments on the recent happenings and decisions that have taken place over the past few months. It is difficult to know where to start but roads seem as good as any.

There is no excuse for the new Sapper Hill tarmac road not to have white lines in the middle and both sides of the road. What price is safety?

As for the MPA road, there is no reason why a local gang could not lay three to five kilometres of tarmac each season. With a good foreman/engineer, the gang would take pride in the work, and know they are making a difference.

With regard to the health policies, I cannot understand why we have to pay the first £300 if a person has to go overseas for health reasons. There are many people in the community who cannot afford this, and those people should not have to pay. MST is another form of indirect taxation which MLAs should have abolished in this year's budget. With a surplus of over three hundred million pounds, there is no need to have or introduce any form of indirect taxation.

Is it true that the Falkland Islands Tourist Board has purchased a large quantity of gifts for sale to tourists? This is in direct competition to those businesses in the private sector who have strived and invested their own money. As FITB are virtually fully funded by FIG this should be stopped.

As for the new Deep Water Port, the costs are starting to escalate. Whilst we do need a new port in the near future it could be carried out in a number of stages, or we could allocate some land to a major oil company or consortium and let them get on with it.

Talking about jetties, the Public Jetty is also going to cost more than the one million stated. I wonder who is going to pay for the mistakes that have recently occurred, FIG or the contractor. I am still not really sure if this work was ever put out to tender. Perhaps someone can let me know when, or if, the tender was advertised?

I have not yet had an opportunity to read the Regeneris Report but from my seven years of living and working in Aberdeen during the exploration and production stage, an oil industry will have a major impact on many aspects of our way of life. But one of my biggest concerns is to know if the oil companies who are down here have the funds, expertise and control of any environmental disaster if we have a BP Deepwater Horizon incident here.

I would like to comment again on the state of the rubbish tip and the way we deal with it. The tip is a disgrace. We continually hear how precious our environment is but we have ignored what we do with our rubbish and the environmental consequences. FIG should take the lead in this.

Lastly, I just want to say that I have been diving around the Falklands for over 33 years and produced a book three years ago which not only was a guide to diving and shipwrecks, but also a guide to the marine life. To say that there has never been a marine guide as stated in last week's Penguin News is completely wrong.

Correction to referendum report

THANK you for covering my report on the referendum in Penguin News on 28 June.

Since then, an Islander has been in contact with me to challenge my estimate from census data of 18 Argentine-born Islanders being on the electoral registers.

I am grateful for the challenge which made me realise I had made a simple, but significant error. I had mis-read the 2009 Constitution as giving the vote to all adults with Falkland Islands Status. I was wrong to say, as was quoted in your story, "it is not necessary to be a British citizen to have the vote."

I apologise to your readers for making this mistake. I have now amended my paper on the South Atlantic Council website, to correct the text and the statistics.

However, correcting the error still gives an estimate from the census of 13 Argentine-born, adult, British citizens with FIS who were referendum electors.

This figure excludes babies of Islander mothers born in Buenos Aires in the past who came to the Falklands within six months of their birth. The Islander who contacted me has now identified at least ten Argentine-born Islanders (two of whom had Chilean parents) on the electoral registers. He had not thought of them as having Argentine origins, because they are well-established members of the community.

What's the point of trial holes

OVER the years many jetties have been constructed around the Islands and of course some here in Stanley Harbour, and many of these are built on wooden or concrete piles. Furthermore these jetties seem to have stood the test of time and I understand that during their construction the piles were simply driven into the seabed using a pile-driver. Also to the best of my knowledge no trial holes were ever drilled prior to the piles being installed.

This brings to my question then why on earth are we spending lots of money to drill the trial holes on the Public Jetty rebuild?

Health scares not so scary

I HAVE had a couple of people contact me recently because they had read on the internet that fish oil capsules were potentially dangerous. This is the latest in an almost daily series of health scares in the world press, almost all without foundation.

As doctors, we have to read a number of medical journals each week and even in famous ones such as the British Medical Journal there are often humorous items such as the one last week.

"In the American Journal of Medicine last month research was published showing that during kissing, couples exchanged an average of 9ml of water, 0.7mg of protein, 0.18mg of organic compounds, 0.71mg of different fats and 0.45gm of salt. As many as one billion bacteria are involved, representing 278 different species with the associated risk of infection."

The author goes on to say:

"Despite the potential risks, I fear this common practice will continue to be practiced throughout the world"

Now who said scientists are boring!

Response to Regeneris

A FIRST look at the Regeneris Study raised the following points:

1. It would have been interesting to know what Regeneris learned from their "review of experience in other remote locations." Including what was learned from other places with 'windfall' natural resources combined with the absence of, or very limited national infrastructures, for example from the many Arabian states. This could have been very useful.

2. It was perhaps surprising that there was no mention of a Scenario '0' - a low/no risk to Falklands approach with consequent possible lower income in the first production period, ie only those investments that are beneficial to the country even if there is no oil (port, accommodation, power, telecoms etc). All other support on a temporary basis (labour/accommodation etc). The oil industry is perfectly capable and experienced in developing and producing in remote locations without local support. Much like a military operation.

This could allow a longer term master plan to develop the country in a controlled manner. Scenario '1' might remain the most favoured for economic reasons but not considering a Scenario '0' in this important work did seem questionable.

3. It would be interesting to know how oil is weighing the political risk in their business case.

Well done to fund-raising artist Kia

SUPER fund-raiser Kia Ford has raised an astonishing £362 for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. Young artist, Kia Ford decided to thank the charity for all the support they have given her family, in particular her little brother Kailand. She drew and painted pictures for family, friends, staff at the Infant and Junior School and just about anyone else she could encourage to buy her beautiful artwork.

Kia said, "I really enjoyed raising the money and doing all the paintings."

NatWest Island Games 2013

Your team and their teams

A FIFTY EIGHT strong Falklands team (including managers and coaches) competed this week at the NatWest Island Games in Bermuda along with athletes from 21 different islands from the Caribbean and sovereign nations of Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Norway, Spain, Sweden and the UK.

The Falklands competed in athletics, badminton, swimming, shooting, golf and football.

The Falklands team is surprisingly large for its population. Alderney, the smallest island in attendance with a population of around 1,900 people on their 3 sq miles, has one athlete competing in both athletics and sailing.

The largest island present is Greenland with a land mass exceeding 800,00 square miles, while the island with the largest population is the Isle of Wight with around 140,000 people.

So who have the Falklands faced over the past week?

Aland
A Swedish-speaking region of Finland that consists of an archipelago lying at the entrance of the Gulf of Bothnia in the Baltic Sea. Area: 610 sq mile. Population: 28,355

Alderney
The third largest island of the Channel Islands, and the closest to both France and the UK. Area: 3 sq miles. Population: 1,903

Cayman Islands
A British Overseas Territory located in the Caribbean Sea south of Cuba and northwest of Jamaica. Area: 102 sq miles. Population: 54,878

Faroe Islands
An island group under the sovereignty of Denmark, situated between the Norwegian Sea and the North Atlantic Ocean, approximately halfway between Norway and Iceland. Area: 540 sq miles. Population: 49,709

Froya
The westernmost municipality in Sor-Trondelag county, Norway. One of the least populated islands in the Games, Froya has brought a football team, one swimmer and a golfer. Area: 88.7 sq miles. Population: 4,314

Gibraltar
A British Overseas Territory located at the entrance of the Mediterranean. Area: 2.6 sq miles. Population: 29,752

Gotland
Sweden's largest island and the largest island in the Baltic Sea. Located about 90 km east of the Swedish mainland and about 130 km from the Baltic States. Area: 1,229 sq miles. Population: 57,221

Greenland
An autonomous country within the Kingdom of Denmark, located between the Arctic and Atlantic Oceans. With a population of just under 60,000 on some 800,000 plus square miles, it is one of the least densely populated countries in the world. Area: 836,109 sq miles. Population: 56,370

Guernsey
Guernsey, officially the Bailiwick of Guernsey, is a British Crown dependency in the English Channel off the coast of Normandy. Area: 30.1 sq miles. Population: 65,345

Beauchene Fishing was originally created in 1989 to participate in the newly formed Falkland Islands Government managed fishery. In 2003 Falkland Islanders Cheryl and Peter Roberts, on recognising the massive potential value of the rich fishing grounds within the Islands' conservation zones, purchased the company. The company has a substantial shareholding in two modern deep-sea trawlers, Baffin Bay & Igueldo, both of which fish for the critically acclaimed Patagonian Squid which was awarded the Superior Taste Award by the International Taste & Quality Institute for 2012 and 2013.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.
VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Knockout news

The semi finals of the Team Knockout will be played on August 1.

Misfits face the 3 Amigo's in Deanos Bar, and Otto's Outlaws match up against Sharpshooters in the Rose to decide who will face each other in the final planned for September 5.

Extreme winter warmer

TAPOUT XT Circuits sessions are now running at 5.30pm on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays at the FIDF Hall.

The exercise sessions, run by Colour Sergeant Trevor Law who ran the Insanity programme earlier in the year, are free and open to all willing to put themselves up for the challenge. You need a resistance band to take part in the programme, there are a limited amount provided at the FIDF hall so it is recommended you try and source your own, but there is no other equipment needed for the sessions.

Reviews of Tapout XT say it is gruelling but provides a full body workout that sculpts muscle and sheds fat with fast visible results.

Tapout XT Circuits have been designed by Mike Karpenko, a martial arts expert under the suitably peppy coined concept of 'RIPP'. Rapid Fire, Interval, Precision and Power.

There are a series of different workouts averaging around 45 minutes that, like the Insanity programme, start off exhausting and gradually increase in intensity as the weeks progress.

The sessions include plenty of explosive punching and kicking movements with strength exercises that repeat and at times modify to become more challenging to keep you engaged. The workout does thankfully include water breaks to keep you hydrated.

Dauntingly the programme does recommend that you shouldn't take up other sports on top of Tapout training as you can risk over-training your body.

Stanley Running Club hold training sessions on Saturday afternoons.

Meet at the Leisure Centre at 2pm.

Sessions are suitable for all abilities, with length and distance adjusted to suit attending runners and joggers.

All are welcome!

If so, the Policy Unit would like to hear your opinion on a living wage in the Falkland Islands.

Living wage is the minimum level of income a person feels they need, to have an acceptable standard of living.

Volunteers will be asked to attend a focus group and complete a questionnaire to identify what items they feel are a minimum requirement to provide an acceptable standard of living.

Persons who meet the criteria and complete the questionnaire will be entitled to a £20 reimbursement for their time.

All persons interested should contact the Policy Unit on telephone number 28427 or email tmay@sec.gov.fk

On the occasion of the birth of Prince George Alexander Louis of Cambridge

- Baby George leaves the hospital (right)
- The woven shawl - one of two Falklands gifts (Left)

Natural Falklands gifts for the newest Prince

GIFTS and a letter of congratulations have been sent to the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge on the occasion of the safe arrival of their baby boy Prince George Alexander Louis.

The gifts are a sheepskin naturally tanned at Hill Cove by Henry Boughton's company Woolmore and a hand woven shawl produced at Darwin by Bonita Greenland using local yarn from Swan Inlet.

The Duchess gave birth at St Mary's hospital at 4.24pm on Monday with the baby boy weighing in at a hearty 8lb 6ozs.

Her Royal Highness Queen Elizabeth II is reported to be delighted on the arrival of her great grandson who shares his name with her father, King George VI.

George and Alexander were both bookmakers' favourites, and the addition of Louis is thought to acknowledge Louis Mountbatten, uncle of Prince Philip and last viceroy of India, who was killed by the IRA in a bomb attack on his yacht.

The name choices seem to recognise links the British Royal family share with other European lines. Eighteen ruling kings of France have held the name Louis, and George is a Germanic name that is also shared with the patron Saint of England, and although there has never been a King Alexander of England or Great Britain three Scottish kings have borne the name.

Falklands gifts

Gifts with a distinctly Falklands flavour have been sent on behalf of the Legislative Assembly and the people of the Falkland Islands to welcome the newest heir to the British throne.

Fine wool producer Andrez

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge with Prince George

Short of Swan Inlet said he was proud and honoured to have his product. Blacker Swan wool sent to the Royal couple and hoped that one day he would see the baby enjoying its warm but lightweight quality.

The wool used to create the shawl was from a hogget fleece of between 17-18 micron and is a shade called Pale Maiden (the Falklands national flower) explained Andrez, who had approached the Government some time ago to see what was being considered as a gift. He donated the wool and asked Bonita to do the weaving as she had previously created high quality items from the fibre and she kindly donated her time and skill to the project, he said. The wool is spun in the UK by Andrez's joint partners and is available exclusively from the Capstan Gift Shop.

Andrez's farm is located just a short distance from Mount Pleasant military base where Prince William was part of the Search and Rescue team for six weeks in February and March 2012. "He would have flown over our flock on a regular basis," said Andrez.

Meanwhile Brand Finance Chief Executive David Haigh has been quoted as saying the new born Prince will boost Britain's economy by £521m (US$800m) over the long term, beginning with souvenirs and continuing with improved consumer sentiment.

Swimming pool fumes no problem

CONCERNS that fumes from the swimming pool renovations may be having adverse affects on the teachers and students at the Community School have been dismissed by Central Services, the Education Department and the contractor himself.

Dave Roberts and his team arrived in the Islands this week and work is already well underway to relime the Leisure Centre swimming pool with fibre glass.

On Tuesday one teacher who has a pre-existing medical condition was affected by the fumes drifting into the school, however he is back at work as are all staff, said Interim Director of Education Tom Hill.

Some students had complained that they didn't like the smell, confirmed Mr Hill, but he said PWD had taken the extra precaution of boarding and sealing up doors and so far there had not been any fumes in the school, he said on Thursday morning.

Risk assessments had been conducted and passed to the Interim Director of Health said Mr Hill, adding that all COSH (Control of Substances Hazardous to Health) procedures had been followed.

Dave Roberts who has been lining pools for some 30 years and worked in hundreds of schools and leisure centres across the UK said the volume of fumes was being monitored and were within the EU guidelines for health and safety.

The fumes are heavier than air and Mr Roberts explained that to counter this they were being extracted from the lowest part of the pool and pumped outside where it quickly disperses.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

CELEBRATIONS aside I can't help but feel a bit sorry for the Royal couple this week as what is probably one of the most emotional phases of any relationship was practically put under a microscope by the world's press. Was there really any need to camp outside the hospital for such a prolonged time? Would not the news of the birth have been adequate warning to toddle along to the hospital and await the couple's departure the next day? It's not as though she was going to open the window and yell down to them how close the contractions were getting at regular intervals.

I am not a great Royalist, but as a woman, my heart went out to the Duchess of Cambridge as she bravely stood on the hospital steps less than 24 hours after giving birth and faced a hoard of hungry press. Anyone who has gone through the wonder/horrors of giving birth will know that rather than put one self on public display so soon after the body has been so severely traumatised, the natural urge is to build a nest and selfishly guard your newborn while being treated like the first person in the world to have undergone such an ordeal.

But, I guess when you marry into the Royal family you know that such luxuries are no longer an option and while I had to grit my teeth in sympathy at every step she took to get to the car, there was no such unladylike behaviour from Kate. Looking as glamorous as ever she smiled and even chatted to the press and public – now that must have taken some doing.

Meanwhile, as I merely noted the invasion of their privacy, our Office Manager who is of a more gentle nature than I sat for an hour waiting for the hospital door to open and refused to budge even for a Government House reception and then found herself overcome with emotion when she finally laid eyes on the little bundle.

And so we have a new Prince, and we add our best wishes and hopes for not too many sleepless nights to Prince William and Kate.

Incidentally I was impressed with the choice of gifts from the Falklands. A lambskin is the nicest most natural surface for a baby to chill out on while a woven shawl made from finely spun Falklands wool is an asset for any nursery. Quality and practical.

When I saw a picture of the shawl I have to confess I thought it would also be an asset to any woman's wardrobe as a scarf or wrap. Having talked to wool producer Andrez he said there was a very similar woven scarf in the Capstan, so that's where I'm off to now. I can just see Kate and I keeping the cold out with the same scarves... once Prince George no longer has a need for his shawl of course.

Special needs support

FOR last three years around £500,000 per year has been spent by the Falkland Islands Government educating Falkland Islands' children with special educational needs in the UK. MLA Jan Cheek informed the meeting of Legislative Assembly yesterday, Thursday July 25.

She explained these were exceptional special needs cases and that the students had been sent away because, "we simply could not cater for them in the Islands."

MLA Cheek said she would be, "very happy in the future to see more facilities in the Islands, apart from anything else families should not, except in the most extreme circumstances, have to uproot themselves. Also facilities in the Islands would benefit more of the children with special needs."

MLA Cheek said the Vulnerable People's Strategy which had been worked on, had been delayed due to movement of staff, "and the fact that we need considerable input from the Social Services Department which in recent history has not been fully staffed and when it has been it has been staffed by short term locums..."

This strategy would aim to cover not only students but older people with special needs and in the long term might include sheltered workshops, working facilities and support for people living, "as independently as people can."

Concordia Bay integral part of Falklands transport structure

Concordia Bay at Saunders Island

LATEST statistics show the Workboat Services ferry Concordia Bay is, "becoming an integral and accepted part of the transport structure of the Islands," said Manager Adam Cockwell this week.

The 2012/13 statistics show that the ferry made 416 crossings with 4,212 passengers and 1,968 vehicles. This compares to the first year 2008/9 when it made 252 crossings with 2,596 passengers and 1,213 vehicles. In the following year this increased to 286 crossings and in 2010/11 353 crossings. In 2011/12 it made 371 crossings.

Mr Cockwell said: "We always said that the improvements to the Port Howard facility would result in a more reliable and regular service and that improved reliability has, I believe, led to an increased confidence in the service which means more people are prepared to use it."

He added that there had been a small increase in the number of military users, "but by far the majority are still locals from East and West."

Mr Cockwell reminded customers, "we will be carrying out our annual customer survey in the next week or so and so account holders can expect to receive a questionnaire in the post soon."

Deputy Speaker

RICHARD Cockwell was elected as Deputy Speaker of the House at the meeting of the Legislative Assembly on Thursday July 25. Speaker of the House is Mr Keith Biles.

First leg of the journey for lads sailing south

TWO Falklands lads Dylan Stephenson (20) and Tom Elsby (20) arrived in Spain on Wednesday on the first leg of their sailing trip to the Falklands from Dartmouth in England.

Dylan (son of Katrina and Zachary Stephenson) purchased the vessel some months ago. Zachary told Penguin News.

Because of the cost of shipping he decided the only way to get his 30ft Van de Stadt, Arombai, to the Falklands was to sail it.

Former Sullivan Shipping Bowman Dylan learned to sail with his Dad and has also had some experience sailing from Uruguay to the Falklands on a charter yacht and to West Falklands.

Six weeks ago Zachary travelled to the UK to help Dylan repair Arombai. He said: "We spent about three weeks doing a lot of major repairs, this included new rigging, repairing the hull and topside, rewiring the entire vessel and building the doghouse."

Zachary confirmed Dylan and Tom (son of Drs Barry Elsby and Bernadette Paver) were safely in La Coruna this week and had been accompanied by experienced sailor and friend Dave Roberts, who will leave Arombai in Spain. Dave was not crewing said Zachary, just very kindly offering a bit of advice and checking they were doing OK.

The journey from Spain to Montevideo in Uruguay should involve good weather, "nothing too dangerous," explained Zachary. From Uruguay to the Falklands they might decide to have further assistance as the weather in this region, "can be a bit miserable."

The boys are expected back in the Falklands at the end of October/early November, as they're not in any rush, said Zachary.

It will be important, however, for them to beat the September hurricane season in Florida.

From La Coruna they will either go straight to the Canaries or coast hop down past Gibraltar.

According to a recent post on their blog Zachary said they experienced light winds on their way to Spain, "which will only get lighter as they cross the Bay of Biscay, they have been forced to motor sail, but they are still making 5kts.

"No problems apart from the small leak on the shaft. They had a couple of waves that made their way into the cockpit, but all in all Arombai is performing well and Dylan is very happy with her."

They had also tried their hand at fishing but kept breaking the line so were reduced to using electrical wire as a hook, he said.

Because of this there may be a trace of the fumes in the area of the Leisure Centre, said Mr Roberts. He expects the fibre glassing to take three to four weeks and work was progressing well he said.

Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher said ExCo had on Wednesday approved the refurbishment of the wet side changing rooms and this combined with earlier works on the main sports hall and squash court would hopefully create an environment that would serve peoples' needs and of which they could be proud of. "Our ambition is for the Leisure Centre to continue to be at the heart of the community, somewhere people can come to take part in sport and other recreational activities or simply meet friends and relax in a clean, well maintained and well managed and staffed environment," said Mr Fletcher.

Condolences to Faroe Islands

TWO Faroe Islanders returning home from the Island Games have been killed in a car accident.

A spokesperson for the Falklands Government said: "Their loss has resounded through other island nations."

Hogni Carlsson will be remembered by the Falklands team and other spectators as he cheered on his two daughters to win several badminton medals. Vilhjalmur Gregoriussen was chairman of the Faroese Badminton association, part of an enthusiastic and competitive team participating this year.

A letter of condolence has been sent to the Prime Minister of Denmark and the Mayor of Torshavn, Faroe Islands. The thoughts and deepest sympathies of all Falkland Islanders are with their family and friends at this sad time.

Marathon man

ULTRA-MARATHON runner Corporal Joe Broadbent began his 235km challenge to run across the Falklands for charity on Monday and is on schedule to finish at Cape Pembroke today.

Starting at Byron Heights, Cpl Broadbent has been averaging 50km a day and completed the distance from Hill Cove to Port Howard on Tuesday in 5.5 hours.

He said the most challenging part had been the hills, which caused him to walk at times, and he was feeling tired before he started to run from San Carlos to Goose Green on Wednesday.

The group went past MPA at 11.30am yesterday and were last reported to be going strong towards Fitzroy Ridge despite strong winds. They've been joined by some fresh pace runners and are on course for tomorrow.

The event is raising money for the FrajaEllieAppeal. See facebook.com/FrajaEllieAppeal

Conservation's stylish night

IT'S almost time to dig out dinner suits and stiletto heels and flaunt those fancy numbers at the Falklands Conservation Charity Ball scheduled for Friday September 27.

Sponsored by Consolidated Fisheries Limited (CFL) the ball is a relaxing and stylish evening offering the opportunity to bid on exclusive prizes donated by local and international businesses and artists.

Beginning at 7.30pm guests will be welcomed by a classical ensemble performed by Falkland Islands Community School music students at a champagne reception sponsored by FIC.

This will be followed by a two course meal provided by the Malvina House Hotel and complimentary wine courtesy of the Seafish Chandlery.

After the meal, guests will have the chance to bid on a variety of auction prizes including the star prize, a South Georgia and Antarctica cruise donated by

One Ocean. Other prizes include exquisite dining experiences provided by Government House and the Malvina House Hotel, international flights contributed by Noble Energy, exceptional artwork donated by Grizelda Cockwell, Ben Cockwell, Mandy Shepherd, Bill and Vicky Chater, Stacey McKay, Jess McPhee and students at FICS and an exclusive selection of unique copies of Captain Fitzroy's 19th century charts from his voyage to the Falkland Islands.

These are the only copies in existence and were donated by the UK Hydrographic Office. The auction aims to raise significant funds to support the continued commitment to the conservation and sustainability of the wildlife and environment of the Falkland Islands.

The Pushers will play later and there will be a licensed bar serving beer, spirits, wine, champagne and cocktails.

Organiser Charlie O'Horo said: "The generosity of local businesses has been overwhelming.

"All at Falklands Conservation are very grateful to CFL for their continued committed support and sponsorship, and I would like to thank all sponsors and donors aforementioned and extend a special thank you to SAAS, Arch Henderson, Sea Lion Lodge, Bleaker Island, Bitter Sweet and the Waterfront Hotel for their generous contributions."

Tickets are priced at £45 per person and reservations will be taken from 9am on Monday September 2 from the Falklands Conservation office, Tel: 22247 or email: falklandsconservation_charityball@outlook.com

No reservations will be made before this time. Tables will be available to seat six guests and only one table per person can be reserved.

Auction lots will be on exhibition at Bitter Sweet and can be viewed online at <http://www.falklandsconservation.com/news> from Thursday, September 12.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE week began with a meeting to welcome the new Director of Health and Medical Services followed by the regular meeting of the Health and Medical Services Committee. Among the items discussed in the open session was the difficulty in recruitment of professional staff to provide continuity of cover of essential roles in the Department.

In preparation for the Legislative Assembly meeting on Thursday I have been combining information from several sources for the two questions that come to me for oral answer at the meeting. One of the sets of responses needs fairly heavy editing in order to preserve the anonymity of individuals and their families. People, especially short term residents, frequently fail to realise how easily just a few seemingly innocuous clues can allow confidentiality to be breached. I know some are happy to share their lives on the internet but FIG has a responsibility to uphold confidentiality in its dealings with members of the public.

MLAs did not quite outnumber their audience at this month's public meeting but it was a close thing. Obviously some of the regulars who come along to keep us on our toes are overseas at this time of year but at least most of us show willing and turn up for anyone to question on any subject. I try to plan my time to be available for most of the meetings and it is to be hoped that with the proposed new rules will make the next Assembly all able to turn up if they are in the Islands.

Our Camp visits were victims of the weather last week but have been rescheduled for August when the greatest number of members will be available. Once members are full time, Camp constituents will be able to expect much more time to be spent visiting in the constituency by their representatives as time is built into the proposed weekly timetable. Of course how that time is spent is a matter for the next Assembly but once members are properly paid full time public expectation of MLA availability will be even greater than it is now.

Public Meeting - Monday July 22

MLA responds to growth on investments query

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Roger Edwards explained at a public meeting on Monday that it was not possible to provide a meaningful response to the question: "What is the average return on overseas investments for the Falkland Islands Government over the last five years?" as presented, due to the number of variables involved.

MLA Edwards said that firstly significant sums of money are invested into, and withdrawn from each of the funds on an on-going basis which means there is not a consistent level of base investment to calculate a meaningful average return over the period.

He said also the Falkland Islands Government, "has money invested in 10 separate investment funds which support eight portfolios. Each of these portfolios includes a different ratio of cash, debt and equity dependent on the purpose of the fund, and this ratio influences how the portfolios respond to the market in terms of return. If the performance on these funds was combined it would be skewed by the different nature of the funds."

He explained that it was however possible to look at performance in terms of the fund growth. He noted that the recent growth data expressed as percentage of fund value to the third quarter of financial year 2013 for each fund in turn is as follows:

Income Fund (Cash Fund)

- One year growth 0%
- Three year growth 2%
- Growth since inception (1998) 76%

Newton Growth Fund (Balanced Fund)

- One year growth 15%
- Three year growth 28%
- Growth since inception (1998) 176%

Sarasin Growth Fund (Balanced Fund)

- One year growth 14%
- Growth since inception (2011) 14%

Currency Fund (Cash Fund)

- One year growth 0%
- Three year growth 2%
- Growth since inception (1998) 73%

Capital Equalisation Fund (Bonds)

- One year growth 3%
- Three year growth 13%
- Growth since inception (1998) 116%

Pensions Old Scheme Fund (Bonds)

- One year growth 11%
- Three year growth 40%
- Growth since inception (2001) 128%

Pensions Equalisation Fund (Balanced)

- One year growth 15%
- Growth since inception (2011) 15%

Insurance Fund (Bonds)

- One year growth 6%
- Growth since inception (2011) 18%

Each quarter the Treasury prepares a report which details the investment performance and values for each of the Government's investment portfolios. This report is presented to the Standing Finance Committee. The public can access this information by attending the Standing Finance Committee Meeting or by requesting the Standing Finance Committee papers from the Treasury via the Treasury General email address which is: tgeneral@sec.gov.fk

The next Standing Finance Committee meeting where this information will be presented will be on Thursday August 22 at 8am in the Liberation Room, Secretariat Building. The investment report presented at that time will be for the period to 30 June 2013.

Falklands GDP

THE provisional estimate of real GDP for the Islands in 2010 was £130m.

MLA Edwards said: "Currently no forecasts of GDP are produced due to limitations of data collection. It is intended that this will be rectified within the next 12 months with GDP data to be brought fully up-to-date, and new and improved data collection methods introduced to enable trends to be forecast and for updates to be published more frequently."

Waste oil report

A REPORT, the result of an investigation into the dumping of waste oil in Mary Hill Quarry by the Public Works Department should be available to the public next week it was confirmed at Monday's public meeting.

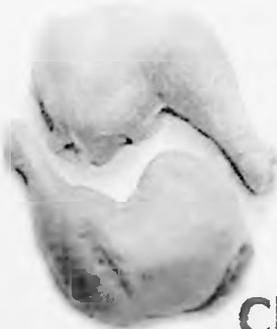

MLAs also reassured attendees that PWD was looking at in-house procedures so that it would not happen again.

Jetty update

A TEN per cent contingency fund will cover the cost of exploratory drilling following problems that were encountered with the extending of the public jetty. MLA Cheek noted, however, that the ten per cent might not cover the cost of the result of that drilling. MLA Sawle noted that a good quality jetty was vital for Falklands tourism.

Coping with college 8,000 miles from home... at just 15 years old

MOVING away from home for the first time at any age is a daunting prospect, but what about when you are a 15 or 16 year-old who has just left school and about to leave family and friends to move half way across the world?

Jessica McPhee, now 16 is one such student who has just completed her first year studying Media, Film and Photography and here she shares her experiences...

FOR many, if not most Falklands students, the decision to move to a different city in a new country, regardless of whether or not you go to Winchester or Chichester in England or somewhere else in the world like New Zealand, is a terrifying one.

Some students have never left the Islands before and factors such as this, combined with the fear of experiencing extreme homesickness, not being able to fit in and make new friends (not only with the people you live with but with the people on your courses as well), adapting to a strange new culture (how on earth do you use public transport?), and being almost completely independent at such a young age all affect this decision. Many people in the UK struggle with moving out of their parents' house for university and they definitely wouldn't be able to cope with moving 8,000 miles away like we do.

I was anxious about all of these things when I moved to England last August to start my A-levels at Chichester College when I was 15. Fortunately for me, I already had a handful of friends in Chichester who were able to show me around and teach me simple things like how to get the bus (admittedly, I clung to them for the first few weeks of college until I slowly started to interact with the people on my courses and in my halls of residence) and I had been to the UK on multiple occasions, so it wasn't as much of a culture shock for me.

Personally, I found it easier to get on with other international students who were also living away from home than the people on my courses as we were all in the same boat. I was also lucky enough not to feel homesick at all during my first year away at college; probably because I was constantly busy.

I was originally doing four A-levels (I'm now only doing three) which took up a great deal of time, my social life was manic and I was constantly going places and seeing new things.

The homesickness does get easier to deal with the longer you are away too.

Chichester is a great place to be a student. You are literally a five to ten minutes walk away from everything, the train station, the bus station, the town centre and Chi Gate (where the cinema is) and it's also right next door to another hall of residence, Stockbridge. It only takes about an hour to get to Southampton and Brighton, even less to get to Portsmouth and just over an hour and a half to get to London.

There is such an array of courses to choose from at Chichester too. I had never studied any of the subjects before going to college that I am now undertaking.

Even though life in England is not everybody's cup of tea, it is definitely worth it, even if you only want to go away for two years and come straight back home. You get to see and do so many things that you could never do in the Falklands.

I'm constantly going to gigs in London and you also get to go on many trips while at college. I have already been to the BBC and Warner Bros Studio and I'm going on a trip to London again with one of my courses in September/October. If you can get the money together there is a trip to Kenya for a few weeks in the (UK) summer to help a community there. Some Islanders have also travelled to Spain and France.

Going to college in Chichester is the best decision I've made and I can't wait to get back in August.

Give us two minutes...

James Muirhead

1. What is your most embarrassing moment?

The time I passed out in the Houses of Parliament during a college trip and was caught – mid collapse – by my local MP. My Mum had to apologise to him in Church on the Sunday

2. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be?

I would love to set up a boat tour company that was able to visit all the various shipwrecks and hulks that surround the Falklands. Each ship has a story and with so many here in the Islands it would be amazing to take people out and see historic vessels that had been ravaged by time and the elements rather than restored as museum pieces

3. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

Oversharing on Facebook. Unless it's followed by some really interesting information, 'Going to bed...' is never an acceptable Facebook status

4. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

Boris Johnson. Londoners seem to like him?

5. What is your favourite TV programme (and why)?

The Wire. More than a cop procedural it's a damning indictment on life in parts of inner city America and the institutions and organisations that ensnare people, producing and perpetuating destructive patterns of behaviour. I've not seen anything on television that has even come close

7. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it?

The Offspring - Pretty Fly for a White Guy. As both my friend and I - neither of whom can speak a word of Spanish - successfully managed to negotiate a taxi fare in Lima by remembering the track's lyrics. "Un, dos, tres, cuatro, cinco, cinco, seis..."

James is a second year History PhD student with the University of Bristol working in collaboration with the SS Great Britain Trust. He arrived on July 6, with support from the AHRC and the University and is investigating the history of the GB in the Falkland Islands. He currently lives in Bristol but originally come from Oakdale, South Wales also home to the Manic Street Preachers and boxer Joe Calzaghe.

Poor salaries mean staff shortages at KEMH

"IT'S no secret that the reason we don't get staff is because we don't pay them enough," Interim Director of Health Services Derek Muhl reported to the Health and Medical Services Committee on Monday July 22.

In a report produced for consideration by the Standing Finance Committee he explained that government money and time and quality of service was being lost because advertised positions for doctors and nurses were not being filled causing temporary and expensive locum cover to be sought, which he described as an "unsatisfactory" solution.

The committee agreed that more money would probably be saved by making salaries more attractive for key positions.

"No doctor is going to come here if they can earn thousands more elsewhere," said Mr Muhl, adding that to keep the salaries in line with what teachers and police earn was unrealistic.

He said the only comparative salary figures that government needs to consider is what the NHS is paying.

Both the Health and Social Services and the Human Resources Departments are currently working together to improve the planning around the arrival and departure of staff, particularly contract officers, and intend to minimise the need to recruit temporary locum staff. The procedures around staff leave and absences due to training within the Directorate, which sometimes create a requirement for locum staff, are also being reviewed.

Mr Muhl said that a lot of blame had been unfairly placed on Human Resources. "We have not been good at pre-empting contract decisions and HR have been carrying a lot of the blame," adding that there had been, "a whole raft of delays to advertising positions, but it is entirely avoidable."

"We need to get our act together and we need to sort out pay for doctors and nurses."

Also in a report to the committee he announced that Hilary Rowland, the new Director of Health and Social Services, arrived in the Islands on July 15.

There is now a handover period with the Interim Director who will be leaving the Islands on August 6.

Janette Vincent will also continue to be the Acting Hospital Manager, while Nikki Murphy's appointment as the Team Leader of Social Services has been confirmed. She is expected to arrive in the Falklands on September 22.

Glyn Hockney of Social Services also left on July 19 and Donna Ryan was appointed as a locum from July 15. Kelly Wild, physiotherapist, commenced work on a casual basis on July 17.

He also informed the committee that in May, only 19 patients were referred for treatments overseas in comparison to 23 in May of last year.

He said budgets had been issued for the new financial year, although a financial plan for 2013/14 had not been finalised and was still in development.

There will be an array of specialists visiting this year, including a consultant obstetrician/gynaecologist in August, a child psychologist, podiatrist and orthopaedic surgeon in September, a consultant microbiologist and maxillo-facial consultant in October. A consultant ophthalmologist and a dermatologist and tissue viability nurse are expected to visit the Islands in the near future, but they are still to be confirmed.

The Health and Medical Services Committee were asked to consider publicising the changes to the Medical Treatment Overseas Policy that was reviewed in 2012 and discussed at Executive Council in 2013. It was also suggested that the revised policy become effective from September 1, 2013.

Alejandro Betts misrepresents

MR Alejandro Betts spoke on 20 June this year at the UN Special Committee on Decolonisation, as a petitioner on the "Falklands (Malvinas) Question." It has been brought to my attention that his speech included a highly distorted account of my visit to the Islands to observe the referendum on behalf of the South Atlantic Council. I would like to put on the record my rejection of his misrepresentation of my situation and my political analysis, in order to make false propaganda from these events.

Mr Betts did not mention my name and I am from City University, which is not part of the University of London, but he can only have meant me, when he referred to an "Emeritus Professor of Global Politics" being in the Falklands in March this year. I was not summoned/called (convocado) to Stanley as a referendum observer. I took the initiative to go to the Islands and used my own research resources to fund my travel, because I wanted to undertake independent analysis of the politics of the referendum.

I also wanted to engage in debate with Islanders about the international law and politics of decolonisation issues at the United Nations. The South Atlantic Council has worked since late 1983 to promote understanding between British people, the Argentines and Islanders, in order to achieve a peaceful settlement of the dispute acceptable to all three parties. This has caused some Islanders to be suspicious and hostile towards our ideas. Nevertheless, I addressed a public meeting and responded to a long session of vigorous questions. I was treated courteously throughout this meeting and indeed throughout my time in the Islands.

It is totally unreasonable for Mr Betts to sneer and to imply that I was naive to believe I was in "a democratic society that allows diversity of thought." I was completely free at all times to say whatever I wished to say, including making strong challenges to some ideas that are firmly established in Falklands politics. I was subject to criticism and at times it was vigorous criticism, but my critics also welcomed the fact I had visited the Islands. Nobody in the Falkland Islands Government nor any individual Islanders remotely suggested I had "committed the unpardonable error of speaking frankly."

Mr Betts distorted my analysis of the international law and politics of self-determination. I did say the referendum would not be accepted as a formal, "act of self-determination," but only because the ballot paper did not offer a choice from the internationally recognised options for decolonisation, namely independence, integration or "free association" with another country, or any other political status of self-government, "freely determined by a people." I also said the referendum was a strong political statement of the desire by the people of the Falklands to maintain their right to self-determination. Most important of all, I said, "I have no doubt that in international law the Falkland Islanders have the right to self-determination." There is no legal basis to say the Argentine sovereignty claim overrides this democratic right.

Mr Betts was correct to say my credentials as an official referendum observer for the SAC were cancelled the day after I arrived in the Islands. I had not appreciated before I arrived that, if I wanted the full privileges of access to observe the electoral administration, mobile polling and the count, I would have to operate in the same manner as the international team of observers. This required making a commitment to abide by the Code of Conduct for International Election Observers, as endorsed by the United Nations in 2009. The Code specifies observers, "must not express or exhibit any bias or preference in relation to ... referenda issues."

However, the cancellation of my credentials was not a unilateral act by the Attorney-General. I was given the choice of remaining an official observer, if I postponed my public meeting until the day after the referendum count. It was my own decision that I wished to go ahead with the meeting at the arranged time, two days before the voting started. I had not intended to and I did not at any time, before or after the referendum, make any direct comment on whether Islanders should vote Yes or No in the referendum. On reflection, I understand why others felt my discussion of Overseas Territory status might indirectly imply support for a No vote, even though that was not my intention. At the time, I regretted the Attorney-General's decision that my arguments were incompatible with the role of being a strictly impartial observer, but I respected the decision as an example of the scrupulous approach adopted by the FIG to the administration of the referendum. At no point did anybody attempt to prevent my public meeting going ahead. The only question was when it should be held.

It becomes obvious why Mr Betts sought to misrepresent these events, when he goes on to compare what happened to me to "pressures [he] suffered for having investigated independently the true history of the land where [he] was born."

Mr Betts sustains his position in Argentina on the basis of two false claims.

Firstly, he did not start studying Falklands history in 1976 nor conclude after two years of research that, "Argentina had absolute rights over the island territory" (Clarín, "Un malvinense contra Inglaterra", 22 June 2011). On 18 May 1978, Mr Betts sent a letter to a local mimeographed news sheet, the Falkland Islands Times, strongly protesting at what he saw as a weak and ineffective response by the British government to the establishment of a small Argentine base on Thule. This was not the action of somebody who had concluded the South Atlantic islands were Argentine.

Secondly, Mr Betts did not leave the Falkland because of any political pressures and he was not expelled from the Falklands. He had more personal reasons. He left his second wife and children in the Islands in January 1982, when he developed a relationship with a young woman who worked with him in the Stanley office of the Argentine airline, LADE. He accompanied her to Argentina, after the Argentine defeat in June 1982.

I object to my activities being misrepresented to sustain Mr Betts misrepresentation of his own background.

New town on West

ALL this talk about oil these days just makes me switch off the radio. Everything else seems to have been forgotten

I have a plan for the oil related subject - build a new town on the West at Fox Bay for the oil people and anyone else that is involved. The ferry service works really well and could be run every day of the week if there was a larger population on the West.

The SAAS boat could call into port to deliver cargo and collect wool and there could be a school and small hospital and even a small abattoir to supply those living over there.

The tourist ships could call as well and this would give people on the West the chance to make extra money as tour guides. Our town on the East is top heavy now.

If the population grows much bigger we are going to need new schools and a larger hospital. The power generators won't cope, water will be a major problem and congestion on the roads, already a problem, will just get worse. As for roads outside of town - what roads?

On a final note, I don't want to see oil extraction spoil or change our way of life. This is already happening at too fast a pace; we don't need change in the Camp way of life. We that live on the land know how to look after it and we should be listened to.

Many of our traditional ways are dying and our younger generation who choose to live in Camp should be allowed to practice some of the old ways.

Long delay retrograde step

I WOULD like to thank the Interim Director of Health and Medical Services, Derek Muhl, for his answers to the questions on medical treatment overseas published in last week's Penguin News. I submitted those questions on behalf of the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust on 27 May. Seven weeks to get an answer on routine procedures seems a long time.

Under the old structure of government there were performance measures to answer correspondence within a shorter time frame than that. There are no doubt many pressures on the working time of officers but such a long delay appears to be a retrograde step in the wake of all the improvements we are privileged to enjoy under the new structure.

A stroll down memory lane

A FLU epidemic hits the islands in late July. Infant and Junior School head teacher, Jean Smith, says that the children have been going down "like ninepins." At the West Store, the same phrase is used by Richard Neal to describe how the virus had hit his staff.

Rene Rowlands is, pleasantly surprised to receive a personal invitation from the International Badminton Federation to attend the pan-American administrators' course in Guatemala. Mrs Rowlands was one of the founding members of the Stanley Badminton Club in 1950 and still enjoys the occasional game. The federation's invitation coincided with the Islands Games and Mrs Rowlands was able to travel to the Isle of Wight to watch the last badminton matches of the tournament. While in Guatemala she was able to attend the daily meetings and all of the pan-American countries, with the exception of the USA and Chile, were in attendance.

The UK and Argentina agree to reduce the distance from the coasts of the Falklands and Argentina at which military manoeuvres must be notified from 80 miles to 55.

Argentine veterans of the 1982 war seek permission to visit the graves of their fallen comrades in the Falklands. Roberto Piccardi, a Falklands veteran and spokesman for the group said: "It is very important for us to visit the Islands to commemorate our dead soldiers, if only for 10 minutes – to pray, to have some flowers put down, to commemorate them because most veterans didn't have to opportunity to do that." The delegates wish to remain above politics, said Mr Piccardi adding: "The first thing is what we feel inside, not what we feel to the flag." Cllr Terry Peck tells The Daily Telegraph that Islanders would strongly resist a visit by veterans. "We have always left the position open for the Argentine government to repatriate their dead, and they are continually using ruses like this to gain a foothold. They are using this as an emotive issue to get international condemnation of the Falklands' people," he states.

Director of Fisheries, John Barton confirms that fishing revenues are up within the financial year. He said revenue totalled £26.4 millions, which is £3.6 million more than originally estimated.

Tributes were paid in the UK and in the Falklands islands to a hero of the 1982 conflict who drowned while attempting to rescue his wife and child in a boating tragedy while on holiday in Cyprus. Peter Rainey (49), a helicopter pilot and night goggles expert, saw his wife and son thrown from a dinghy in rough seas from the beach. He attempted to rescue them but eventually died along with his wife, his son, Callum, survived.

The Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association (FIOGA) announces the final team for the next Commonwealth Youth Games in October 2008. Leading the team to Pune in India will be Steve Dent, Vice Chair of FIOGA – this will be his second Commonwealth Games as Team Manager.

The Shooting Team Manager will be Nevin Middleton, while Beth Reid will be Shotgun Manager, Bono McKay (15) will compete in the Shotgun events and Murray Middleton (14) in Pistol. Mark Fold (from the UK) will be the Badminton Team Manager and Julian Barton (15), Aidan Smith (16) and Drew Robertson (16) will be competing. The association thanks the Falkland Islands Company, Caribbean and Sun Alliance and Falkland Islands Holdings as well as the Commonwealth Games Federation and the Delhi 2010 Organising Committee for their generous financial support of the team to date.

A proposal for the introduction of a Medical Services Levy/Employment Tax is been rejected by Executive Council. The proposal was modelled on the old Medical Services Levy (MSL) to raise revenue by way of a tax on employers and employees but was not linked directly to funding for the health service. Given that government officers are now working on both a tax and a health service cost and funding review, ExCo decided they should await the outcome of those reviews before deciding upon the best way forward.

The government is to engage consultants to advise on how to deal with the sunken trawler Ocean 8. A paper summarising the current status and options for how to deal with the Ocean 8 is considered by Executive Council. Cllr Andrea Clausen says she and her colleagues feel they need better technical advice on the likelihood of future leaks from the plugged vessel, potential pollution, and salvage options for the oil and vessel.

Georgia Seafood research support for Toothfish sustainability

GEORGIA Seafood is sponsoring pioneering research into the reproductive behaviour of the Patagonian Toothfish in South Georgia.

Director of Georgia Seafood Stuart Wallace explained that in a market that demands sustainability it is important to the company that they support the science underpinning that aim.

With this in mind he approached Dr Paul Brickle of the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI) to identify a knowledge gap they could assist in, which in turn has created an exciting opportunity through Aberdeen University for a PhD student to research the reproductive conditions and cycle of the elusive fish.

The research is important as there is little known about the reproductive behaviour of Toothfish: "the dynamics of spawning fish haven't been looked at since the 80s," said Dr Brickle.

This is a crucial stage in the life cycle of the highly valued Toothfish and a lot is still unknown. It is clear the ocean environment is a causative factor, with some fish choosing to reabsorb their eggs should the conditions not be optimum for spawn survival.

"This reabsorbing wastes the energy of the fish," said Dr Brickle, adding that the number of eggs spawned, and the survival rate of those spawned, affect the recruitment of young coming into the cycle.

If more is known of what makes ideal breeding conditions, better predictions on fish stock and young, progressing as recruits to the reproductive cycle could be made said Dr Brickle.

The research will benefit science and ultimately give the industry a better understanding into the handling and monitoring of stock by providing insight into the core fishery of the region said Mr Wallace. A sentiment reinforced by Chief Executive and Director of Fisheries for the Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, Martin Collins, who agreed the project would, "provide valuable data to assist in our management of Patagonian toothfish in South Georgia waters and help ensure the long-term sustainability of the fishery."

The Georgia Seafood sponsorship will have excellent travel opportunities and the student will be collaborating with scientists from British Antarctic Survey (BAS), Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science (CE-FAS), and SAERI for the pioneering research. The data collected will have worldwide significance said Dr Brickle, who added that though the oceanography of the region is different, the transferable information is valuable to our fishery too.

Dr Tara Marshall, Senior Lecturer at the School of Biological Sciences, University of Aberdeen said: "The research questions posed by the project are central to understanding why there are large fluctuations in productivity of Toothfish.

"Consequently the project will deliver biological and ecological knowledge essential for developing effective strategies for sustainable management. Examining the links between the environment and reproduction are of particular interest given that the South Georgia ecosystem is characterised by highly variable oceanographic conditions."

Bronze for Falklands football

THE Falklands only medal winners at the NatWest Island Games, the Falkland Islands Football team will return satisfied with their two wins over the Island of Froya and the added prestige of carrying home the Small Islands Cup.

The team picked up the bronze medal with a 6-0 defeat over the Norwegian Island last Thursday evening, quite a pick-me-up after losing to Bermuda (8-0) and Greenland (9-0). Falklands goal scorers in the battle for the bronze were D Clarke, A Balladares, G Elbakidze (2), M Clarke and young Scott Thain in his overseas debut for the Falklands.

The Small Islands Cup was introduced to the Island Games by Patrick Watts who said he persuaded, the 24 members islands that the smaller islands (populations of 10,000 or less) needed an extra incentive when sending football teams to a Games.

"They finally relented and allowed me to provide a cup for the first time at the 2009 Games in Aland," Patrick told Penguin News.

Patrick donates the cup each Games, "so a new cup is given each time, and I also give 18 medals for each winning player."

The six 'small' islands are Froya, Hitra, St. Helena, Alderney, Sark and the Falklands.

These islands also compete for the Small Islands Certificates which are awarded to islands/individuals as gold, silver and bronze provided there are three islands competing (gold/silver) and four islands (gold/silver/bronze). Accordingly the Falklands (1079) won the silver in golf as their overall score was lower than Alderney's 1052 which earned them the gold certificate. St Helena was the third island competing in golf.

Glenn Ross won the Silver Certificate in the Individual with a score of 344 but was behind Peter Cunningham of Alderney who always wins the Gold Certificate.

Patrick also gives the 'Performance of Merit' which was awarded to Sorrel Pompert-Robertson who broke Claire Kilmartin's Falklands record of 41.77 seconds (2001) in the 50m Breaststroke with a time of 40.13.

Unfortunately the Islands half marathon runner Rex Eagle was unable to complete the Half-Marathon due to collapsing around the five miles mark.

He was taken by ambulance to a medical tent and placed on a drip, where he regained consciousness. Ten of the 33 men who started the Half-Marathon did not complete the course due to the intense heat and humidity.

Patrick explained that similarly nine of the 18 women failed to finish such were the difficult conditions. "It makes the Faroe's lady athlete Valborg Heinesen's time of 1 hour 25.37 secs even more remarkable and her winning time would have placed her 11th in the Mens race," he said.

She also won the 10,000m and only took up serious running two years ago.

Patrick added: "Having attended 11 Island Games I have never seen so many athletes cross the line in such a distressed condition and several were taken away on stretchers for further medical attention. Personally I think that the event should have been scheduled for 6.00 in the morning and not 6.30 in the evening."

Corrections to last week's PN article:

The Falklands lost the inaugural Small Islands Cup game against Froya at the 2009 Games in Aland and not in the Isle of Wight as stated. In the 2011 Games the Falklands beat Alderney 3-0 to win the Cup.

The report also stated, 'Laura Minto and Anastasia Markina's wins over IOW players in the singles matches'. It should be made clear that they both beat the same girl, namely Sophie Baggott.

The beautiful and the damned Sue Whitley Memorial Exhibition 2013

COLOUR and character epitomised this year's Community School submissions to the 2013 Sue Whitley Memorial Exhibition held on July 21-22 in the school street.

Macabre and colourful dead papier-mâché heads were offset by artwork influenced by the masters, skilful wood and metal work and mouth watering attractive decorated cakes and cookies.

This year's Spinning Wheel Trophy was won by Hazel Fowmes' cleverly constructed fleece jacket with Gareth McGhie taking first place in Design Technology with a wooden box and Tonisha Goodwin first place in FICS Craft with a leather topped stool.

The Falkland Islands Landscape Prize was won by Daphne Gomez Reid (see right) while Pilar Castro claimed The Endeavour Prize. Mr and Mrs Malcolm Jackson present the Stanley Bakery Prizes and in Year 7 (Decorated Cookies) Devni Peramuugamage was the star baker. Chloe Knipe showed her decorating skills winning Year 8 Cakes and Michaela Clifford was first in Year 9 Bread.

The Community School exhibition and that held by the Infant Junior School and Camp Education in late June commemorates the memory of art teacher Susan Whitley killed in the 1982 war.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800 Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system: Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

Billings correct at time of going to press but subject to change until actual transmission. Tune into BFBS Radio/Television for up-dates.

Win for Coyotes but Penguins have the trophy

COYOTES met Blackhawks after a game between Flyers and Hurricanes was cancelled on Tuesday evening.

Karl Nightingale was first on the scoreboard with a solo effort down the middle of the gym hall but the score was quickly drawn level again by Coyotes' David Hewitt. Coyotes were shooting furiously and testing goalie Marcus Morrison (who was standing in for Blackhawks' regular goalie) to his limits. Hawk's were getting good runs in but couldn't get past Coyotes defence. Blackhawks' Claudia Blanco was sent off for the final two minutes of the first half for purposefully hooking David's legs after he had played the ball and the half ended one all.

Coyotes were still on the attack in the second half. Blackhawks had another outfield player sent off for two minutes after Marcus slammed Coyotes' Teslyn Barkman down by catching her stick. David found another goal for Coyotes but Karl came back with an equaliser for Blackhawks. David secured his hat-trick and then Karl followed suit again. With 10 minutes left to play, and after a hefty barrage of shots at a tiring goalie, Luis Qumto secured two goals for Coyotes. The game looked decided however, proving it's not over until the buzzer goes. Jordan Phillips shot in a goal for Hawk's in the final second of the match. Final score Blackhawks 4, Coyotes 5.

Hurricanes and Panthers have not had enough players showing for their matches lately, forcing remaining players to concede, and a number of matches to be cancelled. It's hoped the issues with the teams will be addressed to allow the remaining teams and players to still enjoy the game.

The Russell Smith Memorial Trophy, also known as the 'Sure League' after its sponsors, comes to an end next week. Winners of the trophy this year are Penguins after their successful winning streak of 12 games.

Team Captain Marcus Morrison said his team had performed fantastic so far, having won 16 games consecutively and with only one loss in the whole season.

Penguins won the League Trophy last year and Marcus said he is especially pleased they won it this year with three games still left to play, and added the team are looking forward to competing for a third consecutive win of the Stanley Cup.

"Club records also being smashed was a bonus and has been down to the team spirit and their positive attitude in each game."

"The goals for and against in the league really show how attack minded and strong in defensive we have been this season, the outfield players have really made my life a lot easier in goal I can tell you," said Marcus.

A NOD to the Rosellas this week. The ladies took one of the top teams in the Darts League, Sharpshooters, and whacked four legs off them. Teresa took three legs off Sharpshooter David Crowie after Natalie Smith kicked off the match by giving the Sharpshooters "a bit of a shock" when she claimed the first leg of Darren Plato, said fellow Rosella Sharon Jaffray. Unfortunately the rest of the ladies could not match the teams' form and eventually they lost 11-4. However: "Not finishing up with a duck egg (15-0) is the aim of game in a match against top team Sharpshooters."

Meet at the Leisure Centre at 2pm.
Sessions are suitable for all abilities, with length and distance adjusted to suit attending runners and joggers.

Make a difference to your environment.
We can help by funding small grants to get you started.

Apply by the 31st July 2013

Grants up to £1,000 are awarded for practical conservation, research and/or wildlife education projects that benefit the wildlife and environment in the Falkland Islands. Any person in camp or Stanley can apply.

Some examples of appropriate projects:

- Restoration/protection of tussock/blue grass / native rushes through planting, management or fencing;
- Creation of community native plant gardens;
- Control of invasive species;
- Wildlife surveys or small research projects;
- School and education projects;
- Provision of on-site tourism information and/or guidelines on Falklands' wildlife including signs or leaflets for wildlife sites.

How to Apply

Projects should aim to match fund around half of the grant - this can be payment in kind such as labour and time to complete the project, any fuel & transport used, accommodation, equipment use, etc.

For application forms and further information, or to discuss your projects ideas please phone: 22247 or email: sarah.crofts@conservation.org.fk

The Falkland Islands Government seeks tenders for the provision of Marine Related Policy Advice.

As part of our oil readiness planning, FIG has reviewed its current legislative structure and regulatory framework in respect of marine activities. A scoping review was undertaken in 2012 that established a clear need for revised and updated marine legislation.

FIG is therefore seeking to appoint consultants to undertake the necessary research and provide policy advice and guidance to FIG. The key outputs will be a series of policy recommendations and drafting instructions that will inform the subsequent preparation of the necessary legislation.

FIG wishes this commission to begin no later than the week commencing 19th August 2013 and wishes the commission to be concluded with the submission of the final draft policy recommendations by Friday, 29th November 2013.

Completed tenders must be received by Sián Nightingale in the Secretariat no later than 3pm Falkland Islands local time (6pm UTC) on Friday, 16th August 2013. Anyone wishing to submit a tender by facsimile or email, should first arrange a time in advance for when the bid will be transmitted. On receipt the bid will immediately be stored securely until considered by the tender board.

For a copy of the tender document or more information, please contact Sián Nightingale at the Secretariat, Stanley by telephoning +500 28421 or by emailing snightingale@sec.gov.fk

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE (PAC)

Due to the end of tenure of one of the lay appointees, expressions of interest are invited from members of the public who would wish to be considered for appointment to the PAC. The functions of the PAC are set out in the FI Constitution (s 81) and in the Public Accounts Ordinance 2009. Appointment to the PAC will initially be for two years. The PAC has an important scrutiny role over the public accounts of all government departments and specified bodies to ensure that public funds have been expended properly for the purposes for which they were voted by the Legislative Assembly. In carrying out its functions, the PAC considers, in terms of economy, effectiveness and efficiency, the 'value for money' benefit derived from the expenditure of public money. The PAC may also consider the adequacy of the government's arrangements for the management of financial risk. This will, therefore, be a major opportunity for individuals appointed to the PAC to make a significant contribution in helping to maintain high standards of public administration and good governance in the Falklands. Applications should be submitted to the Governor by Friday 16 August 2013 setting out the reasons for the applicant's interest in appointment to the PAC and the skills and experience that the applicant would bring to the job. Please email: GHouse@sec.gov.fk, or send applications to Government House, Stanley.

Short-sighted oil and port policy says private sector

A STATEMENT of policy principles on port location and oil infrastructure development passed at Executive Council last week has been met with opposing views from members of the Falklands' private sector.

The statement, which confirms that any permanent port development will be at Port William and later adds, "any grant of concession/licence at Mare Harbour or Stanley Harbour or any other location will be for a maximum period of three years, after which it will be removed regardless of whether or not alternative port facilities exists," has been described as, "short-sighted," and, "confusing," by some and alternatively, "helpful," by others.

One member of the business community who wished to remain anonymous said he had an issue with the entire process for the location of the new port: "The decision to have it in Port William was taken with absolutely no concrete survey data, just anecdotal evidence from numerous sources, many of which are contradictory."

The businessman also said his concern with the policy principles was that it was a fundamental piece of policy for the entire future of the Falklands, "and it has been made without any real consultation with the public, without any real consultation with the local private sector and, it would appear, without any real understanding of what is required by the oil industry."

He said he believed the decision to allow any temporary port to only be in place for three years and then to be removed irrespective of whether the new port is ready, "is absolutely absurd, it shows a basic lack of understanding of what is required and what the local private sector is proposing to carry out for the oil industry. It effectively stops any development in its tracks for the foreseeable future."

He commented that the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) had refused to engage in discussions with any local company or consortium over proposals for a temporary facility, preferring instead to engage in a, "Mexican stand off" with the oil industry in an attempt to make them pay for a new port in Port William, a location which still has no complete survey data and no real estimate of costs.

He concluded: "We have been saying for years that the Falklands is open for business and we want investment by the oil industry here and when we finally get some concrete progress we make a complete arse of the whole thing."

Speaking for the Falkland Islands Company, Director and General Manager Roger Spink took an opposing view. He feels the statement gave some, "clarity as regards any developments something that has been lacking before."

He commented that FIG had also indicated they wished for the private sector to work together to provide any long term facility, that is, they would prefer it was not FIG led, something the Chamber of Commerce had been pushing for.

Mr Spink said: "I understood from various oil reps that this was the kind of guidance they have been asking for and a statement of this kind was welcomed."

"I do not think it is any surprise to them."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

FOR more years than I can remember, and completely in vain, my big brother (Sgt Major Watson) has occasionally attempted to persuade me to join the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF). His total lack of success has nothing to do with any moral principles against weaponry or military-like behaviour, but is in fact based on two valid reasons:

a. I can't bear to be cold, and,

b. When I was approximately five years old, having prized a little pile of explosive type material out of a large practice round found on Sapper Hill, the future Sergeant Major invited his little sister to take an extremely close look, and then proceeded to light it.

While both of the above, I think, adequately explain my reluctance to throw myself into the life of a local defence volunteer (one that includes a brother who spent many years attempting to dispose of an adorable sibling in a variety of imaginative ways) they are also two of many reasons why I admire those that do.

As MLA Short pointed out last week, it isn't all fun, and quite apart from the men and women of the FIDF being an important component of an emergency service that might only serve a small population but a large land mass, I've never quite understood why the members themselves seemed to be rather undervalued by FIG when the FIDF 'department' is respected enough that it qualifies for a relatively reasonable budget.

It was pleasing then to hear the news of the 20 per cent pay increase along with the removal of the cap on members only being paid for 12 hours in any 24 hour period, and I can understand Major Biggs' point that, "part time soldiers are increasingly struggling to justify service to family members when their work with the FIDF would produce less than half the financial reward that could be earned with other part time employment for the same hours." (page 3).

IN an article from the Policy Department introducing the soon to be released Consultation on Immigration Reform (page 8) Mr Fotheringham comments, "the emerging oil industry will bring a host of new opportunities for business and local people..."

Well that should certainly be the aim right? Worryingly, not all members of the business community are apparently convinced by FIG's policy on port location and oil infrastructure development, released last week (see front page). A member of the public this week told us that he had been lobbied by persons concerned over plans for both the temporary and permanent port being situated in Port William, which had "involved no proper surveys," apart from a depth survey. He asked: "Is our Government hanging its hat on something that could even now turn out to be an impossibility?" He also drew attention to the fact that infrastructure installed at great cost without which the last oil round would not have been able to have been carried out, must be removed by 2018.

What effect does all of this apparent uncertainty created by the policy have on oil company plans?

The broad impression is that the rulings create economic slow-down when surely they should promote quite the opposite.

He added: "It certainly is helpful in clarifying our (FIG) plans for the future and gives clear transparent time scales to everyone for any temporary solutions. I would think it was also helpful for any other businesses looking for long term involvement or investment in or near the port, that is, they all know the ground rules."

Speaking on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce Hamish Wylie said the organisation, "encourages FIG to address any policy issues which may affect private sector investment decisions."

However, he said the statement did raise concerns about the impact such short concessions would have on the practicality of developing Sealion (Premier Oil's oilfield project). He explained: "It does not make clear whether this statement applies to the temporary port structure alone, or any investment that a company may make in providing support to some of the companies operating from the temporary port. Our members may invest in support of the temporary port, with a view to an alternative use after the temporary port is closed. There will be many non-port related business spring up that will benefit from the facilities that the temporary port will leave behind."

Mr Wylie said with FIG land prices at £56,000 per acre, and the cost of developing such land running into hundreds of thousands of pounds per acre before you have even built anything on the land, "you can see why local business will require some more clarity to this statement."

He said it was understood that the development of Sealion would be, "a 24/7 operation, and the indication that there may be some restriction on 'acceptable operational hours' at the temporary port would appear short sighted."

It is the development of Sealion, that will give us the ability to build a new port in Port William so as to minimise the impact in the long term, said Mr Wylie.

He concluded that the Chamber particularly welcomed the Hydrocarbon Development Policy Statement (see summary page 8) and they would seek to ensure that in putting the port statement into practice, "FIG apply the principles contained in the Hydrocarbons Development Policy, and policy 5 (see below) in particular."

MLA Ian Hansen said yesterday that a response from Gilbert House will be provided for Penguin News next week.

Policy 5 - 'Development of the hydrocarbons industry must take into consideration existing commercial activity and promote the development of local business capacity'.

No expansion for Lookout Lodge

TWO applications were refused from sixteen discussed at the Planning and Building Committee on Thursday.

Wickham Heights Ltd's outline application to expand Lookout Lodge by an additional 128 rooms over two floors was refused because of inadequate parking facility and fire safety concerns. Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne told the committee the applicant believed they would not need the number of parking spaces required as their target market, groups and crews, travel by minibus. "We can't have different rules for different hotels," said MLA Jan Cheek in support of EPO Payne's comment that they cannot predict the target market of any future owners of the building. Concerns from Chief Fire Officer Fiddes were that the Fire Service would be incapable of controlling a fire in a three storey building.

However, their application to build a 12-20 seat café with parking at Plot 2, VPC Road, was approved.

Permission was granted to the Museum and National Trust to demolish and replace an extension to the Smithy building at the Dockyard. At the Historic Buildings Committee on Wednesday it was agreed that the works would be beneficial to the building as the changes are minor, but would create an extension on proper foundations and improve the Smithy generally in its new role as a historic exhibition space.

David Dunford was granted two years temporary permission to site a caravan at 5 Racecourse Road East. Permission for Melvyn McKay to site a larger caravan on the same plot, which is also known as 2 Ross Road West, was refused. The Committee believed the site would become overdeveloped and suggested the upcoming Government caravan site would be a better position.

Other applications approved by the committee were: permission to site of a Portacabin, reposition an existing jetty and construct a new pontoon at the north side of the Canache for Jimmy Moffat and Ken Passfield; a conservatory extension for Joost Pompert and Janet Pompert Robertson at 11 Ross Road West; an extension to the shop at 5 Jersey Road for Tansy Bishop; erection of a dwelling at 1 Brandon Road for Paul Morrison; a garage at 17 Sulivan Street for Neil Gilbert; FIG were granted two years temporary permission to site containers at Plot 18, Lookout Rocks; the shop at Plot 28, Lookout Industrial Estate was approved to become a commercial laundry and dry cleaners for Lynda Buckland; Martin Pole-Evans was granted permission to construct a garage at 19 Kent Road; and the first private development at the Sapper Hill site, a two storey dwelling with an incorporated garage at Plot 29 was approved for Darrel Ford.

Argos up 46 per cent on previous estimate

ARGOS Resources have announced an estimated 46 per cent increase in prospectivity on the 2011 estimate based on their most recent surveys.

The Competent Person's Report (CPR) prepared by Senergy (GB) has identified the additional prospectivity in licence PL001 following detailed interpretation of a 3D seismic survey.

Senergy's best estimate of unrisks recoverable prospective resources is now 3.083 billion bbl*.

Argos has identified 40 additional leads which are currently undergoing mapping and future work planned on the 3D data includes mapping potential reservoir sands within the Johnson gas discovery, which appears to extend into the licence area.

Argos Chair, Ian Thomson said the 3D seismic data obtained is the best quality data seen in the basin to date. "This has allowed us to map with confidence numerous stratigraphic prospects associated with the early Cretaceous delta system that is a principal feature of the licence area.

"New proprietary geochemistry studies have also confirmed that two proven oil source rocks within the licence area are mature for significant volumes of oil generation, and this has added to the improved estimated chances of success for most of the prospects."

* Have you ever wondered why barrel is abbreviated to 'bbl' in the oil industry? We at PN pondered this and discovered the following which was so interesting we had to share it. In the early 1860s, when oil production began, there was no standard container for oil, so oil and petroleum products were stored and transported in barrels of all different shapes and sizes (beer barrels, fish barrels, molasses barrels, turpentine barrels, etc). By the early 1870s, the 42-gallon barrel had been adopted as the standard for oil trade. This was two gallons per barrel more than the 40-gallon standard used by many other industries at the time. The extra two gallons was to allow for evaporation and leaking during transport (most barrels were made of wood). Standard Oil began manufacturing 42 gallon barrels that were blue to be used for transporting petroleum.

The use of a blue barrel, abbreviated "bbl," guaranteed a buyer that this was a 42-gallon barrel.

MLAs Sawle and Edward argue Camp road designation issues

A LIVELY debate took place during Legislative Assembly when the subject of road designation was raised with MLAs Roger Edwards and Dick Sawle holding opposing views on whether roads outside of Stanley should come under the same legislation.

MLA Sawle maintained that the proposed Legislation was not designed to change the way of life of those living in the Camp but was there to protect the innocent and put in place sensible and universally accepted controls over how we drive vehicles and how roads are used. "Sensible and reasonable people have nothing to fear from the protection that the law gives them," he said, adding, that once passed people would go about their lives as they did before, but with the protection of the law.

Adopting the theatrical style of his honourable colleague MLA Gavin Short, MLA Sawle said: "There will not suddenly be a plethora of plod on every corner looking to cop the guilty.

"Policing here in the Falklands in line with most places in the world, is entirely reactive not proactive. Islanders are generally law abiding people and I have little doubt that the application of the law will not have any sudden or dramatic effect on the way people all over the Islands drive and use the roads," he said.

MLA Roger Edwards, a West Falkland resident, said it was with great sadness he recognised that Executive Council had taken the majority decision to forward the road designation paper to be Gazetted.

"I would have thought the Attorney General and his Chambers had far more important things to do quite frankly," he told the house.

For the last two years good feedback had been received at Farmers Week from those most affected, "and as far as I can see we took not a damn bit of notice of it," he said.

MLA Edwards pointed out that seat belt laws had been introduced Island wide, "without going the whole hog," and he believed the same could be done with other parts of the Road Traffic Ordinance.

"If MLA Sawle does not believe it will change the way of life, then I'm sorry but he is sadly wrong. It will make a huge change to the way we operate, the cost of operation and everything else in Camp," concluded MLA Edwards.

Members of the Assembly met with officers on Wednesday to further discuss the issue, but were not able to divulge the outcome of the meeting.

It is understood the issue will go back to the August Executive Council and Legislative Assembly when we can hopefully look forward to some more lively debate.

A good time to join the Islands Defence Force

YOUNG people considering joining the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) may be persuaded to sign up with the news that Executive Council has approved a higher reward for services provided.

FIDF members were previously only paid for 12 hours for any 24 hour period they were on duty, even when out on exercise, but this cap has now been lifted in addition to a 20 per cent increase to hourly rates.

This will result in additional costs of £28,300 assuming a 15 per cent increase in hours to reflect additional volunteers and is achievable within the existing budget, said Policy Officer Jamie Fotheringham in his Executive Council paper.

This means that an FIDF private will now be paid an hourly rate of £8.30, while a colour sergeant will be paid £10.78.

Commanding Officer Pete Biggs said he was very pleased to hear of the increase and the 12 hour cap being removed because he felt that FIDF part time soldiers were increasingly struggling to justify service to family members when their work with the FIDF would produce less than half the financial reward that could be earned with other part time employment for the same hours.

"Although money is not the main motivation for people to join the FIDF, it is an important factor for those members who rely on part time employment to enhance their standard of living.

"I hope this increase will encourage current members to attend training and for others in the community to take advantage of the unique opportunities that arise through membership of the FIDF," said Major Biggs.

No awards

EXECUTIVE Council decided last week that there would not be any Queens Certificate and Badge of Honour awards this year.

The Queen's certificate is designed as an award for an exceptional contribution to some aspect of life in the Islands.

MLA Jan Cheek explained that a decision was made several years ago that it would not merely be for someone doing their job, no matter how well they do it.

"It is my hope that we can in future years give nominators more guidance on how to present the nominations. I would also hope that some of those nominated will appear again. There is as far as I know no bar to someone being nominated more than once," MLA Cheek concluded.

More housing

FUNDING has been released to address the shortfall in government housing.

MLA Ian Hansen said funds had been approved for the construction of an additional 30 houses at the Sapper Hill development for 'oil plots' in phase 3/4 as well as for the construction of a mobile home park at Murray Heights South and the construction of three semi detached units for local pool housing. 19 mobile homes have been purchased for the Murray Heights park, nine of which will be allocated solely for the Falklands Meat Company employees, said MLA Hansen adding that a sum had also been allocated for the negotiation of lease or rent of private property to meet the immediate needs of accommodating contract staff.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THE meeting to discuss future management of the Common and Cape Pembroke was very well attended and demonstrated the growing concern many feel about the erosion, literal and figurative, of our shared public recreation space. People made many interesting suggestions how the Common and Cape Pembroke could be managed for the benefit of all users. Cape Pembroke in particular has many different types of habitat. Among the threats identified were dumping of spoil from site clearance and construction projects, careless and destructive driving and dogs not under control. Areas of the Common have been removed for individual projects, some of which would be hard to justify now that the population of Stanley has grown so much larger. I hope that we can now see some actions that allow the enjoyment of the area by all in ways that do not diminish or destroy it.

IN addition to our normal weekly meetings we have a full morning session with officials to discuss broad training issues. If people are to be qualified to take up all the opportunities ahead the systems must be responsive and flexible enough to enable a wide range of training and succession planning. As many will be aware the system does not appear to be working well and there has been considerable confusion about where and how to access funding.

ON the same day we take another look at the Road Traffic Ordinance in an attempt to deal with some of the worries about road designation expressed again recently. This work was begun by the last Assembly with extensive consultation then and more during the life of this one. Major stretches of the network on East Falkland have long been designated and this has neither destroyed our way of life, nor brought agriculture to a standstill, so I hope we can apply common sense right across the Falklands. There is a real issue with insurance that must be resolved, especially because increasing tourist activity leads to increased risk. I believe designation is an inevitable consequence of living in the 21st century and the need to ensure basic safety.

Minimum Wage Bill means no one in work need live in poverty

THE Minimum wage Bill, described by the Chief Executive Keith Padgett as providing, "pay protection for low paid workers that will ensure that no one in work need live in poverty," was passed at the Meeting of Legislative Assembly on July 25.

Mr Padgett commented that it was a comprehensive and up to date regime, adding, "the aim of the Bill is to deliver a fairer wage to low paid workers without limiting their employment opportunities or harming the efficiency of business."

Everyone over the age of 16 working in the Falkland Islands will be entitled to a minimum wage for the work they do. There are two different hourly rates, one for workers aged 16 – 17 (£3.10 per hour) and another for those age 18 and over (£5.05).

Mr Padgett said in presenting the Bill it, also provided for mechanisms that workers could use to enforce their rights although he hoped that problems, could be sorted out, "amicably," between worker and employer.

He described it as, "perhaps the most significant intervention government has made in the labour market in many years."

Following Mr Padgett, MLA Dr Barry Elsby begged a procedural motion which proposed a debate that the bill be amended to provide a single minimum wage for all workers instead of separate rates for 16-17 year olds and those over 18. The motion was allowed and MLA Elsby argued that the Bill was discriminatory and suggested that those aged 16 and 17 doing the same job as a person who was 18 should be paid the same.

MLA Elsby and MLA Short talk minimum wage

He said the Falklands Constitution clearly stated, "we cannot discriminate." He argued, "We would never dream these days of discriminating on the grounds of sex, certainly would never dream of discriminating on the grounds of race or religion and so why should we be discriminating on the age of 17, 16 or 18 year olds if they can do the same job?"

He said the discrimination had been allowed in the Bill because it was considered that young workers were, "generally not as competent or experienced as adult workers and so are less valued by employers."

MLA Elsby said the "important word," was, "generally," and offered a scenario where the younger worker might be more competent than the older worker, and thus the situation might be considered unacceptable discrimination.

He also noted that when talking about minimum wage, "we are not talking about highly skilled jobs as a rule," but manual work such as stacking shelves in a warehouse, "and I do not believe that a 16 year old would do a worse job than an 18 year old."

He said it was: "Unfair and probably unconstitutional."

A number of short arguments from other MLAs followed. MLA Dick Sawle said he saw the minimum wage for the 16/17 year olds as an opportunity for work experience. He added that it was common to have separate rates under minimum wage agreements, and that the UK had different rates. He said the Bill was "perfectly adequate," and had gone through lengthy consultation.

MLA Cheek said she believed wages would be largely market driven and the Bill did not prevent the employer from paying more. As such she did not support the amendment.

MLA Elsby said his suggested amendment was ultimately defeated as was his second suggestion that the Bill be amended so the minimum wage rate for adults would apply to age 17 and over instead of those aged 18 and over. The only support received for this suggestion was from MLA Gavin Short.

Immigration Consultation Programme

The Falkland Islands Government invites feedback on proposed changes to the Falkland Islands immigration system. The proposals being put forward seek to ensure that the Islands has an immigration system that enables growth in the population to facilitate economic expansion, whilst ensuring that all the appropriate checks and balances are in place to protect and preserve the Falkland's way of life.

The consultation will explore these issues and explain the reasons behind the changes being proposed. The exercise is being conducted by the Policy Unit and will include a series of public meetings in Stanley and across Camp, as set out below.

Consultation starts: Monday 5th August 2013

Changes to the Court system

RECOMMENDATIONS totaling £227,000 from an independent review of the Courts by the Ministry of Justice were accepted by Executive Council at their latest meeting on July 24.

MLA Ian Hansen said these recommendations, when implemented would represent a fundamental shift in the way the Court operates in the Falklands.

The funding is indicative at the moment and all projects will require further approval through Executive Council or Standing Finance Committee when a defined policy has been prepared.

The Chief Executive Keith Padgett has recommended the appointment of a Head of Courts and Tribunals Service to progress the implementation of the review and recruitment to the post is underway, but is expected to take several months.

The review report contains 25 recommendations, to be implemented over a timescale of between six to 18 months. Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher said in his report to ExCo that if these ambitious time scales were to be met it was important work started as soon as possible.

Funding for Hepatitis B catch-up campaign

IN a question for oral answer at the meeting of Legislative Assembly on July 25 Member of Legislative Assembly Dr Barry Elsby asked the following:

"Hepatitis B is a blood borne and sexually transmitted infection that leads to liver cancer and chronic liver disease. The World Health Organisation recommends that all people under the age of 18 years and others at higher risk should be vaccinated.

"In 2008 the Hospital and Medical Services Committee agreed to introduce a vaccination campaign to protect against Hepatitis B, but only for newborns. The committee declined to fund a "catch-up" campaign as has happened for other newly introduced vaccinations.

"This means that anyone born before that time is susceptible to this potentially fatal disease.

"Does the Honourable Jan Cheek agree it is time for the Hospital and Medical Services Committee to reconsider this decision and recommend the allocation of funds for a catch-up campaign so as to protect those at risk?"

MLA Jan Cheek

MLA Elsby added that although he was a doctor the question he presented was in his capacity as a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

MLA Jan Cheek gave the following response: "The Honourable Barry Elsby raises an important issue and this will be discussed with the new Director of Health and Social Services and the Chief Medical Officer on her return from leave."

She said this was with a view to the matter being further considered in the context of improved sex education and awareness, at a future meeting of the Health and Medical Services Committee.

DJ lives military lifestyle

THERE'S a fresh young voice entertaining British Forces and their families in the South Atlantic, as a new broadcaster has joined the BFBS Falkland Islands team.

Chris Keen (24) moved to the station at the end of June and is now on the airwaves every morning from 6-10am, presenting the BFBS Falkland Islands Breakfast Show.

"I've been here a month now and so far I've enjoyed every minute," said Chris. "Working so closely with the military is great. I live, eat, and socialise with them so I can really get a sense of how they work away from home during an overseas deployment. My passion is presenting and to do this for BFBS is a dream come true!"

Though the world of Forces broadcasting is a big step for Chris, he has seven years of experience in the industry, including jobs in local BBC radio as a producer and broadcast assistant.

"Working in the Falklands is totally different to any job I have ever had," said Chris. "For a start, just to get to the studio I have to walk down what seems like the longest corridor in the world – that's weird."

"I love being on air here and having interaction from the guys and girls, especially when I meet them in the mess and they tell me they're listening to the show. Hopefully I'm making a difference and brightening up their day by playing their favourite song or just by saying hello."

Chris joins BFBS Falkland Islands as the station reaches its thirtieth year broadcasting entertainment, sport, music and live news to British Forces and Islanders.

Station Manager, Anthony Ballard, added: "We were delighted when Chris decided to join the presentation line up here in the South Atlantic. He has settled in well and is not only already popular with our audience but has become a valuable member of the BFBS Falkland Islands team."

Hot air and smokescreens

WASTE oil seems to have caused hot air and smokescreens at the public meeting!

Modern safe efficient waste oil fired heaters/boilers have been available for domestic use across Europe and elsewhere for about 20 years or more.

Before that, yes the old commercial site-only ones had large smokestacks with special fitted 'scrubbers'. Today's waste oil burner, correctly operating, puts out no more pollution than a domestic kero fired one. All the nasties are destroyed in the high-temperature combustion chamber. Here at Stanley Growers we operate five units, and will have two more in operation in August.

Waste oil is not diesel/kero though. A lot of 'dirty work' has to be put into settling and filtering the oil, and twice weekly maintenance cleaning of the burners, filters, flues etc. Also, expensive parts wear out much faster. Waste oil itself is variable and you need to know what it consists of. Any clutch or brake fluid or antifreeze in the tank is a definite no-no, likewise petrol and paint thinners. Synthetic oil does not burn well on its own either.

As regards the recent incident at Mary Hill, it need never have happened. Some years ago we put forward, on more than one occasion to PWD, a proposal whereby they would put in some hard-standing and fencing, on what was then FIG land just south of and behind our own storage tanks east of the drive down to Stanley Growers. We would then have taken over responsibility for receiving all waste oils from producers; and as of several years ago there would have been no need for anyone private or government to have been dumping old oil on the tip. PWD themselves liked the idea, but the 'higher-ups' clearly did not. We even invested in the installation (FIG actually buying the kit) to enable us to process and burn the emulsified oily-water element that never separates.

Over the subsequent years I was told, more than once, that the plan never qualified to get into the annual budget recommendations for MLAs to consider.

We receive waste oil from MOD, cruise ships, fishing vessels (variable quality sometimes rejected) and more recently, off-shore oil operations, and have been doing so for 12-13 years. It is stored in large bunded tanks, more recently the 1,000 litre pallet container has appeared, and we will be improving a bunded storage area for these in due course.

MLAs are delaying things; you don't need to wait months for an enquiry to tell us that, a fence, a gate and a person there when the gate is open to monitor who is dumping what, is principally what is needed!

That will come at a price, higher tax or the rates so those who shout the criticism need to accept there will be a bill we have to pay.

Walk on Wales

THROUGH Penguin News, we would like to raise awareness of a special event Walk on Wales, that is taking place in Wales starting at the end of August and going through until November.

The Walk on Wales concept was dreamt up by two veteran Welsh Guards, Jan Koops and David (Dai) Graham, both of whom served in the Falklands War.

As a result, Jan and Dai are keenly aware of the devastating impact that active service can have on soldiers and their families, as they cope with bereavement, life-changing injuries or the long-term effects of psychological trauma.

The vision for Walk on Wales is: to remember and acknowledge the contribution of the 50 Welsh Guardsmen who have died on active service since the end of World War II, and, to create a legacy today for the veterans of tomorrow, by raising £1 million for the Welsh Guards Afghanistan Appeal and Combat Stress.

A special centre is to be opened in Wales to help all serving personnel, their families and veterans.

The Walk will start on August 25, 2013, when the first of 11 Walk on Wales relay teams will set off to walk the Welsh Coast Path, accompanied by Jan Koops and Rod Morgan who will be walking the entire 870 miles.

The teams will be carrying with them a specially commissioned silver baton inscribed with the names of those 50 Welsh Guardsmen who died while serving their country in Afghanistan, the Falklands, Iraq and Northern Ireland. In a journey of remembrance and thanks, the baton will travel the entire length of the stunning Welsh Coast Path before arriving back at Cardiff Bay.

Tim and I will be taking part in the Walk on August 31 in North Wales. Each day is dedicated to the memory of one of the 50 Welsh Guardsmen and by coincidence the day we walk is in memory of Guardsman Paul Green, whose family now live in the Falkland Islands.

This is just a small way we can say thank you to the Welsh Guards and their families for the huge sacrifices they make for us especially in 1982.

If anyone would like to give a donation or sponsor us for this worthy cause or buy a wrist band please pop down to the Garden Centre. A collection tin and wrist bands are on sale on the counter.

Many thanks in advance for your support

Save Common for future generations

CHAIRING a meeting about the future management of Stanley Common, MLA Barry Elsyby said there was a need to ensure the common was protected and used responsibly so it was there for generations to come.

In 1849 a substantial area of land around Stanley was declared common land for use of the population of the town in perpetuity.

The extent of the Common changed in the intervening years and the Stanley Common Ordinance was amended in 1981 to include "Cape Pembroke Peninsula" to the definition of the Common.

While those attending the meeting agreed there was a need to protect the entire Stanley Common, the Cape Pembroke area particularly required immediate attention in view of the fact large amounts of spoil was being dumped in the area, the wear and tear as a result of 4x4 activities and use of Mary Hill Quarry as a rubbish tip.

The Common currently covers around 76 km², has around 43 kms of shoreline and rises to over 230 metres on Mount Tumbledown and Mount William.

Environmental Officer Nick Rendell gave a presentation outlining the history of Stanley Common, what the current challenges being faced were and asked how it could best be managed.

Conservationist Brian Summers said it was his opinion that the Government needed to, "put their hand in their pocket," to provide a road to the Lighthouse. Only once a half decent track was in place could there be discussion about restricting off road use, he added. This was backed up by Mike Morrison who has located and recorded some of the Islands most rare flora and fauna and recently had to request that Government stopped dumping spoil in a sensitive area within Cape Pembroke. MLA Jan Cheek however said the construction of a road could open up the land more for those who tear it up with their 4x4s.

Mr Morrison reminded the meeting that ditches had been excavated and spoil spread without prior consultation with interested parties because FIG does not have to apply for planning permission. PWD can go in and destroy plants protected by law, and it has to be proven that it was done wilfully before any action can be taken, he added.

Brian Summers said his questions to PWD regarding remedial work in sensitive areas had been met with nothing but arrogance. "There's an awful lot of arrogance within PWD," he added.

MLAs made no attempt to refute these comments, however MLA Gavin Short said FIG may soon have to apply for planning permission and any environmental impact would also be included on papers for projects being considered by Executive Council.

Making Cape Pembroke, but not all of the Common a nature reserve, was Phyl Rendell's preferred option. The formation of a Friends of Cape Pembroke group would ensure community input into management and sensitive areas could be fenced off in the meantime to still allow access to the area, she said.

It was flagged up that in fact all areas of the Common contained sensitive areas to some degree with sod walls and corrals dating back to the gaucho days, as well as battle fields and memorials from 1982.

It was agreed there should be a group formed along the lines of Friends of Cape Pembroke, which, while having members from Common users groups would also have some Government input. EPO Nick Rendell has been tasked to look into this and can be contacted on 28483 or email nrendell.planning@taxation.gov.fk.

Statement on oil development

ROBUST regulation, supply chain support and long-term benefits for Islanders are at the heart of a new policy statement for hydrocarbons development.

The policy principles were agreed at the July 24 meeting of Executive Council.

Included in eight statements it is noted: "Hydrocarbons in Falkland Islands waters belong to the people of the Falkland Islands and their exploitation must be to the benefit of the people of the Falkland Islands, both those of today and future generations."

The statement notes that government's constant control over activities will be maintained and petroleum discoveries, "must be efficiently managed and exploited to maximise economic recovery and to ensure the development of a long-term industry presence..."

Also, protection and conservation of the Falkland Island's environment and biodiversity must be ensured and development must take into consideration existing commercial activity and promote the development of local business capacity.

The full statement can be seen at <http://www.falklands.gov.fk/assets/158-13P.pdf>.

Immigration reform consultation planned

By FIG Head of Policy
Jamie Fotheringham

THE Falkland Islands Government will next week launch a consultation exercise on proposed changes to the immigration system. The proposals that will be put forward seek to ensure that the Islands has an immigration system that enables growth in the population to facilitate economic expansion whilst ensuring that all the appropriate checks and balances are in place to protect and preserve the Falkland's way of life.

The Falkland Islands needs to build and expand its population to create a labour force and population that will ensure its future economic wellbeing. There are ambitions to expand the tourist and agriculture sectors and the emerging oil industry will bring a host of new opportunities for businesses and local people - potentially creating hundreds of new jobs.

This will create a need for an increased labour force which the Islands may not be able to fully meet from its current population. The Falkland Islands has a near zero unemployment rate and one in five people have more than one job. While commendable, this also means a lack of capacity in the labour market to support development ambitions, even on the smallest of scales.

The current immigration system does little to encourage and promote retention of those highly skilled and educated workers who initially come on shorter term Work Permits, nor does it encourage investment and new business creation. The proposed reforms are intended to address these (and other) issues - but in a measured and managed way. There is absolutely no suggestion of an open-door policy on immigration - instead the reforms propose an approach that will enable carefully managed immigration, with the needs of the needs of the Islands being paramount.

The Falkland Islands has a proud and long tradition of welcoming newcomers, and there is also a strong sense of community and identity. What is needed is an immigration policy which supports a strong economic future but does not stifle or destroy the unique Islands way of life.

Immigration should be viewed as a tool to support the delivery of a sustainable future for the Falkland Islands, providing a skilled labour force, creating and supporting enterprise, whilst continuing to build a rich, varied society committed to maintaining and enhancing the Islands way of life.

The consultation will explore these issues and explain the reasons behind the changes are being proposed.

The exercise is being conducted by the Policy Unit and will include a series of public meetings in Stanley and across Camp. Full details of the various consultation events and how to obtain the consultation documents is provided on PN Page 4. The consultation launches on Monday August 5.

Further articles will appear in forthcoming issues on specific aspects of the immigration review: 'Living in the Falkland Islands' and 'Working in the Falkland Islands'.

General Manager

South American Atlantic Service Limited, SAAS, is looking to recruit for the position of General Manager.

Reporting to the Board of Directors through the Chair, candidates must be able to demonstrate the ability to manage all aspects of a shipping operation, through experience in containerised shipping and logistics, with a particular emphasis on reefer container shipping and vessel operations.

Candidates should possess a minimum of ten years experience in container shipping, in the fields of Trade Management, Sales and Marketing and Operations preferably with a major container shipping operation.

A qualification in a maritime and shipping discipline would be advantageous.

Candidates must be able to demonstrate competence in the following areas:

1. Preparation and presentation of Annual Budget and Business Plan as well as interim review of same.
2. Formulation and implementation of operating strategy.
3. Sound understanding of financial reporting systems.
4. Capability to manage agents in various countries.
5. Management of vessel, onshore operations and container control.
6. Excellent knowledge of MS systems, including Word, Excel and PowerPoint.
7. Generation of revenue streams to support the business.
8. Ability to oversee and motivate a team of permanent and part time staff.
9. A self starter capable of running the business without close supervision.
10. Excellent communication skills at all levels.

Applications in writing, enclosing a current CV should be sent to: The Chairperson South American Atlantic Service Ltd. No 5 FIPASS Road, Stanley, FIQQ 1ZZ.

Further information and a full job description can be obtained from the SAAS Office, telephone 21833.

Closing date for applications is the 16th August 2013.

Billy goats: Tom, Tiphannie and Tom

Spoonful of fun

A LARGE heart-warming serving of Porridge was dished up by the 7 – 11 year-olds of the Infant and Junior School on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The school play, directed by Alison Short with music direction from Shirley Adams Leach, told the story of a dastardly bear's profiteering plan to build a porridge factory and level the Happy Valley forest home of a jumble of fairytale characters.

Even ironing out the wrinkles at the dress rehearsal on Monday there were comic gags and memorable performances from the entire cast and choir. The large group of lead characters showed brilliant levels of confidence and executed their witty lines with great aplomb.

Lachlan Crowie showed convincing gangster flair as the 'Cereal killer' Papa Bear aided by his gang of Billy Goats (Tom Watson, Tiphannie Reid, Tom Ford) and a recipe and cow stolen from Old Mother Hubbard (Lizzie Hollingworth) the story centred around his greedy appetite to take his porridge business global.

His plan is thwarted by the darling friendship of his son Junior (Ella Clement) and Goldie (Madeline Cooper) who enlist the help of a Private Detective with a quirky swagger, Jack Sprat (Sam Hill) to expose the criminal activity.

Funny and brilliant, there were plenty of sketches throughout to keep the audience enraptured and chuckling along including; Chief Inspector Drain (Craig Lewis) and his band of confused policemen; a crew of lumberjacks (led by Jordan Francis); News round ups from 'eggcellent Humpty Dumpty surgery'; and a good 'silly cow' joke or two thrown in the pot to leave, as the finale song promised, the audience in a "Happy ever after kind of place."

Pretty in pink Martine Gordon is Belle of the ball

A GAILY decorated hall with tables groaning under the weight of platters piled high with good Falklands style food welcomed those lucky enough to have got tickets for the annual Winter Ball in the FIDF Hall on Saturday.

Martine Gordon, daughter of Tanya Clarke and Robbie Gordon was crowned Belle of the Ball by popular vote on the night.

Christopher Stenning son of Anna and Tim Stenning was selected by judges as the Best Young Man. Christopher showed a lively talent for dancing and was rarely off the floor for the entire evening.

The first Winter Ball was held in 2005 when Helen McKay and her friends expressed a wish to wear their May Ball gowns again before going off to college. The traditional theme for the ball stemmed from Helen's love of dancing and music.

Sadly, Helen died in a road traffic accident the following year and her friends and family have held the ball annually in her memory.

Helen's mum Jeannie developed the idea into a ball based on the family style supper dance of years gone by where parents and young adults can enjoy an evening together.

Saturday's event was proof indeed that this concept is very much welcomed by the community with tickets sold out well in advance and up until the last minute those who had tickets and could not attend made sure they were passed on to the ever hopefuls on the waiting list.

Kathleen Dobbins said she and her fellow organisers of this year's ball expressed their thanks and gratitude for the wonderful support and assistance given by so many people which ensured the success of the evening.

"It was pleasing to see so many attending; and we were delighted with the very high standard of dress and impressed by the good level of behaviour," she said.

You will be pleased to hear that they are already looking forward to arranging next year's event.

Funds raised from the event will be donated to the Falkland Islands Community School Music Department in memory of Helen and her great love of traditional music.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
 The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

An incredible 235 kilometres for charity

COVERING a distance that would horrify even the bravest of runners Corporal Joe Broadbent completed 235 kilometres across the Falkland Islands, the equivalent to nearly nine marathons in five days.

Joe was accompanied en route from Byron Heights to Stanley Airport by pace runners, but two of his company completed the entire distance with him, Sergeant Dave Currie and Corporal Dave Pike.

The distance is enough to deter even the fittest from attempting the feat, but ultramarathon runner Joe also had to combat the undulating terrain, unforgiving winter weather and the more than occasional sneaky pot-hole on his journey along the Camp roads. The greatest respite must have been the wise decision to run from West to East aka "with the wind."

Already an experienced runner he trained twice daily on Falklands' mountainous terrain in preparation for the event and said that his experiences with RAF Leeming's mountain rescue team helped him, "battle through the tough times."

Starting on Monday July 22, it took two days for the group to run from Byron Heights to Port Howard. The group caught a helicopter ride to San Carlos mid Wednesday morning and set off to Goose Green. The exhausted team reached Mount Pleasant Complex the next day and took a deep breath before their final leg to Stanley. They said they were very grateful for all the friendly support received from the people of settlements on both islands.

Only a handful of miles from their finish point the group jogged through Stanley just after midday on Friday.

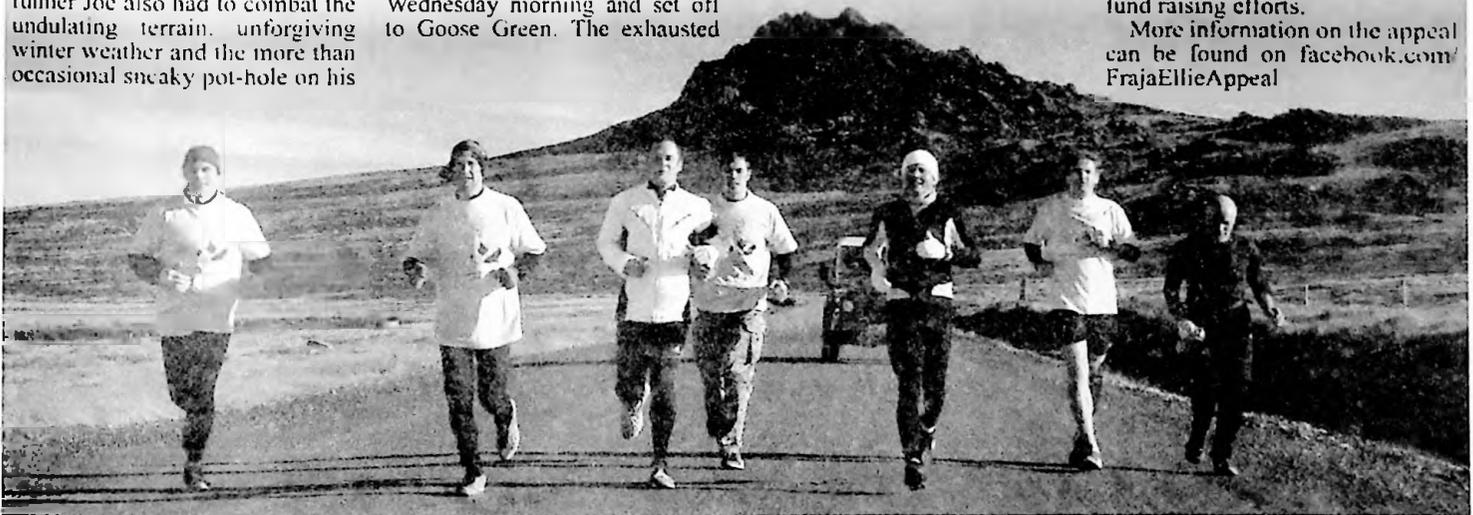

Stanley Airport was chosen as an alternative end point instead of Cape Pembroke as the support vehicle drivers were unsure whether it was advisable to drive across the National Nature Reserve without a road to follow.

Although the total amount raised had not been announced at the time of Penguin News going to print the team had already raised £4,500 in sponsorship before the run.

His mammoth challenge was in aid of the FrajaEllieAppeal, supporting Fraja Ellie Simpson a young girl who lives at risk of a relapse of neuroblastoma, a rare form of cancer, treatment of which would cost around £500,000. The appeal has raised around £80,000 already through large and small fund raising efforts.

More information on the appeal can be found on facebook.com/FrajaEllieAppeal

Local oil industry proposals not being curtailed says FIG

THE Falkland Islands Government, "does not believe local industry proposals are being curtailed by policy decision," Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Ian Hansen told Penguin News this week.

He responded to an article in last week's Penguin News that said statement of policy principles on port location and oil infrastructure development passed at Executive Council recently were viewed as, "short-sighted," and "confusing," by members of the Falklands' private sector.

MLA Hansen said: "we have stated we are happy to consider oil development onshore that is co-terminus with any temporary facilities."

One member of the business community last week criticised what he saw as a lack of surveying of the intended Port William port site adding that the decision to allow any temporary port to only be in place for three years and then to be removed irrespective of whether the new port is ready was "absolutely absurd," and showed a basic lack of understanding of what was required and what the local private sector was proposing to carry out for the oil industry.

He added that it effectively stopped any development in its tracks for the foreseeable future.

MLA Hansen this week listed the series of studies into the proposed site which included site investigations, hydrographical, geo-physical ground investigations, topographic surveys and swell monitoring among others, as well as concept designs and cost planning.

He added that the results would be introduced to the public in November and, "in considering any proposal though, government must balance the needs of industry and our way of life ..."

He said the views expressed last week represented, "one side of public opinion."

MLA Hansen said the government had not closed the door on temporary port solutions in Stanley Harbour, adding "indeed the same Executive Council approved in principle a three year facility at the request of Noble Energy and its partners."

Government has encouraged Premier Oil to re-submit a more appropriate proposal for Stanley Harbour, he said, "based on the policy statement agreed by ExCo and explained to them in June in London."

"Government is willing to receive proposals which may be a mixture of temporary oil support facilities then changing to alternative uses in the future — this should be done through the normal planning process," he added.

MLA Hansen concluded: "Government is acutely aware of the opportunities that Sea Lion Development and broader oil and gas activity will provide, again though, we must balance those industry requirements of any temporary facilities to enable this with their impact on our community and way of life."

Stanley Services apology to pensioner left in the cold

STANLEY Services Ltd Manager Robert Rowlands has apologised to an 85 year old customer for a company employee informing her they could not provide her with fuel late last Friday, and that she would have to wait until Monday. The pensioner was left without heating for three nights.

Mr Rowlands said: "There seems to have been a communication break down within the company. Something would have been arranged on the spot, for vulnerable pensioners we have always given valued service outside of the normal, whether it be weekends, snow blizzards or whatever.

"We regret this has arisen and have apologised to the customer.

"The lady initially called on Friday August 2, requesting fuel delivery on Monday, "it seems later that day she telephoned again after 5pm advising that she had run out and had been told by the service station attendant that we were unable to make a delivery as the staff had finished. This situation remained unknown until we were contacted first thing on Monday morning and we immediately attended."

Argentines told Burdwood Bank no go

THE Falkland Islands Government has rejected Argentina's inclusion of an area of the Burdwood Bank which falls within the Falklands Inner and Outer Conservation Zones (FICZ and FOCZ) as part of a Marine Protected Area (MPA).

FIG, however welcomed the announcement by the Senate of Argentina of the establishment of an MPA within the area of Burdwood Bank which lies within the Argentine Economic Zone, describing it as a, "positive step," in the interest of marine conservation and fisheries management.

MLA Barry Elsby stated that practical cooperation on safeguarding straddling fish stocks was the responsibility of both the Falklands and Argentina.

Proud moments at FICS Prize giving

TEACHERS, guests and proud parents gathered at the Town Hall on Wednesday for the Falkland Islands Community School's annual prize giving.

Students collected prizes in all subjects taught at FICS with many sponsored by members of the public and local companies.

Departing Head Teacher Helen Bell also took the opportunity to introduce the new Head of the Falkland Islands Community School, Martin Winward, who said he was proud to start his time at the school by celebrating the achievements and efforts of its hardworking students.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

DEMONSTRATING her usual lack of etiquette Cristina Kirchner managed to turn up 25 minutes late to chair Tuesday's meeting of the United Nations Security Council where she then proceeded to raise the subject of sovereignty of the Falklands, blatantly admitting it was controversial to do so during a debate ostensibly about the UN's relations with small organisations.

If it's not the right place for a subject to be raised then surely it should be pointed out? I don't go to a public meeting about Management of the Common and then bang on about the state of the roads, the lack of a bottom rung on the housing ladder or the price of local meat in the chillers. One, it would be ill mannered, even rude on my part and two, I would expect to be told to take it through the proper channels. While she might consider it merely controversial, I think it complete ignorance.

Her address also contained condemnation of British 'militarisation' of the South Atlantic, while rumour has it Argentina are in the process of buying fighter aircraft from Spain.

What piffle and nothing more than we have come to expect, but what is particularly worrying is that world leaders sit and listen to the constant rubbish spewing from the Kirchner government without reprisal. Thank goodness Ambassador Mark Lyall Grant was there to fight our corner.

On the plus side if the rumour that Argentina is in the process of 'purchasing' a truck load of Mirage F1 fighter planes is true, then I do hope Spain hold out for payment before they hand over their obsolete aircraft - good job they have got four to throw in for spares because parts are no longer manufactured. It echoes of that old adage, "one man's rubbish is another man's (or woman's in this case) gold."

Could this be classed as militarisation of the South Atlantic? And how curious that Argentina can afford to buy military hardware but not deal with their world debts? Much easier to rely on more discerning countries to prop them up I presume, a bit like being on the dole and splashing out on a monstrous television, although such an action doesn't usually rally support from the neighbours.

It's probably a bit naive of me to expect everyone to stand up for their principles and to believe that people who earn a position of power are above abusing it. Unfortunately the system works more along the lines of, 'if you support me on this issue, I'll support you on yours,' which means small countries with less bargaining power and more likely to be the centre of a dispute (sound familiar), are often the scapegoats.

As the Australian author and critic Clive James once said: "All intellectual tendencies are corrupted when they consort with power."

Sums it up nicely.

Falklands issue raised at UN Security Council

BRITISH Ambassador to the United Nations Mark Lyall Grant took the opportunity to challenge Argentine President Cristina Kirchner's statement in the United Nations Security Council on Tuesday.

Responding to President Kirchner's morning speech when she again called on the UK to sit down and resume discussions on the Falklands sovereignty issue, Mr Grant said he noted the very questionable relevance of the issue to the theme on the agenda and regretted the fact that some participants had used the debate as "a platform for expressing positions on a range of unrelated issues."

Mr Grant said several Ministerial participants had referred in their statements to Argentina's so called 'legitimate' claim to the Falkland Islands. "The UK does not accept that Argentina has any legitimate claim to sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. The historical facts and legal position are quite clear. The United Kingdom has administered the Falkland Islands peacefully and effectively for more than 180 years. In 1850, by ratifying the bilateral Convention on Settlement of Existing Differences, Argentina acknowledged that there was no territorial dispute between the two countries," he said.

Mr Grant referred to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Cuba's comment on behalf of CELAC (Community of Latin American and Caribbean States) that respect for self-determination was a founding principle of that body.

"The United Kingdom also attaches great importance to this principle, which is enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations," he said and highlighted the referendum result in March this year.

In her national statement, President Kirchner said the UK and Argentina should bilaterally discuss the Falkland Islands. Mr Grant said the UK was clear that any such discussion was not just a matter for the two governments. "The views of the people of the Falkland Islands cannot simply be ignored. There can be no discussion of the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands against the wishes of the Islanders," he said.

Mr Grant concluded: "Madam President, I reject the suggestion of the Foreign Minister of Uruguay that, 'illegitimate oil activities,' are being conducted in Falkland Islands' waters, which constitute unilateral measures by the United Kingdom, contrary to a General Assembly resolution. The decision to exploit its natural resources was made by the Falkland Islands Government for the benefit of the people of the Falkland Islands and in accordance with the right of self-determination of the people of the Falkland Islands under international law. All activities related to hydrocarbons on the continental shelf of the Falkland Islands are regulated by legislation of the Falkland Islands Government, in strict accordance with the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea."

Cristina Kirchner was at the Security Council because non permanent member Argentina is chair for the month of August.

Tuesday's debate at the UN Security Council was on 'Cooperation between the UN and regional and subregional organizations'.

New track, not a U-turn

ASSEMBLY Members have had a rethink on Camp Road designation issues and now plan to consider a new paper at the August ExCo based on road safety.

MLAs have met with the Attorney General, Legislative Drafter and a Police representative and decided to concentrate on safety issues to avoid some of the intricacies of having crossing points and non-designated areas.

He said the two arguments raised during the consultation period had been considered and it had been agreed to find a solution using regulation rather than legislation. Much as had been used when introducing the seat belt law Island-wide.

The proposed regulation would still make it illegal to drink and drive, and insurance would be required, however it may be a way around the Vehicle Tax issue, said MLA Hansen. He added that personally he would like to see Vehicle Tax dropped completely.

Tradition and technology bring Falklands and Scotland closer at guilds' spin-in

AN International 'Spin-in' across the Atlantic and in conjunction with spinners from Castletown in Caithness, Scotland included members of the Falklands Spinners and Weavers Guild, working from the Community School on August 3.

Shirley Adams-Leach said the aim of the day was to spin from carded fleece, ply the yarn and then knit squares to form a cushion cover. Both guilds had selected patterns for the squares and a simple design using the Falklands patterns for one side of the cover and the Caithness patterns for the other was formed by one of the knitters from Caithness.

Using a Skype link for a short time every hour, the two guilds were able to watch each other work and chat, learning about each others members and their crafting projects. At the beginning of the link-up, Lady Thurso introduced the Scottish spinners who were working in the Castletown Heritage Centre in Caithness.

Mrs Adams-Leach explained: "The original plan was to have 'teams' of eight spinners and knitters working at one time, unfortunately the Stanley spinners were down in numbers, including the person who had done most of the organising, Margo Smallwood."

But gradually the yarn started to appear and the knitting started. By the end of the five hour time the guilds had set themselves, the Caithness group had completed 11 squares and the

Falklands spinners in action at the Community School

Stanley group only two.

However, ever the teacher, Mrs Adams-Leach sent all the guild knitters away with patterns, needles and homework to do.

When the panels using the patterns chosen by the Stanley spinners are completed they will be exchanged between the guilds so that the front panel of the Stanley cushion will be from Caithness and theirs will be from the Falklands.

There are plans to do another challenge in the future between the two guilds.

Mrs Adams-Leach said: "Many thanks to all the people who made the day possible, from the washing and carding of the fleece, the baking of delicious cakes for a very welcome smoko and of course the technical assistants from both north and south who made the whole project possible."

Remembering Peter Lapsley

It is with sadness we announce the death of long time friend of the Falklands Peter Lapsley on August 3 age 70.

Mr Lapsley visited the Islands a number of times in his professional capacity when he worked for the Aviation Security Section of the Department of Transport and for many years he served on the Executive Committee of the Falkland Islands Association.

However, his real love was fly fishing and, in his retirement, he escorted a number of groups down to the Islands to fish. He wrote a book 'Fishing for Falklands Sea Trout' and ran fly fishing courses in the Islands, sponsored by the Shackleton Scholarship Fund.

His father, Air Marshall Sir John Lapsley, a founder member of the UK Falkland Islands Committee, spent his early childhood in the Islands. Mr Lapsley's funeral will take place in London on Monday August 19 and the Islands will be represented by Suke Cameron.

Falklands and Ascension education exchange

THE Falkland Islands and Ascension Island education departments are examining the potential for collaborative projects.

Acting Director of Education Tom Hill met with representatives of the Ascension Island Government and discussed opportunities for taking advantage of each other's expertise, he explained at Wednesday's meeting of the Education Board Committee.

With teachers travelling through Ascension when taking leave in the UK, he thought it might be possible for them to leave a few days earlier and offer training at the school in Ascension which caters for around 100 children age three to sixteen.

The Ascension department might be persuaded to cover the costs of the teachers stay during their time there. He also felt the Falkland Islands and Ascension might be able to share the costs of visiting trainers, and there could also be an opportunity for staff to swap roles.

Planned focus on training centre

"A BIG focus," will be required on the Training Centre in the future, Acting Director of Education Tom Hill told Wednesdays Education Board Committee Meeting.

He also said he had emphasised this in a file for the incoming Director of Education.

Currently the full time post of Tutor/Assessor Carpentry remains vacant due to the post being turned down. In the meantime the centre will train a new assessor in PWD and plans to use, "expert witnesses to sign candidates evidence," and engage a casual trainer until the full time post is filled.

Young apprentices are currently on work placement which covers their training requirements for the time being. The apprenticeship Scheme Co-ordinator hopes to take a further qualification in order to teach and assess carpentry in future.

Mr Hill noted there was no reason in the future why private contractors could not take over aspects of the training.

Farewells and new faces at FICS and IJS

RE-ADVERTISING is to take place for a caretaker/crossing warden position at the Infant Junior School (IJS/Camp Ed).

Undertaken by Willie Bowles for many years, Acting Director of Education Tom Hill said Mr Bowles had, "big shoes to fill." The popular member of school staff is known for his 'high-five' to not only every child that trotted over the zebra crossing on Villiers Street but also the occasional teacher too.

At the Education Board Committee meeting on Wednesday, while paying tribute to Mr Bowles contribution to the safety of the school children, Mr Hill said he considered the job a very good one and hoped those who had shown interest in the past would apply.

After 20 years work, the IJS will also say goodbye to Anna Stening who has undertaken many roles at the school most recently on the senior leadership team. Acting Deputy Head Jackie Cooper is also due to leave at the end of the academic year. She held the role of acting Head Teacher for a period, and was described by a member of the committee as having, "done a great job."

Others leaving include class teacher Robin Cooper, Kieran and Sara Edwards (Camp Ed), Special Educational needs teacher Christine Houston, settlement teacher Jackie Adams and Mr Hill himself.

FICS

The new Head Teacher Martin Winward has arrived and is beginning a handover period.

Mr Hill reported at Wednesday's meeting that the job description for the new examinations officer/vocational post has been created. It has still to be evaluated before being advertised locally. In the past the role was undertaken by FICS teacher Emma Edwards in an unofficial capacity.

Mr Hill also noted that an appointment of a new Learning Support Assistant is imminent and a vacancy for a senior LSA has arisen as the current post holder has secured a well paid job in the Social Services Department.

The school is also advertising for a Higher Level teaching assistant, and an English teacher post and a complex needs teacher post will be advertised in September.

The school is due to lose Acting Headmistress Helen Bell as well as PE teacher Ruth Kemp, "who hopes to return," one day said Mr Hill, and Laila Salt who is off to work in Eastern Europe. Both completed two years at the school.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I THINK we may have broken a record at this week's Mineral Resources Committee meeting, having completed parts one and two in around eight minutes. To be fair it was an additional meeting to allow papers on requests for licence extensions to meet an early August Executive Council deadline. As we approach the dissolution of this Assembly we have to anticipate what may come up before a number of committees cease operating until November. Various statutory committees continue to function in the interim and Executive Council can meet to deal with urgent items so that things do not come to a total standstill.

At a meeting with officials we attempted to identify what problems arise when individuals want access to funding for training, professional development or succession planning. I hope a more coherent policy will emerge because a situation where funding remains unspent while deserving people are denied funding is obviously unsatisfactory. The committee that oversaw training was disbanded during the life of a previous Assembly, probably for good reason, as committees tend to do, it had become too large and unwieldy. Unfortunately responsibility then appears to have been spread too widely and I'm aware of some ad hoc decisions being made while many employees and others believed the rules were too rigid to meet changing needs.

We had an interesting session on road designation the general gist of which seemed to be that we need rules for safety and insurance reasons but some seemed reluctant to call it designation. I'm still optimistic that common sense will prevail and we can deal with the sticking points like farm road crossings in a pragmatic way. As I said last week much of East Falkland still functions around designated roads so it cannot be beyond reason that West Falkland can too. Young people can still develop their driving skills on privately owned land and arguably they learn more there than they can on roads.

I am taking twelve days holiday but will fly back on August 18 to be here for the final meeting of the Legislative Assembly on August 22.

Task Force leader dies

ADMIRAL Sir John "Sandy" Woodward, who led the Royal Navy task force to retake the Falkland Islands after they were invaded by Argentina, died on Monday at the age of 81 after a long illness.

Defence Secretary Philip Hammond said: "I am saddened by the news that Admiral Sir John "Sandy" Woodward, has died and my thoughts are with his family at this difficult time.

"Admiral Woodward served his country with distinction throughout his career, but he will be best remembered by many as the Navy's Fighting Admiral after he led the Royal Navy Task Force, sent by Margaret Thatcher, to re-take the Falkland Islands in 1982.

"Following this magnificent achievement he served as the Deputy Chief of the Defence Staff and went on before retirement to be the Flag Aide-de Camp to the Queen."

Admiral Sir George Zambellas, First Sea Lord, said "Admiral Sir Sandy Woodward will always be remembered for his powerful and clear command of the Royal Navy Task Force that retook the Falkland Islands in 1982.

"Undaunted by the challenge of fighting a capable enemy over 8000 miles from the UK, in the most demanding and extreme of weather conditions, and against uncertain odds, Admiral Woodward's inspirational leadership and tactical acumen, meshing the realities of the higher political command at home with the raw and violent fight at sea, was a major factor in shaping the success of the British forces in the South Atlantic.

"Highly regarded and widely respected within the military, he will be sorely missed and our thoughts are with his family and friends at this difficult time."

Admiral Woodward last year told the Telegraph of his dismay about subsequent cuts to the Royal Navy, saying the service would no longer be able to mount a similar expedition to the Falklands.

He also said the service should have taken more credit for the role it played in liberating the Islands.

"It's not the Navy that I joined at the age of 13, or that I served in during the Falklands," he told the Telegraph.

"I accept change, but not serious change for the worse. If you are a naval professional, then a Navy without an aircraft carrier and the right aircraft on board is comparable to the Swiss navy."

He was also unapologetic about his decision to sink the General Belgrano.

He said: "It's very simple. There was the Belgrano and two destroyers armed with Exocet missiles milling around in the southern ocean. I know from experience that while they were within 200 miles of our ships, they could have us overnight. So I wanted them removed, didn't I?"

The London Evening Standard newspaper's defence editor Robert Fox, who landed on the Falklands with the assault troops in 1982, said Admiral Woodward could be "quite peppery" but got through by "sheer grit."

Gilbert House circulated the following press release:

"The people and Government of the Falkland Islands were very saddened to hear of the death of Admiral Sir Sandy Woodward. They recall with gratitude the important part he played in the Liberation of the Islands from Argentine Forces in 1982. Their thoughts and prayers are with his family and friends at this sad time."

Falklands send support to Gibraltar

THE Falkland Islands Government has sent a message of continued support to Chief Minister Fabian Picardo and the people of Gibraltar.

The Honourable Ian Hansen said: "On behalf of the people and Government of the Falkland Islands, I would like to say how concerned we are to learn of the rising tensions between yourselves and Spain.

"We are pleased to hear the strong messages from the British Government in support of Gibraltar and would like to echo those sentiments. We hope that the situation does not escalate and that a swift resolution to the current crisis can be found.

"We send our warm good wishes to our friends in Gibraltar and wish to let them know that we are thinking of them during this difficult time."

Spain claims sovereignty over the strategic outpost, which stands on the southernmost tip of the Iberian peninsula but has been a British Overseas Territory since the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713.

Stalwart FIC man dies age 58

MANY employees of the Falkland Islands Company Ltd will be saddened to learn of the premature death of Ray Burke on Sunday July 28. He died at the early age of 58.

He would also be known to many other Islanders who visited the old offices in Whitechapel, as well as more recently in Bishop Stortford.

Ray had been a stalwart member of the FIC team for 35 years, working originally out of the London Office from 1978, and was very much involved in the management, ordering and shipping of goods to the Islands.

An FIC spokesperson said: "He was always one of the quiet background team, and totally dependable. There will be many Islanders who will especially remember and must be grateful for his efforts in 1982 when there was a dramatic need to replace equipment lost during the war, not only by FIC but other farms and businesses that were so badly affected. He worked untold hours to make sure that everything possible was shipped on the next AES.

"When he started with the company, it was almost impossible to communicate between London and Stanley by telephone. He was very much in the forefront when Telex became the latest thing, followed by fax a few years later and ultimately to all the instant means of communication we have today."

He leaves a wife Lesley, a son and two daughters to whom our sympathy is extended.

Community service for 'pocketing' cash

STANLEY woman Lucy Butler (22) was sentenced to 75 hours community service in the Senior Magistrate's Court on Wednesday after she admitted stealing cash from FIGAS employees.

Ros Check prosecuting told the court that Miss Butler had been employed by Pegasus Services to undertake cleaning at the Falkland Islands Government Air Service offices at Stanley Airport. Having noticed the disappearance of small quantities of cash from employees tea and biscuit collection, the police were informed and one £10 and two £5 notes were marked with an infrared pen. Police kept watch on the premises and following Miss Butler's departure on the evening of June 11 entered the FIGAS building and found the notes had been removed.

Miss Butler was apprehended and the notes found in her possession. She admitted taking the £20 saying it was to pay off her mounting debts, but denied any other allegations.

Defence lawyer Mark Neves said Miss Butler had shown considerable remorse and had accepted the seriousness of the offence.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said there was absolutely no excuse for what Miss Butler had done. She had been trusted to do a job and instead, "rooted around, found money and decided to pocket it," he said.

The police were to be commended on their quick response and using old fashioned methods, to catch a thief, he said, adding that such behaviour was against the accepted norms of Falklands' society and needed to be repaid in the form of unpaid work for the community.

"You've sailed close to the wind Miss Butler, I don't expect to see you again," Mr Gumsley said.

Driving ban and a trial

STANLEY man Martyn Gilson-Clarke (33) was fined a total of £435 in the Magistrates Criminal Court on Friday, (August 2) after he admitted driving whilst under the influence of alcohol.

The court heard evidence that on the Friday July 5, a mobile police patrol witnessed him driving erratically on Ross Road. A breathalyser test gave a reading of 77mg of alcohol in 100mls of breath. "I had three beers and went home to change before going back to the pub. It was a mistake and I regret it now," said Mr Gilson-Clarke, adding, "The road was icy, "I don't think it was my bad driving."

He was disqualified from driving for 12 months, fined £350 and ordered to pay £85 costs.

Trial date set

A trial date of September 4 was set for MPA man Clarence William Youde (54) after he denied a charge of sexually touching without consent. Mr Youde was released on conditional bail pending the trial.

1. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? At a friend's wedding in my early 20s the best man's speech included some excellent advice on relationships: "When you are in the wrong, admit you are in the wrong. When you are in the right, keep quiet"

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Lucy Liu. I should probably leave it at that in case I dig myself into a hole. In fact I think I just heard a JCB starting up.....

3. If you had a motto, what would it be? There's a piece of doggerel from Milton Berle which goes: "I'd rather be a could-be if I cannot be an are; because a could-be is a maybe who is reaching for a star. I'd rather be a has-been than a might-have-been, by far; for a might have-been has never been, but a has was once an are"

4. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Tardiness. Punctuality is about respecting others

5. What is your favourite TV programme? West Wing. It's a great blend of social comment, intellect and humour

6. What's the best book you have read recently? "Quiet" by Susan Cain. It's about how it's ok to be an introvert! As a life-long introvert in a family of (largely) extroverts it was a real epiphany

7. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Tea. I come from a family of inveterate tea drinkers

8. What did you want to be when you were a child? I can recall, as a teenager, being determined to be a marine biologist. Before that I wavered between professional cricketer and lumberjack!

What price a cuppa tea?

OUT shopping and it's smoko time. What better than to rest a while with a good cuppa and a chat with friends, and once settled there is a good chance one (or two) of those rather tasty looking cakes is going to make it to the table too.

But how much does it cost for that refreshing cuppa around Stanley's cateries?

Penguin News set off to find out and while the temptation was to also go and sample a cuppa in each establishment, knowing our inability to say no to cakes, we mainly settled for our own brew and the phone book.

As the price mounted the purse also breathed a sigh of relief. One cup of tea in any of the cafes and restaurants contacted costs at least 16p more than a box of 80 Tesco Every Day Value tea bags (59p West Store).

Still everyone deserves a treat, but if you want a social cup of tea to match your budget, here's a run down of your choices.

If you fancy a cuppa on the run, Stanley Bakery comes in at a very reasonable 75p, but if a sit down and chat at a cafe or restaurant is on your agenda then the Seamens' Mission, Wirebird, Michelle's Cafe and the Woodbine offer good value at 80p a cup.

Jac's Cafe cuppa is only 10p more at 90p and Shorty's Diner offers up tea for exactly £1.

With their speciality beverages on offer, Bittersweet and the West Store come in at £1.25, while Tasty Treats will expect another five pence on top of that.

Malvina House Hotel and The Waterfront Kitchen Cafe are a little more expensive at £1.30 and £1.40 respectively, however both offer a pot of tea (two cups) so if you are wanting to linger over your cuppa they offer decent value.

Cups of tea are also on offer in Stanley pubs, however for the purposes of this exercise we decided not to include them. In the future we may be popping around to check out a the price of a glass of beer, however.

Open to bribery - who us?

Working in the Falkland Islands

LAST week the Government launched a consultation exercise on proposals to reform the immigration system. This week's article explores some of the proposed changes that would affect working in the Falkland Islands, and specifically Work Permits.

The consultation proposes a number of changes to the current system of Work Permits. This is considered necessary to encourage workers to come to the Islands to meet employment needs that cannot be met locally. Crucially, the proposals also seek to address weaknesses in the current system that pose difficulties for employers and that are a disincentive to attracting people who may wish to settle in the Islands in the longer-term.

The Falkland Islands needs people to come and work here to reinforce its labour market and help build and expand its skills and knowledge. Supporting this, the Islands also needs its population to grow and, therefore, the Islands has to be an attractive, long term prospect for those migrants which the Islands would wish to have here.

At present those coming to work here have to apply for a Work Permit and they must have already secured employment – this would continue, however changes are proposed regarding the length of work permits and different types of work permit are suggested.

First, it is proposed that Work

Immigration reform proposals By FIG Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham

Permits can be granted for a maximum period of up to four years, instead of the current two. This will allow employers to commit to longer term planning, and provide greater surety in their labour force. Extending the maximum period of the Work Permit will also create an incentive for migrants to look to the Islands as a longer term prospect and seek to set down roots, bringing their families with them and integrating with the community. It will enable a smoother progression to PRP (linking in with the three years lawful presence required). At present, workers coming to the Islands on a two year work permit would need to secure a further Work Permit if they wished to remain on the Islands. This creates uncertainty and is a disincentive for migrants to look to the Islands in the longer term – indeed the current system promotes a constant 'churn' of contractors who come to the Islands with no intention or prospect of making the Falklands their home.

Second, it is proposed that different types of work permit be issued for different types of worker. The changes would enable fast-track processing for workers who have very specialised skills that are not present in the Islands, and would also eliminate the need for workers to hold a separate work permit for every job that they do – at present there are workers who hold ten, fifteen, and even over twenty separate Work Permits. This is difficult to manage and makes little economic or administrative sense.

Four categories of Work Permit are suggested to cover the main areas of migrant labour the Falkland Islands will need in the future:

- Specialist Work Permit: These will be international professionals with a high degree of experience, training, and qualifications. Their skills/knowledge may be unique to a field, be in high demand and be unavailable within the Islands. Individuals coming under this category could benefit from fast track, priority processing of applications – but will be subjected to the same scrutiny as all other applications.

- General Work Permit: These will be individuals with an expertise, experience and qualifications in a particular field. This will be a category of worker where there is potential to invest in training for Falkland Islanders to take some posts in coming years (but where there are currently no skills in the Islands).

- Worker Work Permit: A worker will be an individual filling a role which requires little or no specialist training or experience. This category is designed to create a flexible 'pool' of semi- and un-skilled workers, for example agricultural labourers, hospitality staff, shop workers, who can be deployed across sectors without the need for multiple Work Permits. Migrants will be issued with a single 'Worker Permit' covering the semi- and un-skilled sectors and there will be no need to secure a separate work permit for each separate job.

- Seasonal Worker Work Permit: This will be a more restricted Permit to cover the seasonal labour requirements of the Islands – commonplace in the agricultural, fishing and tourism industries. These permits will be time-limited to a maximum of nine months. The worker would not be able to bring any dependants with them and must leave at the end of the Permit. The labour will be able to be shared between employers in the sector so, for example, three farmers could employ the same shearer who would only require a single work permit.

All members of the public are invited to attend the various consultation events that are planned. Anyone wishing to complete the consultation document should contact the Policy Unit, or can take part online at www.survey.gov.fk

Next week's article will explore proposals regarding living in the Falkland Islands.

Clyde's new commander

HMS Clyde's Commanding Officer handed over the reins of command to his relief late last month.

After bringing the ship alongside in East Cove military port for the last time before being relieved as Captain, Lt Cdr Marcus Hember said: "This is a sad day for me. I have thoroughly enjoyed my time in the Falkland Islands and it had been an honour and privilege to command HMS Clyde."

The new Commanding Officer, Lt Cdr Dan Thomas joined Clyde on Thursday afternoon having commanded her sister Ship HMS Tyne since January 2012.

The new Captain joined the Royal Navy in 1995 and trained as a pilot flying Gazelle, Sea King and Lynx helicopters before joining the Surface Flotilla, serving in HMSs Sutherland and Portland, in which he has previously visited the Falkland Islands during his appointment as Executive Officer and Second in Command.

Islands games success and cycling madness

THE Falklands athletes at the Small Islands Games ratcheted up their performance impressively this year. When this festival was launched in the 1990s, the standard was too high for the Falklands in almost every event. But this year there was that investment in sport at home was paying dividends. Kelper heads were held very high, especially among the footballers, who returned home with bronze medals. That was a seriously good achievement in what was probably the most contested event. Well done, fellers!

The Brits are on something of a sporting roll too. For a long time, the UK was known as the nation that invented half of the world's sports, and then forgot how to play them. But despite continued griping about the selling-off of school playing fields and the ever-expanding girth of the nation's children, people are rediscovering the pleasure of getting involved in sport - and (good Lord!) actually winning.

This summer, Britain grabbed back the big prize at Wimbledon, snatched cycling kudos from the French, and even walked tall on the cricket pitch.

The down side from my (very narrow) point of view is that the entire country appears to have taken to cycling. In a national cardio-vascular sense, that's great, but in terms of people in spandex pants riding three abreast as they text and talk to each other on mobiles, it's not.

This sport was much on my mind last weekend as I tried to drive to Richmond Park for a walk and a picnic in the sun. Half the streets in West London, and stretching well into Sussex, had been blocked off to accommodate the two-wheeled equivalent of the London Marathon.

My cursing of this human wave of wheels, gears and spandex was loud and colourful. Ironically, though, when we finally did reach the park, we were too hot and bothered to walk. So we hired bikes. I guess this means that the UK's sporting renaissance is complete.

A child's misery makes us think

After five years or more of grim recession, war fighting, unemployment, official austerity and personal belt-tightening, Britain has become a distinctly depressed place. One might think that by now we would be numb and injured to bad news. But, as one recent and appallingly sad event demonstrated, Brits have retained the ability to feel for individuals whose personal suffering eclipses anything that most have experienced or can understand.

I am talking about the dreadful neglect and murder of an unloved four-year-old called Daniel. This crime was so tragic, sad and disturbing that most of us in this country were sent into paroxysms of distress and guilt.

I will not go into too many details, partly because they are just too upsetting. Suffice it to say that the four-year-old was denied the love which was his birthright, then starved, beaten, and finally murdered.

This is not the first time that the nation has been rocked by such cruelty. The case of "Baby Peter" had a similar effect on the nation several years ago, and I am sure that there are almost daily cases of child cruelty that barely merit mention in the national newspapers. But the case of Daniel was so dreadful that we could not ignore it.

Predictably, our misery and guilt were expressed in the form of extreme anger against the man and woman who were supposed to care for the child (they will not emerge from prison for many decades), and a desire to allocate blame among the authorities who should have acted in time to save Daniel's life. Indeed, I shared this need to know why the child had been let down by a supposedly sophisticated society.

Why were teachers at the nursery school attended by the child not horrified by his emaciated state and the ravenous hunger that led him to steal food and scavenge from bins? Why did social workers not take him from his home without a second's hesitation? Why did the police not save him? Most disturbingly, perhaps, why did neighbours and ordinary people who saw him on the street not just grab Daniel and take him away?

This national self-examination will go on for a while, and then, I regret to say, it will be largely forgotten. Child abuse will continue at the hands of devious and unspeakably cruel adults, but as a nation we will not wring our hands with grief and anger until another Daniel dies.

I don't feel the need to link all of my columns with the Falklands, and I wondered if I could legitimately do that with this one. As it happens, I think I can. Happily, I can think of no case of neglect in the Falklands that approaches the tragedy that I have just described. But I do know that when I was growing up in the Islands some children were unloved and suffered abuse at the hands of adults. I don't think that, as a society, we did as much as we should have to protect them.

But I believe that has changed. A more enlightened society with official mechanisms in place to notice abuse and intervene where necessary means that children are safer. I think that this change for the better was exemplified during recent examination of cases of historic sexual abuse. This led to a perpetrator's imprisonment decades after the young people were attacked.

It is easier to look after the vulnerable and deprived in a tiny society like ours, but even so, it is to our credit that, by and large and to the best of my knowledge, we do.

It is much harder in a country of some 65 million people. But that challenge - Daniel's legacy - is, nevertheless, an imperative for Britain.

Special areas celebrating a special place

WEST Falkland resident Clare Cockwell is leading an Overseas Territory Environment Programme (OTEP) project looking at a Protected Areas strategy for the Falkland Islands. The aim of the project is to work with landowners and other interested parties to develop an outline system to be considered by FIG.

Many landowners are rightly proud of their land management and wonder whether such areas are necessary. Some may be suspicious of creeping bureaucracy. Mrs Cockwell is keen to reassure landowners that the project starts from the basis that designations would be voluntary, that site management would be tailored to the individual site and landowner and that they would be time limited. The focus is supporting the good work that is happening already by promoting a scheme which would benefit all parties through advice and resources. Recreational access would only be considered where it is appropriate to the aims for the site (e.g. Cape Pembroke); there would be no presumption of access.

The Camp is in the midst of significant change and this triggers concerns about loss of identity and loss of control. As a long-time Fox Bay resident, Mrs Cockwell is conscious of this and is keen to emphasise that the project is all about celebrating the special places and unique lifestyle. As an example she cites the Patricia Luxton National Nature Reserve, a stronghold for many of our rarest plants preserved by the traditional practice of setting aside an area just for horse grazing. This is now receiving the acclaim it deserves along with some sensitive interpretation for visitors.

A collective effort by landowners, researchers and the local community has identified an area that is deserving of recognition and celebration. This is a model for the project.

This was precisely the motivation that resulted in the majority of countries developing a twin track approach to conservation with efforts to protect rare species and also to protect and enhance special areas.

As Mrs Cockwell points out "Despite technological and scientific advances none of us can be sure what changes are around the corner. Climate change, global market fluctuations and economic development could all impact on our special areas - isn't it worth thinking about what we can do to identify and protect them in a fashion that is appropriate to our way of life?"

Mrs Cockwell launched a consultation paper at this year's Farmers' Week outlining some ideas about how we might look after some of our special places in the future. She says, "This has already generated a whole range of views and some really useful suggestions. It's something that really shouldn't be rushed, so I'll continue to accept written contributions until September 1, as well as visiting as many landowners as possible to discuss the issues. I'd really like to hear from you, whether you are a landowner or a potential user of a government-owned reserve or national park"

If you haven't had a copy of the paper and would like one, do get in touch at; protectedareas@conservation.org.fk, or phone up for a chat.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RF1P may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

OOPS! I've done it again. My last article should not have read 'Falklands seeds'. I meant to say F1, that is, 'Ef One' seeds.

These are seeds are taken from plants of the same family which have different but desirable qualities.

This could be vigour, colour, size, or all three. They are then crossed and carefully nurtured. The seeds they produce are known as F1 hybrids and usually by this method, great plants are produced. However, if in turn we were to use the seeds of the resulting plants again (always assuming they produce any) it is very unlikely that they would once again come true and would be more likely to be rather inferior.

So, to propagate those it pays to take cuttings or break up the clumps. It might be, in some cases, that you can take root cuttings, but I'm only talking about ornamental plants; for vegetables it really pays to buy another packet of seeds when you run out. And with parsnips fresh seeds are needed every year anyway.

It has happened again, a beautiful day, cool and crisp and totally lacking wind had me outside standing on my little board and weeding happily. Half a border later, I was finding it hard to straighten up. I guess my back was a little unused to this treatment. But oh what bliss to see clean bits of ground.

It was not before time either. I was working in one of the older, more established parts of the garden and the couch grass is very much a part of that establishment. The stuff goes everywhere underground, the long white roots making their way through plants and clumps of bulbs.

They even go through the actual lily bulbs, worse, they then start growing through them and other plants.

At that stage the only answer is to lift the whole plant or clump of bulbs and remove the 'nest' of white roots as carefully as possible as any bits left behind will re-grow.

I came in that evening (have you noticed how the days are lengthening at last) full of plans to finish that border and move on to the next one the next day.

As with all good intentions, this was not to be. A wet, windy and totally miserable morning greeted me the next day and it has been pretty much the same since. Maybe this week?

A little bit of sunshine has me immediately longing to start germinating seeds but, looking at the garden I see that although weeds there are a-plenty, they are all mature ones and so far there are no signs of new ones sprouting up.

Clearly it's not just cold out there but the light levels are not favourable either, so I will be sensible and hold off for a little while longer.

Meanwhile, it is a good time to test the PH of the soil. I bought a little test kit at the garden centre to see what was what with our vegetable garden. I know it is mainly acid and most veg thrive in that as does the ornamental garden but, if the reading is lower than 6.5 then all brassicas will benefit from a bit of lime.

Again the Garden Centre has various types, all with their own, easy to follow instructions and this is the ideal time to use it for it pays not to use it at the same time as fertilisers.

Wandering around I saw that a couple of variegated shrubs were reverting to a plain leaf area. I removed the whole branch showing this for if left alone the much stronger growth of the plain green leaves would quickly take over the whole plant.

The Crocus are starting to flower. At the moment, only the lovely large purple and white striped ones are doing so. I don't know which variety they are. I guess I've admired it and some kindly person has given me some in the distant past.

I suspect it is the one called 'Pickwick' and it's lovely. Next to appear will be the large and lustrous deep purple ones, so dark they appear black until the sun hits them.

The snowdrops are also starting to show their flowers, while the muscari (grape hyacinth) are well under way with the various blues appearing at different times at the moment. Fortunately they flower long enough for all the blues to be on show together eventually.

The polyanthus primroses in their various colours are also getting in on the act, and no doubt given another month or so the auricula primulas will also add their bit of colour to the whole.

I don't mind them being rather later than the others as they keep flowering well for a very long time.

I am glad to see a bit of daylight on waking in the morning, at last. I really dislike this new system of 'summer time' all year.

I remember living in Camp, that getting up in the dark, especially at lamb-marking time, or for a long gather, made perfect sense.

You saddled the horse by Tilley lamp and got to the area you were gathering by daylight. It meant you still had the whole day ahead. The clock now may perhaps be useful for some, but I would like to see what I'm sure was promised at the time. That was that we would also try 'winter time' or, if you prefer, the 'natural time' for a year too!

And now I'm off to put a large bucket over some rhubarb for some early, juicy stems later.

League winners Penguins: (l-r) Kyran Evans, Ricardo Leyton, Paula Munoz, Marcus Morrison, Duane Evans and Kevin Ross

WINNERS of the Russell Smith Memorial Trophy 2013, Penguins defeated Panthers thirteen goals to one in the only match last week.

Though the League is yet to finish officially, Penguins have secured an unbeatable lead ahead of the other hockey teams, and Team Captain Marcus Morrison is looking forward to carrying on their winning momentum in to the next competition the Stanley Cup.

There's been a swap of ladies on the team with Paula Munoz returning to fill the departure of Sarah Shepherd from the club.

And there are other changes on the horizon for the club.

Due to the difficulties of getting goals to fill in for teams it is looking likely that Hurricanes and Panthers are going to be combined as one team confirmed Dek Hockey Secretary Martyn Barlow.

Fixtures for the Stanley Cup will be readdressed as a result but reorganising of teams is necessary for the club to hold the competition.

The club has lost a few of its key players but Mr Barlow is sure there will be an injection of new players stepping up locally and from MPA. He added that in the mean time if a team is short of players (due to illness/ work or holidays) then they can be brought up to strength by a non playing team member.

Changes are to be confirmed but teams will be informed and updates posted on their website: www.falklandislandsdekhockey.com

Bob Gilbert wins August Decor Medal

EIGHTEEN golfers signed in for the August Medal on Sunday which is sponsored by Decor Services.

The field was boosted by five golfers from Mount Pleasant, including Paul Holliday, whose links to the club date back to the 1990s when during one of his visits he posted the then course record round of 69, three over par, as in those days the 15th was a Par 4 and has since been extended to a Par 5. This was a particularly excellent score, as back then golfers shared the 60 acre paddock with flocks of sheep destined for the butchery.

The calm conditions promised good scoring but rusty swings and punishing rough meant that not many finished with the ball that they started with.

The winter medals are Stableford this year. This is to promote faster play in normally bitter cold conditions and ease the torture on new golfers, allowing them to pick up once they are unable to register a score. Kevin Clapp, on fine winter form, shot a steady round of 74 for 36 points and second place, the winner, on a count back and collecting ten treasured Falklands Cup points was Bob Gilbert. The club wishes to thank Decor Services for their generous sponsorship of the twelve monthly Medals.

The Falklands Cup is a biennial team event. Two teams of eleven play for the trophy over two days in a Ryder Cup style. The Kelpers XI are golfers born in the Falkland Islands, the Presidents XI is a team of newer locals from all around the world. The top eight for each side are automatically selected from their league position and the team Captains have the unenviable task of choosing the three wildcards and a reserve. The holders of the trophy are the magnificent Kelpers.

The next fixture is a match against MPA, scheduled for August 31, weather permitting. The September Medal will take place on Sunday September 1; sign in at 10am for a 10.15am tee-off.

Tea times will revert to normal for the October Medal and the start of weekly competitions. There will be a series of Stablefords in September, this is for new golfers to try their hand at playing in competitions before the start of the summer season. Glenn Ross

Habitat Restoration Project Officer - Falklands Conservation

Stanley, Falkland Islands

Start date: 1st September 2013
 Term: 4 months, fixed term appointment
 Hours of work: Full Time, 37.5 hrs per week
 Salary: £19,000 pro rata
 Responsible to: CEO Falklands Conservation, Stanley, Falkland Islands
 Closing date: 19th August 2013

OVERALL PURPOSE OF THE JOB

- Carry out an FIG Environmental Studies Budget project setting up the first Native Seed Hub in the Falkland Islands
- Establish a restoration field trial using wild-collected, native seed.
- Work in partnership with the Department of Agriculture and Stanley Nurseries, to move forward in tackling a long term goal to reduce soil erosion and improve the status of biodiversity of productive land in the Falkland Islands.

Main duties:

1. Implement the experimental design for the field trials including sourcing materials and a volunteer workforce.
 2. Train project partner staff in species identification, seed collecting and monitoring techniques and assist Stanley nurseries with seed emergence trials.
 3. Coordinate preparation, planting out and maintenance of the beds in the Native Seed Hub. At the end of the contract you will leave project partner staff fully prepared to carry out the necessary monitoring at the end of the growing season.
 4. Ensure the success of the planned research by developing and maintaining productive relationships with partners and other stakeholders.
- To obtain a full job description and application form please contact Farrah Peck at adminofficer@conservation.org.fk

Plenty to smile about as results roll in for Falklands' students

Ross GCSE

Ariane BTech

Sorrel GCSEs

Mari-Ann A Levels

THE Falkland Islands Community School received the first set of GCSE results for 2013 on Tuesday and they, "reflect the hard work of students," stated Head Master Martin Winward that day.

He told Penguin News: "It is always a nervous time for students as they eagerly await their examination results. The initial results for Year 11 were downloaded in the early hours thanks to Mrs Brook. The first wave of results included Business Studies, English Language, Geography, Information and Communication as well as Music.

The final set of results were available to students and parents from yesterday and he asked: "Please can those students who are unable to come into school and would like their results forwarding, please provide the School Secretary, Mrs Bates, with your contact email address."

Mr Winward added: "Mrs Brook will be in school along with Mr Isaacs and I, to complete the final examination analysis in preparation for students considering their Post 16 options. I hope students' individual results today mirror the hard work they have put into their studies throughout Year 10 and Year 11."

He said, "I would like to take this opportunity to thank parents, teachers and support staff for their commitment also during this time and look forward to providing a more detailed account including headline figures in due course."

Particularly happy with her results was Sorrel Pompert Robertson who achieved an A* for Music and an A in Information and Communication Technology (ICT).

Others who provided Penguin News with their results were Hannah McPhee who was, "extremely happy." Hannah achieved an A in English Language and a B in ICT which she took a year earlier than usual. She was also waiting for results in Catering and Physics.

Ollie Hayward was also, "Rather chuffed," with his two Cs out of three results. He had expected those to be his hardest to achieve said his Dad, so Ollie was now, "half way home."

Bronwen Ford's mum Julie said Bronwen was also happy with her results so far which included a C in English and a D in ICT. Amy Guest achieved an A in music and a B in ICT.

Ross Stewart who took English a year early obtained an excellent C grade.

Amy Guest achieved B in ICT and an A in music. She said: "They were exactly what I hoped for. I had to work really hard for those grades. I'm not someone who can just suddenly get good grades easily." Amy hopes to attend Peter Symonds College and study the three sciences and early history if all goes well with her remaining results.

In the Falklands and overseas a number of students have also been receiving A Level and other course results.

Tasmin Tyrrell, speaking from the Museum and National Trust said she was, "very happy," with hers. She achieved a C in A Level English Literature, a D in History and a D in English Language.

Nick Roberts will have been delighted with a distinction and two merits in an Extended Diploma in Popular Music and Jess McPhee passed her Media Studies A Level.

Another with a future planned is Ariane Goss. Ariane achieved two distinctions and distinction starred in a BTech in Travel and Tourism Extended Diploma. She will head off to Bournemouth University in September to begin a BA (Hons) Degree in Tourism Management.

Lesley Stewart obtained an impressive A in A Level Psychology, B in Sociology and a B in Geography and Mari-Ann Clarke achieved a B in Health and Social Care a C in Sociology and a D in Psychology. Mari-Ann will attend Swansea University.

At the time of going to print we were unable to contact all GCSE and A Level students, so help us celebrate your results next week. Contact us on email: editor@penguinnews.co.fk

wool shawl

PRINCE George has been spotted on Sky News wrapped in the woven wool shawl gifted to the Royal newborn by the people of the Falkland Islands.

It was also reported yesterday that a letter of thanks written on behalf of the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge has been received by the Legislative Assembly of the Falkland Islands expressing thanks for the gifts received.

MLA Ian Hansen said that Members of the Legislative Assembly were delighted to receive the letter of thanks and to hear the reports of Prince George sporting his Falklands shawl.

Training exercise

BRITISH Forces Falkland Islands will be conducting a training exercise on Onion Range and surrounding areas from August 17 to 24. Ground troops will be supported by helicopters and planes from Mount Pleasant. During this exercise there will be a visible increase to the normal flying activity, with some late night flying taking place. This activity is purely routine, said a spokesperson for British forces in the Falklands.

Argentina and Spain join up

SPANISH Foreign Minister Jose Manuel Garcia-Margallo will be visiting Argentina next September to meet with his counterpart Hector Timerman to discuss the Gibraltar and Falklands sovereignty disputes and consider the possibility of a joint front. They plan to discuss whether Spain and Argentina can have a unified position at the UN to challenge the British Government.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

YOUR'S or your offspring's bright, bright future might have arrived etched out in black and white this week, and judging from some of the happy comments we've been hearing, Falklands students have every right to be extremely optimistic about their future careers.

Even if it isn't to everyone's taste I can't apologise for the paper being packed with academic results and news. Quite apart from it being appropriate to applaud the excellent efforts of the young, I enjoy the thought of our descendants pouring over yellowed pages and along with commenting on our quaint use of "real paper" - how environmentally unfriendly, "also enjoying evidence of Granny and Grandad's academic development.

Of course not everyone will be pleased with their results; while some will be disappointed others might even be wondering why they bothered (although let's hope not). But if that is the case don't be too glum, GCSEs are the jumping off point to decision-making, and yes, while they would make life a little easier at this stage, it isn't the end of the world if they are less than was hoped for.

Studying doesn't suit everyone, and happily in the Falklands, just as it should be, being practically minded or having an aptitude for a useful trade is highly valued. So rather than being reduced to clouting your offspring around the ear with a (clearly unopened) text book, instead set them off to check out the available routes required to get them to where they want to be.

At the very least, even if your little Prince or Princess's results really (to coin a youthful phrase) did suck, the positive thing they can tell their potential employers is that they stuck at their courses.

Am I dwelling on the negative when I should be concentrating on high fiving the high flyers? Well maybe, but there's also a part of me that empathises with those parents, that due to the dearth of As Bs and Cs on the piece of paper wrestled out of their child's reluctant clutches, are unable to bounce off the walls with glee. Trust me when I say (and I speak from experience) things generally get better.

Who knows, in years to come when your pal is waxing lyrical about their Applied Physicist genius child's latest contribution to the construction of high-energy colliders (yes I watch the Big Bang Theory) you might be able to casually respond: "that's nice - oh did I tell you, my son/daughter just built me a house."

News from the South

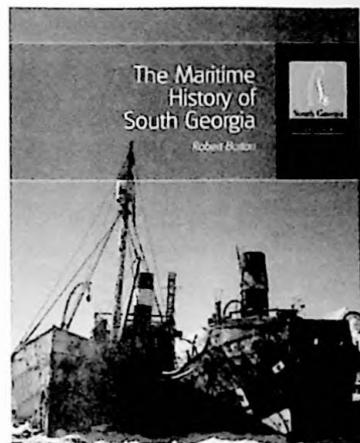

KIERON Fraser will take up the new position of Operations Officer within the Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) in October. Mr Fraser, who is the current Government Officer will deal mainly with logistics. He will be based in the GSGSSI office in the Falklands, but will make regular visits to South Georgia.

Also in South Georgia news, June was a busy month for the fisheries. Several of the six-strong toothfish long-lining fleet made passages to Stanley for mid-season transshipments. During the transshipment the catch is offloaded and verified, and a sample of individual box contents checked, as part of the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) chain of custody process for the certified South Georgia toothfish fishery. Catches through the month varied a little, but remained good. The krill fishing season began with the arrival of the first krill trawler for licensing and inspection on June 16. A further trawler and a reefer vessel arrived two days later.

The following week two more krill trawlers arrived for inspection and licensing. Around this period a severe gale, with winds gusting to 70 knots, caused significant disruption to the fishing vessels, with many vessels seeking shelter closer to the coast or in Cumberland Bay. Few vessels managed to fish for the two days of gales.

Initial krill catches were good and at least two of the krill trawlers attended the reefer in Cumberland Bay to tranship their catch.

A fourth krill trawler was inspected and licensed on June 28.

Maritime History

The Maritime History of South Georgia by Robert Burton has just been published. In this small book the author Robert Burton introduces the history of South Georgia from the perspective of the vessels that have sailed, and occasionally come to grief in, its stormy waters.

Mariners have visited the island as sealers, whalers, explorers, scientists, fishermen and tourists and the book begins with the first sightings of the Island before introducing some of the expedition ships that visited its shores including Shackleton's Endurance.

It includes sections on sealing and whaling and on research ships from the Deutsche Atlantik Expedition ship Meteor to the current BAS ships. Vessels involved in the 1982 War are also covered.

Only 1000 copies have been printed by publisher WildGuides. It costs £5 and is available from the SGHT website <http://www.sght.org> and from the South Georgia Museum.

Suspended sentence for cleaning up jewellery

VERONICA Mieres Tromo (34) was given a six month prison sentence suspended for 12 months on Wednesday for stealing jewellery from three people's homes while she worked as a cleaner.

Miss Mieres had previously admitted five charges of theft to the value of more than £1,000 and a further 19 offences had also been taken into account.

Items ranged in value from £5 to £75 apart from more valuable items of gold jewellery which had been stolen from Sarah Clement.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said the number of people she had stolen from and the significant number of items that had been taken added to the seriousness of the offence as well as the fact she had betrayed those who trusted her to work in their homes.

He said the value of items such as jewellery stemmed from the very real sentimental value.

Mr Gumsley described the offences as "unsophisticated" and "not the hallmark of a proper criminal," but reminded Miss Mieres that she was now a proper criminal.

He said there had been a serious breach of trust not only to those she had stolen from but also to Falklands society which was generally an honest one where people leave houses open and cars unlocked.

He said he had thought long and hard about an immediate custodial sentence but what had saved her from this was an early guilty plea, previous good character and some very special and exceptional circumstances which had been ongoing at the time the thefts took place.

Referring to documents from a private clinic in Santiago, Mr Gumsley said he was satisfied Miss Mieres' 12 year old daughter who lived in Santiago with her grandmother appeared to be suffering from an illness that needed further clarification which was not available within the public health service. Miss Mieres had been motivated to steal by the desire to find the funds for the tests to be undertaken by a private clinic.

Giving evidence under oath Miss Mieres said when she received news of her daughters health and the costs to obtain tests, she had been "desperate".

He stressed that this was no excuse, but provided him with sufficient explanation as to why a woman of previous good character and described as educated and articulate within the pre-sentence report, would do what she had done.

Mr Gumsley made an order that the property currently held by the police should be returned to its rightful owners. He said he regretted it was unrealistic to order prosecution costs and no claim for compensation was made.

Victims' response

Sarah Clement who had several items stolen including an 18 carat gold chain and locket valued at £550 as well as her young daughter's only valuable piece of jewellery which was taken from the child's bedroom, said she could not thank the police enough for their efforts.

"I had not expected any of my items to be found let alone retrieved and although I am still missing items, I am very grateful to be getting some back and that is down to their hard work. I was very upset and shocked when I discovered that we had been robbed and the police were very patient, kind and efficient."

Mrs Clement concluded however: "To say I am disappointed with the sentencing outcome in court though, would be an understatement."

Arlette Betts who owns and manages Lafone House had employed Miss Mieres as a temporary cleaner and had several items including a designer watch stolen. She said she felt her trust had been well and truly betrayed.

"The fact that someone has been rifling through my things makes me feel physically sick," said Ms Betts. She added that she was extremely angry and disappointed at the outcome as she was sure all of the other victims would be. "I feel that the confidence I had in the justice system has now gone, along with the items from my house," she said.

Man waits for pre-sentence report after he admits assault

IN the Criminal Court on Thursday Juan Mauricio Godoy (36) pleaded guilty to assault occasioning actual bodily harm and had his case adjourned until September 4, for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

The court heard that Mr Godoy along with another man had, uninvited, entered a house and then the bedroom in the early hours of July 14 and punched Robert Alfred Duncan in the head.

Mr Duncan claimed he had been hit seven to ten times before they left the house, although his girlfriend who was also there estimated five blows. He then immediately went to the Police Station to report the incident. Medical treatment was required for a graze to his nose and a cut to his head.

In police interview Mr Godoy showed remorse for his actions and said he was angry when he saw Mr Duncan but did not explain why.

In court Mr Godoy said he had been angry because the previous night Mr Duncan had been at his home and had ignored him when asked to leave, the next day after drinking he became upset and knew where Mr Duncan was.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley released Mr Godoy on bail on the conditions he handed his passport in to the police and co-operated fully with the Probation Officer in the preparation of a pre-sentence report.

In the Youth Court a young man had his case adjourned to seek legal advice.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley told the 17 year old that the offence was serious and it may be the court would have to consider all sentencing options.

The case was adjourned until next week.

Licence reinstated

MOUNT Pleasant man Maverick Richard Bowers (30) had his driving licence reinstated as from October 11, after he made a second application to have his two year ban lifted on Wednesday.

Mr Bowers was banned from driving in February 2012 and fined £1,000 when he was found to be drunk in charge of a vehicle. He made his first application to have his licence reinstated in March of this year and reapplied after the regulatory three months had passed.

Mr Bowers said he had learned from his mistake and outlined how his colleagues carried out extra work to cover his duties, adding that his father in Saint Helena, his only living parent, had recently had a heart operation and was dependent on him for financial support. If his licence was reinstated he could work overtime to further support him, he said.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said it was a difficult decision as although Mr Bowers had committed a serious offence, he presented as a "thoroughly decent young man," who was obviously valued by his employers.

In reinstating his licence from October 11, at which point 20 months of the two year ban would have been served, Mr Gumsley said he hoped Mr Bowers would reflect the faith he had in him. "Do it again and I guarantee it will be for a lot longer," he said.

Not just another war book

JEREMY Brown, who was serving in the British Embassy in Brasilia in 1982 has written a short book that he describes as, "not just another one about the Falklands War, about which much has already been written."

'A South American War' Behind The Scenes in The Fight For The Falklands, is essentially a South American perspective on the war, he says. It comprises the "anxieties, concerns, indeed dilemma, facing the other countries of South America when Argentina invaded the Falklands in and not just the various governments, and the positions they took, but also the concerns and views, and position taken by the military and the man in the street." It involves three strands of opinion in each country, often at variance, said Mr Brown.

The Publishing Company is Book Guild Publishing, and the ISBN is: 978 -1 - 84624 - 923 - 5.

The publishing date is set for September 26.

TWOC case adjourned

MEMBER of the British Forces Craig Stuart Kelly (22) pleaded guilty to taking a vehicle without consent (TWOC) and drink driving and had his case adjourned until October 2, for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said it was a case where Mr Kelly after having too much to drink took a vehicle belonging to the Fire Station, dumped it near the sewage treatment plant and then later drove another vehicle.

It was he said, the sort of offence for which the court considered an immediate custodial sentence. He advised Mr Kelly to obtain legal advice on the matter before he next appeared in court.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

WITH Jan popping off to the UK for a much deserved break I have stepped into the breach once again.

We are slightly light again with some of our number being away.

Our friends in Gibraltar continue to receive the unwanted attentions of their large neighbour and it is to be hoped that sanity will prevail. Whatever happens they have our full support and sympathy. Like us, no end of bullying and aggression will bring them to their knees or make them capitulate. It is amazing that one European member can do this to an overseas territory of another member. All the more amazing when Spain themselves have a number of colonies on the Moroccan mainland and coast. I guess like a close neighbour of ours, when the domestic scene gets sticky it's useful to have something to try and distract your population with.

The results of the elections in Argentina will hopefully have acted as a wake up call for the present government and it will be very interesting to see what happens come November. As their economic predicaments become steadily worse we may see their approach to us becoming steadily more erratic.

The plastic driving licences have been quite popular and speaking to Celia at the Station earlier this week, she has so far prepared 258 of them. You will still need the paper ones when you travel as endorsements etc appear on these. This is not peculiar to us but is a common requirement.

It's good to see a start being made on the road into the new caravan park. I actually had a sneaky walk around the site on Monday morning when the snow and frozen ground meant I wasn't going to bog whilst having my mooch.

The consultation on the immigration reform proposals is now underway and I would urge people to avail themselves of the handouts (from the policy unit) and to attend the public presentations at what is being proposed as it is fundamental to our countries future. There is a phone in on FIRS on the 21st on this subject and I hope we can get a cross section of the community expressing their views.

Sir Rex honoured in stamp issues

SOUTH Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands are currently promoting the release of a set of stamps commemorating the life of Sir Rex Hunt. The release of the stamps on June 11 coincided with a memorial service for Sir Rex Hunt at St Clement Danes, the Central Church of the Royal Air Force, London.

The Falkland Islands released a set of stamps at the same time also commemorating the Islands' most well-known Governor.

When Sir Rex came to the Islands in 1980 South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands were dependencies of the Falklands.

In December 1981 he sailed for South Georgia on HMS Endurance accompanied by his wife Mavis. "It is difficult to convey the thrill of one's first sighting of this magnificent island," wrote Rex later in his memoirs 'My Falkland Days'.

Former Falklands Governor David Tatham wrote of the visit in 'The Dictionary of Falklands Biography' (2008) as follows: "This was to be a tour of inspection of the various scientific stations of the British Antarctic Survey (BAS) on the Island; but it proved eventful.

"On a visit to two film-makers, Cindy Buxton and Annie Price, the naval Wasp helicopter in

Sir Rex Hunt was remembered in stamps from both South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands and the Falkland Islands which Rex and Mavis were flying crash landed in high winds. It tipped nose down and did a somersault. Cindy and Annie looked on in horror and then rushed over with fire extinguishers in case they were needed, but luckily no fire broke out and Rex and Mavis climbed out unharmed albeit somewhat shaken. Though the crew and passengers were safe, the Wasp was a write-off."

Batman and castles on a fun packed Monday

COSTUMED characters, games, face-painting, a poi demonstration, bouncy castles and snacks ensured that Stanley's younger children had a fun-packed afternoon on Monday.

Although the party (inspired by The Greatest International Scavenger Hunt the World Has Ever Seen - GISHWHES) was free of any charge, donations and a raffle raised more than £800.

The funds will be split between local charity, The Stephen Jaffray Memorial Trust, and international charity, Random Acts (www.

therandomact.org), one organiser Leona Roberts told Penguin News.

Despite short notice, the event was well supported by the community and the organisers (all members of GISHWHES Team Valkyaptor) were "incredibly grateful" for the many donations from local businesses and individual members of the community who provided raffle prizes and services free of charge, said Mrs Roberts.

She said many parents arrived with plates of cakes and snacks all of which were greatly enjoyed by the children.

"We were delighted that so many kids turned up and seemed to have such a good time," said the Valkyaptors.

"It was pretty exhausting for us but great fun and we were pleased to see parents enjoying themselves too."

Mrs Roberts said the Scavenger Hunt was an annual event which encouraged creativity and kindness but demanded that teams cast aside inhibitions and brave the ridiculous.

- 1. What is your most prized possession?
Family photos and a beautiful painting of Bodie Creek Bridge
- 2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?
David Attenborough and Terry Pratchett. I reckon those old boys could spin an interesting yarn or two
- 3. If you had a motto, what would it be?
Treat others as you would like them to treat you, and the way you want them to remember you by
- 4. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be?
There are so many places I want to go to, but right now the top of the list is probably New Orleans and Alaska
- 5. What is your favourite TV programme?
The X Files (the early seasons used to scare the bejeebers out of me when I was a kid. One episode with this scary stretchy guy had me afraid of going to the toilet for a wee while) and Band of Brothers
- 6. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it?
One day like this by Elbow
- 7. What is the one, single food that you would never give up?
Chinese dim sum, including chicken feet in black bean sauce! Yummy!
- 8. What did you want to be when you were a child?
In chronological order: a sweet shop owner (though I had every intention of eating all the profits), a fighter pilot, an actress, and a marine biologist
- 9. If you could change something about yourself what would it be?
Um, I'm not sure. My indecisiveness, maybe?

Premiership from BFBS

BRITISH Forces Radio will be providing live coverage of the new season of Premiership football launching on Saturday August 17.

BFBS Radio 2's line-up kicks off with live commentary from BBC 5 LIVE of the Liverpool v Stoke match at 12.45pm.

There will be live updates from games starting at 3 o'clock, then from 5.30pm BFBS Radio 2 will broadcast talkSPORT's coverage of the Swansea v Manchester United match; all opening salvos of a stack of top-flight games available to listeners.

Head of BFBS Radio 2, Mario Chrisostomou, said: "Coverage of live sport is hugely important to our audience and it doesn't come any bigger than the Premiership."

Throughout the season BFBS Radio 2 listeners can also look forward to more sports favourites such as '6-0-6' and Fighting Talk.

BFBS Radio 2 is available via FM and on TV Digiboxes boxes, overseas across the Forces world.

Arombai is Madeira bound

THE journey from the UK to the Falklands by local lads Dylan Stephenson and Tom Elsby has captured the hearts and imagination of many Islanders who are following them every inch of the way.

On board Dylan's 30ft yacht Arombai they left Lisbon, Portugal for Madeira on Monday, which just happened to be Tom's 21st birthday.

This leg of the trip is expected to take five days and there was mention of relief at being back at sea and enjoying the sea breeze after temperatures in the high 30s in Lisbon.

Enjoying 10-15 knots of wind the adventurous pair were making a respectable speed of 4-5 knots on Tuesday, although the wind vane was not working and they were having to steer the boat manually which was a bit tiring, it was reported.

On Wednesday morning they were still on schedule with a further two days sailing expected to take them into Madeira.

Dylan's shipmate Tom Elsby celebrates his 21st birthday on the ocean wave

"They may go to Porto Santo first and seem to be enjoying the cruise - 266 nautical miles to go," commented Dylan's father Zac.

Debs is from Peterhead in the north east of Scotland, and came to the Falklands in 2010 as a Fisheries Observer after finishing her PhD in Marine Ecology.

She currently works for the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute and feels that the Falklands are her home from home.

She loves getting out to see as much of the Islands as possible and trying new things - though she still doesn't feel brave enough to eat sheep brain fritters.

Thanks to Stanley Services

WE arrived back from leave at the end of last week and woke up to a (cold) Sunday morning owing to a duff fuel tank and no fuel. Robert Rowlands personally collected a new fuel tank, then came with a bowser to fill it once I'd installed it, even though I only asked if I could take a 40 gallon drum of kero away to start me off. Many thanks to Stanley Services Ltd for their help on this occasion.

Games correction

WITH reference to last weeks edition of 'Bound Ungagged' which was published in Penguin News, I wish to correct a couple of technicalities which crept into Graham's article.

The Games have never been known as the 'Small' Island Games, and they were inaugurated in the mid-1980s and not the 90s as Graham indicated.

The original Games were intended to be a 'one-off' event and were organised in 1985 by the late Geoffrey Corlett and Noel Cringle as part of the Isle of Man's 'Year of Sport.' They were given the name 'Inter-Island Games,' but for that very first Games only, 15 islands participated, including St Helena.

The festival was a huge success with one newspaper referring to it as a 'small islands olympics' and consequently it was decided to arrange a similar event on Guernsey in 1987. At the first ever General Meeting it was agreed that the event be known in future as the Island Games and the Island Games Association was duly formed.

In more recent years the word 'International' has been added, so officially the organisation is now known as the International Island Games Association (IIGA). Nat-West bank began their sponsorship in 1999 so the IIGA like to refer to the games these days as the NatWest Island Games.

The Falklands were accepted into the 'family' in 1991 when Burnerd Peck's application was unanimously approved after he travelled to the Finnish island of Aland.

Despite some local opposition I took the Falklands first ever team to the Isle of Wight in 1993 and we have been represented at every Games since then. The Games have provided a wonderful opportunity for Falklands youngsters to broaden their contacts and knowledge of other parts of the world while enjoying the friendly but competitive nature of the event.

Finally, I was a little disappointed that PN did not speak with some of the younger competitors about their fantastic experiences recently at the Games in Bermuda. I think that a great opportunity was lost to promote the Falklands in light of the recent Argentine propaganda campaign.

Patrick J Watts,
Hon Vice-President, FIOGA

In response to Patrick's final paragraph the Games received considerable coverage in PN despite the difficulties of communicating with competitors in Bermuda. With the Games over, and considering the size of the paper, we had to make a decision regarding how much coverage of one subject should

Your letters

Penguin News

editor@penguinnews.co.fk

be included before it might be considered overkill. If he refers to non coverage of the display held last week, this is a moot point as PN was not informed it was going to take place. (Ed).

Headless chickens

ONE can't help feeling a degree of concern at the way our government seems to be handling the whole process of Oil Development. The concept of headless chickens comes to mind and the impression I get is that the private sector just can't get any definite decisions or guidance. Increasingly the general public seem to be being treated like the proverbial mushrooms.

It seems to me that the one area where there is total silence is from the Oil Companies themselves. I wonder what their views are about this Government of ditherers? It may be that they are so frustrated that a bit of a down-turn in the oil market could tempt them to say sod it and pull the plug. People will not forgive our government if the Golden Goose goes and lays its eggs elsewhere.

I trust our Legislators are remembering that there are only a few short months to a general Election. On present performance there could be another clean sweep. How nice it would be to see some much younger people come forward too - after all it's their future.

It's also good to see that public opinion may have caused a re-think on road designation for Camp roads. This ridiculous idea was always a disaster in the making and it should be shelved until after the Election so that it can be a matter for debate between candidates and those who will be most affected.

Daylight dilemma

IT was interesting, the considerable number of outdoor folks this last weekend at the Garden Centre praising that "at last there is some daylight returning in the mornings now, after this system of summertime in midwinter."

Actually ever since the scheme was introduced, I for one have only ever heard of two supporters for it - and both of them are non full-time working MLAs who don't have to get outside in the morning and whose jobs do not rely on natural daylight.

But sadly one could foresee that any petition started some time to try and revert the time back to normal summer and winter would be 'accidentally mislaid' within FIG as was the major one collected prior to the infamous census question two years ago.

From unsafe area to a sensory delight

Richard and Luke compare notes on the hut

A SECRET garden of exploration and fun has been created at the Infant and Junior School through a generous donation from Standard Chartered Bank (SCB).

A colourful winding pathway leads visitors through a wonderful selection of plants all seeded, propagated and donated by local gardening hero Ginge Kidd. The path leads to spiral stairs where on the lower level the children discover a sheltered hut, and through the other side another section of the garden awaits sporting huge tyres and places to sit and admire the area.

SCB Manager Binoy Karia said around £10,000 has been spent on developing the garden from its original hazardous state. "The inspiration really came from a chat with Tom Hill about the dangerous and disused part of the school and we thought we could help them do something with it... It was a great opportunity to contribute back to the community."

Year Two Teacher Robin Cooper said the idea to develop the area had been a popular one with the Parents Council and the students of the school. "The kids have been really excited and have been very involved with the whole process submitting and choosing the final designs," he said.

IJS students Ella, Luke, Liam, Chiara, Eliana, Soraye, Richard, Ellya, Madeline, Matt and Tyrone were given an exclusive tour of the garden with SCB Manager Karia and SCB employee Nicole Jonson. Luke Gilbert offered his thoughts on the hut: "I really like the roof because it will protect us from when it rains, if it wasn't there we'd get wet. The walls are good too because they keep the wind out."

The children were keen to learn about the plants, and clamber on to the tyres donated by Megabid: "It's surprising how many kids will fit in them" said Head Teacher of IJS & CE Karen Steen.

Mrs Steen offered a massive thank you to Standard Chartered Bank for their generous sponsorship saying it had, "transformed a barren part of the school into a vibrant and stimulating play area." She added that the school hoped to officially open the area in the warmer summer months with a celebratory garden party.

A Falklands tale from Goose Green School

STUDENTS at Goose Green School have been developing their creative and enterprising skills over the past few months by writing and illustrating their own book 'Thomas Headerwick gets lost!' and selling it to residents of the settlement.

One of the students who worked on the book Kia Alazia told Penguin News that the inspiration for the project came from comparing the Falklands scenery with a book they had read. "We sat at the seaside looking across at the mountains and we thought that they looked like Katie Morag's books so we made our own.

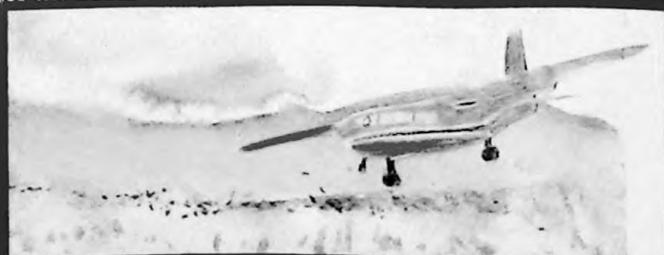

"Our book is about Thomas Headerwick who got lost at Moody Creek."

The students decided to create their own story in the style of the series by Scottish author Mairi Hedderwick. With a basic structure as guidance the students chose the name of their main character as Thomas and wrote the story with a Falkland farmlife perspective and illustrated their tale with 27 pages of original artwork.

Goose Green Teacher Jackie Adams thanked the great support from adults involved with the project, that took a year to produce. Artist Richard Cockwell helped Lyndsey, Kia, Leyla and Jose get to grips with watercolour techniques for the illustrations and Goose Green resident musician Andi Neate helped the children with the music. "We did paintings of ewes and tracks and made two songs, one on violin and one on guitar and we chose all the notes ourselves," said Kia.

The songs are printed at the end of the story and recorded on to a CD that accompanies the book.

Copies of the books have been sold for £6 to cover printing costs.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Have a go hits its target

THE Falkland Archery Association (FAA) put strings on its bows for another popular 'have a go' session last Sunday.

Budding Robin Hoods and Hawkeyes (see the Avengers) turned up to shoot at deer, play darts (with real arrows), pop balloons and even try out the '3 spot' targets that were used in the recent Guernsey Games where the archery team pulled off a team bronze.

The FIDF hall was busy all morning with families and individuals coming in and losing a few arrows. We had a few strays into the net (and wall) but the standard was good on the whole. The team of Air Movers from MPA that came down had a lot of fun with a 'friendly' competition between them. We even saw a couple of beautifully made English Longbows being shot - attracting a lot of interest.

FAA members were on hand to provide expert tuition as well as tea, coffee and chocolate biscuits to keep the energy levels up. There was some natural talent shown by some who attended and we hope to see people come back for more and join the club.

The lesser spotted Falklands deer didn't stand a chance

Have a go sessions are available every Sunday morning from 11am - 12 noon so if you missed this one and would like to try your hand at archery come along, open to all aged 10 and over.

MLA Edwards ties up road debate

MLA Roger Edwards celebrated the withdrawal of an amendment to the Road Traffic Ordinance to designate Camp roads with a change of tie from a sombre black to a bright pink at Thursday's Legislative Assembly meeting.

He said he had been a lone voice in his opposition of designating all Camp roads and was delighted his colleagues had come around to his way of thinking.

"To introduce this legislation would be criminalising many of those in the Camp community, and I did not support it from day one," he said.

He explained that on July 25 he had reported that ExCo had made a majority decision to forward road designation to the final meeting of Legislative Assembly, but that a further meeting the following week with members and officers to discuss possible alternatives had been arranged.

As a result of that meeting new proposals were discussed and a new ExCo paper was produced whereby the road designation bill was not moved.

It will now be up to the new Assembly to decide which parts of the Road Traffic Ordinance will be taken forward, "by regulation rather than legislation," said MLA Edwards.

MLA Halford makes history

MLA Sharon Halford made history on two counts at the final meeting of the current Legislative Assembly when she took on the role of Deputy Speaker. It was the first time a woman had taken up the role as Speaker as well as the first time an MLA had been called on to carry out the duties. As Speaker of the House MLA Halford was unable to contribute to debate or speak to the motion for adjournment.

Thanks Mrs K

MLAs at their final Assembly meeting on Thursday thanked many people for their support during their time on Assembly, but perhaps it was the first time the opportunity had arisen to thank the President of Argentina for her, undoubtedly unintended assistance in getting the Falklands story so well publicised.

Probably the biggest surprise for him during the life of the Assembly, said MLA Dick Sawle, was the marvellous opportunities afforded to the Islands by President Cristina Kirchner who had presented more opportunities than could ever have been envisaged for engaging with media worldwide and getting Islanders' views expressed. He referred to Mrs Kirchner's and the Argentine government's vocal and aggressive policy on the Falklands' issue.

"We have been criticised by some for spending too much time abroad and ignoring domestic issues. I would agree it is a fine balance but the rewards have been truly tremendous," said MLA Sawle. Those rewards had culminated in the referendum in March, when a "truly astounding" result which the world could not ignore had been made public.

MLA Sawle compared the concerted effort to spread the word overseas as rather like a ship being released on a slipway. "It starts with very little apparent movement, the bottle is smashed on the bows, nothing seems to happen until there is an almost imperceptible movement and then slowly but surely it gathers momentum," he said, adding that he truly believed we were now gathering momentum. "It takes time, but we must keep the pressure up," he said.

MLA Ian Hansen said the Public Diplomacy move concentrated on over the last two to three years had been a brave and controversial move, but he believed it had "paid off."

MLA Edwards said this Assembly would leave the Islands in a stronger position with regard to Public diplomacy. "We have certainly countered the political lies and threats by Argentina and have spread the message about the Falklands across the world," he said.

MLA Mike Summers said it seemed he had spent little time in this House and little time in the Falklands.

"I apologise to those I have a duty to represent, but it is part of the Public Diplomacy process and an essential part of our work," he said.

Suspected sex offender in custody

STANLEY man Kevin Derek Charles (Scooby) McLaren was remanded in custody following a hearing in the Magistrates Criminal Court on Wednesday.

Mr McLaren (38) was arrested on Tuesday (August 20) and charged with two offences of grooming a young child, one offence of sexually touching a child and one offence of inciting a child to touch him sexually.

Principal Crown Council Rosalind Cheek explained that the case was still developing and objected to Mr McLaren being released on bail before more facts surrounding the charges could be clarified. Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said that given the strength of the evidence presented to date, Mr McLaren would likely have, "a strong temptation to interfere or obstruct justice by contacting those involved with the case."

Mr McLaren is to appear in court on August 28 for a further hearing.

Shooting accident at Second Creek

A BRITISH Forces South Atlantic Islands (BFSAI) spokesman has confirmed that a shooting incident occurred on Monday at Second Creek Ranges on West Falkland.

A soldier from Balaklava Company, 5th Battalion The Royal Regiment of Scotland sustained a single gunshot wound to his leg. The soldier who has not been named is reported to have spoken to his family.

The soldier was moved by helicopter to King Edward Memorial Hospital in Stanley where he underwent a minor procedure to clean out the wound. He is stable and well and no further medical treatment is planned, said the spokesperson.

All live firing on Second Creek Ranges has been cancelled whilst the incident is investigated.

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

HAVING humiliated myself in polite company on numerous occasions as a result of explosive laughter combined with a mouthful of food (the worst involved peppering a former Commander British Forces with puff pastry and sausage roll innards) I probably shouldn't bring up the subject of choking on one's vittles. However, while chatting with a valued member of our community this week I came close to repeating the unattractive deed when the gentleman commented that he was reluctant to apply for a Permanent Residents Permit or even Falkland Islands Status because having examined the rules he was certain he wouldn't even come close to having enough points to qualify.

I won't embarrass the chap by referring to him by name, but trust me when I say rather than putting obstacles in his way we should be damn near down on our knees begging him to continue enriching our lives with his skills.

On the upside I did have the advantage of being able to encourage him to read this week's article in Penguin News on immigration reform proposals (see page 8) which moots a simplification of the process with less points categories.

Currently the system places the most value on educational qualifications and those with the highest earnings; and while on the face of it that's a reasonable ask, the type of person the Islands need are not rich professors of academia but many more carpenters, construction workers, plumbers and mechanics.

As it happens the individual I champion isn't any of those, and I don't doubt he has many lofty qualifications of his trade, so that said, if he can't make it then who on earth of relevant value actually can?

Of course we're all a little tired of consultation processes: there seems to be a new one offered up every month or so, but if you read nothing else in the paper this week I beg that you check out 'Living in the Falklands' by Jamie Fotheringham. Not only that but digest it thoroughly, and rather than imprudently jettison it (in the manner of a graceless Penguin News Editor with a gob full of nosh) take time to pass your thoughts and ideas on to the review group (or fill in a survey at www.survey.gov.fk). The state of our immigration system is absolutely vital at this point in history - it's a critical cog in our economic development, and who knows, it could be your very own idea that ultimately transforms our current unaccommodating system into one that welcomes and encourages the trades and crafts the Islands increasingly require.

Premier's development project 'optimum solution' believes FIG

A 'PHASED development concept' of the Sea Lion oil project proposed to the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) by Premier Oil, "appears to be the optimum solution to deliver a successful project," Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton announced yesterday.

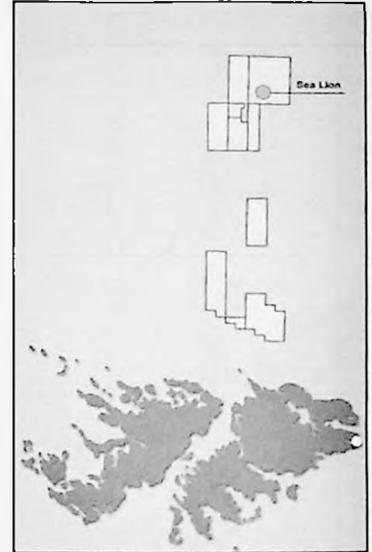

The statement followed an update provided to FIG by Premier Oil as well as a meeting between both on August 15/16 in London, together with representatives from the British Geological Survey, the Department of Energy and Climate Change and the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr Luxton said, "government, supports the proposed phased development concept which will help mitigate local infrastructure and capacity pressures during peak development activity."

He added: "Premier continues to advance the Sea Lion development concept with a target for project sanction and gaining FIG approval towards the end of 2014. The proposed phased development concept has been discussed extensively with FIG and its advisers. We are confident that it appears to be the optimum solution to deliver a successful project. Maximum economic recovery of offshore resources remains FIG's guiding policy."

Premier this week also released its half-yearly results for the six months to June 30, 2013, within which it notes, "significant progress," on the Sea Lion project and forward plans for the Falkland Islands. The company which claims, record half-year financial results, and profit after tax of US$161.1 million (2012: US$145.8 million) farmed in for 60 per cent of Rockhopper Exploration's licence interests in the North Falklands Basin, including the Sea Lion discovery. Premier assumed operatorship of the Sea Lion area development in November 2012.

In Rockhopper Exploration's final results for the twelve months ended March 31, 2013 the completion of last year's farm-out is noted and also during that period recoverable resources are described as, "modelled at approximately 337 million barrels for Sea Lion should a gas cap exist, 402 million barrels if not."

Chair of Rockhopper Dr Pierre Jungels said: "The Sea Lion development remains central to our strategy. We have around 150 million barrels of fully funded oil, which in the present financial market conditions is a good place to be. In addition to our funded oil, we also have the cash to fund further exploration in the North Falklands Basin. Having completed the handover of our Falklands data and engineering work to the new operator we are pleased to say that there is now a baseline concept that meets all of the operator's internal economic metrics.

"Work continues apace to optimise the concept before front-end engineering and design can start, which we anticipate will be in early 2014. The final investment decision is now expected to be around the end of 2014. The strength of our balance sheet and the fact we lead the exploration for the joint venture means we will continue to play a key role in the ongoing exploration of the North Falklands Basin and to that end we are pursuing any opportunities for a standalone exploration campaign that may arise ahead of the development drilling."

Premier paid an initial $231 million for the farm-in plus an exploration and development 'carry' of up to $48 million and $722 million, respectively.

Alicia Castro shows further lack of diplomacy

ALICIA Castro, the Argentine ambassador to the United Kingdom, launched a strong attack on the UK Prime Minister David Cameron on Tuesday, calling him "dumb" and adding that he was, "completely useless."

She said, "Prime Minister Cameron was dumb, if I may use the word dumb before Congress," during a hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and then paused to laugh.

She told lawmakers that Mr Cameron had unwisely publicised comments by former Buenos Aires Archbishop Jorge Bergoglio, before he was named Pope this year, in which Mr Bergoglio said the Islands belonged to Argentina.

"When the pope was named I asked one of our people to look into what Bergoglio had said regarding the Malvinas," said Mrs Castro adding that David Cameron did the same and was, "foolish enough to disseminate the information."

Mr Cameron said in March that Mr Bergoglio had been wrong to say in 2012 that Britain had "usurped" the Islands.

On Wednesday however, Mrs Castro who is known for her un-diplomatic attitude, claimed that part of her comments had been taken out of context.

Her comments are also reported to have caused consternation in PM David Cameron's office. Referring to the referendum in March when Falklands residents were asked if the Islands should remain a British Overseas Territory, a source from Mr Cameron's office had said: "We don't think it's foolish to listen to 99.8 per cent of the population, who have made it very clear that they want to stay British."

Farewell to VC10 TriStar back this month

THE VC10 Tanker aircraft operating from Mount Pleasant will be replaced by a TriStar at the end of August.

The capabilities currently offered by the VC10, including aeromedical evacuation, freight transport and air to air refuelling, will continue to be provided by the TriStar, said a spokesperson for the Ministry of Defence.

During the transition period there will be an increase in air activity, including the VC10 farewell flight around the Falkland Islands on Tuesday August 27.

The VC10 will depart for the UK at the beginning of September.

High level GCSE passes rise in 2013

THE number of Falkland Islands Community School students attaining high level passes achieving five or more A*-C grades has risen from 43.5 per cent in 2012 to 63.16 per cent, confirmed Headmaster Martin Winward yesterday.

He said: "I am very pleased that the students have attained so well this year and both individual performance and the cohort as a whole have much to be proud of."

The first tranche of results were released last Thursday and Mr Winward said: "We have been eagerly awaiting the final set to make up the full complement in readiness for students making their final decisions with respect to Post 16 education, training or work."

94.74 per cent of students gained five A*-G grades. The percentage of students scoring five or more A*-D grades including Mathematics and English this year was 73.68 per cent.

In addition, those students achieving five or more A*-C including English and Mathematics rose from 34.8 per cent in 2012 to 57.89 per cent this year. Several students attained the highest merit of A* which is awarded for excellent performance. Mr Winward commented: "It is most encouraging that 25 per cent of the cohort attained at least one A* GCSE this year."

More than half the cohort of students are eligible for Post 16 education at either Peter Symonds Sixth Form, Winchester or at Chichester College, UK. Other students have plans to access overseas provision elsewhere and a number of students are considering apprenticeships and work-based opportunities in Stanley.

All of the Year 11 students study a core curriculum that includes courses in English, English Literature Mathematics and at least one Science alongside PHSCE and Core PE. Also, The Falkland Islands Citizenship is awarded as a Pass, Merit or Distinction with points accredited. In addition, a range of subject options with virtually all subjects being taken at GCSE level compliment this core curriculum.

Mr Winward said: "We believe in a broad and challenging Key Stage 4 curriculum which opens as many doors as possible whilst challenging all of our students, irrespective of ability. At The Falkland Islands Community School it is part of our aims to provide a high standard of education in a broad curriculum for students from 11-16.

"Our expectations are high and the majority of students take 10 plus GCSEs. Our mission statement is, 'To ensure that each student meets their potential academically, socially and culturally, within a disciplined environment of mutual respect, tolerance and non-discrimination.' I trust that the past few years have prepared students for the life set before them and that irrespective of their transition in September they will remember that we all continue to learn and that life is full of experiences and opportunities to be embraced and taken full advantage of. I and the team of staff at FICS wish all Year 11 leavers the very best in the future."

Youth awaits probation report

A 17 year-old youth admitted a charge of assault occasioning actual bodily harm on Wednesday.

The court heard how the young man had entered the home of the victim, entered his bedroom and threw punches at him. Defence Counsel Mark Neves said that though the youth was accompanied by an adult, who also assaulted the victim, the action was not premeditated and he had intended to go to the victim's home alone but was followed by his adult friend after they had shared a few beers.

On hearing that the young man had been supplied with alcohol and was in the home of an adult late at night unaccompanied by parents, Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley adjourned the hearing so a probation report could be produced to investigate the matter.

A 9pm to 7pm curfew was imposed on the youth until the case is brought back to the Youth Court on October 2.

Fine for hitting parked car

STANLEY man Ronald MacLennan Baird (43) was fined £75 and ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs for colliding with an empty, parked car in the early evening of July 5.

Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek described it as an accident with the owner of the parked car fully covered by insurance.

When asked by Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley why the case had been brought to court Miss Cheek said that after long consideration they were, "conscience of a risk of perception of bias," as Mr MacLennan Baird works for the Attorney General's Chamber as Legislative Drafter. Mr Gumsley said: "I can't understand what the public interest was," and said no one should be treated differently.

Mr MacLennan Baird's driving licence was also endorsed.

Waiting times

MLA Jan Cheek, answering a question as to what the current waiting time is to get an appointment to see a GP, said on Thursday that if patients were not fussy about what doctor they saw an appointment could be obtained very quickly.

MLA Cheek said she had checked that morning and if a patient was willing to see any doctor, appointments were available on Monday (two working days). However on selecting two particular doctors the earliest appointment would be between September 2 - 9.

The question was asked by MLA Gavin Short at the Legislative Assembly on Thursday.

Author reaches heady heights

MICHELLE Paver, sister to the Falklands' Dr Bernadette Paver has trekked to the top of Ben Nevis to conduct a reading of her latest novel at the summit.

Michelle is a British novelist and children's writer, probably best known for the fantasy series Chronicles of Ancient Darkness, set in pre-agricultural Stone Age Europe. For the concluding book Ghost Hunter (2009) she won the Guardian Children's Fiction Prize, a once-in-a-lifetime book award judged by a panel of British children's writers.

The Adventures in the Burning Shadow is set around a volcano, so Ben Nevis is a natural place for this exciting reading tour, said the author who shuns the internet as a research tool for her novels. "I do all my research first-hand by travelling the world and having adventures, it really helps to bring my world alive for my readers," she said in a recent interview for the Press and Journal.

Author Michelle Paver

Mrs Paver also wrote Dark Matter - A Ghost Story, which Richard and Judy on their book club TV programme described as the best ghost story they had ever read.

Dark Matter is set in the 1930s during an Arctic expedition which takes place during the Polar winter.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Gavin Short shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I AM happy to report that progress is at last being made on the subject of noise nuisance. A small group met about two weeks ago and discussed ways in which a practical, common sense solution could be reached. We wanted something that protected the victim whilst being simple, enforceable and not being capable of being used by killjoys to stifle any form of enjoyment. We decided to take it one small step at a time and concentrate on noise issuing from within properties and grounds. There will I am assured be an over-arching piece of legislation that will allow other "nuisances" to be bolted on as they arise. The paper from the Attorney General will not be presented until after the election as it is only right that the new assembly has input at the beginning as it is they who will probably have to pass any legislation.

THIS week also sees the usual round of GPC, ExCo and SFC meetings. Under the new post election system these meetings may become fortnightly which should help to make the process quicker if not smoother and more efficient. Quite where to put the new MLAs after the election is still causing some headaches and it is not just MLAs. With the Government worker numbers increasing there is a pressure on available office space, not to mention housing etc and whilst we are now gearing up for a large house building programme we need to update our estate strategy with some urgency although it will take some years to carry out the new building programme that will be required.

THE saga of the public jetty continues. I am afraid that I now expect it to go over budget with the changes to piling etc that seems to be necessary but by how much it will go over remains to be seen. It would also appear to me that the actual works may have to be postponed until after the forthcoming tourist season as well, but I believe a decision has yet to be made on that.

THERE will be many interesting challenges ahead of the new Assembly but as far as I am concerned they are all positive as it means that our country is going places and not stagnating.

Long term presence of oil around Stanley Harbour 'not in interests of community'

EXECUTIVE Council does not believe the long term presence of oil and gas in and around Stanley Harbour is in the best interests of the community, a Member of Legislative Assembly stated at the public meeting on Monday evening.

He responded to a member of the public who both accused the Government of excessive secrecy about temporary port operation/extension plans in Stanley Harbour, and also asked why there had been no outline planning application.

He continued by stating: "We are told that one company has had its plans for a temporary facility refused - but those of us who live around here have no idea where it was to be nor on what grounds it was refused!"

"Another Company has had their outline approved - Where and what is it that is proposed?"

He also asked how any company be expected to take the Falklands seriously if they are told: "Whatever you do has to be removed after three years - even if there is no permanent port built by then - and thus no port for you to use."

He asked: "Is there not a strong chance that oil companies could simply go away saying its not feasible at the moment - we may be back in 5-10-15 years as there is plenty to do elsewhere in the world so we will just pay the annual rentals."

He was also concerned that alternatively the companies would charter their own very large cargo vessel, moor it in a Falklands harbour and use it as their own dockside for incoming freight, "and transhipping out to the rigs. Thus ruling out most of any local involvement in business and employment in the hydrocarbons industry."

In response MLAs stated that Executive Council at its meeting in July responded to two proposals FIG had received from oil companies to site temporary jetty facilities in Stanley Harbour. They said the paper had not been released because it contained the detail of negotiations that are ongoing between those companies

Those gathered at the public meeting were told: "A proposal from Noble Energy and its partners received in principle approval to go ahead - subject to further negotiation on a number of issues - and ExCo has requested that as part of that process Noble undertake public consultation to explain what they are proposing, where, and over what time frame. All of the normal planning and environmental processes are also required to be undertaken. A proposal from Premier Oil was rejected at this time because it did not meet the acceptance criteria set by Members for temporary port facilities in Stanley Harbour."

It was also stated in the response that FIG had spent a great deal of time with oil companies over the last year negotiating with them over their plans and timescales alongside our own ambitions for the future of Stanley, those being: "our desire to protect the quality of life of people living in and around the town and future infrastructure needs we have identified for the Islands, including a new port planned for Port William."

"ExCo does not believe the long term presence of oil and gas in and around Stanley Harbour is in the best interests of the community: our concern being the impact a 24 hour a day, all year round industry over several years would have on people living in the town. That said, we have made it clear we are willing to negotiate and the statement of policy principles produced by ExCo is part of that negotiation process."

"Given that negotiation is ongoing, it is difficult to go into too much detail publicly at this time. However, FIG firmly believes we can work with oil companies to enable further exploration in the south alongside the planned exploitation of the Sea Lion oil field. One of our prime considerations is to enable the oil and gas industry to continue to develop, which is in the interests of all concerned, but in doing so we must ensure any development: temporary jetties etc do not create long term or permanent harm to our community and society."

MLA Roger Edwards also added that it was the role of government to: "legislate, facilitate and assist," companies in terms of port development, but this had to happen within, "certain parameters."

MLA Dick Sawle noted that things were moving ahead, "cautiously," and MLA Gavin Short commented that, "three years down the line," government would not necessarily, "heave them out," but that there had to be a bit of, "give and take," on both sides.

Rising sea temperature will reduce krill growth habitat in Antarctica ANTARCTIC krill are usually less than 6 cm in length, but their size belies the major role they play in sustaining much of the life in the Southern Ocean. They are the primary food source for many species of whales, seals, penguins and fish.

Krill are known to be sensitive to sea temperature, especially in the areas where they grow as adults. This has prompted scientists to try to understand how they might respond to the effects of further climate change.

Using statistical models, a team of researchers from the British Antarctic Survey and Plymouth Marine Laboratory assessed the likely impact of projected temperature increases on the Weddell Sea, Scotia Sea and Southern Drake Passage, which is known for its abundance of krill. This region has experienced sea surface warming of as much as 1°C over 50 years.

The models are based on equations which link krill growth, sea surface temperature, and food availability. An analysis of the results, published this week in the online journal PLOS ONE, suggests warming, if continued, could reduce the area of growth habitat by up to 20 per cent.

In the early life stages krill require deep water with low acidity and a narrow range of temperatures for their eggs to successfully hatch and develop. The larvae then feed on algae on the underside of sea ice.

The adults require suitable temperatures and enough of the right type of food (larger phytoplankton) to successfully grow and reproduce. Many of these critical environmental features (temperature, acidity, sea ice and food availability) could be affected by climate change.

However the projected effects of warming are not evenly spread. South Georgia is located within the area likely to be worst affected. Here the reduction in krill habitat could be as much as 55 per cent. The island is home to a range of animals such as fur seals and Macaroni penguins that depend upon krill, and others, such as Black-browed Albatrosses, which eat substantial amounts of krill as well as fish and squid. The researchers say animals which don't travel far to forage, such as fur seals, would be most affected by the projected changes.

Krill is also being commercially fished, although there is nothing to suggest current levels are unsustainable. In fact, at less than one per cent of estimated biomass, catches are much lower than most other commercial fisheries.

But, the Antarctic krill fishery took 68 per cent of its total catch between 1980 and 2011 from the area of projected habitat degradation. The scientists suggest improved management systems to ensure the fisheries take into account both growing demand for catches and climate change.

Lead author, Dr. Simeon Hill, a marine biologist at BAS, said: "Each year, growth of Antarctic krill in the Southern Ocean produces new material that weighs twice as much as all the sugar produced in the world.

"Krill grow fastest in cold water and any warming can slow down or stop growth, reducing the food available for wildlife. Our research suggests that expected warming this century could severely reduce the area in which krill can successfully grow."

Although there is evidence that warming seas pose a threat to Antarctic krill habitats the team of researchers believe this can be mitigated with effective fisheries management systems in place.

Online petition for Gibraltar MP

AN online petition has been launched seeking debate in Parliament as to whether there should be an MP for Gibraltar.

The petition was set up by Christopher Mereno-Stokoe who contacted Penguin News to say that as Gibraltar and the Falklands share similar interests and goals, people here may be interested in supporting it.

The petition says that Spanish politics concerning Gibraltar has a knock-on effect on wider UK affairs and it is only right that this should be discussed at the highest levels with authenticated representation.

Port planning since 1980s

REFERENCE Bill Luxton's letter in last week's Penguin News.

FIG had been planning for a new port facility since the late 1980s. There were many reviews and consultancies - probably the most important piece of work on this was undertaken by Mott MacDonald in 2001. However, lack of finance, lack of business for a new port and of course the fact that FIPASS has coped for many more years than it should have, resulted in plans for a new port being placed on hold. Early in 2012 there was extensive consultation and debate held on where to site the new port and the overwhelming conclusion was Port William for many good reasons.

When FIG was faced with a request for many millions to be spent on FIPASS in order to prolong its life for just a few more years, we made the decision to place any new facility in Port William and set about surveying and obtaining all of the data required to see if there were any 'show stoppers'. In the meantime, we also agreed to maintain FIPASS for traditional industries. Oil companies have been very clear in telling us that FIPASS would no longer safely support their very specific requirements. FIG has been very clear that it does not aim to spend the country's reserves on a new port, but that we will plan it, cost it and produce a business case for it which will hopefully lead to major private investment. This work is due to be completed soon.

The public and oil companies have been kept informed at each stage. FIG has adopted an open approach and has been very clear that it will not interfere with private company arrangements, but that any port facility in Stanley Harbour must be temporary and capable of being removed. The business case for a new port would simply not stack up if there was a competing port in Stanley Harbour. We have also agreed the outline of a Port Authority so that FIG is not the dominant player in any future port services - we expect and hope the dominant players to be the private sector.

Any new port facility is just one part of our planning in preparing for oil. Each work stream contains much detail, but the summary can be seen in the oil readiness checklist which can be found at <http://www.falklands.gov.fk/assets/137-13P.pdf>

This is a document which is updated regularly as we make progress. It uses a simple traffic light system showing green for on track, amber for warning and red for needs urgent attention.

We have been clear all along with our policies. Eventually, any policy has to go through due process which includes appropriate consultation and then is approved by Executive Council.

You will also be aware that with the potential for oil development and production, comes a wide range of potential changes to the Falklands. Recently we sent out an important consultation document entitled 'Your Future - Your Say'. The results of that consultation are, by the time this goes to print, freely available. It is not just about the new port, but covers other related matters such as laydown, warehousing, specialist plant and equipment, support services, land requirements, accommodation requirements, roads, power, waste, water and other practical issues. This consultation exercise comes directly from the Infrastructure Development Plan (IDP) that was requested by us and produced earlier this year. We wanted to look at all aspects of development to ensure that we would be properly prepared.

Living in the Falkland Islands

THIS week's article explores some of the proposed changes to the immigration system that could affect the rights and obligations of migrants seeking to settle in the Islands in the longer term. The reforms being put forward by the Immigration Review Group are currently the subject of public consultation and feedback is invited on all of the proposals.

In reviewing the immigration system, in addition to ensuring the Islands can manage an increased migrant workforce, attention was given to ways in which the current system might be changed to encourage and support those migrants who wish to make a longer term commitment to the Islands (and whom the Islands consider will be of value to the community as permanent residents).

The 2012 Census identified that the population of the Falkland Islands has remained static in the six years since the last Census, and the population of Camp has continued its long-term decline. When combined with a declining birth rate and an aging population, the static population is a matter for concern, particularly as the Islands is seeking to grow and expand economically. For these reasons, the review has sought to identify ways in which the immigration system could be changed to make the Islands more welcoming for people who wish to make a longer-term commitment to the Islands, and to make the process of their integration into the Falkland Islands more straightforward – whilst at all times ensuring that the interests of the Islands are protected.

A number of changes are pro-

Immigration reform proposals by FIG Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham

Falklands line-up but more people needed for economic development posed to simplify the process and to make the system more accessible to those who may wish to remain longer term. Specific feedback is sought on proposals to replace the current Residence Permit with distinct categories to allow for different tests, benefits and requirements to be put in place to better differentiate between dependants of Falkland Islands Status (FIS) holders and Permanent Residence Permit (PRP) holders; and dependants of Work Permit holders to enable faster integration of the dependants of FIS/PRP holders into society, and to make the Islands a more attractive option for those who may be put off coming here due to the restrictions placed on their dependants' rights to work in the Islands.

It is also proposed that greater clarity and simplicity is brought to the immigration system, which currently allows multiple different routes to achieving FIS. At present there is no clear path to progress to FIS and in fact it is possible to circumvent PRP and move directly to FIS by remaining lawfully resident in the Falkland Islands for seven years (on a work permit for example). Migrants and Islanders should be able to see a linear pathway to FIS which tests and measures skills, talent and commitment at each stage.

It is proposed that all individuals wishing to acquire FIS should be subject to the same tests and checks to establish their 'worth' to the Islands. Hence it is proposed that PRP should be the testing ground for those who want to make a long term commitment to the Falkland Islands i.e. anyone seeking to acquire Falkland Islands Status should first have obtained PRP. PRP is the immigration status at which skills, background, worth and investment in and to the Islands should be thoroughly tested - and anyone seeking to acquire status should have demonstrated their commitment and value in this way prior to achieving FIS.

Changes are also proposed regarding the PRP points system. The current system places a high value on educational attainment, high earnings, high responsibility jobs and experience, and assets, which while all valuable considerations, do not necessarily reflect the types of persons that the Islands may wish to welcome to stay longer-term.

There may be individuals who do not have high-level qualifications or significant financial assets who nonetheless may be able to demonstrate their commitment to the Islands and offer skills and abilities that are currently lacking. It is therefore proposed that the PRP points system is re-visited to place a higher value on skills and contribution to the Islands, and less on financial assets and educational qualifications.

Further simplification of the PRP process, with potentially fewer points categories, is also proposed.

All members of the public are encouraged to take part in the consultation. Paper copies are available from the Policy Unit and the survey can be completed online at www.survey.gov.fk. The deadline for responses is 13th September 2013.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police complete a fruitless search for the remains of Marine Alan Addis beneath a building at North Arm, following information received after a TV programme on the subject of the Royal Marine's disappearance.

Following the screening in Britain of an episode of the TV programme Equinox, which examines the search for Royal Marine Addis who disappeared in the Falklands just before the war, an anonymous person claiming to be an ex-Islander and offering information on the subject contacted Crimestoppers in Durham on the same day.

The caller, a man, informed Crimestoppers that he had "watched the programme about the missing marine," and gave information that seemingly validated his claim of being an ex-Islander. He continues to state that the body of Marine Addis is buried under the kitchen area of the Cookhouse at North Arm. Two officers from the Royal Falkland Islands Police acting on this information travel to North Arm to search the area where it is claimed the body is hidden.

A spokesman for the Royal Falkland Islands Police says there is no evidence of human remains in the area searched.

HEADTEACHERS at both the Infant and Junior School and Community School have stated that pupils have not been disadvantaged by the shortened academic year. The school year that began as usual in January, only ran until August. The academic year was shortened by a term to move the Falkland Islands school year into line with that of the UK. The school year will now run from September until August with pupils undertaking their GCSE examinations in May/June as pupils in Britain do.

Global theme for SCB

STANDARD Chartered Bank (SCB) hosted a celebration of International Day on August 16.

Falling on a Friday, traditionally the busiest day for the bank, there were many surprised and delighted customers enjoying the almost festive spirit in the bank.

A SCB spokesperson explained to Penguin News that the bank employs more than 86,500 people globally, almost half of whom are women, representing 132 nationalities.

The bank's ambition is to lead the way through diversity and inclusion, supporting our employees, customers and communities across more than 70 markets, said the spokesperson.

"Diversity lies at the heart of our values and is a distinctive element of our brand. With all this in mind, our Diversity and Inclusion Team came up with the idea to hold an International Day within the Bank to celebrate the diversity and inclusion of our colleagues and markets around the world."

All of the staff had the opportunity to dress up as a colleague from a different market. Countries represented included Australia, Chile, China, Falkland Islands, United Kingdom, Sweden, USA, India, Qatar, Saudi Arabi, Japan, Mexico, France, Egypt and Pakistan.

During the day staff also feasted on different foods from around the world. A display celebrating the diversity and international nature of Standard Chartered can be viewed in the Banking Hall.

SCB has a history of more than 150 years in banking and is present in many of the world's fastest-growing markets.

The Falkland Islands

The Islands are special, a nature lover's delight
It is there that I dream of when I go to sleep at night
With slippery seals, lounging on the beach
The glistening water, just out of reach
The waddling penguins, on sandy shore
Marching down to the ocean, to feed on fish galore
The Meadow Lark, standing so proud
It's scarlet chest, seen from all around
With chattering dolphins, so graceful and sleek.
Leaping and swerving, you can't help but peek
The beautiful Pale Maiden, so elegant and slender,
It's gorgeously scented, a flower to remember
Riders on horseback, their saddles well worn
With help from the sheepdog, round up sheep to be shorn
The Islands are brilliant, I know 'cos I've been.
I hope to go back there, there's much more to be seen.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Shackleton Scholar Andrew makes research a Falklands adventure

SHACKLETON Scholar Andrew Mathews (25) recently spent seven weeks in the Islands studying the benthic ecology of Adventure Sound in the North Arm area.

A student at Aberystwyth University he said he was grateful to the Shackleton Scholarship Fund for the £2,000 they had provided as well as the Welfare and Celebration Club of his university for the £300 grant they had put towards his project which was otherwise self funded.

Andrew is the son of 1982 veteran Ian Mathews who served on board HMS Arrow and this connection initially sparked his interest in the Falklands. He first visited the Islands in September 2012 with his parents and took the opportunity to spend some time in the Fisheries Department working with the observers who carry out research on species and stock on the high seas.

This snapshot of the work carried out encouraged him to explore further opportunities to return and contribute to current research ongoing in the Islands. And so it was he found himself at Adventure Sound during the Falklands winter studying the factors which control the habitat as the Shallow Marine Survey Group collected photographic data from the seabed.

This work required Andrew to identify the organisms within 558 photo-quadrats taken of the seabed at 10 sites at Adventure Sound. By analysing these counts against the environmental conditions local to each site, such as salinity, depth, substrate and presence of kelp species, he hopes to uncover the underlying determinants of community structure for the Sound. The generation of this baseline data is important in helping to assess any human impacts, such as hydrocarbon accidents, may present the area in the future.

He has now returned to Aberystwyth where this analysis will be completed and his thesis written.

Andrew's interest in the Falklands continues and he is hopeful he will return one day with the prospect of working as an observer within the Falklands Fisheries Department a post he would like to take up at some point.

The Farmer seems a lot more relaxed lately.

Well, ever since he imported those new animals and then became a Buddhist.

..he's become a calmer llama farmer with good karma!

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

YET another cold bug has hit the household. However, the sun being out (and no wind) I felt a bit of fresh air was called for and what better excuse could I have than to get outside with a camera?

The various species of Crocus had opened in the warmth of the sun and it might be days before that happens again. These little beauties with their many different but pale colours, mainly lilacs, lemons and palest blues, put me in mind of rather bashful teenagers. Their size and the way they hold themselves makes them seem that way too. The same cannot be said for the brazen hussies which will show themselves a little later. Their colours are brighter and gaudier than their little sisters but still lovely. I'm totally delighted too to see that the dwarf Iris bulbs with their surprisingly large and brighter flowers in various shades of blue, and which first appeared last year, have come through the winter and are flowering wonderfully as well. So far, no sign of the little yellow ones, but there is still time. The Primula denticulata (drumstick primula) plants have come to the surface. At the moment these are very small plants with a large cup shaped, flower bud but they will actually become the biggest primulas in the garden as the season progresses. Up to fifteen inches tall and that, or more, wide, they give a lovely show of white, lilac or deep pink drumstick flowers in great profusion over a long period. There were also little clumps of snowdrops making an appearance.

However, that was yesterday. Woke up to a white world this morning, everything beautifully white and clean and, well, covered in snow! Guess I won't be weeding or planting seeds for a while yet? Who knows what new flowers might appear when the snow goes though.

The sun was out, even if not giving a lot of heat, so I took myself to the tunnels to make a badly needed start on the weeding in there. Last February when I finished digging out the early potatoes in there I promised myself I would return and dig the soil over again, but I never did. Nevertheless I was surprised to see just how many I'd left behind when they started to grow again, however, as the weather became even cooler their tops disappeared and I assumed they had died off. Not so. Digging around as I weeded I came across a whole load of egg sized, very early, potatoes in that soil: how's that for an unexpected treat? But it is best not to use the same border every year for the same crops, as pests and diseases might build up. So I shall lift the rest of the potatoes later in the Spring and really clean that border up before using it for other vegetables for the next couple of years.

Plants such as the young roses over-wintered outside in pots are looking very healthy and starting to form fresh new leaf buds. The rose cuttings in the border of the greenhouse are looking wonderful on top and, hopefully forming roots below. I'm really struggling to be sensible and not lift some just to check. Still, another few weeks should see them ready for potting on. The rhododendron cuttings put in a couple of months ago are holding their own but, so far anyway, not made any fresh growth. I will just have to wait a little longer.

It is much too cold and miserable to do much outside at the moment but, I have been to the garden centre and purchased some compost suitable for seedlings. That is now sitting on a shelf in the greenhouse, hopefully a little bit of heat sometime soon will warm it up and then I can start sowing seeds at last. I guess patience was never my strongest point.

However, there's one thing I can do and, as it is a job I can do in the warmth, so I have started it. That is lifting and scraping the remaining carrots from the garden. For that I make little trips to the garden with a bucket and come dashing back into the warmth to clean them, cut them, blanch them a kilo at a time in the microwave for five minutes or so as they are now older and tougher, and pop them into the freezer. The amount I have put away already means we won't go short of them for some time. The children enjoy them raw so much that I always try to leave a few in the ground but they are getting a bit old now and will probably become seedy soon.

The swedes did not do all that well, the earwigs having chomped off their growing points a little too late to make planting more seed a worthwhile proposition. I did sow more seed but they did not get to grow to any reasonable size, however, there were enough of them to get quite a lot put away, these I dice and microwave for about four minutes before freezing. Few meals in this household would seem complete without some swede in one form or another. The brussel sprouts untouched by any bugs are a lovely treat and, like parsnips and swedes, even better after a few frosts. The savoy cabbage heads are nearly ready to eat, I think they are probably my favourite form of greens so I look forward to a salad soon!

Stepping up to the Stanley Cup

THE final Falkland Islands Dek Hockey Club competition of the 2012/2013 season, the Stanley Cup, started this week.

Flyers were victorious against Blackhawks in a close match of four goals to three. Penguins defeated Panthers by thirteen goals to two in the second match of Tuesday evening.

This was also the first game for a renewed Panthers team, as they have absorbed Hurricanes' remaining players and are now Captained by Callum Middleton.

Impressed Club Secretary Martyn Barlow took the opportunity to reflect on the achievements of players in the last competition, the Russell Smith Memorial Trophy League sponsored by Sure, and the Energise Shield sponsored by Energise.

Records were matched and broken throughout the season he said adding a special commendation to Malachi Budd who at nine years-old became the youngest ever player to score a hat-trick.

Penguins demolished the previous winning streak of seven games to play 14 and win them all, in fact they played a total of 24 games (shield and league) and lost only one game which was in the shield.

Penguins scored 20 goals in one game to secure the record of the greatest winning margin and goals scored by a team in a game.

On Sunday's game, Penguins' Duane Evans broke the record of the most assists in a competition setting the new total at 22.

On a record less celebrated Martyn Barlow, who plays for Flyers, also reported that he is now the joint record holder, alongside Roy Shepherd, of penalty minutes awarded in a competition with ten. The crown of most goals in a competition is still held by Craig Dockrill who scored 68 goals in the 2010 League. It is noted that the 2010 League was played over 21 games and this year only 15 games were played due to team issues. "At the 14 games each mark Craig had scored 47 goals and Kyran scored 48. It makes you think, that given the dominance of the Penguins, Craig's record could have fallen," said Mr Barlow, who added that Penguin Kyran had secured a greater scoring average than anyone else in the Club's history over the current season.

A discussion between Falkland Island owned businesses.

In late September this year there will be a meeting arranged to which all Falkland Islanders who own their own businesses, and representatives of businesses which are entirely owned by Falkland Islanders, regardless of the size of the business or sector of the economy, are invited.

The idea is to see if, in our fast changing circumstances we see any value in meeting to discuss issues from our particular perspective, and if so if there are any matters which we would like to take forward collectively. A further notice will be made nearer the date of the meeting

There will be a public presentation meeting to outline the Falkland Islands Government's Alternative Water Supply project. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce building on Tuesday 3rd September 2013 at 5.30pm

This project consists of a road, dam and pump station to be constructed at the Murrell River with the new pipeline running from the new site to the existing pump station at Moody Brook

Members of the public who are interested or have concerns about the project are encouraged to attend this meeting.

Social Services is dysfunctional and badly managed says Judge

A JUDGEMENT passed down in the Senior Magistrates court regarding a wardship and supervision order for two young children has found that Social Services rather than finding a solution to some of the problems relating to the case had in some respects, "become part of the problem."

"The Court has been promised changes. It hopes that these promises will not be broken. This is not for the benefit of the children in this case and the children of these Islands," said Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley on August 12, when he delivered his findings on the case which lasted almost a year.

Mr Gumsley was, however, keen to make it clear that although the parties involved and the Court had criticised the Social Services Department during the case, based on the evidence he had heard it was, "abundantly clear that this criticism should fall upon the shoulders of the management."

Those at the coal face, such as the community psychiatric nurse, the allocated social worker and the social work assistant in the case had earned the admiration of the court. "They try to work in a system that it seems in my judgement to be deeply dysfunctional, out of date, under resourced and badly managed," said Mr Gumsley.

Following an informal request from His Excellency the Governor two days later to see the judgement, Mr Gumsley invited representation as to whether it would be lawful or appropriate to do so and on Wednesday he delivered his findings in open court in his capacity as Acting Supreme Judge and Senior Magistrate.

Guardian ad Litem Fran Wiley's position was that a significant finding had been made relating to the unfitness for purpose of the child protection systems in the Falklands and in the current view posed a risk to children themselves. Despite the proceedings lasting over a year and the Crown being fully apprised of the problems the situation had not improved and had recently deteriorated further. She also submitted that without the judgement being made public it was impossible for other parties involved in proceedings to be aware of the "profound failures" identified through this particular case.

The Crown (which includes government agencies) took the stance that the judgement should not be made public, that those involved in safeguarding children in the government could be made aware of the judgement without it having to be published. Repeated criticisms had led to a crisis of confidence and a fear of becoming involved in the court process and further criticism could create further problems for recruitment of social workers to the department which was described as "fledgling," was their submission.

Mr Gumsley said the idea

the public and indeed off Island recruits should be sheltered from the truth was one which is now outdated as being unduly paternalistic and patronising. "If the public know the truth they can debate the issues, form their own opinions, and act accordingly. A glance at the recent NHS scandals in the UK demonstrates that the idea the public are better off not knowing for fear they may lose confidence in the system is not one which seems to find favour any longer in political circles," he said adding, "it is not an argument which finds favour in this Court."

The Crown had maintained they were not seeking to hide the problems revealed in the case and that issues raised would be fully published in September.

Mr Gumsley said it was difficult to understand why the Crown would suggest there was no public interest in the Court publishing a judgement when they apparently intended to publish essentially the same matters themselves.

He said he was not convinced by any of the arguments put forward by the Crown that the judgement should not be published. "In essence I agree with the submission of Ms Wiley for the Guardian who suggests that the arguments put forward by the Crown in this regard essentially amount to, "please don't publish because the Crown will sort it out."

A Government press release in response to the judgement being made public said FIG was committed to addressing the issues identified and ensuring children are not at risk of harm.

One of the steps recently carried out was an independent review into the provision of child safeguarding services. The report of that review, which has been very recently received, will be considered by Executive Council in September.

The Director of Health and Social Services, Hilary Rowland, said the following in relation to improvements which are currently being undertaken and are ongoing: "We are clear that the problems identified must not happen again and the difficulties identified must be addressed."

"Our priority is to ensure the safety of the children on the Islands and this is very clearly about having well recruited and well trained staff. We have already improved our recruitment practices to ensure that we employ suitably qualified and experienced social workers."

"We also hope there will be a further social work post created in order to ensure the team can deliver these crucial services. Other actions include training and the use of an independent social worker in child care conferences. We are determined that children and their families will be well served and well protected in the future by having an excellent team of staff in place."

● Hard copies of the judgements are available from the Court for a small fee to cover printing or via email free of charge

Support for phased port development

RESULTS of the Government public consultation document 'Your Future - Your Say' have been released and show very strong support for phased development of the new port, "to serve all its potential users," according to an Executive Council paper.

Views were split, however, regarding the location of the port and the infrastructure accommodation for temporary workers. 44 per cent of respondents preferring them to be located near to the port and 44 per cent preferring a location near to, or on the edge of Stanley.

At the end of May and in early June of this year, the public were consulted on 10 key decision areas and asked for further comment. The questionnaire received 164 replies.

With regard to the layout of the port 76 per cent preferred the option of building out into the sea rather than it being causeway based (see preferred option page 2).

There was also support for the access route to the port that begins by running east from Moody Brook to a low point along Wireless Ridge approximately 1.5km away.

With regard to the location of development associated with oil and gas it was generally preferred that this be as close to the port as possible. There was also, "fairly clear," support for new or additional power station and fuel supply provision close to the new port.

Significant messages included a preference to work towards final rather than temporary solutions, and also the urgency of making decisions now and avoiding further delays.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

TALK of change in the Islands as a result of hydrocarbon development is a hard one to get my head around, mainly because of the speed at which this next period of change could take place.

My age group will be among the last to truly experience the pre-82 Falklands and having discussed it with a few other 'old codgers', we are very happy to have had the privilege.

From working as a horse powered shepherd in my first job, glaring at the first farm motorbike to arrive and declaring it not much use for anything else other than rounding up the horses (the real workers), to spending endless hours hooning around camps hanging on to my Suzuki DR200 for dear life and pronouncing it the best thing since sliced bread. From feeling dismay at the idea of a road network which would bring an end to the great convoys of vehicles on an off-road journey, to nipping to a neighbouring settlement to visit friends in the evening; and that's just the tip of the iceberg from the Camp perspective.

Changes in Stanley, while less life-transforming one might argue, have also been enormous. Gone is the smell of peat smoke, the town has spread East and West and life in general has increased in pace. It sometimes seems as if the faster our communications system becomes the more we try to ram into a day.

But, these changes have been very gradual, the population has remained static, and the Government decision-making process hasn't managed to shift up a gear.

Now, think ahead and try to imagine the Islands in 30 years time - more money, more people and if all goes well more efficient decision making processes, so things will happen quicker. It's pretty much impossible to build a picture of what the Islands could be like.

30 years ago could anyone possibly have imagined sending a text message to the UK from an air conditioned vehicle as they zip out to catch a ferry to West Falkland? I think not - back then I was still suspicious of a fax machine!

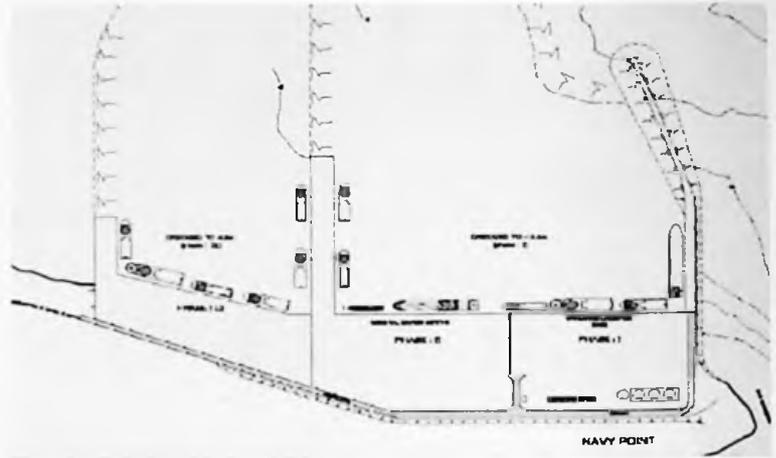

So, rather than worrying about possible changes I've decided to once again enjoy the ride, but no doubt have my say when I don't agree with the way things are going.

In 30 years time (God willing) we will hear people saying, "Well, I can remember when there was only one decent restaurant, no theatre or arcade and darling, can you believe, the roads weren't surfaced - we were the real pioneers I can tell you." We will just smile and not say a word.

"Change not only was inevitable, but usually brought its own reward" (Nicholas Sparks, The Last Song)

The preferred port option

Some felt the interest and potential of tourism were under-represented and there were several expressions of opinion about the importance of road improvements in the Islands.

According to the paper presented by the Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher there was, "differing and often opposed views about the extent and timing of change in the Islands, and the desirability (and from some quarters, inevitability) or not of some degree of growth."

This included a variety of views about the desirability of embracing or rejecting physical changes around (and visible across) Stanley Harbour, including debating the merits of increased life and vitality against the potential significant loss of tranquillity and environmental harm.

The scope and desirability of integrating the construction workforce within Stanley, and the potential effects on the local economy were controversial matters explained Mr Fletcher.

There was also comment on the extent to which businesses and market forces should be allowed their preferences, or whether the Stanley community as a whole would have a different view, which should prevail.

Under the heading 'The Way Forward' one area notes that further engagement and consultation on the issues will be required to clarify some areas and explain Government's decisions in others.

Referring to recently released policy principles on 'Port Location & Oil Infrastructure Development' Mr Fletcher notes that without them uncertainty could be caused in relation to planning applications, due to the Planning and Building Committee and the Lands Committee applying different policies.

The full paper as well as the results and comments can be found on the Falkland Islands Government website.

Premier Oil/Noble Energy Presentation on HSE

FIDC would like to invite businesses and individuals to a presentation by Premier Oil and Noble Energy on Tuesday 3rd September from 9am-11am. The presentation will take place in the Chamber of Commerce and will focus on the Health, Safety and Environment (HSE) Contractor management processes of Premier Oil and Noble Energy.

Those already involved or interested in becoming involved in the Falkland Islands oil and gas industry are encouraged to attend.

If you wish to attend the presentation please contact Sue Faria - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: sfaria@fidc.co.fk

Probation order

DOMINIC Robert Watson (20) was placed under a probation order for 12 months on Friday after sentencing was deferred for three months.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he was impressed that Mr Watson had chosen to make good use of the chance he had been given.

He said when he had deferred sentencing he had thought Mr Watson would be back in court and consequently in prison within a week, but, "you have proved me wrong," he added.

Mr Watson had admitted several offences in March, April and May including criminal damage, public order and road traffic offences.

"You were one of the great lunatics of our time, but I am extremely impressed with what you have done. You've changed from an anti-social moron to a smart looking individual who has sorted himself out," said Mr Gumsley.

Mr Watson is to remain on a prohibition order (Black List) for a further three months, and Mr Gumsley reminded him that any breach of his probation or further offending would also result in re-sentencing. "That's the carrot, you know what the stick is," he warned. Mr Watson was ordered to pay a total of £250 in compensation and prosecution costs.

Sexual offences

STANLEY man Kevin Derek Charles McLaren (38) had a further six charges brought against him just hours before he appeared in court on Wednesday.

He now faces a total of seven sexual offence charges and one of harassment involving two complainants who were under the age of 16 at the time the offences took place.

Crown Counsel Ros Cheek said police investigations continued and while there had been a third complainant, charges had not been made to date.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said that bearing in mind the prosecution had not asked for the defendant to be remanded in custody he would grant bail under stringent conditions.

The case was adjourned until October 9 for Mr McLaren's defence lawyer to be served papers.

Guilty of assault

MOUNT Pleasant man Rick Marc Thomas (20) pleaded guilty to two charges of assault by beating and one of obstructing a police officer in his duties, offences which it was noted were committed during a current community service order. Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley asked for a brief report to be prepared saying, "I need to know why he thinks it is appropriate to put his hand to a woman."

Mr Thomas was released on conditional bail with the case adjourned until October 2.

THE 2013 results are in for the apprenticeship scheme with apprentices from 14-25 years obtaining excellent grades in their chosen qualifications confirmed Apprenticeship Scheme Co-ordinator Marcus Morrison.

"Pick of the bunch is Catering apprentice Rhys Clifford (Malvina House Hotel) achieving a merit in the level 3 BTEC Subsidiary Diploma in Hospitality a merit in Barista skills Level 2 and a triple grade distinction in a level 3 BTEC Extended Diploma in Hospitality with Chichester College," said Marcus.

Rhys has now completed his apprenticeship and is considering applying to university for further studies.

Sean Minto (Power Station and Wayne Clement Electrical) and Aiden Morris (G+S Electrical) successfully completed the level 2 Diploma in Electrical Installations (Building and Structures) with passes and merits at Chichester College and Aiden also obtained his Essential Skills Level 2 qualification via the Training Centre.

Marcus said both will be away in September to undertake the Level 3 Diploma in Electrical Installations and will be completed by June 2014.

Adrianna Merrey (Agriculture Department) also completed her Essential Skills Level 2 qualification via the Training Centre along with a level 1 Functional Skills qualification in Maths at Chichester college. Adrianna is due to undertake her second year on the level 3 Subsidiary Diploma in Agriculture with Brinsbury College.

Mechanics Macaulay Middleton, Robert George and Marcus Pole-Evans will also travel overseas to undertake training.

VRQ Vehicle Maintenance after successfully completing the Entry Level 3 and VRQ Level 1 Vehicle Maintenance qualification in the Islands with FIC Garage as well as his Essential Skills Level 2 qualification.

Robert and Marcus (PWD Megabid) will attend Bircham Newton National Construction College to undertake the Level 2 and 3 Plant Maintenance NVQ.

Robert successfully completed his Essential Skills Level 2 qualification and Marcus will be adding to his DAF Technical training certificate.

Verity Livermore who is studying Hospitality Front of House and Management with the Malvina House Hotel successfully completed her Essential Skills Level 2 qualification in a record time of three months and is now moving on to level 3 and looking to undertake overseas training at Chichester College in September 2014.

Ryan Poole who has been studying aircraft fitting with FIGAS has finished his Essential Skills Level 2 qualification and will be the first apprentice to attend Cardiff and Vale College to take up the NVQ Diploma in Aeronautical Engineering Level 2 and 3.

John Didlick passed the Level 1 IVQ Core Construction Skills and Basic Construction Skills with merits in both. John has now signed off the apprenticeship programme but will look to complete his IVQ with G+S Electrical.

Marcus commented: "Young apprentice results were also very good."

Warren Jennings passed the IVQ Level 1 Core Construction Skills with a merit and the Basic Construction skills with a pass mark.

Warren also completed his Essential Skills Level 1 ICT Unit. Wade Ford, Ryan Watson and Hayden Mitchell all successfully completed their Essentials Skills Level 1 ICT Unit with Hayden obtaining a merit in his Level 1 IVQ Core Construction Skills.

Falklands reps spread the word

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Dick Sawle has been in Brazil on a week long visit making business and political contacts. He told Penguin News mid week he had visited a port development in Rio de Janeiro, "which is enormous but the financial models were interesting showing how they raised the billions of dollars needed."

He also gave a presentation followed by a lively and intelligent question and answer session with students at Escola Superior de Propaganda E-marketing in Rio de Janeiro and gave a number of interviews including to Globo, a Brazilian national paper, Associated Press and the Guardian.

MLAs Roger Edwards and Barry Elsby are to attend the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association from August 28 until September 6 in Johannesburg, South Africa.

MLA Ian Hansen will attend the Pre Joint Ministerial Council in Gibraltar and Party Conferences from September 3 until October 7, confirmed Gilbert House in Stanley.

MLA Cheek will attend Party Conferences in the UK from September 10 until October 10.

There is also the Joint Ministerial Council and EU OCTA in November and December.

Potential removal of Development rights

EXECUTIVE Council has agreed that further work should be carried out on the potential removal of Permitted Development Rights (PD) from Crown Projects.

MLA Jan Cheek said this would aim to ensure adequate consultation on potentially controversial Government projects as well as go some way to removing the double standard where FIG can undertake a wide range of works without consultation.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a Member of the Legislative Assembly

I ARRIVED back from my brief holiday with a case of air-bridge 'flu' so spent the last week in a blur of paracetamol, lemon and honey and sleeping a lot between meetings. Fortunately most of the meetings were sufficiently interesting to keep me awake. The final one last Friday was a meeting of the Environment Committee that I chaired on Friday (the usual chair Dr Elsbj was overseas for medical training) to look at the costing of the work that was identified by the 'Gap Analysis' commissioned by the Environmental Forum. The aim is to cover some of the gaps in our knowledge of our environment that became apparent as we looked at the Environmental Impact Assessments produced at the various stages of oil exploration. It is essential for the credibility of our environmental regime that these gaps are filled without delay.

DURING my eleven days in the UK I attended a reunion of old classmates from the four years I spent at Dorset grammar school up to O'level in 1964. Apart from the fun of catching up, in some cases after 50 years, it was good to know they had been following news of the Falklands and I was able to bring them up to date.

IT is unfortunate that we have been unable to put in place some of the safety related road traffic regulation on all public highways before this Assembly is dissolved. Safety and insurance issues apart, I am not sure how much longer we can treat the West as a special case in the face of real concern from many on the East that the situation is clearly unfair. I wonder if this is a case of the strident few being heard above the quiet majority.

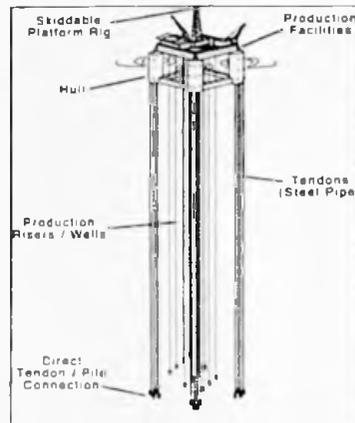

THE publication of the responses to 'Your future - your say' is timely because again there was a risk that a distorted view taken from some fairly wild assumptions could be accepted as fact. There is still considerable work to be done and much information to be collated and digested before a final decision on a port can be made.

Change of approach for Premier

OIL explorer in the Falklands, Premier Oil, updated the community on its plans for the development of the Sea Lion project on Tuesday evening.

Premier initially planned to use an Floating Production Storage and Offloading (FPSO) scheme which involves subsea architecture to produce oil. Although an FPSO had been confirmed as viable, the cost of the FPSO and related equipment has increased, and as such, the company is studying a Tension Leg Platform (TLP) with an integrated drilling rig as an alternative. A final decision regarding which facility to use will be made by the end of 2013. This would be followed by the front end engineering and design phase during 2014 before "sanction" at the end of 2014. Actual development and construction ahead of first oil would then take a further three and a half to four years, explained Premier representative Ken Humphrey.

The company had also selected a phased development of Sea Lion using one rig in the first phase to develop the northern part of the Sea Lion field which is estimated to contain 284 million barrels. This gives the project a more, "measured, flexible approach," he told the meeting and one that has gained Falkland Islands Government approval.

The new concept will mean less impact on local infrastructure, giving FIG more time to plan for, "capacity pressures during peak development activity," confirmed Director of Mineral Resources Stephen Luxton last week, who added: "Premier continues to advance the Sea Lion development concept with a target for project sanction and gaining FIG approval towards the end of 2014. The proposed phased development concept has been discussed extensively with FIG and its advisers. We are confident that it appears to be the optimum solution to deliver a successful project. Maximum economic recovery of offshore resources remains FIG's guiding policy."

As part of this phased approach Premier is in talks with another Falklands oil explorer Noble Energy regarding the possibility of sharing a drilling rig to use in further exploration work in late 2014/15.

A three well programme is planned including an exploration well to test the Zebedee prospect, south of Sea Lion, and an appraisal well to confirm the presence of a gas cap with an exploration tail to test for deeper potential. A third well location is under discussion. The Zebedee prospect would be difficult to develop on its own said Mr Humphrey and the plan would be to include it, if successful, in the second phase of Sea Lion development.

Depending on the depths to which Zebedee is drilled it has a gross prospective oil resource of 28 to 46 to 150 million barrels of oil equivalent (MMBOE) at a shallower level, or alternatively a higher risk gross prospective resource of 28 to 165 to 400 MMBOE if drilling is deeper.

Sea Lion now has an increased evaluation of anticipated oil recovery of around 394 million barrels from the first and second phases of development. A higher than previously expected flow rate is also anticipated.

Tax bill

SHARES in Rockhopper Exploration (RKH) plummeted almost 10 per cent late last week when the company announced a full-year loss of $75 million (£48 million) due to a $122 million tax bill from the Falkland Islands Government. Rockhopper made a pre-tax profit of $47 million for the year ended March 31, up from a loss of $53 million in the previous year, but capital gains tax on its Sea Lion farm-out to Premier Oil wiped out this profit.

In response to the reports in the UK press regarding Rockhopper Exploration's Financial Information release the Falkland Islands Government Treasury released the following:

In accordance with usual practice the Falkland Islands Government Tax Office is reviewing the tax return submitted by Rockhopper on May 17. However, given the extraordinary circumstances surrounding Rockhopper's application to the High Court to cancel its share premium account, an initial tax assessment was raised by the Falkland Islands Government Tax Office on June 11 prior to agreement of the tax liability. The Falkland Islands Government is working with an international specialist valuation advisor and is confident that a mutually acceptable outcome can be reached with Rockhopper.

Change needs to be handled sensibly says MLA Summers

AT the final Legislative Assembly on Thursday, MLA Mike Summers said a period of extensive change was inevitable for the Falklands.

"For all of those who hope that the Islands in 20 or 30 years time will still have 3,000 people and one small town, but with a lot more money, I'm afraid it won't be like that," he said.

The advent of a hydrocarbon industry would change the Falklands in size and to some extent the nature of the community, he said adding that the task of the new Assembly was to ensure it was done with "sensitivity and sensibility to make sure the things we value in our community are maintained and not destroyed."

The changes to the structure of the Legislative Assembly would also bring change which, he said he hoped would be positive. There was still a lot of work to be done to ensure it was all positive but it should speed up the decision making process and enable the Government to move more quickly on urgent matters.

MLA Gavin Short also looked ahead, saying the next four to eight years would shape the Falklands future.

As the hydrocarbon regime started to take shape there would be two things to manage he said.

"One will be the expectations and pressures to start spending beyond our means without the guarantee we are going to hit the big time.

"The other is control. If hydrocarbons happen we are probably going to come under great pressure from those who would wish to part us from our cash and diminish the control we have over spending and investment decisions, and in how and what we do with revenues," said MLA Short.

While funds needed to be put away to invest in the future and, "sort out the crumbling infrastructure," he said, "we must never lose sight that this oil and the money that might come from it belong to the people of the Falklands and it is not going to be enough to use some of it to give a proper living wage to all, we are going to have to find some way of delivering part of that cash to the people."

MLA Short said whether it was a matter of reintroducing the old £1 a day scheme or subsidising things that make Falklands life that little bit more enjoyable, making sure it covers both Camp and Stanley was "going to be fun."

MLA Gavin Short urged his colleagues to, "put right a wrong," with regard to government employees, before the Assembly is dissolved on September 26, at Thursday's Legislative Assembly meeting.

Referring to the remuneration package that has been offered to FIG employees, he said that while there was a lot of good stuff in the package he thought it was fair to say the Assembly had, "accidentally and inadvertently introduced something that is quite negative and is having quite an effect on staff morale at the moment."

The cause for his concern was the concept of having a bonus for those who have served 10, 20 or 30 years in service. MLA Short said: "There seems to be quite a number who have reached these milestones already who thought this would apply to them and have found now that they have done 11 years or even 21 years they have got to wait another nine." He added, for those who have hit 30, "tough, that's it."

He said he had also been informed there were generous pension contributions being made for the longer serving people.

"But in some of the paper work I have seen over the last 24 hours it seems to indicate that it was only righting a wrong that came in under the Hay Management and I don't see that as us being overly generous.

"If you are righting a wrong it's something you should do, it's not out of the kindness of your heart." He asked fellow Assembly to help him put right the wrong while there was still time. "It is really affecting the morale of our civil service at a time when we should not be doing this."

GOVERNMENT has agreed to a proposal to allow a managed spoil dumping area for excavated material south of Megabid which will only be visible from the rifle range.

A paper put before Executive Council also recommended the continued dumping of top soil to the north and east of Mary Hill quarry, and that the Environmental Planning Department coordinates measures to control any invasive plants accidentally introduced through spoil dumping.

It was noted that the site is required as there has been on-going excavation of vegetation and peaty material and clay from the Gordon Lines area for the formation of hardstandings, and the excavation is going to accelerate to meet the needs the oil industry for hard standings and warehousing.

In the paper presented by the FIG Head of Policy and the Director of Public Works they explain that at present virtually all of the material removed from the sites is deposited and spread north of Stanley Airport, with a view to encouraging re-vegetation of barren areas. This is considered effective in achieving that objective, however the use of peaty material alone would achieve the same result and a closer location for the dumping of clay and rocky material would reduce other environmental impacts such as fuel usage, wear and tear on roads and costs to developers.

The proposed site is within Stanley Common and not regularly accessed by the public as it is situated between Rookery Bay Rifle Range, Rookery Bay minefield and Megabid.

Site inspections have been made with the Environmental Planning Officer and the Environmental Officer and the areas to be covered are diddle-dee heath with little variation in species and no protected plants present. There has also been discussions with Falklands Conservation and local botanists who have raised no concerns about the botanical interest of the area it is noted in the paper.

Combined funding for training

A CAREER development scheme funded by government has not met with the same success as a succession planning stream similarly funded, and as a result it has been proposed that one central training fund to service the whole community be created, "to increase the accessibility to such funding..."

The original succession planning scheme involved key FIG posts being identified which required specific skills and experience and the identification of individuals who could be developed in order to take up the post.

A number of FIG staff were supported in this successfully, however the alternative scheme which was created to support formal higher education or professional qualifications required for a specific government post, did not have the same take up from individuals.

At Executive Council last week MLAs examined a paper from the Director of Central Services which suggested that the two funding streams be combined.

This would allow any Falkland Islands Status and Permanent Resident Permit holders, "greater access to financial support for development activities."

Scottish University Air Squadron on a journey of Falklands discovery

MEMBERS of the East of Scotland Universities Air Squadron (UAS) spent two weeks in the Falkland Islands this month in the company of RAF regular member Flt Lt Hunter and Falklands war veteran David Charters, who in 1982 was a Captain in General Moore's Headquarters.

Dismissing the less than perfect South Atlantic weather as, "just like home in a few months," (the majority of the group are from the West of Scotland) they expressed admiration for the, "patriotism," and "self-sufficiency," of Islanders.

The majority of their time in the Islands has been spent learning about the 1982 war, visiting memorials and hearing from local veterans including former North Arm Manager Eric Goss and local historian John Smith.

On a more modern note the squadron members listened to a talk by Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers on the subject of the Falklands' current economic and political situation and its aims for the future.

A number also had a flight on a Search and Rescue helicopter and were able to check out penguins from the air.

Those lucky enough to make the journey to the Falklands were chosen based on merit and what they had done over the year said Flt Lt Hunter.

The group has been based at Hillside Camp in Stanley with a few nights at Mount Pleasant.

The UAS plays a vital part in identifying future talent for the RAF, recruiting as it does at university freshers weeks. Around 40 per cent of those who join go on to join the regular RAF. Even if they do not decide to join, their experience makes future captains of industry, "air aware."

The general aim of the squadron is to provide students with a good introduction to what life in the Royal Air Force entails. The opportunity to receive a high standard of military flying instruction is one of the benefits available. The students also participate in a wide range of military training, sports, charity fund-raising activities and social events.

Your letters

Cheers roads and electioneering?

WELL, three Cheers for Roger Edwards!

He will be able to go electioneering in his pink tie.

It really was splendid news though that Campers are not to be further burdened with the wretched Road Traffic Ordinance.

I wonder if his colleagues saw the light or if the realisation that this would be an election issue played some part? Nasty cynical me!

Anyway, now it has been kicked into the long grass let's hope the new Assembly will have more important matters to attend to and it will just grow over and vanish.

Which leads me on to Dick Sawle's reply to my letter. As I read it, the proposal seems to be that if the oil companies want a new port then they will have to pay for it.

Also any temporary port must be removed after three years regardless. How stupid!

With FIG's record the new port probably won't have been started by then.

As I said earlier - I wonder what the oil companies feel about all this; and I echo the fear raised at the last public meeting that they may just say, "arriba suyos," and put everything on the back burner until FIG starts being more reasonable.

One thing is for sure, election candidates will have to be very clear with their intentions if elected because the right decisions are vital for our future existence.

Damn, now that reminds me. I must find out the latest date for nominations.

Smoko buns and a teaberry tippie at packed BirdFair 2013

TWENTY five thousand birders and nature enthusiasts gathered at BirdFair on August 18, and Falkland Islands Holidays (FIH) once again manned a stand reports Stanley Services UK Administrator Michelle Pepper.

She described it as another very successful year with BirdFair celebrating its 25 year anniversary. Falkland Islands Holidays have had a stand at BirdFair for a number of years, "and this year we saw a few changes," said Michelle.

Sue Smith joined Arlette Bloomfield and Carol Murphy as part of the team promoting the organisation.

Michelle said: "Sue, new to the team this year, has already been welcoming and assisting last season's tourists on the Islands and has now had an opportunity to meet future travellers along with experiencing her first travel and wildlife show." Sue commented on how large and varied the fair was and how much interest there is in the Falkland Islands. "The stand was busy for three days with enquiries on how to visit and what to experience on these amazing islands in the South Atlantic."

Arlette also managed some home baking, providing visitors with authentic smoko buns and Muzzie's ginger biscuits: "In fact they were so good there were none left," said Michelle.

Manger of FIH Arlette commented: "BirdFair is my favourite events of the year, it's not only promoting the Islands to potential visitors and discussing their tailored requirements, it is also very social and friendly. I look forward to seeing familiar faces of people who have already visited and to meet people who have booked to visit in the future. It is always so lovely to catch up with them, to hear of their fond memories of their trip and to simply see some amazing photographs. We obviously think we have a unique, natural and beautiful destination with an abundance of wildlife and culture, but when our clients confirm this, it is so rewarding. Thank you to everyone who came to see us."

The Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) has now moved to marquee five, explained Michelle, "joining us and Falklands Conservation as neighbours."

As reported previously in Penguin News, FITB co-sponsored the 25th anniversary event, "maximising the awareness of the Islands."

The Falkland Islands was promoted by a large advert in the event guide, banners around the site and exclusively on the exhibitors badge lanyards. Smoko was also served on the stand helping to showcase the Islands produce by using diddle-dee jam for the scones and teaberries for the unique tippie on offer.

Martin Beaton presented two talks on the Islands, one on Saturday and one on Sunday. Michelle said Martin once again provided "an excellent birders insight into the Islands." He mentioned many of the 200 species of birds on the Islands, and some with more than one name which, "made it exceedingly difficult to do so in 20 minutes. However, he ensured it was very interesting and informative and captured the audience's attention with his engaging personality and wit.

"Martin's presentations generated a lot of interest and brought additional people to the stands to find out more about visiting the Islands."

Tim Appleton MBE co-organiser and founder of BirdFair visited the Islands at the end of February this year with a small group of trade and media birding enthusiasts, he was quoted in Birding247.co.uk:

"My recent visit to the Falklands confirmed everything I had ever read about these wonderful islands set deep down in the Atlantic Ocean, they are simply wonderful! A naturalists dream, an amazing range of wildlife so tame and approachable whether it be a two-ton Elephant seal, a tiny endemic Cobb's Wren or a rookery of Penguins. The Falkland Islands has to be one of the top global wildlife destinations and one everyone must visit before they die!"

Michelle commented: "It was also great to see that Ascension Island exhibit at BirdFair for the first time, on a joint stand with St Helena and Tristan da Cunha."

Along with various packages Ascension Island is promoting a three day 'add on' package available to travellers flying between the Falklands and Brize Norton.

Described as the birdwatcher's Glastonbury, The British Birdwatching Fair is jointly organised by the Leicestershire & Rutland Wildlife Trust and the RSPB.

Delicious dishes at final dinner for Great Falkland Menu

The menu enjoyed by the guests comprised Choiseul Mollusc (local scallops and squid rings pan fried in butter served with a sweetcorn relish and toasted sesame seed dressing - Mr Thompson) followed by Dunbar Island Lamb (a canon of local lamb with a pine nut and herb crust accompanied with anna potato, fresh pea puree and a red wine jus - Cpl Valentine) and a dessert entitled Cold Bitter Sweet Falklands (a bitter chocolate and pistachio cremeux served with a banana brulee, peach fluid gel, peach sorbet and a strawberry macaroon - Cpl Heppell).

SAC Smith was given an Award for Excellence in the main course category for, 'Lamb Concordia' and Mr Merril Leo of Sodexo (not pictured) was given an Award for Excellence in the dessert category for a meringue and ice cream based dish, 'Bluff Cove Gentoo Penguin Egg'

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146 675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147 125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147 225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Alice: Frequency: 147 825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147 725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.
Marine Band: 156.800, Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RIFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:

Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110

Colin wins the Globe 32 cup

Colin Smith reclaims the Globe 32 trophy

THE Globe 32/16 is one of the most popular competitions of the season with the top men and women players from the league gathering to claim the prestige of a placing in the final.

Some fierce competition in a jovial atmosphere resulted in Colin Smith and Jackie Thomas being the top man and woman on Saturday in the Globe Tavern.

Previous years winner Martyn Clarke made it to the final but Colin's steady darts on the day ensured he won the cup.

Gary Clement who started the competition some 20 years ago when he was managing the Globe, explained that it was the intention to attract the best possible players on the day with 28 places available to the male league players for which points are gained throughout the season.

Four positions are reserved for guest players and the same rules apply to the women's competition with two positions reserved for guest players.

The competition this year reverted to its original format of sets rather than legs, although Gary said he was aware he had changed to five set five games too early in the men's competition, but he would ensure that in future the arrangements would be easier to understand.

Colin made his way to the final defeating John Smith, Governor's Cup winner Troy Bagley and his old rival Toot Ford.

Guest player Lisa Jaffray beat her Rosella team mate Natalie Smith, Ali Dodd and Lizzy Bonner on her way to the final match. Jackie Thomas pretty much took on the Globe's ladies team Wild Gunners single handed as she defeated first Jane Clement then Cherry Robson and finally Julie Clarke before taking her final victory against Lisa with the 2012 woman champion Sharon Jaffray making an early exit in the first round.

Gary thanked Cathy Jacobsen Jnr and Andy Pollard for their help throughout the day and also the Globe Tavern managers and staff for their continued support of the event.

REJUVENATED teams Blackhawks and Panthers faced off in the first match on Sunday.

Blackhawks were sporting a new outfielder in Rafael Sotomayor and Panthers were benefiting from the return of Sam Miller and a temporary addition of Marcus Morrison as their goalie.

First on the board was Karl Nightingale followed a minute later by his team mate Rafa.

A long stalemate followed, which was broken by Frank O'Sullivan of Panthers after a hard battle through Blackhawks defence. Aiden Morris found another goal for Panthers after a barrage of shots at Hawks goalie Rodrigo Vasquez. With four minutes to go in the first half Frank drew the big cats ahead; Blackhawks 2, Panthers 3.

The second half began quickly with another goal in the opening minute from Rafa, showing his promise as a high scoring player.

Final score Panthers 6, Blackhawks 3.

Public note - Trout fishing in the Falkland Islands

Brown Sea trout can be fished from September 1st until April 30th. Fishermen do not need a licence to fish but the daily bag limit is 6 brown trout for all waterways, except for the Murrell River, which has a daily bag limit of 3 trout and each fish must weigh over 1.5lb or 0.5kg. The native zebra trout can not be fished.

The Environmental Planning Department wishes to remind fishermen that you need to ask permission before fishing on private land. On the Murrell River, you can not fish from the culverts or within 100m of the culvert crossing on either side or upstream of Drunken Rock Pass, and these areas are marked.

The Falkland Islands is free of all invasive freshwater algae and fish diseases, and we want to keep it that way. So, if you are bringing in fishing gear in to the Falkland Islands that has been used elsewhere, you must Check, Clean and Dry. Fishing gear should be cleaned in dishwashing detergent or household bleach.

For further information, please contact the Environmental Planning Department on 28480.
