New FM radio reaches testing stage

THE installation of the new FM Radio main infrastructure is now complete and the project is moving to the commissioning and testing phase it was confirmed from the Secretariat this week.

The following channels are being broadcast island-wide from the new transmitter sites and can be accessed on the frequencies shown:

FIRS/BBC World Service (when FIRS is off air) (Mid frequency range island-wide) West Falklands: 97.4 MHz FM (from Byron Heights) or 97.6 MHz FM (from Mt Alice)

East Falklands: 97.8 MHz FM (from Mt William) or 97.2 MHz FM (Sussex Mt)

BFBS Falklands (Higher frequency range island-wide)

East Falklands: 106.8 MHz FM (from Mt William)

BFBS Radio 2 (Lower frequency range island-wide)

East Falklands: 88.8 MHz FM (from Mt William)

Additional solar panel array, to complement the wind turbine and increase power capacity for Sussex Mountain, will be arriving later this month and once installed BFBS Falklands will also be broadcast from Sussex on 106.2 MHz FM and BFBS Radio 2 will be broadcast on 88.2 MHz FM.

FIG and KTV will be carrying out Acceptance Tests of the infrastructure over the coming months, which will also monitor coverage and reception. Following commissioning and data gathering, consideration will be given to installation of further infill sites where considered necessary.

Police bound by law not lack of courage

CHIEF of the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) Superintendent Len McGill has defended his force from criticism of alleged lack of action in the face of Argentine visitors displaying their national flag or Argentine military style clothing, saying the RFIP are bound to, "act within and uphold the law."

In last week's Penguin News Tim Miller of Stanley complained that the police did nothing if a complaint was made, and suggested Argentines should have their luggage searched on arrival.

Mr Miller also commended Customs and Immigration for demanding to see Argentine passports as opposed to accepting presentation of ID cards "as if they were just entering part of Argentina," adding, "at least some of our uniformed services has some balls."

Superintendent McGill told Penguin News this week: "All officers of the Royal Falkland Islands Police and our Customs and Immigration Officer colleagues, are bound to act within and uphold the laws of the Falkland Islands and to do so in accordance with The Constitution of the Falkland Islands. Police Officers can only act to deal with an offence which is contrary to any law of the Falkland Islands."

He said they could not, for example, arbitrarily search a person or their property, take a person's property or require a person to change their clothing, if the possession of the property or the wearing of such cloths is not unlawful or the search being conducted was not part of an investigation into an offence.

He added that as Mr Miller acknowledged in his letter, "the Royal Falkland Islands Police are as proactive as they can be by engaging with certain groups of visitors giving them direct advice on the law of the Falkland Islands and the sensitivity of certain actions."

Whether they 'roll around on the floor with laughter after the 'friendly chat' (as Mr Miller alleged) or not, said Supt McGill, "advice has been given and direct one to one contact made. The delivery of the advice and the contact made, is useful in dealing with any incidents that may arise and has proved a productive tool for officers."

Referring to Mr Miller's reference to the Customs Officers requiring the production of a passport and commending them for "facing down the aggravation and forcing them to produce a passport," he said this was of course commendable, "but the Officers are acting, as they are required to do, in accordance with a law of the Falkland Islands."

Responding to Mr Miller's comment, "at least one of our uniformed services has some balls," Supt McGill said: "This has caused great offence to my officers, who despite what their individual opinion and feelings on the matter might be, have taken an oath to serve their community, which binds them amongst other matters to conduct themselves 'without favour or affection, malice or ill-will' and to work within the laws of the Falkland Islands."

He said as had already been noted, "officers have close contact with most of these visitors and have dealt with what are very sensitive matters, appropriately. I take this opportunity to thank all officers of the Royal Falkland Islands Police for the work they do and commend them for dealing with this very sensitive area of their work, despite often hostile reaction from some community members. I wish to reassure everyone that the Royal Falkland Islands Police does have courage and will deal with anyone who breaks Falkland Islands laws. They will continue to uphold the law in accordance with the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual and administrative codes and procedures relating to the investigation and prosecution of crime."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHO hasn't experienced that moment of associating a comment or incident with a song lyric so long buried in memory it's a surprise to discover that one knows it at all?

A track that popped unsolicited into my mind earlier this week was almost certainly one that in days of yore blasted out over 'the box' part of the fairly limited music library of the old Falkland Islands Broadcasting Station.

But what brought about this moment of nostalgia? Well having been informed, second hand, that some of our elected representatives were feeling a little bit hard done by in terms of recent 'harsh' treatment in Penguin News stories and editorials, I unexpectedly found myself humming a song called 'Talk back trembling lips' by Jonny Tillotson.

For those too young to recall the song it runs along the lines of hurt feelings and burning eyes, and I will admit the theme did momentarily lead me to question our sometimes meany-pants approach to the establishment.

Are we too harsh? Do we dwell too often on what goes wrong instead of what goes right? Are we creating an atmosphere of discontent when we should be rallying the people in support of the government and vice versa? Hmmmm

OK well I suppose that would be one approach but probably not a very democratic one. After all our individual representatives may not always agree with each other (and this I applaud) but ultimately they run the government and form their policies based on working in accord - it's a consensus government. They have no opposing political parties, and as such, who with any real authority calls their decisions into question? And how can a government engender respect or faith if it is excused from scrutiny? To quote Stephen Hawking: "Government works best under the glare of public scrutiny. Absent such scrutiny, abuses occur."

Quite apart from that (and please excuse the comparison with the UK) if they were politicians in Britain, their decisions would be questioned, criticised, ripped apart and keel hauled on TV, radio and in the newspapers, by pundits, voters and opposing politicians on a daily or even hourly basis. Here in the Falklands the government has it easy.

The thing is though, I actually do admire our politicians even when they really, really annoy me. I believe they do their level best to be honest, committed and honourable. But at the same time they're not perfect. Like the rest of us they can struggle to be objective, they can be blinkered, obstinate, fearful or alternatively, arrogant. And you know what? I think they're tough enough to be told it.

On the other hand if it all gets too much - remember the words of Jonny T

'Talk back trembling lips

Shaky legs don't just stand there

Don't let her know that

She's getting through to you'

Police and fire plan ahead

Planning and building update

OUTLINE planning permission was approved for the erection of a temporary modular prison block extension to the South of the existing Police Station at Wednesday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee.

Additional parking providing five spaces is also proposed in the north part of the garden of a government owned property also to the south of the Police Station.

At the April committee meeting outline permission was granted for a new development to the south of the Department of Agriculture and two options involving extensions to the north of the current Police Station were refused.

Making a fresh application this week, Director of Emergency Services Barry Marsden said the proposal would reduce the chronic overcrowding and provide additional communal space for the running of appropriate educational, rehabilitation and resettlement programmes.

While more detail on the planned building is yet to be collated it was noted that it would not be visible from Pencil Lane and the temporary status granted was for a period of two years from the date of occupation.

The previous applications for an extension to the north of the building generated a number of objections plus a petition with more than 400 names to it, however the new application had not generated any representation.

Planning Officer Fiona Wallace-Nannig noted that the new proposal is to the rear of the building, includes parking and is temporary which addressed a number of the concerns raised by objectors. She added however that the main issue had been the appropriateness of having a prison so close to a school, a criticism which still stands.

Fire and Rescue Department

Land to the south of Lookout Rocks has been earmarked by the Fire and Rescue Department with outline planning permission granted for development of a new fire station and HQ with associated storage and training facilities.

As an outline application no specific details of the development were included however it was understood that training facilities would include a tall tower and various buildings which would be set alight and used for fire training.

The Planning Officer pointed out that the development would be appropriate in the area which is predominantly used for industrial purposes.

It was also noted that access to the rest of the town via the Stanley By-Pass could be considered safer than the current location in the centre of Stanley. No funding has been allocated for the development however the outline permission allows five years before works must start on the site.

Housing applications

Wayne McCormick and Alison Baker had two applications approved, the first being for the erection of a two storey house at 5 Villiers Street and secondly to add a porch to the house at 19 Biggs Road.

The Harbour View Gift Shop was granted permission to extend the porch to the east and Teresa Clifton's application to build a one storey house at 20 Davis following the demolition of the house previously on that site was also approved.

Roger Edwards had his proposal to convert the existing garage into a bedroom and dayroom at 8 Sullivan Street approved as was Sam Cockwell and Anna Luxton's application to build a one storey house at 18 Kent Road.

Serena Sinclair had her application to build a house complete with a two metre high boundary fence and 60 foot polytunnel at 11 Rex Hunt Road (Sapper Hill) approved and Sheena Ross a one and half storey house at 25 Rex Hunt Road.

Also on Rex Hunt Road is a one and a half storey house for Raymond Evans and Arina Bernsten at number 12 and a bungalow at number 79 for Martin Gilson-Clarke.

Approval was granted for the siting of a mobile home at the new Murray Heights park for Charmaine Butler at 5 Mountain Berry Road and retrospective permission for a fence more than one metre high for Chris Hawksworth at 6B Gleadell Close.

British Forces support RBL

SEVENTY Mount Pleasant folk braved the depths of Falklands winter to take part in a half marathon and 10km race to raise money for the Royal British Legion.

The two races raised £380.20 and the money was presented to Chair of the Falkland Islands Branch of the Royal British Legion Liam Shelbourne by Commander British Forces, Air Commodore Russ La Forte CBE, and Lance Corporal Gaz Mills.

LCpl Mills said he decided to raise money for the British Legion because of the "incredible efforts and work they do to help everyone across all three services and also for the work they do helping ex servicemen."

The event was organised by LCpl Mills with the assistance of Corporal 'Smudge' Smith. Wooden Shields were received by the winners, with all participants receiving certificates.

LCpl Gaz Mills, Liam Shelbourne and CBESA Russ La Forte

LCpl Mills (23) is based with the Queens Royal Lancers in Catterick, North Yorkshire. He has been in the Falkland Islands since February and works in the Motor Transport Workshop Recovery Section.

Mr Shelbourne said: "I would like to express my thanks to the organisers of this event and the participants for their efforts in making a contribution to this very worthy cause. I would also like to say how much we appreciate the efforts of all the service personnel who frequently raise money for the Royal British Legion in the Falkland Islands."

Former vice-president visits the Falklands

THE former Argentine vice-president and presidential hopeful Julio Cleto Cobos who visited the Falklands this week will at least have a better understanding of the Islands commented Member of Legislative Assembly Phyl Rendell on behalf of the Assembly yesterday.

MLA Rendell confirmed to Penguin News that FIG, "has not had an official approach from Mr Cobos, who in spite of his social media activity, maintains he is here on a personal visit as an Argentine citizen paying respects to the war dead."

Consistent with this policy when invited to an interview with Penguin News, Mr Cobos politely declined.

When asked if MLAs felt his trip indicated any change of tack in terms of a future government's approach to the Falklands dispute Mrs Rendell said: "We don't believe that Mr Cobos's trip is indicative of a change in thought in Argentina, but at the very least Mr Cobos will return to Argentina with a better understanding of the reality of the Falkland Islands, which is vastly different from the rhetoric he has been hearing for many years."

Mr Cobos trip has been widely condemned in Argentina by the current ruling party and 1982 war veterans; there was particular anger that Mr Cobos' visit meant his passport was stamped with the Falkland Islands passport stamp. Mrs Rendell described the negative response as disappointing, but consistent with previous Argentine actions and opinions. "They are afraid of people seeing the Islands for what they really are, and understanding the difference between propaganda and reality. We hope Mr Cobos will return to Argentina better-informed about the Islands, despite his reluctance to engage with people here."

An article in Mercopress yesterday did however describe some positive reactions to the visit. Included was that of Columnist Fernando González from Cronista Comercial who thought it would be enriching to be able to talk to Islanders. He said Argentina needed a state policy on the Islands but, "how can you design such a policy on a territory of which all that is known is via maps, history books and patriotic songs."

He praised Mr Cobos, saying more human exchanges were needed and all presidential hopefuls should visit, concluding: "It is possible that there they might find the answers that for so long we have been looking."

It's all go at the Leisure Centre

A RECORD number of customers have used the facilities at Stanley Leisure Centre since the re-launch of the swimming pool on June 16. More than 170 customers used the facilities within the first two days of the re-launch and the Centre has seen more than 1,800 unique visits during the two week re-launch period.

To celebrate the opening, Stanley Leisure Centre offered customers up to five free swims to be used during the launch period. Over 450 free swim passes were issued to customers and many took advantage of all five free swims. Leisure Centre Manager Abbie Heathman, said they now offered a 'Mix it up' promotional offer whereby customers can pay for 10 or 20 sessions in advance at a significantly reduced rate. The 'Mix it up' cards permit an adult swim, sauna and jacuzzi session or an adult cardio session and the cards cost just £20 for 10 sessions and £34 for 20 sessions, saving 'pay as you play' customers up to £2.30 per activity.

Miss Heathman added, "We are continuing to invest in our facilities and hope the improvements, new sessions and the promotional offers will encourage even more people back to the Centre."

Aye spy a penguin pirate

KEEP your eyes open during Farmer's Week, July 7-11 as seven penguin pirates are on the loose in Stanley, reports Camp Education.

These colourful characters, each dressed in one of the colours of the rainbow, will be marauding (quietly) in public places. If you can spot them all you might be lucky enough to win one of them by the end of the week.

Camp Education staff and pupils have dressed seven fluffy penguins in pirate costume as a fun-based fund raiser and hidden them around town. Seven venues have kindly agreed to host the cuddly visitors.

Follow the clues below to identify the locations and the colour of the penguin you find there. To enter, complete the form below with information (also available from IJS) and take it with a £1 coin to reception at IJS by noon on Friday July 11. The draw will take place on Friday afternoon at IJS

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

TO clarify, quotes from me on the front page of Penguin News last week were made in the context of development of the fishing industry not port development generally. I was making the point that we cannot put a hold on potential development in the industry which is currently the biggest earner for the Islands. Its contribution is not just through licence fees, but more importantly through taxation of successful local companies.

The theory that work expands to fill the time available must have an equivalent for meetings: I'm always alarmed when I see a meeting scheduled for more than an hour as there is rarely serious business that should take longer. Smaller committees tend to be more efficient and business like, but the fact is that some people appear to love meetings for meetings sake. I have an unkind theory that for others meetings are a substitute for action.

The exception to the above is time spent last week working on plans for public diplomacy. All MLAs are committed to undertaking work in their various allocated areas and we had a useful meeting putting together some ideas for future projects. Additionally the Historic Buildings Committee managed to get a quorum, having been postponed the previous week as inquorate.

On Monday we invited directors and heads of service to a social gathering at Gilbert House after work which was a great opportunity to talk informally with 'our own' officers and those from other portfolio directorates. I hope they enjoyed it as much as the five MLAs who were able to attend.

It appears we have groups of Argentine citizens wandering around photographing themselves in various scenic spots, which rather discredits their foreign minister's recent claim at the UN that we do not allow them to come to the Islands. Even odder is the recent publication of a document indicating that a Mr Betts has an address on Hebe Street when we thought he had abandoned his country years ago. 'Argentine truths' is almost becoming an example of an oxymoron. I wish I had thought of it in my teaching days.

Assembly Members abroad

MLAs Poole and Rendell in the UK

MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly Michael Poole and Phyl Rendell paid a visit to the UK last month. MLA Poole describes some of their tasks while there:

MLA Rendell and I recently visited the UK. I flew over a few days earlier so that I would be in the UK for Liberation Day as I had kindly been invited to help officially open the Falkland Islands Memorial Way at the National Arboretum in Staffordshire.

There were a large number of people present and I said a few words about the resistance efforts of Falkland Islanders during the war, before officially unveiling a plaque remembering those efforts. There were also three separate plaques for the Islanders that died during the war. I would like to offer my thanks to Krysteen

MLA Michael Poole, Nigel Evans MP, MLA Phyl Rendell

Ormond, Nadia Smith and Tansy Newman for their assistance with my speech.

The following week both MLA Rendell and I attended the annual Westminster Seminar. This is a training event organised by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, and it included a mixture of parliamentarians and clerks from across the Commonwealth. There were over 70 attendees in total. This was not only a great learning exercise for us, but also allowed us to network with a range of parliamentarians from countries as diverse as Canada, Malta, Singapore and Sierra Leone.

The programme was packed and the event was run with Swiss watch-like precision.

We must have had presentations and panel discussions with roughly 70 UK MPs and Members of the House of Lords. Some of these sessions were more relevant to us than others, but all generated good discussion and debate amongst the attendees.

I will particularly take away from the seminar the importance of elected members engaging with their community via social media, and the need to involve younger people in politics.

There was so much to take in that I cannot cover it all in a brief article here, but it was a most useful exercise.

In addition to the seminar, we also took the opportunity to meet with the FIG Representative, the Chairman of the Falkland Islands Association, we spoke at a reception for the 'Friends of the British Overseas Territories' and Phyl took a number of meetings relating to the 1914 commemorations later in the year.

The week was not all work however, and we did get to enjoy a couple of evening receptions, one of which was hosted at the Clerk of the House of Commons residence.

New FM radio reaches testing stage

Continued from front page: MLA Ian Hansen said "Acceptance testing is an important phase of the project; we want to make sure the predicted coverage levels are achieved and hope Camp listeners can help with measuring this in the coming weeks. It is not the intention to leave anyone without radio, and there will be a gap filling process undertaken to ensure that the best service is provided island-wide, however there may be areas where stronger antennas may be required."

Director of Central Services, Simon Fletcher, commented: "Camp radio infrastructure is one of the projects I inherited when I arrived in FIG three years ago, so I am delighted to see the progress made, and being supported by a local company in KTV."

Government agrees with 91 per cent who said change PRP points system

NINETY-ONE per cent of those responding to the Immigration Consultation questionnaire last year felt that the Permanent Residence Permit (PRP) points system should be revised. Government has responded by recommending the system be reviewed and more emphasis put on skills and contribution to the Islands.

Identified four years ago as one of the key constraints to economic growth in the Falkland Islands, the immigration system underwent a public consultation late last year. On Monday Executive Council released the findings as well as the recommendations that had been agreed, including, a review of the PRP points system, length of visits to the Islands, a revised approach to work permits and the abolition of the residence permit which will be replaced by separate immigration statuses.

It was originally found that the current immigration system had failed to ease the tight labour market, resulting in limited supply and high labour costs which limited business expansion in the Islands. This remained the position in 2012, with the potential labour market issues made worse by the emergence of hydrocarbons developments and the resulting new jobs created in both the public and private sector.

In the Falkland Islands Census 2012 the labour market constraints were confirmed, and showed a static population, a declining and aging population in Camp, a declining birth rate; virtually no unemployment and almost a fifth of the working population holding more than one job.

There were also concerns about lack of labour effecting growth in tourism and agriculture so a review was commissioned to examine this. Following on from that a review of the immigration system took place from January to June 2013.

At ExCo last week MLAs agreed in principle* all but two of the recommendations made in a paper presented by the Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham.

Of particular interest is the planned review of the Permanent Residence Permit (PRP) points system. The paper noted concerns in the community that there was too much emphasis on educational attainment, high responsibility jobs and assets within the points system. It was felt that there were individuals who had committed themselves (or wished to) to a life in the Falklands, but who did not meet the criteria - tradespeople and labourers for example.

91 per cent of those who responded to the consultation indicated a change to the points system was required.

It was also agreed that visitors to the Islands will now be allowed to visit for four months in any 12 month period. Currently they can visit for 12 months in any 24 month period however it was felt this could be used as a means of entry with the intention of obtaining work or longer term status, a "back-door" to longer term settlement that undermined the integrity of the immigration control," noted Mr Fotheringham. However MLAs also accepted in principle a recommendation of a new status of 'family visitor' entitling a close relative to visit the Islands for up to 12 months. This type of visitor might be assisting with the care of a relative, or child care for example. They would not have the right to work and would have to cover all costs of health-care, education and suchlike.

Other changes approved on principle include:

- visitors obtaining temporary work permission will be capped at three months;

- the maximum period for which a work permit can be issued to be increased to four years;

- adopting a revised approach to work permits with defined routes for different skills;

- creating a Skills Assessment Council to identify the Islands' current and future skills needs and publishing a Workforce Shortage List on an annual basis.

- Residence permits to be abolished and replaced by separate immigration statuses for partners and dependents of status holders and PRP holders and others.

Also agreed in principle were recommendations relating to new rights for accompanying dependents of those with status, PRP or work permit holders.

A full report on the Immigration Reform Consultation can be found on the Falkland Islands Government website.

*'In principle' means the items will be subject to further policy development before implementation.

Chris Armstrong

- 1. What is your most prized possession? At the moment I'd have to say my wife back in the UK, definitely. She's looking after my bike till I get home
- 2. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? My Dad once said to me that you make your own luck in life. It's not true 100% of the time, but I can see what he was driving at
- 3. What is your nickname and why? My nickname back home is Strongarms (a neat pun on my name) which was acquired when I attempted Royal Marines officer training a few years ago. I was only there for nine months but the rather flattering nickname has stuck with me
- 4. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Tough one. If you ask me in a few months' time I'll probably say the Falkland Islands
- 5. Who would you most like to have a tot with? Prince Philip. I bet he's a real character
- 6. If you had a motto, what would it be? The Armstrong family motto is invictus maneo, which means 'I remain undefeated'. I try to live by that
- 7. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I'm surprisingly convincing in drag. There is, unfortunately, anecdotal evidence to back up this claim
- 8. Where did you meet your partner? I met my wife in a Chinese restaurant in York that used to clear away the tables at 10pm every night to become the world's worst disco. It was on St Patrick's Day and I was out with the rugby team. They say romance is dead
- 9. What did you want to be when you were a child? Probably a lawyer. In my defence both my parents were lawyers (which probably explains it even if it doesn't condone it). My wife, my sister, my brother and his wife are all lawyers as well, so you can only imagine how much fun we have at Christmas

Longer contracts for roads works

LONGER contracts for Camp road improvements will give security of income to contractors and thus enable the purchase of plant and machinery.

At last week's meeting of Executive Council MLAs accepted recommendations supporting the longer contracts, which they hope will lead to more private sector involvement. They also approved funding for the maintenance and improvement of the unsurfaced road network.

ExCo approved tendering a three year contract for haulage of capping materials for the MPA road, a four year contract for haulage of material for the North Camp road rebuild, a three year contract to cover work to the B category, North Arm road and lastly, tendering of a five year contract to cover work to the A category road, Fox Bay to Port Howard. Other works to be carried out by PWD such as a rebuild at Wall Stream on West Falkland are also in the programme.

A Plaque for Alejandro Betts

NOW that Alejandro Betts has changed his Argentine DNI address back to 1 Hebe Street, why don't Islanders put up a plaque to him there? It could be a blue oval like the plaques marking the houses of historical figures in Britain.

More importantly, such a plaque could carry a brief account of how he deserted his pregnant wife and baby daughter in order to run off with Argentine honey trap Santana Toranzo, begin 32 years of telling lies, and break the hearts of his family.

Such a plaque could become a place of pilgrimage for visiting Argentines.

Whoever owns the house now might even like to charge them admission to see the rooms where Betts didn't study Falklands history, but where instead he had some aspects of human anatomy on his mind.

South Georgia fishery best managed in world

RECOMMENDATIONS have been made regarding the South Georgia Toothfish fishery by two senior scientists who have conducted an independent review, however they stressed last week to Penguin News that the fishery was the best managed in the world.

Dr Stuart Hanchet and Dr Dirk Welsford* were invited to the Islands by Chief Executive and Director of Fisheries Government of South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands Dr Martin Collins in advance of the South Georgia Government Toothfish fishery's next assessment by the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) this year.

The fishery was certified in 2004 and 2009 and Dr Collins said: "The requirements have changed a little bit for the MSC and one of the things it was suggested we did was have this external review and that's why we brought in Dirk and Stuart who are experts from Australia and New Zealand to look at what we are doing and just see if it comes up to scratch."

Dr Hanchet said: "We are making recommendations on how things can be improved and things can always be improved but generally speaking it is one of the best managed toothfish fisheries in the world and probably one of the best managed fisheries in the world."

Dr Welsford added that it had already survived CCAMLR's (Convention for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources) vigorous review process.

The review by the two scientists has followed the three main parts of the MSC certification. The first comprises general day to day management, "how you allocate quota, how you decide which vessels will be in the fishery," said Dr Hanchet. Stock assessment was also examined, "how you monitor the size of the Toothfish population and ensure sustainable catch levels are set," and thirdly looking at the ecosystem and the effects of fishing on it.

The pair have primarily spoken to Dr Collins about the management of the fishery, however they have also interacted with both, "skippers and fisheries officers," said Dr Welsford.

He said Dr Collins, explained about the compliance work at sea, management measures and port inspections.

A blazing talk for Women's Association

DID you know that if you enter a large room that is ablaze you won't be able to see the fire? The blinding smoke all but fills the space.

Guest speaker at this month's Falkland Women's Association meeting was Margaret Shackleton ably assisted by Caroline Drew. They were two of eight people who recently graduated as Retained Fire Fighters and Margaret gave an illustrated presentation on the subject of the training. This included how to get dressed (there really is a lot of gear) how to avoid exploding air bags in a traffic accident, rescuing victims from a burning building right through to dancing the Fire Fighter's Shuffle which keeps them safely together in and out of a burning building.

The presentation was light-hearted, most informative and with a strong punch emphasising how we should know escape routes in the buildings that we live, work, or stay in.

So much must occur very quickly when the Fire Brigade is called out that the training our fire fighters receive means that each one on the Watch knows exactly what each as an individual, and as a team, must do for a successful result.

This takes drill and commitment. We have a lot to thank these people for and to the full time crew for their professionalism and maintenance of a first rate service.

If you belong to a group our Fire Service is a great topic for a meeting and Chief Fire Officer Gardner Fiddes is happy to arrange a speaker and demonstration for you.

The Falklands Women's Association meets once a month at various venues and enjoys different forms of entertainment and informative presentations by guest speakers or members. New members are welcome.

Drs Dirk Welsford, Martin Collins and Stuart Hanchet

He said the South Georgia Government (relatively speaking) also had the convenience of being right next to the fishery grounds, "which is something not everybody in the southern ocean has, the other big fisheries for example the Ross Sea is miles from anywhere so it is much harder to make sure that all vessels are complying."

Also in South Georgia all vessels have observers on board, "which is almost unique in fisheries around the world," said Dr Welsford.

Dr Hanchet said they had had the opportunity to talk to fisheries officers about their vessel monitoring system and to the stock assessment scientists, "involved in carrying out stock assessment and also involved in the ecosystem effects of fishing aspect of the work."

Recommendations made by the pair centre primarily around uncertainties in relation to stock assessment and how to better monitor both juvenile and adult fish.

They also made a recommendation with regard to putting documentation in place, "that ensures that everybody knows what the standards are, why they were developed that way and how to maintain them into the future," after all if Dr Collins heads off to "warmer climes," one day said Dr Welsford, it was important that the high standard was maintained.

Conveniently much of that important documentation has been gathered together for this very review he explained.

The report has now been presented to Dr Collins who is keen to put much in place, although not all would be possible in the short term he cautioned.

Camber project gets go ahead

STUART Wallace of Fortuna Ltd said the company now looked forward to increasing options available for supporting the fishing industry in the Falklands, as Executive Council agreed last week to enter into lease terms for land adjacent to the Camber.

Fortuna currently has a 35 year lease on the actual dock at the Camber, but not on the land providing access and a suitable laydown area for equipment while fishing vessels lay up.

Efforts to obtain the land and provide better facilities for the Falklands most lucrative industry had been ongoing for more than three years.

At Wednesday's meeting of Executive Council, MLA Phyl Rendell said her colleagues had been unanimous in their decision to reject the recommendation in the paper, which was not to agree the lease of the land to Fortuna as it was considered, "contrary to current government policy to focus on Port William for port development."

She said MLAs felt the fishing industry should not be hampered by decisions yet to be made on a new port and that initiatives to add value to the fishing industry should be supported.

It was agreed that government would enter into lease terms with Fortuna and that the company's plans would need to be subject to relevant lease and planning approvals.

Mr Wallace said Fortuna was of course grateful for the consideration and favourable decision now made by Executive Council regarding the project. The Company has made some investments in the facility already and once the lease and other documentary processes are concluded we look forward to taking the project forward and increasing the options available for supporting the fishing industry in the Falklands.

This move will provide another option for fishing vessels to lay up as there is regularly not enough space at FIPASS for non-working ships to dock.

Director of Natural Resources John Barton supported the initiative when it was last rejected by the Lands Committee in April this year. "The option of having another dock available for the fishing industry is extremely valuable," he said.

Stanley Airport prepares for exploratory drilling

Increased activity is anticipated at Stanley Airport with the onset of exploratory drilling next year and Government is investing in additional fire fighting equipment to meet the needs of the helicopters servicing the rigs.

MLA Phyl Rendell said a paper looking at the need to upgrade fire appliances at Stanley Airport to enable the oil industry to operate from there had been considered at last week's Executive Council, and it was agreed new appliances are needed if the helicopters servicing the 2015 exploration drilling phase are to operate out of Stanley.

The paper prepared by the Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher and the General Manager, Aviation Services Bruce Wilkes noted that from June 2011 to May 2013, two Canadian Helicopter Corporation (CHC) Super Puma helicopters operated from Stanley Airport in support of the oil exploration round generating approximately revenue of approximately £200,000 per annum for landing fees and land lease.

It was further noted that sight must not be lost of the fact that the current Category 2 appliances at Stanley Airport are, in the case of the Land Rover 6x6, obsolescent, and the Bremach appliance is not fit for purpose with a litany of technical faults and deficiencies.

Both appliances do not meet basic regulatory requirements. Whether the larger Category appliance is leased or hired can be negotiated in the near future but FIG must replace the current appliances with more appropriate and compliant equipment.

MLA Rendell said Premier Oil had indicated they wished to use Stanley Airport so MLAs agreed that two Category 3 airport appliances be purchased with the General Manager, Aviation Services responsible for their purchase.

She said MLAs stressed that the Government should work closely with the oil industry, "to ensure that this major commitment to purchase the equipment is being made in order that the oil industry will use Stanley Airport for helicopter movements during their exploration drilling programme."

"It is expected that this would, lead on to continued use of Stanley Airport in a development programme," said MLA Rendell.

Stanley Airport is the base for the Falkland Islands Government Air Service fleet of 5 Britten-Norman Islander Aircraft, four of which are passenger aircraft, the other used for Fisheries Protection work.

CMO Dr Beccy Edwards

Help prevent the spread of viral rashes

As a result of an outbreak of Scarlet Fever in children, Chief Medical Officer Beccy Edwards has asked that concerned parents contact a member of staff prior to presenting at the hospital in a bid to reduce the risk of spreading the infection.

Dr Edwards said staff had recently seen an increase in childhood rashes at the hospital. "Some of these rashes are due to Scarlet Fever and we are still diagnosing new cases of this. However, some of the rashes are not related to Scarlet Fever and appear to be viral in nature. It is very difficult to distinguish between the two," she said.

"What is apparent is that if you have a child who has a rash, you should keep that child home from school or nursery until such time as the rash has gone. Also, members of staff working with children who develop rashes should also stay at home until they are completely better."

Additionally Dr Edwards stressed that anyone suffering with a rash, or close family member of someone who has a rash, should not go to the swimming pool until they are completely better.

"Most children who have this rash have been well or have had a mild fever. Most do not need to be seen at the KEMH. However, if you are concerned about your child, or if your child has a high fever or appears to be unwell in any other way, please contact the KEMH and arrange to speak to the Casualty Nurse or the Doctor on-call," explained Dr Edwards.

"Please do not go straight to the KEMH. This will only serve to spread the infections further."

If you have any question or you are unsure what you should do, please contact the KEMH for further advice and guidance.

Scarlet fever is due to a throat infection caused by a germ (bacterium) called streptococcus. Scarlet Fever is most common in children aged under 10 years, the most common age being 4 years.

Five years of hospital development

A CAPITAL works and equipment programme for the next five years for the hospital was agreed at last week's Executive Council (ExCo) meeting.

The programme includes the purchase of new X-Ray equipment, new machinery for the laboratory and a considerable amount of internal building works in the next financial year, said MLA Phyl Rendell.

ExCo also agreed to a recommendation to purchase the property at 12 St Mary's Walk, next to the hospital parking area. The property is in a location that would suit further expansion of the hospital area, but meanwhile it will be included in the Government's housing pool for rent. "Funds have been found from within the current budget, thus not impacting housing plans elsewhere."

SCB's Binoy Karia presents $20,000 to the Falklands Conservation Watch Group

Staggering $20,000 cheque for Watch Group from Standard Chartered Bank

THE Falklands Conservation Watch Group are now in hibernation until the Spring, retiring Watch Group leader Jon Carlin told Penguin News this week.

The group rounded off a busy year of activities with a party on June 14, when Standard Chartered Bank Manager Binoy Karia dropped by to make a huge donation towards their fundraising for a purpose built Watch Group building.

Standard Chartered Bank donated US$20,000 from their central fund and this generous offering means the build has now raised £37,000 and is creeping closer to their target of £80,000.

"It's an incredible donation from Standard Chartered Bank who have been so great at sponsoring us throughout the year with our activities," Mr Carlin said.

There have been more activities outside of town than in previous years including tussac planting

at Sea Lion Island, repairing the pond at Falklands Conservation, a corral camp on Stanley Common, camping at Volunteer Point and planting blue grass, a Christmas party at Surf Bay, Bio Blitz with Clare Cockwell at the Millennium Campsite near the Patricia Luxton Nature Reserve and an Elephant beach camp and clean, "we collected the equivalent of two sheep pens worth of rubbish from there," he said.

Their beach clean at Hadas-sa and Whale Bone beach also kicked off Sarah Crofts' marine clean survey after they collected 80kg of rubbish from the sites. The group of around 35 children also got creative around the Islands painting penguins at the Capstan shop, Falklands Conservation and the departure lounge at MPA and helping at San Carlos too with a colourful display.

After taking on more responsibilities in his full time post as Falkland Islands Community School Science Teacher, Mr Carlin is standing down as Watch Group leader and is keen to see who will take on the responsibility: "It's been stunningly fun and I would love to carry on."

"I'd like to thank the farmers and island owners who have opened their doors and land to us over the year, and the parents who have helped out too," said Mr Carlin.

Falklands Conservation's Grant Scheme

THE Falklands Conservation Small Grant Scheme is celebrating its tenth year since its launch in 2004 and calling for all interested people to submit applications for this year.

From a photo identification study of Orcas at Sea Lion Island to the newly created Native Plant Garden at the Falkland Islands Community School, a wide range of projects have successfully been carried out over the 10 years.

Set up to encourage opportunities benefiting the environment and wildlife of the Falklands, it enables people to achieve this on their own land or through education and community projects.

One popular theme throughout the years, has been providing fencing materials to protect sensitive sites or to create tussac and native species plantations.

The scheme has successfully enabled land owners to improve visitor management at wildlife sites and to provide information leaflets and boards, and has utilised the skills of local artists, including Leigh-Anne Wolfaardt, and designer Julie Halliday.

From assisting in tackling invasive species to community tussac planting days, the Small Grant Scheme covers a wide range of opportunities for landowners, managers and local residents.

Involving the skills of Falklands Conservation staff and using knowledge from on-going projects, such as habitat restoration trials to leaflet and information board design, can also help to deliver a successful project outcome.

Falklands Conservation's Sarah Crofts told Penguin News: "We recommend you discuss your ideas with Falklands Conservation staff in the first instance. We will also be on hand to give advice over Farmers Week. You can visit our webpage for more information on the guidelines and to download an application form."

Maximum grant allocation is £1,000 and the deadline for submission is July 31.

Oil & Gas Certification Grant Scheme

FIDC is proud to announce the launch of its Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme. The aim of the scheme is to provide grant funding to local companies to acquire internationally recognised certification which will improve their chances of acquiring contracts and work in the Falkland Islands oil and gas industry.

The approved scheme provides grant funding of 50% or up to £15,000 (whichever is lowest) for the cost of acquiring certification to successful applicants.

If you wish to receive more information about the scheme or request an application form please contact Michael Betts – Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk.

Houses in Puerto Eden

Stanley to Talcahuano

Sailing through the Chilean Canals and beyond

THOSE of an observant bent may have noticed that the little black yacht Porvenir hasn't been parked in her usual spot at the Canache for a while. Much as I love guddling around the Falklands, carrying out wildlife surveys and invasive species work, I felt like some warm weather sailing for a change.

A spell of light northerlies saw me leave Stanley on my own on April 5, bound for the Beagle Channel. My last sight of the Falklands was Beauchene Island, sitting under a mantle of cloud looking like some mysterious fortress from Avatar.

I arrived in Chile at Puerto Williams, which really is the most southerly town in the world. It is about the size of Stanley with a spectacular setting looking out across the Beagle Channel with forests and mountains behind. The yacht club is at the Micalvi, an old transport ship that was beached deliberately in a sheltered creek to form a small boat harbour. The interior of the ship has been converted into a cosy club room and bar, decorated with burgees and flags from countless visiting yachts (including a Falkland Islands Yacht Club burgee). I had first bought Porvenir here in 1997, so it felt like coming back to where it all began for me. Unfortunately the previous owner, Charlie Porter, had suddenly died a few weeks earlier, and the Micalvi didn't seem quite the same without his larger than life presence.

From Puerto Williams to Puerto Montt is about 1,200 nautical miles, mostly in the Channels, a protected labyrinth of waterways sheltered from the Southern Ocean by a maze of islands strewn along the west side of southern Chile. The canoe Indians who used to live here are now sadly gone, although a few of their descendants still live in Puerto Eden, the only town you pass in the first 900 miles. The Beagle Channel has a few settlements and farms but once past them the only signs of people are sea-urchin fishermen, the occasional Chilean Navy outpost and the cargo ships that use the Channels in preference to the rough seas outside.

In Puerto Williams I met an Australian cyclist called Anna Kortschak, who was keen to hitch a lift north and I thought having a crew might make life a bit easier. She adapted well to life on board: compared to living in a tent for two years, Porvenir counted as luxury accommodation.

We filled up with two months of food and 500 litres of diesel and set off one beautiful still evening, reporting our every move to the Chilean Navy checkpoints that dot the area. It is a sensitive frontier area, Chilean memories still appear to be fresh about Argentina's aggression in the early 1980s when the two countries nearly went to war over three small islands. I made sure to keep well to the Chilean side of the channel, for obvious reasons!

Once out of the Beagle, life settled into a routine of long days chugging along under power, gawping at the spectacular mountain scenery, followed by days tied up securely in some sheltered inlet with a line to a tree, stoking the fire and listening to the wind and rain outside. The prevailing winds are from the north, so I always made the most of any calms to cover ground. There's a surprising lack of wildlife, perhaps the birds don't like the rain either.

The tiny town of Puerto Eden made a welcome stop. The population is somewhere between 100 and 200 people depending on who you talk to. With the ground too wet to build roads or tracks, there's not a single vehicle in town, the houses are all linked by wooden boardwalks and anything heavy is moved around by boat. There's no airstrip; contact with the outside world is by the weekly Navimag ferry from Puerto Montt to Puerto Natales that berths at the new pier. The town also has a brand new school and medical centre, and a set of new police houses was under construction. The Chilean Government is keen to maintain their outlying settlements and they do this by providing the same government services as they would to larger towns.

A few days after leaving Puerto Eden we met up with Chris and Suzanne on the yacht Whanake which was a nice surprise. They recently spent a year in the Falklands and have been sailing in Chile since January. It was good to hear Chris extolling the virtues of the Falklands from a sailing point of view - great anchorages, amazing wildlife and friendly people.

We left the anchorage together to face the dreaded Golfo de Penas, the one place where you have to leave the protected channels and sail outside for 150 miles in the open ocean. Once back inside the channels further north, the scenery seemed gentler and less wild and all of a sudden there were salmon farms everywhere. I had no idea how big the aquaculture business is in this part of the world. The cages are anchored miles from anywhere, most have an accommodation barge and workers who spend 20 days at a time there. We made a quick stop in Puerto Aguirre, a town of 2,500 people on an island, then went non-stop to Isla Chiloe.

Chiloe and its offshore islands were one of the nicest parts of the trip for me - green fields interspersed with patches of bush, quiet little farms, sheltered bays and anchorages. Everywhere you rowed ashore, no matter how remote, there would be a friendly old boy pottering around on the beach who would fill you in on the latest, whilst unobtrusively finding out who you were and exactly what you were up to.

Anna disembarked when we arrived in Puerto Montt, preparing to cycle to Brazil, via some obscure border crossing into Argentina that may or may not be open (she likes doing things the hard way). I had a couple of weeks in the marina, doing the usual yachtie things ie. working on the boat.

Sally Poncet flew in and we departed a few days later, having decided to make some nothings up the coast to Talcahuano before heading out to the Pacific. The reconstruction effort here in this historic seaport town following the 2010 earthquake and tsunami is incredible. The port, naval base and shipyards are functioning again although there are sobering memories everywhere of the damage caused. On arrival in the port and wondering where to go, we headed for the first sign of yachts and so inadvertently ended up as guests of the Chilean Navy in their small marina. Luis and Pato who run the marina could not have been more friendly and hospitable. It has been a very pleasant last stop in mainland Chile. Next stop is hopefully the island of Juan Fernandez.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

KNOW WHAT'S RIGHT

HE SAYS I'M SPECIAL. THAT'S WHY HE DOES THOSE THINGS.

CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE CAN, AND DOES, HAPPEN IN THE FALKLAND ISLANDS. IS IT HAPPENING TO YOU OR A FRIEND?

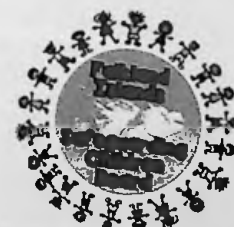

He tells her she's special. He buys her presents. He gives her alcohol. Then he shares her with his 'friends'. This could be happening to your child, to someone you know... or it could be happening to you. Remember, you do not have to do anything you don't want to, and even if something seems fun at first it could be dangerous.

Environmental & Social Impact Assessment Scoping Consultations Sea Lion Oil Field Development
Monday 7th - Friday 18th July

As part of their Environmental and Social Impact Assessment (ESIA) Process for the upcoming Sea Lion Field development, Premier Oil will be conducting a number of scoping consultation workshop sessions between Monday 7th July and Friday 18th July

Everyone is welcome to get involved; to find out more about the Sea Lion project, the ESIA and the workshops come and see us at the Farmer's Week Expo at the Town Hall on Monday 7th July from 9am, or come along to a presentation at the Narrows Bar on Tuesday 8th July at 5:15pm.

Alternatively, If you can't come along in person to one of these information sessions, you can also email us for more information on the scoping consultation and the workshops planned:
sealion.enviro@premier-oil.com

Or give us a call at the Premier Oil office in Stanley: 22069

Consultation workshops will be held in Stanley between Wednesday 9th and Friday 18th July, at Fox Bay on Monday 14th July and Goose Green on Tuesday 15th July.

Safety's a priority and Brownie's police station visit makes it fun

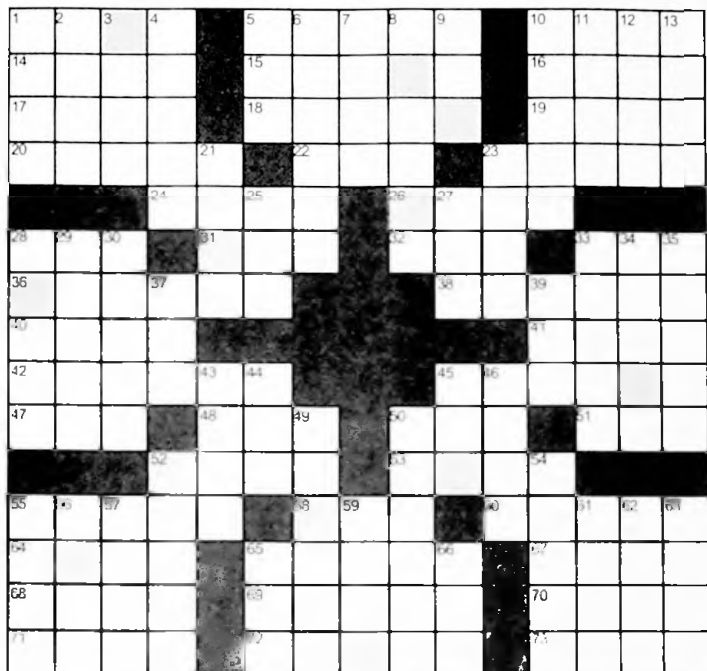

BROWNIES paid a visit to the Police Station on June 24 following a talk earlier in the month by PC Tim Wilson who assisted them with their safety badge.

They were able to view the Police Station facilities and learn more about use of seatbelts, road safety and also safety around strangers.

Winning result for new look Stanley team

STANLEY football team played its first official match since July 2013, where they won the bronze medal against Froya in Bermuda. The match was held at MPA against a mixed military team organised by LCpl Lee Hartnoll. Led by new Stanley Manager Zaza 'Georgie' Elbakidze the squad of 17, a blend of experience, youth and new players, coped well in difficult conditions.

The Stanley team, wearing their home kit, started with a 4-4-2 formation with Glen Colledge making his debut in goal and the defence was marshalled by newly appointed captain Kyle Biggs alongside Jay Gamble, Ian France and Assistant Manager Luke Clarke. The midfield consisted of Stevie Aldridge, Shupi Chipunza, Michael Betts and debutant Declan Bonner with stalwarts Rafa Sotomayor and Wayne Clement leading the line up-front. Toby Poole, Lucas Biggs, Mark Allen, Paul Zeller, Sam Toolan and Saul Zuvic were named as substitutes. The Stanley team were followed to MPA by a strong support of locals which made the match into a good spectacle.

Playing into the strong wind for the first half, the Stanley team had to defend for the majority of the first 45 minutes. Due to the direction of the wind, most of the play came down Stanley's left side with Luke Clarke and Ste-vie Aldridge combining well to stop MPA's progress. Aided by the wind the MPA team played a number of early balls in behind Stanley's defence, but a combination of Ian France's pace, Kyle Biggs' timing and Glen Colledge's confidence in coming out of his penalty area, meant Stanley coped well. The team managed a handful of attacks in the first half causing problems for the MPA team, but did not manage to test their keeper.

Against the run of play Stanley took the lead halfway through the first half. They won a free kick on their right side after some good footwork by Declan Bonner. Kyle Biggs went forward for the free kick delivered by Michael Betts, and directed his header into the bottom left-hand corner to score secure the first goal on his debut as Captain.

MPA responded by working the ball shorter in midfield where they benefitted from having the extra man but Stanley continued to cope with some well-timed challenges from Jay Gamble and Ian France. Stanley won another free kick on the right side of the pitch and Michael Betts again sent in the free kick that was narrowly missed by Rafa Sotomayor.

Stanley doubled their lead with a counter attack. Declan Bonner was sent through on goal after a through ball by Stevie Aldridge and showed good composure to hold off the defender and lift the ball over the advancing goalkeeper to score on his Stanley debut. The quickness of Stanley counter attack was epitomised by the celebration with only two players managing to congratulate the youngster. The first half ended as it started with Stanley defending well and keeping the MPA team from scoring.

A number of changes were made around half-time with Ian France, Michael Betts, Declan Bonner and Luke Clarke being replaced by debutants Paul Zeller, Sam Toolan, Lucas Biggs and Mark Allen. MPA halved the deficit early in the second half after Lt Emerson Hanley was sent through one-on-one with Glen Colledge and finished well leaving the Stanley keeper with little chance. MPA continued attacking Stanley in the second half, which eventually led to a penalty awarded to MPA, which was brilliantly saved by debutant Colledge.

Georgie made more changes introducing Toby Poole, appearing for the first time, and Saul Zuvic to replace Rafa Sotomayor and Wayne Clement.

Stanley held on to their lead and the game finished 2-1 (with Toby Poole nutmegging his opposite number at the final whistle) to make it a winning start for Georgie on his managerial debut.

Stanley will be playing against the MPA team again on Sunday, July 6 and hope to make the match a regular fixture. The manager and players would like to thank its loyal supporters who made the 70 mile round trip to cheer on the team and hope there will be another large local support for the next match.

FIFL would also like to thank Stanley Services Ltd for its continued support of football in the islands and LCpl Lee Hartnoll for organising the MPA team.

FIFL

Stanley will be playing MPA on Sunday at 15:00 kick-off. All Stanley players to be on the pitch for an hours training on Saturday at 15:00.

Break even point needs to be found says FIMCo manager

CUSTOMER expectations, product price and quality and the need for the Meat Company to again break even were hot topics at Farmers Week meetings over the last few days.

Recognising that it had been a difficult season for farmers to finish stock to a high standard, Meat Company manager John Ferguson said it was a fact of life that the customer still expected the same standards as everywhere else and at a competitive price.

At the Rural Business Association Farmers Week this week, Mr Ferguson gave an overview of the season and stressed that the New Season Lamb production was an area which needed to be addressed with some urgency as almost 75 per cent of the animals supplied to the abattoir had been below the standard customers demanded.

The Meat Company had been under considerable pressure to fulfil signed contracts, said Mr Ferguson adding that unfortunately the customer does not care if there had been difficulty in finishing stock or if electricity and wages had increased, they expected a high quality product at an agreed price.

Mutton and yearling lamb also showed that the unusually cold summer had impacted on finishing animals with 10 per cent of mutton not making the grade (five per cent in 2013) and 20 per cent of lamb (two per cent in 2013) under fat class 2.

Payment to farmers had been slightly less than last year at £1,136,000 while Stanley businesses earned £777,000, local employees had been paid £430,000 and £325,000 had been paid to the Government, said Mr Ferguson, adding that there had been an operating loss of £480,000 funded by an approved subsidy. This was due to a loss of £394,000 in the export market and £86,000 in the local market.

Mr Ferguson said the greatest loss in the export market had been on the lighter mid-weight lamb which was attributed 76 per cent of the subsidy while the sale of beef locally had been 17 per cent.

"We can't continue to haemorrhage money," and the tipping point to break even needed to be found, said Mr Ferguson explaining that efforts were being made to enter the complete carcass market with lamb and therefore reduce production costs in the export market, but to break even in the beef market a further £200 per animal needed to be made. This could be addressed by increasing the shelf price in a free market and the consensus was that the local retail price was still considerably lower than the rest of the world, however, there had been concern expressed from Assembly Members that the price was getting too high, he said.

"The fact is that it's a much better quality product, produced in a ready to cook format, so one can't compare this with the traditionally low prices paid," he said, adding that farmers are now investing heavily in beef production and also needed an appropriate return.

It had also been questioned why the local market should be made to break even when the export market was heavily subsidised, said Mr Ferguson adding that there were a number of things which will be done to address this other than just, "whack the price up."

He said it was planned to create a premium range of products with a higher price bracket to reflect the quality while retaining a standard range to give customers price options. A reduction in the current price difference between wholesale and retail products may also go some way to reducing the £86,000 loss, he explained.

Farmers' hopes of any significant increase in the farm gate value of their animals were not realised however, as Mr Ferguson stressed that the Meat Company had to operate as a business and until it could break even it was not acceptable to increase the price.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

DESPITE a few wobbles from some at government's hard hitting approach to the child safety campaign, if we bear in mind the horrors currently being faced by the British Parliament as a result of their past 'brush it under the carpet' policy towards evidence of child abuse, I think we can say with absolute confidence that the Falklands' approach is the right one.

Of course it's true it's a horrible, horrible subject, and to be reminded so blatantly is uncomfortable. But before you avert your thoughts from the dreadful images the messages generate, or even worry about 'how it looks' for us as a community, pause for a moment and remember why this campaign is so necessary. At the same time be proud that we are a community courageous enough to deal with the problem head on. Yes we could sugar coat the approach, or shuffle past paying little more than lip service, but imagine the judgement that will rightly fall upon us in years to come when (as has happened in Britain) it is highlighted that instead of hammering at this boulder of an issue with a ruddy great sledgehammer we simply chipped gently at the surface.

When it comes to governance and public relations the Falklands has occasionally been paid the compliment of 'punching above its weight'. Whether or not that is always true is a matter of opinion, but in terms of setting an example to other countries in their approach to this vital issue, I think the compliment could prove to be deserved.

While Deputy Editor Sharon was primarily the PN lady on the ground at Farmers Week this week, I did grab a moment to zip to two presentations on Monday. As someone probably more familiar than most with gatherings and reports that involve the odd individual cloaking lack of knowledge with truckloads of buzz words (we occasionally entertain ourselves counting how many times people use the phrase 'layered and/or cohesive approach') Donna Minnell and Nick Pitaluga's practical and informative descriptions of their particular experiences in specific farming approaches were balm to my cynical brain. While an in depth understanding of semen straws and closed flocks might not help in my everyday life (although as a journalist it's always helpful to understand current thought in various sectors of the business community) it was great to see that Farmers Week still does exactly what it says on the tin and more. Farmers not just gleaning knowledge of those things that impact on their business, whether it be ferry management, tourism, or feral pests and diseases, but sharing their own invaluable knowledge and experience with their compatriots. Long may it continue.

More spoil that is not top soil for Cape Pembroke

INTENSIFIED spoil tipping in the Cape Pembroke area has incensed many who have been lobbying for several years to have the environmentally rich nature reserve suitably preserved for future generations.

Friends of Cape Pembroke Chairman Grant Munro said he believed the Government was behaving in a "domineering and presumptuous manner without full transparency or disclosure of their intentions for soil dumping in the area of the National Nature Reserve, and certainly out with the spirit of consultation that had been established following concerns expressed more than a year ago."

Deputy Director of Public Works Colin Summers said it was unfortunate that there had been some traffic in an off-road area near Yorke Pond where the protected Yellow Orchid is known to grow, but stressed that the work had been carried out following consultation with Falklands Conservation, Environmental Planning, PWD and Mike Morrison as a representative of the lobby group Friends of Cape Pembroke.

An additional access road has been built into the area near Yorke Pond to cope with the current spoil tipping which was also needed to reach the back of the site to landscape earlier tipping.

Mr Summers said there had been some difference in the understanding of what was to happen in the area, adding that it had never been the intention to completely stop the spoil dumping on Cape Pembroke when the Megabid site was opened, because a high volume of spoil was expected from development projects in the Gordon Lines and other areas.

Mr Munro said: "It appears that we seem to learn of expansion of dumping activities only after the event. Whilst FIG can exempt themselves from some planning controls there was an undertaking that they would not do so and hence, under current legislation any development on the Common and any development of greater than one hectare should be subject to controls and an environmental assessment.

"No full plan of ear-marked areas or expected spoil quantities has ever been forthcoming and thus we can only respond reactively to new or increased levels of spoil dumping, whereas we should be working together to define the most suitable boundaries, alternative sites or looking at mitigation techniques or re-vegetation methods to reduce damage."

Mr Munro stressed that the Common was an area for everyone, and essentially belonged to everyone. "There should be far greater communication before potentially damaging activities are commenced or expanded - especially where indications were given that it would be being scaled down."

Mr Summers said it had been his understanding that clay base material would go to Megabid which would be managed and landscaped by developers and soils to Cape Pembroke to be managed by PWD.

While the Megabid site has been ready for use for a week, it had not yet been utilised because the size of the projects underway did not warrant a developer managing it.

He said the reference in an Executive Council paper to 'top soil' being dumped at Cape Pembroke was somewhat misleading and in fact all natural materials were received there but not garbage, building rubble or metals.

MLA Michael Poole who has the portfolio for Planning and Lands said that this was an unfortunate sequence of events that had resulted in different understandings as to what was trying to be achieved. He apologised to all for the lack of clear communication on the issue. "Progress has been made in recent months on this issue, with the relevant regulations put in place, and the new site developed for dumping." He said a discussion now needs to be had about the next steps, which will begin at the August Planning and Building meeting, and will involve all relevant parties.

Addressing the lamb export market Mr Ferguson and Senior Agriculture Advisor Neil Judd, demonstrated the need for farmers to make a conscious business decision whether to grow wool or meat depending on what worked best for them and the land, explaining that new season lamb needed to reach an average carcass weight of 13kg for the Meat Company to break even.

With approximately 30 to 50 days from weaning needed to finish a lamb to this standard the possibility of a later start and finish date for the export season at the abattoir was suggested although it was recognised that the later finish date (mid May) could create problems if weather conditions caused road restrictions thus impacting on haulage from farms. Mr Ferguson said however that extending the actual length of the season was not a financially viable option.

Build bridges but you're ours

FORMER Argentine Vice President Cobos, following his recent visit to the Falklands has stated: "We must rebuild bridges," with the Islands but goes on to say the, "recovery," of the Islands is a, "permanent unrenounceable objective of the Argentine people," while respecting the way of life of its inhabitants.

Mercopress reported this week that Mr Cobos says he found on the Falklands, "a military base which intimidates, where the international airport operates, some 70 kilometers from Puerto Argentino. Nothing justifies this presence. On the other hand and distant from the base, a rural population of Islanders of several generations concentrated, a majority, in Puerto Argentino and made up of a great variety of nationalities, over fifty, with a predominance of Chileans."

He comments that he is "aware there is no other path than that of peace and diplomacy," and that visiting the Islands, "is an experience that must not be banned to anybody; hopefully others will accept this challenge."

Mr Cobos was criticised by the Argentine Government for visiting the Islands because it allowed for his passport to be stamped with the Falkland Islands stamp.

Water testing format to be introduced at FICS following E.coli scare FALKLAND Islands Community School pupils returned to school yesterday following assurances that an E.coli contamination in the Leisure Centre water supply was not present within the school.

PWD yesterday admitted that there had been no structured regime for testing the header tanks and supply to the school, although one is now to be introduced in light of recent events.

Earlier this week, E.coli was suspected to be in the water supply at the school after it was discovered in the Stanley Leisure Centre (SLC) supply following, "routine," water testing, and as a result the school was closed to pupils.

However, it was confirmed to Penguin News yesterday (Thursday) that despite the swimming pool water, wet side showers and a tap from the ladies dry side changing rooms being tested in June, the header tank that feeds SLC nor any additional taps that feed from that tank were tested.

Regarding there being no testing regime at the FICS, PWD state that over 20 sinks and the main drinking fountain at FICS are mains supply-fed, and so will not have been affected by any potential contamination of the header tanks. The mains water supply to Stanley is tested fortnightly, and no recent samples have tested positive for E.coli.

From Monday afternoon, staff from the Property & Municipal Section of the Public Works Department worked on the water supply system, draining the header tanks which feed both SLC and FICS and flushing with a strong chlorination agent to clean and decontaminate the system.

The water in the swimming pool itself was not affected by the E.coli.

On Wednesday the public was told: "This should effectively remove the E.coli contamination, however further water samples will be taken to ensure the contamination has been eradicated."

When pupils returned to school yesterday (Thursday) some restrictions were applied to water usage. All students were asked to take a bottle of drinking water from home with them on both Thursday and Friday, and hand sanitiser was made available.

Director of Education, Annie Tempest, said: "Although the chlorination will have destroyed any possible E.coli contamination in the FICS supply, we would still like to manage water usage carefully until the laboratory results can confirm everything is fine."

"Students will have access to flushing toilets, hand sanitiser will be provided and one water fountain will be available in the main street. The most important thing is getting our students back into classes whilst minimising any risks to their health."

The Public Library reopened yesterday but the Swimming Pool remained closed and the SLC changing room restrictions are in place until Monday July 14, that is, until all tests carried out have been returned and staff can confirm that there is no risk to SLC users.

Headteacher of FICS, Mr Martin Winward, extended his gratitude to the staff and administration team at FICS for facilitating work to the students for the past two days, and to the parents and carers of the students for their patience and support.

New posts recruited for Education Dept.

FOLLOWING the announcement of the 2014 Budget, six posts have been approved for the Education Department it was reported at the Education Committee on Thursday.

These comprise the FICS Craft Teacher progressing from part time to full time, Deputy Manager at the Training Centre and 1.5 equivalent LSAs for IJS to be advertised locally.

Following the completion of Nursery Liaison Officer Becca Roxburgh's contract the post has been made permanent and advertised locally, unfortunately with no applicants, "this has left a hole in the service to link nurseries with the department" said Director of Education Annie Tempest.

She said that a lot of great work had been achieved by Ms Roxburgh and hoped an interim solution could be found to cover the post. Following the successful Nursery Awards scheme, which identified a thirst for training and accreditation from local nursery businesses, funding is being sought for Ms Roxburgh to produce a Handbook of Nursery Standards for the Falkland Islands.

Recruitment for a PPA teacher and a new teacher post to support IJS have progressed to overseas advertisement.

Athletes missing one shooter

THE Falkland Gun Club confirmed this week that Bono McKay, recently selected for the Olympic Trap event at the Glasgow Commonwealth Games 2014 has withdrawn from the Falkland Islands team for personal reasons.

Chair of Falkland Gun Club Stephen Dent: "The club is disappointed that its promising young shooter, Bono McKay will not be representing our club and the Falkland Islands at Glasgow 2014, however we support him in his decision. Bono has worked hard to prepare himself for G2014 and we share his sadness at being unable to attend. The club will continue to support its younger members in their personal and sporting development to reach their potential."

A spokesperson for the club confirmed that no other athlete will be selected for the vacant Olympic Trap position.

Training audit

THE UK company Scintilla has won the bid to undertake a Training Audit for the Department of Education. Director of Education Annie Tempest told the committee that the company's bid was more than the sum of money secured to fund the audit, and so an ExCo paper to release funding from the Economic Development Strategy budget was prepared and presented to ExCo on June 25.

The contract has been sent to Scintilla to be signed and it is hoped they will start in August and finish in the second week of December this year.

Stanley House

FIREPLACES in the Stanley House building are crumbling noted the Director of Education Annie Tempest at yesterday's meeting of the Education Committee. The Public Works Department have examined the situation as part of a wider maintenance check, and a particular concern was also the "worrying" state of the porch on the main building. "The trees block the light and plans are in place to address this too" said Ms Tempest.

Headship award

DIRECTOR of Education Annie Tempest was pleased to report the news that following three years of dedicated training FICS Science Teacher Louise Taylor was "thrilled" to have been accredited with a National Professional Qualification for Headship (NPQH).

Head Teacher of IJS&CE Karen Steen has also taken on the three year course and has completed her final presentation in the UK, she will know the results in August.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

FARMERS Week has several events with Assembly members, some portfolio related and also a question and answer session on Friday morning. If past experience is a guide there will be some useful discussion once we have dealt with some of the more negative questions. I know most are aware that there is strong support on the Assembly for rural development generally.

We have timed the budget public meeting to coincide with Farmers Week so that we do not have so many repeats of the presentation. The responses I have had so far on the budget have been thoughtful and reasonably favourable. People who have followed the process acknowledge the complexity of the decisions we have had to make. No-one I've spoken with seems to believe that we would or should aim to please everyone or that we would be able to if we wanted.

My other meetings this week include an update on potential localisation of elements of support services at MPA, weekly meetings with the CE and with all available MLAs, a meeting with the PR section and some training for all members of the Planning and Building Committee.

We have already had one useful training session and covered a wide range of issues including what are material considerations in determining planning applications. Obviously things like parking, road safety and potential overlooking of neighbours are, while others of a more aesthetic nature are debatable. I think most of us could point at something we regard as particularly hideous, yet to its owners it will be their dream home. Some have no scruples about blighting the daily lives of their neighbours while overdeveloping sites when the one thing there is no shortage of is space. This is probably one of the most frequent public complaints I receive. I think most of us have found it particularly interesting to take a step back and think what it is we hope to achieve. In my case it is to retain as much open "breathing space" as possible so that children can enjoy the freedom and independent play which we took for granted.

Toot wins Cup for the eighth time

CLAIMING the Governors Cup for the eighth time Toot Ford split his time between commentating and playing as he powered his way through the tournament.

In the early rounds he beat Toby Poole, David Ashbridge, Darren Plato and Stevie Clarke before he found himself with the task of beating his brother Lenny Ford to ensure a place in the final. This accomplished he went on to win the final against Martyn Gilson-Clarke with a 4-2 victory.

Martyn had found himself up against some strong players in the early rounds with Jonny Ford, Adrian 'Bean' Minnell, Richard Bonner and Shane Blackely, all well respected players being beaten. Kevin Clapp (joint third) found himself battling for a final position but failed to get a leg off Martyn who won the match 2-0.

Defending champion Troy Bagley reached the last 16 before being beaten by his on-form team mate Chris Williams.

Ann Murphy was a worthy winner of the Ladies Rose Bowl having fought her way from the preliminary round, clearing her path to the final through some strong players.

Her first victim was Cherry Robson who went down 2-0 closely followed by Tracey Macaskill. Natalie Smith was her next opponent, but Anne continued her two straight winning streak through that game and the following against Carole Lee. It was not until playing for her place in the final that Ann lost a leg and it was joint third place winner Teresa Clifton who claimed the honour.

Meanwhile Ella Minnell (last year's joint third) had got off with a convincing 2-0 win against Louise Pole-Evans in her first round match and followed up with a 2-1 victory over Sheila Harvey. Julie Clarke and Josephine Newton (joint third) were next to be left in Ella's wake as she progressed to the final but after a well fought match claiming two legs in the five leg final she had to settle for second place.

Entry numbers were down in both competitions with 68 in the men's and 40 in the ladies.

Stanley Darts Club Chairman Mark Pollard congratulated Toot and Ann on their wins and thanked all the players for making it another great competition. "Thank you to His Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts for sponsoring and presenting the prizes and also to Penguin News, FIRS, FITV and the commentators for the media coverage. Last but by no means least, thank you to the committee and all those who helped us out in any way to make this another successful tournament. You are too many to mention individually but we appreciate all of your efforts," said Mr Pollard.

RBA Farmers week 2014

THE 2014 Rural Business Association Farmers Week was launched on Monday with its always popular Business Expo where local businesses and organisations offered displays to both visiting farmers and the general public.

The Department of Agriculture, Conservation, Wilkins Kennedy, Jaytee, Camp Education, FIC, and Health and Social Care were just a few of the regulars. The Childcare Initiative, Premier Oil, Pinsent Mason, SAERI, Noble Energy, Decor, Ronnie McLennan Baird, the Chamber of Commerce, FIMCo, Falkland Island Legal Services, Environmental Planning, Taxation and FITB also attended and manned informative displays.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday comprised discussions and lectures arranged by the RBA, including two interesting presentations by farmers. Donna Minnell talked about her experience in artificial insemination in cattle, which attracted a great deal of questions from farmers. Nick Pitaluga outlined the running of a closed flock, 'ewe and lamb management at Gibraltar Station', the benefits and some of the problems they have faced over the years.

Talks were also given by Workboat Services Ltd, Premier Oil and FIMCo and by MLA Gavin

Short on the Transport Advisory Committee.

The week's sessions flowed neatly one to the other courtesy of the new RBA secretary Nuala Knight, who takes over from Nyree Heathman. Bobby Short has taken over the role of Chair from Keith Alazia.

In the latter part of the week, the Department of Agriculture took the helm with a variety of practical talks given by vets Steve Pointing and Zoe Luxton and a 'Dark Fibre Risk Management Options' talk by Neil Judd. Friday included a long question and answer session with MLAs amongst other sessions.

A highlight of the week that included a number of social functions, was the FIODA variety show. There was an excellent turn out for the show on Tuesday night with the evening characterised by talent and comedy sketches, music, dancing and even a circus troupe.

Highlights of the night included a soulful rendition of 'Jar of Hearts' by young starlet Esme Butler, comedy from Jacqui Bailey and Dr Chips, and following a dubious announcement from FIOGA Chair MLA Mike Summers that four more athletes had been awarded funding to attend the Commonwealth Games, a synchronised display of patriotic trunks from four daring stage swimmers.

Farmers Week ends this evening with the Camp Education Dance in the Town Hall at 9am.

Zoe moved here in January with her son Jonah, who is 15 months old, to take up a contract at FICS as an English teacher. They are really enjoying life in the Islands and having family close by. She has always been very much involved with dance, drama and singing her whole life, and has started running a dance class for students at FICS which has proved very successful.

Show respect

Raul Lavin of Buenos Aires asked Penguin News to publish the letter he wrote to Alejandro Betts.

I write this to you, Alejandro Betts, for the following reason. I am Argentine and, contrary to you, I think the Falklands are British, and now they belong to the Islanders who inhabit them and have made them their homeland for 180 years. But there is a difference. I am not demanding that my neighbours from my city be subject to a sovereignty they don't wish. I just reject a claim of my Government with which I don't agree. But you are actively asking in international forum that your place of birth and your ex-fellows be ruled by an authority they don't desire.

That their autonomy as a BOT, their nation, and the flag of their tiny country be abolished. And all of that, knowing that your family and your fellows of your childhood and youth, who suffered the war, now suffer the pain of constant harassment by this government with your active and public collaboration.

You are under the flag you wish, and living in the place you have chosen.

Don't you think you should respect at least your family?

Don't you think of how your family in the Islands must feel when they see that you want to dissolve their country, the country which was once in your childhood and youth, also your country?

Your letters

How would you feel if your own children were promoting the dissolution of Argentina, or the Province of Cordoba, or the city you live in?

Just because the Falklands are one of the smallest countries of the world, does your family deserve your contempt towards what is so dear to them? That an ex-belonger publicly tells them that they are not a nation!

Politics and political nationalism will never be able to substitute or replace inheritance, family, and the events of your life that as a human being, you lived in the Islands. Some Islands that your ex-fellows made into their small and humble homeland, where you shared with them your joys and sorrows.

Raul Lavin,
Buenos Aires Province

Change laws

WE are repeatedly told by the Argentine government as they wage their economic and communications war against us, that we are a non-people and have no rights in our country. But it was revealing to learn from last week's PN that apparently under some FIG laws we possibly have less rights in our own country than Argentine visitors? We do though apparently have the 'right' to accept and put up with constant reminders in our faces from 32 years ago of those in military uniforms under their flag who took our freedom away at the point of a gun; and how they still wish to take over our homes and freedom.

But our laws say we can do nothing. They have their rights in our Islands. We just have the right to suffer the bad feelings, flashbacks and for those who have PTSD the mental stress as a result of their actions.

Surely then high time for our MLAs to revise the laws? Please don't tell us you cannot. Perhaps a regulation by ExCo requiring an Import Permit to be applied for (which may or may not be granted) for the importation of any national flag other than Commonwealth or EU? Likewise for the importation and wearing of a military uniform. Better still, a simple ban on importation of Argentine flags and military style uniforms and their use in public. Or something else that has the desired effect. That would enable Customs and Police to do the necessary.

Tabernacle says souper thanks

MAY I through the letters page give a big thank you to everyone who supported the recent Souper-Saturday at the Tabernacle Free Church. We raised £390 in donations which has already been sent to Taurai Lore to pay towards his dialysis treatment. This amount means that he can now have treatment for a further month while he is trying to set up a small business to support his family and to pay for further treatment.

We will of course forward any other donations which are made for this cause; and in order to help keep the exchange rate low we send the money to the Rev. Paul Evans who many will remember coming to assist at the Tabernacle on two occasions. Paul is at present working in Harare for two years and will transfer the money from his account directly to Taurai. As always the generosity of the Islanders is second to none.

Your questions answered

SOMETIMES individuals are allowed to set up a private company while still employed by government, while others are not - how is it decided who can and who cannot?

Response provided by FIG Chief Executive Keith Padgett

The Management Code and the Public Service Code of Conduct are quite clear on the process to be followed if individuals would like to undertake a second employment or set up a company. If a member of staff wants to take on additional employment they have to seek permission from the Chief Executive. As long as there is no conflict of interest, it would be carried out in their own time and would not affect their job with FIG, then permission will generally be granted. In addition, an officer may not become an office holder e.g. secretary, director etc. of any business or company registered in the Falkland Islands or with Falkland Islands interests without the written permission of the Chief Executive. This requirement continues to apply for two years after the officer leaves public service employment. In deciding whether to give permission, the Chief Executive will need to be satisfied that there is no conflict of interest with the business proposed. The officer will also continue to be bound by the oaths given in respect of their employment and may not use any information gained in their professional capacity.

This is to ensure that they could not gain any advantage in respect of any future contracts with the Government. Several former members of staff established companies in the past, in readiness for when they leave FIG employment or because they were intending to leave the Islands.

Dare to believe it: Britain is back as a Global Military Power

I AM always surprised when the Royal Navy officially names its new ships many months before they slip into the water, and sometimes years before the first matelots climb aboard and prepare to weigh anchor. I suspect it is just that the people in blue can't wait for their new bits of kit, just as a child "can't wait" for Christmas and must hunt high and low for hidden presents, before shaking them in an effort to find out what pleasures await.

There was plenty of that kind of excitement here in the UK last week when the still incomplete hull of Britain's largest ever warship was blessed by Her Majesty the Queen. As she smashed a bottle of single malt whiskey across the vessel's bows, the head of state proudly named Britain's newest and most impressive warship after herself: HMS Queen Elizabeth.

At 65,000 tonnes displacement, the new carrier dwarfs the Sea Harrier and helicopter carriers that preceded her, the triumvirate of ships led by HMS Invincible, which earned her first battle honours in the Falklands in 1982. If HMS Illustrious, the only surviving ship of this class and now a humble helicopter carrier, ever berths alongside HMS Queen Elizabeth, she will look like a tender to the new flagship.

HMS Queen Elizabeth will not be commissioned until 2017 and will not be fully operational until 2020, when her 40 Lightning aircraft, a specially designed variant of the amazing Lockheed Joint Strike Fighter, are zipping off her deck. She is behind schedule, many tens of millions over budget and no one is sure what will happen to her sister ship HMS Prince of Wales, construction which is a little further behind.

But, notwithstanding the delays and the budgetary challenges, her promise alone is boosting confidence in the UK's defence capability. More importantly, it is causing potential partners and competitors to reassess their view of Britain. The sense of excitement was more than justified as that bottle of single malt was smashed on the grey steel.

HMS Queen Elizabeth is larger and will be more powerful than any aircraft carrier in service with any nation other than America. The US maintains its old Nimitz class behemoths, but Queen Elizabeth will be more modern than those vast ships. To the many who have predicted that British military power is locked in a downward spiral, this news is little short of shocking. For a long time now, the government's severe cuts to procurement and manpower in all three Services have projected the message that Britain is on the decline as a military power. And yet here we are, preparing to launch the biggest warship in the Navy's history. Indeed I believe we are going to launch and keep two of them: the Prince of Wales will, I think, join her sister rather than being moth-balled, sold or leased to the French, because it will be seen as increasingly essential to keep an aircraft carrier in service constantly, and that cannot be done with just one hull.

HMS Queen Elizabeth vindicates what the small band of optimists has been saying for a long time. Following the Cold War and the advent of less conventional threats, it was sensible to scrap old frigates and destroyers, battle tanks, and aircraft, even soldiers, sailors and airmen, replacing them with systems that are efficient, super-modern, versatile and easily deployable.

It is counter-intuitive but true: the Armed Forces are smaller but they are better. Just one example of the benefit of capability over numbers: each of the new Type 45 destroyers – at least one of which has already deployed to the Falklands – can do the job of three old destroyers, and they are purpose-built to work in conjunction with the new super-carriers.

The RAF too has suffered, but its ancient Tristars and VC10s have been replaced with the huge Boeing C17s and Airbus Voyagers, meaning they too can project power much further and far more quickly.

So, despite the naysayers (and I must admit I was once one of them), the UK's capability is coming along nicely. But are we condemned to have a lot of lovely kit that we would never use? After disastrous military adventures in Iraq and Afghanistan, there is indeed a strong British desire to avoid any involvement in global conflict for the time being.

I think it's natural to want to regroup, lick wounds, get used to our improving capability and think about what our role in the world is. But as Britain recovers from the ignominy of wars fought without sufficient thought and capability, it will be prepared to deploy overseas again.

Only in future the politicians and the defence chiefs will plan their operations a lot more carefully.

This developing capability is important for the Falklands. The military threat in the South Atlantic is negligible, but only because a serious deterrent is in place.

We may soon see that resident deterrent reduced a little, to be replaced with the rapidly developing new ability to project hard-hitting force quickly when necessary.

For quite a few years, the bane of ruling politicians and defence chiefs was the withering rhetorical question, "Could Britain fight another Falklands War?" No Defence Secretary or Chief of the Defence Staff would willingly respond to that question, because so very few people would believe them.

It seems to me that with the arrival of the new carrier, indeed probably two of them, the acid test Falklands question will soon be forgotten.

If the fact that defence is transforming is not yet generally accepted, it will be when HMS Queen Elizabeth slips her moorings for the first time. It would be wonderful and appropriate if her maiden voyage were to the South Atlantic.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

THE month of June proved to be a beautiful one, yes, there were the odd miserable, cold and wet days but, there were also some wonderful calm and almost warm days. Great gardening weather for the time of year.

Accordingly I have spent a long time outside, mainly in the vegetable garden, clearing up weeds which have built up over the past year and filled me with shame. Bill has added his weight to the hoeing and the grass has come up and out in vast amounts. The paths have reappeared and many of the beds have been dug over. The resulting grass and smaller grass bogs are now sitting on the boggy area which is the drive into the back garden, as this is where we keep the trailer - getting the towing vehicle bogged would be a bit of a nuisance.

Although we have actually had a lot of good vegetables, which is rather surprising given the neglect they've suffered, the potatoes definitely did not 'come good'. Marbles, and many of them very small ones at that, repaid us for their late planting and being badly frosted just as they were trying to catch up. The ground they were planted in still had to be dug over and 'straggled gathered' for any small potatoes that might decide to regrow in spring. A disheartening job, but a great feeling of achievement once it was done. I've left the ground rough for the frosts to break down and to allow the birds to clear any bugs as well, and we decided to shift some of the raised beds to join those in another plot and so keep them all together for watering purposes and ease of care. This also will free-up another plot for larger vegetables such as the greens and potatoes. The gooseberry bushes will now be moved. They were not very happy in their position anyway, so they will now be planted in a better area and be used to separate the new plot from the existing one.

Those of us who lived in Camp, where up until the mid seventies the electricity was only on for a few hours in the evening, and for a few more on Monday mornings for the laundry, and didn't have fridges or freezers had mutton as the staple diet during the summer months. It was received once a week and remained in a cool shed where the meat could be sawn down and cut to suit your needs or a meat safe where that job became a bit more cramped. As it became cooler and the keeping qualities improved the meat changed to beef and a quarter of beef, a hind one time and and a fore-quarter a fortnight later was the meat for the winter and hung outside on a palinque to weather and tender-

ise. To accompany our garden veg we've just received some mutton from Camp. I had almost forgotten what real mutton was like, but my taste buds hadn't, this is beautiful meat. Accustomed, as we have all become to the rather expensive and small joints available on the shelves, which would have been termed 'dog's meat' once upon a time, I was delighted to have a shoulder which needed a very large roast pan to accommodate it, rather than the normal two shoulders per roast pan that we are now used to. These are massive animals and a curry made with their meat is delicious, I also prefer sausage rolls and empanadas made with it as it is not so dry, and a mutton steak is reliably tender, although I doubt I could manage the six to eight breakfast chops as I once used to but, at least I am once again tempted to try!

The cyclamens inside are now at their very best and therefore in need of water and the occasional bit of food, I find the easiest way to water them is by sitting the whole pot in a larger container full of water for ten minutes or so then letting them drain. Doing this every week or so is more than enough for them and you do not risk rotting the corn that way either. The Christmas cactus are also flowering well, so far there are two different pinks (one of which is really quite gaudy) and a scarlet one is just over its best. The white, and the orangey one have still to flower and are being fed sparingly.

Outside but under cover, the geraniums (pelargoniums) and fuchsias await some attention, they are all in need of a trim, cutting back the old flowered stems and tidying them up generally followed by a small snack to get them started again.

I never go out in the garden now without a pocketful of old tights or stockings. They are wonderful things for tying up any young trees or shrubs to stop too much wind rock until they are established, they make great ties for they hold them in place but don't 'throttle' them to death. I was cutting and tidying some other trees too and was left with quite long branches which would normally be shredded, but then decided they would make ideal and natural props later on to hold up the perennials inclined to flop over such as the delphiniums which can look such a mess when the wind catches them. I also took some more cuttings of the rhododendrons and embotrium (Chilean Fire bush) while I was about it; had three cuttings take last year, here's hoping for more!

FALKLAND ISLANDS
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Oil & Gas Certification Grant Scheme

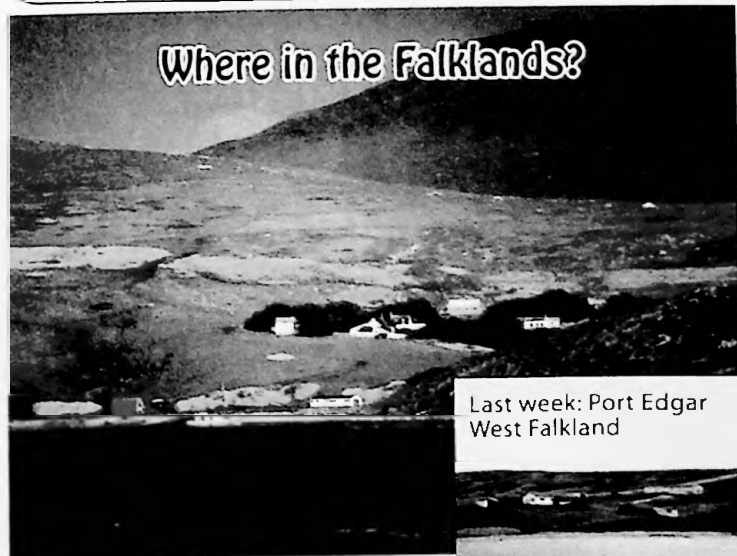

FIDC is proud to announce the launch of its Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme. The aim of the scheme is to provide grant funding to local companies to acquire internationally recognised certification which will improve their chances of acquiring contracts and work in the Falkland Islands oil and gas industry.

The approved scheme provides grant funding of 50% or up to £15,000 (whichever is lowest) for the cost of acquiring certification to successful applicants.

If you wish to receive more information about the scheme or request an application form please contact Michael Betts – Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

William Tell shoot

STEPH Thain - Club treasurer sponsored a shoot with a difference, a paper apple shoot.

Although we had plenty of juniors at the club, none were willing to balance an apple on their head whilst the remainder shot at
it. Come to think of it, no adults were willing to do this either, so it was not quite a traditional William Tell shoot.

It was a team event with juniors drawing out a lady and a gent to shoot with. Juniors were to shoot the larger two red apples but were awarded points for hitting the smaller green ones.

Adults were only allowed to shoot the three small green apples and only one arrow per apple just to make it harder. Boy was it hard to hit these three inch apples from 18m.

To make it easier, well in theory it should have been easier and it did for some, after four ends the range was dropped to 15m and we
faces/targets.

Scores did improve all around but just as we were getting used to it, the range was dropped to 12m for the last four ends each.

This proved one of the most difficult ranges to shoot at as one has to guess where to set the sights at and we almost never shoot this close to the target face.

Five teams took part in this most challenging of events where every arrow was needed.

Third place was taken by Kirsty
Lewis' team with a score of 225.
This team consisted of Kirsty,
Mark Lewis and Steve Cartwright. The observant will have noticed that there was no adult lady in this team, but we had run out.

Second place with a score of 265 was taken by Temis Smith's team which included his Uncle
Jav Lazo and Steph Thain.

Connor McLeod's team came in first place with a score of 295 and included Louise Clarke and his dad - Mike McLeod. Connor commented he might allow his dad to shoot with him again one day, but it's a tough choice when Jav is better.

Steph presented the lucky winners with prizes, chocolates and gift vouchers for the Juniors.
Adults received chocolates and wine.

The Club would like to thank Steph for her generous sponsorship of the event and coming up with a challenging and fun event, we look forward to doing it again.

Mike McLeod

Chief Executive Officer

Deadline for applications: 3 August 2014

We are looking for a Chief Executive Officer to lead a team of committed staff and volunteers in addressing our strategic plan and developing and implementing annual work plans and operational budgets. As the senior staff member, the CEO is responsible to the Trustees for the overall performance and efficient management of the charity and its activities. Our desire is to grow the organisation and enhance its profile and reputation.

The holder of this full-time post based in the Falkland Islands will ensure: sound finances; direct all conservation actions and research programmes; broaden the fundraising base; and lead FC's engagement with a wide range of organisations and individuals locally, regionally and internationally.

We can offer the successful candidate:

- A unique opportunity to design and implement innovative conservation programmes across all sectors of the Falkland Islands.
- A salary of £36,000-£45,000 (dependent on experience).
- An annual holiday entitlement of 30 working days per annum plus bank holidays.

The skills and experience needed to carry out the CEO duties are typically gained through senior management of a charity or comparable organisation, together with all-round communication and interpersonal skills, and demonstrated success in financial control, human resources management, fundraising, and project development.

A job description and application form can be obtained from the address below, with the deadline for applications being 3 August 2014: Farrah Peck, Office Manager, Falklands Conservation, Stanley, Falkland Islands.

Tel: 22247. E-mail: admin@falklandsconservation.org.fk

Career Opportunity

Are you over 18 years of age? Passed your A levels? Or alternatively have good GCSE grades in Maths and English? Have you ever thought of being a Manager within the Public Works Department? If the answer is "YES" then please read on... Do you also: Have a NVQ level qualification; or have a completed trades apprenticeship; or want to gain a qualification and progress from your current position; or all of the above?

If you possess any of the above criteria, then you could be the person we are looking for. We are looking for a person to be the future Asst Materials Manager of the Public Works Department's Materials Section (Quarry operation and Asphalt production). Then possibly higher in the organisation.

Interested persons please call 27176 or email quarry@pwd.gov.fk to talk to Marc Short Materials Manager during normal working hours to arrange an informal meeting to discuss the opportunities available and your potential future career.

The Falkland Islands Government invites tenders for the provision of cleaning services at Stanley Airport. The work will involve 6 hours per week, cleaning the passenger terminal and offices under contract arrangement for a period of one year. The successful contractor will need to commence work from the beginning August 2014. For further information contact Ms Jane Clement on telephone 27219 during normal working hours. Tenders should be submitted to Jane Clement, Aerodrome Manager, Stanley Airport, no later than 24th July 2014.

Expressions of interest are sought from suitable companies for the maintenance of the boundary fence surrounding Stanley Airport. For further information please contact Jane Clement, Aerodrome Manager on 27219, or email aerodromemanager@figas.gov.fk

Farm Worker - Fitzroy

Falklands Landholdings is seeking applications for a General Farm Worker in Fitzroy. Work will be varied and will include stock work, building and mechanical maintenance and general farm maintenance including fencing, the successful applicant will be required to keep working dogs and to use a bike for gathering etc and an aptitude towards mechanical repairs would be a distinct advantage. He/she must be able to work as part of a small team and be prepared to work on their own initiative at times.

This position would ideally suit a couple as there will be work available for the partner during the summer months and at other busy periods, the possibility also exists that this post could lead towards a managerial role for the right person when the current incumbent retires. For further information regarding the post interested persons should contact the Farm Manager Fitzroy tel 32384 (evenings) and applications should be made to the General Manager FLH to reach him on or before 4.30 pm on Wednesday 23rd July.

Contract for Sea Lion oilfield drilling platform awarded

INTERNATIONAL engineering and project management company, AMEC, will be the company responsible for designing Premier Oil's tension leg platform (TLP) for the Sea Lion Development in the North Falklands Basin.

They have been awarded a 12-month front end engineering design (FEED) contract.

The Sea Lion development includes plans for the TLP with over 30,000 tonnes of topsides for the 450-metres deep offshore location.

The topside consists of a deck that houses the drilling and production equipment, as well as the power module and the living quarters.

AMEC's scope of work includes engineering and procurement services for the TLP along with interface management and preparation of cost estimates and tender documents. AMEC will be responsible for the design of the TLP, with the potential to provide continued support to Premier through the detailed design and fabrication phases of the project.

"The FEED covers a fully integrated scope for the hull, production topsides and drilling facilities and will deliver a solution focused on constructability and operability," stated a spokesperson for the company.

AMEC will carry out the project from its London design office, supported by subcontractors KCA Deutag in London and Houston Offshore Engineering in Houston.

"Large FEED contracts for oil and gas developments are a big part of AMEC's greenfield core business," said Nick Shorten, Managing Director of AMEC's Greenfield business.

"We are delighted to have the opportunity to work with Premier for the first time."

Some of AMEC's other customers include BP, Shell, and the US Navy.

The Sea Lion field is located approximately 200 kilometres north of the Falkland Islands. Phased production is planned from a central TLP, with future subsea tiebacks.

The TLP will contain drilling, topsides well processing facilities and utilities with oil export being undertaken via a separate Floating Storage and Offloading unit.

Chief Executive Officer of Rockhopper, which has 40 per cent interest in Sea Lion, Sam Moody, commented: "We are delighted that the FEED contract for the Sea Lion field has been formally awarded to a world class engineering firm such as AMEC.

"This is a highly significant milestone in our plans to develop the discovery and comes on the back of our recent announcement that a rig has been signed to undertake a new exploration drilling campaign in the North Falkland Basin early next year.

"We look forward to continuing to work closely with Premier as we move the Sea Lion project towards Final Investment Decision."

TLP facts

• A TLP is a buoyant production facility (pictured) vertically moored to the seafloor by tendons.

• The buoyant hull supports the platform's topsides, an intricate mooring system keeps the TLP in place.

• The buoyancy of the facility's hull offsets the weight of the platform, requiring clusters of tight tendons, or tension legs, to secure the structure to the foundation on the seabed.

The foundation is then kept stationary by piles driven into the seabed.

• The basic design of a TLP includes four air-filled columns forming a square. These columns are supported and connected by pontoons, similar to the design of a semisubmersible production platform.

• A TLP allows for horizontal movement with wave disturbances, but does not permit vertical, or bobbing, movement.

De-mining plans for next two seasons

FURTHER de-mining is to take place over the next two summer seasons funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), who will also carry out a tender process for the works.

Priorities for the next phase of de-mining were agreed at this week's Executive Council meeting and include areas, "adjacent to roads which are considered potentially dangerous or which hamper maintenance, and to areas of high amenity value south of Stanley," said MLA Mike Summers.

This work is expected to take place over the next two seasons and will be subject to a tender process led by the FCO who are funding the programme.

Argentina brought 25,000 anti vehicle and personnel mines to the Falklands during the 1982 war of which 5,000 were accounted for.

Demining and land release operations carried out by British company BACTEC International in 2010 and 2012 - when the popular Stone Corral area near Sapper Hill was reopened to the public - cleared some six per cent of the remaining mines with more than 18,000 mines still in the ground on both East and West Falklands.

No British mines were laid during the war, however the British Government has the legal responsibility for the removal of land mines placed by Argentine forces.

Penguin News

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THE feminist in me balked at the idea being bandied around the UK media this week that David Cameron had doubled the amount of women in the cabinet as mere "window dressing" in a hope to bring the Conservative party to victory in 10 months time.

Unfortunately I have no doubt that politicians at that level will go to any lengths to secure their place, but there was a tiny part of me left wondering if he had really seen the light and was actually getting rid of some of the old diehards who spend more time watching their pension fund than the issues affecting the country, replacing them with some fresh and enthusiastic players for the sprint to the finish line.

Thankfully the concept of paying some of the female ministers less than their predecessors was nipped in the bud, because that really is a flaming cheek and not one that would win female votes for the party whichever way it was wrapped up.

But there is no doubt the shuffle has caused a kerfuffle with the Tory old guard claiming it was a massacre and that many were axed for being, "pale and male," which to my mind translates to "wishy-washy" and offers little as mitigation.

More window dressing or a genuine bid to create a strong team is now the question, and who knows, perhaps Mr Cameron was taking notes during the World Cup.

In the Netherlands v Costa Rica match Manager Van Gaal used his third substitution to change the goal keeper Jasper Cillessen for Tim Krul just before it went to penalties. The "crazy" plan worked and Krul made the all important saves. Why crazy - well some have surmised that if the substitution had been used earlier the Dutch could possibly have won the game, but instead Krul made his manager look like a genius in extra time. Could the same happen for Cameron?

PENGUIN News is also undergoing a bit of a reshuffle at the moment with Teslyn starting at the Government PR Office on Monday after four years at PN. We wish her well in her new post. Meanwhile Office Manager Fran is overseas on holiday (the equivalent of removing the Chancellor of the Exchequer for us I'm afraid) and I'm off at the end of the month for a jaunt to Canada and Montana.

Fingers crossed the boss doesn't decide PN needs some "window dressing" and we find ourselves replaced with men to address the imbalance in this female dominated environment before we can get back to reclaim our seats.

A ferry fit for purpose

A SURVEY of the rural community is being planned, on the subject of what type of service they require from a ferry to help ascertain whether the current vessel is still suitable. It was noted at Thursday's meeting of the Rural Development Strategy that ahead of a new Director of Central Services, it would be useful to have a report that showed, "the bigger picture," said Chair MLA Phyl Rendell.

It was also noted that a new business West Falkland Garage and Repairs is ready to be registered. Set up by FIDC this will provide a framework for a mechanic to be based at Fox Bay. A mechanic has still to be found explained MLA Rendell. Once in place it is hoped the business will ultimately function without FIDC support.

Siân Ferguson will take up the post of RDS Coordinator in August.

128 MTOs in the last year

THERE were 95 hospital referrals to the UK and a further 33 holiday referrals over the past financial year it was confirmed at yesterday's meeting of the Health and Medical Services Committee.

There were 85 referrals to Chile and in addition a further 10 were holiday referrals. 29 people were air evacuated, one to Montevideo, 26 to Santiago and one to and from Glasgow.

Hospital Manager Bernadette Eivers said the financial implications for the Department for 2013/14 was substantial.

Ms Eivers said there were plans to put better monitoring processes in place for the overseas medical budget for the forthcoming year.

Looking at staffing she said the hospital was currently well staffed with almost a full complement of nursing and support staff, however the department would continue to be challenged by the sustainability of staff.

The advertisement for the new post of Child and Adolescent mental Health School Nurse and the final midwife had not attracted any applications, she said, adding that the feedback had been that the salary was not enough.

Survey highlights West fuel problems

GOVERNMENT is working with Stanley Services on the difficulties surrounding obtaining and storing fuel on West Falklands, confirmed MLA Jan Cheek yesterday.

The results of a Government survey on the provision of fuel to the domestic market once again flagged up the problems faced by West Falklands customers involving having enough fuel delivered to Fox Bay and stored there.

Many respondents to a questionnaire felt the fuel supply situation hindered development on the West.

Also in the survey six out of ten Stanley residents considered heating fuel to be too expensive.

MLA Cheek told Penguin News, this was an interesting question because the price was based on an agreed fuel formula that included only a small profit margin.

Fuel in the Islands is currently supplied by one company, Stanley Services Ltd under an exclusive licence, which is issued by Government. The company can be given notice annually in terms of the contract said MLA Cheek.

Of the 318 responses received, 87% of respondents lived in Stanley, 5% lived in East Falkland, 6% on the West and the remaining 2% of respondents lived in the Outer Islands.

The public consultation found that:

- 6 out of 10 Stanley residents and 4 out of 10 Camp residents considered heating fuel to be too expensive.

- 91% of respondents had never experienced problems obtaining heating fuel, and 1% of respondents regularly experience problems obtaining heating fuel. Of that 1%, all respondents reside on West Falkland.

- Less than 40% of respondents felt that diesel for vehicle use was too expensive whereas 70% of petrol consumers find it too expensive.

- In terms of fuel consumption priorities, 50% of Stanley respondents stated the availability of fuel was the most important factor, compared with 63% of Camp residents.

- Respondents were concerned with the current monopoly restricting the choice and cost of fuel in the Islands, and highlighted a need for greater transparency in relation to regulation and pricing.

The consultation took place in February and March 2014.

A separate survey was carried out for the commercial market.

Speeding fines

THREE speeding offences recorded as a result of static speed checks resulted in fines in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday morning.

Stanley woman Tansie Bonner (22) pleaded guilty by post to travelling at 53mph on the Stanley Bypass Road on May 28 at 7am. Interim Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds noted that Miss Bonner had voluntarily surrendered her licence and written a letter of apology, but added that driving at 13mph over the 40mph speed limit was in itself "a danger." Miss Bonner was fined £165 plus £85 prosecution and had her licence endorsed.

Ashley Wylie (23) also of Stanley was fined after he admitted driving at 50mph on the Stanley Bypass on May 25 at 2.55pm. Mrs Faulds said that while 10mph over the speed limit was significant, that it was on tarmac and in clear conditions perhaps offered a little mitigation.

Mr Wylie was fined £150 plus £85 prosecution costs and had his licence endorsed.

Mount Pleasant man Jason Thomas (25) was fined £225 plus £85 prosecution costs after he admitted driving at 50mph on the Stanley to Darwin Road near the Bluff Cove gates on May 24.

Mrs Faulds noted that it was always a concern when speeding on that road and reminded Mr Thomas of the tragedies that had taken place in the past.

Trial date set

The trial of former Mount Pleasant contract worker Robert Bromley (42) has been listed for July 30.

Mr Bromley has denied drink driving, failure to stop and report an incident and careless driving all of which are alleged to have taken place on March 15.

Mr Bromley was charged on June 9 and left the Islands soon after due to his contract with SATEC ending and there being no accommodation available to him in the Islands.

A pre-trial review is to be held on July 23.

Book appeal

AS a result of the Community School's focus on literacy and the importance of reading, teachers are keen for all students to have access to a variety of fiction and non-fiction texts.

Teacher Zoe Gill told Penguin News: "We are looking for donations of books of any suitable genre, which are in good condition, to be used by students. Please take any books that you would like to donate to FICS Reception where there will be a box available.

Thank you very much."

False portrayal in child abuse story say St Helena Cllrs

ST HELENA Executive Council has reacted strongly to a story in the Daily Mail about child protection and sexual offences on the Island. A statement from the Council says they "believe the article paints a totally untrue picture of the Island, much of it based on hearsay."

It was claimed in the Daily Mail story on Tuesday that there was a culture of sexual abuse of children in St Helena and that the Island was rife with child abuse, domestic violence and sexual exploitation.

The story was based around the findings of an 83 page Lucy Faithfull Foundation Report of which only a four page summary was, "quietly published on the island's government websites," according to the newspaper.

A similar review was undertaken in the Falkland Islands last year and the report was published in full by the Falkland Islands Government in October.

The Daily Mail said the Saint Helena report uncovered, vile cultural acceptance of the sexualisation of children; that health workers on the island said sexual violence was endemic; that there were a number of serial sex offenders, and that a review of policing on the island had begun because of significant concerns.

Councillor and Children's Champion Christine Scipio-O'Dean described the story as a false and gave a totally unbalanced image of St Helena, adding: "Those who live on St Helena recognise that there are issues around child protection," and, "the Island has the same issues as any other jurisdiction and has made strong progress over the past few years in dealing with and prosecuting sex offenders and improving child protection."

She added: "We investigate all sexual allegations and anyone found guilty faces the full force of the law. Numerous prosecutions of sex offenders over the past few years demonstrate this," and noted that the Council had every confidence in the Police Force on the Island.

The Council denied there had been any attempt to cover up the findings of the report. Mrs Scipio-O'Dean said: "Their findings have been well publicised on the Island and Councillors have held public and media debates on these issues. To suggest that there is a reluctance to engage in issues around child safeguarding, somehow linked to a wish not to damage tourism, is absurd."

Mrs Scipio-O'Dean concluded: "We are all alarmed by the inflammatory and biased reporting in the article published today. We have taken great steps on St Helena to protect our children and vulnerable people against abuse of any kind. We know that there are concerns, as there are in any community, but solid progress has been made in improving our safeguarding capabilities. We know there is still more to do, and we will continue to strive for further improvements."

Responding to a letter from St Helenian John Clifford, who now lives in the Falkland Islands, Lucy Faithfull Foundation Head of External Relations Deborah Denis said "The reporting in the Mail is a sensationalised, skewed representation of the report," and that they did not provide the newspaper with a copy of the "confidential," report.

She said she was currently exploring, "what action we might take."

Pool and cost of experts subject to PAC examination

OVERSPEND on the swimming pool and value for external consultancies will both be examined by the Public Accounts Committee (PAC).

MLA Poole said at the last meeting of Legislative Assembly he was pleased a value for money review of the investment in the Stanley Leisure Centre over the past 18 or 24 months had been added to the PAC's work programme.

"The redevelopment of the Centre this year naturally has received a bit of public attention. It is publicly known there has been a significant overspending on the swimming pool project in particular and I think it is only right that the Public Accounts Committee takes a look at why that occurred and reports back to the Government."

Cost of experts

"Eye watering," was how MLA Barry Elsby described some of the figures received for consultancies, adding that he had wondered for some time whether they were value for money.

He said recent quotations had varied threefold from £100,000 to £300,000.

MLA Jan Cheek commented there was a cynical view that the consultant comes along, "asks you for your information, puts it between glossy covers and sells it back to you for £60,000." Given the amount of reports the Government has on its shelves, she said it that it would be good to know, "first of all that we are getting some value for money and secondly that the proper tendering process for the consultancy is being adhered to."

MLA Michael Poole said there had been considerable coverage of the use of consultants by the UK Government and there was a perception that it was a growing area of expenditure within FIG too.

It was noted, however, that the item had not been added because of any particular concerns MLAs were aware of, but because it may help Government in terms of its policy in that area.

MLA Cheek paid tribute to the amount of work carried out by the PAC.

The Public Accounts Committee is currently made up of Dr Andrea Clausen (Chair), Richard Cockwell (Deputy Chair), Steve Dent and MLAs Michael Poole and Ian Hansen.

THE Cub Scouts paid a visit to the Fire Station on Tuesday as part of their work on the new Cub Scout Fire Safety Badge. They were met by Leading Fire Fighter Stephen Lapham and Fire fighter Samuel Miller, who gave the group a very interesting tour of all the fire engines and fire equipment said Leader Jan Miller.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

WATCHING the UK Cabinet reshuffle has been quite sad as some real friends of the Falklands move on. I do not for a moment think that their departure will mean a change to policy on the Falklands which has been firm, principled and consistent in the years following the war in '82. Important lessons were learned from the mixed messages which lead the Argentine junta to believe they could invade and keep our country. Change now and more next year with the General Election make the role of the Government Office in London and attendance at the party conferences of ever greater importance.

The session with the RBA last Friday used all the allotted time and covered some useful ground. A couple of questions appeared to be based on misunderstandings but I think they were resolved satisfactorily. Following the lunch I stayed on for the FIDC presentation and was pleased to see most of the team present. I know that I am repeating myself, but we are at a critical time when new developments will shape the future so the Corporation has a big role.

Somewhat sleep deprived having watched too many late showings of World Cup games I am glad to have a fairly quiet week with just normal weekly meetings, review of Exco papers, FIDC credit committee and a couple of meetings related to the policy portfolio on which I am second to the Honourable Michael Poole. It means we have actually had a reasonable amount of time to read and absorb the bundles of papers generated almost daily.

I unfortunately missed the quick walk around of the Junior School this week but I am very familiar with the buildings and space pressures. Like most others I'm also aware that the school population is growing. It should not be forgotten that this continues through to secondary level where some of the specialised rooms no longer meet modern standards or larger class sizes. Even if numbers do not continue to increase at present rates there are a number of problems that need to be addressed in the long term.

Dealing with Gout

THE word 'gout' comes from Latin 'gutta' and old French 'gote' meaning 'a drop'. Several hundred years ago gout was thought to be caused by drops of viscous humors that seeped from blood into the joints. In fact, this supposition was not that far from the truth. Uric acid is a product of metabolism from the food stuffs that we eat. It is found in the blood, but if concentrations increase, it dissolves from the blood stream into the joint spaces where over time it forms crystals. These crystals line the joint cavity, and can remain there undisturbed and problem free.

We believe that flares of gout are due to these crystals breaking off from the joint lining- usually into the joint space triggering an immune response, resulting in an influx of chemicals from the blood stream. This causes the joint to become swollen and tender, hot and erythematous (reddened).

Conversely, if levels of uric acid in the blood drop, over time, the crystals that have deposited in the joints will dissolve slowly back into first the joint space, and then the blood stream to be eliminated by the body.

We can prevent flares of gout by lowering the uric acid level in the blood, this should primarily be done through diet, but sometimes medication is required.

Diet plays an important role in both causing gout and reducing the likelihood of suffering further attacks. Following dietary advice can help to stabilise levels of uric acid in the blood.

Achieving a healthy weight: Weight loss has been shown to reduce uric acid levels in the blood. A combination of balanced healthy eating and regular physical activity is the best way to lose weight safely.

Limiting alcohol: Alcohol stimulates the production of uric acid by the liver and is converted in the body to lactic acid which interferes with the removal of uric acid from the body by the kidneys. Some types of alcohol, particularly port, red wines and beer, contain high levels of purines. Alcohol's association with gout could also be due to its contribution to obesity through excessive consumption.

Drinking plenty of fluid: Ensuring a sufficient fluid intake helps to reduce the risk of crystals forming in joints and thus prevent gout attacks. Aim to drink at least 2 litres per day.

Avoiding/reducing foods high in purines: Purines are natural compounds found in many foods. When purines are metabolised, they are broken down and their end product is uric acid. Therefore, reducing purine-rich foods, particularly if they are regularly consumed, may help to prevent attacks of gout. There are certain foods that are very high in purines and should be considerably limited, if not avoided completely. These include: beer, liver, kidneys, rabbit, anchovies, herring, mackerel, sardines, trout, mussels, crab, shrimps, caviar, Marmite, Bovril, commercial gravy, etc. The foods that have moderate levels of purines can be taken in moderation. These include: beef, lamb, pork, chicken, duck, baked beans, kidney beans, peas, mushrooms, cauliflower, spinach, bran, oat bran, wholemeal bread, etc.

Limiting foods sweetened with fructose: A high intake of fructose in the form of fructose corn syrup/glucose-fructose syrup can increase uric acid levels in the blood. High-fructose corn syrup can be found in: fruit juices and sugary drinks, bread, biscuits, cakes, yoghurts, frozen pizzas, cereals and cereal bars, sweets, jarred sauces, jams, ketchup, mayonnaise, spreads or salad dressings.

Everything you need to know about... Maternity rights for workers

Alison Inglis (above) and Chris Armstrong of Pinsent Masons explain maternity rights for employees

FALKLAND Islands law contains important rights for female employees in relation to maternity. These "minimum" rights are contained in Part IV of the Employment Protection Ordinance. Some employees may benefit from additional or enhanced rights under the terms of their contracts of employment.

Who has a right to return to work?

Female employees who have been in their job for at least two years and eleven weeks before the expected date of the birth are entitled to return to work following maternity leave. They are usually required to return to work within 29 weeks of the expected date of birth.

The right is to return to the same job as before, on terms and conditions "not less favourable" than those the employee would have benefited from if they had not taken maternity leave.

To qualify for the statutory rights, an employee must inform her employer in writing that she intends to take maternity leave (giving at least twenty-one days' notice of this) and that she intends to return to work afterwards. She must also inform her employer of the due date of the birth.

Where it is not practicable by reason of redundancy for an employee to return to her old job, she can be offered alternative employment under a new contract of employment, providing that the work would be suitable and appropriate, and the terms of the contract are not substantially less favourable than if she had returned to her old job.

These are the "minimum" rights under statute. Employees may have contracts of employment entitling them to longer periods of leave and/or shorter qualifying periods.

Who is entitled to statutory maternity pay?

In order to be entitled to receive statutory maternity pay whilst on maternity leave, an employee must have been working continuously for her employer for at least two years and eleven weeks at the expected date of birth.

How long will statutory maternity pay be paid for?

Any employee who qualifies for maternity pay is entitled to receive maternity pay for six weeks period. This will usually be the first six weeks during which the employee is off work because of her pregnancy, except that the payment of maternity pay cannot begin more than eleven weeks before the expected date of birth even if an employee is off work before this date.

How is statutory maternity pay calculated?

Maternity pay (i.e. the pay received by an employee during the first six weeks she is off work) is payable at the rate of nine tenths of the normal weekly pay that the employee would receive if she was still at work. The precise rules for working out what is meant by a week's pay are set out in Schedule 3 of the Employment Protection Ordinance.

Some contracts of employment may provide employees with higher levels of maternity pay, and may not require a qualifying period of two years' employment.

What if an employee does not receive her statutory maternity pay?

If an employer fails to pay an employee the whole or any part of the maternity pay to which she is entitled, the employer may present her complaint to the Summary Court. Such a complaint must usually be brought within three months of the end of the six week period during which the employee was entitled to receive maternity pay.

If the Summary Court finds the complaint to be well founded, the employer will be ordered to pay the complainant the maternity pay she is owed (and to pay towards the employee's legal costs).

Can employees take time off for ante-natal care?

Pregnant women have the right to take time off for appointments for ante-natal care on the advice of a Government medical officer, midwife or health visitor. There is no qualifying period of employment for this right which applies to all workers.

An employer is not allowed to unreasonably refuse requests for such time off as may be required for an employee to keep these appointments, but an employer may (after the first appointment) require the employee to provide a doctor's note confirming that she is pregnant.

Can an employee be dismissed for being pregnant?

All female workers, regardless of how long they have been employed, have a legal right to not be dismissed from their job because of pregnancy. Where an employee has been dismissed because of her pregnancy, she will usually be able to bring a claim against her employer in the Summary Court for unfair dismissal.

The only exceptions to this rule are where pregnancy would render the worker unable to do the work that her job requires (for example because of its physical nature), or where the pregnancy would make continuing in her job amount to a breach of statutory duties or restrictions (such as health and safety regulations).

However, even where an employer can justify dismissing an employee on the above grounds, the employee will still be entitled to maternity pay as if she had not been dismissed. She will also be entitled to return to work following the end of the pregnancy, providing she informs her employer in writing that she intends to do so 'as soon as reasonably practicable' after the dismissal takes effect.

What paternity rights are male workers entitled to?

There are currently no statutory paternity rights for fathers in the Falkland Islands, although some men may be entitled to paid or unpaid paternity leave under their contracts of employment.

Paul Zeller

1 What is your nickname and why?

FPZ - French Paul Zeller. Because I'm French.

2 What is the one, single food that you would never give up?

Baguette and Saucisson! It defines happiness

3. What is your happiest moment?

In 1998 - When the whistle blew and France won the World Cup in France. As the legendary commentator Thierry Roland said, "We can die peacefully"

4. What's the best book or movie you have watched recently?

Le Diner de Cons (Dinner of Fools)

5. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?

Zinedine Zidane so he could explain to me why he headbutted Materazzi in 2006.

6. What did you want to be when you were a child?

Play football for France - just to wear that shirt would have topped us winning in 1998.

7. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be?

North Korea to see what it's really like and Papua New Guinea to learn about their traditions.

8. What would people be surprised to learn about you?

I'm very patient

9. Happiest childhood memory?

1998 - every family member celebrating our win! even the great grandparents stayed up to witness the victory

10. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

When someone says: Why do French tanks have rear-view mirrors? And I won't say the answer

New rules won't work for yachties

READING the statement on page 5 Penguin News Vol 26, No 3 of July 4, 2014 my attention fell on Immigration Review results with focus on quote: "Visitors to the islands will now be allowed to visit for four months in any 12 month period."

Currently they can visit for 12 months in any 24 month period, however it was felt this could be used as a means of entry with the intention of obtaining work or longer term status, a "back-door" to longer term settlement that undermined the integrity of the immigration control.

I quite agree if it applies to the tag along visitor/would be immigrant, but surely not the sea borne visitor who arrive by their own efforts. These are often people of means with a wide variety of skills. Professional folk, such as dentists, medical doctors and teachers educating their own children who accompany them.

Now, bearing in mind the need for more people in the Falklands to fill the skilled labour shortage and not forgetting the Islands population stemmed largely from a maritime heritage (as indicated by family names on the census, reflected in place names and street names) it appears ExCo is shutting the door to yachts-folk? This element of visitors are educated people who have lots of talent most useful to the Falklands as those who have come and settled have proved by integrating successfully into our community and contributing to taxation.

From the point of view of yachtsmen and women the four months is most unfair to would be settlers. It is hardly enough time to explore the Islands to get the feel of the place. In the event of storm damage we should offer a port of refuge and four months is often insufficient time to source spare parts or even new sails required for further adventure.

Consider what happened to Kiwi's Mark and Jane whose yacht was damaged at the jetty in Stanley Harbour, during their unexpected sojourn, they house sat Government House for a while, waiting for parts.

Jane worked as a teacher and Mark as a Fishery Observer. This illustrates the limitations of applying four months. What if they had only one week left in the time frame and the propeller suffered damage, as was the case of Endeavour owned by Americans David and Candy Masters.

Those enterprising characters who own their vessels are plying the waters of the world and when they find a place of their liking, drop anchor permanently in the utopia they seek.

Using the collective title, 'Yachties' are no burden as they come with their homes. I am not a yachtsman but in the past have employed some; one of the families settled here and are a valued asset to the Falklands.

I must extol the virtues of these nomads from the sea who bring money to our shores and economy. Not forgetting the publicity and fame they generate. Fantastic examples can be found at Beaver Island, Dunbar and in Stanley. Being resident they attract other artisans of the same ilk. There are exceptions, like Rod Newell and we must of course bar any from nations that claim our sovereignty.

Many have gone away and written favourably about the Islands and the people, in this way promoting us to the wider world. So let us continue to make them welcome. If there was more free-board on duration of stay, it might encourage some to over winter here rather than Puerto Williams or Ushuaia. By extending the tie-up period more revenue will come into our economy.

The Immigration Policy requires fine tuning to keep out the undesirables with open doors to those who might become valued citizens in our small community, on par with those already established.

Child safety campaign treads fine line

IT was reassuring to read Lisa's positive comments on the Child Safety Campaign in her editorial in last week's PN.

Those involved in the development of the campaign were determined from the outset that it would be Falklands focused and not simply copied from the UK.

We were also aware that there was a fine line with a campaign on such an awful subject as child abuse.

If it were too bland and discreet then it would not make people stop and think. On the other hand, if it were too hard hitting then we risked people avoiding the posters and adverts.

We think and hope that we have the balance about right. As Lisa said, there have been a few concerned comments from those thinking we have gone a little too far.

One caring parent did not know how to respond to their son when asked how a child could ever be a sex toy.

It is difficult to discuss such subjects but vital that they are. The social service team is always ready to help you start this discussion.

Since the campaign began there have been a few calls from members of the public and professionals to the police and social services, concerned that someone they know MIGHT be the subject of abuse.

Some of these have been looked into and found to be false alarms.

We are aware that it can be very upsetting to be questioned by the social services or the police about something that turns out to be an innocent misunderstanding.

However, if we publicly condemn the people who raise concerns that subsequently turn out to be unfounded then this campaign will fail.

Some, such as health care professionals, social services, police and teachers have a duty to report any concerns brought to their attention whereas members of the public need to be encouraged to speak out.

It is far better to have a few false alarms than to discourage anyone from reporting concerns and condemning a child to years of abuse.

Correction

PN last week mistakenly suggested FICS Deputy Head Louise Taylor had been awarded a NPQH qualification. The article should have read: Director of Education Annie Tempest was pleased to report the news that following eighteen months training, Headteacher of IJS&CE Karen Steen has completed her final assessment in the UK for the National Professional Qualification for Headship (NPQH), results will be known in August. FICS Deputy Head Louise Taylor is thrilled to have been accepted onto the course and now begins her study towards the award. The NPQH from the National College for Teaching & Leadership is the first choice qualification for headteachers and aspiring headteachers, and still designated by over 80% of UK governing bodies as a requirement for headteacher roles.

Weather for June 2014

JUNE was a relatively dry month with the rainfall total of 28.2 mm below the long-term average, but sunnier than average with 71.1 hours of sunshine. The mean maximum and minimum temperatures were above the long-term average.

Temperature: The mean maximum temperature was 6.3 degrees Celsius compared with the long-term average for June of 4.6 degrees Celsius. The highest temperature recorded was 12.8 degrees Celsius on the 28th. The lowest maximum temperature was 2.3 degrees Celsius recorded on the 3rd.

The mean minimum temperature was 2.0 degrees Celsius, compared with the long-term average of 0.5 degrees Celsius. The lowest minimum was -1.4 degrees Celsius recorded on the 9th and the highest minimum temperature was 6.3 degrees Celsius recorded on the 29th.

Rainfall: The total rainfall for the month was 28.7 mm compared with the long-term average of 56.9 mm. The wettest day was on the 5th with a total of 9.2 mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 15 days with 1.0 mm or more falling on 7 days.

Sunshine: The monthly sunshine total was 71.1 hours compared with the long-term average for June of 61.1 hours. The highest daily total was 7.2 hours recorded on the 30th.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog: There were 4 days of snow/sleet, 0 days of lying snow, 0 days of hail, 0 days of thunder and 2 days of fog.

Wind/Gales: The monthly mean wind speed was 13.7 knots, which is slightly above the average of 13.5 knots. The highest gust of 51 knots was recorded on the 17th. There was 1 gale day recorded for the month and there were 14 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Dance time

THE Cathedral is holding another of its popular family barn dances in the Parish Hall on Saturday July 19 from 7 to 10.30pm.

The evening will feature a mix of favourite local dances, Scottish country dancing (led by Lisa and Lee Martin) and line-dancing (led by Valerie Allen). Put on your cowboy boots and quickstep round the hall, or take the plunge and learn to line-dance, or join in as Lisa and Lee demonstrate a number of popular and less well-known country dances. All ages are welcome. Entry costs £3 for adults and £2 for children. Light refreshments will be on sale but BYOB is also welcome. A trip down memory lane

Five years ago

THE first case of swine flu in the Falklands is reported with the Chief Medical Officer confirming however, that the teenager is not seriously ill. The young man is believed to be a member of the Island Games team who competed in Aland and had some limited contact with a person subsequently thought to have swine flu.

The lad was isolated at home and Dr Roger Diggle said his medical condition gave no cause for concern.

Farmers and the Falkland Islands Meat Company are urged to work together in a message emanating from a wash up discussion at the RBA Farmers Week. No resolution to difficulties surrounding haulage of stock is reached and Government says it is up to FIMCo to demonstrate to councillors how the cut in subsidy which resulted in the decision to cease payment of haulage charges has affected the company and farmers.

PN reports that the man who created the tales of Kenneth the Kelp Goose, fondly remembered by Islanders everywhere, has died. Colonial Secretary Willoughby Tommy Thompson lived in Stanley from 1968 until 1971.

Councillors come to the conclusion that Goose Green School will stay open. The school's roll has dropped below the guideline level for keeping it open. However residents believe it short-sighted to close the school as there are young children in the settlement approaching school age.

Budding Keith Moons from the Community School receive certificates from Rockschool. A group of students tutored by drummer Pete King took their exams on camera, recording their work which was then sent to the London based school to be graded.

Conditional planning permission is granted for the clearance of land mines at four sites in the Falklands and the issue of the week on the letters page and vox pop comprises whether or not a school uniform should be introduced at the IJS.

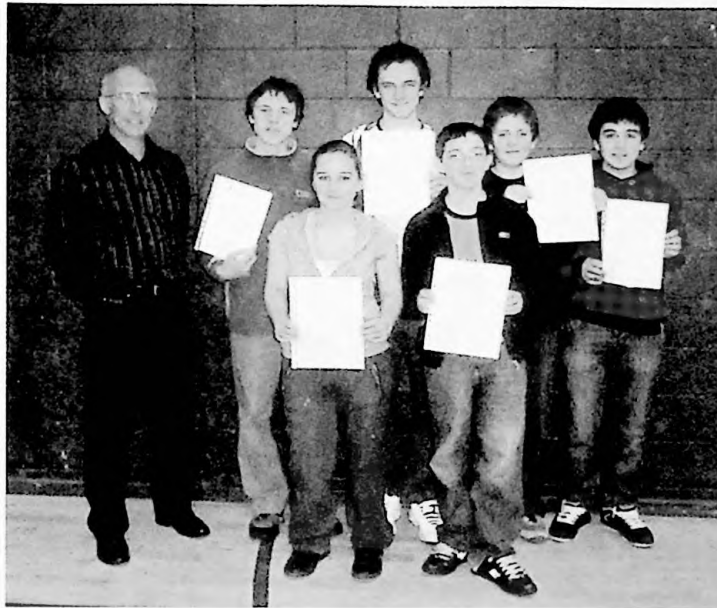

Intrepid Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray sends a feature describing her sabbatical working on a ranch in Texas. Apparently the thought of spiders and snakes in the undergrowth means one little tickle on her leg and she completes a routine that can only be likened to a Morris dancer with tourettes.

Centre pages look at the demise of the Stanley Dairy; from fresh beginnings to a sorry finale.

Colin Ford winner of the Governors Cup darts tournament in 2014 was also the winner five years ago when the tournament was celebrating its fiftieth year.

cided to pull out of fisheries talks with the Falklands, a workshop described by the Falklands Director of Fisheries as "eminently sensible," is held between scientists representing the two. At the South Atlantic Fisheries Council meeting in London both sides agreed there was a serious problem with Illex, with the lowest recruitment and stock size ever recorded.

On the front page shooters are warned against shooting on private land without permission and the paper reports on excellent university results from Falklands students. Among other students Pippa Lang achieves a 2:1 in Philosophy, Politics and Economics and Roddy Cordeiro a 2:1 in Iberian and Latin American Studies.

Clare Crowie (23) qualifies as a dental nurse and Year 6 students pledge to avoid drug and alcohol abuse in their lives under the auspices of DARE a programme run by Sergeant Dave Roberts.

Music and laughter filled the town hall as a result of the annual Farmers Week variety show with Krysteen Ormond giving a solo performance of Avril Lavigne's 'Tomorrow'. Popular school band Anarky played some Nirvana covers and the Goss Girls won the audience well and truly over, singing country.

Farmers maintained their happy smiles during meetings, particularly when told by the Taxation Officer they could claim on items purchased for their homes. Washing machines, beds and furniture are all part of the farm said Ms Drysdale.

Civil servants are informed if they are unhappy with their department they would be best served blowing the whistle officially instead of writing name and address withheld letters to Penguin News according to the Attorney General.

The Susan Whitley Exhibition is 21 years old and the top prize, The Spinning Wheel Trophy, is won by both Marcus Porter a year 9 student who drew, "a stunning picture of the wreck of the Jhelum," and Victoria White, Year 11, for, "a carefully crafted jewellery box."

Bulgarian academic Dr Lyubomir Ivanov visits to research a book on the political future of the Falkland Islands.

"I'll be damned if we'll be sold down the river," Councillor Norma Edwards declares referring to Argentine/British oil talks on the Falklands held in Buenos Aires.

Following the release of a list of ten points resulting from the talks that included measures to assist Argentine companies in the licensing round and cooperation on air traffic control and communications, councillors show anxiety at the thought of Argentina having any opportunity to manipulate Falklands affairs.

In Stanley vandals trash a Bomb Disposal Land Rover left parked on Brisbane Road overnight, and a footrace from Port Louis to Stanley proposed as part of the Stanley 150th celebrations is discovered to have already been run 150 years earlier.

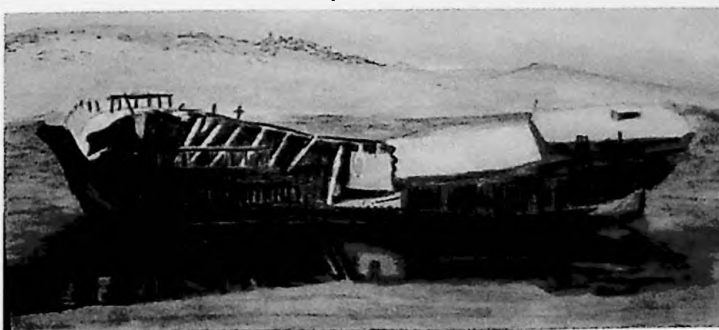

According to retired Chief magistrate Harold Bennet, during the period when Governor Moody was transferring the seat of Government from Port Louis to Stanley a German called Jurgen Dettlef carried messages between the two places. So fast was he that on one occasion he took a wager with the captain of a ship about to do the same journey by sea, that he (Jurgen) would be first to town, and he won.

Argentine Foreign Minister Di Tella's hopes of fixing guarantees of the Islanders way of life in the new Argentine Constitution were dashed last week during talks in Santa Fe, and the same week Argentina's military leaders called for the prosecution of British soldiers for war crimes alleged to have occurred during the Falklands War.

A heavy overnight snowfall is caught on camera with a headline declaring 'Four inches an hour as record storm transforms Stanley into a winter wonderland.'

According to the Met Office while the rates were not unusual the way in which it fell was.

Two Camp airstrips were forced out of action with Steven Poole of Port San Carlos explaining their airstrip was completely hidden by the fall.

Run, run as fast as you can. you can't catch me. I'm the Gingerbread Man!

2013: 2014 Infant and Junior School Susan Whitley art exhibition drew a large number of visitors on the weekend. The three day event was held in the entrance and assembly hall at the school from Friday.

The show was bursting with creativity and showed a range of artistic techniques including silk paintings, felting, sewing, watercolour, sculpture, wooden models, collage and guest exhibitions from the Recycling and Archive clubs.

The younger year groups entered a broad range of colourful and creative work and the older Year 6 showed they have been working to develop their skills in perspective drawing while Year 5 illustrated an appreciation for French artist Paul Cezanne.

The children visited in groups to view the work and Year 3 students Tessa and Liam said that their year group had worked hard to create Antarctic scenes in paint and in felt, making picture frames and paintings.

There were strong historical themes from some year groups, reflecting what they have been learning in lessons. Subjects included local history and ancient civilisations with Victorian hats from Year 6, Aztec sculpture from Year 4 and paintings of the 1886 peat slide in Stanley by Year 2.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Bands:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

RIGHT

IS CRIMINAL AND WE WILL COME AFTER YOU

Adults who engage in any form of sexual activity with a child under 16 in the Falkland Islands is committing a criminal offence. They are also causing harm to their victim. We have zero tolerance towards this behaviour and we will prosecute.
Pick up an Under 16 and you'll have more than their parents to worry about.

Oil & Gas Certification Grant Scheme

FIDC is proud to announce the launch of its Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme. The aim of the scheme is to provide grant funding to local companies to acquire internationally recognised certification which will improve their chances of acquiring contracts and work in the Falkland Islands oil and gas industry. The approved scheme provides grant funding of 50% or up to £15,000 (whichever is lowest) for the cost of acquiring certification to successful applicants.

If you wish to receive more information about the scheme or request an application form please contact Michael Betts – Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk.

Leaders in the making

RAF physical training personnel introduced Year 10 School Prefects to leadership training at Hillside Camp this week.

Head Teacher Falkland Islands

Community School (FICS) Martin Winward said the group also enjoyed a shared meal at Shorty's arranged by Vocational Coordinator Jerry Pierce as well as a range of activities both inside and out the Camp.

The challenges focused the group on decision making, problem solving, engagement and of course fun said Mr Winward.

FICS new head boy, Jack Ford and head girl, Chelsea Middleton supported the initial training alongside both deputies Robbie Ojeda Campos and Rhian Alazia.

The next step will be for the student Leadership Team to decide which students will lead various aspects of school development including, Charity Awareness, Peer Mentoring and Support, International Links, Community Projects and School Council.

Pastoral Manager Richard Lilley will continue to work with the groups as they move forward. "Once the group have formalised their responsibilities this week we will need to look again at Council Representatives for the year ahead and the School House Captains as well," said Mr Winward.

Minister supports Falklands

THE United Kingdom fully supports the Falkland Islands in the development of their economy repeated the Minister of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Hugo Swire this week.

He responded to a question from Conservative MP Jake Berry who asked what steps the Minister was taking to deal with Argentine threats to the commercial sustainability of the Falkland Islands. Mr Swire said: "Attempts by Argentina to disrupt legitimate commercial activities in the Falklands have no basis in law. Threatening Argentine rhetoric and actions are formally challenged at high levels with the Argentine Government in Buenos Aires and in international fora wherever and whenever it is necessary."

He assured the House that the Falklands economy was in a good state and growing.

Falklands on new UK coin says MP

UK Member of Parliament for Crawley is flying the flag for Britain's new 12-sided £1 coins to feature the coat of arms of the Falkland Islands according to Crawley News.

Self-confessed flag geek Henry Smith believes flags and coats of arms are highly symbolic, and that overseas territories such as the Falklands should feature on the tail side of the new coins; due to be introduced in 2017.

Mr Smith believes Argentina's controversial move in April, where they produced 50 peso bank notes with a map of the Falklands in the colours of the Argentinean flag, was 'provocative' and 'crass'. So he now wants to see Britain hit back with a monetary gesture of our own.

PERSONAL/NOTICES

Bringing all the FIFA 2014 matches live to the Falklands this time around was not without it's challenges, to say the least.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to the following people who helped make this possible. Firstly to all our subscribers for their support, Patrick for providing us with the direct phone number to the FIFA Media Department, (when my e-mails went unanswered for days due to congestion).

MLA Michael Poole for all his support, Monika at European Broadcasting for her efficiency and even though there was no equipment left in stock, she managed to find some for us, (held in reserve for Wimbledon), Stacy and Gabi at DHL for ensuring the equipment got here on time, Fran at Penguin News for accepting our advert last minute, our son Saul for producing the adverts (free of charge!), a huge thank you to Paul, FIFA Sales and Distribution Manager, Sanjiv, FIFA Senior Legal Counsel for helping to push our contract through and FIFA for recognizing the Falklands as a territory in our own right, Elsa at EBU and Francisco at HBS for their help enabling the signal (just hours before the first match kicked off) and to Mario and Luis (and Saul for backup when needed) for all their technical work and the endless trips to programme each match over the four weeks. Finally, well done Germany! Thank you all.

Confident shooters and proud competitors at Glasgow 2014

THE Falklands shooting team at the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow is feeling "very confident," Small Bore team member Jeremy Poncet told Penguin News this week.

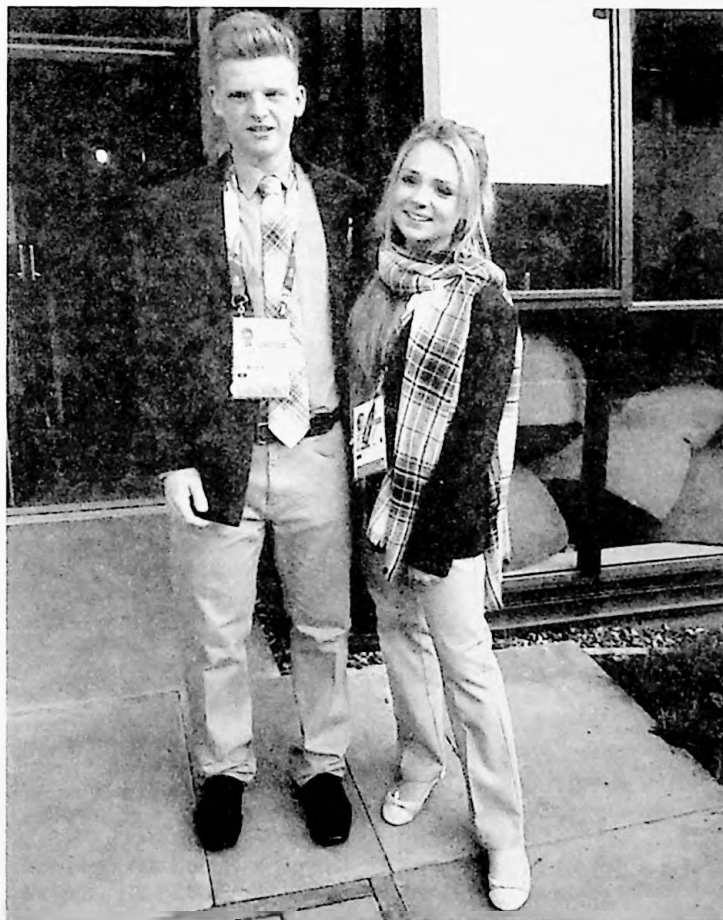

Describing the facilities as "absolutely amazing," the Commonwealth Games first timer admitted however that with the very new target system, not to mention the team having entirely new guns and shooting jackets to get used to, a settling in period was necessary.

Jeremy and his team mates have had a few days break before the pre team training shoot today, and the qualifiers tomorrow (50m Rifle Prone for Jeremy and also Michael Goss) and he says they are, "really looking forward to it."

The ten-strong shooting team has been practicing at the Barry Buddon Shooting range. The Small Bore rifle and pistol team comprises Michael Goss, Nevin Middleton, Murray Middleton and Jeremy Poncet. Shot gun is Saul Pitaluga, Matthew Vincent, Axel Rodriguez-Reid and Sean Jaffray.

Gareth Goodwin and Derek Goodwin, both with plenty of experience in representing the Falklands at overseas games make up the Full Bore team.

In practice in all three disciplines good scores and personal bests have been recorded. Early this week it was reported that both Nevin and Murray posted excellent personal bests. Over two days practice Murray shot a 489 ex 600 and a 519 ex 600 smashing his previous PB of 496. Nevin shot a 508 ex 600 and a 533 ex 600 annihilating his previous PB of 519.

Badminton players Ross Stewart and Sonia Arkhipkina prior to the Opening Ceremony on Wednesday evening (Pic: FIOGA)

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

CONSIDERING my own stomach did a bit of a somersault while trawling through the online fixtures for the Falklands competitors at the Commonwealth Games it's difficult to imagine the extent of the nerves being faced by the team members.

And with these Islands having such strong historical links to Scotland – you only have to check out the amount of 'Mc' suffixes in the phone book to work that one out – it does somehow make the whole thing even more meaningful (no pressure guys).

Of course for the Scots themselves it's a particularly vital time in their own history, being less than two months away from their political referendum. Penguin News was recently contacted by a journalist, who, due to the Falklands having held its own referendum last year, was interested in the Islanders' take on the Scottish referendum. What did we think of the Scots' interest in leaving the Union?

Having asked around on the journalist's behalf, the most common response locally was summed up by Taff Davis on our Facebook page. He said: "I think the principle of self determination is the most important point for all of us to bear in mind. The people of Scotland will have thought long and hard about their political future. They will know what is right for them as we do here. So personally, which ever way it goes, I support them."

I think Taff got it spot on. While Argentina might try to suggest we're helpless simpletons too afraid to let go of British apron strings, in fact the opposite is true. It was a sensible, practical and politically informed choice. The Scottish people will no doubt take the same approach when making their choice. Whatever that is we wish them a prosperous future.

Returning to our gang in Glasgow, from young to old and everyone in between, medals or no medals (but here's hoping) we know without a shadow of a doubt that you'll do your utmost, and do the Falklands proud.

With only one week left before I am abandoned by the remaining member of the PN news team, PN has unashamedly press ganged an A Level student into assisting us during her holiday time at home. So, if you spot Sorrel Pompett-Robertson clutching a camera and buzzing around at your event, please arrange yourself appropriately, prettily and say cheese.

Falklands at Glasgow 2014

The Badminton team of nine has unfortunately been reduced by one person due to Michael Brownlee suffering an injury, however the rest are raring to go Anna Luxton told us.

Speaking of the team event, which began yesterday (Thursday) she told Penguin News: "I think it is fair to say we have a tough draw against Canada, Australia and Wales but we are excited about the challenge. We have practiced in the venue for the last few days and now feel far more comfy in there. It is an amazing venue - big airy hall."

Anna has once before represented the Falklands at a Commonwealth Games and three times at the Island Games.

The team played Canada yesterday losing 5-0, but with some great games. Ross Stewart and Laura Minto picked up 7 points and 4 points in the Mixed Doubles and Chris Eynon and Dominic Jaffray claimed 6 points and 5 points in the Men's Doubles. Doug Clark had a handy second game in his Men's Singles match winning 7 points off the Canadian.

Today in the team event they are scheduled to play Australia at 9am and Wales at 7pm UK time.

The team for the team event is Men's singles - Doug Clark; Women's singles - Laura Minto; Men's doubles - Dominic Jaffray and Chris Eynon; Women's doubles - Anna Luxton and Sonia Arkhipkina; Mixed doubles - Ross Stewart and Laura Minto.

Another particularly proud representative for the Islands in Badminton is Glasgow resident Chris Eynon (son of Carol and Dave Eynon of Stanley). He told Penguin News: "My overriding feeling of being here is of pride as a Falkland Islander competing for my country, however I think that the fact that it is in my current hometown is extremely exciting and I want it to be a success for Scotland and for everyone to feel that they have done a great job."

"On a personal note, for me to participate in Glasgow where my wife and children were born is extra special for me and something I can look back on with them in years to come."

Chris's wife Gill, his sons and his parents will all be making the trip to the Emirates Arena to watch him play.

The rest of the badminton team comprises captain Doug Clark, who has competed at seven Island Games and three Commonwealth Games, plus Ross Stewart, Dominic Jaffray, Chris Eynon, Laura Minto, Anna Luxton, Louise Williams and Sonia Arkhipkina.

Singles and doubles first round begins on Tuesday July 29, although some players have byes through to the second round: Doug and Ross have a bye in the Men's Doubles (they will play on July 30 against the England Number 1 seeds) and Ross and Laura in the Mixed Doubles on July 31. They will play a pair either from Australia or the Maldives.

The lawn bowls team of Barry Ford, Patrick Morrison, Michael Reive and his father Gerald Reive was also reduced, in their case from five to four when George Paice suffered a shoulder injury. George will be missed from the team. He competed in the Delhi Commonwealth Games. George and Gerald achieved wins against Samoa and Guernsey there in 2010.

In the Men's Triples they faced extremely stern competition yesterday (Thursday July 24) when Barry Ford, Michael Reive and Patrick Morrison, the latter replacing injured George Paice, played the England team.

They lost 31-8 but Team Manager Shirley Reive told Penguin News, "it sounded horrible but it wasn't, they played some really good bowls."

She said everyone was very cheerful and while Patrick and Barry might have suffered a few nerves she said Michael was, "usually pretty calm."

Yesterday afternoon they played another top team, Australia, losing 23-5. This morning (Friday) they play Malaysia.

Falkland Islands Community School Sue Whitley Exhibition and School Fete

FICS will be holding their annual Sue Whitley Exhibition on Saturday 26th of July and Sunday 27th July from 2pm – 4pm in the school street. On Saturday 26th the FICS Fete will also take place from 2pm – 4pm in the upstairs classrooms with stalls, books and bric-a-brac, tombola and raffles and a welcome tea/coffee in the cafe.

We look forward to seeing you there!

MOUNT Pleasant man Jeremy John Clarke (29), who was found guilty of drink driving in October 2013 and banned from driving for a year, had his licence restored on Tuesday by in the Senior Magistrate's Court.

On September 21 2013 Mr Clarke had driven from behind the Globe Tavern round to Michele's Café but after taking a roadside breathalyser test when approached by police officers proved to be over twice the legal driving limit with a reading of 61.8mg per 100ml of breath. Mr Clarke pleaded guilty at his first hearing, was fined £350 and banned from driving.

In court on Tuesday it was recognised that Mr Clarke had only 79 days left of his licence ban and as it had been more than six months since, he was entitled to a restoration of his licence.

Mr Clarke apologised to the court and to the public for his actions last year. He explained that a recent promotion to Deputy Accommodation Manager meant it was an inconvenience to his employer and a burden to his colleagues to not hold a drivers licence as he was confined to MPA.

The police did not oppose Mr Clarke's application and Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said it was appropriate for his licence to be restored from August 9.

Speeding case adjourned

DANIEL Omar Carcamo Carcamo (31) had his case adjourned after he pleaded guilty by post to speeding near the Mullet Creek junction on the Stanley to Darwin Road.

The court heard that at 6.18am on June 24, Mr Carcamo was recorded to be driving at 64mph within the 40mph limit in a white Ford transit minibus. The loose gravel surface was described to be wet and greasy with damp and dark weather conditions. No other traffic or passengers were present. Mr Carcamo was stopped by police on Brandon Road in Stanley and admitted that he had been speeding.

Interim Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said she was concerned at the level of speed combined with the poor conditions and was considering a driving disqualification. The court was adjourned to a date to be confirmed to allow the defendant to attend.

Falklands photo exhibition draws the crowds in London

THE Falkland Islands Government launched an exhibition of 64 pieces of photographic work showing aspects of the nature, wildlife, economy and social identity of the Falkland Islands and its people at the Mall Gallery in Central London on Monday.

The event was listed by The Londonist website as number three of the top eleven things to do in London. The "We Are Falklands" exhibition has also enjoyed coverage through the Daily Mail, BBC and The Guardian newspapers and websites.

Canapes on offer at the launch also gave a real Falklands flavour to the night by including local Toothfish and Kinglip provided by Falklands fishing company Fortuna Ltd.

The photographs were selected from hundreds of images entered into an amateur photography competition which was the initiative of FIG's PR ladies Krysteen Ormond and Emily Hancox.

Miss Ormond said the launch event was the culmination of many months of extremely hard work by Emily Hancox who, "organised the photo competition, liaised with the photographers, helped select the gallery space and found our amazing caterer, Sinead Bailey of The Flavour Kitchen."

She said the event could not have happened without the collaboration of Momart, part of Falkland Islands Holdings plc, and the co-operation of Fortuna Ltd who provided the seafood for the launch event canapes.

Miss Hancox said some really fantastic photos were received, although there were fewer entries into the "People" and "Island Life" categories than hoped for.

"This was a bit of a shame, as part of our goal was to promote the lifestyle and civic side of the Islands. However, out of the photos we did receive, there were some truly stunning images, and we had plenty of material for a great exhibition."

She said she was really pleased there have been so many great reviews and happy that the hard work had paid off. "I hope that lots of people have the chance to go and visit the photos whilst they're on display. This is a really positive promotion for the Falklands, as we can tell from the reviews."

The exhibition will close on Sunday with a steady stream of visitors to date.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into his working week

PREDICTABLY my planned 'quiet week' had a few last minute additions so all my good intentions to keep last Friday clear to attack my filing backlog failed. Perhaps I'll succeed this Friday while I can still get into the room I use as a study. I'm guilty of keeping too many papers on the assumption that I may wish to refer back to them at some point.

This week the main portfolio meetings are Environment Committee where I am second to the Honourable Michael Poole, and Historic Buildings where I am standing in for the Hon. Roger Edwards who normally chairs that committee. We have just received a cartload of copies of the Criminal Justice Bill which ensures weeks of reading before it is referred to select committee which will have to spend many hours ploughing through it section by section. Unfortunately there really are no shortcuts when it comes to important legislation.

Recent discussion on the Cabinet reshuffle in the UK raised the issues of the representation of women, positive discrimination, 'token' women and why it is rare for numbers of women representatives to match up to the proportion of women in any population. Obviously there are many countries where women still have to fight for their basic human rights but the Falklands have come a long way. There are no official barriers to women standing or being elected. Even perceived problems such as childcare are very much a matter of choice. Men and women may follow traditional patterns in which the female is largely responsible for childcare but I know of many successful cases of role reversal, or genuine sharing of responsibility. Both men and women standing for election will have to make difficult choices and accept a degree of sacrifice of free time and in their private lives. On balance I would not favour any form of positive discrimination here, because I believe women are more than capable of holding their own and earning their place on merit. A male colleague observed 'most women have too much sense to go into politics'. He said it, not me!

Tachinid v earwig approved

THE application from the global scientific research organisation, CABI, to introduce earwig biological control in the Falkland Islands was approved by the Environmental Committee on Wednesday.

The project aims to implement the controlled release of two species of tachinid fly, which will attack the European earwig, over two consecutive summers with a three year follow up to assess the success of the project. The total project budget established was £173,000 which included FIG's contribution of £30,000 over the two year period.

Some trials have been conducted in Southern England with the tachinid flies with notable success. However, there was some concern that the difference in climate between England and the Falkland Islands may cause many of the flies to die during the winter months, therefore making the project unfeasible.

As well as temperature conditions it is unknown which native species of birds or invertebrates the tachinid fly may have an impact on. There were also some concerns over the indirect impacts of removing earwigs from the Falkland Islands, as many predatory species have adjusted to feeding on them and therefore would suffer in the decline of earwig population. However, it was decided that these risks were fairly minor and it is clear that the tachinid fly would help control the number of European earwigs in the Islands.

Stanley Growers have for many years used biological control methods to reduce the number of pests and offered to assist in raising awareness of the process.

October 11 earmarked for National Tidy-up Day

A National Tidy-Up Day for the Falklands got the thumbs up from the Environmental Committee on Wednesday, with the suggested annual date of October 11, being earmarked for the community event.

While the initiative will be Island-wide it was suggested that for the first year the focus be on tidying up within Stanley itself and the small area of Stanley Common to the south of Stanley.

MLA Michael Poole has taken on the general organisation of the event which it is hoped youth groups, private companies, Falklands Conservation, Friends of Cape Pembroke and individuals will all get involved in.

Senior Agricultural Advisor Neil Judd said he had been involved in many similar events in Australia where people and the relevant authorities got involved and worked well together and finished up the day with a "bit of a barbie," and a general get together. "I think it's a wonderful idea which just needs a bit of co-ordination," he said.

Family and pals catch up at Woolston reunion party

A LIVELY Falklands Reunion party was held at the Woolston Trade and Labour Club Woolston last Saturday. Organiser Susan Davis said: "We had a good turn out, about 106 people. There was food cooked by my husband Peter, and a great band playing."

Islanders from all over the UK plus a number either on holiday or undergoing medical treatment also went along. Just a few of the names of those attending comprise Jude Woodman, Landy Edwards, Cilla Grant, Arlette Betts, Nema Clements, Bill and Ben Berntsen and Mally and Pat Lee.

Old time Falklands crooner Rock Berntsen and wife Wendy also enjoyed the warm evening in Woolston as did Paul Summers.

Cayman venue for overseas territories meeting

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Roger Edwards representing the Falklands at the Overseas Territories Pre Joint Ministerial Council (JMC) in the beautiful island of Grand Cayman, described the three day conference as, "overall a great success."

Measures to secure the long-term economic futures of the territories were discussed at the meeting attended by the Heads of Government from Cayman (Chair), Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Gibraltar and Montserrat. Falkland Islands Representative in London Sukey Cameron also attended.

Economic diversification was a topic high on the agenda, with an aim to build more sustainable economies, "that are more resilient and capitalise on changing global trends," it was noted in a statement from the Council.

As always good governance was discussed and importantly for the Falkland Islands the statement noted the, "right of the Overseas Territories to self-determination."

Security and immigration were debated along with environmental sustainability and global standards of financial regulation accountability and transparency.

MLA Edwards said: "The prime reason for the meeting was to discuss and agree priorities for the 2014 JMC Summit to be held in London over three days during the week commencing November 30.

Also debated was the progress reporting process and ways to further develop the JMC's "purpose" to support all of our needs. We also stressed the need for Ministerial attendance and representation at the JMC."

He said pensions were also discussed.

Daniel (15) a keen musician was born in the Falkland Islands. He has represented the Islands in swimming at the Bermuda Small Islands Games. Most people will know him from the numerous times he has performed in Variety Shows and FIODA productions

Uniformed services have little power

I HAVE recently been to the Falklands as a tourist, and I was very much delighted with your beautiful little British country in the South Atlantic.

The hospitality that I received was out of this world. The people I met were fantastic, and made me feel at home.

Since my trip to the Falklands I have kept up to date with news as best as I can. I read the Penguin News and I also follow various accounts on social media.

In the Penguin News, June 27th, 2014 a gentleman called Tim Miller wrote 'Take Argentine flags from visitors'.

After a little research that week, very little I might add, I stumbled across many pictures and I can feel Mr Miller's fury.

This behaviour from the Argentine visitors is becoming common now, where they fly the Argentine flag, dress in military uniform and mock the Falklands and the people. Why is this bullying behaviour tolerated?

In a recent Penguin News, July 4th, 2014, I was shocked to read the front page.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police responded to Mr Miller's letter, basically because he had praised the Falkland Islands Customs and Immigration for their good efforts and that they had balls!

It appears that the uniformed services have very little power when it comes to Argentines prancing around with flags and in uniform taking photos, then those photos appearing on the internet upsetting the Falkland Islanders.

Funding needed for HPV vaccine

FUNDING is being sought by the Medical Department for a vaccine against certain strains of the human papillomavirus (HPV), a common virus often spread during sex which can trigger the onset of cancer.

At a recent meeting of the Health and Medical Services Committee, MLA Mike Summers said Standing Finance Committee was not releasing additional funding until after December, but recommended that an Executive Council paper requesting the estimated £43-45,000 required be prepared for early submission.

Chief Medical Officer Dr Beccy Edwards explained that there are more than 100 different types of HPV, many of which are harmless. However, some types of HPV can disrupt the normal functioning of the cells of the cervix and can eventually trigger the onset of cancer.

Two strains of the HPV virus called HPV 16 and HPV 18 are known to be responsible for 75 per cent of all cases of cervical cancer. These types of HPV infection have no symptoms, so many women will not realise they have the infection.

"However, it is important to be aware that these infections are relatively common and most women who have them don't develop cervical cancer. Using condoms during sex offers some protection against HPV, but it cannot always prevent infection," said Dr Edwards.

She commended the attitude within the Falklands population for taking part in vaccine programmes and said that because of the success of screening programmes, cervical cancer was now an uncommon type of cancer in the UK and the Falklands.

There was however an increasing number of men and women who have genital warts which could also be addressed through a vaccine programme aimed at the 12 to 13 year olds.

Girls aged 14 to 15 have been vaccinated since 2012 and currently need three doses, said Dr Edwards. However if vaccinated at the younger age only two doses of vaccine are required and boys could also be included as the suggested vaccine is known to protect against 90 per cent of warts cases. Starting the programme at a younger age would ultimately save money, she added.

MLA Dr Barry Elsby said he believed the vaccination programme should apply to boys and girls as there was clear evidence of a marked increase in head and neck cancers in young middle aged non smokers due to this same virus. Vaccination would prevent this and was something the visiting ear nose and throat specialist had advocated. He said however that he would also like to see a programme in place to vaccinate against Hepatitis B given that sexual promiscuity was high in the community, people tended to travel a lot and there was the possibility of an influx of contractors into the Islands. Estimated to cost £19,000 it would be a good investment in preventative medicine, he said adding that one overseas medical would cost more than that.

Dr Edwards disagreed however saying that Hepatitis B was, "simply not a problem," in the Islands and that tests were carried out regularly.

Patient stats not available

The current EMIS software dealing with patient/population statistics at the hospital is not delivering the facts and figures needed to make decisions on health care across the Islands, it was noted at the meeting.

Dr Edwards said there was information within the system which was known to be there from personal dealings with patients which was not being provided when statistics were requested.

MLA Mike Summers said that while the system worked to keep notes, it did not work effectively as a database to provide essential statistics essential to proper planning and disease prevention. If there was a need to replace the system it should be done, he said.

Dr Edwards said no progress could be made with the system operating as it currently was, adding "it's worse than the system we had before."

Your questions answered

Q Why has the report on the business case for a permanent port in Port William not been released yet. When will it be?

Response provided by Head of Central Services Simon Fletcher

A The report is currently in internal circulation and will be presented to MLA's informally and then Executive Council in the first instance. Given the proximity of the recess shortly, it is likely the report will be submitted to the Executive Council meeting at the end of August. Executive Council will then decide what information can be released.

Q When will the review of the Fuel Supply agreement begin? Will it be conducted in a transparent manner, will specialist advice be used, and will invitations to bid for the contract be issued to more than one party?

A The review of the fuel supply agreement began nearly two years ago when an internal (FIG only) working group, chaired by the Chief Executive, was established. This group developed a 'Part A' ExCo paper in June 2013 and since then has been tasked with delivering the recommendations of that paper.

Fuel is clearly an important subject for the Islands and it is important the working group, and ExCo hear the views of the local community, both residential and business. To this end a fuel survey was circulated in February - March of this year and received 318 responses. In addition and following an approach by them, an informal meeting arrangement with local industry representatives has been in place since the middle of 2013. All of these views have fed into the thinking of the working group and its recommendations to ExCo. At this point, it is not considered necessary to engage outside specialist advice however, if that does become needed, then obviously it will be considered.

Q How is the price for ships fuels calculated? What mark up is permitted to the monopoly holder?

A Pricing for ships fuel, known as bunker fuel, is governed and restricted by a Maximum Sales Price (MSP) formula and covered by the commercial agreement in place between FIG and the fuel licence holder, the detail of which is confidential.

THE Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) has been busy over the past weeks planning for upcoming events in the UK. The first event is in just three weeks when FITB will again be attending Bird Fair at Rutland Wildlife Reserve in Oakham, UK.

The British Bird Watching Fair has come a long way from its humble beginnings in 1989. The idea evolved from a local event held in 1987 at Rutland Water Nature Reserve called 'The Wildfowl Bonanza'. The event was a great success and after much deliberation, in the local pub appropriately named The Finch's Arms, the idea of a birdwatchers' fair was hatched by the organisers Tim Appleton and Martin Davies. The Fair takes place on the nature reserve at Rutland Water which itself is a huge water storage reservoir owned by Anglian Water. The nature reserve is a RAMSAR and Special Protection Area and is managed by The Leicestershire and Rutland Wildlife Trust.

The aim of the Fair was to get birdwatchers together to celebrate birds, to develop a commercial fair for the bird watching industry and to support international conservation projects. This has been achieved by The Leicestershire and Rutland Wildlife Trust working in partnership with The RSPB.

In excess of 20,000 visitors now attend the Fair annually and over 300 exhibitors display their products, with BirdLife International and its partners receiving the profits for conservation projects. Since the first project 'Stop the Massacre Campaign' in 1989 to the current day, more than £2,000,000 has been raised to help save birds and their habitats in Europe, Africa, Asia and South America. Bird Fair attracts exhibitors from all over the world promoting businesses as diverse as eco-tourism, optical equipment, old/new wildlife books and birdfeeding products.

Managing Director of the Tourist Board Tony Mason said this event is a must for the Falkland

Islands given our unique wildlife offering. FITB is one of the main sponsors of the event. Mr Mason explained that the event is supported by other businesses in the Falklands and, "our presence is one of the largest at the event."

"I am very pleased to have the support of Falkland Islands Holidays and Falkland Islands Conservation, who have both attended Bird Fair faithfully for many years. In previous years the booths were in various tents throughout the event but at last year's event we all came together to have a stronger presence at the event. The booths are set up differently this year with FITB centred between Conservation and Falkland Islands Holidays; this gives us a unique opportunity to provide loads of information to potential land based tourists and also provide an immediate booking option at the event, which is very important at a consumer show."

On the Saturday of the event FITB is planning a traditional Falkland Islands smoko.

World Travel Market is also just around the corner and this year the Falkland Islands will have yet another, "impressive look and feel at the event," said Mr Mason.

This year they are focusing on 'destination awareness' and have incorporated a large illuminated map of the Falklands, which is front and centre in the booth.

The booth also has six 60" plasmas which loop a video feed of the Falkland Islands non-stop throughout the event. Mr. Mason said the Tourist Board already has fifteen scheduled tour operator meetings during the event and they are currently working on scheduling a robust media programme as well.

There will be a reception at the event where all of the major tour operators, travel agents, travel trade publications and media outlets will be invited. FITB has also printed new brochures for both the travel trade and for consumers giving detailed information on how to book travel to the Falkland Islands from anywhere in the world.

Accommodation Accreditation

Mr Mason reminds everyone providing accommodation in the Islands that this year's ratings will be from September 27, until October 11. Those already part of the programme will be contacted by FITB to schedule the 2014/15 ratings.

However, those wishing to join the Accommodation Accreditation Programme and be rated for the first time should contact Sam Addison at the tourist board on 22215 to be added to the schedule. Mr Mason wished also to remind everyone of two of the benefits of taking part in the scheme.

Firstly, only those participating in the Accommodation Accreditation programme will be listed on FITB's website and secondly, after being rated, accommodation providers are eligible to apply for a tourism grant which will assist in upgrades to their properties. This is being offered, "to help improve the offering and help providers reach the next star level. There is no cost involved to take part so everyone is encouraged to participate," said Mr Mason.

The Falkland Islands Tourist Board will soon become a statutory corporation and will be seeking interest from those in the tourism community who may wish to serve as board members. From Stanley to San Pedro Clare and Paul take time out to teach in Peru

Clare Howes tells how she and husband Paul took time out from the Falklands to teach lessons in a remote school on the banks of the Amazon, complete with teaching resources courtesy of the Seafish Chandlery in Stanley. Clare takes up the story:

Recently Paul and I travelled through Peru to spend some time in a beautiful, remote area on the banks of the Amazon River, a boat ride from the city of Iquitos. We had arranged for me to teach some lessons in a small elementary school in the remote village of San Pedro. Close to the village there is a beautiful 'back to basics' lodge with lakeside bungalows that overlook a small tributary which eventually leads to the Amazon River. It sounded great and completely lived up to our expectations.

The San Pedro lodge has been set up by Cato Erga who is the owner of the Lodge. He came to Iquitos as a visitor and was touched by the need he encountered there. He decided to try and do something about it. The majority of the proceeds from the lodge go straight back into the community and target the most basic needs of the village inhabitants. The rest of the profits pay for staff and facilities within the lodge. With this in mind we headed off to spend some time in the jungle.

We arrived with a full suitcase packed with teaching and learning resources from reading books and colouring pencils, to art and craft materials. The resources were kindly donated by the Chandlery and the Seaman's mission, Stanley. We also created a range of teaching resources to help the pupils improve their English language skills.

After settling into the lodge and enjoying a great first meal we awoke to the sounds of the local wildlife and headed out to meet the principle and teachers. Unknown to ourselves we were also about to meet every pupil in the school all at the same time. The pupils ranged in age from four to 11 and were full of smiles and excitement at meeting a couple of teachers from another country. For many of the children it was the first time they had met someone from outside their local area. After the initial shyness all the pupils began to get involved with the lessons I had prepared. We all made the most of the lovely weather and took all of the pupils outside to start some of the lessons. Some of the activities involved short simple songs to sing while acting out the words. The teachers of the school also sang along and it was amazing to see how keen the pupils were at answering questions once their confidence returned.

The school was very basic but it was obvious the community were very proud of what they had achieved to date. However there were not enough chairs and tables for the children, a leaking roof and the bare minimum of school resources.

These children are unable to attend school on the mainland due to it being so far away and their only means of transport is by a canoe. The children were so beautiful, all smiling and embracing each of us. At the end of our time teaching we had every pupil in the school trying to hug us goodbye and shake our hands.

The teachers were also incredibly appreciative and sincere in both receiving the resources and opening the pupils minds to a world outside their village. It was such a lovely experience and reminded us so much of the years we have spent teaching in developing countries with communities such as the Karenni refugees on the Thai/Burma border, or the Massai and Warangi tribes in Tanzania. The people were extremely humble and welcoming.

We were both truly moved by the community spirit of the village and promised we would share our story with the people in the country we call home. They have a long way to go to improve the school to levels where the children will have enough resources or a building fit for purpose, but we hope the lodge will continue to have visitors and that bit by bit the lives of the children of San Pedro lodge can be improved.

If anyone here in the Islands or reading the paper abroad wishes to find out more about the project, please visit the lodge, make a donation, or visit the website below and help get the school and the community up and running, in hope of reaching some of their goals.

Pupils turn out to serve Stanley on Mandela Day

FORM Group Ross 4 at FICS along with their Form teacher Zoe Gill. Last week led an assembly focused on Nelson Mandela and the great impact that he made during his lifetime. They asked staff and students to consider what they would like to have achieved in 67 years time – the amount of time that Mandela worked selflessly to better the world for his community.

Every year on July 18, which was Mandela's birthday, Mandela Day takes place. This international day, in honour of Nelson Mandela, encourages people around the world to participate in making a positive difference in their community, to help make the world a better place. As Mandela himself quoted, "What counts in life is not the mere fact that we have lived. It is what difference we have made to the lives of others that will determine the significance of the life we lead".

Ross 4 decided they would like to get all the staff and students at FICS involved in this fantastic event, in order to make as big an impact as possible.

Zoe Gill, who organised the event said, "I wanted staff and students alike to feel empowered to make a difference in their local community here in Stanley. Too often I think, it is easy to say what is wrong with the world, but I thought this would be a brilliant opportunity to actually help others out and to 'Take Action and Inspire Change' as the Mandela Day slogan states".

Staff and students participated in a wide range of community projects, ranging from bag packing at the Chandlerly to beach cleaning, assisting at the local Fire and Police stations and helping out at IJS, to name but a few. Zoe Miller who helped at the Fire station said, "It was awesome! Can we do this every Friday?"

The afternoon was hugely impactful and staff and students at FICS would like to say a huge thank you to everyone who helped to make the event such a success.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters.
Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800..Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:

Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

HE SAYS I'M SPECIAL.
THAT'S WHY HE DOES
THOSE THINGS.

CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE CAN, AND DOES, HAPPEN IN THE FALKLAND ISLANDS.
IS IT HAPPENING TO YOU OR A FRIEND?

He tells her she's special. He buys her presents. He gives her alcohol. Then he shares her with his 'friends'. This could be happening to your child, to someone you know... or it could be happening to you. Remember, you do not have to do anything you don't want to, and even if something seems fun at first it could be dangerous.

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE (WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

Riddle

What 5-letter word becomes shorter when you add two letters to it?
See crossword for answer

Did you know...

Champion golfer Rory McIlroy has accumulated approximately $40.6 million in career earnings at the age of 25, along with another $200 million contract from his Nike endorsements

Golfer Phil Mickelson, who plays left-handed, is actually right handed. He learned to play golf by mirroring his father's golf swing, and he has used left handed golf clubs ever since.

The golf term "birdie" comes from an American named Ab Smith. While playing a round in 1899, he played what he described as a "bird of a shot", which became "birdie" over time.

Famous quotes

"Golf, like the measles, should be caught young, for, if postponed to riper years, the results may be serious."

Job vacancies with Falklands Landholdings

Farm Worker – Fitzroy

Falklands Landholdings is seeking applications for a General Farm Worker in Fitzroy. Work will be varied and will include stock work, building and mechanical maintenance and general farm maintenance including fencing, the successful applicant will be required to keep working dogs and to use a bike for gathering etc and an aptitude towards mechanical repairs would be a distinct advantage. He/she must be able to work as part of a small team and be prepared to work on their own initiative at times.

This position would ideally suit a couple as there will be work available for the partner during the summer months and at other busy periods: the possibility also exists that this post could lead towards a managerial role for the right person when the current incumbent retires. For further information regarding the post interested persons should contact the Farm Manager, Fitzroy tel 32384 (evenings) and applications should be made to the General Manager FLH to reach him on or before 4.30 pm on Wednesday 23rd July.

Falkland Landholdings has a full time vacancy for a general farm worker at Goose Green to start as soon as possible. The principal duties are stock work which requires someone who is physically fit to ride a quad or a bike, to be able to work & keep dogs would be beneficial. The successful applicant would also be required to undertake all other farm work, extra hours and weekends when required. A driving licence is essential. The position requires someone able to work effectively within a small team. Goose Green has a full time school. Further information the post may be had by contacting the Farm Manager on 32270/55270 and written applications should reach the Keith Alazia Goose Green by Monday 4th August.

Falkland Landholdings has a full time vacancy for an Agricultural Plant operator. The principle duties would be tractor driving, including loading bales, rotovating, planting & cropping using different implements, fencing repairs, driving & carting goods in the canter. When required be able to undertake all other farm work, extra hours and weekends. The applicant needs to be physically fit and work efficiently unsupervised. A driving licence is essential a HGV licence would be advantageous but not essential. Further information on the post may be had by contacting the Farm Manager on 32270/55270 and written applications should reach Keith Alazia Goose Green by Monday 4th August.

Falklands Landholdings require a presser for the forthcoming shearing season, the successful applicant will travel between FLH farms with the shearing gang. Further information may be had by contacting Keith Alazia at Goose Green; please apply in writing to Keith on or before Tuesday 5th August 2014.

Please check www.workboat.co.fk for more information. Email admin@workboat.co.fk, Phone 22300, Fax 22301, out of hours mobile 55299.

They gave it their all

COMPETING in a tournament against teams from countries with populations totalling anything from a million to over a billion, the Falklands was always going to be a little out of its depth at the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow.

As Stanley Badminton Club team captain Doug Clark told Penguin News yesterday, "it's difficult for everyone mentally when before a match even starts you know you're going to get beaten, but the attitude has to be, if you're going to lose - lose well."

"Chase down every point," was the advice he gave his mainly very young team, "give it your all and stay positive, don't give up."

And give it their all the Falklands teams surely did. Not only that, but the Lawn Bowls team, with members ages ranging up into the late 70s, managed three fantastic wins.

Initially, faced with some lawn bowling superpowers England and then Australia, the Falklands Men's Triples team (Barry Ford, Michael Reive and Patrick Morrison) had quite a task ahead of them.

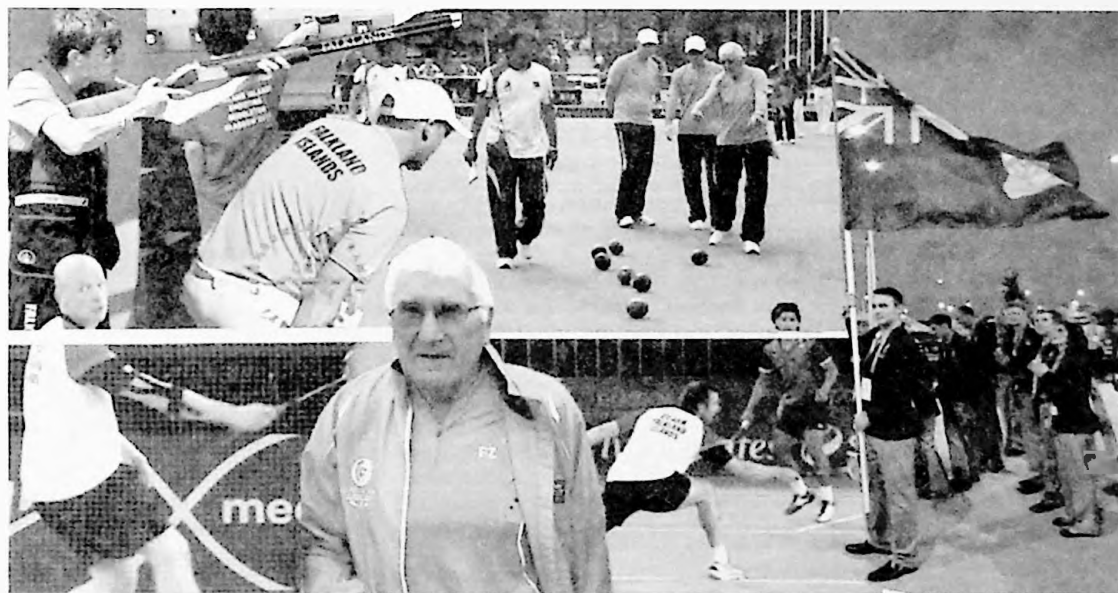

They lost 31-8 and then 23-5, but the gentlemen's skill, utter determination and consistent playing, strongly indicated to supporters there was no need to be downhearted.

This was the case when in their fourth game (their second of the day having gone down 31-5 to Malaysia that Friday morning) they soundly beat Papua New Guinea with a marvellous 17-12.

Just to make themselves absolutely clear, they downed Pakistan the following day 23-15 (fyi Pakistan population 179.2 million) much to the excitement of Falklands supporters in Glasgow, Auckland, Stanley, Worcester and no doubt plenty of other cities and towns around the world.

In the Men's Fours (Barry, Michael, Patrick plus Gerald Reive) they once again faced mind-blowingly hearty opposition, Canada, India and South Africa. While the team lost those matches they did themselves proud picking a fair few points in each game.

Finally however, in what was

described as a, "brilliant and exciting," game by Falkland Islands Overseas Games (FIOGA) Chair Mike Summers the team ended a superb six days with a hard fought win over Namibia 12-11.

Back in the badminton hall some great scores were being achieved in all groups, not least due to weeks of training in Denmark ahead of the Games, where the coach was tasked with individually examining each player's weaknesses. Doug gave examples: "I had to concentrate on movement, agility and shot selection, while Laura and Sonia were coached in movement and Louise in her grip, which was wrong. The girls also needed to work on strength."

Generally though the emphasis was on the whole game and the players worked four hours a day in order to develop their abilities and focus.

The coaching certainly had an impact; in the Emirates Arena in the Men's Singles Doug took 19 and then 14 points off Steve Malcouzanne of the Seychelles, and both Dominic Jaffray and Ross Stewart put in some excellent battles taking points off opponents from Singapore and Ghana respectively.

In the Men's Doubles Dominic and Chris Eynon were more than happy with their points 13 and 11 off the Seychelles pair and on Wednesday Doug and Ross played a truly inspired game against the English number one seeds losing a highly acceptable 21-7 21-7, "a great game," said Doug, and one that he will not be forgetting for a long time.

Laura Minto was no slow coach in her Singles match against Shari Watson of Barbados achieving 12 and then 11 points.

The Mixed Doubles also brought delight to Falklands' supporters, particularly when Doug, and Anna Luxton took 16 points and 12 points off Daniel Sam and Shelia Amasah of Ghana. Chris and Sonia Akhipkina had a very decent match against Pakistan losing 21-7 21-5 as did Dominic partnering Louise Williams against New Zealand, losing 21-9 21-2.

In the team event earlier in the games the Falklands' players had a very tough group, playing Canada, Australia and Wales. They lost 5-0 each time; although against Wales Anna and Doug still nabbed 6 points and then 11 points, and against Australia Doug and Ross brought back the Falklands first double point haul.

Asked to single out some players for their performances Doug said: "Dom and Ross both played some good singles. I admired the way Dom just went about his business, as he progressed he put more pressure on himself, more momentum to continue," all of this despite being matched against opponents, "with more gears than us and can go up a gear as we improve."

Doug paid tribute to Consolidated Fisheries Ltd for sponsoring their time in Denmark. Without that coaching their confidence levels would have been far less he said, noting that the youngest players, Dom, Ross and Louise particularly benefitted from the training, "at that age they're like sponges."

In the shooting, despite some difficult conditions and again up against some rather awesome opposition, personal bests were recorded and in most competitions the teams (Shot Gun, Small Bore and Full Bore) managed to keep themselves off the bottom spot.

At only 16 years old Axel Rodriguez-Reid will have had quite a confidence boost achieving 14th place out of 18 in the Men's Double Trap ahead of shooters from Norfolk Island and Niue.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

WELL it has been quite a week sport wise for Penguin News with the Glasgow Games (front and centre pages), catching up with the Rifle Association's activities at Bisley prior to their participation at the games (page 4) and not forgetting Richard Short achieving a PB at the San Francisco Marathon (page 3). And that is just the tip of the iceberg as the Editor has also kept everyone up-to-date with regular posts on Facebook throughout the entire games.

While the badminton is a fairly easy sport to follow there was a sharp learning curve to be had with the lawn bowls and in all honesty the intricacies of scoring in the different shooting disciplines has long defeated us and the best thing is to ask those in the know for a summary - and this admission from one who frowns upon people who suggest golf is hard to follow.

There have been some highs and lows for the Falklands team and the population have supported with their usual enthusiasm throughout. We didn't expect medals, personal bests are proof that you've given it all you've got, but then we never expected to hear the words "Falklands 23, Pakistan 15," either (best recited in the voice of the BBC's Tim Gudin), but we did, thanks to the lawn bowls team who then went out and recorded two more wins.

Sport aside the Government's public diplomacy drive is the real winner out of the whole exercise. Plenty of positive media coverage for confident and well spoken individuals who demonstrated right to the last moment that the Falklands population might be small in number, but we don't give up without a damn good fight.

For those who may have suffered apologies at our inability to renew online subscriptions, send out early invoices or locate old ones over the last month, you will be glad to hear that Fran our trusty office manager who deals with such complicated matters will be back at front of office from next week. Order and normality will return... well sort of. Don't venture into the news room; that slightly frazzled creature is my boss and not as delicate and sweet natured as she looks.

Admittedly, my constant sharing of travel plans which include lots of horse riding and discovering the cultural delights of two countries, may be somewhat responsible for the slightly manic glint in her eye over the last week. So, as a way of pacifying her (and to assuage my guilt) I've agreed to make a weekly travel contribution to the paper, but for the crossword fans there will be a month or so without a puzzle page. Instead, join me on my travels, it's bound to be a lot of fun. See you in September.

Saul Pitaluga was placed 24th out of 36 in the Olympic Trap, beating competitors from England, Samoa, Jamaica and Northern Ireland amongst others. Saul had a total score of 92 and Shaun Jaffray was 34th out of 36 with 73 points. Winners in this category were first Australia, second England and third India (the countries that picked up most of the medals in the shooting.)

Derek Goodwin had a decent placing in the Queens Prize Individual. He came 25th overall with Gareth Goodwin 31st out of 34. Derek's total score was 374-22v bulls, and to put it in context the English winner, D Luckman scored 401-42v bulls.

In the Small Bore category Nevin Middleton competed in the 10 metre Air Pistol as did son Murray. Nevin achieved 27th place out of 30 with Murray in 29th. Jeremy Poncet shot in the 50 metre Rifle Prone achieving 38th out of 40 places, however most unfortunately it was discovered afterwards that a fold in the target paper had impacted on his score very negatively. Matt Vincent shot in the Olympic Skeet taking 26th place out of 27.

Summing up the tournament FIOGA Chair Mike Summers told Penguin News: "The games have been a great success for the Falkland Islands. In sporting terms our teams have performed well and to the best of their ability. There has been progress in all areas." He said the team had represented the Falklands with distinction, and had been very popular all around.

Certificates for qualified baby sitters

EIGHT students from the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) spent their Wednesday lunch breaks over May to July participating in a Baby Sitters Course, based on the British Red Cross Programme 'Looking After Other Peoples Children'.

The course was run by Health Visitor at KEMH Moyra Pierce assisted by Ali Ford from Social Services and Jill Millsome from FICS.

The subjects covered ranged from First Aid, Accident Prevention, Fire Safety and Dealing with Challenging situations to Child Development.

His Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts presented the students with their certificates on Tuesday evening at a function hosted by Mr and Mrs Roberts.

The students who undertook the course were Demi Greenough, Amanda Hill-McGhie, Ophelia Ellick, Nikita Whistler, Aimee-Jo Henry, Sabrina Camblor-R, Lauren Dent and Laura Lazo.

Falklands nominated for tourism award

THE Falkland Islands was nominated and is a finalist in the Travel Agents Choice Awards sponsored by 'Selling Travel Magazine' in the UK (Previously known as Selling Long Haul Magazine).

The Islands have been nominated for 'Best Destination for Wildlife and Nature'. The awards are 100 per cent decided by travel retailers who will vote for the winner by October 8 2014, explained Falkland Islands Tourist Board Managing Director Tony Mason.

All of the finalists will be announced in the September issue of 'Selling Travel' followed by an industry wide awards party on September 25 at which the Falkland Islands will be represented.

The voting closes on October 8 with the winners announced online on October 15 and awards presented at the 'Selling Travel Awards Ceremony' during World Travel Mart in November.

Clarification on fuel service provision consultation

On 11th July 2014, FIG released a statement regarding the results of the public consultation on fuel service provision. Within that statement, FIG made reference to the number of businesses who had responded to the survey, which inadvertently implied that the private sector had not engaged with the consultation. FIG wishes to clarify that it was not suggesting a disengagement on the part of the private sector, when indeed the private sector have made their interest in fuel provision services very clear, and industry representatives actively participate in working groups on this subject. The reference to the number of private sector respondents was intended to clarify the distinction in statistics.

£500k for new sport field

IN the 2014/15 Budget, FIG agreed to allocate £500,000 towards the development of an all weather sports field with the expectation that the Community would contribute the balance of funding needed to see the project completed.

MLA Elsby said it was hoped it would be built on the existing sports field in front of the Community School. A Steering Group has been formed and they will appoint a Project Manager.

"This type of arrangement has worked extremely well for the new Museum," said MLA Elsby, adding that the intention was that the chosen surface would be suitable for as many sports as possible and for use by the Schools.

Land disposal

FOLLOWING an update to the policy on disposal of Government land in the Gordon Lines area, land will now be issued on 99 year use, "regardless of its intended lease," said MLA Elsby. Companies will need to acquire outline planning permission prior to land being leased.

"Any company that already holds a legal agreement to convert to Freehold will be honoured," said MLA Elsby.

A longer-term policy for all areas of commercial land disposal is to be completed next year once work on the Town Plan and the Infrastructure Development Plan have been completed.

Telecoms review

EXECUTIVE Council has considered recommendations from the Telecoms Working Group looking at ways service could be progressed in the coming years.

MLA Barry Elsby said it was agreed that a detailed strategic review be undertaken and that this be put out to tender.

"This will better inform us of the possibilities available in the market in this rapidly developing field," he said.

New director

THE Falkland Islands Government has announced the appointment of Matt Bassford as the new Director of Central Services, succeeding Simon Fletcher who leaves the Islands this August.

Mr Bassford, who holds a PhD in Environmental Chemistry as well as an MBA from Imperial College London, is currently a director for global advisory firm, RAND, working on projects across maritime, aerospace, defence and environmental sectors. He has previously worked for the Ministry of Defence and the Cabinet Office and has extensive experience in the delivery of capital investment programmes.

Crewman dies after three hours in the sea

A CREWMAN from the fishing vessel Venturer died in the KEM Hospital in Stanley on Monday night after he was rescued from the sea some 70 miles north east of Stanley.

A spokesman from Falklands fishing company Fortuna Ltd said the vessel had reported that a crewman had fallen overboard at 6.24pm and the vessel and eight others in the vicinity, including the fishery patrol vessel Protegit, had immediately manoeuvred and began searching. The authorities ashore were notified and a helicopter from 1654 Flight and a Hercules aircraft from 1312 Flight joined the search shortly thereafter.

Harbour Master Malcolm Jamieson said that weather conditions at the time were poor with a northerly wind of Force 7 to 8 (30-37 knots) and a swell of four to five metres.

He said the Hercules C-130 aircraft was in the area by 8pm and reported seeing a light in the water shortly after. Within 20 minutes of arriving at the scene, the helicopter reported they had the casualty onboard and headed for Stanley at around 9.50pm, landing at 10.15pm.

Mr Jamieson said the crewman still had a weak pulse on arrival in Stanley but unfortunately, "despite the best efforts of the SAR helicopter crew and KEMH staff, they were unable to save him."

Chief Medical Officer Dr Becy Edwards said it was a very sad incident, adding, "survival times in our waters at this time of year, even when wearing a full survival suit and lifejacket, are extremely low."

Dr Edwards said the courage of the RAF Sea King and C-130 crews was to be commended. "That they were able to retrieve the sailor at all is testament to their abilities and bravery. It is comforting to know that in an emergency the RAF SAR team will come to aid those who need help, often putting themselves at huge risk to do so."

No details relating to the specific details on the run up to the or personal details of the casualty were available at the time of going to print, however Mr Jamieson said a report was expected to be submitted in the near future.

The owners of Venturer have thanked everyone who participated in the search and in particular 1654 Flight, 1312 Flight, the Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Department, the staff of the KEM Hospital and the Falkland Islands Company Limited Shipping Agency Department.

Frisco marathon for Falklands runner Richard

ISLANDER Richard Short who pounded his way around the Stanley Marathon in gale force winds in March to retain his status as first Falklands born runner, has completed his fifth marathon, this time on the streets of San Francisco on the weekend.

Achieving a fantastic 211th place out of 6,585 entries the 52 year old builder was also third in the 50-54 year old category for which there were 320 runners.

Running his fifth marathon Richard recorded a personal best of 3:17:42 despite the hilly course which also crosses the Golden Gate Bridge offering the only opportunity to run on the roadbed of the famed bridge.

"The San Francisco Marathon wasn't as easy as I thought it was going to be," Richard told Penguin News.

"Although I trained hard, I hadn't anticipated the hills to be so steep, but the atmosphere was awesome. I chatted to lots of runners along the way, even a serviceman who had served in the Falklands in the 80s.

He said he had tried to hit the three hour mark, "but the steep hills made it too difficult. Maybe next time round."

Morrison/FIG partership

EXECUTIVE Council has viewed the Government's draft response to the report from the Public Accounts Committee on FIG's partnership with Morrison (Falklands) Ltd (MFL), which MLA Elsby described as, "very detailed." He said the Partnership Working Group was working with MFL to enact the changes recommended by the PAC and would report back to ExCo in October. The FIG response to the PAC report will be taken to Legislative Assembly in this month.

Rapid repairs to MV Scout

David Serkeyn, Bow van Weide and Gaston Boré Pineda
TWO specialist teams made repairs to a propeller blade on the South American Atlantic Services (SAAS) chartered vessel MV Scout on the weekend.

On Saturday David Serkeyn from Belgium, along with Bow van Weide from Holland flew in from Brussels, via Madrid, Santiago and Punta Arenas while Gastón Boré Pineda arrived in from Chile.

Mr Serkeyn assisted by Mr van Weide examined the situation early on the July 27 said SAAS General Manager Eugene Hurley, "and made all the necessary calculations and duly carried out the required work."

"It was David's birthday on the day the work was completed, however he asked us not to disclose his age."

Mr Hurley said Paul Ellis supplied, "all the required assistance to ensure the operation went smoothly, George Betts acted in an advisory capacity to SAAS and after sea trials, Gaston certified that all was good."

"Our thanks to the team at SAAS, to Dahiana at International Tours and Travel and FIPASS management and everyone for ensuring that this work was carried out in the shortest possible time, and to the highest of standards."

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

As the two week August recess begins this weekend Planning and Building and Lands Committee meetings have been brought forward to this Friday so that applications are not subject to a delay until after mid-August. Most of us are doing our best to keep the recess 'meeting free', but given the volume of reading we received last week we'll have more than enough work to keep us usefully occupied. The volume of paper leaves me in a particular quandary. I find reading thousands of pages on screen difficult, likewise flicking back to recheck a previous relevant clause, so like many others I prefer to work and make my notes on a paper copy. Unfortunately this writes off a sizeable swathe of trees when multiplied by the number of people who require a copy.

In addition to pre-Exco, Standing Finance Committee and normal weekly meetings I have several portfolio related meetings. Various updates and briefings with the departments for which we hold portfolio responsibility are an important way of keeping up to date and helping shape policy proposals to go to the Assembly as a whole. Constitutionally final decisions are made in Executive Council but generally with the support of a majority of MLAs. As do many elected members the world over, we all experience some disappointments when our individual arguments do not prevail but one has to take a pragmatic view and move on. Choosing which battles to fight and how to do so is something we all learn by experience. It is far better to concede on the less important issues than miss out on the major ones.

I have enjoyed seeing some of the Commonwealth Games coverage and all credit is due to those from the Islands who took part in their various sports. It is interesting, as someone observed that our team was larger than several from countries with much larger populations. For me the most pleasing part was to see new young competitors coming forward and taking training for their events so seriously. Only that sort of dedication will enable them to reach their full potential.

Falklands to Bisley Imperial Meeting

A FALKLAND Islands Rifle Association team of four attended the National Rifle Association Imperial annual meeting last month. The Falklands has long tradition of competing at the event held at the famous Bisley shooting ranges in Surrey. The team of Derek Goodwin, Derek Pettersson, Ken Aldridge and Gareth Goodwin arrived at the hot and sunny site on July 11. Ken told Penguin News that Derek Pettersson shot well, "considering he hasn't shot much in the last couple of years." Derek scored top 60s and 72.5 in the St Georges for his 15 round shoots, 46 and 47 in the 10 round shoots and a creditable three 49s in the team shoots.

Gareth was not quite up to his normal standard but did put some good scores in with 72 in each of the Mail and the St Georges; also two 49s in the team shoots.

"Derek Goodwin shot well with his 15 round shoots in the top 60s and a 71," said Ken. He also shot the only two 50s (from the Falkland four) with 50.5v at 600 yards in the Junior Kalapore and 50.5v at 900 yards in the Junior MacKinnon.

Ken said he, himself was about average with 70s and 71s in the 15 round shoots and 47s and 48s in the 10 round shoots winning the only medal for the Falklands in the Corporation at 1000 yards finishing 31st out of 871 entries.

No one qualified for the Queens 2 or the St Georges 2.

Cut off for the St Georges was 73.9v

D Pettersson 72.5v G Goodwin 72.4v; Aldridge 71.8v; D Good-

Queens 2 cut off was 102.12v
D Goodwin 100.7v; K Aldridge 99.9v; D Pettersson 94.5v; G Goodwin 91.6v.

The Grand Aggregate had an entry of 853

K Aldridge Score 660.53v Position 442nd; D Goodwin 641.39v 616th; G Goodwin 637.40v 629th; D Pettersson 633.34v 652nd.

In the team events they had their trusty coach Eddy Bryce who as always did a good job said Ken.

Battles of Coronel and Falklands in the making

One hundred years ago this week by Mensun Bound

WITH the 100th anniversary of the Battles of Coronel and Falklands approaching, Islander and marine archaeologist Mensun Bound has kindly offered to provide a daily diary of events leading up to the battles. The story relating to Monday to Friday which could not be published due to space constraints can be found on www.penguin-news.com

Saturday 1st August 1914 Germany declares war on Russia

The East Asiatic Squadron:

Germany's maritime defences depended upon its High Sea Fleet, or Hochseeflotte, and like Britain's Grand Fleet, it was based in home waters. Germany's second most powerful force afloat was its East Asiatic Squadron that was under the command of the legendary Vice-Admiral Maximilian Graf (or Count) von Spee. The main vessels under his command were the armoured cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, each were of 20.5 knots and carried eight 8.2-inch guns and six 6-inch guns. In addition there were the light cruisers Emden, Nürnberg and Leipzig, which carried ten 4.1-inch guns and were capable of speeds of between 20 and 21.9 knots. Their base was Tsingtao (now Qingdao) in Kiaochow Bay, an area of mainland conceded to Germany by China in 1898.

Von Spee had left Tsingtao at the end of June, 1914, on a three month cruise of the south-west Pacific. On this day he was at Ponape in the East Caroline Islands. His flag was on Scharnhorst, and with him were the Gneisenau and their supply ship Titania. On this day he received a message from Berlin: 'Imminent danger of war with Great Britain'.

Glasgow:

His Majesty's ship on the South American Station was the light cruiser Glasgow under Captain John Luce. She would become the only British ship to fight at both Coronel and the Falklands and to participate in the final destruction of the Dresden. Although she was fast and modern she packed little that would worry von Spee; her armament consisted of no more than single 6-inch guns situated fore and aft, and a battery of five 4-inch guns along each side. Below the waterline she had two broadside torpedo tubes. According to her log, which survives in the National Archives, her company numbered just 374, comprising officers, 120 seamen, an engine room establishment of 167, 40 non-executive ratings and 27 marines.

The Glasgow's beat was from the Amazon to Cape Horn and the Falkland Islands, but in time of war when the laws of neutrality applied, her only base was the unfortified Falklands. Her principal duty, however, was not to protect these sovereign islands, but rather to guard the vital South American trades, particularly the wheat and meat traffic out of the River Plate.

In the event of war the Falklands were on their own. Being a thousand miles, or four days steaming from the Plate, they were just too far for convenience, so a secret coaling base was set up at the Abrolhos Rocks, a cluster of shoals, reefs and islets about 30 miles off the Brazilian coast in latitude 18° S. They were largely barren and, apart from the light house keepers, uninhabited. As long as they stayed outside the territorial limit, ships were free to use it as an anchorage. The only other coaling anchorage available to the British was the English Banks, which were situated within the mouth of the Plate about 20 miles from Montevideo.

The Glasgow had just completed her second consecutive commission in the South Atlantic and was in Rio preparing to return to England when she was notified of the deteriorating situation between Britain and Germany and that she must make preparations for war. Immediately she began stripping away the woodwork and disembarking all flammables and superfluous equipment. Comforts, such as the mess room armchairs and even the library, were sent ashore followed by the men's civilian clothing and unnecessary personal effects. They did, however, keep the piano which was later given to Stanley and survived for many years in the Gymnasium where the bank is now situated.

On this day Glasgow received a message from the Admiralty to say that Germany was at war with France and that Britain was likely to become involved. Because the ship had been on the point of returning to England, many of the crew had bought Amazonian parrots to take home as pets. After much discussion it was decided that the birds could stay and even, if necessary, go into battle.

In a clear hand an officer on the bridge wrote in the log: 'Hands preparing for war'. There was a keen feeling of excitement throughout the ship, but nobody had any idea that they were on the brink of what Lloyd Hirst, the vessel's intelligence officer, described as 'the greatest and most terrible war that history has yet recorded'.

Dresden:

Dresden, the only German ship to survive the Falklands, arrives St. Thomas to coal before heading back to Germany. On this day she also was informed of the outbreak of hostilities between Germany and France and that she was to carry out cruiser warfare in the South Atlantic. Thus, the mild-mannered, caretaker skipper, Franz von Lüdecke, who had come out from Germany to bring her home, found himself in the role of a fighting captain, something for which he had little appetite and, as the subsequent history of his ship shows, less aptitude.

Sunday 2nd August 1914

Good Hope:

Good Hope left Portsmouth for Halifax to join Vice-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock who was Commander-in-Chief of the North America and Caribbean Stations. She would be his flagship at Coronel. The Good Hope at one time had been the best-known cruiser in the Navy but now she was an obsolete old crock from the last century that would soon have been scrapped were it not for the war. For this reason over 90 percent of her crew were Reservists who had not had any opportunity to train. From now until her destruction at Coronel three months later she only carried out one full-calibre firing exercise. For her to have gone into battle against Scharnhorst and Gneisenau was patently ludicrous to all the admirals, including Cradock, but Churchill did not see it. On this day as she put out into the Solent a Salvation Army band on the Hard at Gosport played 'Nearer my God to Thee'.

Cornwall:

At 14.40, under Captain W. M. Ellerton, the Cornwall left Davenport for Gibraltar to join Admiral Stoddart's Fifth Cruiser Squadron. She had been a training cruiser and so to put herself on a war footing, she had to disembark cadets, remove her schooling facilities and take on additional officers, seamen and marines. At the Battle of the Falklands she would fight an epic battle of total destruction against the Leipzig.

Emden: Of von Spee's many ships the most famous would be the Emden. On this day the Emden was at Tsingtao, where its captain, Karl von Müller, was overseeing the conversion of the North German Lloyd passenger liner, Prinz Eitel Friedrich, into an armed merchant cruiser with ordnance taken from local gun boats. She also would become part of the von Spee saga. Later Müller took the Emden to sea; if there was going to be a war with Britain he did not want to be caught in port.

Give us two minutes...

Sasha Williams

1. What is your most prized possession?

My most prized possession is probably my phone.

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea with?

I would love to have a cup of tea with the Janoskians. It would be one hell of a tea party.

3. What is your most embarrassing or happiest moment?

My happiest moment was finally turning 15!

4. What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

What drives me crazy is the fact that I have to wake up so early for school

5. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

I would make Byron Stewart-Reid Governor of the Falklands because he is just full of facts and an all round funny person.

6. What is your nickname and why?

I don't really have a nickname because my names already short but I usually get called Sash.

7. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be?

The whole world... but I really want to go to Australia.

8. What is your favourite TV programme?

Corrie because it is getting really interesting at the moment.

9. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it?

Ordinary by Ricky Dillon because it's just a really happy and funny song.

10. What is the one, single food that you would never give up?

I would never give up chocolate, it's just too good.

11. What did you want to be when you were a child?

I wanted to be everything really, but especially a ballerina.

12. If you could change something about yourself what would it be?

My height because I'm too small.

Sasha (15) was born in the Falklands and loves watching TV, reading and hanging with her friends.

She recently helped out at Penguin News with some work during the FICS community project day

Thank you dance class attendees

WE'D like to say a huge thank you to everyone who came along to dance classes over the past four months. The funds raised from the door were used to cover the rental of the hall. Profits up to the May Ball were donated to the 1st Falkland Islands Scouts. We have split the profits since the May Ball in two and will be giving half to the Scouts for their continued support providing refreshments and the remainder will go to Acoms. We hope you all enjoyed the evenings as much as we did and we hope to see you again next year.

Waiting

Walking on a distant South Atlantic winter beach, Thin, clear, brilliant sun, lighting the wave-tops,
Igniting the snow, flashing blue, wind-blown.
I saw a gull.

Standing at the sea edge,
Alone, looking out, pacing, uneasy.
I walked the full length of the beach and back
He was still there; I sensed he was waiting

On the second day he was there again,
Looking out, pacing, occasionally looking towards me.
I went closer.
He flew up, screaming, circling,
Not as defence or territory,
But plaintive and despairing, landed, looking out to sea again,
Still waiting

We are all waiting, never sure, without doubt,
For something to happen or not to happen, or simply to let time pass
On the third day he was gone, had he waited too long
Had his longing been torn away on the winter wind, Deep and flowing from the immense and untouchable Antarctic?
I think I will wait a little longer for the waiting to return.

P McD: Me and thirteen tanks

THE Former Director of BFBS, Peter McDonagh, a name known to many Falkland Islanders from his time here as a DJ, has published a book of witty memoirs of life as a Forces Broadcaster.

Peter McDonagh's colourful career with BFBS spanned thirty years, as he entertained troops in outposts such as Singapore, Kathmandu and of course here in the Falkland Islands.

On air as his alter-ego 'pop jockey' and later known as McD for short, Peter rose through the ranks of BFBS from DJ to Director of Broadcasting, until he left the organisation in 1999.

His energetic approach to life and natural raconteur shines through the pages of his pacey memoir, which is branded throughout with the inimitable McD dry wit and honesty.

Even the names of McD's radio shows illustrate his humorous take on life, such as the 1970s slot on BFBS Germany entitled The Great North Rhine West Phailure.

In the book, the audience is introduced to the teenage McD in 'the shadowy underworld of a cold and snow-bound West Berlin in the late sixties; a world where espionage is king' and where 'He, and only 13 British tanks, are in fact Cold War warriors'.

The path of McD, who is described as a 'subversive, saboteur, soubrette, and star', leads him to the BFBS studios via a 'gentleman's third' from St John's College, Oxford.

But once he was ensconced behind the microphone, McD's mix of high jinks and genius made for innovative content for Forces listeners and their families.

Richard Astbury MBE, a former colleague of McD, wrote the foreword to Me and Thirteen Tanks. He sums up Peter's extensive contribution to BFBS:

"As P McD worked his way around the world with BFBS Radio, he created concepts and ideas that had never been done or even dreamt of before. Yes, some people have mentioned the word 'eccentric' in connection with him and his schemes, but with that eccentricity came constant creativity."

This passionate broadcaster wrote the book while fighting his own battle with terminal cancer. Typically, he is tackling this enemy with the help of his lifelong friend - humour. As a result, all profits from McD's book will go to Macmillan Cancer nurses.

Nicky Ness, Controller BFBS Radio, said: "Peter McDonagh has been hugely influential in BFBS's history and left an enduring legacy, still as much a part of our professional family today as he was when Director of Broadcasting during the 90s."

"There never was such a quick and clever wit, or quite such a personality Forces broadcaster as McD. I know there's a generation of military audiences who will remember his programmes with great fondness and will undoubtedly enjoy this literary scamper through the years."

Me and Thirteen Tanks is published by CreateSpace and is available as a Kindle book, or a paperback, from £5.99 on Amazon.

Motors merger

THE Falkland Island Company and Turbo Tim Motors have announced a merger between Falklands 4x4 and Turbo Tim Motors; the new combined business will be known as Turbo Tim @ Falklands 4x4.

All garage services will remain as Turbo Tim Motors now with Tim Francis taking responsibility for both Parts and Service within The Falklands 4x4 operation. James Bates will remain Manager of Sales and Vehicle Rentals at Falklands 4x4.

All of the current Turbo Tim staff made up of eight full and part time colleagues will be retained along with all the staff at Falklands 4x4.

Insurance listed excellent

CARIBBEAN Alliance, the insurance company represented locally by the Falkland Islands Company Ltd (FIC) has received a 'further financial strength upgrade.'

FIC Insurance manager Eva Jaffray explained that A M Best Company, the Independent Rating Agency based in the United States, had announced for the second consecutive year the further upgrading of the Financial Strength rating of Caribbean Alliance Insurance Company Ltd to A (Excellent) Stable.

Caribbean Alliance Managing Director, Ernest Letby confirmed they are very pleased to have been awarded this upgrade, adding, "it distinguishes us as a leader within the General Insurance Market."

The Head Office of the Company is at the Corner of Newgate and Cross Streets, St. John's, Antigua.

Sea truck parts on the way

Updating the Transport Advisory Committee on modifications to the Concordia Baby sea truck, Workboat Services manager Adam Cockwell said the vessel's manufacturers Alnmaritec were finalising the production of the parts needed and had indicated they would have the parts ready for shipping to the Falklands in early October.

He said the intention was then for a technician from Alnmaritec to fly to the Islands and carry out the modifications during October.

SM recruitment still ongoing

THE recruitment process for a new Senior Magistrate is ongoing, however Interim Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds has agreed to extend her contract to enable the process to be completed.

The previous Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley completed his two and a half tenure at the end of April this year.

Team Falklands has plenty to shout about

By David Blackmore
for Penguin News

THEY came, they saw and while they haven't been all conquering in Glasgow, the Falkland Islands' Commonwealth Games team had a few things to shout about.

While millions of people from across the Commonwealth tune into the final couple of days of action, the largest-ever Falklands' squad sent to the Games are now gearing up to leave the Scottish city having secured a couple of wins in lawn bowls as well as scoring well in both badminton and shooting.

Did the 24 Falkland Islanders feel under any pressure to perform well and even possibly win a medal at the Games? "No, not really," said badminton team captain Doug Clark. "We were all fairly relaxed when we arrived and determined to just get on and do the best we can."

It was the 37 year old's fourth Commonwealth Games and the Northumbria University student is now targeting the 2018 Games in Australia. "I am going to be 41 so I will revert to doubles and hopefully the Gold Coast Games will be my final Games," he continued.

He added: "From a playing point of view, the badminton hall at these Games was difficult for us to get used to because it was such a big area with a drift and finding your range and length with your shots was tough. However, we got there in the end and the performances got better with each match."

"Coming into this tournament, I felt in reasonably good shape. Five months ago, I had knee surgery so I was pretty happy just to be here playing and the highlight, for me, has been competing with this great bunch of people and seeing how our players have progressed."

Doug was joined by Dominic Jaffray, Chris Eynon, Laura Minto, Anna Luxton, and Sonia Arkhipkina, while Ross Stewart and Louise Williams made their Commonwealth Games debuts.

Sofly-spoken Louise admitted she had been walking around the athletes' village with a huge smile on her face throughout the Games. "It's been an incredible experience," she beamed. "It's been like a whole different world compared to anything I've experienced before. I was expecting it to be a lot more serious but, away from the court, everyone has been really friendly and it's just a comfortable place to be."

The 15 year old, who is currently studying for her GCSEs on the Falklands, said in the build up to the Games she had thrown herself into the routine of eating, sleeping and training around her school work. She added: "Would I do it all again? I wouldn't hesitate to put my name forward because it has been an amazing experience."

The same goes for Chris Eynon, 36, who took part in his second Commonwealth Games. He said: "It felt a bit like a home Games for me as I've been living in Glasgow for the best part of five years now. My wife was born and bred here and my two sons were also born in Glasgow so it felt like a home setting in that regard, but I was here to represent the Falklands and do as well as I can."

The civil engineer, who also appeared at the Manchester Games in 2006, prepared for the competition with support from his Scottish friends at the two West Scotland badminton clubs he is a member of as well as hiring a coach once a week in the build up to the Games. "I'm pleased with how I played," he continued. "Dom and I played together very little before we took to the court to take on Canada. We had a good game against them and built on that with a good performance in our second game against Wales."

He added: "I really enjoyed playing in front of the large crowds. In Manchester, I felt tense but I've been more relaxed at these Games. There was also a lot of support for the Falklands in the crowd which really helped me settle in our matches."

A short distance away from the Emirates Arena that hosted the badminton competitions was the picturesque Kelvingrove Lawn Bowls Centre, which was the venue for a four-strong team of Gerald Reive, Michael Reive, Patrick Morrison and Barry Ford who took to the greens in the lawn bowls event. Unfortunately fifth team member George Paice was injured and unable to play.

Father-and-son duo Gerald and Michael joined Patrick and Barry in the men's fours while Patrick, Michael and Barry made up the men's triples. With the exception of Barry, who is from Worcestershire, England, the Falkland Islands team all live in Auckland, New Zealand.

It was the second time the Falkland Islands has competed in the lawn bowls tournament after Gerald and Paice competed four years ago in Delhi but for 77 year old Gerald, it was his final Commonwealth Games.

"It's always marvellous to represent the Falkland Islands," he said. "I didn't really expect to be starting my international bowls career at the age of 73 but it all fell into place after George was asked by Andrew Brownlee (chef de mission for the Falklands) to help add lawn bowls to the list of sports the Falklands could compete in at the Games and we teamed up. However, this will be my last Games because I will be 81 when Australia hosts the next Games and I worry something will go wrong and I'll let the team down."

Gerald, who has also represented the Falklands at football, moved to Auckland in 1958 from the Islands in search of work. He, along with wife and lawn bowls team manager Shirley and son Michael, hope their participation in Glasgow will inspire the next generation of players in the Falklands even though there is no lawn bowls green on the islands.

Michael, who has never set foot in the Falkland Islands, added: "How often do you get the chance to compete in an international competition with your own father? I have been playing bowls with my father for 24 years, but to be in a huge competition like this is incredible."

"We were realistic enough. We knew we weren't going to win gold or anything but we managed to get wins over Papua New Guinea and Pakistan and it's been an incredible experience for me."

As for competing for a nation he has never been to, the 42 year old said: "We've got a big Falkland Islands community in New Zealand and I have been around Falkland Islanders all my life so I do feel like a part Falkland Islander."

In Dundee, a two-hour drive away from the athletes' village, some 11 shooters competed at events at the Barry Buddon Shooting Centre for the Falkland Islands.

Derek and Gareth Goodwin took part in the full bore shooting events for the Falklands while the experienced Saul Pitaluga competed in the trap discipline. Michael Goss, Jeremy Poncet, and father and son duo Murray and Nevin Middleton competed in the 50m prone and 10m air pistol events.

There were also Commonwealth Games debuts for Matthew Vincent, 25, who took part in the skeet competition, as well as Shaun Jaffray and Axel Rodriguez Reid, who participated in the double trap event.

The 25 year old management consultant started shooting when he was 17 after going on a sixth form outing. "I felt like it came naturally to me and I stuck with it and it snowballed from there," he said.

Matthew, however, was disappointed by his performance in the skeet competition that saw him hit 76 targets out of 125. "I walked away wishing I had trained a bit harder," he explained. "The Commonwealth Games is on a different level in so many ways to the Island Games and it was quite daunting for me."

"It was great to shoot with the greats but I think the pressure got to me in front of such a large crowd and with so many cameras watching my every move – or at least I felt as though they were."

He added: "I never thought I was going to win gold but my aim was to not finish last and I didn't, I finished second to last."

Before heading out to compete in the Games, Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association chairman Mike Summers urged the athletes to represent the Falklands with "dignity and friendship with a strong competitive spirit".

And as the squad prepares to bid farewell to Glasgow and jet back to their homes across the world, they can hold their head up high knowing they have done just that.

The Falkland Islands Company

TT Motors

The Falkland Islands Company and TT Motors (Turbo Tim) are pleased to announce a merger of their two businesses. The new combined business will be known as Turbo Tim @ Falklands 4x4, and Tim Francis will assume responsibility for both the Service and Parts areas of the business, whilst James Bates will retain responsibility of both vehicle sales and rentals.

All of the eight existing Turbo Tim colleagues will be retained as part of the merger, along with all of those currently employed at Falklands 4x4.

Tim Francis commented "I would like to thank all my customers for their support over the last 10 years since I began TT Motors, and sincerely hope that you will continue to support me and my team in our new venture."

Kevin Ironside, Retail Director of FIC, said he looked forward to welcoming the new staff to the 4x4 team and that the decision for the parties to join forces had been taken as both wanted to expand their current businesses and saw greater opportunity together within an iconic brand like Land Rover, recognised and respected the world over.

Both sites at Crozier Place and at Lookout Industrial Estate will trade for a period of time whilst buildings are planned and built within the current Falklands 4x4 site.

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE (WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
 Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
 Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:
 Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

Vikki's art shines at FICS Sue Whitely

Eben Shepherd - Year 8

THE Falkland Islands Community School had a busy weekend hosting both the annual school fete and the Sue Whitely Exhibition this Saturday.

The Art and Design display showed incredible talent with a wide range of themes including aspects of landscapes, photography and street art.

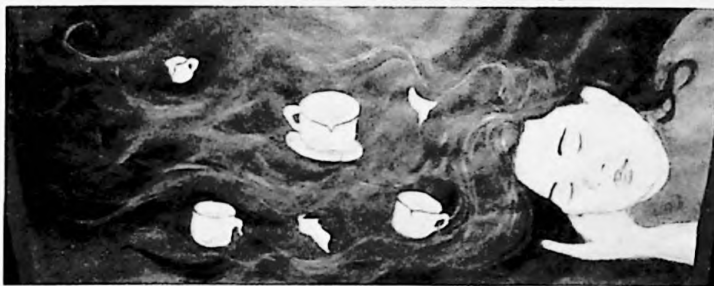

First place for the Romeo Pauloni prize went to Tiphane Reid and Daphne Gomez-Reid picked up first for the Hillary Pauloni prize. As well as receiving first place in his class for Art and Design Christopher Clarke achieved the Endeavor Cup for his GCSE coursework.

However, the most significant prize was awarded to Vikki Williams, who received the Spinning Wheel trophy as well as the first in Year 11, first in Key Stage 4 (Years 10 and 11), and the Key Stage 4 Excellence Cup for her astonishing GCSE piece.

The school fete was held upstairs in FICS exhibiting a number of activities such as throwing flour balloons at teacher, a treasure map, mini golf and a jumble sale. The candy floss machine, managed by John Carlin, was extremely popular and was just a small part of the wide range of cakes and biscuits on sale. Overall, the fete raised £870 for the school.

Responsibilities

1. Safety Quality and Environmental Supervision
 Actively lead the Engineering function in maintaining and enforcing safety standards as required by statute and in accordance with the Company's safety policies. Ensuring you comply with all safe working practices. Quality and Environmental management of our works is the cornerstone of Galliford Try's strategy. Senior Engineers will actively lead this initiative and will provide the environment, equipment, support and monitoring to continuously promote this ideal at all levels within on our Projects.
2. Setting Out and Engineering Control
 Co-ordinate site setting out activities to satisfy contractual requirements, delegating or carrying out setting out as necessary. Ensure standard Company procedures are adopted in carrying out setting out operations, and that effective methods of communication are used in transmitting information to operatives and subcontractors
3. Site Management
 Assist the site management team in the initial site set up, actively utilising the Company Business Management systems and procedures. Rigorously apply effective planning techniques, methods analysis and controls to ensure the most effective and continuous use of the Company resources.
4. Financial Controls
 Assist the Project Manager and Financial Controller by compiling data to maximise cash collection and profitability. Participate in the implementation of productivity monitors and financial controls on the performance of our operations.
5. Staff and Operative Development
 Assist the Project Manager in planning, co-ordinating, maintaining and developing staff and operatives to effectively undertake current and prospective workloads. Participate and actively encourage both Company training courses and on the job training. Monitor and record individual performances encouraging and disciplining as and when necessary.
6. Communication
 Liaise and co-ordinate with our Stanley office to improve all levels of communication so as to benefit and develop overall Company objectives.
7. Marketing
 Assist in establishing and maintaining links with clients, determine customer satisfaction levels and develop contact points for post contract marketing. Actively participate in generating a wider client base and produce feedback data to the Regional Manager.
8. General Discipline
 General levels of conduct and minimum performance standards are described in the Conditions of Service booklet. It is incumbent upon all members of staff to maintain standards of discipline that accord with the Conditions of Service.

To apply, please e-mail your CV to Lisa Jaffray @ mfl@morrison.co.uk direct tel: 22253

Closing Date: 22nd August 2014

Culvert fails but roads regularly inspected

ALTHOUGH impossible to mitigate all damage caused by extreme weather and flood events to the road network, it is regularly inspected, and a programme of culvert replacement is due to start in the upcoming season confirmed Deputy Director of Public Works Colin Summers.

A culvert failure occurred at Kings Creek on the Salvador road causing a significant hole in the road at the end of July.

East farmer Nick Pitaluga informed PWD of the issue on the morning of Wednesday July 30 said Mr Summers.

"This culvert had been picked during our inspections as being in poor condition and was highlighted as a priority replacement within the upcoming culvert replacement contract. It is thought that the failure was sped up by the extreme weather condition and subsequent flooding events which occurred over the night of the 29th and early hours of the 30th."

The road network, required to access the failed culvert, was inspected on July 31 and deemed unsuitable for the transport of a new culvert and appropriate plant to carry out the required repair/replacement. Local contractor Jan Clarke was then contracted to temporarily fill the hole and make the area safe. He was also instructed to cone off the failed area, "to ensure no one runs on it," said Mr Summers.

The road will remain impassable to anything other than light vehicles until the culverts are replaced.

Mr Summers added: "Where possible, PWD Highways department do try to carry out checks on the network after such events. However resources are limited and therefore we would ask the public to be extra vigilant on the roads during and after periods of heavy rain and snow and that they report any significant damage to the Highways department at the earliest opportunity."

Sapper loop

THE community will have the chance to give their thoughts on the development of the third loop (phase 5) of the Sapper Hill development. There is to be consultation in relation to key issues including plot size, density of development, road layout, amount and type of greenspace, access to the Common and potential minor amendment to the Common boundary.

Coventry film

THE sinking of the Royal Navy warship HMS Coventry in 1982 is to be dramatised on film in a £10 million movie blockbuster being co-produced by Glasgow-based production company Crab Apple Films.

Set for release next year, Destroyer is based on the 2007 memoirs of Coventry's Captain David Hart Dyke, who will be played in the film by Paul Bettany.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

IT seemed a little ironic that in the mess of papers currently (oh OK always) decorating my desk, sat one report this week noting unfinished road works last season, next to another outlining a policy for additional roads to non-agricultural destinations.

Ironic but perhaps not entirely ridiculous; there is an aim after all to develop the Camp economically and in terms of population, so any ideas that might ultimately assist that should rightly be investigated and of course we can't forget the adage regarding speculation and accumulation.

At the same time it wasn't surprising that reaching decisions on the recommendations was no easy task for the Transport Advisory Committee. The old proverb is all very well, but at a time when MLAs frequently voice the view that we can't do too much in case there's no oil money, pumping cash into an object that could cost £100,000 per kilometre, and particularly one that might result in a slightly smoother trip to visit the wildlife (for example) but no extra jobs, no more people in Camp and minimal increased profit to the business owner, could be considered less than prudent.

As any experienced investor will tell you there's sometimes a rocky relationship between risk and reward, but in this case investment could be creeping too far over the wild side of the risk spectrum.

With Argentina in the debt doldrums at that end, and MLAs on recess at this end and the Commonwealth Games finished at the other, it all suddenly seems eerily quiet on the news front.

Regarding the first, the silence is almost certainly the calm before the storm - it's inevitable that the Falklands will be top of the list when that government is required to distract its voters from increased economic difficulties and with their general election on the horizon it's likely to be a double whammy, so hold on to your hats.

Regarding the last, it was certainly a lot of fun keeping up with the goings on of our gang of athletes both young and old. Despite no medals it was clear that the majority gave their best both in the lead up to and during the event. If I have one word of advice as a member of the public watching from home however, despite the fact that 'not coming last' might realistically count as an achievement, please, please don't ever describe it as your actual aim. It doesn't just sound defeatist it sounds like an excuse. Your aim is to do the best that you possibly can and nobody doubts that's exactly what you will do.

No decision on roads to non agricultural destinations

THE proposed policy for construction of roads to non-agricultural destinations was discussed at the Transport Advisory Committee last week. Members were in agreement on most of the conditions proposed, however, it was felt others needed further discussion and amendments.

Members largely agreed with the proposal that roads only be applicable to established businesses as they would be more likely to be successful and the road would put to good use.

There was a concern however, that smaller companies, which could benefit the national economy, would be excluded.

The proposal that the cost of constructing the road be split equally between FIG and the private sector business also drew debate. Many members felt that funding for a non-agricultural road should depend on other variables such as the capacity of the particular business requiring the road. It was decided that finances should be based on more of a sliding scale that would depend on the economic benefits of the road.

The condition of whether roads became public highways was left for further discussion however it was noted that as public money was involved then the public should be able to use it.

With this condition undecided the question of whether FIG would take responsibility for maintaining the roads was also left open ended as it would depend on the extent of the public's use of the road.

Other conditions discussed comprised:

- FIG to allocate a dedicated annual budget for those roads.
- Applicants being required to demonstrate the economic benefit of the road is equal or greater than the initial FIG financial construction contribution to the cost of the road over 25 years.
- Roads to be built by the private sector.
- Applicants will be required to demonstrate that the proposed construction will meet the aims and objectives of the Economic Development Strategy, Rural Development Strategy and Tourism Development Strategy.
- Applications related to tourism must be fully compliant with the schemes and initiatives of the Falkland Islands Tourist Board.
- Applicants to include an environmental impact assessment in roads to non-agricultural destinations application.

Who's who in government

Response Times

Unfortunately we continue to have some unexpected staff absences and do not expect to be back up to full capability in the immediate future. This pressure on resources has meant a delay in issuing responses and processing work.

Individual Tax Returns

The tax returns are processed in order of receipt and we have a large number of returns which were received near this year's deadline. We have been receiving calls from taxpayers to ask when their return will be processed. Our staffing pressures have impacted on the amount of resources available for processing tax returns and we ask that the public allow us more time to respond, at least 6 weeks.

Thank you for your patience.

Falklands Framed amazing response from a host of Islands' artists

A CONTEMPORARY art project 'Falklands Framed' the brainchild of Stanley artist Julie Halliday, has had an amazing response from the artists invited to participate she told Penguin News this week.

Mrs Halliday, owner of Studio 52 Degrees, explained that in order to promote the appreciation of Falklands art and artists, "and to celebrate our identity and culture," she planned a fund raising art event that would, "bring together the many talented creative people from the Falklands, including young new emerging artists and those that have been around for a while."

All of this will culminate in an iconic exhibition.

Forty artists from around the Falklands or connected with the Falklands, have been asked to get creative. They have been invited to use their artistic flair to decorate or embellish a supplied 400mm x 400mm frame. All been given the same frame, so the same starting point.

The artists were asked to use a Falklands theme and their favourite medium, "the choices are endless," explained Julie. Medium ideas include painting, drawing, stitching, felting, wool, resin, wood, typography, polymer clay, paper craft, paper mache, found objects, fabric, glass, photography and a mixed media solution.

They don't have to stay within the lines of the frame and they can choose to get creative with both the frame and what is inside, or just the frame itself.

Julie Halliday works on her piece for Falklands Framed

The finished works of art will be completed by September 30 and will be exhibited for one week in the building on Philomel Street (formerly the Kandy Kabin) in late October or early November (dates to be confirmed) and hopefully simultaneously online.

The art will be auctioned off during the week's exhibition with all the money raised going to the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund.

Mrs Halliday said: "I am really excited about this project which is already proving to be diverse, collaborative and as much of a show-off of Falklands' talent as I can make it."

A few of artists involved are Griz Cockwell, Tony Ellis, Hattie Kilmartin, Andi Neate, Ian Strange and Duffy Sheridan.

Ten frames have also been given to young artists at the Community School in order for them to get creative too. These will also be auctioned off.

Julie said: "I am really pleased to be getting principle sponsorship from Byron Marine, who I believe were one of the original supporters when the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund was established."

Roads: A look back over the last year

THE quantity of crushed material produced for capping roads on East Falkland increased from the projected 27,000 tonnes to 33,600 tonnes (30 per cent increase) in the 2013/14 year, reported Roads Engineer Simon Catton to the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) last week.

In an information paper Mr Catton said the cost per tonne had increased from £7.04 to £8.43 due to significant overburden removal being needed. But he said, the cost should reduce again this year.

Other works on the road network had included eight cattle grids on the East completed just £190 over budget, while the six grids on West Falkland came in £4,000 over budget. Mr Catton said this was mainly due to the grids being moved to more visible locations which had required extra fencing.

West road capping had fallen just under a kilometre short of the anticipated 4km at a total cost of £186,084 (£62,028 per km). This was significantly more than expected due to a significant underestimation of the long haulage costs and the need to install Geotextiles in larger than anticipated lengths to complete the work, explained Mr Catton.

On the East a late start in the season had resulted in only 4.5km of rebuild on the Port Louis road against a target of 12km.

Private sector interest had been sought for three to five year contracts for road works including capping, rebuilding, haulage and culvert replacements across the road network, said Mr Catton. It was currently anticipated that PWD Highways would undertake the lead role on crushing and capping of the MPA road and North Camp rebuild (with haulage by contractors), as well as all town works and grading, he concluded.

Snowy swim total

A TOTAL of total of £1,492.02 was raised from the Midwinter Swim reports organiser Katrina Stephenson.

Three charities will benefit, the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund, The Seaman's Mission and Combat Stress. The green disks in the West Store came to £262.02 and money made on the day of the Midwinter Swim with all expenses taken out was £1,230 making a grand total of £1,492.02.

Each charity will receive £497.34 each.

Katrina said: "A huge thank you to everyone who donated, took part in the swim and helped in any way to make the day such a huge success."

Fines for excessive speeding

DANIEL Omar Carcamo Carcamo (31) was fined a total of £435 in court this week and issued a 28-day disqualification from driving having admitted to excessive speeding on June 24.

Mr Carcamo originally pleaded guilty by post however, the Senior Magistrate's Court was adjourned on the July 22, to allow for the defendant to attend, and the charge was transferred to the Summary Court before the Justices of the Peace on Tuesday. Mr Carcamo was issued a £350 fine and £85 to pay in prosecution costs.

Michael Kenneth Summers (62) pleaded guilty by post and was fined a total of £485 for speeding of 50mph on a 40mph road.

On Thursday July 3 Mr Summers overtook a police vehicle at what seemed an excessive speed near Bluff Cove. The officers attempted to catch up with Mr Summers, but could not exceed 54mph due to the limit on their vehicle and Mr Summers began to pull ahead.

The officers pursued Mr Summers' vehicle for 10.3 miles until Philomel Street where he stopped. Mr Summers admitted to driving over 50mph. He was fined £400 and £85 in prosecution costs on Tuesday and his licence was endorsed.

Passenger in the vehicle Leonard Ford (51) entered a guilty plea by post and was ordered to pay a total of £235 for not wearing a seatbelt.

Hannah Collier (18) was ordered to pay a total of £485 after admitting to speeding on the MPA road on Saturday June 28.

Inquest opens into crewman's death

AN inquest into the death of Santiago Moreira Fona opened in the Coroner's Court before Her Majesty's Coroner Peter Judge on Tuesday. Mr Moreira Fona, a crewman from fishing vessel Venturer, died in the KEM Hospital in Stanley last week, after he was rescued from the sea some 70 miles north of east Stanley.

The inquest will continue at a later date.

Miss Collier was found driving at 55mph on a 40mph road travelling from Stanley to Darwin.

The road conditions were described to be wet and greasy on a dry, dark evening. Miss Collier was stopped by police near Beckside Farm and two passengers were found to be in the vehicle, including a small child. Miss Collier was fined £400 with £85 prosecution costs to be paid over 28 days and her licence was endorsed.

Stuart Dave Duncan (45) was fined £435 after admitting to speeding on Ross Road.

On Tuesday July 15 Mr Duncan was found to be driving at a speed of 35mph in a 25mph zone, in wet and foggy weather conditions.

Mr Duncan apologised to the court and said he did not notice his excessive speed.

Although there were no passengers the offence took place in the centre of Stanley and as such was considered a risk to the public.

Mr Duncan was fined £350 and £85 in costs and his licence was endorsed.

News of planning and building

NOBLE Energy has been granted permission by the Planning and Building Committee to lift and recover sediment near the Temporary Port Facility approach area. This will occur to an approximate depth of 0.5 metres across a maximum area of 2,500 sq mtrs (100 mtrs x 25 mtrs).

The lift and recovery activities will take place within the lift radius of the current TDF deck crane. A maximum total of 1,250 cubic mtrs of sediment will be lifted from the seabed using the deck crane with a clamshell bucket attachment.

Andrez Short was given permission to divide a plot in two at 9 Pioneer Row, demolish the existing garage and shed and build a single storey dwelling south of existing house as well as build a new garage and four off street car parking for both properties. Tony and Teresa Smith were given permission to remove a mobile home and build a B&B at 31 Davis Street subject to certain conditions.

Imogen Didlick, Dahiana Burucua and Felicity Sawle were given permission to construct one storey dwellings at 54, 4 and 7 Rex Hunt Road respectively.

Permission given for dredging at the temporary port facility

FIC Ltd had permission approved to replace an existing fence at 28 Ross Road and Julie Clarke was given permission subject to conditions to add two extensions to the existing building at 11 Racecourse Road.

Sharon Jaffray's application to build a sun lounge at 7 Jersey Road was granted as was Tony and Teresa Smith's conservatory and decking at 33A Davis Street.

Nick Davis offered no plans with his application to site a mobile home at 3 Mountain Berry Road so the application was deferred. Karl and Sian Nightingale and Fiona Wallace-Nannig were granted permission to erect poly-tunnels at 1 Sullivan Street and Tigh Na Mara, Moody Brook Road respectively and Tony Mc-Mullen to erect a solar tunnel.

Geoff Porter and Roger Edwards had applications approved to site a container and keep a container at 3 Sullivan Street and 8 Sullivan Street and Stuart and Lilian Wallace granted permission to temporarily site two containers for a maximum of one year subject to a Lands Committee decision.

Renewal of temporary planning permission for the siting of 10 portakabin type units to house the FIG Tax and Environmental Departments at Malvina Gardens was granted.

An application from FIC to construct a three bay garage at Crozier Place was granted subject to conditions, and outline planning permission was given to Stanley Services Ltd for erect a new garage/service centre warehouse to replace an existing structure at the depot.

Stanley Services was denied permission for additional access onto the Stanley Bypass; this was denied for road traffic safety reasons.

Permission was given to South Atlantic Marine Services for an extension of the existing jetty at the Boathouse area.

IJS get animated

Dean Ellis as a 'Minion'

THE Infant/Junior School Camp Education end of year show was performed to highly appreciative audiences on Tuesday and Wednesday in the Town Hall.

Every year group took part with each class performing a different song from an animated film.

The show began with two songs by the school choir and was followed by several endearing dances by Foundation Stage 2 including 'I want to be like you' from The Jungle Book.

Between the colourfully dressed Year 4s performing 'Beautiful Creatures' from Rio and the lively Year 5s singing 'Happy' from Despicable Me 2 the show was thoroughly enjoyable and exciting.

The Hosts

FS2 dance to 'Heigh Ho' from Snow White and Year 5 sing 'Happy' from Despicable Me 2

Year 6 performing 'Everything is Awesome' from the Lego Movie and 'Beautiful Creatures' from Rio by Year 4

Give us two minutes...

1. What is your most prized possession?
My bikes or my computer probably
2. What is the best (or worst) piece of advice you have ever been given?
Whilst out mountain biking: "I reckon you have enough speed to make that jump" (9 months of physio later...)
3. If you had a motto, what would it be?
It's not about what you know, it's about who you know!
4. What is your most embarrassing moment?
My mother showing my entire school an old babygrow I used to wear
5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be?
A mountain bike trails centre/ bike workshop parts shop
6. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition?
Synchronised swimming (again)
7. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be?
I'd love to travel around Canada with my bike
8. What would people be surprised to learn about you?
I've been in both a professional ballet and a professional opera
9. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently?
The Lego Movie!
11. Who would play you in a film about your life?
Joseph Gordon-Levitt
12. What did you want to be when you were a child?
Bigger than my sisters!

Nathaniel came to the Falklands in December 2013 after working as a bike mechanic in the UK. He enjoys messing with his camera/ anything gadgety, playing with his nephew, spending time with friends and family and has a new-found love of synchronised swimming.

A friendly word from the west

I AM a citizen of the Argentine Republic and I outright sympathise with the British and indeed Falkland Islander position on the supposed 'conflict'. Not only was I raised this way but I have always thought the matter a simple case of sense of justice: individuals should not be forced in general; but also in particular they should not be coerced to live under a foreign and particularly undesirable government!

Firstly I would like to apologise in the name of all reasonably-minded Argentines for the continued, sustained, relentless harassment that our government is every year inflicting on your individual sovereignty, and by that I obviously mean on the individual rights of every islander who would like to remain British unmolested. The fact that these literally outlandish claims are backed by the United Nations and a sizeable portion of the Argentine population only makes the situation more despicable. I do hope you don't take Argentine claims seriously, despite what has happened in the past.

Then I'd like to thank the Armed Forces of the United Kingdom, the British Government, and especially the late Baroness Thatcher for her determination and the soldiers who shed their blood for a just cause that incidentally allowed me to be born under a democratic government. For it was the folly of the war and the prompt British reaction that contributed greatly to the stepping down of the Fascistic dictatorial military junta that controlled, and bled Argentina at that time. How a country that had temporarily suspended habeas corpus deemed it morally justifiable to invade a portion of the country that invented the concept of habeas corpus is beyond rational or even humane understanding. It was indeed an affront to human dignity.

Finally I would like to offer the concept that reparations are due. The invasion was utterly unjustified and obviously unprovoked, and many Argentines know this. The invasion left the Falklands, once one of the most peaceful territories on Earth, tainted by minefields. This constitutes an ongoing imposition from the Argentine Government upon the Islands, as you now have pieces of land locked to development or whatever use you would want to give them. It might not be good diplomacy to demand reparations, I know for a fact that the United Kingdom seeks good relations with Argentina to a fault, but my sense of fairness tells me that the Argentine taxpayer should be fiscally responsible for the however costly removal of all land mines and unexploded shells left during those disgraceful months in 1982. I have to pay a 21 per cent VAT each time I purchase any product or service and I am certain that the money is not being responsibly spent. If at least some of that capital went to help repair a historic injustice I would be more than glad to pay for it, and so would many Argentines, perhaps more than you would imagine (as we can't be too vocal about our stance given the mob mentality that pervades Argentina).

I would like to leave you with just one curious note: Most of the earth's landmass had been already inhabited by humans before the age of discovery. Most but not all: the Falkland Islands are such an exception. Unlike Argentina, which had a native american population that was invaded and colonised by the Incans, Spaniards, and then internally by the Argentine Federal Government and European settlers; the Falkland Islands had never been reached, even less settled, by any population group before various Western Europeans sighted them and the British settled them. If there was one territory on earth that posed no question whatsoever as of who are the original, "native", population that would be the Falkland Islands.

This letter is written to all Falkland Islanders and I give permission to reproduce it entirely or partially in any either governmental or private English language publication.

Most kind regards from your neighbour to the West.

Your questions answered

QARE the electrics/wiring in all government housing regularly checked and maintained? If yes, how often does this happen?

Answer kindly provided by PWD's Building Maintenance Coordinator Martyn Barlow MCMI

A Despite the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 and the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 not being statutory requirements here in the Falkland Islands we do adhere to best practice.

PWD's electrical maintenance with regards to installation testing mirrors that laid down in BS 7671:2008 (amended to 2011) The Requirements For Electrical Installations (also known as the Seventeenth Edition) and the Inspection and Testing Guidance Note 3 (incorporating the above stated amendment to the wiring regulations). Neither of these documents are statutory requirements in the UK but they are the standard that competent persons (electricians) work to and is a requirement of the PWD Electrical Services contract.

The guidance laid down is that rented accommodation is subjected to periodic testing (and condition report) at a frequency not greater than 5 years, or at change of tenancy. If any electrical work is undertaken in a government house (or building) that alters the electrical circuitry (for example the installation of an extra light fitting, cooker extractor point or a socket) then our contractors are required to conduct a minor works test and submit to PWD the certificate on completion, similarly if a consumer unit is changed then an installation test certificate is required from the contractor under taking the work.

The testing covers from the electrical supply meter to the final circuits which are the large cables coming out from the meter into the consumer unit to the plugs or light fittings.

Members of the public are advised to check the Trading Standards Institute website for items on the recall list which maybe placed their due to a fault with that particular model, an example would be the Hotpoint EOS platform dishwashers manufactured between January 2008 and July 2010 and important safety notice was issued due to risk of fire with these items.

In addition to the above mentioned electrical testing, Property & Municipal and the Housing Sections have started testing all portable appliances due to be issued to government tenants or sold in any housing auctions (all items that plug in). These items will be tested in accordance with the guidance set out in the IET Code Of Practice for the In-service Inspection and Testing of Electrical Equipment. This equipment will be tested either every 12 months or 24 months depending on what class of equipment it is.

QPlanning approval was granted for a temporary structure in Stanley House grounds to take the pressure off the IJS - why are the ground works not started yet when it needs to be ready for September?

Answer kindly provided by Deputy Director of Public Works Colin Summers:

A The planning permission for the temporary structure in the Stanley house grounds was only outline and was one of several options put forward to relieve the pressure on the school. Other options are still under review and therefore nothing has been formalised for the Stanley house site. We are currently working closely with Karen at IJS and I believe she has an interim solution for the September term which will be implemented until we are able to provide the additional classrooms required.

It was noted in the most recent Executive Council Meeting: "We are pursuing two options and are confident that classroom space will be available soon after the start of the term in September."

Share incentive plan expanded says FIH

FALKLAND Islands Holdings last week announced an expanded Share Incentive Plan

The expansion was to its "tax efficient share plan (Share Incentive Plan SIP) which is open to all its 180 full time employees," said a spokesperson for the company.

They stated: "The company passionately believes in share ownership by staff and the public company status of its parent company, Falkland Islands Holdings plc (FIH) allows local staff to benefit from this in a meaningful way.

"In addition to FIC's long term Provident Fund scheme and annual bonus pool, this new SIP will provide a tax efficient way for staff to acquire shares with the added benefit that the company will add a bonus of an extra 33 per cent of shares at its own cost."

In the past many FIC employees have subscribed to the schemes and this scheme will further boost the number of staff members that have a direct interest in FIH shares. FIH Managing Director, John Foster said: "I am delighted with the continued expansion of the SIP scheme, share ownership by staff is a very important way in which local people who work for FIC can share in the success of our company"

The battles of Coronel and Falklands in the making

One hundred years ago this week - The second part of a daily diary of events leading up to the battles of the Falklands and Coronel kindly provided by Islander and marine archaeologist Mensun Bound

Saturday 8th August 1914

THE Falkland Islands Volunteer Force (FIVE): By the second week of the war Governor Allardyce was deeply involved in a reorganization of the FIVE. In June, 1913 the Commanding Officer of the FIVE, Capt. I Watt, had submitted a fairly rosy account of the corps to the Committee of Imperial Defence, London. Not all agreed and, three months later, a 'Surprise Board of Survey' led by the Colonial Secretary examined the Armoury and found it to be 'most disorderly' with equipment and ammunition strewn everywhere. Rifles were found on 'table tops piled up in an indifferent manner', 'very few (were) fit for use... worn out... in a damaged state by want of care... had not been regularly oiled and are badly rusted'.

As for accounts, they 'did not show by any means a correct statement of finances'.

Small wonder that, in the Colonial Secretary's words, 'The Volunteer movement has been such a subject of ridicule in the Falklands for years that it is difficult to get persons to take an interest in it'.

He concluded, 'In my opinion, it would be nothing less than a public farce to continue the Volunteers as at present'. Capt. Watt immediately resigned, and the corps was put under the temporary charge of Sgt-Major Sullivan whose first task was to demote all 22 NCO's to private.

Macedonia: On this day at Tilbury Docks in the Thames, the P & O liner Macedonia was commissioned into the Navy. Her log recorded, 'Armourers, etc, working. Stores arriving and gen. preparations for sea. Ammunitioning...'

Macedonia would play a significant part in the Battle of the Falklands and when eventually she returned home, one of her crew remained in Stanley cemetery.

Sunday 9th August 1914

Gneisenau: The Chaplain on the Gneisenau held divine service. He was without his gown.

That, along with all dress uniforms and other unnecessary clothing, had been sent ashore at Ponapé.

He gave a short sermon on how, faithful to their cause and with stout hearts, they would perform great deeds. It was so inspiring that he was asked to repeat it that evening to the men on duty who had missed it.

Monday 10th August 1914

Dresden and Baden: Dresden is joined at Rocas Reef off Northern Brazil by the collier Baden. Fitted with wireless and having a cruising speed of 12 knots, she would remain with the Dresden until she was sunk by the Bristol at the Falklands.

Tuesday 11th August 1914

Von Spee: In the early morning von Spee's squadron arrived at Pagan in the Mariana Islands. Here she would rendezvous with the Prinz Eitel Friedrich and her convoy of auxiliaries. He had by now decided to head for South America for on this day he wrote:

'[My] force will not be able to hold its own against a superior enemy and must disappear for a time in order to escape destruction and to remain as a 'fleet in being' in order to cause anxiety to the enemy, and appear elsewhere when opportunity occurs to do good service.

'If we proceed to the Indian Ocean we should be faced by the impossibility of obtaining fuel... we have no coaling basis in the Indian Ocean and no agents whom we can get in touch with. If we proceed towards the American coast, we shall have both at our disposal...'

Otranto: At Tilbury the PSNC liner Otranto was commissioned into the Navy. Her log records: '09.00 Gun mounting party came on board. Hands employed taking in ammunition and landing ship fittings and mounting 4.7" guns. 10.00 Crew mustered by open list - Ship Commissioned and Articles of War read out'.

Bristol: Bristol arrives St. Lucia, coals and returns to sea. Her officers and crew were still smarting from their failure to sink the Karlsruhe in what was the first naval action of the war.

Wednesday 12th August 1914

Internees in the Falklands: At the very beginning of the war Governor Allardyce received instructions from Whitehall regarding the internment of German nationals.

There were seven 'enemy subjects' in the Falklands at the time, and although they do not appear to have been deliberately victimized there can be no doubt that most of them suffered as a result of current circumstances.

In such a small community where the people in question had done no wrong and were well liked, it created an awkward situation for Allardyce who certainly did not want to see them in jail.

His solution was to send them to the settlements.

On this day the Manager of the FIC, William A. Harding, wrote to his Board in London complaining that the Governor, despite his remonstrations, had sent their Outside Foreman to Camp as a 'German subject'.

The man in question was Franz Buse who first appears in the records in 1894 as a crewman on the 'mission' schooner Allen Gardiner. His descendants still live in the Falklands.

Macedonia: At 04.17 Macedonia at Gravesend 'slipped from buoy and preceded down River'. In 'fine clear weather' she entered the English Channel and shaped a course for the Cape Verdes.

Yap: The Island of Yap at the western end of the Caroline Island was for the Germans their most important communications centre in the region.

Through Yap von Spee could communicate with Berlin and almost anywhere else in the world. For von Spee coal was everything, for without it his ships would, one by one, lose motive power and come to a stop.

But resupply was a complex logistical matter that had to be arranged through trusted agents many weeks in advance, and for this wireless communications were essential.

At first light the HMS Minotaur and Newcastle flattened the W/T station on Yap. Its destruction made von Spee more aware than ever of the fundamental importance of wireless in modern naval warfare. Undoubtedly the loss of Yap was an influence on his decision to attack the station at the Falklands.

Thursday 13th August 1914

Von Spee: It was Graf von Spee's fifty-third birthday. All the captains were summoned to the flagship. The principals at this critical meeting were Schultz of the Scharnhorst, Maerker of the Gneisenau, von Schonberg of the Nürnberg and von Müller of the Emden. All were men of distinction and all but the last would perish in the fighting at the Falklands.

Gathered around a map of the Pacific, their Admiral, in his typically concise manner summarized the situation.

He explained that in the event of war with Britain his orders were clear: 'to conduct cruiser warfare with the aim of damaging enemy trade...'. Because they were surrounded by enemies their only option was to move towards South America where they had friends and where the British had many merchant vessels full of coal, but no fighting ships.

After the meeting the ships disembarked their Chinese laundrymen and then headed south-eastwards out of Pagan. They were arranged in two columns: to port the fighting ships led by the Scharnhorst, to starboard the supply ships led by the Prinz Eitel Friedrich. Their destination was Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands some 1,400 miles away.

Glasgow: As for Capt. Luce of the Glasgow, his proper position was the River Plate but he had had to spend the first week of the war near the Abrolhos waiting for a cruiser from Cradock's North American squadron; the problem was the Admiralty had failed to inform him that it was not coming. The absence of a proper administration at the Admiralty was already being felt.

Monmouth and Carnarvon: Monmouth arrives St Vincent. She had left England with many 14-16 year old boys on board. One of them, Cadet Mandley, kept a diary in which he wrote:

'As we stepped aboard [HMS Monmouth] I heard a marine say: "here's some poor little chaps being sent to be killed". If I had only known that we were the only ones that were to be saved from that ill-fated ship...'

Mandley survived because, on this day in the Cape Verdes, he and eleven more were given twenty minutes to gather their belongings and prepare for transfer to the Carnarvon. The friends they left behind all died.

An officer on the Carnarvon this day wrote in his diary:

'Monmouth arrived and started coaling. She has brought us a dozen Dartmouth cadets. Monmouth is properly prepared for war with bridge taken down etc. and all furniture and woodwork landed. I wish we were. We should burn like a haystack. Sailed about 6 pm in a filthy state from coaling'.

Friday 14th August 1914

Otranto: Having completed her conversion to an AMC, Otranto departed the Thames for the Cape Verde Islands to take up war duties under Admiral Stoddart.

At 553 ft she was a big ship and hence an easy target, but she had no armour plating and her fighting capability consisted of only eight 4.7-inch guns, which was enough to overwhelm any merchant ship or, indeed, to take on an enemy AMC, but at Coronel she would find herself last in the line that went up against the finest cruiser squadron in the world.

Good Hope: Good Hope - the ship that would be first in the line at Coronel - arrives Halifax, Canada. Cradock prepares to take her south in pursuit of Karlsruhe and Dresden. This is the moment when we can see the beginnings of a thread that would take Cradock to the Falklands and, soon after, to his death.

Shackleton and the Falklands

ONE hundred years ago this week Sir Ernest Shackleton set sail from Plymouth on HMS Endurance at the beginning of the Imperial Trans-Antarctic Expedition (1914-17), also known as the Endurance Expedition.

The expedition aimed to make the first land crossing of the Antarctic continent. It failed to accomplish this but instead became recognised as an epic feat of endurance when Shackleton rescued all 27 of his men and bought them home without a single loss of life. Falkland Islands Journal Editor Jim McAdam, who attended a commemorative event this week in Plymouth, kindly provided Penguin News with the following account of Shackleton's first public lecture, which was held in the Falkland Islands in May 1916. Dr McAdam takes up the story:

The account of Shackleton's journey to Elephant Island, then in the James Caird to South Georgia, the crossing of South Georgia and his four subsequent attempts to rescue the remainder of his men on Elephant Island has been well documented.

During the period between rescue attempts No. 2 from the Falklands and No. 4 from Punta Arenas, Chile, Shackleton was keen to publicise the plight of his men through recounting all that had happened to them and to raise public support.

The first public lecture Falkland Islands

Shackleton arrived (with Tom Crean and Frank Worsley) in Stanley, Falkland Islands on 31st May 1916. He gave what was his first public speech on his return in the Town Hall on June 3. The speech is summarised in the Falkland Islands Magazine and Church Paper (July 1916) under the heading 'The Antarctic Expedition' and it attracted one of the, 'largest gatherings Stanley has ever seen.'

'At the end of his account, a simple and unvarnished story, Sir Ernest was heartily cheered in recognition of the pluck exhibited by him and his intrepid companions'.

A summary of the talk is reproduced below, by kind permission of the late Jane Cameron, Archivist, Falkland Islands Government.

Town Hall, Stanley, Falkland Islands, 3rd June 1916

The Antarctic Expedition

On the 3rd of June in weather harmonising with the occasion one of the largest gatherings Stanley has ever seen was collected at the new Town Hall to welcome Sir Ernest Shackleton who had kindly consented to give a brief account of his late expedition to the Antarctic. The chair was taken at 3 pm, by His Excellency the Governor who read a cable message from His Majesty the King, congratulating Sir Ernest on his safe return, and stating that every effort was being made to rescue immediately the 22 men left imprisoned on Elephant Island.

Sir Ernest, who still bore traces of the privations and anxieties of many months duration, gave an account of his adventures. With him on the platform were two of his comrades who had accompanied him on the whaler from south Georgia arriving here on the 31st May, Capt. Worsley.

after the outbreak of war in 1941 in the stout little Endurance, a vessel prepared as far as human forethought and experience could devise to meet all emergencies. After touching at Buenos Aires in November the ship got into the ice in mid December from which it practically never emerged.

In the ordinary course of events the explorers should have been able to feel their way further south through the floes and ice-field during the summer, landing their stores and equipment and making preparations for a dash across the Pole in the summer of 1915/16. Luck was however against them. Held up in the ice they could only drift at its mercy. In March 1915 the Endurance was definitely iced up and thereafter the party lived in daily and hourly danger of their home being crushed to pieces.

What work was possible was conscientiously done: the dogs were trained and exercised, observations taken and scientific work carried out. All was made ready in case fortune turned and curious to relate, much work was performed at night to avoid the great heat of the short lived day. The dogs, carefully picked for strength and stamina and able to drag over 100 pounds each, originally numbered 69 and though some were lost the deficiency was more than made up by litters born on the journey.

For long months their hopes rose and fell as the pressure of the ice diminished or increased, but at last in spite of all precautions the stout ship was crushed by the irresistible pressure, and it became necessary to abandon. The boats had been got out in case of such a disaster and laid on the ice together with the stores and equipment it was possible to save. The dogs, so carefully trained, had to be shot since it was no longer possible to feed them. Stranded on a huge ice floe the explorers were at the mercy of wind, tide and weather, with the added dangers due to the vagaries of ice. They drifted in a northerly direction some thousand miles on their precarious float, the ice cracking continuously in long fissures and the floe getting smaller and smaller, till gradually by slow degrees it was reduced to a bare 100 square yards. On one occasion the ice split under their very tent and one of the party who fell through wrapped in his sleeping-bag was rescued with difficulty.

So month by month they drifted till in April 1916 they sighted, 50 miles away, the snow-clad slopes of Elephant Island. After those 16 weary months in ice they took to their boats and started on their perilous voyage. Against gales and storms they made their way and at length they reached the island.

But this could only be an insecure halting place, and the boats were by now insufficient to transfer the whole party to safety. Hewing a cave in an ice cliff, 22 of these intrepid men were left with scarce full rations for 5 weeks supplemented by a couple of seals they had killed. Sir Ernest and five others, volunteered to make a bold bid for assistance and left the island on April 16th in an open boat only 22 feet long, to attempt the forlorn hope of traversing the 750 miles of wintry seas which lay between them and S. Georgia.

After great privations, almost worn out, they reached South Georgia and after a perilous passage through the rocks beached their boat in a small bay at the back of the Island. Owing to the dangers of the tide they were compelled, exhausted as they were, to seek better shelter, and seven miles down the coast they found another bay slightly better for the purpose.

There three men were left, too worn out to proceed; the others scaled the mountains and glaciers, hitherto untraversed, and with great difficulty arrived at a whaling station. The sudden approach over the cliffs of three black bearded strangers caused excitement and alarm until the manager was fetched who proved to be an old acquaintance. The first thing was to rescue the men left on the beach; meanwhile a whaler was got ready and an attempt was made to reach Elephant Island. Unfortunately this effort was in vain. When about 35 miles from the island it was found that the ice made further approach impossible, since the whaler was unfitted to withstand the pressure. To the heavy regret of Capt. Thom and all concerned in the enterprise Sir Ernest was reluctantly compelled to give the order to return with the object of obtaining with all speed a ship equal to the task of rescue.

The Explorers reached Stanley on the third morning and the cable was immediately set to work to report the results and arrange for relief. Then Sir Ernest learnt the fate of the second ship which was to have approached the Pole from the opposite side, established depots and met the party after their dash across. The Aurora went into Cape Evans Bay in January 1915 and on May 6th in a blizzard the moorings were snapped and the ship was carried out into McMurdo Sound.

For a time she drifted to the north but on the 21st of July the vessel was crushed by the ice and the rudder, six tons of oak and iron was crumpled up. A few days later she again drifted north and north west till in February 1916 the ice broke-up.

On March 1st steam was raised and on the 14th after rigging a jury rudder, the ship was extricated from her prison, eventually reaching New Zealand at the beginning of April. A party of seven was left ashore when the Aurora broke adrift and will have to be rescued next December. Truly it has been a fateful expedition.

The end of the story lies on the knees of the gods. At the end of his account, a simple and unvarnished story, Sir Ernest was heartily cheered in recognition of the pluck exhibited by him and his intrepid companions.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24-hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Sapper Hill. Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on Mount Kent. Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE (WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

RIGHT

IS CRIMINAL AND WE WILL COME AFTER YOU

Adults who engage in any form of sexual activity with a child under 16 in the Falkland Islands is committing a criminal offence. They are also causing harm to their victim. We have zero tolerance towards this behaviour and we will prosecute.

Pick up an Under 16 and you'll have more than their parents to worry about.

Thrilling matches at Netball fund raiser

THE Stanley Netball Club held a 5-a-side tournament on Saturday afternoon to raise funds for the club. After six thrilling matches Team 1 pulled ahead with a grand total of 15 points.

Team 1 consisted of Julie Haliday, Carly Yeomens, Michelle King, Stan Davies and Shupi Chipunza. Team 3 came second with 10 points and Team 2 were third with 6 points. Team 4 lost with 1 point.

The Stanley Netball club also said goodbye to Carly Yeomens, who left the Islands this week, having spent a proportion of her two years helping the club work on their skills and improve their game.

We do have access to prompt justice says Mr Judge

ALL elements of the investigating and prosecution machinery in the Falklands, "are currently working extremely well together," Attorney General Peter Judge told Penguin News this week, when asked why criminal cases take so many months to reach court.

Mr Judge said: "As Attorney General my concern is that prosecutions are conducted properly and in the public interest."

Robust regime of rules in place as Falklands prepares for oil

THE Falklands has an oil legislation regime that is robust and encourages investment, believes Financial Secretary Nicola Granger.

Details of a law firm's report to the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) on tax legislation in relation to the oil and gas industry, and recommendations to Government by Ms Granger, were released to the public this week in a paper that outlines the report from Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer LLP.

As FIG readies itself for income from oil, at the July 16 ExCo MLAs approved the recommendations for legislative drafting, including setting up a pricing panel for the valuation of hydrocarbons in line with a Norwegian model.

The panel will be chaired by the Financial Secretary or her nominated representative and the exact makeup of the panel will be developed over coming months as Government undertakes consultations with the oil industry representatives, the Norwegian Ministry of Petroleum & Energy and the Falklands' Government's Oil Adviser Anne Drinkwater.

The panel will be tasked with setting a price for tax purposes of all sales.

In essence this is intended to ensure that a valuation is established for petroleum sales that ensures a fair outcome for both the Government and for the oil company.

Government has long established that it will charge a 9 per cent royalty on oil per barrel, and corporation tax currently stands at 26 per cent.

The paper also lays out recommendations made by Freshfields in relation to Government relieving leasing costs undertaken by the industry, but with some rules and caps in place, for example there would be a cap on the cost of an oil company leasing very large value assets.

The firm also gave advice on legislation dealing with finance costs and drilling costs.

With regard to the latter, FIG is to adopt the US definition of 'intangible drilling costs' approach which may result in first corporation tax receipts being delayed by a year or lower than expected in that year but higher the following year.

FIG rejected the UK approach which involves corporation tax receipts being depressed over the period of the first five years, with the impact decreasing with each subsequent year.

Freshfields considered the US approach was simpler and state in the report, "we would expect that it would be viewed reasonably favourably by licencees."

On the subject of licence swaps Freshfields state that current legislation is robust. The company also made a number of recommendations in a few other areas including, "increased use of published guidance."

Robust regime

Speaking to Penguin News this week Ms Granger explained: "This report provides the clarification that the industry requested in some specific areas of our tax legislation relating to hydrocarbons."

"We've recently sought comment from FIPLA (Falkland Islands Petroleum Licencees' Association) regarding the make-up of the valuations panel and intangible costs following this report and are currently getting quotes to appoint a specialist legislative drafter."

"The Exco paper outlines a couple of areas where further clarification is needed but the Falkland Islands Government believe that the legislation amendments outlined in this paper will ensure a robust regime that encourages investment."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

THE term 'only in the Falklands' is probably a bit of overused, but considering it generally precedes a comical anecdote and potentially some cultural reference or other, I continue to be rather fond of it.

It had its place in my week when on Tuesday, having struggled and sweated and googled my way through a tax legislation report, I decided to go straight to the horse's mouth for assistance with a few tricky concepts and picked up the phone and dialled the Department of Mineral Resources.

Having inquired of the Director why we had to set an oil sale price for tax purposes, and what on earth was an 'intangible' drilling cost (Invisible? Incorporeal? Do they just make it up?) it occurred to me during his patient explanations that probably only in the Falklands could one phone what is in essence the Minister of Minerals, and have him push aside his gazillion pound portfolio in order to explain some basic oil jargon to a slightly hysterical journalist. (Incidentally I then proceeded to do something similar to the Financial Secretary who was just as accommodating.)

So what am I trying to say? Well first of all that the rather dry oil taxation story on the front page took a fair bit of work so damn well read it, but mostly I suppose it was a timely reminder that, yes, while being part of such a small community has its limitations and disadvantages - economies of scale and all that - other things work well simply because there aren't very many of us. It makes people much more accessible and as such on some levels we can find out what we need to know without having to wade through mountains of bureaucracy.

As an oil company chap remarked to me recently (along with "I hope I'm not going to suddenly find myself in your editorial") if you understand the Falklands, "if you understand the context," it's a great place to get things done quickly.

With all that nice stuff said, why if we are capable of pleasing something as lofty as the oil industry with our apparent problem-solving abilities, initiative and speedy decision making, do other parts of the Falklands establishment lumber along at the speed of a two legged tortoise. For example why does it take months and months for cases to come to court? Where are the delays occurring? With the Attorney General's Office? With the police? With the court? According to the AGs I'm mistaken and our access to justice is relatively prompt. Well no doubt he knows better, but in a country this small and with so few court cases that's still an answer hard to swallow.

And regarding the Government itself, I understand it's characterized by bureaucracy, which Government isn't. Of course there will always be necessary rules and regulations and paperwork, but perhaps there are times when some emails could replace a meeting, or a final decision supplant another public consultation?

Falklands Day Thursday

FALKLANDS Day, August 14, marked this week in the Islands' calendar, is the date when English mariner and writer John Davis is credited with the first sighting of the Islands in 1592.

It was in the course of Davis' fourth voyage to find passage to the Far East, this time by a south westerly route via the Straits of Magellan and into the Pacific, that his vessel, the Desire, was driven in amongst islands believed previously undiscovered.

Davis wrote, "...lying fiftie leagues or better from the shore East and Northerly from The Straights in which place, unless it had pleased God of his wonderfull mercie to have ceased the winde, wee must of necessity have perished. But the winde shifting to the East, wee directed our course for The Straights..."

Some years ago Falklands historian and maritime artist John Smith painted his impression of the Desire in the cold and windy seas around the Falklands.

The superbly atmospheric painting was taken by John to a Government House Falklands Day lunch yesterday where other guests involved in preserving Falklands history were able to take a look at it.

Your questions answered

Q WHY was there no wreath from the people of the Falkland Islands at the recent WW1 Commonwealth Memorial Service in Glasgow to sit alongside those from the other nations, great and small, just as visible at the Commonwealth Games which finished in the city less than 24 hours earlier? At least one Glasgow citizen and regular visitor to the Islands noted the apparent surprising omission.

The answer is kindly provided by the Falkland Islands Government Representative in London Sukey Cameron

A Whilst we were advised that this event was taking place last December, by the time the official invitation came through it was too late for our representatives to change their travel plans (given the huge number of people leaving Glasgow that day).

I was not aware that there would be an opportunity to lay a wreath at the service, indeed I specifically asked the FCO at the final Games briefing as to whether there would be individual wreaths or if, as for Remembrance Sunday, one would be laid on behalf of all the Overseas Territories. I never received a reply. However, I represented the Islands at the Vigil that night at Westminster Abbey so the Islands were involved in the commemorations.

Access to prompt justice

Attorney General
Peter Judge

Cont. from front page: The people of the Falkland Islands are entitled to expect that the constitutional rights of accused people and the public are fully respected. Decisions to prosecute someone are not taken lightly - these decisions change people's lives."

He added: "The prosecution team make charging decisions in accordance with the internationally recognised standards for Prosecutors. All elements of the investigating and prosecution machinery are currently working extremely well together. Properly considered and evidenced prosecutions can take some time but the Falkland Islands continues to enjoy some of the promptest access to justice of any jurisdiction which operates to our high standards."

Mr Judge's comments are despite former Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley's frequent criticisms of what he considered the excessive amount of time it took for cases to reach court. Even cases of speeding often take more than a month before prosecution.

A Level results

FIVE A Level students received the results of their two years of effort yesterday.

Meghan Law was delighted with her A in art, B in PE and C in human biology. She is hoping to join the Royal Navy next year as an officer. Jess McPhee also achieved excellent B,B,C grades. Penguin News was unable to contact all A Level students at the time of going to print. Some early GCSE results were also released this week but most will be received next Thursday.

Talk wind turbines to Jon

SHEFFIELD University researcher Jon Sumanik-Leary, has for the last five years been investigating small wind turbines as a technological solution for the electrification of rural areas.

His research has taken him to Nicaragua, Peru, Scotland, Nepal, Ethiopia and beyond - now he is here in the Falkland Islands.

In many other countries, the wind resource is highly variable, with only small pockets of sufficient wind available for small scale power generation said Jon. However, "the Falklands are blessed with some of the best wind resources in the entire world, making almost anywhere on the Islands an ideal site for a small wind turbine."

Despite this, the ability to harness this power and turn it into electricity has only become widely available on the Islands during the last 20 years.

Small wind turbines are mechanical devices with many moving parts that are deliberately exposed to the full force of the elements, "so it's no wonder that they are such troublesome pieces of equipment," said Jon.

As a result, in many other places around the world, people have struggled to establish the technology. In the Falklands though they have become the norm, giving rural people the opportunity to access energy services, such as lighting and water pumping, with the convenience that was only previously available in larger settlements.

Former Stanley Swimming Club member Elianta qualifies for NZ championships

FORMER Falklands' school pupil Elianta Jaillet (12) collected two swimming medals at the Wellington Winter Championships, her coach Cliff Threadgold told her former Falklands swimming coach Janet Robertson this week.

Daughter of Marie-Julie Roux a stock assessment scientist at the Fisheries Department, they left the Falklands for Wellington last December.

Janet who once hoped her talented protégé would one day represent the Falklands in swimming,

Above: Technicians in Nicaragua inspect the small wind turbine that they helped to construct, as a part of an innovative technician training programme Right: Jon holding a blade that flew off the 2.5kW turbine in the background in the Northern Peruvian Andes

If you are a farmer with a small wind turbine, then Jon would be very interested to speak with you about your experience with the technology.

He will be in the Falkland Islands until August 23 and will be based in Stanley, so if you are popping into town between now and then, or if you would prefer to chat on the phone or by email, then please do get in touch with him on 63571 or jon.leary@sheffield.ac.uk.

Jon is also the coordinator of the Wind Empowerment Association, an international network designed to share knowledge relating to rural electrification with small wind turbines. The knowledge gained here in the Falklands will be shared with this global community that spans over 25 countries, with the aim of increasing the sustainability of small wind rural electrification initiatives around the world.

passed on the news that Elianta obtained a bronze medal in 100 Free Style and silver in 50 Free Style. The 50 time of 29.39 has qualified her for the New Zealand National Short Course Championships in one month's time.

In a message to Janet, the coach of Capital Swimming Club said: "She has come a long way in a short time and you must take some credit in helping put her on this fantastic journey and like me I am sure you will have pride and some satisfaction in her achievement so far."

Janet said not only does Elianta have ability but she is also fiercely competitive, a spirit that will take her a long way.

Board not beard caused problem says Customs

FALKLAND Islands Customs and Immigration Department deny expelling a visitor from entering the Falklands, as he had claimed, because of his appearance.

An Italian tourist Dino Pivato has stated he was expelled last weekend after arriving in the Islands on the Lan flight because of his thick white beard, however Immigration Officer Jenny Smith told Penguin News this was far from the case. She said on arrival it was established Mr Pivato did not have any accommodation in the Islands. She arranged for him to stay in Stanley at Kay's B&B but by the time they told him he had already decided to leave.

She said while attempting to establish his budget for accommodation it was necessary to discover how much money he was carrying, and Mr Pivato, as a result of a language barrier, might have found this and the questioning overwhelming.

Mr Pivato described himself as interrogated by British Customs and that he was forced to show his money and credit cards. He said his visa was withheld for a while and he was finally ordered to leave the Islands. The Italian citizen says he will take a complaint to an international level.

"The treatment was like a criminal," he told www.elpatagonico.com, "I do not know why I was mistreated, I guess it was my appearance."

A witness to the man's arrival told Penguin News the tourist was being loud and verbally offensive.

Everything you need to know about...

OCCUPATIONAL health is about your health in relation to your workplace. The role of occupational health teams is to keep people well at work, both mentally and physically.

According to the 2012 Falkland Islands Census, we have an unemployment rate of just 1 per cent, with almost 20 per cent of adults in work having more than one job. At the time of the census there were 1,723 local people who were economically active (i.e. in work). In the UK the average cost to business of sickness absence is £666 per employee per year. If that same figure applied here, the overall cost to business and government of sickness absence would be more than £1,000,000 per year.

People here have all sorts of jobs, ranging from working in agriculture to the public sector, fishing, construction, office work, retail and tourism. According to the Health and Safety Executive, 'the workplace has a significant impact on people's health and well-being. Poor management of workplace health can lead to work-related ill health and to high levels of sickness absence'.

Occupational health is mainly

concerned with keeping people at work well, both physically and mentally, and helping people successfully return to work after either short-term or long term illness. It's about keeping people productive - as the Health and Safety executive in the UK says, 'Good health is good business'.

Being in work is good for people's health and this was recognised as far back as 2000 years ago, but what is also recognised is the fact that some aspects of work can be damaging to the health of an individual, for example excessive noise in a power station. This is the other side of an occupational health service - advising employers and employees on what is safe practice, once a particular health hazard has been identified.

We have a burgeoning construction industry, the beginnings of an oil and gas industry and a well-established fishing industry, all of which would be governed by specific health and safety legislation in the UK. Indeed, the UK has had very detailed Health and Safety legislation for at least the last 40 years.

In the Falklands very little specific Health and Safety legislation exists, but it is important to note that general common law duties still apply. This means that every employer has a duty to look after their employees' health and safety by providing a safe working environment, proper tools and safety equipment, safe systems of work, proper training for employees and proper supervision whilst at work.

Common health problems that can be caused by or aggravated by conditions in the workplace are work-related stress (too much work and not enough time or people to do it), noise-induced hearing loss and muscular problems such as low back pain from heavy lifting, or neck and shoulder pain from poor posture at computer work stations. Suffering from any of these conditions can affect a worker's productivity and can lead to lengthy periods of sickness absence which can directly affect a business.

Dr Bernadette Paver

By helping to identify and treat these work-related health problems, good occupational health advice can ensure the well-being of workers, helping them to stay in work and live full and productive lives. In addition, good advice to employers helps them to fulfil their common law duty of care to their employees by adopting the best practices that are applicable to their particular business or industry.

EVEN a sporting philistine like me could not help but get gently worked up at the two high points of the Commonwealth Games: the rather amazing opening ceremony (an event that must have boosted the Scottish nationalists' call for independence like no other), and the appearance of the fastest man in the world (who seemed to be forgiven very quickly for his allegedly rude remark about the games).

Trust me, I haven't been so interested in anyone running, throwing, bowling or otherwise expending energy since women's beach volleyball took over Horse Guards here in London during the last Olympics. I'm sure I was not the only expatriate Falklander to be excitedly pointing at the screen, and saying to anyone within hearing distance, "I know that bloke! That's Saul Pitaluga." Or, "That's Andy Brownlee! I know him!"

It was really quite exciting, so well done to the people who trained hard, raised money and, no doubt, coughed up some of their own to take their skills to Glasgow. This usually sportingly ambivalent Islander was delighted to see them on one of the most important stages of the moment.

It set me to thinking how attitudes towards sport in the Falklands have changed a great deal over the last 20 or 30 years ago. While I'm sure that some sports-mad Kelper of many years standing will pull me up short on this, I feel certain that, apart from shooting, in which we were always very skilled, sport was not nearly as popular or important culturally in those days.

The investment in the swimming pool and the sports centre in Stanley, plus the advent of the Island Games, in which Falklanders could compete internationally on an almost level playing field, have, I am sure, stimulated interest in any number of sports. I also assume that sport is now well-established on the school's curriculum, which means that young people's talents are spotted at an early stage and nurtured. That has to be good from the point of view of health too.

I wish it had been so when I was attending the junior and senior schools in Stanley. I have no recollection at all of organised sport at school back in those days. As a result, when I went off to school in Uruguay, I didn't know one end of a rugby ball from another and I was therefore at a disadvantage that I never really overcame. Athletics were similarly foreign to me, and swimming... well, I could do that like a brick.

So whichever way you slice it, the birth of a real sporting tradition is good. While some talented young people can see the exciting prospect of competing internationally, others will be content with having fun while benefiting their health and keeping the dreaded obesity at bay. The Falklands team may have returned from Glasgow with no medals to polish, but the new and very beneficial sporting spirit has been buffed up no end.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of Penguin News

Islanders Book has Some Dark Themes

When I first picked up Beverley McLeod's fascinating and often moving autobiographical account of a childhood spent on South Georgia during the early to mid-1960s, I leafed through it and thought of My Family and Other Animals with penguins or Little House on the (freezing) Praire. But, when I really started to read it, turning the pages increasingly eagerly, I realised that In the Shadow of Shackleton's Cross was in no way derivative. Some serious themes were woven around the unique story of a charming little girl growing up on South Georgia during the last days of shore based whaling in the southern ocean.

The book offers a great deal, and it deserves a far wider readership than it is likely to receive from such a small publisher. A youngster reading Beverley's story and that of her brother Gerald will enjoy an amazing adventure of childhood. But an adult will see more. I was moved when she explained with obvious sadness what it was like to see the corpse of a massive blue whale dragged from the sea and butchered for its meat. Her father, a clever but very flawed man, tells her that she should see this because, as it seemed then, there would soon be no more blue whales.

Then there are the attempts to make pets of seals and penguins that have their own subtle message: we can appreciate and even love them, but they do not belong to us.

There are themes that are darker and sometimes disturbing. Beverley describes in detail her father's battle with drink and - I would say - the depression that was either cause or effect of his addiction and violence. As I turned the pages, I actually feared what might happen to the two young children and their quite heroic mum. It takes courage to write about such things so frankly, and I admire her for this.

Another aspect of the family's story disturbed me. It was the strong feeling that because they were humble and disadvantaged, albeit it very clever, Falklands folk, any education beyond the basic, or indeed any betterment, they achieved would be in spite of, rather than because of, the colonial administration and society. The children's father was clever, and he could have done so much more with his life, but the system was stacked against him. I'm going out on a limb by speculating, but perhaps the sense of injustice and social inferiority made him the dangerous man he was. In any case, the story gives the lie to the often pedalled view that British colonialism in those days was somehow benign and kindly.

Fortunately Beverley worked around this barrier of discrimination, and she did so thanks to the scholarship system that each year helped a precious few children to greater opportunities. If she had not done so, we would not have this book. I enjoyed it, I was shocked by it and I want more of it.

Read it and on one level enjoy the remarkable adventures of a little girl on an Antarctic island. But delve a little deeper to gain a glimpse of the deplorable nature of opportunity for Islanders just a few decades ago.

Give us two minutes...

Sorrel Pompert Robertson

1. What is your most prized possession? My guitar, although I've already managed to break a string and dent it.

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Being the nerd that I am it would probably be some dead author but I imagine Russell Howard would be a laugh.

3. What is your most embarrassing (or happiest, you choose) moment? Although I'm a person who never gets embarrassed, falling over in the winter ball with my skirt flying up over my head revealing my underwear to the entire population of Stanley definitely came close.

4. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? A dairy called 'Pure Cream'. I think everyone would agree that UHT milk doesn't quite hit the mark.

5. There's a "Falklands' has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I would sing, hopefully proving to everyone that I did not inherit my Mum's 'talents'.

6. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Without a doubt: my sister.

7. What is your nickname and why? I get called Ginger a lot but mainly because I spent most of Year 8 arguing I was strawberry blonde.

8. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Top of my list at the moment is Italy, mainly so I can gorge on cheese, wine, pizza and pasta.

9. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently? I've just spent two days re-watching the Indiana Jones series with my sister and they're still just as good as they were when I was 10.

10. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Cheese or donuts. I have a weakness for both.

Sorrel has always lived in the Falkands, "and being a true patriot I intend to return here once I've finished studying in the UK." Her real interest lies with history, and although she's not entirely sure what career that may lead to for now she's enjoying helping out at the Penguin News.

Notice from the Taxation Office

Response Times

Unfortunately we continue to have some unexpected staff absences and do not expect to be back up to full capability in the immediate future. This pressure on resources has meant a delay in issuing responses and processing work.

Individual Tax Returns

The tax returns are processed in order of receipt and we have a large number of returns which were received near this year's deadline. We have been receiving calls from taxpayers to ask when their return will be processed. Our staffing pressures have impacted on the amount of resources available for processing tax returns and we ask that the public allow us more time to respond, at least 6 weeks.

Thank you for your patience.

Graeme's HR rollercoaster

SINCE arriving in the Islands back in January, day to day work has sometimes felt like a roller coaster ride. Thankfully I like roller coasters. It has been a steep learning curve and sometimes our practices are a bit odd to say the least. Yet dismantling or changing practices developed over time is challenging. It sometimes feels like we are so focused on trying to justify everything and at the same time attempt to treat everyone equally that we are actually being unfair to the very people that are here to serve - the citizens of the Falkland Islands.

The overwhelming majority of Government employees are hard-working, loyal and dedicated. Many go above and beyond, with little praise or recognition. They quietly get on with it. My first-hand experience of having to use the hospital and seeking assistance from the emergency services has been nothing but timely and professional. Our social services team quietly support our communities most vulnerable and we have good public services and reliable utilities for a reasonable cost to the consumer. Members of our community seem only too ready to help out their neighbours, something lost in many parts of the world.

I was privileged to be able to attend the IJS school prize giving and school concert last week. The recognition of academic achievement through to singing and drama highlighting the confidence in our children was fantastic. This doesn't happen by accident. It is the combined efforts of everyone in the school, supported by the community that has resulted in the celebration of success.

But they do need the continued and active support of the whole community to excel. It shouldn't come as any surprise to anyone that education of our children is a key element of a successful and thriving economy.

Every now and again, you need to step off the rollercoaster for a short break but I am already looking forward to the next six months. Change and doing things differently brings challenges, sometimes resistance and sometimes mistakes. Over the next six months, let us each try to make a difference and recognise the pride and passion of everyone in our community.

Letter Home by Sharon Jaffray

PN Deputy Editor off travelling Canada and the USA can barely leave her hotel rooms without discovering direct comparisons with home.

BUZZING with excitement Ellen and I clambered on to the De Havilland DHC III Otter along with 12 other passengers for our flight down the sunshine coast and over the city of Vancouver. The fact we had been airborne for some 20 hours and spent countless others hanging around airports was irrelevant; we'd been watching the float planes coming and going since we arrived the previous day and it had ignited an urge to fly once again in the Beaver aircraft which had served the Islands so well prior to the Islander aircraft. I say served the Islands well; my personal childhood memories were of a strong smell of fuel, sick bags and children being bundled on top of stacked baggage to create enough seats to get us all to and from our school holidays.

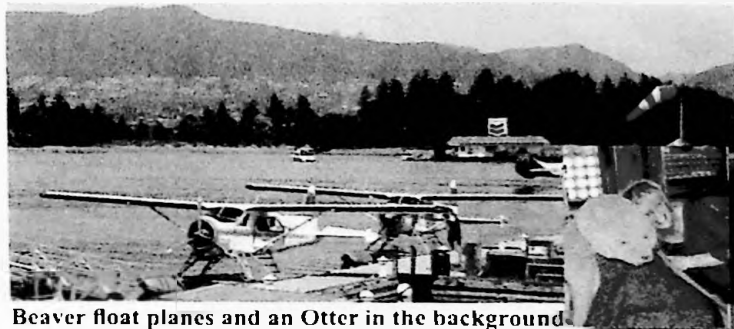

Unfortunately our best efforts to get on a Beaver had been thwarted by the popularity of the tours. Each time there was a Beaver full, more people would book and so it would be up graded to the larger aircraft.

The smell of fuel was still there I noted, but so was the adrenaline rush as the aircraft picked up speed and the floats cut through the sea with little bumps on the gentle waves. As we lifted into the air and the last droplets of water fell from the floats Vancouver in all its glory lay below us and invited us to explore and enjoy all it had to offer.

Little did we know that there was going to be a loose theme of heady heights for the rest of the week.

We drove up to Whistler (the 'up' being as all important as when applied to heading for Moody Brook) with Falklands '82 veteran Peter Pascoe and his wife Ruth and enjoyed the beautiful scenery and architecture of the pristine town nestled at the base of what are the ski runs in the winter but which in the hot summer sun were being utilized by hordes of energetic bikers. They hauled their bikes onto ski lifts and followed them up before hurtling down the mountain side leaping and twisting with the agility of gazelles. Whistler had been home to the 2011 Winter Olympics and is a high end ski resort - you'll not get too much change out of $1,000 a night during the season, but it's easy to imagine it would be a magical spot when covered in snow.

We later enjoyed an evening meal with Ruth and Peter at their Marina Side 7th floor condo overlooking the yachts and launches reflected in the flat calm water and with the buildings twinkling into new and more exotic outfit as the sun faded and the lights outlined the shape of the city. While enjoying southern hemisphere wines a bit of a barbie, chatting about Pete's part in the war and making plans for their forthcoming visit to the Falklands the evening passed in a flash.

The next 'high' was courtesy of a visitor to the Falklands last year - Phillip Marsh and his work and travel buddy Richard Lacey got well round the Islands and made the Rose Bar their local; yep surprise, surprise, that's where I got to meet them on a Thursday night. Firm Penguin News fans and fervent Friends of the Falklands, they have been photographed in some weird and wonderful places around the world waving their PNs and Phillip duly arrived with a printed copy for me to check out on Friday morning. We then headed out to Squamish to ride the Sea to Sky Gondola which climbs to almost 3,000 feet to the mountain top. There were a few squeamish comments from Ellen (no not printable) at the prospect, but once ensconced in the glass bubble dangling from a wire, any nervousness disappeared and we soaked in the view as it seemed we soared, in a very short time, to the very top of the world. I have to confess that at the last climb which was almost vertical, it was my stomach that did a nervous flip flop as the sensation of being dangled over the edge took hold.

Back on tierra firma and having galloped my way around the Panoramic Trail peeping over edges and taking photos of the trees soaring hundreds of feet into the sky I arrived back at the depot to discover Ellen seated at the end of a narrow, swinging, suspension bridge with a satisfied smile on her face. Now I'd seen this bridge in the brochures and had thought it probably wasn't quite the thing for a woman who refuses to go any higher than a 40 gallon drum when painting the house. But, I had just been in a gondola and on my hike I had encountered a platform viewpoint which protruded from the mountain and out into thin air. A quick glance around had ensured that there was no one else in sight that might witness my crawling back to safety should my knees get up to their usual shenanigans when faced with such a challenge and I gingerly stepped out onto the wooden structure and jumped up and down a bit to check it for stability. Not so much as a wobble so I carefully stepped out to the end taking care not to look down. I held my camera out to each side and clicked... plenty of time to check out the view later, and managed to stay upright for the return steps.

So with the new found knowledge that one's knees weren't as wimpy as they used to be I stepped out on to the bridge with the stance of a tightrope walker; head up, shoulders back up and completely focused on the point where I would step onto the landing stage. All good, and I clicked the camera over the edge as I went, but not looking down even as I squeezed past a lady having a slight panic attack at the half way point (her husband was calming her, I'm not so mean that I would leave someone in distress, honest). I prolonged my interest in the view until the bridge was devoid of others whose footsteps would cause the bridge to bounce and sway more before making my way back, slightly more relaxed, but not inclined to hang around to look over the edge and down to the distant tree canopy.

Much as I would like to share the many other things we have managed to squeeze into the first week of our travels, I fear space would not permit but we both agree that Vancouver is a pretty amazing city. Clean, relaxed, friendly, fantastic manners (even the drivers - you rarely hear a horn sounded) with a healthy lifestyle promoted with many aspects provided free by the government and enjoyed by the population.

But most of all the welcome and hospitality we have received from Pete, Ruth and Phillip have really made our stay. Invited into their homes much as we would back in the Falklands, transported to places as city tourists we may have struggled to get to and lots of laughs along the way; it doesn't get much better than that. We'll leave Vancouver on Monday morning with fond memories and the hope we will have the opportunity to return the hospitality in the not too distant future.

But for now it's upwards and onwards as we head east to the USA and the state of Montana - oh yes, there's bound to be a few horses and cowboys next week, til then tootle pip peeps.

FICS prize giving

THE Falkland Islands Community School held their annual prize giving for Years 7 to 10 last Thursday. Head Girl Chelsea Middleton gave a speech, along with her two deputies Rhian Alazia and Robertito Ojeda Campos, highlighting the achievements of the past year. FIG students Kate Stenning and Sorrel Pompert Robertson also gave a speech about the opportunities and challenges of studying abroad. A short musical interlude was given by Devni Perimunagunage (one of the top prize-winners) on the piano, followed by Daniel Clarke on the accordion, accompanied by Shirley Adams-Leach on flute.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

A PATROL around the garden following a storm last month showed all was well there although at the time it was covered with an inch or so of snow and looking lovely and clean.

That didn't stay long except in the areas where it had drifted against fences and sheds. Following on from that dramatic night we just seemed to have soaking wet ground all over the vegetable garden though even more water was sitting on the surface and, though very mild out otherwise, it put paid to any more work out there for a while.

A little more light during the day has encouraged many new buds to form on branches of trees and shrubs. It has also brought about quite a bit of growth in other areas. I was delighted to see some crocus flowering. I think it's a variety called 'Pickwick' but may be wrong. It does form a large flower and is always early but not normally this early. The primroses continue to flower at various times making all plant patrols a pleasure. So far the roses have not lost their leaves and many are still producing flower buds. The best one of all has to be a patio rose called 'Nina' which I bought from the Garden

Centre two years ago. A foot or so tall and wide, it has a deep red, smallish, but very double flower. It started flowering before last Christmas and, so far has forgotten to stop, lovely! Talking roses though, there were very few hips left on the species roses this year, which is rather unusual but will probably tell us something about predicting the weather in years to come.

Some 12 years ago I gave very good friends of ours a grape vine grown from a cutting. Sadly age and circumstances have changed for them, and the home is being down-sized. I was offered the grapevine back to care for it as it was planted in a poly-house which will soon cease to be. Yesterday Bill and I went to dig it out and I was amazed at how well and how tall it had grown and just how many bunches of grapes remained on it. It is now nestling in our tallest greenhouse and we can only hope it will be just as happy there. The other existing grapevine has now been pruned back a bit and has had any loose bark removed to stop any pests over-wintering in there.

The vegetable garden has simply been used as and when a new plot was rotovated and became available.

This year's break has allowed a bit of planning and the various plots have had a chance to be evaluated and decisions made as to what and where we wanted things to be. And so, the double cold frame has now been moved to its final destination and the other smaller one rests beside it. The various stones that keep appearing as we dig are forming a series of crazy paving to the areas I wish to reach. It won't stop the weeds but it might make it easier to water path weed killer over them. During this time too, I have covered the ground under a row of different types of Sorbus (Mountain ash/rowans) with black plastic held down for the moment with bricks and large stones from piles which have been all over the garden up until now. Although the water won't go through the plastic, the trees should get plenty of moisture from the surrounding area. Hopefully, they will grow enough next year to stop quite so much grass growing around them.

The children from the Pre-School class came to visit us last October. We were very lucky to have one of those (rather rare, last spring and summer) beautiful days on the day they came, and so they were able to wander around with their teachers and take photographs and generally look around as the tulips and daffodils and primroses were at their best at the time. In return last month we were privileged to attend, at their invitation, their Community Tea Party. And what a party! All those invited were treated like royalty, lots of little people wandering around amongst us and offering, cakes, jellies, crisps and drinks. They made us feel very special from the moment we were guided to the cloakroom to have our coats removed to the moment we were helped back into them and, in our case, given a folder containing photographs of their visit. Thank you all for a great party.

Whatever the weather, unless it is very windy, one of us has to go outside and open (even if only slightly) the doors to greenhouses or tunnels. Ventilation is very important at all times but probably never more so than now when the plants are mainly at a standstill.

The brussel sprouts under cover continue to produce; sadly the slugs have noticed this. I found a couple nearly two feet up a stem and snuggled in. They are not there now.

CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE: KNOW THE SIGNS

As parents and carers we can spot the signs of illness in our children but there are other signs which can tell us a different story. We need to know what to look for and what to do if we have a concern. Sexual abuse can, and does, happen in the Falkland Islands.

Listen and talk to your children. We'll listen and talk to you.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE (WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

The battles of Coronel and Falklands in the making

One hundred years ago this week - the third part of a daily diary of events leading up to the battles of Coronel and the Falklands kindly provided by Islander and marine archaeologist Mensun Bound

Saturday 15th August 1914

Falklands' economy: In July the Treasury had posted its best revenue figures on record (£32,284), nonetheless the economy was in a delicate state. During the previous year attempts to market penguin guano and peat briquettes had both failed; sealing was barely viable and two meat-canning plants at Goose Green/Darwin were struggling. The only industries in profit were the whale fisheries and sheep farming. A station at New Island operated six catchers and, across the Islands, some 45 farms carried 698,070 sheep (the care of which required 3,528 horses). The only other source of income was ship repair and bunkering. On this day, however, the Panama Canal opened. It was a defining moment in Falklands' history. Now, ships wanting to pass from one side of continental America to the other could simply slip through Central America, often saving more than half their journey. Overnight the Cape Horn trades were reduced to a trickle and the Falklands, once again, became a backwater of empire.

Craddock: At sea off Canada Craddock hastily transfers his flag to Good Hope and heads south in search of Dresden and Karlsruhe. Craddock was upset that his lucky mascot, a piece of old pottery he had picked up in China, was broken during the transfer.

Dresden: Dresden captures the steamer Hyades 180 miles NE of Pernambuco, rather unwisely she is later sunk with 42 rounds of irreplaceable ammunition.

Carnarvon: On Carnarvon off the Cape Verdes, William Gribby committed suicide by drowning. This was the first of several suicides across the ships that fought at the Falklands. Below-deck conditions were hard and the weak were sometimes victimized.

Sunday 16th August 1914

Goeben and Breslau: On this day the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau were handed over to the Turkish navy. It was a political disaster for the British which would have costly consequences at the Dardanelles. Nine days before Admiral Troubridge had intercepted these vessels but, because of his inferior armament and some ambiguous telegrams from Churchill, he did not engage. For failing to attack Troubridge would be court martialled. This was later a significant influencing factor on Craddock's decision to engage the much superior von Spee.

Jerram and Patey: Von Spee's whereabouts still a mystery. In the Western Pacific Admirals Jerram and Patey, independently, made the correct surmise that von Spee was in the Marshall Group and probably heading for the Americas. Jerram telegrams the Admiralty:

'Probably Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Emden and Nürnberg are now together, but their position is still unknown, though Marshall Islands seems likely. They have more than 20,000 tons of coal afloat. ... Possible objective of German squadron may be Dutch East Indies, but more likely Pacific coast of America; in the latter case ... I suggest for consideration whether it may be possible to spare any cruisers from home waters to meet this danger ...'

Tuesday 18th August 1914

Von Spee: Von Spee knew he was doomed. He knew he would eventually be caught and as a man of honour he would have to go down with his ship. On this day, while at sea between the Mariana and Marshall Islands, he wrote to his wife Grete saying he could do nothing against the combined firepower of his enemies. He stressed his dependence on the wireless for information and because he had received nothing from Yap since the 12th he suspected that their station had been taken. 'It is strange', he wrote, 'how unimportant I feel when I think of the aims of the war, and how little I personally value my life and how willingly I would give it in the service of my country'.

After the war Churchill wrote: 'there were considerable checks on his action and a limit to the life of his squadron ... He was a cut flower in a vase, fair to see yet bound to die'.

This week in Berlin they reviewed the cruiser squadron's situation and decided that von Spee's chances of survival were extremely slim, but that they should trust him to make his own decisions including the circumstances in which he should deliver 'his dying blows ... for we are ignorant of his dispositions and coal supply ... any interference on our part might be disastrous.

The Commander-in-Chief must have complete liberty of action'. Such thinking gave von Spee an advantage over Craddock. Wireless had concentrated the Navy upon the Admiralty and, within the Admiralty, Churchill had concentrated everything upon himself; the result was that Craddock and other Admirals were being jerked about by a politician who had but little regard for the professional knowledge and experience of the men on the spot.

The Kaiser sent von Spee a message: 'God be with you in your impending rear-guard struggle. My thoughts are with you'.

Leipzig: Leipzig departs San Francisco with 850 tons of coal, believed heading southward.

Wednesday 19th August 1914

Von Spee: The German squadron entered the lagoon of Enewetak Atoll on the north-west rim of the Marshall Islands.

Dresden: Dresden and Baden arrived at the tiny uninhabited island of Trinidad some 580 miles E by S of the Abrolhos where she made rendezvous with Santa Isabel from River Plate carrying 3,100 tons of coal, 1,800 tons of drinking water, stores, livestock and a wireless she had been given by a German steamer.

Thursday 20th August 1914

Admiralty: Cracks widening at Admiralty. Richmond now totally disenchanted with Churchill and Prince Louis of Battenberg's inability to cope, writing of them as 'our War Lord and the servile Sea Lord and the Chief of Staff ... It makes me sick to see war managed in this manner'. In particular he was upset with them for doing nothing to stop the mining of the coast. On one occasion a German mine-layer was spotted off Blythe: 'I took the telegram into Sturdee [wrote Richmond] and pointed out that apparently no steps whatever were being taken to prevent this. His reply, calm and self-satisfied, was that there wasn't any way of preventing it. This attitude of incompetence or impotence makes me furious. There is a way of dealing with it ... a flotilla of armed trawlers who will sink these beggars ...'

Von Spee: Von Spee held a council of captains in the saloon of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich. After a hand of bridge he informed them that he would bring Leipzig down from Mexico and Dresden around from the Atlantic. Their rendezvous would be Easter Island.

Dresden: A German steamer arrived Rio with the crew of the Hyades which had been sunk by Dresden five days before. At last the British had some idea of her whereabouts.

Elsewhere: Monmouth arrived Pernambuco, Brazil; departed same day to join Glasgow. Macedonia and Camarvon met off Cape Verde Isles.

Antwerp: By this date the out-gunned Belgian army could no longer withstand the German onslaught and fell back on Antwerp. What followed would have a significant effect on events leading to Coronel.

Friday 21st August 1914

The Bacchantes: Churchill's first major naval disaster was now developing. The Admiralty had a squadron of useless old Bacchante-class cruisers patrolling an area of the North Sea known as the Broad 14's. They kept to a precise routine that made them sitting ducks for submarines. Jellicoe and Richmond protested. On this day Commodore Keyes wrote to the Admiralty ending 'For Heaven's sake, take those Bacchantes away!'

Jerram and Patey: Jerram and Patey again correctly forecast von Spee's movements. They once more warn the Admiralty:

"There appears to be no doubt that Germans are collecting large supplies of coal and concentrating somewhere N.E. of New Britain. I believe that main body will make across Pacific Ocean either east or south-east, possibly visit Samoa or Tahiti."

Again their views are ignored by Churchill.

Craddock: The threat to the South American trades was great. Glasgow and Monmouth were already there; Good Hope, Bristol and Macedonia were on their way. The new concentration required flag command. Stoddart could not be taken off the Cape Verdean hub, so Craddock's area was extended south to Pernambuco.

Events were now shaping up that would carry him to his last stand off Coronel.

Toot's top man at FIC darts

LONG time darts Champ 'Toot' Ford was the victor in the FIC sponsored Darts 501 Tournament held in the Town Hall on Saturday.

In what he said, "wasn't a great final but we had a couple of good legs," Tooty beat last year's winner Roy Shepherd 4-2 into second place. Chris 'Lloyd' Lloyd and Graeme Hay took joint third place, in the excellent turn out tournament of 75 men and 33 women.

Two members of the Rosellas darts team, Teresa Clifton and Natalie Smith took first and second place respectively in the Ladies category. It was an exciting final for the spectators and despite admitting to a few nerves there were some very decent scores in the close run game. Natalie eventually won 3 legs to 2. Jackie Thomas and Anne Murphy were joint third.

Retail Director of the FIC Kevin Ironside presented the prizes on behalf of the FIC.

FALKLAND ISLANDS MEAT COMPANY

Local Market Fresh & Frozen Meat Products

As reported by PN during Farmers Week, FIMCo is restructuring its pricing to take the local market operation into profit (presently, many local prices are subsidised). Prices will still be lower than many other parts of the world but with the same or higher processing costs, plus farmers need an appropriate return for animals. Changes will take place from Monday 18th August 2014

To give you, our customer choices and assist those on a budget, we are adding a new STANDARD Range of Beef cuts.

PREMIUM Range will be from high quality, tender younger animals, which Falkland Is farmers have invested time and money in raising and finishing, and are the mainstay of our Beef products.

STANDARD Range from Over 42month, grass fed animals: Mince, Dice, Rump Steaks, Braising Steaks, Topside/Silverside Roast plus an old favourite Chop Roast. All of these are supplied subject to availability.

Coming soon:

- o Sausages & Burgers using Falkland Island recipes
- o Salt Beef & Salt Lamb
- o Fresh Yearling Lamb (1-2 yr old)
- o Improved frozen meat packaging

Our Objective

A successful and viable meat industry for the Falkland Islands

Should anyone have any queries or comments, please contact the General Manager John Ferguson on 27013 or jferguson@falklandmeat.co.fk

Attorney General: Islands' law all in one place is exceptional piece of work

WHEN can the police arrest you and when can't they? When can the police search your house? How would your prosecution be handled through a trial process?

Not questions that everyone has to, or will have to, ask themselves, however if it did become necessary the answers will soon all be in one easily accessible place.

"An exceptionally good piece of work," is how Attorney General Peter Judge this week described two draft Bills that pull together everything the public, barristers, judges or anyone else, will need to know about criminal procedure and evidence, as well as crimes themselves.

In the past the Falklands has relied on English legislation where local ordinances were not available. The Falklands does not have a complete suite of domestic legislation. To make this even more complicated the English legislation no longer applied from mid 2004.

Consequently Falklands' law has not kept pace with modern development or UK International Treaty obligations.

As a result of the gaps in the law, and procedure being out of date, it has made law very difficult to interpret and to apply.

Because of this, said Mr Judge, ExCo approved funding for a Criminal Justice Reform project which was aided by funding from the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office. It began in January 2013 led by lawyers in the AG's chambers and a consultation process identified key areas of policy; two draft Bills, one for Criminal Procedure and Evidence (the CPE Bill) and one for Crimes (the Crimes Bill).

Regarding the latter, Mr Judge said: "We have not just blindly taken UK law; we have made adjustments as necessary to meet Falklands' requirements."

An example of this is that police will be able to designate places of detention in Camp if an arrest has to be made outside of Stanley.

Stanley residents who have recently had cause to complain about noise nuisance will be pleased to know that the police will now have the force of the law behind them on this issue.

Amongst the introduction of a number of new crimes, being drunk while in charge of a child under the age of 7 in a public place has been reinstated as a useful provision for child protection.

In summary the Crimes Bill consolidates existing criminal offences and introduces a number of new offences into statute.

The CPE Bill creates a full Falkland Islands corpus of law for criminal procedure and evidence. In particular, explained Mr Judge, it provides for clearer responsibilities for review and oversight of the criminal justice system with the creation of a Criminal Justice Council. That Council will be a group of people in support of the Chief Justice. They will meet regularly and produce an annual report to MLAs. This means if things, "are beginning to lag or new policy procedures need to be produced," it will be clear who is responsible for not having kept things up to date.

Mr Judge said: "There is a mechanism that keeps things under review and they share the responsibilities between them which means we will not get into the situation again where things get out of date."

The CPE is also about the powers of the police, for example they will be able to grant 'street bail' and their powers to stop and search will be in line with the UK. The CPE deals with bail procedure (for example 17 year olds will now be treated for the purposes of bail as youths) and with evidence, for example the admissibility of hearsay has been widened.

Next steps

The draft Bills go to Legislative Assembly on August 28. Prior to them being formalised into law the Attorney General is keen to hear the public's views.

There will be a public meeting at Fox Bay on August 29 and in Stanley on September 1, in order to discuss the Bills and what they will mean for the Islands. Digital copies of the Bills are available on request from the AG's Chambers. A hard copy can be viewed at the library.

If you would like to comment, write to Gillian Curl at the AG's Chambers or email crownccounsel@sec.gov.fk before September 17.

Most As and Bs ever in GCSE results

GCSE results were released yesterday morning and a record number of A and B grades were achieved said Director of Education Annie Tempest

Penguin News was able to contact a few of the students prior to print deadline.

Hard working Hannah McPhee produced a superb two A*, 8 As and one B. Hannah's A* grades were in Geography and Spanish and the B in ICT a subject for which the students did not have a teacher for quite some time. Hannah will be heading for Peter Symonds College in Winchester to study Biology, Chemistry and Maths, but is currently torn between English Lit and Classic Civilisation for her final choice. Her proud sister Jess told Penguin News. (Hannah's older sister Jess also received her A level results the week before with an excellent B in Film Studies and C in Media Studies).

Ross Stewart, as a result of his good grades, will also be heading for Peter Symonds. His results include an A in Spanish, B in Maths and Geography and C in three sciences.

Tamsin McLeod is, "a bit overwhelmed but ridiculously happy," with her results.

Tamsin obtained 8 Bs, a C and a D and is off to study Philosophy, Psychology, History and Biology; her ultimate aim to be a lawyer.

Amber Goss is, "Absolutely over the moon," with her 5 As 5Bs and one C. Amber aims to study Chemistry, Biology, Environmental studies and Geography at Peter Symonds College.

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

ALTHOUGH I've become quite adept at saying sorry over the past couple of weeks as a result of a couple of gaffs here and there, I can't apologise for Penguin News' 'travel magazine' alter ego this week because I believe yachtsman Ken and PN Deputy Editor Sharon have penned pieces easily worthy of Wanderlust or Condé Nast (see pages 8-11).

That said, what makes their travelogues more relevant to Penguin News and the Falklands, is an ability to not only draw fascinating comparisons with the Islands but an innate awareness of what piques the interest of us lot back home in the cold.

Coincidentally both pick up on curious family links, Sharon with the historic hunter fisher pathologist Dr Caroline McGill (trust her to dig out even a very tenuous link to a woman of such singular abilities) and Ken to his Scottish ancestor Alexander Selkirk.

If however, there was a competition for which link qualifies as the most fascinating, with some trepidation, bearing in mind Sharon's highly competitive nature, I would award the prize to Ken for revealing he is related to the man on which the book Robinson Crusoe was based. How great is that?

And before he accuses me of 'spoiler' I'm quite certain when picking up the Penguin News, most readers will dive into stories of his journey across the Pacific before they will even consider a glance at the editorial.

Remaining on the theme of what's in the paper this week, I was privileged last Friday to interview the outgoing rector of the Anglican church the Reverend Dr Richard Hines (see page 7).

Now this seems like an odd observation coming from a non Christian such as myself (although perhaps that makes it more of a compliment?) but when writing the article it actually felt a bit strange to use his formal title, for the reason that it seemed on paper to distance him a little from the fabric of the Falklands of which, in fact, he has become very much a part. How odd not to ever again see him trotting off to a Memorial Service with his 'boogie box' under his arm.

No doubt amongst his congregation the Reverend when he leaves, will be missed for a whole host of different reasons, but I think it true to say that for the most of us, the reason we won't forget Richard is because he is the person who, when we have been overwhelmed with sadness at the loss of a family member or a friend, has found just the right words to cause us to dry our tears for a moment and instead smile or even laugh and celebrate the quirky or remarkable person or the cheeky, crazy, scallywag no longer with us.

NOTE: FIMCo's prices have been re-structured to assist taking the company into profit, and the aim is not to follow UK prices - which are shown for a comparison only. Mutton not shown, as it does not have a retail price in UK to compare with.

FOLLOWING an announcement in Farmers Week in July that some of the retail prices of Falkland Islands Meat Company (FIMCo) meat cuts would increase, the price changes came into effect on Monday.

FIMCo has created a premium range with a higher price bracket to reflect the quality of the meat along with a standard range to give customers price options. FIMCo General Manager John Ferguson explained at the time.

At the May meeting Mr Ferguson said the company had suffered an £86,000 loss in the local market in the last season (and a £394,000 loss in the export market) stating "We can't continue to haemorrhage money," and that the tipping point to break even needed to be found.

Speaking to Penguin News this week he said: "We are not just targeting the local market but are putting real emphasis in getting the export market to be profitable as well. They are both part of an action plan approved by the FIMCo Board and discussed with MLA's recently at SFC."

"It has meant taking some difficult decisions, but we feel they are in the long term interests of the meat industry as well as agriculture."

He hopes, "that most people will still find the prices reasonable, good value and the choices encouraging."

Mr Ferguson said they had salt meat and potted meat, "in the system bubbling away so hopefully you'll see these soon."

They are also planning a competition for farm choice sausages and burgers, "all to get local products on the shelf and add that extra dimension and availability."

He said he believes the prices have not increased as much as some people think and the prices are, "still way behind the UK."

However he stressed that they were not chasing UK prices, "in any shape or form, merely redressing the balance with the sole objective of making FIMCo profitable." (See price comparison above).

Mr Ferguson hoped this wasn't something taxpayers would disagree with and, "we've kept the changes as low as possible," he said.

The Falkland Islands Government funds students to attend Peter Symonds College and Chichester College providing they acquire a set amount of grade points.

Ms Tempest said: "We are delighted with this year's results. We have had a record number of A and B grades this year. We are really happy with the number of students going abroad.

"They have achieved their goals to go to college. The majority are going to Peter Symonds College and Chichester College and one of our students has secured a scholarship in Asia.

"We are grateful to the students for the hard work they have put into their subjects this year.

"This is also reflected in the hard work and dedication shown by the staff."

Ms Tempest also thanked parents and family, "for all of their support during their children's time at FICS especially over the exam period which can be as stressful for parents as well as students.

"Our success with adults that have attended night classes has been phenomenal. Often these adults are working full time whilst studying.

"This takes commitment and has paid dividends. We have had further success with our Year 9 and 10 students taking GCSEs early and again adding confidence and experience for their year 11 exams. It also enables our students to be exposed to a greater variety of subjects and this enhances their knowledge of global issues."

Tiegan Curtis was the student who obtained a scholarship in Asia.

The Falkland Islands Holidays team at Bird Fair

Biggest turnout for Bird Fair

THIS year's Bird Fair in Eggleston, Rutland, had even more exhibitors than ever and was certainly worth Falkland Islands Holidays (FIH) attending. Jenny Luxton of FIH told Penguin News.

She said many of the people who visited the stand had already been to the Falklands, but there were also plenty of others wishing to visit in the future.

She said: "The profile of the Falklands as an unspoilt wildlife destination where nature is free to roam undisturbed was enhanced by the presence of three stands representing the Islands, ourselves, Falklands Conservation and Falkland Island Tourism."

Over the three days there were four lectures delivered featuring the Falklands including one by Martin Beaton of Weddell Island and one by Falklands Conservation volunteer Margaret Carr. The talks, "also promoted the Falklands as a unique destination and hopefully many people have now put it on their 'bucket' list of places to visit," said Jenny.

Strong six months for Premier

THE first six months of 2014 has been strong for Premier Oil, "with the company performing well on all fronts," according to the company's new Chief Executive Tony Durrant.

In releasing the half yearly results (to June 30) he said: "We continue to exceed our production expectations, have achieved significant milestones on our key developments, had notable exploration success in Indonesia and advanced our non-core asset disposal programme. Increased production has driven significantly rising cash flows and our robust financial position has supported renewal of our principal bank facility on improved terms. Our focus continues to be on maintaining momentum and delivery of our near-term priorities, including first oil from Solan and Sea Lion FDP approval."

The company reported operating cash flows up 35 per cent at US$499.4 million (2013: US$371.0 million) and profit after tax of US$172.7 million (2013: US$161.1 million).

Roads policy needs further examination

THE proposed policy for roads to non-agricultural destinations was discussed in the Falkland Islands Development Board meeting on Wednesday in order to ascertain the extent of the corporation's involvement in the strategy. The main concern was the economic benefits that the construction of any roads would bring and it was reiterated that the Falkland Islands cannot maintain existing roads. However, General Manager FIDC, Martin Slater pointed out it was not purely an economic argument and the decisions on this policy have to be made on the benefits it would bring to the way of life. Mr Slater suggested they work with the Transport Advisory Committee and the Rural Development Strategy to look at the economics of the policy in more detail.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Property and Municipal Section of the Public Works Department invite expressions of interest for supply of competent and qualified electrical persons to carry out periodic electrical testing and inspection of both Falkland Islands Community School and Infant Junior School, Government House and Stanley House.

Interested contractors / individuals should submit their details in writing to the senior admin clerk (admin@pwd.gov.fk) by 22nd August 2014.

For further information telephone Norman Mitchell on 27178 during normal working hours.

Chevening scholarship and Oxford for Clare

A WEST Falkland resident is off to the University of Oxford later this year, after being announced as the Falkland Islands' newest Chevening Scholar.

Clare Cockwell has been offered a full scholarship under the UK Government's Chevening programme to study towards an MSc in Biodiversity, Conservation and Management at Hertford College.

After working for the past few years for Falklands Conservation on a project to develop a Protected Areas policy for the Falklands, Fox Bay resident and former teacher Clare said she was "thrilled" to be going to Oxford University: "I had to submit a lot of written work as part of my application, which was slightly nerve wracking as I've been out of education for a long time. I was also concerned at the start of the process that being a mature student and a career-changer would put me at a disadvantage.

"However, I've had great encouragement and support from the team at Government House, from Hertford College and from the University, all of whom have been keen to point out that they welcome good applications from anyone, wherever they come from and whatever their age. I'd urge anyone else in a similar situation who might be thinking about doing something similar to give it a go."

Clare is the second Chevening scholar to come from the Falklands; her brother-in-law, Sam, was awarded the scholarship in 2012. She applied for Chevening for a number of reasons, including the support the programme offers its scholars for the duration of their time in the UK. It was also a "good fit" for her planned course: "Looking after the environment was named as one of the key areas that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office wants to support through the scholarship: my course, an MSc in Biodiversity, Conservation and Management, focuses on environmental policy, an area that will be important to us here in the coming years.

"It teaches broad skills that would be useful for any job in the field, whether in the Falkland Islands Government, environmental organisations or consultancy work, and also offers the chance to specialise in specific areas of relevance to the Falklands, for example the politics of oil and gas, or international environmental law."

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

AS I was not going anywhere over the recess I was the 'on call' MLA but happily there were no emergencies. However, I dealt with a few queries and did have to attend one or two meetings which I agreed could be regarded as urgent. Civil servants responded well to the request not to inundate members with non-urgent matters so I managed to check mail just a few times a day. Having been on call for two of the eight recesses we will have in the life of the Assembly I can now leave the remainder to others.

There is some catching up to do and the weeks will be full before I head north for party conferences with the Honourable Ian Hansen and for one or two other meetings. This week we have a series of regular briefings and the monthly public meeting. I meet the Chamber of Commerce board, and later in the week the Development Board which I chair has a full agenda.

The recess gave me some time to reflect on the first nine months of this Assembly, as always there is an inevitable degree of frustration that government process seems exceedingly slow, not least because some critical departments and individuals are stretched by urgent requests which means many routine matters have to wait. MLAs probably have to take a considerable amount of the responsibility for requesting some of the urgent actions that create the delays in everyday matters.

We can take a degree of satisfaction that this Assembly, like the previous one, has provided housing plots, subsidised for those who need to get a first foothold on the property ladder. FIG housing stock has been increased but we have some way to go for all genuine social housing needs to be met. There is also a need to change the expectation that FIG should provide for those more than capable of providing for themselves. I wonder if the independence of character and self-sufficiency in which we take so much pride are being diluted by those who expect and rely upon FIG subsidies at every level.

SCB and famous red raise £2,500

MLA Poole draws the tickets while Mr Horsewood and SCB staff look on

A STANDARD Chartered Bank raffle raised a magnificent £2,500 for their chosen charity Seeing is Believing last week. The top prizes were a signed Liverpool shirt, won by Stuart Wallace and a signed Liverpool football won by Amy Pole-Evans. Ten Liverpool goodie bags also went to lucky recipients. The bank's CEO Stuart Horsewood gave a speech describing the football club's generous sponsorship of the bank's chosen charity before inviting MLA Michael Poole to draw the prize winners.

Mr Horsewood said: I want to thank everyone who has bought raffle tickets for this draw and want you all to know that the money raised will help give sight back to many people who don't know what a Liverpool shirt looks like or that it is the famous red."

SCB's sponsorship with Liverpool Football Club began in July 2010.

Winifred Dorothy Miranda

WINIFRED Dorothy Jones was born on April 10, 1929 at Port Stephens on West Falkland. She was the sixth of seven children born to 'Bert' Jones (who worked as a cook, a shepherd and later a farm foreman) and Annie, who Bert had married on Weddell Island in 1921. Winnie's brother David still lives in Plymouth in the UK.

All Winnie's formal education was conducted by travelling teachers out in the Camp and included at one stage the well-known Jim Lellman.

Winnie's first memories of working for a living date back to the time when at age 13 years she began milking cows on Weddell Island in order to be able to buy her own Capstan tobacco.

At age 14 years she began work, still on Weddell, at the Manager's House, where she was employed by Maurice and Kath McGill.

Years later Winnie would look back on those days and realise how much she enjoyed that time in her life and how much she learned from Mrs McGill.

She first learned to cook and to sew there, and her duties also included looking after two children Lyle and Rob McGill. Winnie even learned to tame horses and Shetland ponies whilst she was there on Weddell.

In the days leading up to September 4, 1948 Winnie rode up to Fox Bay, and there she married a farm labourer by the name of Tony Felton (whose father Arthur Felton managed Bleaker Island at the time).

Together the newly-married couple lived for a while out at Spring Point.

It was at Spring Point that their first daughter Sonia was born, and when the family moved to Port Stephens to live in 1950, the tender-aged child, just one year old, was carried to her new home by her mother on horse back.

Little did Winnie know how eventful the 1950s would turn out to be for her and her family.

Winnie and Tony went and spent time working out on New Island. On return to Port Stephens in 1953 her second child Terence was born, but tragically died at just nine months.

In the mid-1950s she spent the best part of a year in hospital in Stanley after both her and Tony had been diagnosed with tuberculosis, and the following year her second daughter Trudi was born.

And somehow during all those eventful years Winnie picked up the skills that enabled her to be the Port Stephens' hairdresser, the person to see if you needed first aid and injuries patched up, she bred budgerigars, she played piano accordion at local dances, she grew to become a proficient vegetable gardener, she became known as a superb embroiderer and competent knitter, a great cook... and she raced horses and once won the Maiden Plate.

In mid 1960s Winnie first met a carpenter/craftsman from Chile by the name of Augusto Miranda (known to us all now as Ramon).

Ramon had gone out to Port Stephens to help build a house and he returned to Stanley with extra belongings.

Subsequently Winnie and Ramon married in Stanley on May 27, 1966. Their marriage was blessed with the gift of a son Ramon and a daughter Carmen.

In the late 1960s the new family was establishing itself in Stanley where Ramon worked but Winnie, never the one to let grass grow under her feet, was up to fresh things.

She became a proficient darts player; she started the first taxi service in Stanley using her old Land Rover; she subsequently cooked for the Johnsons Construction team that built the airport down where Megabid now stands, then also cooked for the Argentine YPF team and the Working Men's Club, before settling down during the 1970s to cook at the Hospital.

Indeed she was cook at the Hospital during the 1982 invasion and subsequent war and her exceptional service (cooking for over 100 people each day) was recognised by an official citation sent on October 11 of that year from Government House by HM Civil Commissioner, as Rex Hunt was then known.

It read:

Mrs Winifred Dorothy Miranda kept the hospital kitchen going throughout the Argentine occupation spending many extra hours on duty and often in the most difficult of circumstances.

During this time she supplied food to over twice the normal number in the hospital. I commend Mrs Miranda for her outstanding services in the support of the community.

After Winnie moved to live at No. 3 Drury Street, with much cooking experience under her belt, she decided to branch out yet again and although she had her two young children to care for she found time to start a little home-based business in October 1983 known both as 'Home Cookin' and also as 'Poo's Pantry'.

It was there that youngsters would call in on a Friday night for pizza and Winnie Poo or Poo Bear (as she was now known often called) soon became well-known throughout the whole town for her Eccles cakes, for her South American style casuelas, her hot dogs, her burgers with onion sauce, and much else besides.

And with all that going on she still found time to continue making clothes - indeed, she could make anything: shirts, trousers, May Ball dresses (she made the May Ball sash for many years) and she knitted Fair Isle sweaters with many a fancy pattern on them.

So how on earth do we sum up all that?

Those who grew up in Winnie's day had to learn to do all sorts of things. They entered the university of life at an early age and by later in life had developed a multitude of skills and a certain kind of self-sufficiency, independence, resourcefulness and toughness that enabled them to survive and provide for their families and for others in a remarkable way.

Winnie seems to have been a supreme example of that.

She was only small of stature but was afraid of very little - only water, and seals and horse flies.

As most of us know only too well, she was singularly unafraid to voice her opinions, sometimes in a straightforward and an uncompromising sort of way.

Recent tributes to her posted on Facebook included: 'One of a brilliant kind', 'a legend', 'a fabulous cook', 'an amazing lady with a feisty attitude' and simply 'a classic'.

And, not surprisingly, one or two of the comments use the word 'glamorous', referring no doubt to Winnie's glossy black hair and her Elizabeth Taylor-like looks when she was in her twenties and thirties.

With a life-time of hard work and caring for her family, we can perhaps understand why this pint-sized, big-hearted lady, with her six children, 12 grandchildren and six great grand children, might well have looked back over all those messages from her family and countless friends and say, 'I suppose I was a rather wonderful person, wasn't I?'

Give us two minutes...

Daf Crabtree

- 1. What's your most prized possession? My acoustic guitar, made by Avalon in Ireland.
- 2. What's the worst piece of advice you have ever been given? Live every day like it's your last. It only lasted 2 weeks and ended up with a trip to the hospital!
- 3. Who would you like to have a tot with? Probably the comedian Doug Stanhope. He's one very interesting character and would make me laugh until I wet myself.
- 4. If you had a motto, what would it be? No man or woman is worth your tears, and the one who is, won't make you cry.
- 5. What in everyday life drives you crazy? Loud people talking loudly on mobile phones.
- 6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? I would love to visit Tibet or Yunnan Province in China. Preferably before they destroy it!
- 7. What's your favourite TV programme and why? Kojak or Miami Vice. Kojak for the wit and character played by Telly Savalas; and Miami Vice purely for the 80's clothes and music; pastel suits all the way!
- 8. What song makes you feel sad when you hear it? Dick Gaughans The Wind That Shakes the Barley. It's a reflection on the 1798 Irish Rebellion. The barley in the title is a reference to the grain young soldiers carried as provision; fields of it often grew where many men were slain.
- 9. What's the best movie you have watched recently? The Third Man; Orson Wells is a master!
- 10. What is the one single food you could never give up? Cheating slightly here but it has to be Coffee.
- 11. What did you want to be when you were a child? Being a big fan of motorsport I wanted to be a rally driver.

Daf moved to the Falklands two weeks ago to work with Falklands Conservation, and originally from Wales (as you might have guessed by his name). He enjoys outdoor pursuits such as mountain biking and climbing. He has spent a bit of time living in Scotland so his idea of heaven is listening to a bit of live celtic folk music with a bit of single malt.

A voice for the Falklands in good times and in sad

THE Reverend Dr Richard Hines, who will leave the Falklands after seven years as Rector to the Anglican Church says his vision has always been, "much bigger than the Cathedral."

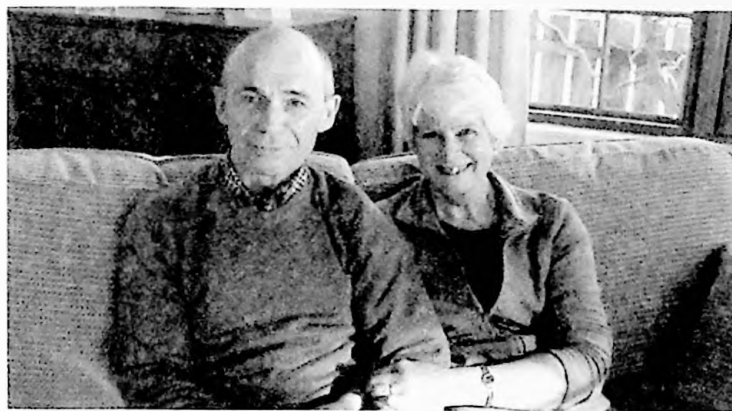

That's quite a substantial vision; after all, the Cathedral is an impressively lofty building, but what he means is that the church is just a focus for where people gather. "My parish was the islands and South Georgia and beyond," and he tried in his practice, "in my talking and my thinking always to remember that I served the whole parish and that God is infinitely interested in every single person in the Islands even if they may not be interested in him."

Richard and wife Jen came to the Falklands in 2007 in answer to an advert for the post. However their reasons for being drawn to the Islands went back many years.

"As a child I had a fascination with Tierra del Fuego," said Richard, and having been married a few years he and Jen lived and worked in northern Argentina with the indigenous people. The people were those first approached by someone who was a superintendent for a while on Keppel Island as part of the Patagonian Mission Society (which became the South American Mission Society) and the pair were themselves members of that society; so another link to the Falklands was born. At the time of the Falklands War they were forced to move from Argentina to Paraguay. Following that they returned home and due to a number of circumstances did not return. Another link existed in the form of a previous Falklands' rector Alastair McAfee a former student of Richard's. "So we had connections," said Richard and when they saw the advert "we dared to believe it was God's will for us so we applied and were appointed."

At that time his post was rector to seven rural parishes including nine medieval church buildings. He chaired seven separate parochial church councils, was a Training Incumbent and had a curate and licensed readers. As such the Falklands was a much smaller set up with its one church building, one ordained colleague, a licensed reader, but a large parish, "that seemed in some ways to get larger as I got to know it and potentially included South Georgia and Antarctica."

Adjusting to the geography itself was a challenge but with a small congregation the couple had some concerns about how to go about meeting other people and truly understanding the psyche of the Islands. Richard did not have the ready-made social network that a new teacher might, able to meet up with staff or parents. "I had to develop my own networks of getting to know people and that wasn't always easy as I didn't understand how life worked in Camp for example. I didn't know what the protocol was for visiting. Could I really ring Norma Edwards up and say 'Can you give me a bed for the night?'"

Thing slowly started to click into place however. Weddings, funerals and christenings brought them contact with Islanders, and, for example, setting up carol singing get-togethers in Camp at Christmas time took them to Fox Bay, Goose Green and North Arm within a pleasant festive context: "We eventually got the hang of how one could go to the Camp."

Perhaps unexpectedly Facebook became of value to him: "I quickly began to make friends via Facebook, it has been very useful." He used it for exchanging messages regarding baptism and wedding organisation or, "just having fun, knowing what was going on and being known on Facebook."

There were also the larger events, annual commemorations or funerals. He slowly realised he had taken on a public profile: "You forget it sometimes and you introduce yourself to someone and they say, 'oh yes I know who you are'."

It is true that Richard is best known as the voice of the 1982 memorial services, but he is particularly highly regarded for his ability to give comfort through his well-researched and intuitive funeral services.

As the reverend who found himself with the task of conducting the funerals of two young men, Jon Felton and Dan Cofre, who died tragically in separate vehicle accidents, it was never going to be easy. But how does one approach this situation and find the words or identify the actions that might help, I asked.

Speaking of the time Dan's friends expressed a wish to remain in the Cathedral overnight with his coffin, Jen offered her thoughts: "They didn't want him to be there on his own, and by allowing that and joining in with that, it was a way of meeting their needs."

By letting the youngsters stay there, "and they did a pretty good job of clearing up," it meant, "that people could literally really feel they were a part of it, not being done to, but done with."

Richard also went to great effort to include family and friends in the provision of information about the lives of the people: "It's not just what you or perhaps the spouse or mother knows, it's involving others and retelling the life story and that means they own it because it is a person they recognise," said Jen.

Getting to know the community so that one can be of best help when just such tragedies occur is vital, indicated Richard. He never wished to appear to suddenly drop in parachute-like "from beyond," at such times, but "come alongside in a more natural sort of way."

Being professional, and compassionate but to some degree objective is also important. However there were moments when he struggled during funeral addresses, "and Jen is past master at picking this up, she knows when I struggle emotionally because she can hear it in my voice and if I need to slow down just a little bit at certain points she knows it's because I am feeling it myself."

He is, "tempted to say one slightly takes a risk sometimes; your intuition kicks in. From my knowledge of Dan and all that I heard from his friends and everything he was a one off character, a bit of a maverick, and so I could say one or two of the things that I did say being fairly confident that I would prick the bubble of tension and grief, and people would involuntarily laugh and recognise that it was ok to do so."

For Richard the funeral address is about, "the unique impressions of every single life, and for me it doesn't matter if the person is hardly known or is obscure or has a dubious background (he chuckles) or whatever; they will get the full works, the 100 per cent full on care."

Richard's seven years worth of funeral addresses have been gifted to the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust.

His voice (which has been referred to as 'the voice of the Falklands - in good times and in sad') has been heard most widely around the Islands over the radio waves conducting 1982 memorial services. The most memorable of those was the 30th anniversary at the Liberation Monument he explained: "The world's press was there and I was able to work out if I didn't leave it until the last minute to turn around when the service was to begin no one was going to see me let alone anyone else, because of the snow storm."

With Falklands' weather as it is, outdoor services are always a noisy affair. Richard realised after a few memorial services, "that we needed to up our game because people were not hearing very clearly what was happening."

He sourced a portable PA with MP3 along with a wireless microphone, and with Jen operating The Last Post, Reveille and other appropriate sounds, they became something of a "dynamic duo," said Richard. Being able to hear the service properly gave people the confidence to join in he said. The most challenging spot to conduct a service is at Fitzroy where the wind whistles over the exposed point.

With veterans returning in small groups or individually he always tried to be available to conduct a small service if requested.

Some high moments? For Jen it was the community's reaction to Richard's decision two years ago to leave. He eventually changed his mind; but in the meantime people stopped them in the street so say how sorry they were he was leaving."

Richard added: "To know that after seven years that some people have, it seems, appreciated what I have been trying to do and that this has been understood and has to some extent been effective, is deeply gratifying and very humbling."

Working as a guide in the tourist season at the Cathedral brought Jen pleasure: "I felt as if the Falklands are mine, to be able to speak in favour of them and to extol their virtues has been lovely."

Another high point: "To be called che," by Rosie Ferguson, concluded Richard. "I felt like I'd arrived."

Lisa Watson

Chile to French

ON April 5 Falklands resident Ken Passfield set off in his yacht Porvenir bound for the Chilean canals and beyond. In this, his second article for Penguin News, Ken tells of his journey to Polynesia along with partner Sally Poncet.

We were last seen in Chile preparing Porvenir, a 31 foot steel cutter, for the Pacific crossing. It's a 7,200 nautical mile run across to New Zealand, and the first 3,000 miles is a very empty stretch of ocean broken only by the Juan Fernandez Islands and Easter Island. We victualled the boat with four months of dried food and as much fresh as we could carry - especially spuds, onions, garlic, lemons, eggs and pumpkins, all of which last for weeks, even in warm weather. We don't have a fridge or freezer on Porvenir so meat comes out of a tin and fish out of the sea (hopefully!)

The short hop across to Juan Fernandez took three days. We dropped anchor off the only town on the islands, San Juan Bautista, next to a line of small fishing boats and the single visiting yacht, Whanake and the familiar faces of Chris and Suzanne who spent several months in the Falklands last year. From the sea the island is similar to St Helena with steep forbidding cliffs, high cloud-shrouded peaks and the occasional rocky beach. We were most definitely still in Chile though, with Chilean national colours everywhere as the island's 400 people keenly followed the World Cup. The economy is mostly based on crayfish which are caught from small open boats and exported live to the mainland on daily charter flights during the fishing season. Low-key tourism ticks over, with visitor numbers limited by flight availability. As an integral part of Chile the locals enjoy all the benefits of a larger economy - free internet at the school (something that's available in all places, no matter how small or remote), shipping services subsidised by Central Government and most impressively, all rubbish returned to the mainland for recycling. However, the down side is that they are unable to create their own bylaws. For example, biosecurity was almost non-existent, a serious concern given the unique plant life of the island.

The village was devastated by the 2010 tsunami: 17 people lost their lives and the entire waterfront area was destroyed. Shortly afterwards a flight carrying a well-known Chilean TV personality to the island disappeared and then an Air Force airman was killed in the search for the missing plane. The Chilean media started to talk about 'The Cursed Island'. All this we learnt while downing a couple of locally brewed beers at a waterfront bistro owned by an inspirational local, German Recabarsen. A year after the tsunami, German decided that the island needed some positive publicity, to spread the message it was a place with a people who'd been there for generations and had a unique culture and way of life and shouldn't be defined forever by a series of bad events (sound familiar?). So together with some mates he went into the forest, chopped down a couple of trees and built a 30 foot traditional open boat, a design that has evolved from the New England whale boats of the 1800s. Under only sail and oars they sailed the 300 miles to Valparaiso in five days and arrived amid a blaze of publicity. The trip re-created an earlier voyage by two fishermen in the 1930s who were blown offshore and ran for the mainland when they realised they couldn't make it home.

The town has a lovely laid-back tranquil feel. Outside its boundaries, most of the island is National Park, famous for the Juan Fernandez humming bird and the large number of endemic plants. The Gunnera plant, a close relative of our pigvine but just a bit larger, grows to a massive four metres with thick trunks, it's a Lilliputian experience to walk through a forest of them. The island is also famous for being the home of Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish seaman who was put ashore at his own request in 1704 and spent four years alone on the island. He is an ancestor of mine - it's always good to catch up with what your family's been up to when you go away. (His story was of course taken by the novelist Daniel Defoe and turned into the book Robinson Crusoe). We were pretty taken with the place, but four years seemed a bit too long to stop, so we reluctantly left after three days.

We decided to bypass Easter Island and head directly for our fellow overseas territory of Pitcairn Island instead. On a normal trip this would take about 30 days, however we were in the zone of winds known as the Variables and they lived up to their name with a lot of headwinds and a lot of calms. We only carry enough fuel to motor for 500 miles so there's little point motoring in calms if you still have thousands of miles to go. Still, the weather warmed up to a nice comfortable 25 degrees and if you're becalmed you can't beat jumping into the crystal clear waters of a mile deep Pacific Ocean - sure beats waiting for the pool to open! Life on warm weather crossings is very pleasant - the windvane steers the boat, your time is spent keeping a lookout for ships (1 in 3,000 miles), doing odd jobs, reading books and generally watching the world go by. I've never had much luck with towing a line, but the odd flying fish lands on the deck now and again.

All good things come to an end and 36 days out from Juan Fernandez saw us sailing into the lee of Henderson Island, a long narrow limestone island about 100 miles east of Pitcairn.

From the sea it bore an uncanny resemblance to North Swan, in Falkland Sound.

There was way too much swell to land, however we drifted in the lee of the island for a couple of hours and took in the sights, which included a golden sandy beach and a humpback whale having a scratch on the bottom. A look at the forecast showed us that visiting Pitcairn was just not going to happen - the wind was in the wrong direction to get there and the big swells left over from several days of rough weather might well make anchoring and landing impossible.

So with the greatest of reluctance we decided to leave Pitcairn for another day and go straight to Mangareva in French Polynesia, another three days sail. Mangareva (see right) is the largest island inside a vast lagoon, we arrived on a flat calm morning, threaded our way through the numerous coral patches and dropped anchor in a sheltered pool in front of Rikitea, the main village. Polynesia at last!

Sharon and Ellen experience a 'Brad Pitt view' of Montana from the movie 'A river runs through it'. Above: An impressive beastie the bison

Letter home by Penguin News Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

A wrangling we will go

WELL if there is one lesson I have learned the hard way this week it is to double check the camera batteries are fully charged before setting off on what had to be the most mind blowing mountain horse ride ever. Having climbed to even headier heights than last week - 8,000 feet my trusty wrangler Connor assured me - with 360 degree views to die for to have ones camera beeping madly and insisting it was low on battery seemed just a tad unfair.

Now firmly settled at the 320 Guest Ranch on Buffalo Horn Creek in Gallatin, daily rides into the mountains have been order of the day. My efforts to find a bear have still not come to fruition, but we have seen evidence of their presence in the fallen trees ripped to shreds as they devour the bugs lurking inside.

Even on Wednesday as we descended (photoless) from the mountain tops into a lush green meadow renowned for grizzly sightings there was not a movement. However there had been a presence, I felt sure the heightened senses of the horses would have given us notice well in advance, just as our horses can sniff out a seal, especially a leopard, long before we can figure what is spooking them.

The 320 ranch nestles in a canyon which the Gallatin River runs through. Not just any river is the Gallatin though, it is the one that Brad Pitt may be slightly responsible for bringing to the public eye with the epic movie A River Runs Through It - the story of two fly-fishing sons of a Presbyterian minister - one reserved, one rebellious - growing up in rural Montana. Yep, that was all filmed on the Gallatin and if you recall my mentioning Phillip Marsh last week, his brother was the location manager for the movie. Small world isn't it?

But the 320 Ranch has another interesting link for one such as myself whose maiden name was McGill.

In 1936, Dr Caroline McGill, a woman far ahead of her time, purchased the ranch from the Wilson family. In addition to being Montana's first woman doctor and first pathologist, Dr McGill was an avid hunter and fisher. She believed that time spent outdoors was physically and mentally beneficial and bought the ranch as a retreat for her patients and friends.

Soon after, the ranch's popularity began to grow. In the summer of 1938, Dr McGill trucked in a Cadillac engine to generate power, bringing the ranch electricity 10 years before power lines showed up in the Gallatin Canyon.

In 1955, Dr. Caroline McGill was awarded an honorary degree from Montana State University for her outstanding service to Montana in medicine and her dedication to Montana's natural resources. That year, she retired from medicine and settled here at 320 Guest Ranch permanently, living in a cabin that the crew finished for her on Christmas and now known as the "Christmas Cabin."

A stop at the Museum of the Rockies once I get up to Bozeman promises to reveal more about this inspirational woman's early years and her ancestors. Could there be a distant link between our families? She had a certain feistiness which I admire greatly so I'm hoping there is.

Sharon's in her element and even found a horse to match her own at home. Hitching a lift with a wagon train at the 320 Ranch

Meanwhile we have been enjoying the very benefits Dr McGill hoped visitors would, although Ellen's enthusiasm for fly fishing dwindled rapidly when she learned that anything she caught would be returned to the river. Not the information someone who would eat salmon for breakfast every day given half a chance, wants to receive.

Breakfasts have however consisted of wholesome cowboy fare: the favourites being scrambled egg and the crispy bacon only Americans seem to be able to dish up. There was a low point when we ran out of English tea, but we soldiered on with herbal teas for me and loads of coffee for Ellen. Sometimes our sheer Britishness bobs to the surface.

Other items on the menu which have caused problems are the cowboy beans. A delicious and flavour-some mixture of different beans in a rich sauce with a distinct smokey flavour served with barbecue food and also the pig roasts which even the locals flock to eat on a Monday

But at least they have all the modern conveniences to hand unlike the early cowboys who spent months on end out in the wild without access to a bath - they had to rely on Sage Brush or 'cowboy cologne' to freshen them up and increase their chances of 'getting lucky' on a rare visit to town apparently. This I learned when I asked about the woody shrub growing thickly on the grassy areas and very much resembling our Fachine Bush from a distance. Good job the cowboys didn't rub the herb onto their bodies as they would have ended up looking like Smurfs - this I discovered when I rubbed a large piece between my hands. Nice smell, but not a good look.

We've enjoyed horse riding high into the mountains a wagon ride drawn by teams of Belgian and Percheron cross draft horses to be transported to the riverside barbecue soaking in the hot tub and daily excursions out and about the area to discover the surrounding towns and smaller settlements, but now it's time to leave.

Next on the agenda was a rodeo at Yellowstone West and before that a pop into Wyoming for a day exploring the Yellowstone National Park itself - surely that journey would bring a bear sighting I hoped.

But it was not to be, hot water and mud springs a bubbling sulphur pit and bison galore but not a bear to be seen. Ah well we can't have it all and Yellowstone does have the same land area as the entire Falklands, so there are plenty of places to stow away and we couldn't cover it all in a day, although we gave it a pretty good shot.

That evening we settled down for a couple of hours of entertainment from the cowboys and cowgirls who had gathered in the area.

Bronc and bull riding, calf roping and barrel racing kept us whooping and hollering with the crowd who were urged on by the mammoth commentator from Oklahoma wedged into his box overlooking the arena. He had come and introduced himself to us and enquired where we were from prior to the rodeo getting under way and at regular intervals put out a shout that there were two ladies "all the way from Ireland here tonight and having a mighty fine time in Montana," despite our frantic waving and gesturing to the contrary. Ah well you can't win them all on these PR trips, oops I mean holidays.

We're heading further north now to see Tony, Kim Jack and Rosie Chater in Harrison and visit the famous Pony Bar and you can rest assured there will be a lot of laughs and many stories which can't be shared on these pages. But Kim and the children are keen riders with their own horses so there will be more horse yarns next week along with some spectacular views to share... that camera will never be low on battery ever again!

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE (WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Sapper Hill repeaters and the Stanley area.
Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

The battles of Coronel and the Falklands in the making

One hundred years ago this week - the fourth part of a daily diary of events leading up to the battles of Coronel and the Falklands kindly provided by Islander and marine archaeologist Mensun Bound

Saturday 22nd August 1914

VON Spee: On this day von Spee left Eniwetok in the NW of the Marshall Islands for Majuro some 600 miles away in the SE of the group. Early morning, conditions perfect, everybody off-duty was on deck taking in the beauty of the huge lagoon. None of them could have imagined the slaughter then taking place on the Western Front. By the end of this day 27,000 Frenchmen lay dead or dying. The crushing power of magazine rifles, machine-guns and high-explosive modern artillery was now evident to all.

Nürnberg: The loss of the W/T station at Yap had left von Spee in a desperate logistical situation. On this day he sent Nürnberg all the way to Honolulu with despatches to be sent by cable to Berlin. In them he informed his Admiralty that he was heading 'for Chile ... arriving at Juan Fernandez on 15th October' and that they should have coliers and supply ships ready to sail around the end of October.

Glasgow and Monmouth: Glasgow and Monmouth met near the Abrolhos Rocks some 70 miles off Brazil to coordinate hunt for Dresden. The officers on the Glasgow were not impressed by what the Admiralty had sent. On Glasgow Hirst wrote in his diary:

'(Monmouth has) been practically condemned as unfit for further service, but was hauled off the dockyard wall, commissioned with a scratch crew of coastguardsmen and boys. There are also twelve little naval cadets who are as keen as mustard. She is only half equipped and is not in a condition to come 6000 miles from any dockyard as she is only kept going by superhuman efforts'.

Good Hope and Bristol: Opinions on the Good Hope were no better: she was remembered as 'old and full of defects' and her Captain of Marines was critical of the amount of wood in her construction predicting - correctly - that, 'if we meet the Hun, this is going to be my frying pan'. On this day Good Hope meets Bristol off St Lucia and Cradock was ordered to find the Dresden.

Dresden: Dresden, together with Baden and Santa Isabel, was heading south for the Plate but the latter could not hold 12 knots so was ordered to a rendezvous point on the Argentine coast. So far in the Falklands nobody had given any thought to von Spee, but soon there would be great anxiety over the Dresden.

Sunday 23rd August 1914

Glasgow: Glasgow arrived at the Abrolhos Rocks where she was told by the Admiralty that 'Dresden is your objective'. After coaling Glasgow and Monmouth began their search to the north aware that eight days before she had sunk Hayades 180 miles east of Pernambuco. It was, however, the wrong direction, Dresden was already well south and working towards the Horn.

Jerram: Jerram was informed by telegram from the Admiralty:

Japan declared war on Germany at noon today 23rd. How is China Squadron disposed? The destruction of Scharnhorst and Gneisenau is of the first importance. Proceed on this service as soon as possible ... keeping in communication with R.A. Australia [i.e. Patey], who together with Montcalm, is engaged on the same service. They are at present searching for them at Samoa.

This was an important telegram as it showed that Churchill did not have the complete picture regarding the China Squadron, but also that he was prepared to pass incorrect information to his commanders-in-chiefs in the field, because Patey was not proceeding to Samoa in search of von Spee, but was there to protect an expeditionary force that had been ordered to take the Island.

This was most unwise of Churchill, as such lies would probably be discovered when Jerram and Patey next met, and such men needed to be able to trust the orders and information they were receiving from the Admiralty. Churchill's messages have been much criticised for their ambiguities, but here we have a deliberate falsehood.

Monday 24th August 1914

Cradock: Good Hope (flying Cradock's flag) and Berwick depart St. Lucia and work eastward towards Trinidad to rendezvous with Bristol.

Tuesday 25th August 1914

Stanley: In 1914 Stanley was a rather run-down frontier town of eight stores (1), five pubs (2) and three churches. Although there was no real poverty, people had little and life was hard.

To survive, most families had their own livestock for meat and dairy products, as well as vegetable gardens and a poultry runs.

Each house had its own peatbog from which families dug their own fuel for heat, cooking and hot water.

According to the last census figures, the majority of the inhabitants of Stanley were carpenters, storekeepers, mechanics, mariners, labourers and shipwrights; the population of the town was 905 which, because of a severe housing shortage, was crammed into 186 dwellings, most of which were of rusting corrugated iron in a poor state of repair.

During the first week of the conflict, the Manager of the Falkland Islands Company in Stanley, William Harding, wrote: 'Owing to the outbreak of war the whole place is in a ferment'; but now as the third week ended, Allardyce was puzzled by the mood-change in Stanley.

The patriotic fervour of the early days had receded and some were even complaining about the nighttime blackout he had imposed on the town. By nature Kelpers are a rather phlegmatic lot and maybe Allardyce misread this for apathy; but whatever the reason, the war was a long way off, the end of winter was in sight and people's concerns were naturally moving towards those matters upon which their survival depended, that is to say peat cutting, gardens and lambing. Besides, just as in Britain, everybody believed it would all be over by Christmas.

By contrast, Allardyce was pleased with the reorganisation of the Volunteer Force. On the first day of the war he had commandeered the FIC tug Samson to bring in Dr Stanley Turner, the Assistant Colonial Surgeon, from Fox Bay to take charge of the FIVE who were now quartered in the Parish Hall, the Wireless Station, the Light House, Sapper's Hill and Yorke Bay. Recruitment was up and on Christmas Day 1914 it was reported that they numbered 186.

(1) Kelvin Store; the Globe Store, the East and West Store, the Millinery Store, the Kelper's Store, the Malvina Store, the Canteen, the Woodbine Bakery and Lehen's Stores.

(2) Ship Hotel, First and Last Hotel, Stanley Arms, Globe Hotel and Rose Hotel

Wednesday 26th August 1914

Dresden: Dresden, in company with Baden, came across the British collier Holmwood off the Brazil-Uruguay border. Its crewmen were taken to Baden and the vessel was sunk. A few hours later they came upon the British steamer Katherine Park out of Buenos Aires for the New York. She is given the Holmwood's crew and then released.

Elsewhere: Good Hope joined Bristol at Trinidad. Cornwall arrived the Cape Verde. Carnarvon arrived Sierra Leone. Canopus limps into Gibraltar with her steam pipes leaking badly; she is now answerable to Stoddart on Carnarvon.

Thursday 27th August 1914

Von Spee: The German squadron arrived at the coral atoll of Majuro on the eastern fringes of the Marshall group. While coaling in the lagoon they received the details of Japan's declaration of war against Germany, thus confirming the wisdom of von Spee's decision to head to South America.

Elsewhere: Good Hope, Bristol and Berwick began a sweep for Dresden along the northern coast of Brazil. In the meantime Glasgow and Monmouth were heading for Rocas Reef where Dresden was known to have coaled.

Leipzig arrived Ballenas Bay, Lower California, for coal.

Friday 28th August 1914

Heligoland: On this day in the North Sea there was a clash between British and German ships off Heligoland Bight which involved Invincible. Sturdee's flagship at the Battle of the Falklands. It cost the Germans three light cruisers and a destroyer; it was presented as a victory for Beatty but it was a very long way from the Trafalgar that everybody was expecting.

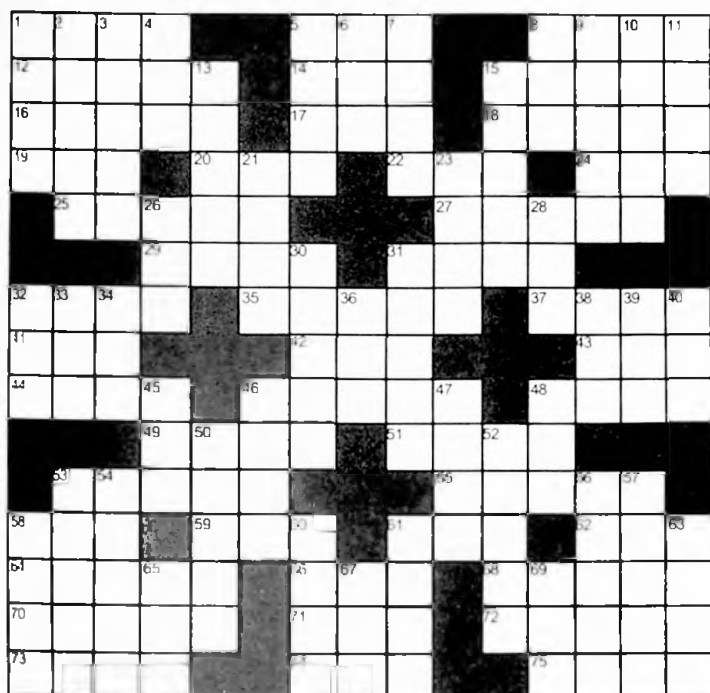

As for Churchill, he could claim no credit for this success as it had been conceived and executed by senior officers in the field and had very nearly failed because of mistakes within his naval administration; as Churchill himself admitted, 'very little turned out as had been planned, owing to a mischance, arising primarily from a fault in Admiralty staff work'.

British dispositions: During the morning the Glasgow and Monmouth were joined at the Rocas Reef by the AMC Otranto.

Three of the four ships that would fight at Coronel were now together. In a wide line-abreast formation, with the Glasgow in the middle, they proceeded S 9° W to the Abrolhos to coal.

Von Spee: The German squadron were joined at Majuro by the Kormoran and two supply ships. The Kormoran had been the Russian passenger ship Riazan which had been captured by the Emden on the first day of the war and then taken to Tsingtao where she had been converted into an armed merchant cruiser.

Declan's August winner

THE August Medal sponsored by Decor Services was competed for by a large field of 21 golfers. For a winter medal this was a big turnout. The medal was also a good example of the wide appeal of golf to all ages and demonstrated how you can be competitive no matter how old or young.

The winner on the day was 17 year old Declan Bonner with 36 points. Declan is back from college for a couple of months and has reminded us all of his golfing talent in the two competitions he has played whilst back. Just behind Declan on 35 points was Tony McMullen, more than 50 years Declan's senior.

After the competition the club held a brief EGM to approve a minor change to the club constitution.

The golf club wishes to thank Decor Services for their sponsorship of the August Medal.

Next fixture is the September medal on Sunday September 7. The format will be Stableford, sign in by 0930 for a 0945 tee-off.

Members will be receiving membership renewal letters shortly. The committee are also busy writing to sponsors and putting together the fixture list for the coming season. It is an important season as the Island Games qualifiers will be held. These will consist of eight rounds throughout the season with the best five score counting towards qualification. There are four places up for grabs in the men's team for Jersey and competition for places is expected to be tighter than ever.

The qualification process is open to all, and the top four at the end of qualifying will be offered places on the team. Should any of the four be unable to go, the place will be offered to the fifth person in qualifying. The only restriction is that your handicap must be 14 or less to be able to get on the team. This is to ensure all of our team members are of a proven standard.

The club committee are really keen to encourage new members this season. We will be sending letters to people who have expressed an interest in joining in the past with information on what the club has to offer and how to go about joining. If you wish to find out more please contact Troyd on 53976 or Sarah on 55976 or email bowles@horizon.co.uk

Chemical Handlers Training Course

The DoA will be offering farmers, and other users of agricultural and veterinary chemicals, the opportunity to participate in an accredited Chemical Users Training course in September.

Participants who successfully complete the training will be issued with a certificate in Chemical Use.

Previously called the Farm Chemical Users Course, this course is the industry standard for training in chemical use, storage and handling.

It covers pest identification, Modes of Action, label interpretation; issues associated with chemical use, formulation types, weed and pest control application, animal health, transport and disposal, preparation and clean up, recording and other procedures.

Who should do Chemical Training?

Anyone who uses agricultural chemicals or veterinary medicines should complete some training.

Training is targeted to people involved in:

- Cropping
- Horticulture and viticulture
- Livestock production (vaccinations and drenches)
- Pest animal control
- And anyone else who uses agricultural and veterinary chemicals

A fee of £50 per person includes; attendance at the training workshop, a comprehensive training manual including all course materials and related resources and a certificate upon successful completion.

Training will take place at Goose Green on Saturday 20 September from 10am. This date coincides with the ferry schedule allowing people from the West to travel over and back that weekend.

Please contact the DoA by no later than Friday 12 September to register a place. Numbers may be limited.

THE Stanley Running Club monthly race will take place on Sunday August 31 – 5 miles.

The race will start at Leisure Centre car park and finish at the Narrows car park.

The entry fee is £3 for adults, £2 for juniors (minimum age 10 years).

There will be prizes first male, female and junior.

Improvements to pharmacy waiting times underway

ALTHOUGH there has been a general improvement in the provision of medical services over past months there are still difficulties relating to the pharmacy services, but a number of things are "in train" to deal with them, stated Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers yesterday.

Reporting on his various portfolios MLA Summers said the problem of lengthy queuing times was related to "people," the fact that numbers of employees were, "in flux," some about to leave and others still being recruited.

He said however, that he believed they were well on track to fill all posts although some flexibility might be needed from members in relation to the recruitment of pharmacy technicians, as this was not as straightforward as originally envisaged.

He said the hospital management staff was also reviewing opening times and arrangements for repeat and urgent prescriptions to be dealt with more efficiently.

Speaking of the plans for an elderly care home he noted he was scheduled to attend meetings yesterday on the subject. He said he had enjoyed a number of meetings previously with a former Falklands' veteran now running a string of care homes in southern Scotland, who had offered his help.

MLA Summers said in the next few months he hoped to take a report to ExCo on the planned project. It was important to concentrate on the operating structure and additions to operating costs before undertaking further work on plans for the home, he stated.

He also commented that new x-ray equipment was on its way to the Falklands by ship.

FIG/Morrison partnership will be more formal

THE Falkland Islands Government (FIG) has accepted the four specific recommendations made by the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) on the partnership arrangement between FIG and Morrison (Falklands) Ltd, it was announced in Legislative Assembly yesterday.

Changes made will result in a more formalised agreement.

In April MLA Michael Poole introduced to the Legislative Assembly a report from the PAC that highlighted a number of weaknesses in the agreement, as well as a number of areas that could potentially be improved.

It was said by the PAC that the partnership as it stood, "potentially puts FIG achieving value for money at risk."

Yesterday he proposed that Legislative Assembly accept the FIG's response to that report.

MLA Poole said he was, "pleased to say that the government has accepted in full the main recommendations of the committee particularly in the areas that the partnership can be strengthened, and we have also accepted as a government the general theme of the report coming back as well."

Housing list reduced thanks to Sapper Hill and mobile homes

THE addition to the Stanley housing pool of mobile homes to the south of Stanley and housing on Sapper Hill has now made a substantial difference to the length of the housing list, reported MLA Summers at yesterday's meeting of the Legislative Assembly.

The list of those desiring houses was still considerable but the number of urgent cases have reduced considerably.

Regarding the prison extension, he said ExCo had agreed with the Planning Department on Wednesday that the best solution was a temporary one; and this was, "in procurement as we speak."

The amount of prisoners has decreased but things were still difficult he said, adding that it was hoped the temporary addition would be built in the next few months and the recruitment of additional prison staff was underway.

On the issue of immigration he said the review group had met a number of times recently and that immigration review recommendations previously agreed by ExCo now required further in depth work on the policy behind the decisions. The Policy Officer is to begin work on this shortly.

Crimes and Criminal Bills

THE Crimes Bill 2014 and Criminal Procedure and Evidence Bill 2014 was remitted to a Select Committee for debate comprising, "all elected members," under the Chairmanship of MLA Roger Edwards. MLA Jan Check who will not be in the Islands for the Select Committee expressed concern regarding how to define 'unreasonable noise' in relation to recommendations to make noise nuisance a crime.

Looking good for cruise ship season

THE 2014/15 cruise ship season is looking good for the Falklands, with approximately 52,000 passengers due to land with 86 calls to Stanley and a further 113 calls to various Camp landings as well.

Sullivan Shipping Tourism Co-ordinator Sammy Marsh said: "This is a slight increase on last season where we had forecast an anticipated 47,500 cruise ship passengers with an 39,500 actual visitors landed and a total of 74 different calls. We did have nine cancellations last season, primarily due to bad weather."

The majority of last seasons visitors were from the USA, closely followed by Brazil, the UK/Europe and Asia.

"One of the key things we noticed this season," said Ms Marsh, "was the increase in Asian and European, primarily Russian, visitors, it is very promising to the industry to see a rise in different source markets."

"As always, we are looking forward to another busy season ahead. I am especially looking forward to the opening of the Historic Dockyard and Museum for this season, which has involved a lot of hard work from the museum team."

"The Dockyard will definitely enhance the visitor experience, giving them a chance to learn more about the Falkland Islands in a fantastic space."

The museum will be open to the public on Tuesday September 9.

In Legislative Assembly yesterday MLA Gavin Short confirmed that Ross Road, currently undergoing road works would be open by the time the first large vessel visits Stanley.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

A SHALLOW pursuit, an destructive canker, or a natural development in social cohesion?

Having suitably dispensed punishment to my partner for a recent cruel criticism of my Facebook 'addiction' - cue lengthy sulking on my part - it did leave me wondering what it was about this online creation that strikes such a fundamental chord in the Falklands. (And yes, I realise it's a world-wide obsession but most of my friends are Islanders and my news feed updates faster than a scalded cat.)

According to some analysts Facebook and other online social networks, are a way to achieve social validation if we're dissatisfied with the quality of our real-life interactions. It might also be addictive because we have unprecedented access to the private lives of others.

Not only that, but no single activity on Facebook requires a lengthy time investment: what's not to like about minimal effort entertainment? Ultimately though, and we may not like to admit it, one of our favourite topics of conversation is ourselves. Hooray, someone invented a forum for our egos.

But part of the appeal of Facebook is that it allows us to temporarily escape our own lives and be a part of something broader and potentially more exciting. And in a small community like ours perhaps that's an overriding popularity factor. We might have all the mod cons here and yes we love the place to bits, but it's still a tiny, isolated community in world terms. Escapism certainly has its place.

Also since cave dwelling times it has been vital that groups of people work well together (even more important for smaller, vulnerable groups). Social cohesion has always been an integral part of survival, and the administering of that social cohesion has largely been the remit of women (yes ladies we have an excuse for our greater addiction than men to Facebook). And I think it's quite noticeable that when the Islanders face some kind of uncomfortable or even traumatic situation, whether another verbal attack from Argentina or a local tragedy, the quickest way (and of course the one that takes the least amount of effort) to come together as one unit in these current times is on Facebook! so that's exactly what we do.

So what's the verdict? Is our networking site dependence a good development or is it bad? Well it's both and neither I guess. It's unlikely to destroy civilization as we know it. If anything it's simply a mirror for what we are, not always entirely pleasant beings (as Kelpers Corner illustrates) but capable of happiness, teamwork and generosity when it matters (check out the ice bucket challenge).

Ultimately there's probably nothing really right or wrong about social networking sites, there's just plenty right and plenty wrong about how people

The Hon Alexandra Shackleton unveils a plaque

Shackleton celebrated at centenary event in Plymouth

By Jim McAdam

AT exactly noon on 8th August 1914 Sir Ernest Shackleton departed for the Antarctic from Plymouth on Endurance, for what was to become one of the most celebrated voyages in the history of Polar exploration.

Exactly one hundred years later, the Devon and Cornwall Polar Society held a commemorative event which greatly captured the spirit of that expedition. The Shackleton 100 three day event, which included much of Falklands interest, was attended by most of the Shackleton descendants as well as those from other members of the expedition and many polar enthusiasts. The event was held at the grand Duke of Cornwall Hotel, Plymouth where Shackleton had stayed the night before his departure.

The programme consisted of a series of most interesting talks including: a preview of Michael Smith's new biography of Shackleton (the first for 20 years); a full review of Shackleton's plans and provisions (what if the Endurance had not been crushed in the ice? Would he have been the first person to have crossed the Antarctic continent? We will never know!) and various other Polar topics.

Beverley McLeod, a Falkland Islander who has recently published "In the Shadow of Shackleton's Cross - An Antarctic Memoir" gave a most interesting illustrated talk of her early life on South Georgia. Of course Shackleton's connection to the Falklands was to come later - after he arrived in May 1916, having made the epic crossing from Elephant Island to South Georgia in the tiny James Caird and embarked on several attempts to rescue his men. The Shackleton connection with the Falklands will be further documented in issues of the Falkland Islands Journal over the next few years.

There was good attendance from Ireland. Organisers and supporters from the Ernest Shackleton Autumn School at Athy Co Kildare (Shackleton's birthplace) were much in evidence. The next big Shackleton Commemoration event will be in Athy at the Heritage Centre on the weekend of October 24-27.

The Hon Alexandra Shackleton was guest of Honour at the event. She unveiled a plaque at Millbay Dock, where Endurance had departed from. There was a re-enactment of the actual departure by the historic sailing ship The Phoenix and the replica of the James Caird - The Alexandra Shackleton was on display.

Mr McAdam edits the Falkland Islands Journal which can be purchased in Stanley at the Capstan Gift Shop

Chemical Handlers Training Course

The DoA will be offering farmers, and other users of agricultural and veterinary chemicals, the opportunity to participate in an accredited Chemical Users Training course in September.

Participants who successfully complete the training will be issued with a certificate in Chemical Use.

Previously called the Farm Chemical Users Course, this course is the industry standard for training in chemical use, storage and handling.

It covers pest identification, Modes of Action, label interpretation; issues associated with chemical use, formulation types, weed and pest control application, animal health, transport and disposal, preparation and clean up, recording and other procedures.

Who should do Chemical Training?

Anyone who uses agricultural chemicals or veterinary medicines should complete some training.

Training is targeted to people involved in:

- Cropping
- Horticulture and viticulture
- Livestock production (vaccinations and drenches)
- Pest animal control
- And anyone else who uses agricultural and veterinary chemicals

A fee of £50 per person includes: attendance at the training workshop, a comprehensive training manual including all course materials and related resources and a certificate upon successful completion.

Training will take place at Goose Green on Saturday 20 September from 10am. This date coincides with the ferry schedule allowing people from the West to travel over and back that weekend.

Please contact the DoA by no later than Friday 12 September to register a place. Numbers may be limited.

When rain stops roads team will swing into action

AS soon as the dry season returns, "our roads team will swing into action and effect repairs," MLA Gavin Short told the Legislative Assembly yesterday. He said: "There is an ongoing schedule of culvert inspections and replacements. We are very much aware that there are quite a number of culverts that are getting to the end of their lives and we will be replacing those as and when."

He added: "It is very much a case of making a judgement call as to when as we only have a finite amount of men and money and hours in the day and when we are doing one thing other works have to be set aside."

He noted that grading and capping works have taken place on the road to Moody Brook with a material that it is hoped will cut down on dust in summer and also, "down around the bottom of the harbour."

MLA Short said Stanley's roads were starting to show signs of wear and tear in places and once weather improved PWD will begin a programme of repairs.

Speaking of the quarry he noted: "The new primary crusher is performing extremely well and the new front end loader is here and is well up to the task of feeding the brute. The work on the new sand production unit and settling ponds continues and the target date for production is in the first couple of months of next year, which given the trouble that sand extraction from Surf bay is causing, is not a moment too soon."

He added: "The quarry is very much demand driven and there are rumours of some quite large orders in the offing. I would urge contractors to give us as much warning as possible of what they require as if everyone turns up at the same time it will have to be on a first come, first served basis which inevitably causes unhappiness. Miracles we can do but the impossible takes us just that little bit longer."

SG cruise ships

The number of cruise ship visits to South Georgia is set to increase by at least 10 per cent in the forthcoming season. Sixty-four cruise ships are currently booked to visit the island on the International Association of Antarctica Tour Operators (IAATO) ship scheduler. Two of the vessels, Bremen and Hanseatic, are set to make six visits each during the season ahead. The season starts on October 24 with Ushuaia and ends on April 3 with Plancius.

FM radio under review by independent assessor

AN independent consultant is currently in the Falklands conducting an FM radio acceptance testing exercise around the Camp. He, a member of FIG, and the contractor, are visiting a number of locations in order to test radio reception. He is here for two weeks and FIG will ultimately, on obtaining the relevant information, make a decision on "gap filling," said MLA Ian Hansen at yesterday's meeting of Legislative Assembly. Speaking of Medium Wave problems he said he had been assured that fitters were arriving in late September in order to remedy the situation.

He said a working group had been formed and was working on improving the partnership structure and that it was due to report back to Executive Council in October or no later than the end of the year.

The key areas accepted in include that there, "is value in such a partnership agreement for the Falkland Islands."

It was also noted that a number of the weaknesses identified by the PAC in its review, which took a couple of years to complete, had already been rectified in the meantime.

It was accepted that improvements needed to be made in the areas of project definition, in the initial procurement process and in the ongoing monitoring and delivery of projects.

It was also accepted that there needed to be, "an open and honest discussion of risk sharing between the two members of the partnership; and to agree on some appropriate mechanisms for doing this."

MLA Poole said: "I think it is right that FIG cannot and should not carry all of the financial risk involved in major capital projects."

He said the changes should result in a much more formalised partnership arrangement, "and there is also due to be a reviewed focus in the new partnership agreement on key performance indicators and looking at how we can innovate in the delivery and design of projects within the Islands."

The response was accepted by the House.

Legal practitioner certificate for Chris Armstrong

THE Legal Community of the Falkland Islands and Attorney General, Peter Judge, have jointly presented a special certificate to Chris Armstrong to confirm that he will be recognised as a legal practitioner in the Falkland Islands whenever he returns.

Mr Armstrong leaves the Islands on Saturday after completing the final six months of his training contract with Pin-sent Masons in Stanley.

He qualifies as a solicitor in England and Wales on September 15 and the certificate has been presented to mark that event and as a memento of the time he has spent in the Falklands. The Legal Community of the Falkland Islands was established earlier this year to bring together not just lawyers, but everyone who works in the law in the Falkland Islands.

If you are interested in membership of the community please contact Jan Parke at Falklands Legal or Penny Nicolson at AG's Chambers.

Local and overseas membership options are available.

Chilly times for a host of Islanders taking up ALS ice bucket challenge

RESPONDING to challenges on FaceBook, Member of the Legislative Assembly Gavin Short and Sorrel Pompert Robertson (the latter on behalf of Penguin News) join many other Falklands residents over past weeks, in undergoing the ALS Ice Bucket Challenge. The activity involves dumping a bucket of ice water on a person's head to promote awareness of the disease amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) and encourage donations to research. It has been taken up with great enthusiasm by Falkland Islanders despite daily temperatures barely creeping above 4 degrees centigrade. As well as donating to the ALS charity the crazy population, (a number of whom have completed the challenge by dunking themselves in the sea on chilly Falklands beaches) have made donations to local charity the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. Penguin News was challenged by the Radio Station's John Clifford, who along with Kristy Buckland, took a bucket for the FIRS team. MLA Short was challenged by the Education Department's Lucille McMullen.

ALMOST everyone has a pet hate. Currently mine is the blatant discourtesy of people using mobile phones during meetings. It is not a problem if someone is expecting a genuinely urgent call and warns that they may have to take it. I'm less tolerant of random rings and beeps or of people working on their phones through a meeting. In effect, unless they are truly able to multitask, their actions are saying 'I have to be here but I have much more important and interesting things to do'. It is no coincidence that those same individuals are then vague about what was discussed and decided at a meeting. I became so exasperated a few weeks ago that the unfortunate colleague sitting next to me bore the brunt of my irritation when his phone was the third to ring within a very short period. Unfortunate, because he was by no means the worst or most persistent offender. There is a gap, unless I have missed it, for a whole new handbook on basic etiquette for the use of all forms of electronic communication. If I wrote it my first chapter would be entitled 'Is this e-mail really necessary?' Would it not be as efficient- and healthier- to leave your desk and walk down a corridor to talk face to face rather than send an often peremptory message to someone working just metres away? Many faux pas would be avoided if computers were programmed to require an extra action to allow a reply to all or to allow a whole chain to be sent. I do not pretend to understand how it all works but I cannot feel confident that all the trivia and dross generated will not eventually bring the planet to a sudden halt.

Never inclined to follow the crowd or be seduced by advertising, I am still conducting my one woman boycott of Facebook preferring to contact family and friends directly. Everything I hear confirms my freely admitted prejudice, in particular the experiment conducted on their users some months ago to see how easy it was to manipulate them.

A stroll down Memory Lane

Twenty years ago THE Falklands this week included what was formerly a 'poacher's haven' within its Outer Conservation Zone. Not surprisingly Argentina objected despite it being a move which will also benefit them. The extension fills a gap between the two zones where originally poachers would sit until nightfall before sneaking into either of the two zones to fish illegally. "It's just a bit of housekeeping really," Director of Fisheries John Barton told Penguin News.

Also this week Colin Smith of DS & Co announced he would no longer market Falklands Landholdings wool. Mr Smith blamed a lack of commitment to his agency. The FLH Deputy Company Secretary denied that FLH had ignored Mr Smith's advice on the improvement of wool quality.

Falklands schoolchildren are told they will have a day off school on October 21 to celebrate the Governor's wedding.

Five years on from Gordon Forbes seeking arbitration in their claim against FIG, a letter from their agents published in Penguin News is described by the Government Chief Executive Chris Simpkin as, "an act of desperation."

He outlines FIG's moral and financial reasons for pursuing the claim.

Apprentices increase pool of tradespeople

IEUAN Ford, Macaulay Middleton and Marcus Pole-Evans have claimed three top apprenticeship awards, Young Apprentice of the year, Apprentice Achievement Award and Apprentice of the Year respectively.

They and other trainees were presented with the awards at a reception hosted by His Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts and Mrs Roberts at Government House last Thursday.

Acting Training & Development Manager Marcus Morrison said: "The opportunities now available to young people and adults are fantastic and something that we at the Training Centre strive to improve and expand."

He said he was very pleased, "to see our apprentices doing so well in their exams and wish them all the best for their future endeavours. Ieuan Ford, Macaulay Middleton and Marcus Pole-Evans should be particularly proud of their achievements and are an example for all other apprentices to follow in the future."

Mr Morrison described vocational qualifications and training as, "paramount to the development of the Falkland Islands with the ever increasing need for the young and old to gain qualifications to increase the pool of locally qualified tradespeople."

Be this from construction or childcare, "each and every one plays a vital role in the community and to the growth of the economy," he said.

Give us two minutes...

Stuart Smith

1. What is your most prized possession?

My fell hill running shoes, as they have saved my life on more than one occasion across slippery or icy rocks on the hills.

2. What is the best (or worst) piece of advice you have ever been given?

The best advice given by my mother, "intelligence is not just the ability to read and write, but also to do and make things".

3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?

Gerald Durrell, as he was a phenomenal naturalist, story teller and personified all animals.

4. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be?

A native seed business that would promote landscaping, wildlife gardening, habitat restoration and conservation using native Falkland plant species.

5. What is your nickname and why?

'Stigward' or 'Stig': It's the origin of Stuart from old English, which means steward.

6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be?

India, particularly travelling by train on the Darjeeling Limited.

7. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently?

An Icelandic film called 'Of horses and Men' about the rural peoples' fondness for the hoof. 8. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Bilberries/Blaeberries, a wild version of blueberries, then closely followed by dark chocolate.

9. Where did you meet your partner?

I met Susanna in Aberdeen, Scotland, though she is actually Finnish.

10. What did you want to be when you were a child?

A cross between a palaeontologist and Indiana Jones, a dinosaur-bone hunting adventurer.

Stuart recently finished his PhD on upland grazing in Aberdeen and has just started a two year position with Falklands Conservation as the habitat restoration officer. He enjoys hill running, swimming and botany.

The road saga continues in winter conditions

WE all love the Falkland Islands for its unique features; a pristine environment, tame wildlife and 'four seasons in one day' weather.

All these Falklands' wonders are presented to you immediately upon arrival, in addition to the green barracks of the MPA airport and two separate queues for military and civilian passengers. And then, comes another wonder - The Road. If anyone elsewhere in the world saw a car in this state (see photo) they would definitely say that the driver had just participated in a mud track competition.

I bet no one would even guess that this car was driven on the main artery connecting the capital of a country with its international airport. If any doctor saw an artery in that condition - he would immediately diagnose the patient with potential heart problems and little hope for the near future.

The Falklands has survived for years and years with that diagnosis. The Road story has become so common that Falkland Islanders simply call it 'winter conditions' for driving.

However, in my 16 years of living in the Falklands, this year seems exceptional despite the mild winter.

In some places the road has so many potholes, one would think they belonged to the landscape of the moon after millions of years of asteroid bombardment.

Ironically, the military periodically close The Road for MOD vehicles despite that fact they have tanks to drive safely on it. It is constantly open for civilian drivers as they simply don't have any other means of going to MPA to meet or to say farewell to their friends and relatives.

Sometimes, the drivers use both sides of the road to drive in either direction, contrary to highway code.

With patches of clay and loose gravel, mud sticking onto the driver's windows and back mirrors, poor visibility in showers, late night driving (from the movies often with children in the car) a tragic accident is just waiting to happen. And unfortunately very often they do.

With new initiatives coming from oil exploration, tourism and fishing activities, do we all really want to show the worst of the Falkland extremities shortly after arriving in this beautiful place?

Must always be seen at Commonwealth Games

I REFER to PN (14th Aug. edition) and in particular to the regular 'Bound Ungagged' feature.

I would disagree with Graham's comment that the staging of the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow had enhanced the prospect of the Scottish people voting for Independence next month. Given the rapturous reception that Her Majesty the Queen received when she appeared for the Opening Ceremony, I would suggest that the vast majority of those in the Celtic Park stadium were showing their support to remain within the United Kingdom, and this feeling was confirmed by many people that I spoke to during the following 10 days of competition.

I do however agree with Graham in terms of his assertion that sending competitors to the Commonwealth Games has benefitted the Falklands image on the international scene. However it has not always been an accepted and widely supported campaign.

The Rifle Club in Stanley were the first people to take the initiative and sent Gerald Cheek and the late Tony Pettersson to Brisbane in 1982, just a few months after hostilities had ceased in the Islands. They received a tumultuous reception from the Australian people.

I was fortunate enough to go along as a radio reporter, for what was then FIBS, and I could already sense the importance of having the Falklands flag flying at this major International sporting event. I was determined that we should be represented at future Games.

Stan Smith (who will celebrate his 91st birthday on 6th Sept.) and Brian Summers were chosen to shoot in the full-bore competitions at the Games in Edinburgh in 1986, and again I attended in my reporting role for FIBS.

However with the rifle range on Sapper Hill having being destroyed in 1982, and a replacement still awaited, the full-bore shooters had nowhere to practice, so the Rifle Club, understandably, declined to send any competitors to Auckland in 1990.

I faced much opposition in my quest to ensure that the Falklands were represented in New Zealand but pursued my aim of having two athletes compete on the track, and accordingly Peter Biggs and William Goss qualified for the 10,000m. I chose this event as it was a straight final and the millions watching around the world would see two Falklands runners competing on the track, and this in itself would send a distinct and formidable message in terms of the Falklands being part of the Commonwealth and that the Islands were British.

Obtaining the finance to send competitors in those days was difficult and much fund raising was undertaken within the Islands, while the FIC proved to be reliable and supportive sponsors.

By 1994 the Rifle Club had their new range at Rookery Bay and Ken Aldridge and Susan Whitney were chosen to represent the Falklands at the Games in Victoria Canada, with the welcome addition of a Marathon runner and a Clay Target shooter. This was the beginning of multiple sports participation by the Falklands.

The rest is history, as they say, as subsequent Commonwealth Games has seen a steady increase of Falklands competitors in various sports, culminating the largest team (24) ever in Glasgow.

I have been privileged to act as 'Chef de Mission' for the Falklands on five occasions (1990 - 2006) and accordingly it was a little unusual, but most acceptable, for me to be invited to attend the Games in Glasgow in my role of Honorary Vice-President of FIOGA, accompanied by Sila who was similarly afforded VIP status.

I commend the total commitment and ability exhibited by Andrew Brownlee who had the demanding position of 'Chef de Mission' in Glasgow. His perseverance in ensuring that the rifle shooters had accommodation in the Games Village, after completing their programmes at the Barry Buddon shooting range, was a major accomplishment in itself.

I must also mention the valuable contribution by the FIOGA Chairman Mike Summers who worked tirelessly pre-Games, making sure that the funds required to send such a large team, could be realised.

As I said to my detractors back in 1990, it is important that the Falklands are always represented at the Commonwealth Games as it sends out a clear message, worldwide, that we are still British and wish to remain so.

Patrick J. Watts MBE
Hon. Vice-President FIOGA.

Something fishy in the Penguin News

DURING the Commonwealth Games, Scottish ex services charity Erskine Park Homes celebrated its own version of the games where residents explored the culture, music and food of the various Commonwealth countries.

With the Falklands as one, Penguin News responded to a request from Park Activities organiser Carol, for copies of the Islands' newspaper to wrap around a fish and chip supper. They could eat their fish and chips while learning a little about the Islands, said Carol.

Each of the five Erskine homes embraced five sporting disciplines that evening, where Gold Silver and Bronze medals were awarded. "The sport depended very much on the capabilities of our residents. Fun was the order of the day but as usual our veterans displayed a very competitive side," Carol told us.

Sports were netball, boccia bowls, ten pin bowling, target tree and shot putt.

A bit like Lafonia with lumps

"CHRIST it's you old bats, you found us OK then," was the typical welcome from Tony Chater as we hauled up at his family home in Harrison. In true Benny fashion the next thing he did was wrench the fridge door open and grab a few beers so we could kick back and have a yarn about home.

When Kim got back from her weekly shop in Bozeman the conversation quickly turned to horses for us two and an hour later we were heading out to their 160 acre property called Antelope Creek where their three horses and six head of Belted Galloway cattle hang out.

The drive up from Yellowstone that morning had been awesome with the heavy forest areas giving way to rolling hills and valleys with the river Madison flowing through, yielding views as far as the eye could see. The late summer grass had a golden colour to it and rippled in the light breeze. "It's a bit like Lafonia with lumps in it," we decided.

As we rode in the clear air to altitudes of around 7,000 feet above Harrison, the views became ever more spectacular and my grin ever wider as Kim and Rosie shared their knowledge of the wildlife and our love of horses created an instant bond.

This too was bear country so my eyes were peeled in the hope of a sighting and things looked hopeful when we happened on two heaps of poo which suggested a fairly large specimen had passed by quite recently. The bears make their way down from the mountains to the creeks to feast on the Chokecherries, and this one had obviously had his fill. Alas no sighting, this time, but I am not one to give in gracefully.

The following morning I was out again riding with the young Chaters and while the route we took wasn't as adventurous as snake hunting Jack would have preferred we had a great time checking out frogs in a pond – you just ride your horse in and wade around while they all leap about – admiring the work of the beavers who had damned the creek and a first for me, watching a rattlesnake slither down a hole after warning us off with its distinctive rattle.

There are a number of different snakes in the area with the rattler being the only venomous one and it would seem they had been plentiful this summer as Tony reported having nearly stepped on one on two occasions. "It keeps you on your toes," he said.

Bear spotting efforts continued with another ride into the hills

above Pony with Kim, however just as we come across a large rock overturned by a bear to scratch for bugs we deduced, great rumbles of thunder alerted us to an ever darkening sky and the idea of being surrounded by trees with a risk of lightning chased us back to the open trail. I have to confess to being a bit of a coward in thunder storms as Lisa Watson gleefully likes to confirm having consoled me on a ride into Stanley from Long Island many years ago. Such meteorological phenomenon are best enjoyed from the safety of a duvet clutching a hot rum, is my opinion.

Luckily we managed to outrun this one... all the way to the Pony Bar where we sheltered behind a high building and suffered it out with a Budweiser in hand.

The Pony Bar which claims to be southwest Montana's 'real' western bar is a well frequented little place tucked away in an old mining town which previously had a population of 5,000 back in the gold mining heyday and now is home to a mere 100 people. Beautiful properties lie empty in the ghost town, although the stools at the Pony Bar which is known for miles around are rarely empty during opening hours (10am til closing weekdays and 1pm til closing weekends) and some colourful old characters will ensure you hear a few local stories before you leave.

It's also home to the famous Butch Burger, the creator of which we have met and shared stories of his eventful past, recipes and horse stories from either end of the world. He was last spotted clutching an empty moonshine jar and a head of broccoli from the Chater's vegetable plot and declaring he, "wasn't cooking a damn thing, ever again." Will find out what he did with that broccoli when we meet again.

Word of country band the Black Lilies playing in Big Sky sent us hurtling down the highway on the Thursday evening, however this outing seemed more like we were chasing a storm, rather than outrunning it. The black clouds looked ever more ominous the further south we headed until heavy rain made us wonder if the band would even bother setting up for the outdoor event. But it seems the weather doesn't stop play in Montana and the appreciative crowd boogied around in the rain and slithered in the mud as the evening wore on and the Black Lilies responded to the lively nature of the audience. It was however a fairly early departure for us with the pitch darkness and heavy rain not to mention a thunder storm again rumbling around the mountains making driving conditions less than perfect for the hour long trip back to Bozeman.

Showing a similar community spirit to the Falklands we were invited to a barn party on as one of the Pony residents marked the passing of her husband who after losing his battle with cancer had donated his body to medical science. It had been planned to scatter his ashes from an aircraft that day but weather had prevented any flying.

Tables groaning with food prepared by the family and their friends lined either side of the massive barn while wood fires burned inside and out.

Butch's pledge to never cook again hadn't lasted long as he had knocked up a great vat of Quinoa, a South American dish which has a casuela-like flavour and accompanied the huge platters of pulled pork very well.

As the evening wore on we shared horse stories, argued the pros and cons of sheep and cattle, AI vs the real McCoy and caused no end of amusement with our British accents. "Hey you Falklands people fit in fine, just like Kim and Tony," declared Scotty the Pony Bar landlord, so we knew we were doing OK.

At the time of writing I am so laid back I'm almost horizontal having spent a couple of hours in the hot springs in Norris. Originally built for the miners in the 1800s the wooden tub still has the original woodwork which is fed directly from the natural hot springs which are fairly common in the area. It is quite a social occasion, meeting other people who are travelling, sipping on a cold beer and munching on nachos and salsa. What's not to like? The colder the air temperature the better the benefits of the hot springs which are usually around 100-103F. Kim assured us and looking up at the mountains which had gathered fresh snow above 8,000 feet in the last few days I could imagine it would be an amazing experience in the middle of winter.

Our days in the beautiful environment of Montana are getting few and we still have much to squeeze into them... More horse riding (obviously) white water rafting and a river float to name but a few. No time for sitting at a computer, I'm off. Bye for now.

WEDDELL ISLAND FOR SALE

(WHOLE OR IN PART)

Weddell Island is the third largest island in the British Overseas Territory of the Falkland Islands, some 102 sq miles /266 sq km in size. It is one hours flying time from Stanley, the capital.

It boasts a rich, diverse range of flora and fauna plus a small settlement of four properties at Gull Harbour in the east.

Currently Weddell is used for tourism, farming, growing organic vegetables and plants, environmental and ecological studies, photography and hiking. All of these activities have potential for further development.

Any sale to a non Falkland Islander is subject to Falkland Island Government approval.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800... Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system:

Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110.

The battles of Coronel and the Falklands in the making

Saturday August 29, 1914

Gneisenau: With the sinking of Hyades by Dresden British ships in South America were now reluctant to put to sea. On this day the Vice-Consul, Pernambuco, signalled the Admiralty: 'Rumours that Gneisenau in the area. Can you confirm?' Chief of Staff Sturdee testily replies: 'It is quite impossible that German cruiser Gneisenau is anywhere near you. Free the trade at once. F.C.D.S.'

Glasgow and Monmouth: Having failed to find Dresden, Glasgow and Monmouth returned to the Abrolhos to coal.

Samoa: The New Zealand expedition arrived off Apia, the capital of German Samoa. The administration capitulates and the Union Jack is hoisted.

Sunday August 30, 1914

Von Spee: The Admiralty's current belief was that von Spee was in the East Indian Archipelago preparing to pounce upon the regional trade routes. Concern was growing in Australia and New Zealand where the first troop convoy was preparing for Europe. Von Spee, however, was well away from the region and heading in the opposite direction.

On this day little Titanica led the two armoured cruisers and five supply ships out of the Marshalls to begin the 1,800 mile eastward passage to Christmas Island. Because it was a long haul the fighting ships had their decks piled with sacks of extra coal.

The armed merchantmen Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Cormoran were left behind. The next day they would head for the Coral Sea.

Dresden: Chargé d'Affaires Robertson at Rio informed the Admiralty that: 'British vessel Holmwood with coal from Newport to Bahia Blanca sunk by Dresden August 26 11 a.m. Lat. 31.30 S Long. 49.6 W. Officers and crew brought here by Katherine Park bound Buenos Aires to New York and stopped by Dresden on the same spot three hours later. German ship Baden with 5,000 tons of coal and provisions still acting as tender'.

This was a determining moment as it panicked commercial shipping, contributed to the formation of a new SE America Squadron and confirmed that Dresden was heading south.

Monday August 31, 1914

Dresden: After failing to coal at sea off the Plate, and having received damage from the clapping of the ships, Lüdecke decided to continue south to Patagonia in search of a suitable spot to rebunker and make repairs. In company with Baden and Santa Isabel, Dresden arrived at Gill Bay, an uninhabited anchorage on the 45th parallel, about 460 miles north of the Magellan Straits.

Tuesday September 1, 1914

Stanley: Government on this day invited tenders for cutting and rickling over 5000 yards of peat for which individual sods should not exceed 8 x 8 inches, and that half the peat should be ready for carting to town by 5 December and the other half by 9 January. There were no offers; with so many men in the Volunteers there was now a severe labour shortage in Stanley.

Dresden: Lüdecke found Gill Bay unsuitable for the repairs and decided to head for Orange Bay, just behind Cape Horn, where he believed he would find the seclusion and shelter he needed. The Santa Isabel was sent ahead to Punta Arenas to acquire warm clothing and the materials and parts that were needed to make good his defects.

Nürnberg: Nürnberg sailed into Pearl Harbour, Honolulu. Soon the press was peddling stories that the Japanese and Australians were waiting for her just outside the territorial limit. While the Consul despatched von Spee's messages to Berlin, many of the ship's officers registered their wills at the German Consulate. By the time of their evening departure crowds had gathered on the quayside; as she pulled away they cheered and sang 'Die Wacht am Rhein'. The German Consul later wrote: The departure of the Nürnberg was the greatest sight I have ever seen. They are heading for almost certain death'. At full speed the light cruiser disappeared into the night with everybody at action stations. There were no ships waiting; however the Consul was right, they were heading for certain death, but it would not come for another three months when they were off the Falklands.

Elsewhere: Canopus arrived at the Canaries. Bristol was off northern Brazil. Cornwall and Macedonia were patrolling south of the Cape Verdes. Macedonia was ordered to east coast of South America.

Von Spee: Von Spee's squadron crossed the 180° meridian and subtracted a day from its calendar.

to coal. About 15.30 Glasgow and Monmouth weighed for the Plate in search of Dresden. Otranto would follow three days later.

Dresden left Gill Bay for Orange Bay and soon crossed the 52nd parallel putting her level with the Falklands.

Stanley: With German cruisers in the Atlantic and submarines around Britain there had been anxiety in Stanley that their first major cargo out of the Islands since hostilities began would make it safely home, but on this day the Secretary of the FIC in London wrote to the Falkland office:

'We are pleased to advise the [PSNC steamer] Junin successfully ran the gauntlet of all hostile German ships, and safely arrived at Swansea & Liverpool, from whence her cargo will be sent by rail to London'.

Thursday September 3, 1914

The SE Coast Trade: The sinking of the Hyades and Holmwood had much alarmed ship-owners and captains on the South American routes. The two-way flow must be kept going but owners were now confining their vessels to port. Britain must be fed just at the River Plate republics had to deliver their perishables to market and, by return, they had to have coal to power their railroads and other industries. On this day the Admiralty received a message from the British legation in Buenos Aires which defined the situation:

'Recent destruction of British vessel Holmwood by German cruiser Dresden ... following destruction of Hyades ... has shaken confidence in shipping circles here and is delaying departures ... Glasgow is the only British cruiser whose presence is certain. It would help trade if a few more of the 25 British cruisers in the Atlantic could be spared for protection of the Southern routes ...'

It hit the mark. The Admiralty immediately scrambled more support for the SE Coast and Churchill wrote to the Foreign Office (which he was aware had been critical of the Admiralty), to say that five cruisers and four AMCs had been detailed to operate in South America waters. Such a squadron needed a flag command and since Cradock was already there, he was the obvious choice.

Cradock: During the afternoon Good Hope arrived at Fernando de Noronha some 220 miles off the elbow of Brazil. Although this was Brazilian territory its cable station was British operated and would allow him to transmit in code. On arrival he sent his intelligence officer ashore to inform the Admiralty that:

'Good Hope arrived Fernando Noronha, visiting St Paul's Rocks, and will arrive Pernambuco 5th September for orders. Cornwall is in wireless touch, proceeding south ...'

The officer soon returned with notification of Cradock's new appointment:

'You are to remain and take charge of S.E. Coast of America Station. Ships under your orders: Good Hope, Berwick, Bristol, Glasgow, Monmouth, [and AMCs] Carmania, Otranto, Victorian [later withdrawn]. Communicate with Glasgow'.

Cradock replied immediately: 'Is Cornwall to be considered as under my orders?'

In another vital message Cradock learned that the German Naval Attaché in Washington had made arrangements for colliers and supply ships to concentrate in the Straits of Magellan. It seemed likely to Cradock that von Spee was heading in that direction and that this should also be his next destination.

Macedonia: Macedonia departed the Cape Verdes for South America.

Jerram: Jerram telegraphed the Admiralty: '... nothing heard of Scharnhorst and Gneisenau since 9th August when they were coaling at Ponapé. It seems possible therefore that they have gone east ...'

Leipzig: Captain Haun of Leipzig received orders from Berlin to 'Transfer cruiser warfare to south-west America and the Atlantic'.

Friday September 4, 1914

Cradock: Before departing Fernando de Noronha Cradock informed the Admiralty that:

'Glasgow reports proceeding with Monmouth and Otranto to Magellan Strait where a number of German ships reported, presumably colliers, and where concentration of German cruisers from China, Pacific Ocean and Atlantic Ocean appears possible'

Santa Isabel: Santa Isabel arrived Punta Arenas and contacted suppliers in Buenos Aires and Valparaíso to acquire parts and materials necessary for the repair of Dresden.

Dresden: Dresden arrived Orange Bay by Hoste Island just behind Cape Horn.

Summary: Von Spee's whereabouts still a mystery. Cradock is in command of the new SE America Squadron and his thoughts have turned to von Spee. Events are gathering pace. Coronel is two months away and all the ships are now in a closing motion.

Martyn and Otto's Outlaws in individual and league top spots

MARTYN Gilson-Clarke (right) was this year's winner of the Individual Knockout darts tournament sponsored by Ally and Cathy Jacobsen.

Preliminary rounds, first and second round are fought out in the Victory, Deanos, Globe and the Rose bars. The last 32 played through to the final on Saturday August 23 in the Victory Bar. Chris Lloyd took second place losing 2 legs to 1.

Otto's Outlaws (far right) were league winners this season despite a game still to be played.

The team comprises Colin Smith (captain), Richard Bonner, Roy Shepherd, Angus Macaskill, Melvyn Clifton, Tim Bonner and Phil Kearney.

INVITATION TO TENDER STRATEGIC REVIEW OF TELECOMMUNICATIONS PROVISION IN THE FALKLAND ISLANDS

The Falkland Islands Government is seeking tenders for a Strategic Review of Telecommunications Provision in the Falkland Islands. For more details, or a copy of the tender please contact Lynn Brownlee during office hours on 28430 or email lbrownlee@see.gov.fk

Tenders should be submitted in a sealed envelope marked "Strategic Review of Telecommunications Provision" to the Chair of the Tender Board, Secretariat, to be received no later than 12pm on 12th September 2014. The Falkland Islands Government reserves the right to reject any tender received and the right to publish the names of tenderers and the amounts in which they tendered.

Currently an exclusive licence is in place for the provision of telecommunications within the Falkland Islands. Under the current licence agreement the service provider is responsible for delivering all forms of telecommunications within the Islands.

To gauge public opinion in relation to the existing service and future need, this consultation seeks your views on current telecoms services and what improvements are necessary. The survey is split into three sections, which consist of Landline, Mobile and Internet telecommunication services.

There are two separate surveys available; one for residential users and one for business users, if both are applicable to you (i.e. you are a business owner or represent a business), a separate survey will need to be completed for each.

The consultation period will run from Friday 29th August until Friday 26th September 2014

https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/figresidentialtelecoms\(residential survey\)) or https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/figbusinesstelecoms\(business survey\))

If you wish to submit in paper format you can contact the Policy Unit (details below) or pick up a copy from one of the following locations: Stanley Post Office, Library, Stanley Services or Seafish Chandlery.

Completed copies of the survey can be submitted directly to the Policy Unit, Secretariat, Thatcher Drive, Stanley, FIQQ 1ZZ or via the designated deposit box located in the Post Office, Stanley.

For more information please contact Jay Gamble in the Policy Unit via email JGamble@see.gov.fk or telephone 28422.
