Arch Green plans put off

PLANNING applications for changes to Arch Green and a path on Victory Green leading to the Historic Dockyard have been deferred for revised plans to be submitted by the Government.

The applications were discussed at length at Wednesday's Planning and Building Committee, when it was agreed that a revised plan should be submitted.

Committee member Brian Summers explained that the Committee and other interested parties had walked around the sites on Friday and several compromises had been discussed.

He said he thought a path on Victory Green would enhance the whole area, however he agreed that further consideration needed to be given to where it would enter the Dockyard so as not to compromise development of the old Boat House as a maritime centre.

At Whale Bone Arch Green the possibility of widening the Ross Road pavement by approximately a metre and reinstating the flower beds had been discussed, as well as rounding the corner opposite the West Store.

MLA Gavin Short agreed with these comments, adding that on a recent big cruise ship day he had taken the time to observe the natural course of tourists walking across Victory Green and it had been pretty much where the path had been planned.

The Committee was reminded that it can not refuse a Government application, but can only recommend to Executive Council to refuse an application. More Planning and Building on page 2

THE Darwin Harbour Sports drew to a close on Wednesday with a hotly contested shearing competition.

Joe Clarke was second in the Open followed by Paul Phillips and Stefan Clarke.

Tara Wilson was best novice shearer and Paul Phillips was second in the Farm Shear followed by John Jones and Tim Bonner.

Prison for soldier who had sex with a 14 year old girl

A 22 year old soldier found guilty of three counts of sexual touching, comprising three counts of penetration, of a child of 14, was given a partly custodial partly suspended sentence in the Magistrate's Court yesterday.

He was sentenced to three months and one day in custody with half of that sentence suspended for one year. Mark Anthony Sampson was given 43 days in custody but having already served 21 days is to only serve the remaining 22 before immediate deportation.

Prior to sentencing Mr Sampson's Defence Lawyer Simon Crowder explained that his client had to a degree already been punished in that he had served 21 days in prison and that his army career was destroyed by his actions. He noted that Mr Sampson, a UK resident, if taken into custody would be, "in exile" in the Falklands and would not be in a position to receive visits from his, "nearest and dearest."

Mr Sampson committed the crimes on June 1, 2014 in Malvina House Hotel following a party at the FIDF Hall where he had been heavily under the influence of alcohol and where he had been approached by the girl who was also under the influence of alcohol.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said the law existed to protect children not emotionally or physically mature enough to engage in sexual activity, "not only from others but from themselves."

She told Mr Sampson she had taken into account that there had been no coercion and that the complainant was willing and compliant thus the activity had been consensual.

She said he had not tried to blame the complainant and accepted that he was, "riddled with guilt," for his actions.

She said it was clear he had not been any grooming of a child, he had not been seeking a child to engage in sexual activity and there was nothing to support him being a child abuser.

Mrs Faulds accepted that the amount of alcohol consumed had acted as an dis-inhibitor but stated that alcohol was, "self administered," and that nobody had forced him to drink enough to reach a stage that his judgement was impaired.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE the editorial column is more often utilised as a medium for expression of the news staff's points of view on local issues, this week I'm more inclined to adopt a magazine style approach and simply point you towards the thoughts of others within the pages.

Not you understand, because I'm too bone idle to come up with my own notions, but because so many people have with great skill and/or liveliness already offered up observations on quite a pile of current affairs. In the commentary stakes, I'm quite simply (and rather proudly) surplus to this week's requirements.

Beginning with the letters page (or one and a quarter pages to be precise) I was interested in Marcus Morrison's interpretations on the subject of vocational training and in particular his claim that there was no problem with the apprenticeship scheme programme itself, but that it had suffered a wholehearted lack of active and financial support from those able to offer it (see page 7). So bearing in mind the disparity of opinion on the matter between the former Apprenticeship Co-ordinator and MLA Elsby (who retains the training portfolio) it's worrying that an arguably efficient scheme might be entirely re-jigged out of a stubborn refusal to acknowledge fault close to home.

Secondly his point about FIG not trusting the opinions and experience of their own workforce was also thought provoking when held up against MLA Short's (early election term) mantra that it's all about 'perching on people's desks and finding out what they really think'. In the light of FIG's increasingly dismal staff retention record, I don't know about you, but I'm not convinced everybody's been fulfilling their perching quota.

FINALLY may I direct you to Graham Bound's thorough examination of the issue of the deaths of fishermen - because it isn't a subject matter that will, or should, go away. And if anyone is hoping things will 'quieten down' on the matter then they're deluding themselves. Note Graham's statistics in relation to the deaths and prepare yourselves for, (if no concrete action is taken) a repeat of the distressing and horrific situation in 12 months time.

Approval for infill builds and more plots at Sapper Hill

FOUR applications for building houses within established sites in Stanley were approved at Wednesday's Planning and Building Committee meeting, although MLA Jan Cheek chairing the meeting in MLA Michael Poole's absence, consistently registered her opposition to any infill building.

Evan Jones' outline application to build a two-storey house and create suitable off street parking for both the existing and new build at 1 Drury Street was approved, as was the construction of a two-storey house at 28 Ross Road East for Kevin Ironside.

At 4 Davis Street, John Kultschar had his application to demolish the existing house and replace with two, 1.5 storey dwellings with garages approved and at 3 Brisbane Road, Osmond Smith's outline application to create a residential building plot in the west part of the garden, was also given the go-ahead.

The change of use from shop to office for the Gift Shop on Villiers Street and the construction of a memorial to Sergeant McKay VC at Mount Longdon were approved as was Golden Touza's application to build a hardstanding area at 11 Coastal Road.

Three Government applications were approved as Phase Five of the Sapper Hill Development providing plots for 79 houses was given the go-ahead along with the construction of four pairs of semi-detached dwellings (similar to those within Phases 1-4).

At Stanley House the erection of a timber framed building for classrooms and play area for the Infant and Junior School was given temporary permission.

However an outline application by the Adventist Educational Association to build an educational centre with separate dwelling at the Old BFFI Site, Haskard Rise was refused on the grounds that it was premature and would take up the entire site.

Also refused was Jim Ward's application to site a static caravan as 9 Anderson Drive.

Linda McRae's outline application for the erection of a purpose built nursery/early years child care facility at Jersey Road, directly south of the OK Corral play park was deferred for more information on access and parking requirements.

Graham France passes away

IT is with sadness we report the death of Graham Brian France who passed peacefully in his sleep on March 1.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee MLA Jan Cheek paid tribute to his many years of active and diligent service on the committee to which he had just recently been reappointed as a lay member.

Mr France was Planning Officer for many years, said MLA Cheek, adding that many an applicant could be grateful for his diligence in fending off cowboy builders on their behalf.

Funeral announcement

The funeral for Mr France will be held on Wednesday March 11 at 2pm in the Christchurch Cathedral. Floral tributes may be sent to the home of Caroline Richards at 3 Mountain View.

Please note that the squid jigger Jim Yi is Taiwanese and not Korean as stated in last week's Penguin News.

Falkstock is back in town

THE second Falkstock, hosted by Polar Latitudes, will take place in the Town Hall on Wednesday March 11, from 6.30-11pm.

Pay on the door and there will be a licensed bar provided by the Stanley Sports Association, so 18 years and over only will be able to attend.

Sammy Marsh of Sullivan Shipping who organises the event for the cruise company Polar Latitudes said once again there would be lots of talented musicians and bands to enjoy throughout the evening, finishing up with the Pushers and Skins.

"It was really popular last year so be sure to arrive early to enjoy a great night with the guests from the Sea Explorer," said Miss Marsh.

She added that the event was a huge success last year raising more than £3,000 for the Stephen Jaffray Fund, and it was hoped this would be achieved again this year.

"I look forward to seeing you all there."

Prison and probation for Mission burglars

DOMINIC Robert Watson (21) has been sentenced to nine months in prison and banned from driving for three years and Andrew James Felton (24) was given an 18 month probation order and ordered to pay £120 in compensation to the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre, in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Both men had admitted charges of burglary while Mr Watson had also pleaded guilty to taking a vehicle without consent and driving while unfit and without insurance. Mr Felton was also charged with allowing himself to be carried in an unauthorised vehicle.

Mr Watson had been remanded in custody since January 30, while Mr Felton had been released on bail with curfew conditions.

After breaking into the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre on January 29, the men had stolen the safe (containing money, wifi and phone cards), electronic items and food.

The money and most of the items were recovered apart from the safe which Mr Watson had thrown into the harbour after emptying it and a quantity of Euros. The court heard that on February 16, Mr Felton had exchanged 165 Euros for £114.24 at the Standard Chartered Bank. Police were informed and he was later arrested. Mr Felton said he had found the Euros in the sofa while tidying his house and as he did not have any money for heating fuel and food he had exchanged them.

Defence lawyer Simon Crowder said these actions could only be treated as an aggravating feature and dealt with by compensation.

Both men have ongoing problems dealing with earlier traumatic events in their lives as well as alcohol issues, according to presentence reports.

It was estimated that repairs to the Centre and replacing items not recovered would cost £1,799.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said the probation order for Mr Felton was not a soft option as it was a restriction on his liberty.

A prohibition order (black list) may also be appropriate for Mr Watson when he was released from prison, said Mrs Faulds.

Driving ban, £1,200 compensation and suspended sentence

Rene Patricio Saldiva Cisternas was banned from driving for three years, given a one month prison sentence suspended for two years and fined £1,200 on Friday (Feb 27).

Mr Cisternas crashed into a parked vehicle on December 23, when he was more than three times over the legal limit to drive.

Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said she was satisfied the custody threshold had been reached as it was a second offence in a short period of time.

Mr Cisternas was also ordered to pay £100 prosecution costs.

Drink driving

IN the summary court on March 4, Timothy Dave George pleaded guilty to drink driving in Stanley on February 7.

Mr George was fined £450 plus £100 court costs and was disqualified from driving for 18 months.

On the day in question the Royal Falkland Islands Police received a report that an individual was going to drive a vehicle and had been drinking.

Officers went to the scene reported and observed Mr George enter a vehicle and drive via the Bypass Road to the Look-out Industrial Estate where he entered the Estate at such speed as to cause the vehicle to take the corner on the opposite side of the road. It was also noted that Mr George drove in excess of 10mph in the 10mph zone. An officer stopped the vehicle and conducted a road side breath test. Mr George failed the test and was arrested. At the Police Station he later tested a lower reading of 80.4mg per 100ml of breath (the legal limit is 35mg per 100ml).

Justice of the Peace Keith Biles said the court took the matter very seriously adding that it must have been obvious to Mr George that he had had too much to drink. He had been drinking from early in the afternoon and was more than twice the legal limit.

Driving fine

Javier Sotomayor Morales pleaded guilty to driving without a vehicle licence and driving without insurance, on Wednesday. Justice of the Peace Keith Biles said driving without insurance put other road users and the general public at considerable risk and the court viewed that with "some severity."

Mr Sotomayor was fined £250 for driving without insurance, £100 for driving without a vehicle licence, £85 court costs and his license was endorsed.

Medals for RAF

TWO members of an RAF search and rescue (SAR) team who found and rescued a fisherman lost overboard near the Falklands have received medals for their heroic deeds. Flt Lt Ian Campbell, who has been awarded the Air Force Cross, and Sgt Dan Allanson the Queen's Gallantry Medal were part of a four-man SAR team called to rescue a fisherman lost overboard from the vessel FV Venturer 60 miles northeast of East Falkland on July 28, 2014. The search took place at night in atrocious weather including 45ft waves, torrential rain and 55-mph winds. Against all odds they rescued the man from the water. Despite the team's valiant attempts to save the man's life, he was later pronounced dead at the KEM Hospital.

Phil and Carol wed on St David's Day

PHIL Ovenden married Carol Green, after being together for 15 years on St David's Day, (March 1). Ray Robson performed the ceremony at the Welsh Guards Memorial at Fitzroy.

Also present were Carol and Phil's respective mothers, Ann Reid and Elaine Manwaring, who had flown from the UK to take part in their special day, as well as Judy Hillidge, Carol's best friend since their teen years and the Welsh Guards veterans.

Carol and Phil met many years ago because of the events that happened on June 8, 1982 and they had always wanted to marry in front of the Memorial on St David's Day.

"Despite what happened here, it is a truly beautiful, peaceful place. Fitzroy Cove has always had a special meaning to us both," said Phil.

Carol wore a full-length, ivory wedding gown with a red, fur bolero. Phil successfully stood on the train, leaving behind a reasonable footprint.

A reception for family and friends was held in the Hall. Food was brought by the guests and Andi Neate sang a selection of her own and traditional Gaelic folk songs.

It was true to Carol and Phil's individual take on what a marriage ought to be. Even the rain held off and the wind dropped for just long enough.

They would both like to say a huge thank you, "to all who came, all who wished us well and to those who joined us on the webcam overlooking the cove."

Remembering Stuart Booth

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THE presentations at the public meeting this week featuring Emergency Services brought home, if we needed reminding, how much we rely on volunteers and part timers to take essential roles in some important services. The commitment of time and energy by so many individuals is yet another of the things that make this a special place to live. MLA numbers were low with two absent overseas otherwise we would have almost outnumbered the public who, once you subtracted the press, numbered about a dozen, possibly the lowest number for any public meeting during this Assembly. Perhaps people find presentations boring, or more likely, they have better things to do on a light summer evening when no new controversy is in the making.

While on the subject of making this an even better place to live, I was heartened to hear about two lads clearing some of the almost ubiquitous plastic from fences on the route in from the airport. Good to hear for two reasons: first that someone here reads my column (most of my feedback comes from overseas) and secondly that someone took some action. Perhaps it will inspire one or two more to do likewise as a matter of pride in our country.

Among our other meetings we have a short presentation on possible biological control of earwigs. Like most people I will need to be convinced that the parasitic fly will target earwigs and nothing else. We would not want to introduce inadvertently something harmful to other insects. It is important to remember that the chemical control currently used does harm other insects and while we are assured it is not harmful to humans and pets I remain uneasy about its frequent and widespread use. It is interesting that Stanley Growers have been using biological pest controls for years with no disasters as far as I know.

It has been exciting to see helicopters undertaking the rig transfers and to watch a new drilling campaign get underway. I hope all the effort and investment made by the companies concerned is rewarded by a safe and successful campaign.

STUART Alfred Booth was born on August 12, 1920 in Widnes, Lancashire, the sole child of Alfred Booth, a cooperative grocery manager, and Alice May Booth a milliner. Educated locally in elementary school and at the Wade Deacon Grammar School, he trained as a teacher at Chester College. By that time WWII had broken out and he served as a chemist in a chemical defence research establishment for the duration. On release he taught in various schools for five years. During that time in 1946 he met and married Jessie Kay, a Hollerith machine operator (an early form of mechanical computing). He had great interest in the natural sciences, flowers, birds and wildlife. Most of his vacations were spent in the mountains of the British isles.

In 1951 he answered an advertisement for a teaching post in the Falklands and was accepted as a teacher in the Stanley Senior School. The school leaving age was fourteen, although there was a continuation class for those pupils who wished to continue for a further year. In the following years a science course was developed and in time a science laboratory was built and equipped. There was, of course little or no road transport outside Stanley but expeditions to Kidney Island on the government harbour launch Alert were enjoyed by groups of senior pupils.

Stuart Booth

Mr Booth and his wife once walked along the Wickham Heights to Ajax Bay, living mostly on pemmican and porridge.

In 1964 he was appointed headmaster of the Stanley Schools. In 1968 the age limit was raised to fifteen giving the senior pupils the opportunity to extend their education. With few job opportunities available for girls at that time, Mr Booth utilised the extra year to initiate a commercial course, book-keeping, shorthand and typing to RSA standard with himself teaching book-keeping and his wife teaching shorthand and typing. The course proved very successful and many pupils passed the RSA examinations and found careers in various offices.

Mr Booth retired in 1976 and then had a varied life acting as a locum for officers on leave. Among other positions he served as harbour master, customs officer and central store officer and later librarian. He also found himself almost overwhelmed with requests from a number of farms and small businesses in Stanley to deal with their bookkeeping and accountancy. It was not until he was eighty years old that he retired for the second time from all the further work he had taken on. In addition to other responsibilities he and his wife Jessie were both active as JPs.

They spent their latter days at Racecourse Cottage in Stanley, or bird-watching, walking and gardening. They also made regular visits to Australia to the family of their unofficially adopted daughter, Joan Halliday. (From The Dictionary of Falklands Biography).

Mr Booth died on February 4 2015 and his wife Jessie just over two weeks later on February 20.

Cervical cancer and prevention

THE cervix is the lowest part of the womb (uterus). It is often called the neck of the womb.

Cervical cancer is the third or fourth most common female cancer worldwide. It is one of the few types of cancers which can be detected and stopped before it ever begins. Regular cervical screening tests have significantly reduced the incidence and death rates.

The cervical screening test (also called smear test) is not a cancer test. The test is used to detect early abnormalities of the cervix which, if untreated, could lead to cervical cancer in the future; hence it is a kind of preventive test. Women are routinely invited to have cervical screening test as per schedule. At age 25 (First invitation) 25 - 49 (3 yearly) 50 - 64 (5 yearly) 65+ Only those who have not been screened since age 50 or have had recent abnormal tests. During each test some cells are removed from the cervix with a plastic brush. The cells are then examined under a microscope to look for early changes. Some women may find the procedure a bit uncomfortable or embarrassing, but for most women it is not painful. If the test shows any abnormality it does not mean cancer in the vast majority of cases. Abnormal cells indicate that cancer may develop sometime in the future. Further tests are recommended to see if the abnormal cells return to normal on their own or to remove them to stop getting cancer.

Changes in the cells of the cervix are often caused by the human papilloma virus (HPV). If HPV is found further investigation may be carried out. Any treatment is offered if necessary. This is also the reason school-aged girls are now vaccinated against HPV.

Please call KEMH reception to book an appointment with practice nurse for smear test clinic.

The Shame of the jigger Deaths

I FEEL sure that one or more sectors of the readership is going to be irritated, annoyed or worse when they read this page. On the other hand, a sizeable proportion of you will probably agree with my views, so I will take strength from my allies and step fully into the controversy about foreign fishermen who risk - and often find - death in their desperate attempts to escape their Falklands-licensed workplaces.

Of course not all poor far-Eastern crewmen aboard the Korean and Taiwanese Illex squid fishing ships risk death by drowning or exposure rather than remain on their ships. But far too many do. They do it every year, and this year has seen more such desperate bids for freedom than at any time since 2010.

There is little doubt that many of these crews - probably not all - are subject to brutality, dismal working conditions or disillusionment because they were not told they would be so far from home for so long. This is shocking enough. But that this trend has not been stopped is just as shocking.

Men choose to jump into the deadly-cold waters of Pt William or Stanley Harbour. Some survive and are returned to their ships or go home. The unlucky ones die. The victims come from Vietnam, Korean, Taiwan, the Philippines and almost anywhere else in Asia where squid-fishing 'jiggers' can find men who are desperate for work.

There are no assumptions in the preceding paragraphs. My facts have been taken from reliable sources. To be even more sure of my facts, I decided before writing this that I should request further clarification from legislators and officials who create fishing policy in the Falklands and administer it. So I contacted the Falklands Government and - because FIG has asked the UK Government to help with the issue - I also contacted the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London.

I emailed a list of questions to MLA Phyl Rendell (who carries the governmental portfolio for fishing) on Monday this week, and I had her reply the same day. Phyl answered as many questions as she could as fully as possible, and this impressed me. She passed my questions on to Director of Fisheries John Barton for further comment, and John too came back to me the same day with very useful information. I did not gain the impression that they were trying to hide anything from me, and they probably knew it was obvious from their answers that FIG has no policy in place yet which can be expected to stop the deaths. I know them both well, and I am sure they feel as upset as anyone about this.

Here are some of the pertinent facts that the MLA and the senior official shared with me, followed by my comments. Firstly, the numbers of jumpers and deaths:

2010 - 4 jumped, all rescued
2011 - 3 jumped, all died

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of Penguin News

2013 - 2 jumped, all rescued

2014 - 3 jumped, all died

2015 - 9 jumped, 2 died

In just six seasons since 2010, twenty-eight men jumped and eight died. As attempts to escape go, the 28.5 per cent survival rate is dreadful. For all their poverty, there is no reason to think these fishermen were stupid, so they must have been very desperate indeed to take their chances.

One could argue that the numbers of escapers are not high considering - and I do not have a firm figure - that upwards of 2,000 men are probably employed on the Korean and Taiwanese ships during the season. But there is probably a similar number of men employed on the predominantly European and Falklands owned ships that work around the Falklands and South Georgia, and none of them leap into the water.

So what is the government - in cooperation with the UK FCO - doing about it? Sorry to sound unkind to a few readers, but I would say not enough.

Phyl and John advised me that prosecutions of ships' skippers are very difficult because brutality, if it occurs, does so outside the 12 miles of coastal waters that are Falklands legal jurisdiction. The ship involved in the latest horror was allowed to go free and continue its fishing. So risk of punishment is no real disincentive.

I accept that, as Phyl told me, efforts must, "continue year on year to get the message across to vessel owners that they need to improve their recruitment arrangements and health and safety standards for their crew."

John Barton pointed out - rightly, I am sure - that: "There are also a number of conventions which would have helped fishermen had they been ratified and implemented. Sadly, a number have not made it due to lack of support, which is a global issue."

These are good points, and they are an area in which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office could be helpful. As mentioned earlier, I approached the FCO asking what they are doing, and while they responded reasonably promptly, I was offered only this platitudinous statement: "We have been concerned at these recent incidents, and take all loss of life and allegations of abuse on board shipping fleets very seriously. We are currently reviewing how we might best assist the Falklands authorities in tackling the problem."

Well done, FIG, compared to that scant and obscure response, your words were models of helpfulness and transparency, even if you weren't able to say the things many of us would like to hear. From that vacuous FCO statement, one has to conclude that London has not been doing anything of substance to resolve a serious and measurable human rights issue in one of its territories. If they are doing something effectively, then let them say so.

The phenomenon of the jumpers is a stain on the governments of Taiwan and Korea, but they probably don't care because many of the victims are poor foreigners. Left to their own devices, Taiwan and Korea will do little or nothing to improve conditions for their crews. Unfortunately, it is also a stain on the name of the Falklands.

The fishing companies, and through them the governments, might take notice if tougher measures were introduced against the entire Illex fleet. Other people will have other ideas and probably better ones, but here are a few suggested new measures. When the jiggers enter port to collect their licences, all crewmen should be required to come ashore briefly by launch (rather than by swimming), partly for compulsory rest and recuperation but also to give them a chance to make a safe runner, without the risk of dying, if they wish to do so. I would predict a rapid change in crew conditions.

FIG could let it be known that it will retract and sell no further licences to companies from whose ships crew have attempted to escape. This measure too would hit the jigger owners in their wallets and persuade them to introduce measures guaranteeing happy ships.

The elephant in the room is, of course, the jigger fleet's value in hard cash to the Falklands Exchequer. The Taiwanese and Korean companies are expected to contribute around £6.5 million to the Government in return for those licences. Yes, if harder measures were introduced to end the deaths, the skippers could up-anchors and steam off. But I doubt they would do that. The opportunity to (usually) Hoover up illex squid in Falklands controlled waters is hugely valuable, and would be worth the cost of improving crew recruitment, working and living conditions.

One aspect of this sad story that really jars is the contrast between the lives of the European and South American fishermen who crew the other fleets and those of the far-Easterners. If one Spanish crewman was to jump ship and drown in Falkland waters because of bad working conditions, the full weight of the EU would ensure that it simply could not happen again.

But let's face one ugly fact: currently the lives of far-Eastern fishermen do not have the same value as those of Europeans. Until the Falklands Government demonstrates that they believe differently, by introducing tough measures, then the phenomenon of death by jigger will continue to be a matter of shame.

REQUEST FOR EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST FOR ROADS TO NON-AGRICULTURAL DESTINATIONS

IN October 2014 Executive Council agreed a policy to support the construction of roads to non-agricultural destinations where a clear economic justification for doing so could be demonstrated. The Falkland Islands Government is now seeking initial expressions of interest (EOI) from businesses that might wish to benefit from the subsidy that such a scheme might offer in the future.

Interested parties should note that no funding for this policy has yet been allocated and the purpose of the expression of interest stage is to ascertain the potential level of demand for such a scheme, and the nature of proposals in order that these can be considered within the National Infrastructure Plan and associated FIG budget deliberations. EOIs will be used to assist FIG in refining its approach to a possible funding programme. While submission of an EOI is not a prerequisite for participating in any future programme, interested parties are strongly encouraged to submit responses.

The expression of interest should be no more than 2 pages in length and should address the following:

- The location and estimated length of the road to be constructed (including start and end points);
- A description of who the main users of the road will be (and in cases where the proposal is to upgrade an existing track, an indication of the current traffic levels, and possible future traffic generated by a new road);
- A statement as to how you will provide match funding towards the construction of the road, and ideally, an indication of what proportion (%) of the costs you will bear;
- A description of how you propose that any such road would be maintained on an ongoing basis;
- A brief summary of the economic benefits to the Islands that would arise as a result of the construction of the road;

Vocational training lacked support; MLAs stupidity and consultants laughing all the way to the bank

LETTER in response to Penguin News article Issue February 27th 2015 "How apprenticeship schemes must be completely reassessed."

I felt it necessary to respond to the recent article where MLA Barry Elsby stated that apprenticeships needed to be reassessed.

First and foremost the schemes I believe do not need to be reassessed but simply provided with further funds and full support from the powers that be. Before I took over the role the apprenticeship scheme was stagnant, poorly funded, there was a lack of marketing and had very little employer support. After some hard work, marketing, presentations, hard graft and knocking on employers doors it grew and has become I believe a very successful route with 40+ apprentices being trained during my time.

At all times I ensured apprenticeships were sold as first rate opportunities to students at the community school and I even successfully created the Young Apprenticeship scheme age 14-16 which introduced vocational qualifications at an earlier age enabling them to obtain the vital skills that employers were looking for. However this scheme was never utilised correctly by the FICS and was never offered to all students but to those students with apparent behavioural problems and learning difficulties which in truth is not the case with students that learn by 'doing' rather than from a book! I wanted to see the Young Apprenticeship Scheme on a par with academics and allow the student the choice to pick the route that suited them. It has never to this day been advertised to students, parents and employers correctly and still does not allocate college points to students on completion.

The Training Centre has always been seen as the poor relation of the education system with a smaller budget and a lack of support from management and director level. For 10 years I strived to put vocational qualifications on the map and show to students that it was a very worthwhile route to undertake. But how can you do this when the FICS looks at vocational qualifications as second rate? The points system utilised by the FICS for overseas studies is higher for Peter Symonds but lower for Chichester College which to me advertises to students and parents that if you don't get the points for Peter Symonds there is always Chichester College and the vocational route. Why also now is the FICS overseeing the running of the Training Centre, yet again academics controlling the vocational route and making decisions on something they really don't understand.

Wages for assessors and tutors in the Islands are also far less than a teacher when in the UK a qualified further education teacher is on a par with an academic teacher. Wages also for qualified trade persons are lower than that of office workers, but only in the Falkland Islands. Check anywhere else in the world and trades persons are on a much higher wage purely because their skills are vital to the development of the community; they are valued. The reasons PWD are not getting enough trained and qualified personnel is not because of a lack of qualifications being offered it's because i. Rates of pay are ridiculously low and ii. There are no wage incentives upon completion of a vocational qualification.

Throughout my time as the Apprenticeship Co-ordinator I faced an uphill battle with the powers that be to fully back vocational training and to help increase the workforce in the Islands. I was asked by MLAs some years ago 'how do we look to increase the labour force in the Falkland Islands with oil developments looming?' My response was simple; provide the Training Centre with further funds to enable them to support and train more apprentices; do away with the 15 apprentices per year ruling; ensure assessors are placed throughout government departments; provide a Vocational Board with members that actually support vocational training and who have a background in vocational qualifications to provide strategic management and allow more flexibility for employers.

If this had happened we could have had further qualified tradesmen and women now working to assist the economic development of the Islands and a Vocational Board that is not micro managing the Training Centre but actually strategically supporting the development of Islanders via vocational qualifications and apprenticeships.

Learning should not be about forcing students down a route that simply does not suit them; it should be flexible, cater for all and most importantly nurture those skills that are strong within each student. Teachers and all those involved in learning then should look to help develop those weaker skills sets that students may have via a learning programme that suits the individual.

How is it that this is happening in the Infant and Junior School but then not carried on into the secondary school? When visiting my daughters FS1 and FS2 classes I was delighted to see a mixture of practical sessions and theoretical sessions being utilised to develop their skills and knowledge; why can this not be continued into the secondary school with classes being offered in vocational courses and other options being offered to students instead of the apparently surefire route of the GCSEs? Don't even get me started on the poor state of affairs of the nursery setting which is the most crucial stage of a child's life that should prepare them for their studies at school level and for the rest of their life. A report I undertook after visiting First Steps nursery in the UK last year identified improvements, funding and responsibilities government should be undertaking, but again is an area that MLAs are shying away from supporting and developing.

Maybe if I was an overseas consultant they would be utilising this report to help develop the nurseries?

City and Guilds recently undertook a survey of qualifications in the UK and asked what employers were looking for in students. The results showed that employers did not value degrees or academic courses and preferred to employ those students with vocational skills and those that have been put through practical courses. There is a massive move in the UK by awarding bodies such as City and Guilds to work closely with employers to ascertain what it is they actually want in employees; this needs to be undertaken in the Falkland Islands and unfortunately has not happened instead we have the total waste of money that is the Training Needs Analysis, £60,000 I do believe. Again another huge amount of money being spent on a consultant to tell us what we already know.

It is a great shame that MLAs, managers and directors cannot trust in their own workforce and the local Falkland Islands talent to ascertain whether or not we as a nation are offering the right qualifications and educational experiences to our children. Yes by all means benchmark, observe and research other countries but let's use some common sense and start speaking to those that actually work on the shop floor, who are grafting to move things forward. Consultants are laughing all the way to the bank as they continue to fleece us due to MLAs and management's constant stupidity and lack of common sense approach to look for a solution to the problem in-house. If we are spending all this money on education to improve our nation's skills and experience why is it we then have to continue to request help from overseas consultants?

I left government after being told I wasn't ready even after gaining 10 years' experience and obtaining the qualifications to undertake the role of manager. If you want those students to work and settle in the Islands then provide them with incentives and ensure the money spent on them is put to good use. I would hate

A completely different place

I QUOTE Michael Betts from page 3 of Feb 27 edition of Penguin News: "Opening up Arch Green would allow people to stop and take pictures, as they tend to do, with less congestion."

There's a famous and narrow street in York. The Shambles; it gets congested when tourists are there in numbers; would you suggest they knock the old buildings down?

If the front becomes a broad boulevard from jetty to museum it will be a different place.

Action not talk needed

SO, again the price of fuel has dropped, this must be the third or fourth month in a row. It is a saving on drivers' and householders' pockets but, there is one other commodity which has not been reduced, ELECTRICITY.

Six wind generators to ease the burden on the diesel generators; has the cost of wind increased? Isn't it time the cost per unit was reduced drastically? Isn't the Government getting enough revenue from the jigger licences (£20 000,000)? What happens to that? all going on overseas jollies?

And then there's the revenue from passenger liner licences; how much does that amount to? We are never told the total income in to these Islands, it's all hush-hush. This Government is always pleading poverty. Come off it, give us what we are due, good roads, cheaper electric and there was talk of reintroducing the holiday money scheme. Don't talk, act.

Ocean Rig big cheque for Overseas Games Association

RIG Manager of Ocean Rig (owners of the Eirik Raude drilling rig) Ole Thorsen this week presented a cheque for £10,000 to Falkland Islands Overseas Games Vice Chair Andrew Brownlee and FIOGA Secretary Stacy Bragger (above).

Mr Brownlee made contact with Ocean Rig around six months ago after meeting Mr Thorsen and asked if his company would kindly consider sponsoring Team Falklands, "to assist in sending our athletes to the forthcoming Natwest Island Games in Jersey." On his return Mr Thorsen, "came to see me and gave me the good news in person that they had agreed to sponsor FIOGA to the tune of £10,000, simply fantastic."

He said: "Without such financial support from companies like Ocean Rig FIOGA would not be able to give the level of assistance it does to Falklands' teams to compete overseas which is so important not just in developing the athletes, but the ambassadorial role for the Falkland Islands at such events can not be understated."

Police right to raid houses?

HAVING heard about three police raids in recent times all of which were fruitless, it begs the questions, what is their reasoning for such searches and also what protection do the public have from such searches? Do the police really have every right to raid houses on a whim? Is there a paper trail which can explain these three house searches? Who has overall control? Are people of a certain age all going to have to live in fear that one day the police will raid their home? For those reading this and thinking only the guilty need worry, you wasted money on curtains, idiot. Name and address withheld

Chief of Police Superintendent Len McGill explains procedures required to search houses

RECENT searches carried out by officers of the Royal Falkland Islands Police have been conducted with the intention of discovering evidence in relation to suspected offences and to recover stolen property. If a search is negative it informs the investigation and may close a line of enquiry.

The powers, safeguards and procedures in relation to searches may be found under Part XI and XII of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. Searches of properties may be conducted upon arrest of a person for a suspected offence, on the authority of an officer of Inspector or above after a person has been arrested and is at a police station or on a search warrant issued by the Courts.

cordance with relevant law; the Misuse of Drugs Ordinance for example or under Section 179 of the Criminal Justice Ordinance. Officers have to make application to the court for such warrants and must state the grounds for the search, the premises they wish to enter and search and the articles or persons sought. The officer does all this on oath and must answer any questions that the justice of the peace, Senior Magistrate or Judge hearing the application ask them.

Records are made of all applications for search warrants and of the authorities for the search of premises after arrest. Record of Search forms are completed during all searches recording their outcome.

Overall control of searches is achieved by the police and courts adhering to the above mentioned legislation.

No one, regardless of age, need live in fear that one day the police will raid their home, unless they are engaged in unlawful or criminal activity. The Royal Falkland Islands Police will use all powers at its disposal to investigate unlawful or criminal activity, but will always exercise those powers within the law.

THE Darwin Harbour annual sports meeting got underway with horse racing, gymkhana and foot events on Saturday.

The event at Goose Green was well attended, assisted by the good weather, and although the races were short of horses and senior jockeys the enthusiasm of the junior jockeys filled gaps in the programme as they saddled up for trotting races.

Tim Bonner had a productive meeting with five firsts and retained the Governors Cup riding Zafonic.

The MPA band Top Cover took to the stage on Saturday night and one long term sports attendee told Penguin News, "it was the best dance in years." Everyone was in the hall and danced for several hours solid to Heather's music even after the band had finished.

Unfortunately heavy rain on Sunday meant that racing was cancelled and so a lively crowd met at the Community Hall where a variety of indoor games were held.

Causing great hilarity was the introduction of Sumo wrestling suits and some interesting bouts are reported to have taken place.

The dog trials (see page 11) were held on Monday giving the race course some time to dry off before more racing and foot events took place. At the time of going to print childrens sports were taking place

Hew Grierson with Cop, Toni Stevens and Dee, Arthur Turner with Jess, Lyndsay Short and Beaut and Champion trialler Steven Dickson with Jeff and Roy

STEVEN Dickson took top spots in both the open and novice dog trials on Monday and will be joined by Arthur Turner and Hew Grierson to represent East Falkland at the Championship Trials to be held later this year.

There were 10 entries (six open and four novice) for the event which commentator Brian Aldridge described as being of a high standard.

Brian who has been attending East sports for some 29 years said in the early years if a few handlers got the sheep to the pen they were doing good, but in recent years the sheep were actually penned more frequently. At his trials six of the dogs penned the sheep.

He also said that giving the sheep work prior to the trials made them more settled and accustomed to dogs working at close quarters.

First out on the day was Bob Short with Tip who set the standard and penned the sheep in the allotted 12 minutes to complete the course. Despite the fact it was his birthday, Bob was dismayed to discover that the traditional tipple in the pen for the first handler to pen the sheep was missing, but he was suitably compensated with Carlsberg at the end of the trials.

Both Steven Dickson and Hew Grierson's dogs worked to their normal high standard, although Brian commented on how wide the novice dogs had worked. Younger dogs tend to work in closer and get gradually wider as they get older and there was a risk Roy and Billy may be in the next paddock in future years, he said.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24-hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Décor Services Golf Medal win for Adam

THE Décor Services March Golf Medal was played on Sunday March 1 and drew a field of fourteen competitors.

The weather on the day was overcast with some light rain falling during the round.

Winds were light and variable, so some good scores were expected.

The winner on the day was Adam Glanville with a superb round of 69 (60 net). Adam is only the fifth person ever to break 70 on Stanley Golf Course, a really impressive achievement.

Second on a comeback was Darren Wade with a 76 (67 net).

Other notable scores were a 73 by Kevin Clapp and a 76 by Roy Smith.

The birdie money was scooped by Martyn Gilson Clarke with a fantastic eagle on the sixth hole, holing out from some 100yds with his approach shot.

This Sunday the club will host the South Atlantic Challenge Trophy. This will be a team event with teams of three competing. The format will be a Stableford Alliance with the best two scores counting on each hole and all three counting on selected holes. There is a list in the clubhouse for teams to be entered. Anyone not in a team, but wishing to play should just turn up at the club by 0900 and they will be accommodated. All teams should sign-in by 0900 for a 0915 tee-off.

Falkstock raises £4k

MORE than £4,500 was raised for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund on Wednesday night as cruise ship passengers and crew and Stanley residents got together for an evening of music.

Sponsored by Polar Latitudes and organised by Sullivan Shipping's cruise coordinator Sammy Marsh to celebrate the end of the tourism season, this was the second Falkstock and is a popular date on the social calendar.

The fund raising was kick started with a £1,000 donation from Sullivan Shipping and £500 from fishing company Bold Ventures.

One generous passenger from the Sea Explorer also purchased enough Falkstock t-shirts to ensure all the musicians were sporting one as they took to the stage.

Last year the Sea Explorer was unable to get into Stanley for the event after a freak wave in the Drake Passage caused damage to the ship and it had to go to South America for repairs.

This year however not only did the vessel spend the day in Stanley, but the passengers were treated to glorious sunshine and a flat calm evening to set sail.

About 120 passengers and crew from the Sea Explorer enjoyed songs from Paul and Clare Howes as well as dancing a jig to the lively fiddle and banjo playing of Penny Nicholson and David Ashbridge accompanied by Paul Jays on guitar.

The guitar playing talents of David Ashbridge and Anthony Tuson were well and truly showcased with their popular acoustic versions of Fleetwood Mac and Queen songs. Musicians from the ship took to the stage to entertain for a few songs and proving very popular with both cruisers and residents were two new voices from Mount Pleasant.

Barton on jigger incidents 'any case a case too many'

"ANY case," of crew leaving a vessel by jumping overboard, "is clearly a case too many," but cases of brutality in the Falklands fishery are rare, emphasised Director of Natural Resources in response to points made by Penguin News columnist Graham Bound last week on the subject of jigger fishermen jumping overboard at Stanley.

Mr Barton said Mr Bound had some valid points but a number of his statements were, "wide of the mark." Graham referred to crew making 'desperate bids for freedom' and said he had little doubt that many of the crews were subject to 'brutality, dismal working conditions or disillusionment.'

But Mr Barton says that cases of brutality are the exception, even amongst crew who have left their ship by jumping into the harbour.

He reiterated that all vessels were inspected, many with extended inspections, which provides an opportunity to observe the crew and assess conditions. "It might be unlikely to observe any brutality during such an inspection although the effects might be visible. In the majority of cases these ships seem reasonably well run."

He accepted that fishing involved some long hours in difficult conditions.

"Jumping into the harbours at these water temperatures is a desperate action. However in the case of the Jin Yi the motivation given by the crew for leaving the ship was that they did not like the work and wished to go home. In response to direct questioning some of the seven also made general allegations of physical ill-treatment towards them whilst at work (before arriving in Falkland Islands waters). The allegations were so generalised that no suspected abuser could be identified. As far as we can tell they did not make any request to be released from their contracts and to go home. It may be that they felt jumping was the only option," said Mr Barton.

He said in the case of the Jin Yi, evidence of abuse was vague and wouldn't pass prosecution thresholds in any event; regardless that the allegations apparently related to incidents outside Falklands jurisdiction.

Mr Barton assured that while the ability to bring a criminal prosecution in those cases depended on an offence being committed in Falkland's jurisdiction, taking action on licences has no such limits.

He explained: "Clear evidence of brutality or abuse committed beyond 12 miles, or beyond 200 miles for that matter, would likely provide grounds for taking such action. The Captain, vessel, and company could potentially be prohibited from operating in the Falklands fishery for a protracted period. A criminal prosecution is preferable if an offence has been committed, but the option of taking license action is not an empty threat or action."

Mr Barton said any crew jumping ship was a case too many: "There are a number of actions which need to be taken by FIG, fishing companies and flag state governments. Where cases of brutality are encountered they should be dealt with severely. However, such cases are fortunately rare in the Falklands fishery where some 4,000 fishermen are working. Fishing undoubtedly involves long hours in arduous conditions. In many cases there may be a base pay level supplemented to some degree by a catch related bonus, which in turn dictates long hours when catching is good. The employment conditions and contracts need to be clear prior to crew signing up."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

SO persuasive were the arguments for and against the Youth Parliament Motion that the vote should be given to persons of age 16+, I felt momentarily panicked at the debate on Monday (see page 4) by the sudden thought that the viewing public might be expected to vote.

Bearing in mind I had just nodded sagely at statements from both sides, had we been invited to scribble aye or nay on a ballot paper I may have had to scrunch mine up and slide down my chair.

After a few more days to ponder the concept the truth is my opinion still hadn't veered off in one direction or the other. It certainly wouldn't be a disaster for age to be reduced. Our youths are a practical and well educated lot and those inclined to vote would likely do so in an informed manner.

On the other hand I agree with Miss Whalley King that the issues of that age range are not wildly dissimilar to those of 18 and 19 year olds and are therefore reasonably represented already.

Then again perhaps that smacks of those days when men claimed they were perfectly capable of looking after women's interests and they really shouldn't bother their pretty little heads with voting.

Whatever your conclusion the most important point to come out of this excellent exercise in democratic practice is that if the eight students are in any way representative of their peers, then the Falklands political future is in accomplished hands (and possibly a few more female ones).

As a person occasionally prone to whimsical thoughts it felt like the only thing missing from the official opening of the truly excellent oiled seabird rehabilitation building on Tuesday was a line of excited (but grubbied) penguins tripping gratefully through the door. Thankfully this wasn't the case - we don't actually want oiled penguins - even though it may have made for a great photo op.

Before Sarah Crofts jogs up the road and bops me around the ear for fanciful imaginings on a serious subject, I should add that my light mood is generated by admiration for the FC employees and volunteers, for all they put into caring for the birds, and for developing this facility. Fairly frequently my faith in human nature is given a boost and this was one such occasion. The facility isn't pretty or high tech or state of the art: it is warm and dry and practical and basic but it was clear from the faces of Sarah and the whole gang, that to them it's a (penguin) palace.

Incidentally it is worth highlighting that improvements to two Falklands facilities, that of FC and the Gun Club (see page 3) have been as a result of (much appreciated) substantial assistance from HM Forces in the Islands.

New facility provides better care for penguins

A NEW Oiled Seabird Rehabilitation Facility providing a much improved working environment for those caring for the birds as well as improved facilities for the birds was officially opened on Tuesday.

Heated running water, indoor and outdoor pools for the penguins and the ability to freeze fish and also thaw it for feeds all make the new unit a much better place to carry out the tasks needed to rehabilitate oiled penguins.

Sarah Crofts explained that the facility was developed in response to a review of the Islands' ability to deal with oiled wildlife in 2010.

At the same time, the Joint Services Dog Section from MPC, after visiting the vets at Stanley and being shown rehabilitated oiled penguins in care, initiated a campaign to raise money to help improve the existing facility (a basic shed with no water or electricity).

In 2011, BFSAI donated Falklands Conservation eight used Corimex containers from MPC. The units were relocated to the new site behind the Veterinary Department in Stanley.

A combination of fundraising by the military and the local community, as well as voluntary support from local companies allowed them to refit the interior and outside space for the purpose of the facility.

Falklands Conservation under its current MoU with the Government responds where feasible to small-scale wildlife emergencies. The Oiled Seabird Rehabilitation Facility has increased the organisational capacity to deal with oiled seabirds, principally penguins, so that around 20 penguins can be rehabilitated (oiled penguins are currently the most common rescued wildlife, albeit in small numbers).

"The facility has been developed to cope with the frequency and size of most previous wildlife emergencies and will ensure that FC are effective at caring for seabirds that are rescued, as well as providing a safe and improved work space for its staff and the many volunteers that help care for the birds," said Miss Crofts.

The open evening at the Oiled Seabird Rehabilitation Facility was to thank all those involved in supporting the development of the facility to date, and to highlight the generous contributions made from the Falkland community, explained Miss Crofts.

She thanked the FIG veterinary team for their assistance in caring for the penguins and also to the fishing companies and the Fisheries Department for the food they provide. Also to the fundraisers in the community including the West Store Green Token Scheme, local companies and Morrison (Falklands) Ltd for their support.

But most important, said Miss Crofts, was the BFSAI contribution particularly Interserve Defence Ltd and Defence Infrastructure Organisation Ltd as well as the Royal Engineers for their help with the project.

In the meantime, if you have any old towels surplus to requirements, please drop them off at Falklands Conservation where they will be gratefully received and used at the centre.

Miss Marsh said that seeing everyone have such a good time made all the hard work worthwhile, adding that she was very grateful to all those who had helped her pull the event together.

Ali Jacobsen had saved the day by stepping up as sound man at the last minute and the Stanley Sports Association team of Brian Aldridge and Owen and Veronica Summers had manned the bar throughout the evening.

"Thanks also to the many helpers on the doors and especially for the not so fun part of cleaning up."

"Polar Latitudes have helped create a real community event, raising funds for a worthy cause and it looks set to be a regular date on the calendar," said Miss Marsh.

Museum short listed for excellence award

THE Historic Dockyard Museum has been short listed in the International category of the Museums + Heritage Awards for Excellence 2015.

The Museums + Heritage Awards for Excellence celebrate best practice within the cultural sector. All museums, galleries and cultural and heritage visitor attractions have the opportunity to enter, regardless of budgets, the volume of visitors or the profile level of the project.

The Historic Dockyard Museum is the national museum of the Falklands, having moved from Britannia House last year, opening in the Dockyard on September 5.

The new museum is a celebration of the culture and heritage of the Falklands.

Museum Manager, Leona Roberts said everyone involved with the Historic Dockyard Museum was very excited by the news: "We are all absolutely thrilled to have been short-listed in the M+H Awards - it is far more than we would have dared dream of. It is a wonderful reward for all our staff and supporters, for all the people who put such a huge amount of effort into creating this. I hope that the whole community can join in celebrating this acknowledgement of their heritage - it is, after all, their museum."

The Falklands will be represented at the awards ceremony, although Mrs Roberts stressed that the Dockyard was up against stiff competition: "We can't really aspire to go any further in the competition, but are incredibly honoured to simply be mentioned in the same breath as these incredible organisations."

Your questions answered

Q Why, when by law it is the driver's responsibility to ensure they have the correct vehicle insurance cover, is there a need to produce proof of insurance before obtaining vehicle/road tax at the Licencing Bureau? Is vehicle tax refused if the insurance is due to run out prior to the vehicle tax? By doing this is the RFIP taking responsibility for ensuring that road users are properly insured?

Chief of Police Superintendent Len McGill provided the following response

A Regulation 6(3) Road Traffic (Provisional) Regulations Order states that a current certificate of insurance shall be produced to the Chief Police Officer on application for a motor vehicle licence.

This is to show that at the time the Chief Police Officer, through the Licensing Clerk, issues a vehicle licence the vehicle so licenced was covered by a valid policy of insurance. It is a requirement that a certificate of insurance is produced when making application for a motor vehicle licence; therefore if such a certificate were not produced a vehicle licence would not be issued.

It is the responsibility of the driver of a motor vehicle, in accordance with Section 9 Road Traffic Ordinance, to ensure that a valid policy of insurance is in force in relation to that vehicle.

ROYAL Engineers (above) who undertook renovations to the newly formed BFSAI Gun Club and Falkland Gun Club joint range were thanked with an afternoon of clay and pistol shooting and barbecue hosted by the Falkland Gun Club on Wednesday.

Members of 52 Field Sqn, 39 Engineer Regiment, completed the improvements as both a training exercise and community work, supporting the Falkland Islands sporting community and the joint range.

Falkland Gun Club Chairman, Steve Dent said: "We are humbled by the sheer quantity and quality of work completed by the Engineers this summer. FGC have a long standing relationship with the Royal Engineers and BFSAI and we are eternally grateful for their continued support. We hope that these renovations will both support shooting in the Falklands into the future as well as open opportunities for other groups to visit the range and try out our exciting sport"

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

COMPARING the three public meetings I attended last week, the monthly MLA public meeting on Monday, presentation of the Development Plan on Wednesday and discussion of potential biological control of earwigs on Thursday has lead me to conclude that we need a good controversy to get people to meetings. It has also lead me to question why a very few individuals appear to be unable to ask a straightforward question without sounding aggressive, verging on downright rude. I actually felt I should leap to the defence of one civil servant who it appeared was being blamed for decisions made mainly by lay people, in some cases against his advice. I value public meetings which often highlight issues which we may otherwise have missed but always hope for good rational and fact based discussion. The most absorbing meeting was the one on the potential for biological control of earwigs where we were given an excellent presentation on the work to date on ensuring that the proposed flies or their larvae do not prey on anything other than the target species, the earwig. In addition, always eager for facts, I have learned the difference between a parasite and a parasitoid.

On Monday we sat in on the mock assembly in the Court and Council chamber while year 10 students debated the reduction of the minimum voting age from 18 to 16 years. It was an interesting first and all the participants did well in front of cameras, microphones and a larger audience than that attracted by normal Assembly meetings. Many of the speakers dwelt rather heavily on the general incompetence of aged brains which caused some amusement to the audience and those 'older' MLAs who were present. How well I remember the days when, as a teenager I thought anyone over twenty was getting on a bit.

This week we start on some of the longer budget sessions. Thursday will be a full day of presentation by the various bodies that receive larger subventions from FIG. These include the Development Corporation and the Tourist Board which are the two largest recipients.

Ready to vote at 16 says youth parliament

A YOUTH parliament voted in favour of voting rights for age 16+ during a debate held in the Court and Council Chambers on Commonwealth Day on Monday.

MLA Barry Elsby introducing the debate outlined the parliament's relevance, commenting that one of the fundamental principles of the Commonwealth was democracy and the theme this year was 'youth'.

Community School student Gemma Webb (seconded by Gemma Francis) proposed the Motion: 'That this house believes the age of voting should be reduced to sixteen years'.

Many eloquent points were made in support and against the motion by the eight students including (in support) that many countries had already adopted the reduction in age and that individuals of that age could both work, get married, have children and pay tax. It was also noted that an older person with diminished mental faculties can vote but a person of 16 or 17 may not.

Speaking against the Motion Jessica Whalley King feared it overestimated how much independence a sixteen year old actually had; while they could marry it was only with parental consent and while they could work they struggled to find work with enough pay to pay tax.

In the UK Falklands students studying there, Kalon Jaffray and Jessica McPhee, attended the Commonwealth Day events in London including the Commonwealth Day Observance at Westminster Abbey.

A TOWER of London poppy was set at the Welsh Guards Memorial on St. David's Day following the memorial service the same day.

Judy Hillidge, a friend of Guardsman Paul Green who died on Sir Galahad on June 8, 1982 carried the poppy to the islands.

This was her first visit, combining the wedding at Fitzroy with the St David's Day Service and to visit Carol, her best friend since 1980.

The Poppy will be kept at Fitzroy Hall, where it will be displayed and stood at the Memorial on Memorial days. Judy wrote a poem which was read at the Memorial and will also be displayed on the War Wall at the Hall.

'Old' Aussies kayak around SG

FOUR Australian kayakers have successfully circumnavigated South Georgia and while claim has already been made to being first, second and third to carry out the challenge, they gleefully claim to be the oldest group. They may also have had one of the quicker circumnavigations.

With a combined age of 205, Andrew Maffet (50), John Jacoby (50), Jim Bucird (53) and Chris Porter (52) paddled the 600km in just 13 days and could possibly also claim to have had the best weather window ever, with only one day held up with poor conditions.

A New Zealand group were the first to complete the feat in 2006, followed by a Norwegian team while Leiv Poncet has also paddled the distance solo and unsupported.

British explorer Captain James Cook, was the first to sail around South Georgia in 1775, and called it, "a land doomed to perpetual frigidness, whose savage aspects I have not words to describe."

South Georgia's coastline is comprised of cliffs, glaciers and very few sand, gravel and cobblestone beaches, most of which are fiercely guarded by fur seals.

For those who thrive on adventure South Georgia is considered to be a world-class in an age where genuine adventure objectives are few.

Situated in the furious 50s, a latitude shared only with Cape Horn and giving rise to the old mariners saying "in the 40s there is no law - in the 50s there is no god", South Georgia boasts some of the most dramatic landscapes and wildlife havens on earth.

The group arrived January 24, and after a short delay left for South Georgia on board their support vessel Pelagic. There had been a brief panic when the kayakers had arrived without paddles, but in true Falklands fashion the community rallied and they were soon kitted out with replacements.

The final paddle was purchased from FIC and has been dedicated to the Falklands community and will hang in the 4x4 shop, Andrew told Penguin News.

When the original paddles turned up on the next LAN flight they were ferried to South Georgia on the cruise ship Ocean Diamond. The kayakers had by then managed to create a few blisters from the unfamiliar paddles and were glad to be reunited with their own.

The group camped out on the beach every night, and were resupplied on two occasions from the nearby Pelagic. "We knew that unsupported circumnavigation had been achieved so there was no point in making it harder for ourselves," said Andrew.

John Jacoby said the camping out was a highlight of the adventure, adding, "you get so much more interaction with the wildlife and can explore the creeks and glaciers."

Blessed with such good weather the group were up and paddling by 5.30am on most mornings doing 12-13 hour days covering 60-70 kms, convinced that they needed to make the most of it as, "it couldn't last," said John.

They were a bit concerned about the south coast, but when they arrived it was overcast and calm, and was followed by clear days so they kept at it and covered 200 kms in three days. There was some scrappy weather near Cape Disappointment and there was about 35kts of wind with reflected swell and chop off the Cape and that was a bit challenging.

In some respects it would have been nicer to slow down and explore, but when you have good weather on the south coast, make the most of it.

The group enjoyed good luck throughout the circumnavigation. "No capsize, no dramas, all a bit boring really," quipped Andrew.

The group thanked everyone who had been so keen to help them while in Stanley.

"Things happen for a reason and I'd like to think that our paddles were delayed so that we could spend some time learning about and enjoying the place while getting to know some of the people," said Andrew.

The South Georgia Government were also supportive of the venture. "It's no small thing to get a permit and it would be easy for them to not be bothered, but there was an urge to encourage the philosophy of adventure, which we appreciate," said John.

With the good weather and plenty of time left over the group were able to fulfil the second part of their expedition and carry out the Shackleton traverse.

Andrew, Jim and John did it in three days, with just one night out in a tent, which was "pretty horrible," said John.

As if that was not enough for these men whom Antarctic explorer and yachtsman Jerome Poncet had declared in his inimitable fashion as "too old," to paddle around South Georgia, they used the rest of their "spare time," to climb 1,000 metre Snow Peak, for a bit of fun.

Andrew and John who are both farmers back in Australia, have no immediate plans for the next adventure, but there is a vague dream of the Kerguelen Islands in the Indian Ocean... "But we need to get back and build up some credit with the wives first."

UNKNOWN BEAUTY

Ian J. Strange

“UNKNOWN BEAUTY : images of beautiful unknowns”

A high quality book of photographic art.

Ian Strange and his work as an artist and photographer presents that real world of beauty: the unknowns. This work with over 200 images in colour and monochrome covers unknown beauties, not just from different walks of life, but of 36 different nationalities. Non are professional models, stars or celebrities and had not experienced being photographed professionally. Like his subjects the author is unknown in the world of fashion and celebrity photography, but this is the affinity with his subjects, the unknowns which is the heart of this work. Not wishing to have the attributes of a “press” photographer, or adopt paparazzo tactics his subjects were discovered through introductions, chance meetings often resulting in interesting anecdotal stories relating to their discovery. To add a different dimension to his photography and the concept behind this work, a number of untitled images have been added. These might be considered surrealistic, even erotic, but are in keeping with the theme of unknown beauty.

“UNKNOWN BEAUTY images of beautiful unknowns” is a high quality hardback litho production measuring 309 x 264 mm containing 208 pages in colour and black and white. The book comes in two editions, a standard at £35.00 and a slip cased edition limited to 250 copies signed and numbered by the author costing £46.00.

The slip cased edition has a slip case covered in black Wibalín Buckram cloth and embossed on the front and spine in gold foil. This edition is a collectors item and makes a unique gift or presentation piece.

This edition is available from the author at £46 Tel: 21186 / 21185 or e mail furseal@horizon.co.fk and georginastrange@gmail.com A copy may be viewed without any obligation to purchase at the Design In Nature Studio, New Island House, 11 Fitzroy Road East. The standard edition is available from the author or at the Capstan Gift Shop and The Waterfront Gift Shop. The standard edition is available in the UK from www.wildlifebooks.com and georginastrange@gmail.com.

Regatta and run in South Georgia

THE annual South Georgia Half-Marathon was keenly contested by sixteen residents on February 21. They competed in three race classes: running, 'runkling' (a combination of walking and running) and walking.

The route covered challenging terrain. Beginning at King Edward Point (KEP), competitors raced to Grytviken's whaling station before scaling Brown Mountain. After cresting the ridgeline they descended down a steep scree slope before heading back to KEP. From there they tackled Deadman's Pass en route to Marviken, before heading back to the finishing line.

Weather conditions were reasonable on the day, with overcast skies and some light rain. The walking category was won by builder Andy Porter. Taking joint first in the runklung class was Jen Lee and Sarah Browning, both South Georgia Government employees. Two American runklungers provided an international flavour to the proceedings with South Georgia Heritage Trust employee Sheri Bluestein and visiting yachtswoman Molly Barnes from SV Sila, placing sixth and South Georgia residents enjoying the regatta seventh.

Competition was fierce between the running class entrants, with all four completing the course in a blistering pace under two hours. British Antarctic Survey boating officer Matthew Phillips placed fourth with builder and Falkland Islander Micky Sutcliffe just ahead of him in third. South Georgia postmaster Hugh Marsden took second place but Government Officer Simon Browning stormed home to victory with a time of 1 hour 48 minutes.

An award ceremony was held that evening hosted by BAS Station Leader Ian Hey and Government Officer Patrick Lurcock.

The Islanders enjoyed another sporting event on February 22 when the inaugural South Georgia Regatta was held on Gull Lake. Ten model boats of widely varied designs were launched with the aim of reaching the far shore. The flotilla of small colourful sails was cheered on from the shore by a small crowd, many of whom had dressed for the occasion in sailing or maritime garb. Several of the entrants spent months working on beautiful hand-crafted wooden boats. The winning designs were more impromptu, with a last minute entry from South Georgia Heritage Trust's Habitat Restoration team placing first. Their winning craft featured a freezer bag for a sail and a small stuffed toy rat as the yacht captain. Despite one trimaran design capsizing, all ten boats eventually made it back to land. Following the event, and ignoring the wind chill, participants and spectators enjoyed a celebratory Pimms.

The wrong path

I WAS shocked to read the report about Victory Green on the front cover of last week's edition. Your correspondent missed the fact that the proposed path along the main section of Victory Green was not approved and what I was talking about was the separate proposal of a path from the area of the SAMA82 benches, past the Shack and along the north side of the Town Hall car park to the Dockyard.

It was noticed during our walkabout that the SAMA82 benches that were dedicated by Prince Edward in 2007 are showing signs of rot and Gary Clement and I suggested that if FIG were to re-develop that area and incorporate new bases for the benches the local branch of SAMA82 would look to see if they could obtain replacement rot proof benches.

I am and remain opposed to any footpath along the main section of Victory Green, but I do believe that a path to the north of the Town Hall car park will enhance that area.

Last week's report pointed out that all plans for Victory Green and Arch Green had been deferred for revised plans to be submitted, which may include compromises discussed on the 'walkabout.' Deputy Ed

THE dust has settled, sentencing has been carried out and justice seen to be done, but the foolishness of breaking in to the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre will have long lasting effects, for Dominic and Andrew as well as the centre staff. But, we hope that the two young men have learned a lesson and the months ahead will see them changes their behaviour for the better.

The response from the community, however, has been overwhelming. The fishing companies and other businesses who responded immediately and generously without charge, and others who donated money, as well as the many members of the public who have donated both money and time, have all helped put matters right. It is heartening to realise how important the centre is to many people beyond the fishing businesses and the seafarers who use our facilities, and the shock and hurt the break-in caused.

On behalf of all the trustees and the staff we would like to say a huge 'thank you' to everyone who has helped restore order and confidence.

It would be impossible to publicly mention everyone by name, so we hope you will accept this as our heartfelt thanks.

The centre is now under new management, so why not call in for a coffee and cake or lunch in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere? Chris and Maisie will be delighted to see you, and you will be helping us to continue to provide facilities for the seafarers and fishermen.

The Cancer Support and Awareness Trust is very grateful to the very many people who have supported us throughout the year.

Many people will have provided support by attending and contributing to the very imaginative fundraising that has happened, from running, baking, parachute jumping, tipping buckets of ice to using the charity shop.

Particular organisers include the FIC Insurance and flights, Wilkins Kennedy with the pink day bake off, Sally Ellis and the run, R Berntsen, Fortuna (who also assisted with transferring money with Western Union) J and C Clifford, D Harris, E Middleton, C Ford, B Anderson, A Bendyshe, Port Harriet Fun

Day, the Media Trust, J Sutherland and Standard Chartered Bank.

We are a fortunate organisation to be so well supported by so many people.

A very big THANK YOU.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

AUTUMN is really a bit more than just around the corner. Already bulbs such as the Colchicum (Autumn crocus) are starting to flower, the Crocosmias (montbretia) also and that lovely little hardy cyclamen hederifolium is just covered in delicate lilac and white blooms. Still, it does seem a shame that the season is drawing to a close so soon. Being ever the optimist, I still hope we might get one of those 'Indian' summers we used to enjoy and which kept winter at bay until mid-May, sometimes a little later.

Down with the cold for a couple of days last week, didn't really feel that bad, mainly a headache which brought back memories of a bad hangover, and a bit of a runny nose. The bigger problem was the dry hacking cough which played havoc with my beauty sleep. But all things must end and as I felt considerably better was able to get out yesterday and finally cut down the swede tops. This involved only cutting them down to four inches or so to allow the light and water through, and it was a chance to weed amongst them. They are looking quite reasonable so far and should grow more yet. I had little girls joining in and pulling out weeds and carting tops to the compost bin which made the job much shorter and more enjoyable. We feed the tomatoes and marrows etc, every couple of days now and so we went on to feed our respective greenhouses and tunnels (and check the strawberries of course) and this is when, on checking the size of the largest pumpkin, the girls discovered that, once again, a couple of them had fallen foul of the woodlice and earwigs. Such disappointed little faces!

The vegetables continue to fill our plates and freezers, the runner beans are very prolific and have to be harvested every couple of days or, like peas, will just go to seed and the plant will die. The cabbages are all coming on together, even though they are different varieties, and lettuce keeps coming. I must remember to sow some more, under cover this time to keep us going as long as possible; beetroot also and perhaps, some more carrots inside too. If they don't grow large at this time of year they will be quite acceptable as baby carrots, even if they don't make it to the pot.

The courgettes are producing a large amount of fruits, we have given away a lot as we hardly eat them, but again they must be picked regularly or lose the plant. The sweet corn is also growing rather well and filling out nicely. The tomatoes have suffered a few set backs but, they are producing well.

The main crop potatoes outside are now past frost danger so should give a reasonable crop when I start digging them.

In the flower beds everything is really looking surprisingly well, even the borders that I've not managed to weed.

The colour goes on, the astilbe flowering for the first time is lovely, the roses planted to climb against the fence also looking fantastic, especially one covered in double red blooms and another, thornless one, with light pink flowers, WOW indeed.

In the main borders though, the lupins, delphiniums and oriental poppies are flowering again, the hardy geraniums in their many colours continue their show as does the dianthus in its various forms and has been joined by the veronicas. Lilies in yellows, oranges, whites, reds and pinks, the alstroemerias are also flowering away in shades of pink and orange all backed up by various flowering shrubs, mainly small hebes and potentillas.

Most of the buddleias are just coming into flower but the pink flowered one is showing off its rather large flowers already; it looks quite lovely.

But for me the roses (even though some of them don't flower for long and can look quite gaunt and bare in between) steal the show. They are romping along. Along the 'rockery' I have quite a few ground-cover roses, all of the same variety. A friend gave me a couple of cuttings which grew well; one I kept to propagate further, the other I gave to Mum. I think it is probably the one known as 'Flower Carpet', if it isn't it should be. Each shrub is totally covered in smallish double pink blooms.

There's the white shrub rose with its double blooms and another beautiful one, probably called 'Iceberg' and not forgetting the pink edged 'Handel'. Then there are various shades of yellow and bi-coloured yellows and pinks, and a couple of orange ones; each more beautiful than the last. As for reds, there are many shades and describing them is just not possible. The smaller 'patio roses' are also wonderful and cover themselves in bloom in every colour imaginable. Oh, and did I mention my latest acquisitions from the garden centre? One is an unbelievable dark lilac, another one a very pale lilac, both are scented.

Nats rousies for John McKay; Daniel offers Sammy peat cutting tips; Louise is rewarded for her sports week triumphs; There's all to play for in the sack race - Photographs by Leann Ford

Serious competition plus high jinks at lively West Falklands sports

WESTERS and their visitors had a fun filled four days last week at the West Falklands sports held this year at Hill Cove.

Festivities and barbecues went on all week but the competitions began on Sunday with hotly contested foot events at the pretty Hill Cove forest. Kevin Marsh and Karl Nightingale started a successful week of winning by taking first and second in the Open Mile. Promising young runner Amanda McGhie took fourth place, behind Andy Pollard in third, but also picked up first place for the first woman.

A five-a-side football match followed with Karl named top goal scorer and Mike Evans' crew claiming the prize. The evening was no less entertaining at the Gold Cup Racing where the competitive spirit was so high the 'horses' might well have been ridden by professional jockeys of international stature.

The shearing competition hosted at Dunbar Farm the following day was a highlight of the week and Kevin Marsh came to the fore taking the top spot from veteran shearer Tex Alazia. Alex Gould claimed third with John McKay in fourth. Kevin was also top farm shearer and claimed the title of 'Champion'.

Darts in the evening brought a victory for a highly delighted Andy Pollard ahead of Karl Nightingale with long time darts champ Toot Ford in third.

Peat cutting at Sound Ridge, a barbecue and bike agility test at West Lagoons and an evening spent clinging to a bucking mechanical bull made up Tuesday. Daniel Ford and Tony Hirtle (fastest cutter) produced the goods taking first and second respectively in the peat cutting competition - good to know the skill continues in both the young and the old. Sammy Hirtle and Louise Pole-Evans took first and second in the ladies peat cutting competition and Sean Minto was champion that evening on the mechanical bull with Amanda McGhie second.

Always a big attraction for sports goers is the farmers' chance to show off their partnership skills with man's best friend at the sheepdog trials, held this year at Westley Farm on March 4 (Wednesday).

Last year's champ Critta Lee once again walked away with the top prize with his dog Bitsa, and Paul Peck and Ken claimed second place. Critta added to his rosettes taking third place with Duke while his mum Susan, and long time top dog trialler, had to settle for fourth with Toto.

The week culminated in a lively dance and prize-giving at the club where prizes were presented by John Maskell-Bott.

Recipes for the Falklands - Mamma Booth's Empanadas

Nancy Jennings submitted this recipe handed down from her mother and which she is often asked to share...

Filling

- 1 lb finely chopped meat
1 chopped onion (finely chopped)
Handful sultanas
Salt and pepper to taste
½ t/spoon Cayenne pepper,
½ t/spoon Paprika
½ t/spoon Marjoram
½ t/spoon Oregano
Oxo cube made to approx one pint of hot water (see below)
Flour to thicken
4 Hard boiled eggs (chopped and added to mix once cold)
Olives (optional)

Method

Fry meat in oil until brown. Add herbs salt and pepper and onions. Allow for onions to soften then add enough stock to cover the meat. Do not let the mixture dry out. Add sultanas and let it simmer for up to one hour, or until meat is tender. Remove from heat; stir in about a tablespoon of flour to thicken (Juices will flow again once empanadas are fried). Leave to cool - preferably 'over night. The mixture has to be cold before making pastry cases. Add hard boiled eggs - mix into the meat mixture.

Hot water pastry

1 lb flour
To 1 pint water add 2 desertspoons lard (or equivalent amount of vegetable oil) and 1 teaspoon vinegar and bring to the boil

Make a well in the flour, add boiling/hot water and mix together to form a dough (careful you don't burn fingers!). Knead the dough, which should look smooth and be easy to manage. Work with the pastry while still warm as it is easier to roll out.

Roll out on floured surface (as you would for sausage rolls). Place tablespoon of filling at intervals along the pastry. Add the olive if using, brush water around edges of filling, fold over pastry, flatten the edges down, and cut out around with pastry cutter...making a 'pasty'.

Deep fry in oil until golden. Place into pan fat side down and turn to ensure evenly cooked. Drain and enjoy with a glass of wine

Steve, Bob and Adam win cup

A DISAPPOINTING field of only three teams competed for the South Atlantic Challenge Trophy at Stanley Golf Course on Sunday. The strong wind doubtless put some off playing and a combination of work commitments and illness prevented others taking part. The winning team on the day was Steve Vincent, Bob Gilbert and Adam Glanville.

This Sunday Seafast Logistics sponsor the competition. Sign-in by 9am for a 9.15 tee-off.

Stuart wins second Aquathlon

THE second race of the Stanley Running Club Aquathlon series was held on Sunday, in windy but warm conditions. 22 athletes took to the water and road, with a 200m swim followed by a 2 mile run. All competitors put in great times, with many improving on their times from the first race.

Stuart Smith put in another great performance, coming in as overall winner and leading senior male, in a time of 15.51 minutes. He was pushed closer this time, however, by new entree, Matt Aston, coming in 2nd overall, in a time of 17.43 minutes. Dean Ellis' stellar performance (21.30 minutes) not only cemented him as top placed junior male, but also gave him 3rd place overall.

For the female competitors, Susanna Karlson was top senior female and 4th overall, with a time of 21.39 minutes, while top junior female was Darby Newman. Darby, a new entree to the series, swam and ran well to take 7th place overall, in a time of 25.35 minutes.

Stanley Running Club would like to thank everyone who supported the event - both competitors and supporters. Thanks also to everyone who helped marshal the event, as well as the leisure centre staff who helped in the pool. The final race (open to 10 years and over and all abilities) in the series will be in April, where there will be a small presentation event held at the Narrows Bar following the race.

Sure to deliver improvements across Falklands says CEO

CHIEF Executive of Sure, Justin McPhee, is confident the telecoms company, "will be able to deliver a range of improvements to customers across a range of services across the Falklands in the coming years."

The company which has an exclusive licence up until the end of 2019 is to be involved in negotiations with the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) regarding a licence extension, however specific milestones, including higher broadband packages and a fairer pricing system, are to be set by FIG around those negotiations.

Mr McPhee told Penguin News this week: "We are yet to see the full scope of FIG's expectations but Sure is fully committed to investing in modern networks across the South Atlantic."

He noted that the company had recently announced investments in 4G mobile networks in Ascension and St Helena and this investment was part of the group's ongoing strategy to, "build and enhance mobile networks across all of its operations."

He added: "We are also looking at the investments needed to enhance other services as technologies and customer needs change. The recently published telecommunications survey along with data we collect as part of Sure's independent customer experience programme helps both Sure and FIG understand key issues from a customer perspective enabling us to prioritise future investments needed to improve services across the Islands, and clearly will be a key part of the licence discussions with FIG this year."

According to the survey of Falklands customers to which Mr McPhee refers, while the majority of Falklands businesses and residents are satisfied (although many feel improvements could be made) with their Sure landlines and mobile service, most Sure customers who responded are dissatisfied with their current internet packages.

81 per cent of business users do not feel their current internet package offers value for money and 85 per cent of domestic users are equally unhappy.

In August and September last year the Policy Unit, at the behest of the Telecoms Working Group, conducted two surveys; one aimed at business users and one at domestic users. The results were then provided to consultants Cartesian appointed to undertake a review of telecommunications. The review, two parts of which will be published, was recently examined by Executive Council.

It was noted at the Executive Council Meeting on March 11, that Sure currently had an exclusive licence up until December 31, 2019 but which could be revoked on the serving of five years notice by Government. Members agreed with the assessment of the telecoms working group, that initially looking to negotiate with Sure around a licence extension was the sensible way forward. Milestones are to be set around the negotiation, "and if by the end of the year significant progress is not made in line with FIG's objectives, then FIG would look to reconsider its options," said MLA Michael Poole.

He added: "FIG's objectives in this area are, at a high level, quite clear and reflect the feedback given during the public survey last year. For example, we wish to see technological improvements in the mobile system that result in better data speeds and improved geographical coverage. We also wish to see considerably higher broadband allowances alongside a fairer pricing system. There are also a number of other items, and this will be provided in detail to Sure shortly."

48 businesses completed the business survey and 297 completed the residential consultation.

Most domestic users of the internet are subscribed to the residential gold package (64%), the next highest is residential silver (19%) and seven per cent use the bronze package. The remaining respondents (10%) stated they pay for a business package despite being domestic users.

The package which appears to offer most value for money is the residential bronze (with 27% of users stating it offered value for money), which is also the cheapest package available.

Shamrocks for Irish Guards on St Patrick's day

HIS Excellency the Governor Colin Roberts presented shamrocks to members of Number Two Company 1st Battalion Irish Guards in celebration of St Patrick's Day on March 17 at Mount Pleasant Complex.

Wherever they find themselves in the world the Irish Guards celebrate every St Patrick's Day and have done since their formation in 1900. A proud and distinguished regiment affectionately known as The Micks, "they enthusiastically continued that tradition here in the Falkland Islands," explained the Officer Commanding Major R P Money.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

TO be sure the Sure survey, surely provided (well it was St Patrick's Day on Tuesday) some fairly predictable results and now we can only hope that the Government will be firm with their licence negotiations this year.

'It's easy to be critical' is a favourite phrase of an old friend of mine, and we often are. But we also have to factor in the geography and the size of the population to share the costs of whatever service is provided. While a state of the art fibre optic system would give us top internet speeds, you can be pretty sure none of us lesser mortals could afford to use it.

My personal experience of what is provided is that it meets my needs and the only real gripe I have is that megabytes (MBs) not used from a monthly package can not be carried forward. Often people are out of the Islands for a couple of weeks, but still pay for the whole whammy and they can't even be transferred to a charitable institution to be made use of. Not very charitable at all Sure!

Obviously there would have to be a limit on how many MBs could be carried forward, a bit like the FIG holiday system where you can only accrue so many days, but having that surplus would cover for times when there are essential, often hefty software downloads.

As for the free internet after midnight, I've never been a fan of that concept. I'm too old to be sitting up until midnight - I'd be knackered next day. But the very people who do make most use of this are school children trying to keep up with the latest apps and games and on a budget. I bet many of them are tired next day too and not performing as well as they should be.

On the plus side our children are probably better versed than any others in the world on how far a MB goes and how much it costs... and it shows just how far we have come that they are threatened with no phone credit or internet access rather than the goose wing as in the 'good old days.'

There's a busy weekend ahead with the mini sports and the SCB Marathon and good luck to all taking part on Saturday and Sunday.

A couple to look out for and cheer on in the marathon are Dr Sill, the consultant gynaecologist who has been visiting the Islands on an annual basis for more than 20 years; he will be running with Falklands 82 veteran Andy McGregor (57) from Ashington who is raising funds for charity and ironically is Dr Sill's optician back in the UK. Weather-wise it's looking like there may be a bit of rain with a moderate breeze from the south-west - 100 per cent better than last year then...

National Stud Flock sale generates intense bidding from farmers

WITH National Stud Flock (NSF) ewes and flock rams included in this year's NSF sale along with ex-stud sires and shearlings, it turned out to be an exceptionally well attended day reports Assistant Agricultural Advisor Lucy Ellis.

Held at the Saladero shearing shed on March 12, the event once again attracted new prospective bidders as well as an excellent turn out of the regulars.

Across the board, the ram weights were up on previous years with one of the ex-elite boys making 100kg. The rams on the whole looked in very good order which buyers were kind enough to comment on, said Ms Ellis.

Once all buyers had inspected the stock, Director of Natural Resources, Mr John Barton welcomed everybody and then passed the baton to the Senior Agricultural Advisor, Ian Campbell who explained the Helmsman auction system and gave a brief overview of the questionnaire that had been handed out to all buyers concerning the use of the NSF ram team as prospective fresh AI semen sources for CAI in the Islands. Ms Ellis said: "Mr Campbell was the Sheep and Wool Advisor with the DoA about four years ago and it is with great pleasure we welcome him back as the Senior Agricultural Advisor."

Bidding was intense, especially as all 388 animals, either in individual or multiple lots are open to bids at the same time, which resulted in all but three rams being sold. Those three animals were then allocated using the Farm Improvement Plan system.

Included in the sale offerings were 22 ex-elite sires, 46 centre plus (CP) cross Polwarth shearling rams and 57 Polwarth shearling rams. Also available were 73 Polwarth and Polwarth cross CP flock rams, 158 mature Polwarth ewes and 32 Polwarth and Pol-warth cross CP shearling ewes.

The top price paid for an ex-elite sire was £450 with an average for that group of £162.22 whilst the top price for a Polwarth shearling ram was £300.00 with a group average of £116. The CP cross Polwarth rams reached a top price of £320.00 and a group average of £137.00.

The ewes, in lots ranging from 16 to 26 and sold in age groups, produced a lot of interest pre-sale and on the day that was where most interest was focused prior to the auction itself with the top price of £1,360 being paid for one lot and with an average of £545 per lot.

Also attracting considerable interest were the flock rams which were auctioned in lots of five or six animals and reached a top price per lot of £420 and an average per lot of £264.

Ms Ellis said: "Thanks go to Work Boat Services for getting the Westers to and from the sale. We hope you had a satisfactory day, Rag and John. Thank you to Goose Green for the loan of equipment without which we would be in dire straits and lastly, thank you very much to Michele of Michele's Café for providing hot food throughout the day."

Problems with EMIS system

CONTINUED problems with the EMIS computerised record system at the KEM Hospital is preventing forward planning for health programmes and must be sorted, MLA Mike Summers said at Tuesday's Health and Medical Services Committee meeting.

There was an urgent need for the company to send a senior technician to the Islands to ensure the system was functioning properly, he said, adding, "we must insist and it must be at their expense."

EMIS clinical systems are used by more than 5,000 healthcare organisations across the UK, from GP practices and out-of-hours services, to community care and sexual health services. The company claims more than 25 years of experience working with the NHS and is entrusted with more than 40 million patient records accessible wherever they are treated making the prospect of integrated care a reality.

However at the hospital in Stanley the system will not even link to the LED board in the waiting room to inform patients of their appointment allocation the committee were told, and worse still the population manager part of the system is not functioning. Chief Medical Officer Dr Beccy Edwards said in the past the EMIS people had insisted it was a "staff training issue" at the KEMH, however this had been disproved in a number of ways. She added that EMIS had been trying hard, in conjunction with staff at Synergy, to rectify the problems and lots of headway has been made, "but there seem to be a few sticking points."

MTO housing examined

THE Director of Health and Social Services Ian Bainbridge, is to meet with FIG's London Representative Sukey Cameron when she visits the Islands this month to discuss how the process of booking and managing accommodation for medical patients overseas is handled.

Mr Bainbridge's predecessor Derek Muhl had previously met with Ms Cameron at FIGO and it had been established that most accommodation was booked at relatively short notice incurring high costs. It had been suggested that some properties could be leased for 12 month periods enabling FIG to receive a reduced monthly rate and other options were for FIG to purchase a property or that an agent be engaged in Southampton. Mr Bainbridge said that he understood FIGO officers had recently carried out a visit to Southampton and MLA Mike Summers said FIGO officers needed to go to an estate agent and explain what the requirements for MTO patients were.

Driving ban for brother and sister

BROTHER and sister Lucinda Marie Lowe (24) and Nathan Reginald Eugenio Lowe (19) were both banned from driving for a year and given a probation order and community service order respectively, after they admitted a series of offences which culminated in Miss Lowe being in a serious road traffic accident.

The Summary Court heard that on January 15, the siblings had been to the Globe Tavern and had consumed an estimated nine to 10 drinks each and had left soon after 11pm in Mr Lowe's vehicle with Miss Lowe driving.

After driving to her flat on Jersey Road, Miss Lowe had decided to drive to MPA to sort out some issues with a former boy friend and had borrowed her brothers vehicle. He had handed over the keys knowing that his sister was over the limit and not insured to drive the Toyota he had recently purchased.

2.2 miles west of the Mt Kent turn-off Miss Lowe had lost control of the vehicle on a right hand bend and it had consequently rolled several times before coming to rest with the roof ripped off.

"Miss Lowe was extremely lucky to get out," said Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe as he described how the drivers door was caved in and how items of body work and interior items were thrown all over the road.

In police interview Miss Lowe said she was angry and combined with the alcohol it impaired her ability to drive. She had no recollection of the vehicle rolling, but recalled getting out and not being able to find her phone to call for help. Because it was a cold, rainy night she pulled her 'onesie' on and headed for town. She said she was very scared at this point as she was losing a lot of blood from her arm. Mr Rowe said she had suffered a 20cm long cut, deep into the muscle on her forearm which had divided a tendon completely and needed an operation.

At the laydown area at the Mount Kent tanks, Miss Lowe had found a 110 Land Rover with the keys in the visor and managed to drive very slowly into town as she was feeling weak and visibility was not good in the rain.

Mr Rowe said the owner of the vehicle accepted it was a genuine emergency and did not want charges pressed.

Sexual Offenders Protection Order for Reid

SIMON Gus Reid (27) was placed on a Sexual Offenders Protection Order (SOPO) for five years on Wednesday. Mr Reid is due to be released from prison on March 26, after he was imprisoned in 2012 for sexual offences involving a child. Senior Magistrate

Clare Faulds noted the probation officers observation that Mr Reid had a high risk of reoffending. "You have a nasty record of sex offending, and the court has serious concerns that steps are taken that will keep you on the straight and narrow," she said

Charges of taking a vehicle without consent

STANLEY man Rishon Kimoto (29) was released on unconditional bail to reappear in court on April 7, when he is expected to enter pleas to charges of taking a vehicle without consent (TWOC), theft of diesel and obtaining a pecuniary advantage by false representation. Mr Komoto's lawyer Simon Crowder said he had not had time to take instruction and there were a few issues that needed to be discussed with regard to his client's employer, Energise.

Mix of perspectives sought on services for older people and vulnerable adults

A PAPER being presented to Executive Council later this month will seek approval for a process to plan and develop modern services to support older people and other vulnerable adults in the Falklands.

Director of Health and Social Services Ian Bainbridge said the purpose of such a new integrated range of services was not to just respond to illness and vulnerability when presented as a crisis, but to develop, "enabling and preventative services that maximise people's independence, choice and control."

It is planned that a public meeting will be held soon after Executive Council, "to gain the richest mix of perspectives."

While the central purpose of the development was to respond to the needs of older people, there should also be sufficient flexibility in the plans so that younger adults with substantial disabilities may also be supported without conflict of interest between the needs of differing groups, said Mr Bainbridge.

MLA Summers said that a site with flexibility for extension needed to be sourced for the project, adding that it was difficult to pre-empt future requirements, but if need be a satellite type construction could be used with the main home as a core building.

The detailed costing options will be developed as part of the planning process with a capital cost of £3 million already approved in principle along with a notional operating budget of £250,000 per annum included in the budget from 2016/17.

FI Holdings sells FOGL shares

FALKLAND Island Holdings has announced a £2.3million cash boost as it sold some of its shares in exploration company Falkland Oil & Gas Ltd (FOGL)

It retains a holding of five million FOGL shares, which represents about one per cent of the oil company.

"In the past five years the Group has directly invested over £8 million in the Falkland Islands and remains committed to the development of its Falklands business," said chairman Edmund Rowland.

"We look forward to a successful exploration drilling programme in 2015 and to the development of oil production in the Islands in due course, which will transform the value of the Falkland Islands Company."

Better options for glasses delivery

The Health and Medical Services Committee recognised that there had been a substantial amount of complaints about the decision to transport spectacles to the Islands by sea which resulted in approximately five months between eye tests and receipt of glasses.

MLA Mike Summers said it was now time for a public statement from the Director, Ian Bainbridge outlining what would happen with future consignments of spectacles.

He said there was a need to be prepared for the next visit from the optician and to ensure that the medical department were aware of what the patient was being told would happen.

It was understood that during the October eye tests patients had been told that spectacles would be delivered within a couple of weeks.

There were a number of alternative options for spectacles to be delivered to the Islands to be explored, said MLA Summers, noting that the next visit from the optician was scheduled for June.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THE statutory consultation currently underway on the Town Plan is important as it gives people an opportunity to have their say in how the Islands develop over the next 10 years or so. If, as I am, you are concerned about the way some things are allowed to happen, now is the time to put your views in writing to the Environmental Planning Department. My particular bugbears are inadequate parking, reckless infill and buildings which are out of keeping with the area in which they are built. The last can apply to business developments as well as private housing. We have to think of the long term effect of crowding more and more houses into areas that are already well developed. Parking on Stanley's narrow streets is already a problem and the fact that some businesses have been allowed to open with no additional parking has only compounded the problem. Whatever your views, take the trouble to get them in so that they are taken into account in the plan that will guide policy for years to come.

Last week my meetings included Stanley Services board which I chair as one of the two FIG representatives on the board. It's one of three meetings a year, and a contrast to Government Committees.

This week is a very full one including two days of Budget Select Committee which involves a great deal of reading and much deliberation. Although sometimes heavy going, it is one of the most interesting tasks we undertake. I believe that whatever conclusions we reach have to be sustainable through good years and bad. If we commit to expenditure that cannot be supported in the future we risk finding ourselves cutting back on important services. It would be all too easy in a year with extra revenues anticipated to over commit. Now that we have a minimum wage, something that some of us argued for through previous Assemblies, I hope that we can ensure that someone working a standard week actually earns a living wage. That is a wage that is sufficient to cover all normal everyday requirements.

Cheek Crofts and Laptikhovski names for new Falklands sponge

TWO Falklands residents and the late John Cheek now share their surnames with three of nine newly discovered Falklands sponges.

Scientists from National Museums Northern Ireland and the Falkland Island based Shallow Marine Surveys Group have just published descriptions of nine species of sponge which are new to science in the Journal of the Marine Biological Association of the United Kingdom.

The sponges were collected by sponge taxonomists Dr Claire Goodwin (National Museums) and Jennifer Jones during a Shallow Marine Surveys Group expedition to the south-east Falkland Islands, which included a survey of the remote Beauchêne Island.

The species included three which are named after Falkland residents: Clathria (Microciona) cheeki, named for the late John Cheek in recognition of the financial support his foundation gave to the work; and Hymedesmia (Hymedesmia) laptikhovski and Hymedesmia (Hymedesmia) croftsae who are named after Vladimir Laptikhovski and Sarah Crofts who were members of the expedition team.

Dr Goodwin said: "Species can be named after their physical characteristics or called after people or places. We named most of the new species for morphological features but were pleased to be able to recognise the important contribution of these people to this work."

Dr Goodwin said: "Having already discovered twelve species new to science on a previous expedition to the Jason Islands I was pleased, but not overly surprised that this survey resulted in the discovery of more species. There has been very little work done on the shallow-water sponges of the Falkland Islands previously and even very common, visually distinctive, species have not yet been named. I hope our study will be of use to others carrying out survey work of the Falklands diverse marine life. This work demonstrates the potential for more sponge species discoveries in other areas of the Falklands and Jennifer and I are keen to return in the future."

Dr Paul Brickie, Head of the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute, is a co-author of the paper and was one of the leads on the survey. He said Beauchêne Island as a National Nature Reserve was most famous for its bird populations. "However, our survey demonstrated that its underwater environment is also diverse. Sponges are an important ecological component of the marine communities in this area and this study will assist in their future monitoring and protection."

Dr Goodwin and Dr Brickie thanked the Shackleton Scholarship Fund and the John Cheek Trust for travel support and the Falkland Islands Government and the Overseas Territories Environmental Programme for funding for the survey.

FICS Crazy hair day and a spicy quiz

FALKLAND Islands Community School staff and students participated in a 'Crazy Hair Day' and dressed in red for Comic Relief on March 13.

Teacher Zoe Gill said: "It was brilliant to see so many participate with the event, including members of staff. All sorts of crazy hair styles were fashioned, from red hair spray to ridiculous back combing! It really did make people laugh; students couldn't take me seriously at times because of my crazy hair." The day of fun raised a grand total of £223.87, which included money raised by Year 7 students who baked and sold cakes and biscuits on the day.

Spicy quiz night

The Year 10 Leisure and Tourism Group at the Falkland Islands Community School is holding an Indian themed Spicy Quiz Night on Friday March 27 at the school and all are welcome. Under 16s must be accompanied by an adult and it is £15 per person for a two course meal (vegetarian options), a quiz and a great night. The tickets are available from FICS Reception, The Pod and Southern Imports. Raffle tickets are on sale from The Pod and Southern Imports. There are tables of six and it starts at 6.30 pm, finishing around 9.30 pm.

A stroll down memory lane

THE Falkland Islands Monthly Review used in this piece spanned news from February through to early April. Headline news is that at the 1964 meeting of the Darwin Harbour Sports Association, "the unfortunate burning down of the bunkhouse... upset all plans and arrangements."

Upwards of sixty people lost virtually all of their possessions in the fire. At first it was thought best to cancel the sports but the general feeling amongst those most affected by the catastrophe was that something at least should be done if only for the sake of the many visitors and the people who had done so much with horses in preparation. 70 horses were at the racecourse to take part in one or more of 23 races.

Stock returns declare that the total sheep populations has increased to 636,889 and there are 3,225 horses in the Islands.

Average wool price is 67.68d per lb and the feasibility of a Camp roads system is a hot topic of conversation with the average cost of a road at £2,000 per mile elsewhere in the world, in Falklands' peaty ground it might cost as much as £3,000 per mile.

More inspiration for quirky quilters

FOLLOWING two previous visits to the Islands, during which she carried out a series of quilting lessons and master classes, Elaine Manwaring has returned, for what will probably be her final visit.

Primarily attending Phil and Carol Ovenden's wedding at Fitzroy, she also found time to hold a class at the Community School with some of the ladies of the quilting circle. Her previous classes have been with both the ladies and children at the school showing them new skills and trends she has picked up from her travels.

Needless to say, Mrs Manwaring funded a second visit and on this, her third visit, she found time in a busy schedule, to hold a final class before she turns eighty in two years time.

Falkland Islands Quirky Quilters was formed on Elaine's first visit. It is still going strong and meets every Sunday at the quilters' homes.

On her current visit, FIQQ worked on 'dancing quilts' and she was delighted at the variety of results that came out of the session.

Briefly, Nikki Buxton put in an appearance from her sickbed, to show Elaine the completed 'Hannah Mead Quilt' which dates back to 1843, which Nikki discovered in the attic of a house she inherited in Newport, Connecticut. It was originally just a quilt top, but has been layered and quilted by the ladies of FIQQ.

Elaine was initially surprised at the range of craft skills alive in such a small community, not just in the adult population, but also in the younger generation and she hoped that she had encouraged and inspired a growing interest in quilting generally. Having seen that there was a hankering to invigorate this particular craft, the Shackleton Fund were approached, but, because Elaine had all ready held self-funded classes on her first visit, the application made on her behalf was turned down.

"I love visiting the Falkland Islands and seeing friends I met on my first visit. I was amazed at the amount of interest shown and it has been a huge pleasure to inspire and help people develop their skills," she said, "but unfortunately, I doubt I will be able to visit again, which is a shame, as I would love to see how the Falkland Islands Quirky Quilters progresses and develops."

Fast and furious at Johnsons Harbour

THE latest round of the Falkland Islands Motocross season was blessed with a beautiful day at Johnsons Harbour on Sunday March 15.

The sun soaked grassy hillside incorporated a longer, drier track than last year. With so much grip available the racing was set to be fast and furious.

As always the Juniors kicked the day off. A flying start by Travis Jaffray showed the field the way. First time racer Chico Thomas and seasoned veteran Regan Newman would not let Travis out of their sight, but Travis proved too strong; consistency and super smooth riding saw him pull away.

The second race saw an 85cc duel off the start with Travis and Lachlan Crowie getting the jump. The order quickly shuffled back to the running order of moto one. Chico suffered from his chain jumping off but quickly sorted the issue by skilfully rolling backwards to then resume the chase. Regan, kitted out in sharp new race gear, tried to reduce the gap on Travis. He proved too strong and took a well deserved double moto win with a riding style which is a carbon copy of former expert champion and dad Dereck Jaffray.

The Clubman class was yet again absolutely dominated by James Tyrrell who is well on his way to being one of the runners in the expert class. The battle that ensued behind was as usual full of drama. Ryan Perry, Richard Cowan, Zoran Zuvic, Jimmy Moffatt and Garry Tyrrell battled it out for the runner up spots. Ryan looked comfortable and started pulling away until a spectacular high side dropped him down the field.

Bristow Engineer and first time motocrosser Richard Cowan took the runner up spot and stayed there. Jimmy was catching up but had to pull in to fix a loose gear shifter. Ryan charged back through to just take third off Zoran.

The second moto saw Ryan again lay chase to James who checked out early. Richard settled back in forth and seemed to have run out of energy leaving the final podium spot between Zoran and Jimmy. Wheel to wheel for the entire race, it ended with Zoran being cruelly robbed on the last corner by the old man of motocross.

The Expert class ejected from the start line with Sean Moffatt taking a convincing hole shot on his KTM 350. Brother Jay was right there with Stefan Clarke and Arthur Turner also ready to pounce. Sean set a blistering pace and filled Jay in with everything the 350 could dig up.

Half way through the race with Sean still in the lead, Jay conducted a panic-revved endo off a jump and seemed to throw a switch. Changing lines Jay found a way through and pulled away as Sean suffered from the dreaded arm pump. The second moto was almost exactly the same, with even more close racing between Sean and Jay. The lead swapped several times but Jay managed to sneak ahead for the win. Stefan took third, possibly a little fuzzy from the previous nights B&S Ball and Arthur finished fourth.

The relay race was won by Travis, James and Arthur. The beer leg was won by Sean Moffatt on Ryan Perry's KTM 450 after Jay mysteriously stopped just before the finish line piloting Stefan's 450 Honda.

Massive thanks go to Garry and Chris for the medical cover, Johnsons for the land, Rincon Grande for sponsoring the event and all the helpers on the day. J Moffatt

Thanks for better road

THROUGH your pages, I would like to express my gratitude and thanks to all who have been involved in upgrading the North Camp road, between Chatter Creek and Teal Inlet.

It has been a great feat of engineering under some trying conditions. I have great respect and admiration for Roger May and his team of road builders who have worked relentlessly throughout the summer season to carry out this work, keep the road open and help people through (particularly those with tourism business) along with Jones and Grimmer Haulage, and Jan, Lucas, Arthur and Ben's culvert replacement.

The whole gang have in true Falklands' style, been accommodating and helpful to every road user the work has potentially inconvenienced during the upgrade; from redirecting to pulling out of bog holes.

To our MLAs, thank you for listening and getting this work done for us; access to FIMCO and Stanley is very much improved. May we see so much more from the oil bonanza to help with development in the rural sector. Many thanks to all involved.

Frozen pension whammy

IT is very commendable that MLA Roger Edwards has been discussing the subject of frozen UK Old Age Pensions. However it is worth noting that under the double taxation agreement the pensions have to be declared here each year. So there we have the double whammy. No annual increase at the UK end and taxable here. Nice one Roger.

Stanley

Poem from a philosopher

An Argentinean's dream:
And the West Republic wept
Of the sin where she had slept:
"Stanley, Stanley, twinkling bright,
By the wild waves of the night,
How I see my claim was wrong,
Its yell loud, and its time long!
Oh, how British is your frame
And how piercing is my shame!
Ash and myrrh I offer you
While my past I fully rue.
Now, the sum of what I mean:
is 'God save your gracious Queen'!"

The Marathon and 3K Fun Run Is this Weekend!

Standard Chartered

Standard Chartered Bank would like to advise the following information in connection with the Stanley Marathon & 3K Fun Run on Sunday 22nd March 2015.

Registration

Marathon: 8.30am – 9.40am in the Banking Hall

Fun Run: 8.30am – 9.40am in the Town Hall

Race Briefing 9.45am in the Town Hall

Both the Marathon and the Fun Run will begin and end at the Town Hall car park. The start for the Marathon is scheduled for 10am and 10.30am for the Fun Run with the finish line due to close at 4pm.

Closure of Town Hall car park

The Royal Falkland Islands Police will close the Town Hall car park to general use from Saturday evening until Sunday evening once the race has completed and the finish line cleared away. There will also be minor disruption to drivers on Ross Road between the Junctions from Villiers Street to Barracks Street during the start of both races.

Notice to drivers in and around Stanley

The Marathon is to be run along Ross Road between the Beaver Hanger and Rowlands Rise, Jeremy Moore Avenue and nearby back roads, the Airport Road and By-Pass between the airport and the Sapper Hill.

All roads will remain open to traffic.

Along Ross Road (including East and West and Crozier Place) runners should remain on the harbour (north) side of the road. On the By-Pass and Airport Road runners will run facing on-coming traffic.

The Fun Run runners will run along Ross Road West and will turn just before John Biscoe Road back along Ross Road to the finish line in the Town Hall car park. Runners should remain on the harbour (north) side of the road.

Drivers are therefore asked to be vigilant and watch out for the LEAD RUNNER VEHICLE and runners especially when approaching the junctions with Ross Road (East and West), the By-Pass and the Airport. Please give extra consideration to the Fun Run runners who are age 8 years and above.

Please be patient and give runners a wide berth.

We hope this will be a great event for the Falkland Islands and your co-operation in making it a success is hugely appreciated.

If you have any questions concerning the above please contact us on 22220.

Thank You.

A plethora of eggs, a well attended show and first prize for Les Harris' vegetables

MANFRED and Barbara Keenleyside took home the Haskard Challenge Cup for most points overall at this year's Horticultural Show held in the Parish Hall on Sunday.

Another winner at the colourful and well attended show was skilled baker Heather Smith taking most points in both the cookery section and the home produce section as well as winning the newly introduced 'Star Baker - technical challenge' held the day before. Six contestants baked custard tarts in the FICS kitchens for the challenge which was sponsored by Fortuna Ltd.

Kelly Harris was the overall Children's Section winner. (For all cup winners see page 12)

Organisers said entries in the cut flowers and flower arrangement sections were down this year, but entries in all other sections were around their long-term average.

Nikki Buxton commented: "Entries were universally at a very high standard, especially in the vegetable, fruit, cookery and home produce sections. The judges and committee were quite impressed both with the number of children entering exhibits this year, as well as the quality of the children's entries."

She added: "Thanks to all the people who submitted entries, especially the children. We would also like to thank all of the judges, people and companies who donated raffle prizes, as well as our helpers. Once again the Government House gardeners outdid themselves with the Government House stand, which helped raise enough money in the auction to hold the Show next year. All proceeds of the Show are used to run the Show the next year, including all of the cash prizes and trophies."

See page 12 for full list of cup winners.

THE annual Bachelor and Spinster ball (B&S) was held at Johnsons harbour on the weekend with £240 raised for Falklands Shears.

Event hostess Martha Molkenbuhr said that a peat cutting competition was held in which Ieuan Ford triumphed as the top novice cutter. Kayleigh Anderson carved her way to victory in the women's competition and Daniel Ford was the top man.

Jordan Phillips and Nathan Gemmill led the way in the treasure hunt around the settlement which also incorporated a tyre race.

Such frivolities work up a hearty appetite, but this was well attended to by Toot and Leann Ford with a barbecue, after which it was off to the shearing shed for a lively dance.

Martha said it was another fantastic night and there would be another gathering next year.

She thanked everyone for turning up and helping set up and clear up and especially Toot and Leann for their efforts at the barbecue.

B&S events originated in rural Australia and historically was centred on country people trying to find a partner. However in modern times the focus has shifted to having a good time and meeting up with new and old friends, some of whom can live many hours away. This has changed the atmosphere of the events to such a degree that the dress code is relaxed and many do not wear formal gear, preferring to dress in clothes from charity shops and this is an aspect encouraged for the Johnsons event

Post Office open as museum

HISTORICAL researcher and well known postal historian Stefan Heitjz along with Hugh Osborne has had a fruitful summer at Fox Bay where they have been restoring the old Post Office to its former glory.

At around 100 years old, Mr Heitjz said that as far as he was aware, the building was the oldest remaining Post Office building in the Islands.

Seven weeks of long days and the two men have transformed the rather tired house into a burst of colour at the entrance of Fox Bay Village. "The locals at Fox Bay have been most supportive and interested in what we have been doing, and very complimentary about the results," said Mr Heitjz, adding that many have a connection of some form to the house, "and they have all loved seeing it being returned to its former glory."

The house was built in about 1918 for the wireless operator/Postmaster, and George Hurst is the first known Postmaster.

William Myles was in charge of the Post Office between January 1929 and February 1951. Charlie Maddocks took over in January 1956 and stayed there until 1980. The post office remained in this house until sometime in the mid-1980s when Ken Halliday (who had taken over as Postmaster from Charlie Maddocks) moved it into the village store

The house was in Government ownership until sold to Reg Anderson in 1988. After that it was owned by Deirdre and Gavin Marsh from 2001, and finally Carol and David Thorsen from 2013.

Displays in the recently set up museum include what is known about the history of the house, the history of the Fox Bay Post Office including an article written by the Fox Bay Postmaster between 1909 and 1912, the history of the postmarks used at Fox Bay from 1899 to the present day and a display of old letters from Fox Bay.

Recipes for the Falklands - Savoury French Toast

Here's a different take on the weekend breakfast favourite of French Toast (or eggy bread as it is known in some quarters)

Ingredients

- 30 g butter
- 50 g flour
- 250 ml milk
- ¼ tbsp Dijon mustard
- 200 g of your favourite cheese, grated
- 8 slices thick white bread
- 5 garlic cloves, chopped
- Salt and Pepper
- 3 eggs
- 200 ml cream
- 50 ml milk
- Optional - tomato chilli relish, to serve

Method

1. Melt the butter in a pan over a gentle heat. Mix in the flour until well combined and add the milk a splash at a time, stirring constantly. Add the mustard and grated cheese and allow the creamy sauce to thicken. Remove from the heat, add the garlic and seasoning and set aside to cool.
2. Spread the cooled cheese mixture evenly onto four of the slices of bread. Season and place one of the remaining slices on top of each one to form a sandwich.

3. Preheat the oven to 200C/Gas mark 6. Mix together the eggs, cream and milk in a large bowl. Heat a large frying pan and throw in a knob of butter. As it melts, carefully dip the 'sandwiches' into the egg mixture, making sure they are completely soaked. Once the butter is sizzling, lay the French toast in the pan and cook for around five minutes on each side until golden brown.

Remove the toast from the pan and place on an oven tray, repeating the process with all of the sandwiches.

4. Pop them into the oven for five minutes to make sure the sandwiches are hot through and crispy.

Serve immediately with a dollop of tomato chilli jam or relish of your choice.

Note: You can add anything that takes your fancy to the centre of the sandwiches as well as, or instead of the garlic.

Sliced ham, chopped cooked bacon or even baked beans.

For a quick supper you can take the sandwiches a step further...

Make up sandwich of your choice (I like ham and Mozzarella cheese). Press down firmly on the sandwich to make it stick together.

Mix together egg, cream and milk and give the sandwich a good dunking and then dip in breadcrumbs before frying for a crunchy finish. Yummy served with mixed green side salad.

Falklands football Sprockets 1 – 2 Stanley Cup Final drama

THE weather conditions were perfect at MPA for the third match between the Sprockets and Stanley. Each team had won a match and both teams wanted to take the lead in the series. With injuries and illness ruling out five of the Falklands Islands games squad, the Stanley team were grateful to call on veteran Wayne Clement and youngsters Lucas Biggs and Dom Jaffray to make themselves available for the match.

Sprockets started more quickly and looked the more motivated out of the two teams. The military side were first to the ball and hassled the Stanley team into gifting possession. It was a typical slow start from the local team. Neither team had any clear cut chances in the first-half, but it took some well-timed challenges from Player/Manager Georgie Elbakidze to prevent shooting opportunities for the Sprockets. Stanley started to resort to long balls from goalkeeper Ben Hoyles, who was making a long awaited return to the Stanley side after a serious knee injury, as the midfield battle was being easily won by the Sprockets. Stanley midfielder Paul Zeller had to be substituted just before half-time with an achilles injury. This meant fullback Luke Clarke went into central midfield with Lucas Biggs and Dom Summers came on to go at right-back.

The half-time whistle couldn't come quickly enough for Stanley. During the break, a change of formation was made by Stanley. Wayne Clement dropped deeper into the midfield to form a three in the middle. This change had a positive impact and Stanley started to look more composed on the ball. However, Stanley failed to deal with a long-ball in the 60th minute and confusion between keeper and defender caused the Sprockets' striker to go to ground. Penalty. Luckily for Stanley, the penalty was put wide and the score remained goalless. Not long after Stanley conceded the missed penalty the Sprockets took the lead. Stanley failed to deal with a corner, which was headed in at close range.

This seemed to fire up Stanley who started to move the ball around a lot more quickly. 16 year old Sam Toolan had a goal ruled out for offside, but it didn't take long for the teenager to equalise. A ball forward from Clement found defender and Captain Kyle Biggs on the edge of Sprockets' box. Biggs, while suffering a nosebleed for being so far forward in open play, managed to force the ball into space where Sam Toolan hit a controlled half-volley into the bottom corner. This is Toolan's second goal in his fledgling Stanley career. Shortly after the goal Lucas Biggs had a great long-distance shot saved as Stanley started to look for their second goal.

Stanley started to look far more confident in possession and started to exploit the space left behind with the military side pushing forward. A well worked move on the right-wing between Toolan and Clement allowed Clement to cross the ball, which was expertly finished by the Sprockets centre-back! 2-1 to Stanley.

The Sprockets pushed more players forward in search of the equaliser and Stanley kept counterattacking as striker Rafa Sotomayor did well to lead the line. Aiden Morris was substituted in the 85th minute with a calf injury and was replaced by Michael Betts who was making his return to the side after six months out with a knee injury. Stanley comfortably defended their lead and went on to win the match.

M Betts

MOST of the drama of the 2014/2015 7-a-side Cup Final came before the match even kicked-off. FIDF only had five players and they needed one more for the match to go ahead. After frantic phone calls to various members of the FIDF, Jacob Foot became an instant hero as he turned up to help his team on his last day in the islands.

The first-half finished goalless, but Malvina controlled much of the match with their man advantage but failed to turn their possession into a goal. The FIDF relied on playing long balls to their Captain Saul Zuvic, but he was well marshalled by Daniel Carcamo. FIDF makeshift goalkeeper, Mark Allen, made some forward forays, which caused more panic in his own defence than with the opposition's!

The second-half started with a quicker tempo and the FIDF team took the initiative. Malvina struggled to cope with the six-man FIDF team and the volunteer force took the lead with Saul Zuvic finishing well from outside the area. This prompted a change in formation from the Malvina side and Michael Betts pushed further forward with Sam Miller dropping into defence alongside Daniel Carcamo. Malvina started to take more control of the match and quickly equalised from a corner. Drilled in low by Betts, Matias managed to get a foot onto the cross, which caused problem for FIDF who failed to clear. The loose ball was then well headed past the FIDF keeper by Kyran Evans to make the scores level at 1-1.

FIDF defended well and kept Malvina at bay until Betts scored a well hit shot that went into the top corner. 2-1 to Malvina. FIDF started pouring forward for an equaliser as Aiden Morris pushed further up the pitch and started to cause problems. The match started to get more competitive and the challenges started to fly in, but it was well controlled by referee Troyd Bowles. Malvina defender Sam Miller made some well-timed tackles as FIDF searched for their leveller. But it was a quick counterattack from Malvina that made it 3-1 with Sam Toolan and Matias combining well with the latter finishing off the move well. FIDF started going for broke and piled forward.

With time running out, Aiden Morris gave them a lifeline by turning quickly from his marker and hitting an early shot that surprised Glen Colledge in goal to make it 3-2. But it wasn't enough for FIDF and Malvina went on to see out what had been an exciting last game of the season.

Man of the Match goes to Sam Miller who made some inspired tackles and some great runs forward.

Adam wins Seafast Logistics competition

SEAFast Logistics are a first time tournament sponsor for the golf club and their inaugural tournament benefited from near perfect weather. The morning was calm and warm and the newly cut fairways meant the course was playing well, with good scoring a strong possibility.

Surprisingly, only two players managed to better their handicaps on the day. Tim Bonner and Adam Glanville managed to separate themselves from the field by 5 shots after very good rounds. Tim returned 39 points to finish second, well clear of Troyd Bowles in third on 34 points.

The win was deservedly taken by Adam with a great score of 41 points. Adam's points haul were thanks to a gross score of 69, the second time in a fortnight that Adam has broken the magic 70 mark. It is an incredible achievement to score in the 60's, but to do it twice in quick succession is outstanding. Adam is renowned for the distance he can hit the ball and this was put to good use on Sunday as he found himself putting for eagle on three occasions during the round.

Best front nine was won by Steve Vincent with 18 points and best back nine went to Bob Gilbert, also on 18 points. Troyd hit the longest drive, whilst Adam took nearest the pin on 17. Nearest the pin on 7 was Ian Stewart who also pocketed the birdie money thanks to a lovely eagle on the 15th.

The golf club wishes to thank Seafast Logistics for their support.

With the season end approaching the league is really hotting up. Roy Smith is top of the leaderboard, but six players remain in contention. There are three competitions left and 30 points up for grabs, so an exciting finish is guaranteed. The Matchplay semi-finals are running behind schedule, but should be played this coming weekend.

This Sunday we host the Caribbean Alliance competition. Sign-in by 0900 for a 0915 tee-off.

International Stanley Airport

STANLEY Airport is once again able to receive direct international flights with the first touching down on March 21, from Uruguay.

MLA Roger Edwards said on Thursday that Stanley Airport had been issued a new aerodrome certificate which meant the airport met relevant safety standards and allowed it to access the Bristow helicopter operations as well as receiving international flights.

He said the Civil Aviation Department had also expanded its role in the past month to include authority to issue seasonal foreign operator permits which were previously issued by the UK Department of Transport.

MLA Edwards said this shows another area where the Falklands have been given more control over its aviation activities.

Care home discussions

DISCUSSIONS have, "kicked off in earnest," on the issue of care for the elderly," said MLA Mike Summers at yesterday's meeting of Legislative Assembly.

He said key elements of an Executive Council paper laying out a methodology for such care, involved giving elderly people longer in their own homes, and a facility for advanced care.

MLA Summer said: "We do probably need to be more broad minded about developing a system of modifications to people's houses if required, to give them longer at home which is what most people would want."

He said the Director of Health and Social Services had undertaken work on 'Advanced Care Services' which comprised a core facility, "with surrounding units that people could either rent or buy for the remainder of their life."

Two Chinooks to return following defence review

DEFENCE Minister Michael Fallon has announced an investment of £180M into improving and modernising defence and infrastructure on the Falkland Islands over the next 10 years following a recent review.

Two Chinooks will be deployed to the Island mid year; the military support helicopters were removed in 2006 to support operations in Afghanistan.

Mr Fallon said: "This is a significant capability which will provide reactive, 24/7 tactical mobility, in order to allow a swift and decisive response to any emerging incidents. The helicopters will also bring a heavy lift capability and will enhance the training opportunities available to the Resident Infantry Company."

The Ministry of Defence will renew the ground based air defence system when Rapier comes out of service around the end of the decade.

The modernisation will also include:

- maintaining a Falkland Islands Patrol Vessel
- refurbishing Mare Harbour
- replacing existing power generation systems at MPC
- completing modernisation of the fuels infrastructure
- improving accommodation
- building a new primary school.

Mr Fallon added in his statement to the House of Commons: "although there will be some changes in personnel numbers as the Sea King helicopters are withdrawn and the Chinook force stands up, I have decided that for the foreseeable future, we will keep our numbers at around their current levels of about 1,200 personnel, military and civilian."

He said: "The review we have undertaken confirms our commitment to the Falkland Islands. We will continue to defend the right of the Islanders to determine their future and maintain their way of life against whatever threats may arise. This review ensures that we will continue to have the right mix of people, equipment and infrastructure to deliver that commitment in the years ahead."

Mr Fallon noted that the plan comes as an, "assessment of any threat to the Islands. This includes a consideration of the changes that may arise from the Islanders' plans to develop their economy, including the potential for development of an oil and gas industry."

"We continue to discuss these issues with the Falkland Islands Government."

He stated: "the current military presence is broadly proportionate to the threats and risks we face. Our forces in the South Atlantic are entirely defensive, and are at the level required to ensure the defence of the Falkland Islands against any potential threat."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

As a journalist by trade, even a small town one, it's probably not done to too heartily disrespect other journalists, but on behalf of fellow Falkland Islanders I found myself grinding my teeth while reading the even more-hysterical-writings-than-usual on the issue of the Falklands this week. To be fair to the jourmos (not that they deserve it) their claims of 'renewed fears of a fresh Argentine invasion' were ignited by Mr Fallon's references on TV and radio in advance of his Commons statement, to 'live threats' and 'beefing up' defences. And if you're going to offer up delicious morsels (no pun intended) like that to the media then why would you not expect a bit of feeding frenzy. But perhaps that was the intention - there is a general election coming up after all.

So lots of fun and sexed up fresh tales of impending war at their end, while here in the Falklands those of a less cynical bent are staring at the headlines and wondering whether their lives really are going to be turned upside down once again. Not to mention the worries of friends and relatives around the world who to some extent rely on the media for news of their Falklands compatriots (my advice to them - don't!).

Still it is a sign of the times I suppose that communications are so unbelievably speedy, that for any kind of clout in the world of news, each outlet rather than researching their own story, now just undertakes a rapid re-write it, chucks in more melodramatic adjectives, transposes a few words in the headline and re-releases their second hand sensationalism to an information greedy public.

But of course we're all to blame. Just take the article circulating recently that claimed the PM was to hand over the Falkland by 2017. The headline itself indicated it was a spoof (after all, British oil companies down our way might have something to say about that) but before a person could blink it was being shared around by Falklands Facebookers including by an MLA. Seriously? Do people actually read these things before sharing them? Quite apart from scaring the bejaysus out of more vulnerable types, they're also supporting the lowly motives of the undesirables who write them.

Ultimately though the true message was a perfectly sensible and positive one. Defences are simply to be modernised, the Chinooks will be back and marvellously for those based here with their families they're to have a new Infant school. Perhaps while the MoD is on a role they might consider arranging for the old 'death star' aspect of the Mount Pleasant complex to have a lick of paint. Every time I visit I shiver with dismay that the poor guys and girls based there must walk back and forth in corridors that resemble a massive (and now ageing) public toilet block.

We'll miss the Islanders says CBFSAI La Forte

THANKING Assembly Members for their kind words as his Falklands tour as Commander of British Forces South Atlantic Islands draws to a close, Air Commodore Russ La Forte CBE said he and his wife Gillian would miss the people of the Islands and wished them well for the future.

Air Commodore La Forte said that after two years he and Gillian would miss the Falkland Islanders. "Your warmth, your hospitality, your friendship and your support and your community spirit."

Having the final word at Thursday's Legislative Assembly he joined MLAs in urging everyone to go to the Goose Green Agriculture Show. He said he and Gillian would be there throughout the day and the evening, when there might even be a band playing in the community hall.

"We both thank you and wish the Falkland Islands every continued success in determining your future as you continue to Desire the Right."

Referring to the Secretary of State for Defence's announcement regarding the outcome of the review into the defence posture of the Falklands he urged the public to access and read the statement in its entirety (see front page).

CBFSAI entertains at the 250th celebrations

He said he was personally delighted with the statement and the outcome of the review and particularly welcomed the long term investment in infrastructure in the Falkland Islands as well as the return of the Chinook helicopters.

"The review reaffirms the UK's absolutely steadfast commitment to safe guarding the right to self determination of the Falkland Islanders and the security of your beautiful Islands, whatever the threat may arise," said Air Commodore La Forte.

He said it was a privilege to serve in the South Atlantic.

Quoting the Secretary of State he said, "safe guarding our citizens and their way of life remains the most important responsibility of her Majesty's Government and the MoD."

He said he agreed wholeheartedly with the statement adding that it was the principle reason he had joined the RAF some 37 years previous.

"Since then I have served in operations all over the world and can think of no better conclusion to my career than to have the honour of doing my bit to safe guard the way of life of my fellow citizens in the South Atlantic."

Director apologises for glasses delay

FOLLOWING last week's Penguin News article on the delayed delivery of spectacles to the Islands, Director of Health and Social Services Ian Bainbridge, has apologised for the delays members of the community experienced while waiting for the delivery of their glasses.

He said some had waited for their glasses since their eye tests in early October while others had delays from the end of November and overall this was too long and should not have happened.

"It is well known that there have been various problems with deliveries over a long period of time. We are still committed to finding the best possible options for people to receive their new prescriptions. Some of the difficulties are obvious and some may be less so. Clearly the options are limited and subject to considerable uncertainties. Despite the best intentions, the attempt to organise and secure the deliveries via the ship did not prove ideal and as we now know, encountered more unforeseen delays."

Mr Bainbridge said discussions were now ongoing with UK colleagues on how to set up a new system to address the issues.

"Ideally this should recognise the limited means available to deliver glasses, the time scales and costs involved, how we can be advised which cases are clinically urgent and which are not and also, which routes contain the biggest risks of unplanned delays.

"Timescale will always be a major concern but the uncertainty factor if people cannot be told when their glasses may arrive or which batch they are in, is also problematic.

"Before the optician's next visit, we will make sure there is clear information for all, and people needing new glasses can understand what is the best option that we should follow. We won't make promises we cannot keep but we are determined to find the best possible way forward."

'Little progress' on Camp roads law construction

A LIVELY discussion on road designation/licensed, took up some time at Monday's Public meeting, but failed to draw any positive conclusions.

MLA Mike Summers took pains to emphasise that designation was not the preferred phrase; saying there had been lengthy discussion on applying laws regarding insurance but there was no intention of applying the complete Road Traffic Ordinance (RTO) as it stands across the Islands' road network.

He said discussion on the subject had taken place that day, but admitted there had been little progress as there was no one available who could write the policy so the new legislation could be drafted. He said further talks with the Director of Emergency Services and the Attorney General were planned for the next few days to find a way forward.

He said that simply designating roads did not work as it brought with it the application of the entire RTO.

Currently the RTO only applies to the roads from Stanley to Port Louis and to Goose Green cemetery; seat belt laws apply to all roads in the Falklands; vehicle tax does not apply to vehicles normally kept on a farm, however all vehicles driven on designated/licensed roads must be properly taxed and insured.

MLA Summers said for Camp roads provision for safe driving, safety of vehicles and insurance was needed. "But we don't need issues about parking on yellow lines and stuff about licensing," he said, adding that most of the difficulties with convincing those affected surrounded the licensing of vehicles. There was a need to go through the RTO bit-by-bit to "get it right," he said.

It was suggested to MLAs that using the existing legislation a possible option was to apply the RTO across the Islands to protect the population from unlicensed and/or uninsured drivers, until such time as a new law was in place.

MLA Ian Hansen said it was an option which had been discussed but added that, "two wrongs do not make a right." None of the roads should have been designated in the first place, he said, while MLA Summers simply said, "It's not going to happen."

MLA Hansen said he wanted to see vehicle tax removed across the board which would be a good start.

In the meantime, who would be liable when someone was maimed or killed by an uninsured driver Gary Clement asked the MLAs.

MLA Roger Edwards who takes a hard line against designation saying it should not happen until the roads are properly surfaced, said there was no reason why a private case should not be taken up if there was a need. He pointed out that there had been a case where a person had died on the West and no action had been taken. (Following the January 2011 incident MLA Edwards referred to, Her Majesty's Coroner made lengthy suggestions in October 2012, on what action should be taken by the Government as a matter of some urgency.)

MLA Edwards said that many farms on the West would, "struggle to operate," if the RTO was introduced, despite evidence that North Camp farms and Goose Green have managed for more than 20 years.

MLA Elsby took the view that he doubted anyone would be foolish enough to drive without insurance. He made the comparison with house fire insurance; it is not a legal requirement, but it is advisable to have it. He urged drivers on West Falkland to ensure their vehicles were insured.

MLA Gavin Short was all for the no-nonsense approach of getting a drafter in, "locking him in a broom cupboard and feeding him information," until the relevant legislation was completed.

MLA Summers however reminded his colleagues that the budgetary request for funding for such a position had been refused the previous year in the belief that resources were available in-house.

Rising through the FIG ranks

DONNA Henry as part of the succession plan within the Treasury since 2004, has been appointed Financial Accountant Designate. MLA Roger Edwards said this was with a view to moving into the role permanently once she had completed her professional exams. He said Imogen Didlick had also earned a Legal Secretarial qualification within Government legal Services and described her as a valued member of the administrative support team.

Joint maritime authority

IT has been recommended that the Government create an in-house Joint Maritime and Harbours Authority. Executive Council have agreed that a detailed action plan should set out the steps leading to an Ordinance, including staffing implications and the co-ordination of existing responsibilities and activities, and the continuation of legislative drafting for a Bill to be submitted to the Assembly later this year. The action plan will include extensive consultation with industry members.

Legislation on the way to Exco

MLA Roger Edwards said in Legislative Assembly on Thursday that the Legislative drafting team workload remained constant with some major pieces of work including maritime, environmental, livestock and meat products, Camp airstrips and Stanley Common all being well progressed. MLAs could expect draft papers coming forward to Executive Council in all these areas in coming weeks and months, he said.

74 complete their contracts

DIRECTOR of Human Resources Graeme Jackson told Penguin News on Tuesday that over the last four years, 74 people have completed their initial contract term with the Falkland Islands Government. However 27 did not, serving an average of nine months before leaving.

Unsolved mystery why teacher took her own life says HM Coroner

HER Majesty's Coroner Clare Faulds concluded on Wednesday that school teacher Kathryn McGeachie (55) had taken her own life by carbon monoxide poisoning at an unknown time between October 24 - 27, 2014.

There was no apparent reason for the SEN teacher from the Community School to have taken her own life, said Mrs Faulds, adding that it was an, "unsolved and distressing mystery."

Mrs McGeachie who arrived in the Islands in 2009 was found dead at her flat on Jersey Road on the afternoon of October 26, by two of her friends and work colleagues who had become concerned at her lack of communication over the previous few days.

Mrs McGeachie's friends described her as a kind and caring person who would do anything for anyone; her contract had been renewed, she was planning a change in employment as well as starting her own reflexology/aromatherapy business, and planned to build a house in the Falklands having recently obtained PRP (Permanent Resident Permit).

Kathryn McGeachie in happier times

Several however described how Mrs McGeachie had been unhappy at the Community School in the months immediately prior to her death, due to work and management issues and had felt, "under scrutiny and pressurised." She told another: "I've never experienced a school term like the one just finished. I feel weary." The half term holiday ran from October 27 to 31.

Mrs McGeachie's friends also said she was withdrawn at certain times of the year, especially around the anniversary of her husband's death and that she had indicated she would like to find a life partner and settle down.

Mrs Faulds said that having considered the evidence she was satisfied that Mrs McGeachie had known the consequences of her actions and had intended to take her own life, without being disturbed. It was an extremely distressing event, said Mrs Faulds, adding that Mrs McGeachie's family must be extremely upset and that her Falklands' friends missed her a great deal and were struggling to deal with events.

Director of Education Annie Tempest said Mrs McGeachie was a much-loved member of the teaching staff, and the Education Department still felt the loss of such a warm and dedicated teacher.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

ONLY the late arrival of an eighth member of the public prevented MLAs outnumbering the audience at the public meeting this week. Nevertheless there was a lively, if less than reassuring, discussion on the fraught subject of regulation of camp roads. A couple of my colleagues did a fair rendering of the King Canute legend in trying to hold back the tide of public opinion on the urgent need to apply proper insurance and safety rules to all roads. Even the 'we need a policy' argument is a bit lame as I thought we agreed a basic policy on the need to progress road safety and requirement for insurance a couple of years ago that should not be too difficult to translate into a drafting instruction.

Two days last week in Budget Select Committee were predictably hard going, only the experience of 13 previous budgets gave me the optimism that we will eventually reach a series of compromises to complete the process by the time we have the final budget meeting in June. The demands on FIG funds grow despite efforts to control expenditure. People expect more and some budgets have grown massively. Probably some of the most striking growth has been in the Health and Social Services Department expenditure from £6.7 million in 2009/10 to £9.9 million in 2013/14 giving the lie to the assertion made during the last election campaign that medical services had received no increase, while actually expenditure had been rising by nearly a million a year. While that rise is worrying, where would anyone advocate making cuts? Medical treatment overseas? Expensive medications? Social Services? There is an understandable reluctance to reduce any services but there will come a time when that may be an option alongside increasing charges or cutting subsidies.

The announcement on Tuesday regarding defence of the Islands was very welcome but the substance did not match the sensational tabloid headline news flurry that preceded it which could have misled a casual observer to think we were in real and imminent danger. As always we appreciate the defence of our right to self-determination.

State of the economy analysed in new paper

THE State of the Falkland Islands Economy document released this week will provide, "an accurate statement of how the Falkland Islands economy is performing, analysis of key issues and challenges moving forward and an industry-by-industry breakdown of the economy," said Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham.

Economist Ville Peltovuori, responsible for preparing the paper added: "It was a big project, pulling together information from each sector of the economy, finding the trends, and examining some of the challenges the Falkland Islands might face in the future. We haven't made any official recommendations in the report, the goal was to be able to demonstrate the state our economy is currently in."

The paper itself notes in an optimistic introduction that the Islands economy has performed well in recent years as a result of oil and gas exploration giving a boost to the local economy, "fisheries revenues have been strong and lamb and mutton exports growing. Cruise ship visits have also started to recover after several years of decline."

"The economy has witnessed impressive, although volatile, growth. Unemployment rates are low enough to be the envy of most countries in the world and the government free of debt."

There are plenty of notes of caution however: "Oil prices began declining mid 2014 and have since fallen by over 50 per cent. It is not clear how far they will continue to fall."

A high dependency on fisheries income also means income is volatile depending as it does on fish catches and world prices. For example in 2012 the value of fish caught in the Islands was £184.5 million but in 2009 it was £76.4 million.

The value of wool exports is more stable than that of the fishery but the total value of exports has reduced since a peak year in 2011 of £6.5 million.

The paper notes: "The volatility of Falkland Islands GDP can be easily seen in comparison with other countries. In comparison to neighbouring South American countries and the United Kingdom, over the period 2007 - 2012 the Falkland Islands had the most extreme annual decline and growth rates in GDP"

Under the Government heading it notes however: "The Falkland Islands Government has a strong financial position."

£14,000 a year is living wage for Falklands says new report

AN annual gross salary of around £14,000 is considered a 'living wage' for the Falkland Islands according to a new report on the subject.

The report released this week notes that: "The weighted average living wage for the Falkland Islands is calculated at £7.18/hour."

This is more than the current statutory Minimum Wage for adults which is £5.05/hour and is approximately 70 per cent of the estimated living wage.

The paper "A Living Wage for the Falkland Islands" provides the first estimate of earnings necessary to comfortably cover all of a household's outgoings in the Islands.

Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham explained the process behind the Living Wage calculation saying: "This has been a really interesting piece of work for the Policy Unit to undertake, and something we've spent a lot of time on."

"A nutritionist helped us model a balanced diet to help us calculate the cost of food needed to maintain a healthy lifestyle, we looked at the cost of heating and electricity, a whole range of things."

"What's important to note is that we looked only at things a household might need, rather than everything a household might spend money on. For this reason, alcohol and tobacco haven't been included, and nor has a vehicle." They did look at the cost of nursery care however (around £300 per month). In almost every case, the cost of food was the single biggest component of a household's outgoings with a combined average of £279 per month.

Many respondents did feel that owning a second hand car was a minimum requirement for a reasonable standard of living in Stanley. However the decision was made to omit it from the calculation because of the relatively small geographical size of Stanley.

Respondents also felt that having internet was now also a minimum requirement for a reasonable standard of living and this was included in the estimates.

Have your say on impacts of oil and gas

THE next stage of the study to understand the impacts of oil and gas industry developments on social and cultural life in the Falklands is now underway with the launch of an online survey. Every adult in the Falklands is invited to complete the survey.

In February, two representatives from Regeneris Consulting visited the Falklands to meet with people from across the community, to carry out consultations relating to the Oil & Gas Social Effects Monitoring Programme. Regeneris worked with two local collaborators, Karen Lee and Carolyn Montgomerie, who helped to facilitate numerous meetings, focus groups and one to one consultations, in order to gather information and perspectives from many different sections of the community.

Jay Gamble on behalf of Regeneris said: "This Island-wide survey builds on that work, and will now allow Regeneris to gather information from an even wider audience, as well as gather vital baseline survey data for a number of factors that can be monitored in the future, for example local perceptions about crime and safety, levels of participation in community events, and views on the cost and quality of housing."

He said the results from the survey would help develop a framework to enable the monitoring of changes in factors such as levels of income, health, crime and feelings of wellbeing. With the monitoring framework in place, the Government would be able to, "oversee and respond to any adverse effects that emerge, in collaboration with oil and gas companies and the wider community," said Mr Gamble.

The survey launched on March 25, and will be available to complete until April 17. It is available online at <http://bit.ly/1EElaFb> and links will also be available from the Facebook page set up for the study: "Falklands Social Impacts of Oil Study".

It will also be available in hard copy format in KEMH Reception, Stanley Post Office, Chandlery, Stanley Services, Bitter Sweet and the Policy Unit. To submit your hard copy, deposit boxes are located in KEMH reception and the Post Office, or alternatively you can return it by post to the Policy Unit, Secretariat.

Managing Director of Regeneris Consulting Stephen Nicol, said: "It is extremely important to us, that we hear the voices of a wide section of the community and so we want to get as many responses as we can to this survey."

"We need to make sure that things that matter to you about your lives are monitored and protected in the future as the oil and gas industry develops."

"We have kept the survey as short as we can, and the survey formatting is simple so it should only take 10 minutes to complete, and won't take up a lot of internet time, so please make sure you get your voice heard in this important study."

If you have any questions about completing the survey, please contact either of our local team, Karen Lee (on 52918), or Carolyn Montgomerie (on 51272), or email Kate Downes at regeneris.co.uk.

Registry of oil suppliers website launched

THE Falkland Islands Development Corporation and appointed developers, JayTec, have launched a new oil and gas procurement website and database for the Falkland Islands.

The South Atlantic Registry of Oil Suppliers, or SAROS for short, aims to improve the oil and gas procurement process in the Falkland Islands and facilitate better communication between oil and gas companies and potential suppliers. Specifically, the idea is to allow local companies to showcase themselves directly to oil and gas companies and for oil and gas companies to promote their contract opportunities to local suppliers. The establishment of SAROS will take the place of the FIDC Oil and Gas Directory.

Members of SAROS will be split into two types, Buyers and Suppliers. SAROS defines Buyer members as Oil and Gas Companies and defines any company that wishes to supply a SAROS Buyer with a product or service as a Supplier.

The website will allow SAROS Supplier members to carry out a number of functions, such as viewing Buyer profiles, viewing contract opportunities posted by Buyers, posting sub-contracting opportunities and viewing sub-contracting opportunities posted by other Suppliers. SAROS will also allow Buyers to search for Suppliers and post contract opportunities.

SAROS membership is free and the cost of operating and administering the website will be covered by FIDC.

If you would like to know more about SAROS, please contact FIDC Business Relations Manager, Michael Betts, on telephone 27211 or by email with mbetts@fidc.co.fk. If you wish to become a member of SAROS please visit www.saros.co.fk.

Daniel is from the Universal Shipping Agency SA in Uruguay and is working out of the SAAS Office in Stanley this week. He took part in the Stanley marathon on Sunday.

He is married to Gabriela and has two children Camila (13) and Mathias (6).

He said it was very important for him to learn about the Falklands way of life, "so that I can help you with anything you need from Montevideo and give the right support." He added, "you are a wonderful people and you have a beautiful natural place. Many thanks for your welcome."

Key information collected when leaving Government

EXIT interviews for Government employees do not have to be held with a direct line manager and are designed to collect key information, said MLA Barry Elsby at Monday's Public Meeting.

Responding to a question from Tim Miller as to whether the exit interview should be carried out with a non-government officer to ensure a open and fair statement was provided, MLA Elsby said the key aim was to settle practical details such as final pay during the exit process, so it was most effectively carried out by a Government staff member familiar with the system.

The second aim was to enable the Government to collect all the key information it could from the outgoing staff member relating to their views on working for FIG and why they were leaving. MLA Elsby said staff were given the opportunity to share any changes or improvements to the job or working arrangements they thought might be helpful going forward.

"FIG recognises that the key to enabling people to give full, frank and honest feedback on these issues is to ensure that any Exit Interview session is one where an individual feels they can open up and freely share their views and feelings on their experiences without having to worry about whether they will be judged on their views or suffer negative repercussions for sharing them."

He said the exit interview had deliberately been set up to enable the outgoing officer the option to discuss these issues with a colleague they are comfortable providing the information to. In other words outgoing staff are not limited to having this conversation with their direct line manager, they can share it with another work colleague if this is considered more appropriate in the circumstances.

Because of these interviews being held in what could be termed a 'protected' environment, MLA Elsby said feedback from staff leaving had normally proved to be very direct and to the point and it would continue to be encouraged.

He said it was considered more appropriate for a Government officer to collect the information rather than a party who was unconnected with FIG.

Asked if contract officers who resign without a 'valid personal reason' have to forfeit a portion of the costs to get to the Islands and part of the gratuity that may have accrued, MLA Elsby assured that FIG's terms of employment included a number of financial penalties which could be applied in the event of a resignation. These include penalties relating to how much basic salary someone will be entitled to at the end of their employment and how much paid leave they might be entitled to. In the case of those employed on overseas terms, penalties can also be applied in respect of relocation and flight costs, as well as on the payment of any gratuity.

However, before applying such penalties each and every case is looked at on its own merit, he said.

"Each department will review all the facts of the case including such elements as the length of notice given and the reason for it, the length of actual service undertaken by the officer up to the point of resignation, the officer's performance, conduct, behaviour and contribution to the service over the period they have been engaged, any additional costs that might be have to be incurred because of the officer's unexpected departure such as the need to bring in cover for the vacancy and/or the cost of recruiting replacements. After considering all these factors a decision will be taken by the relevant department as to what penalties will and will not be applied in each case.

He said that FIG had actively applied such penalties to date where it had been determined appropriate, based on the circumstances of the case.

MLA wagers that lift will be in by July

MLA Mike Summers bet Lidda Luxton her pension that the Town Hall lift would be installed by July this year, at Monday's Public Meeting.

Ms Luxton had asked for an update on the lift installation and had been told that a completion date for the project was not currently available due to a lack of staff to carry out the work.

MLA Barry Elsby said the lift had arrived in the Islands, but the earliest availability for the works to be carried out was July, due to scheduled use of the court, as the work was going to be somewhat noisy and potentially disruptive.

He said however that it was yet to be determined who would carry out the works as expressions of interest had been sought for the works, but suitable resources appear to be committed to other works, so a possible completion date cannot be provided at this stage.

Ms Luxton commented that it would indeed be sad, if like the previous lift brought to the Islands it was never installed.

Less aeromedics than last year

In the eight months from July 2014 to February 2015 there have been nine South American Emergency Aeromedical Flights. Five were KEMH funded, one was non-entitled but funded by KEMH and three were for fishermen which were not funded by KEMH.

Chief Medical Officer Dr Beccy Edwards said this compared favourably to the same period the previous year when there had been 18 South American Emergency Aeromedical Flights between July 2013 and February 2014: 14 were entitled patients (KEMH/FIG paid) and the other four were non entitled (fishermen/tourists).

Rodent free South Georgia

THE South Georgia Heritage Trust has announced that the last pellet of bait has been laid and South Georgia, is hopefully free of rodents for the first time in over two centuries.

This marks the completion of fieldwork to eradicate rodents in the largest such project ever undertaken anywhere in the world.

Chair of SGHT's international Board of Trustees Howard Pearce commented: "Our task is not yet complete. Two further years of work are required to monitor the impact of the baiting we have carried out to date. This is vital before South Georgia can officially be declared free of rodents."

Clyde visits South Georgia

ON a recent visit to South Georgia with supplies and personnel some of HMS Clyde's crew were able to enjoy the area while others carried out surveys and EOD tasks.

A structural engineer on board carried out a survey of the derelict whaling station at Grytviken and an Explosives Ordnance Disposal (EOD) team dealt with a number of old munitions from the 1982 war.

The island is subject to storms and swells which run around the globe uninterrupted; however the weather was kind on this occasion.

The crew were welcomed at King Edward Point by the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands Government Officer, Simon Browning who briefed everyone on the bio-security measures that must be taken to preserve the fragile wilderness from invasive species.

Ship's crew headed for the old whaling station at Grytviken, and the museum and a small team crossed the island to Maiviken where they visited the seals and penguins at Puppy Lake.

Sub-Lieutenant Jack Crallan said that being able to hike through the mountains to the lake at Maiviken was a privilege. "Very few people will ever get a chance to go there, and most that do will have to pay a lot for it, so it's amazing that I get to do it as part of my job."

Memorial unveiled to '82 hero Ian McKay

A SERVICE and unveiling of a memorial to the late 3 Para 4 Platoon Sergeant Ian McKay VC, took place on Monday.

The memorial was donated for a token sum of £1 by Southern Pole Services Ltd, a defence contract firm at Mount Pleasant. Southern Pole Project Manager Chris Atkinson said that due to time constraints the memorial, which is constructed from a metal frame covered with slate tiles, was prefabricated at Mount Pleasant and then built on Mt Longdon by Paul Ford and Shawn Rothwell. This was with support from the Southern Pole team and Marty Pole-Evans, who provided transport to the nearest point on the road for the materials. The Fire Service also assisted with transporting materials from the road up to the memorial site and Roy Jennings provided support for the project with a quad bike.

The event was attended by three 3 Para veterans, Jimmy O'Connell (Ex 3 Para Support Company anti-tank Platoon, Private in 1982), Roger James (Ex 3 Company 4 Platoon, 1 Cpl in 1982) and John Kennedy, (3 Para 1 Cpl Medic in 1982).

Following a battlefield tour given by the three 3 Para veterans, a moving service was held, complete with the Last Post and Reveille, and the memorial was unveiled.

The team from Southern Pole Services Ltd who built the memorial, attended the service, as did a large group of spectators, many of whom had driven from Mount Pleasant specially for the event.

Horsing about at the Mini-Sports

Tim Bonner rides Rock of Gibraltar in his final race

GLOOM descended on the final hour of the Mini-Sports on Saturday as Rock Of Gibraltar, an upcoming young horse belonging to Tim Bonner suffered a broken front leg and had to be put down.

The accident happened at the end of the 400 yard senior gallop as the jockeys were pulling up.

The misty weather earlier in the day had failed to dampen the spirits of the small crowd who took part in a variety of gallops, trotting race and fun foot events.

Trotting races again proved popular with nine entries in one event and the enthusiasm of junior riders proving that the future of the sports may well be safe in their hands. Results on page 15

FOR the second year running Infant/Junior School Teacher Tim Drew triumphed in the Standard Chartered Bank Stanley marathon: but this year the win was extra special as he smashed the course record. Tim completed the gruelling run in 02:35:39 knocking 7:26 off the 2010 record held by Steven Frear of 2:43:05. Last year Tim's time was 2:54:39 however the 2014 competitors (like those in 2010) battled extremely high winds, rain and hail. This year's conditions were reasonable with foggy drizzle and light winds. The race was certainly an exciting one: for the first 22 miles or so 2015 half marathon winner Matt Blunden (RAF), also an experienced marathon runner was ahead, but Tim eventually ran him down and refused to be caught from there on in. Matt's second place was made all the more bittersweet when timings showed he too beat the original course record with his superb time of 02:37:43. Always on top form Stuart Smith of Falklands Conservation ran confidently into third place in a time of 03:04:15. Claiming fourth and fifth were Matthew Kreczak (03:07:46) and Brendon Lee (03:08:11) and Falkland Islander Richard Short picked up sixth place in 03:08:13 and Martin Collins in seventh 03:14:07. Richard now holds the record for the fastest 'Falkland Island born' runner beating John Barton's 2009 time of 3:29:55.

In the women's race Carrie-Ann Ward, who took second place in the 2015 Half Marathon, battled on through to claim the marathon title in a time of 03:39:54 and 18th place overall. Cheryl O'Rourke was second in 04:01:57 and Sarah Smythe third in a time of 04:16:06.

The Gurkha Regiment ruled the roost when it came to the team relay competition with 'Gurkhali' taking first place (02:44:23) and 'Khukiri' taking second (02:50:51). Wexford Boys were third. All three teams came from Mount Pleasant and Gurkhali also won the British Forces South Atlantic Inter-Service Trophy. Both Gurkha teams liberated the team relay course record claimed by the Argentine team Dimos Todo in 2012 (2:55:34).

With all sincerity we can report the 3k Fun Run was no less exciting with a great turn-out. There was no surprise when Adam Dickson took first place however as the young man is becoming well-known for his athletic abilities. Adam finished in a time of 13:06 pursued rapidly by Matt Francis who finished in 13:12. Dean Ellis was only one second behind Matt claiming third place. Equally well known for her running, Marvis Chipunza took the junior female prize in a time of 14:34 with sisters Regan and Darby Newman taking second and third place respectively. In the Senior Open Colin Summers was first. Ellen Suppiah second and Sarah Clement third. Standard Chartered Bank uses the marathon to raise money for the charity Seeing is Believing

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Falkland Islands Development Corporation

The Falkland Islands Development Corporation is looking for individuals with an entrepreneurial background to join the new Falkland Islands Development Board.

This is an exciting time to become more involved in shaping the Islands' economy, as FIDC moves to a more independent operating status. The Corporation has a new team in place, a clear mission, and a real commitment to develop the Falkland Islands economy through a period of significant opportunity.

At this stage of the process we are looking for individuals for the positions of Chair, Vice-Chair and one appointed member of the FIDC Board.

You can learn more about the Corporation by visiting the website www.fidc.co.fk and anyone interested in finding out more about the opportunities detailed above is encouraged to contact FIDC's General Manager, telephone 27211 or email generalmanager@fidc.co.fk for an informal chat and details regarding the application process.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

Chili peppers add spice to a meal THIS 'cold', which seemed to be clearing up a week ago, came right back and bit me, in the chest not long after.

Days of antibiotics and misery followed and so, sadly, the Horticultural Show passed me by. As always, just to be awkward, the girls and I had a lot we thought we would take to the show this year. The rather splendid runner beans, superb parsnips, leeks and onions (I feel a bit like the fisherman talking about the one that got away, here) not to mention the only remaining (untouched by bugs) pumpkin, which the girls had been eyeing up during the week. However all remained firmly in and on the ground. The girls were not too disappointed about not entering them, after all, this way they can assume they would have won prizes for their exhibits had they shown them, can't they?

One of the other vegetables being eyed up for the show was a red cabbage, this is a vegetable I had never had much luck with growing before; the heads becoming hard long before reaching much of a size, but not so this year.

We harvested them a few days ago and discovered that the largest weighed in at just under four kilos. We had a lot of cabbage to get through.

Unfortunately pickled cabbage does not stay nice and crisp for long, so I had to find some other way to use it up.

Out came the cookery books and I found just the recipe I wanted in a book by a lady called Florence B. Jack which had been written more than a hundred years ago, in 1914.

(For anyone who would like to try Ginge's recipe for this was for Braised Red Cabbage, we have included it below).

Speaking of freezers, we have got to the stage where it seems an extravagance to buy another freezer, but a waste of fresh produce not to. But I think we will 'bite the bullet' and get another one as I should hate to sell any of our fresh produce only to have to buy it back at a later date.

Potato lifting is the name of the game at the moment, but not all potatoes are ready for this. Many still have skins which easily rub off, these are great to eat now but, they will not keep. As is so often the case at this time, a bit of patience is required. Another week or ten days should harden the skins enough. It's to be hoped that this rain, which came in time for the mini-sports and the marathon, will not be around for too long!

Some of the sweet corn had ripened, so I put a large pot of unsalted water to boil then went out and broke off the cobs which were ready, having removed the outer leaves or husks. I rubbed off all the whiskers and popped them in the pot of boiling water for five minutes. Covered in melted butter and salt and pepper these were far superior to the bought ones and very more-ish.

Some did make it to the deep freezer though, and there are more left on the plants and ripening off. Yum.

In the flower borders it is time to put out biennials. Any foxgloves, wallflowers and sweet Williams will appreciate a bit of time to get their roots down before winter hits.

I can never plant out small

Corn cobs ready to be harvested

plants grown in pots without remembering my days as Head Gardener at Government House.

One of the people with us to get some gardening experience came back proudly to tell me that all plants were in the border as requested, when I then asked if the empty pots could be washed, we discovered that the plants had gone in, pots and all. We all dined out on that one for a while.

As I walked along the path in front of the house this morning even my nose was not so blocked that I could not smell the Regal Lily flowering out there; deliciously overpowering and impossible to ignore. In fact there are quite a few lovely fragrances out there as some of the roses can really come into their own in certain, not too windy, conditions.

The aubretias which normally would flower in late spring have decided to give us a little show again this year as are the double primroses. All the roses continue to do well but the patio ones, even those new this year, are dripping with blooms and look set to continue for some time yet.

The astilbes are showing off their pink feathery plumes and, the snowdrops are poking their noses through and getting ready for their season later in winter.

Recipes for the Falklands - Braised Red Cabbage

The measurements are per pound of cabbage, said Ginge, adding that she thought this recipe would also be tasty, if not so colourful, with green cabbage.

Ingredients

Oil or butter for frying
1 medium sized onion
4 slices of bacon, diced
4 ozs cooking apple/dried apple
1 oz brown sugar
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cloves (optional)
1 clove of garlic or ½ teaspoon garlic
salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons Port
2 tablespoons vinegar
¼ pint of water

Method

Prepare dried apple by chopping finely and cooking lightly with the brown sugar, nutmeg, cloves, garlic salt and pepper.

Lightly fry onion and diced bacon diced. Add a pound of finely shredded cabbage and the apple mixture.

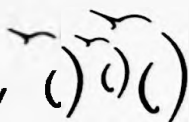

To this mix add the vinegar, Port and water.

Cook slowly for 1½ hours on top of the stove, or covered in a medium oven.

The flavour and colour, gets better with time so, it's worth putting into freezer in small containers or bags.

Golf win for Gordon Lennie

THE Caribbean Alliance golf tournament is often keenly contested as it is one of the last few competitions of the season and is key to deciding who will win the season long league competition. This year was no exception and some very good scores were returned.

The best player on the day proved to be Gordon Lennie who won with a score of 40 points. Gordon put together a very consistent round scoring at least two points on each of his first 15 holes. Only a slight hiccup at the end of his round stopped his score threatening the mid forties. Steve Vincent continued his recent good form to finish second on 39 points with an impressive gross round of 79. Third place on 35 points was Adam Glanville who also continues his great form.

Best front nine with 19 points was Tony McMullen and best back nine was Gary Clement, also with 19 points. Longest drive was won by Troyd Bowles and nearest the pin went to Kevin Clapp. The birdie money was all scooped up by an eagle for the second week in a row as Troyd eagled the par five 6th.

The golf club wish to thank Caribbean Alliance for their kind sponsorship and continued support.

This Sunday the club will host their annual Charity competition. The format will be Stableford and entry will be £10 with all green fees going to charity.

The money raised will be donated to the charity chosen by the winner. This competition will have league points available and with the league still winnable by at least 6 players, we hope for a big field.

Sign-in by 9am for a 9.15 tee-off.

Sure customers not protected by Government regulations

THE current Government regulations under which Sure operates as an exclusive telecommunications provider does not address customer protection, according to an independent 'Strategic Telecoms Review' by Cartesian and Preiskel & Co.

Also the report has revealed that the average overage revenue received by Sure is 31 per cent of the total broadband revenues.

In the report, commissioned by Falkland Islands Government (FIG) it notes: "there is no clear customer protection framework in place today to address customer billing issues, or provisions with respect to service level commitments placed on Sure."

These and other gaps within the current regime which raise uncertainty about the scope of the licence and the extent of obligations placed on Sure need to be addressed by FIG in a full regulatory review says the report released to the public last week.

Split into two parts the first provides insights in terms of benchmarking services, and the second part contains the technical and regulatory recommendations for FIG.

In relation to 'overage' data the report notes: "Bill shock is common due to high overage charges."

Cartesian does add though that, "interestingly the average user uses 8GB a month and as such would achieve the lowest cost on the Business Bronze package (though there are currently only 7.5% of users on this package)."

Other key points

Other key points highlighted in the review comprise:

- Mobile and fixed telephony prices are reasonable and in some cases lower than other benchmarked territories;

- The key issues with broadband are limited data caps and overage charges (rather than headline subscription fees)

- There are social impacts of the night time window (particularly with regards to usage by children);

- Business services offered are relatively basic compared to international markets

- The infrastructure is solid but the 2G and WiMax networks are due for renewal (and suppliers have gone into administration)

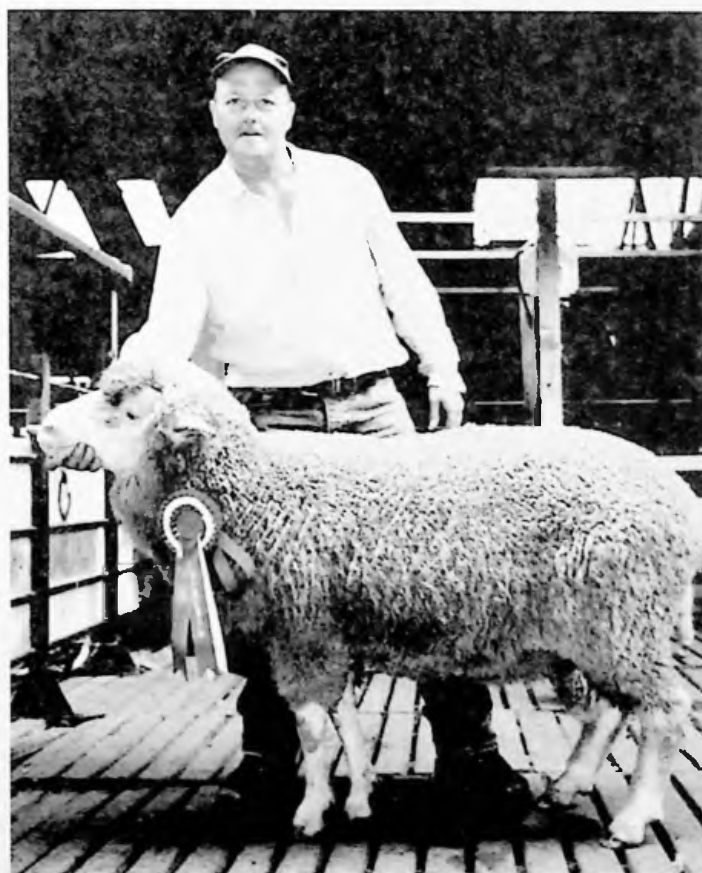

- International capacity is insufficient to meet current and future usage

- The price cap has increased broadband speed and data caps but not reduced broadband pricing and spend significantly

Under Technical and Regulatory assessments the report identifies seven options that could be considered in this respect together with an assessment of the pros and cons associated with each option.

These options were also reviewed in terms of the ultimate question of whether there should be an exclusive licence or not and then whether notice should be served by FIG.

HEW Grierson's dual purpose merino ram (above) earned the title of Champion Ram at the Rural Business Association Agriculture Show on Saturday.

The three year old animal is the result of Mr Grierson's breeding programme at Blue Beach Farm which has included an artificial insemination (AI) programme using semen from Centre Plus, one of Australia's leading performance merino breeders.

As well as scooping up a few prizes Mr Grierson also held an auction of 36 rams and 25 ex-stud ewes which reached average prices of £79.30 and £47.20 respectively.

200 years and 200 kms for Gurkhas

THE UK's Brigade of Gurkhas commemorates 200 years of outstanding service and loyalty to the Crown in 2015. A group of Gurkhas currently in the Islands will be doing a walk from Port San Carlos to Goose Green and then into Stanley, totalling some 200 kms.

They will set off today (April 2) and finish tomorrow at the Liberation Memorial. Give them loads of support along the way; Gurkhas have conducted themselves with distinction in numerous conflicts alongside their British colleagues, including the Falklands War of 1982.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THE draft Development Plan consultation period which was due to close on Monday has been extended throughout April to gather more views from the population.

The last I heard there had been about 18 responses received from the public; that's not a lot when you consider how important this document is to everyone in the Islands: both Stanley and the Camp.

The plan provides the overall approach to the spatial development of the Islands. It contains the Structure Plan which identifies the key characteristics of the Islands which need to be considered as targets are set for the next 15 years as well as the revised Town Plan which takes in the main part of Stanley and much of the Common Land including Cape Pembroke.

I appreciate it is a weighty document and there are parts of it that I either had little interest in, or did not understand well enough to form an opinion. There was a ream of it relating to planning issues which I figured there were people far better qualified than me to digest it and ensure it was suitable to the Islands requirements. And I've heard enough comments being bandied about among the public regarding road widths, whether houses should be east/west or north/south orientated or even if Murray heights type caravans are an acceptable step on the housing ladder, to assume the guys at Environmental Planning would be snowed under with suggestions for a future plan.

But, when I happened upon parts of the plans which I thought might not be giving our culture or natural heritage full consideration, I was quick to put pen to paper (well fingers to keyboard) and make my concerns known.

I have very real memories of how post-82 and in the heady years of fishing wealth and the first oil exploration rounds, little consideration was given to the future value of many aspects of our way of life; it was a matter of out with the old and in with the new.

What we have is pretty special and while it would be relatively easy to emulate the glossy life styles some would aspire to, it wouldn't be the Falklands. For me it is about maintaining a lifestyle to pass on to future generations. If we make a good enough job of it, they will do the same.

After decades of outrage aimed at the Falklands telecommunications company, Bill Luxton may be mollified to find his grievances have been niftily summed up in Cartesian's review with the colourful heading: "Bill-shock".

Planning update

AN appeal by Stephen Toolan against the refusal of Outline Planning Permission to construct retail premises (and associated parking) on land on north side of Airport Road was dismissed at yesterday's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee.

It was refused on the basis that if granted it would, "negatively prejudice the means of access to services in order to maintain/re-place them in the future."

Under delegated powers applications had been granted since last month's meeting for an Extension to mobile home and erection of garden shed for DJ Clarke at 8 Diddle-dee Drive, siting of a caravan by George and Natasha Elbadkize at 7 Strawberry Street, refection of single-storey dwelling for Mr L Alvarez Benavides at 32 Rex Hunt Road, extension to a dwelling by Donna Henry at 3 Davis Street, 26 additional car parking spaces and erection of LED car park lighting at the Chandlery, siting of a mobile home at 10 Diddle-dee Drive by Mr and Mrs G Jaffray and erection of a 6metre perimeter fence all around the property of Sheena Ross at 25 Rex Hunt Road.

Outline Application from Linda McRae to construct a purpose built nursery/early years child care facility at Jersey Road (directly behind the OK corral play-park) was deferred to allow for a parking issue to be resolved.

An outline application for a dwelling at the north part of a garden at 1 Kent Road from Mark Neves was granted with the usual provisions but with the additional provision that a parking space (5m x 5m) be included.

An application for a proposal for an extension to the shop Studio 52 on Ross Road was deferred as the committee required more detailed designs. There was no objection to the extension however more detail was invited because the building is of historic interest and centrally located.

An application from the Falkland Islands Company Ltd (FIC) for the demolition of two buildings and formation of a two-way access point at the FIC Complex on Crozier Place was approved by the committee.

The Committee went on to discuss the Falkland Islands Development Plan process, which has currently received 18 responses from developers and interested persons. Although the closing date for submissions on the plan has passed, late submissions are still welcome.

It was noted at the meeting that the committee requires two new members.

CEO changeover and new role in Tourism

HANDING over the reins to Stephanie Middleton as interim Chief Executive Officer of the Tourist Board on Wednesday, Tony Mason thanked those who had supported tourism under his direction over the past three years.

As from Wednesday Mr Mason assumed the new role of 'Director of International Communications' and will be based in London. He said his time in the Falklands would be fondly remembered and he looked forward to embarking on a new adventure.

In a letter to the board Mr Mason said, "While my new role is not a board facing role and I will be reporting to your new CEO, I hope you will all feel confident to communicate with me should there be anything I can do to support you or your respective businesses from the UK."

Foster parents needed

If you have a spare room, a secure home environment, the support of your family and would like to help children then fostering could be for you.

There are currently five families who help the Social Work Department by providing homes for children for varying lengths of time, but there is a need to find at least six more. Pauline Downes the Social Worker for Fostering told Penguin News this week.

Ms Downes is in the Islands on a six month contract to specifically look at the fostering needs and assist with setting up a programme.

It does not matter if you are married, single, divorced or living together, said Ms Downes, "if you have the time, space, energy and most importantly the commitment to help a child in need, then you may find fostering very rewarding."

There is of course a vigorous assessment and preparation period, but once approved there is a strong support network within the Social Welfare Department as well as between fellow foster parents, said Ms Downes.

In the Falklands the work can be anything as simple as illness of a parent and temporary care being needed to longer term placements for children who have had problems at home. The common link of course is that the child is separated from their own family and this can cause anxiety. "They may not be the easiest of children, but if we can understand how the child feels then we can begin to understand how we can help them," said Ms Downes.

There is no doubt that fostering can sometimes be hard work and progress may be slow she explained. However, she added that foster carers also report how rewarding it is to be able to help a child in need and see their progress.

There is a weekly allowance paid to carers to cover the cost of having someone else living in your home, dependent on the age of the child.

Ms Downes is interested in hearing from anyone who has an interest in fostering either now or in the future adding that it is something that can be done by people of all ages and stages in life.

There is not a limited time frame to register an interest or make contact and people should feel able to discuss whatever they may be able to offer at any time.

Direction signs not one-way

ROADS Engineer Simon Catton has explained that the arrows at the bottom of Philomel (white arrow on blue background) are regulatory signs indicating that traffic should 'proceed in the direction indicated by the arrow'. They do not indicate a one way street which would require a supplementary plate under the arrow indicating 'one way'.

Concerns were raised at the last public meeting that some drivers would treat the sign as a one way instruction and take the corner wide, believing there was not any oncoming traffic.

Mr Catton said the signs were installed to help guide unfamiliar visitors to town, primarily during the evening, "as the area has a very tight bend with a wide open area to the east of the bend and it's difficult at night to determine what the road layout is doing."

Timerman tantrum

THE Argentine government has filed a complaint to several international organisations over what it refers to as the, "excessive military spending," on the Falkland Islands by the British Government.

The Buenos Aires Herald reported on Monday that the letter was submitted by Foreign Affairs Minister Hector Timerman to the United Nations' Decolonisation Committee; the Organisation of American States (OAS); the UNASUR; the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC); the Mercosur trade block and the Group of 77 nations.

Oil woes

OIL company Borders and Southern Petroleum PLC announced on Monday that its pretax loss had widened in 2014 as costs increased, and admitted it had struggled to find a partner for the Darwin discovery against a backdrop of reduced investment by companies caused by the fall in oil prices.

Borders and Southern reported a pretax loss of USD3.9 million for 2014, wider than the USD3.0 million loss reported in 2013. At the end of December, the company had cash reserves of around USD16 million.

Iron man Anton

FORMER Falklands resident Anton Wolfaardt completed the Ironman African Championship held in Port Elizabeth on Sunday.

The event includes a full marathon run, 180km cycle and 3km swim which he completed in 12 hours and 34 mins. He described it as a challenging, but amazing experience, especially crossing the finish line after many months of training.

STUDENTS from the Infant/Junior School (IJS) and the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) jointly raised a whopping £1,304.36 with a sponsored silence including £139.22 from the 'Dragons Den' Mini Enterprise at FICS when students sold home-made goods for the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund. IJS students joined an assembly at FICS this week in order to present a cheque for the amount to SJMF representative Andrea Clausen who thanked the youngsters for their donation and explained how it would benefit and assist families through the charity.

The section covering Technical and Regulatory recommendations has not been released to the public for reasons of confidentiality.

MLA Michael Poole noted earlier in March (as reported in Penguin News) that it had been decided that initially looking to negotiate with Sure around a license extension was the sensible way forward. He said: "Milestones will be set around this negotiation, and if by the end of the year significant progress is not made in line with FIG's objectives, then FIG would look to reconsider its options."

At the time Chief Executive of Sure Justin McPhee assured that Sure would be able to deliver a range of improvements to customers across a range of services, "in the coming years."

Sure has an exclusive licence that can be terminated any time after December 2019.

As of December 31, 2014, FIG can serve notice at any point with a five year effective date.

FIG conducted a public consultation questionnaire to highlight views from the community relating to Telecommunications. The results of the consultation were provided in full to Cartesian and were factored into the final report.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THIS week we have an 'Away day' with directors during which we will be looking at, among other things, immigration policy. I believe there can be no real argument with the fact that we need more people, clearly demonstrated by the number of posts that remain unfilled. Attracting people with the right skills is important but they also need to be adaptable individuals who can adjust to a rather different and special way of life. We must accept that what we may see as small hardships may be insurmountable difficulties for some.

On a related matter the recent percentage figures quoted in public for people not completing FIG contracts are a cause for concern, for instance how far it indicates a problem in our recruitment processes. It is difficult for us as members who, quite properly, cannot normally be involved in recruitment when we see inexplicable decisions being made, for example appointing someone who is known to have lied in his or her application. Such appointments are never going to end well, but of equal concern are those that are ended within months on health grounds. I would ask what has happened between the pretty stringent health checks supposed to be undergone by appointees before contracts are completed and an early resignation within months. I have to wonder if working conditions are really difficult or simply not what they have been expecting. Whatever the case we clearly have some work to do.

I missed the first episode of Island Parish so have read the reviews with interest. The most alarming suggested that we are caught in a 1950s time warp. As someone who can clearly remember most of that decade it was a relief to read other less damning reviews. If nothing else it will show its audience how beautiful the Falklands are and hopefully not paint too folksy a picture of the inhabitants. I think one of the things that most strikes those who really get to know the Islands is that they are not the quiet backwater that they have imagined, but quite the opposite with much happening.

Falklands Obesity Orientation Day

IN celebrating the World Health Day on April 7 KEMH is organising Falklands Obesity Orientation Day (FOOD). Everyone is invited to attend to have their Body Mass Index (BMI) and Blood Pressure checked on Tuesday April 7 2015 8:30-11:30 / 13:00-16:00. The following is an article examining obesity, submitted by the KEM Hospital.

'Overweight' and 'obesity' are indicators of weight that are greater than what is generally considered healthy for a given height and that have been shown to increase the likelihood of certain diseases and other health problems. The World Health Organization sees obesity as a chronic disease and it is now becoming an epidemic.

For adults, overweight and obesity ranges are determined by using weight and height to calculate the Body Mass Index (BMI). For most people, BMI correlates with their amount of body fat. BMI is defined as a person's weight in kilograms divided by the square of height in meters (kg/m²).

- BMI 20-25 is considered as ideal
- BMI 25-29.9 is overweight
- BMI 30-34.9 is obese Grade I or mild obesity
- BMI 35-39.9 is obese Grade II

or moderate obesity

- BMI ≥ 40 is obese Grade III or morbid obesity

All grades of obesity are associated with significantly higher risk of life threatening illnesses. Obesity results from the accumulation of excess fat on the body. The risks to health are greater if there is a lot of extra fat around the waist, rather than on the hips and thighs. In general, the waist measurement should be less than half of individual's height.

The individual's waist circumference can be measured by placing the measuring tape around the navel. Waist circumference should be no more than 88 cm in women and 102 cm in men. However, the risk to health is increased with waist measurement of 80 cm or above in women and 94 cm or above in men.

Obesity is a leading cause of preventable deaths. Analysis from around the world showed that if the BMI is between 30 and 35, a person is likely to die 2-4 years earlier than average. If the BMI is 40 to 45, the chances are that the person will die 8-10 years earlier than average.

Globally, there has been an increased intake of energy-dense foods that are high in fat and a decrease in physical activity resulting in obesity, affecting both adults and children.

The fundamental cause of obesity is an energy imbalance between calories consumed (calories in food and drink) and calories expended (calories body uses or burns up). Multiple other factors may also contribute:

Age: People tend to lose muscle and gain fat as they age.

Gender: On average men have more muscle than women, resulting in more calorie burn.

Pregnancy: Women tend to gain 4-6 pounds after a pregnancy.

Genes: Genes may play a role in efficiency of metabolism and storage and distribution of body fat.

Family lifestyle: Obesity runs in families, caused both by genes and by shared diet and lifestyle habits.

Environmental factors: The most important environmental factor is lifestyle, including over-eating and inactivity.

Emotions: Some people over-eat because of mood changes and other reasons that have nothing to do with hunger. This does not mean that obese people have more emotional problems but their feelings influence their eating habits.

Medical factors: Certain medical conditions and medications can cause or promote obesity, although these are much less common causes.

Obesity is associated with: feeling tired, lacking energy, breathing problems, increased sweating, skin irritation, difficulty sleeping, snoring, back and joint pains, Type 2 diabetes, high cholesterol, high blood pressure, heart diseases, stroke, sleep apnea, fertility problems, pregnancy complications, leaking urine, gallstones.

Cancers: colon, breast, ovarian, endometrial, polycystic ovarian disease, gout, fatty liver, asthma, osteoarthritis, low self-esteem, poor self-image, low confidence, feelings of isolation.

Diagnosis is more difficult in surgical conditions and postoperative complications are more frequent.

Obesity is preventable. For those who are obese, any loss of weight is beneficial and, within reason, the more the better; most of the complications of obesity can be reduced by weight loss. Even modest weight loss can improve or prevent the health problems associated with obesity. Dietary changes, increased physical activity and behaviour changes can help to lose weight. However, a long-term approach is required to change attitude, habits and values for the rest of that person's life to achieve and maintain ideal or near to ideal body weight, while the same is essential for all to prevent from getting obese.

New CBFSAI

COMMODORE Darren Bone is the next Commander of British Forces South Atlantic Islands (CBFSAI) and will succeed Air Commodore Russ La Forte later this month.

Commissioned in 1987, his operational experience at sea includes counter-smuggling in Hong Kong, the Iran Iraq tanker war, Operation Desert Storm off Kuwait in 1991, reassurance patrols around the Falkland Islands and other deployments to the Gulf.

In 1996 he commanded HMS Leeds Castle in the Falkland Islands, returning to the UK to command the minehunter HMS Hurworth whose launch he attended as a schoolboy the day before he joined the Navy.

As a Commander, he led the Second Mine Countermeasures Squadron, once again deploying to the Persian Gulf and has twice served in the UK Maritime Battlestaff: first as the Chief of Staff to the Commander UK Carrier Strike Group, embarked in HMS Illustrious and deployed to the Arabian Sea; then, most recently, as the Chief of Staff to Commander UK Maritime Forces, as the UK prepares to lead NATO's Maritime Response Force.

Staff experience spans strategic, operational and resource planning, but with a particular bent towards joint and combined operations. In 2002 he worked in the Ministry of Defence with a portfolio focused on Afghanistan. He subsequently deployed to that theatre as a Captain in 2009, working in the International Security Assistance Force Headquarters in Kabul on strategic engagement between NATO and the Afghan Government. Back in the UK, he led a team developing operational and counter-terrorism plans at the UK's Permanent Joint Headquarters.

Responsibilities included planning live operations in Libya, Somalia, Yemen and Mali as well as contingency planning across Africa, the Levant and Asia.

He was also the lead for oversight of the UK's permanent joint operating bases, including the Falkland Islands.

Fishing for charities

THE 'Costa Lotta' fishing competition raised £1,350 for local charities on Saturday bringing the grand total up to more than £12,000 over the last decade.

Derek and Trudi Pettersson started the fun day out as a way to raise money for Stephen Jaffray Memorial fund and Cancer Support and Awareness after Derek's mum Heather passed away from cancer.

Derek said only one year of holding the event has been missed and that was when he was recovering from cancer.

"Over the years several other family and friends have also needed help from these charities," he said.

Despite lower attendance than usual the keen fishermen, women and children had a great time and were blessed with fine weather. Several trout were caught along with a good quantity of mullet and Steve Woffinden came out on top with the most fish and also had the prize for biggest fish which was a 4lb trout (trout count double in the competition).

Trudi was second Ruby Shepherd was first in the under 16s with Darryl Miller in second place.

After the competition and great meal of cold food and curry the highlight of the day took place when many prizes were raffled and an auction held.

Top bid on the day was £385 by Derek Goodwin for a Harley Davidson pocket watch and stand kindly donated by Geoff Pring. Another great item was a photo of king penguins donated by French photographer Stanley Leroux. This was a limited edition print of one of his pictures which made the finals of BBC wildlife photography.

Derek and Trudi thanked everyone who donated items and supported the charities on the day.

Jeremy Vine

1 What is your most prized possession? When my first daughter was born in 2004, I couldn't get out of the hospital in the morning to pay the parking charge, so I got a £35 ticket. It is framed and on my wall - it sums up all the joy and despair of being alive

2 What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given?

"You are taken on your own recognisance," David Aaronovitch said, meaning the first impression you give to others is the first impression they have of you

3 Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with?

Probably Hilary Mantel, because she has taught me more about history than anyone else, and I want to understand why it lives so powerfully inside her 4 What is your most embarrassing moment?

I was in the loo at Radio 2 and a security guard unlocked the door from the outside to let in Barry Gibb. I have always been a fan of his too

5 If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? A merchandise outlet for Top Gear

6 There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition?

I would sing "Whole Lotta Rosie" by AC/DC, the most barnstorming song in the history of rock

7 What in your everyday life drives you crazy?

The rule that says you can't smile in passport photographs. It's a national disgrace

8 Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

Peter Falk, who played Columbo. Then we could tell tourists the Islands were named after him

9 If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Japan. So utterly foreign (I imagine). So crowded, so polite, so complex, so different

Dylan sails Arombai 1,695 miles across the Atlantic

AFTER sailing 1,695 nautical miles in 23 days, 21 year-old Dylan Stephenson and Russian crew member, Nataliya Lyubimova have arrived in Brazil after crossing the Atlantic on Dylan's 29ft yacht Arombai. This is the second leg of Arombai's trip home to the Falkland Islands from the UK. On the first leg Dylan and friend Tom Elsby sailed her from the UK to Cape Verde where she has been moored for the last few months.

Dylan and Nataliya set sail from Cape Verde on March 5, and had a mixed crossing of the Atlantic with light winds and at times thunder and lightning storms with choppy seas. Dylan said the calm dark nights were amazing and the fluorescents in the ocean magical but in the thunder and lightning storms the winds were changing all the time making it quite eerie.

On March 19, they crossed the equator and carried out the old tradition of a dunking and cracked open a bottle of champagne.

Arombai sailed into Cabedelo, Brazil on Friday 27th March where she will stay for the next few months when Dylan will return to complete the third and final leg of bringing Arombai home to the Falkland Islands.

Queries about living wage

CONGRATULATIONS to the Policy Unit for tackling the difficult issue of a 'living wage'. A lot of work has clearly gone into the report, but I would like to query one assumption, namely that a reasonable standard of living does not include a car. The Infant & Junior School sits in the middle of Stanley, 1.3 miles from FIG housing at Capricorn Road and 1.7 miles from FIG housing at Rowlands Rise. Given that the average 4-7 year old takes approximately 30 minutes to walk one mile, this makes it physically impossible for parents without a car to take their children home for lunch unless they live close to the school. This is equally true of many villages and towns in the UK, but the difference is that Stanley has no school lunch provision, no school bus, and indeed no public transport service except for taxis.

The basket of goods used to price a living wage is not set out in detail in the report, but I doubt it includes £30 per week or £1,170 per school year for lunch time taxis.

I am also surprised that child care is costed at only £1.74 per hour (significantly lower than current nursery rates) or £300 per month. I appreciate that this may take into account parents who are not working full-time hours and so do not have to pay out as much in child care, or parents whose children are in full-time education and who averaged across the year only need to pay for 90 hours per month child care. However, it is worth remembering that a parent of a below-school-age child working standard FIG office hours, without a car to transport them home at lunchtime, must put their child into nursery for not less than 7.45am to 4.45pm or 180 hours per month which at £2.50 per hour equates to £450 per month or £5,400 per year. Where there are two parents in good jobs, it is a huge struggle to meet nursery care for two children not yet in full-time school – for a single parent on an average wage or two parents on very low wages it must be impossible without outside help.

The support FIG provides to education and families in its broadest sense is greatly appreciated, but school lunch provision and nursery vouchers or other forms of means-tested child care assistance are both long overdue. Our economy is one of full employment, and it must be more cost effective – as well as more inclusive and caring – to assist parents of young children to remain in or return to work rather than replace them with immigrant labour.

Radio shambles internet hoot

HOW very depressing it was to listen to the last meeting of the Legislative Assembly if you have any interest in our Islands' communications. MLA Cheek was talking about Island wide radio – the fact is that the whole FM service is a complete shambles. What is so difficult and mysterious about installing FM radio? BFBS were doing it successfully here 30 years ago. Mount Maria is back on but the signal is weaker than it was then – and the others are a joke. It's fine putting repeaters into the "important" settlements – I can hear the Port Howard one from almost two miles from the settlement! Driving back from Stanley you lose everything after a few miles west of Darwin. What about the rest of us in smaller settlements and Islands?

The AM 530 MW is on again but the signal is weaker than it has ever been and in a house that may have an inverter running it is inaudible. Thank God for BFBS – it's a pain having to turn the TV off but at least you can hear FIRS if you really need to via that system.

Then we had the communications dinosaur, MLA Edwards, talking about the future of phones and internet. What a hoot that he is on the committee dealing with the negotiations with Sure – well it would be if it wasn't so serious. He should be replaced with an MLA with at least an interest in modern communications.

We hear the Manager of Sure pumping out his propaganda about the wonderful service on Ascension and St Helena. I bet it is – with HMG picking up the tab! It's all very well talking about 4G Mobile service here – but let's have a 1G service in the Camp first – apart from those 'important' settlements who already have it.

MLA Edwards expressed his usual views about the dreaded internet and the fearsome modern treacherous device of e-mail! I sometimes think MLA Edwards would like Sure to employ a crowd of little men running around carrying messages in a forked stick...

Something has to be done to get The Falklands internet connection into the 21st Century – the cost and performance and allowance we have are just no longer tolerable. We are falling further and further behind the rest of the world. Many of the poorest countries in Africa have better internet and mobile phone services than we do. If nothing else, the exclusive right to provide a service should not be awarded to Sure under any circumstances. MLAs – if you screw up this set of negotiations with Sure as happened previously, then I hope the electorate will remember in a couple of years time.

Who turned the compass

BATEC has recently announced demolition of ordnance in minefield 35 between Mount Harriet and Mount William, south of the Darwin Road. My bearings had this minefield north of the road?

Page 4 Penguin News No. 38 on March 27, 2015 under title "Stanley Asphalt Programme Closures" talks about Ross Road East outside Government House Paddock and resurfacing at the junction of Ross Road East and Racecourse Road at the 1914 Monument.

Further down the column are reminders that Ross Road East will be closed at three intervals between Reservoir Road and Racecourse Road...

In the Stanley town plan Ross Road East is from Hebe Street past the Cemetery to Rowlands Rise.

Ross Road runs up the harbour front from Philomel Street west to Monkey Island. From the Monument at Little Italy to the old Beaver Hanger is Ross Road West and onwards it was known as the Moody Valley Road now more commonly as the Moody Brook Road?

What hemisphere is the author on? Obviously the cartographers need orientation!

Who else is confused?

Stanley shapes up courtesy of Hillside's Chris

NOT content with just training members of the Royal Air Force, Physical Training Instructor Sgt Chris Pillans (top right) based at Hillside Camp is whipping Stanley residents into shape, free of charge, on a Friday evening. Chris has had up to 27 people, men and women, at the sessions since he began the weekly workouts which change in style each time. This week it was all about abdominal and aerobic work, but the week before the attendees were treated to deep muscle exercises. Sessions take place between 6pm and 7pm.

Falklands wears yellow for 'boy in a bubble'

YELLOW was the prevailing colour in various venues around Stanley on Friday as Falklands residents joined in with an international Twitter event for five-year-old Seth Lane who suffers from a rare medical condition.

He was born without an immune system, and to prevent him from contracting an illness or picking up an infection, he has to live inside a protective bubble in his hospital room in Northhamptonshire, prior to having a bone marrow transplant.

On March 27, people in the UK and around the world joined together to wear yellow for Seth, and to raise awareness of severe combined immunodeficiency disorder, and send him pictures via Twitter using the hashtag #wearyellowforseth.

Paul Phillips of Hope Cottage collects one of several prizes from Governor Colin Roberts

HEW Grierson of Blue Beach Farm earned a massive 18 prizes in the 15 sheep classes as well as the coveted Champion Ram title at the annual Rural Business Association (RBA) Agricultural Show held at Goose Green on Saturday.

Proving to be the top cattle breeder was Tyrone Whitney of Home Farm who took first place in all four classes as well as two second places with his animals.

Proving he did not have all his eggs in one basket, he also won the Champion Ewe class with a dual purpose ewe hogget and picked up a further six prizes in the sheep categories.

Judging of sheep was based on body conformation and condition as well as overall appearance and presentation. Flying the flag for the Falklands Landholdings farms was Steven Dickson from North Arm who accumulated nine prizes in the sheep classes as well as two prizes with his beef cows with calves at foot.

Paul Phillips from Hope Cottage also enjoyed a fruitful show with seven prizes in the sheep classes and three in the cattle.

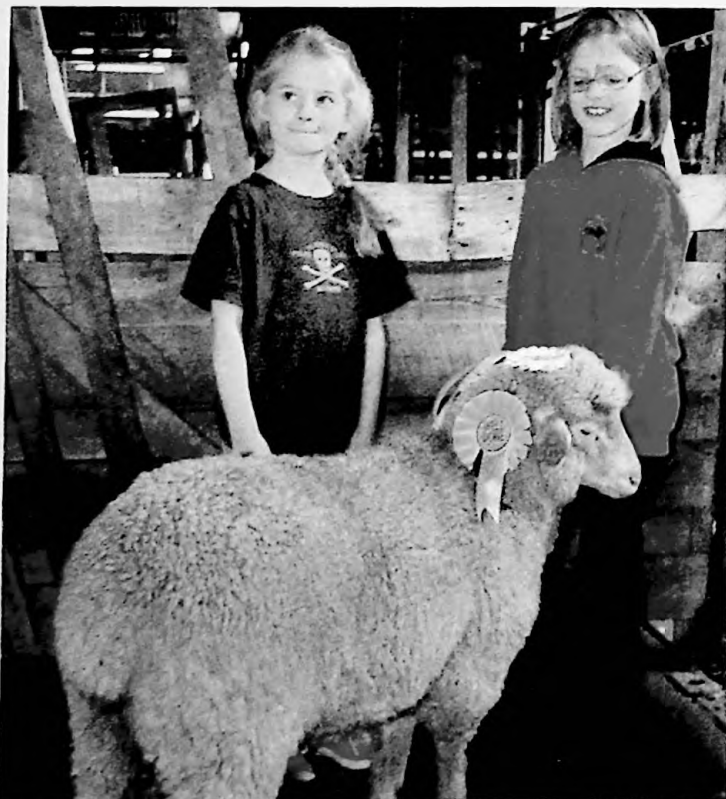

Receiving a special award was Donna Minnell for her outstanding dedication and commitment to the field of artificial insemination, as voted for by RBA members.

The event was treated to a warm day which was enjoyed by the children on the bouncy castle while the show was underway and was the perfect setting for

For those with sufficient energy at the end of the day there was a lively dance with live music from MPA band Top Cover featuring outgoing CBESA Air Commodore Russ Laforte. This brought his tour full circle as it was the first local event he attended when he arrived two years ago.

RBA Secretary Nuala Knight said entries were higher than the previous year and recognised the valuable contribution of new sheep and cattle panels from RDS funds. "We can now deal with more animals at the show and look forward to a continued increase in entries," she said.

A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

FOR the second consecutive Stanley match the weather conditions were ideal and a large crowd of Mount Pleasant (MPA) and Stanley residents turned out for the match and were treated to 10 goals.

The match started at a frantic pace as both teams struggled to settle. The assembled MPA side looked dangerous on the break, but it was Stanley that took the lead. Student Declan Bonner opened the scoring in the sixth minute with a cross that was misjudged and flew into the net. A few minutes later Stanley goalkeeper Ben Hoyles made a fantastic diving save and player/manager Georgie Elbakidze made a last ditch tackle to block the follow-up to preserve Stanley's lead.

The MPA side responded well and started to attack Stanley and equalised five minutes later in fortunate circumstances. Keeper Ben Hoyles failed to gather a bobbling ball properly and it deflected off his hand and into the net. 1-1. Stanley made a tactical change and pressed the MPA side higher up the pitch. This started to cause problems and Stanley's attacking threat increased as they looked to test MPA's inexperienced goalkeeper.

In the thirtieth minute Stanley were awarded a penalty after an initial penalty claim was turned down for handball seconds before. Andres Balladras coolly despatched the spot kick by sending the keeper the wrong way. This gave Stanley much needed confidence and the local side started to play with a higher tempo. Stanley extended their lead after makeshift full-back Stevie Aldridge managed to keep the ball in play after an overlapping run. His cross was met by striker Rafa Sotomayor to head in from the penalty spot. The half-time whistle sounded and Stanley were leading 3-1.

After half-time, teenager Sam Toolan scored the fourth Stanley goal after a great through ball from Sotomayor. Toolan's finish was composed and confident. Player/manager Elbakidze urged Stanley to score more and the team continued to push forward. Second-half Stanley goalkeeper Ross Peters made a brave and acrobatic save to prevent the MPA side from scoring their second goal but collided with the post when making the save and needed some attention, but he was back on his feet in a couple of minutes. MPA scored their second goal with a close range effort after squirming through the defence.

Bonner scored his second goal of the match after good link-up play between substitutes Alejandro Santana and Michael Betts in the penalty area. Betts managed to get a shot at goal that was saved and Bonner followed up while under pressure from a MPA defender. Santana's pace was causing problems for the MPA side as the Stanley striker looked to get in behind at every opportunity. He got his reward after being put through on goal. Santana stayed on his feet after a late challenge in the penalty area and finished well into the far post. 6-2.

The MPA side's threat was waning as Stanley's fitness started to prove the biggest difference. The Stanley defence was brilliantly protected by mid-fielder Paul Zeller who chased, harried and tackled throughout the 90 minutes. His work rate and discipline allowed the attack-minded Stanley players the freedom to stay further forward and look to create opportunities.

Santana's pace again caused problems. He was put through on goal and was cynically chopped down from behind by the MPA defender. In a competitive match the defender would most definitely have been sent off as he was the last man.

The resulting free-kick was scored by Betts as he took advantage of the inexperienced keeper and placed his shot low into the bottom corner. Betts rounded off the scoring with another free kick that was meant to be a cross but the MPA keeper misjudged the flight of the ball and allowed it to fly over his head and into the net. The match finished 8-2 with a much improved performance from Stanley.

Fast racing at new Boca motocross track

THE penultimate round of the Falklands Motocross season set up shop at the Boca near Goose Green on Sunday. A new track design proved immensely popular with the riders and provided some extremely fast and close racing. The Junior class was packed from one side of the start straight to the other. With points battles really heating up as they approach the end of the season, every rider looked as determined as ever.

Jack Alazia got the jump and opened up from the start. Junior points leader Travis Jaffray was racing like a man possessed. He seems to have discovered that the power band on his KX 85 is a secret weapon. He took second from a very surprised Adam Dickson with blazing speed. They were both taken back to see Molly Jaffray take both of them in one corner and clear off for second. Adam is not one to give up and neither is Travis, the battle that ensued right to the finish line was spectacular. Multiple passes every lap, bar banging and wheel to wheel drag races down the straight resulted in a photo finish that Adam won by a Teal Duck's eye lash.

The second race saw Jack again get the jump on the field but Molly didn't let him get away this time and matched his pace for the entire race for a superb second overall. Adam managed to get away from Travis and settled in to a comfortable third. Regan Newman, Lachlan Crowie, Chico Thomas and Kia Alazia all mixed it up between themselves and displayed great riding and entertainment.

The Clubman class was once again dominated by the newly crowned champion James Tyrrell. Smooth, confident and stylish riding has seen him untouched all season. One to watch in the experts next year. Ryan Perry stormed to a second place position only to throw it away on the one super slippery corner that was widely loathed by riders. He DNF'd and left the remaining places on the podium between Jimmy Moffatt and Zoran Zuvic. Tyre to tyre as it has been so many times this year, Zoran got the better as Jimmy washed out on the same corner that claimed Ryan.

The second race saw Ryan assume second place again with Jimmy this time getting the better of Zoran for second overall. First time racers Ryan Watson and Ian France duked it out being chased by the slightly fragile Garry Tyrrell.

The Experts jumped in with the Clubman class as a result of depleted numbers. The track seemed more suited to the ultra agile 150 KTM of Jay's and won both races against brother Sean who is now up to race pace after a good few years away from racing. A race day cannot pass peacefully with out a relay race. If it were suggested that the race wasn't going ahead the kids would promptly start World War III.

Sean's Spark Plugs and Jay's Jump Leads lined up eight strong. Sean's Spark Plugs dominated until Jay started getting his riders fired up with 'The Froth'.

A state of readiness a motocross rider has when it is all about to be put on the line. Sean screaming as a counter measure, "go hard or go home." It was all much more frenzied, faster racing until Ian France 'Over Frothed' off the start and promptly flipped the bike. Great fun was had by all as everyone watched the limits getting pushed further on the one lap format.

Sean Moffatt won the beer leg after catching and passing Jay and James who were having a great battle up front.

Massive thanks go to Goose Green for the land, the Speedwell Store for sponsorship, the Chandlery for the beer leg, John Carlin for the medical cover and all the helpers on the day. It's worth it just for the smiles on the kids faces - whether they are six or 62.

The last race of the season is at the Ponds on April 26. See you all there.

Jay Moffatt

Another bumper year for Illex predicts fisheries scientist

THE Falklands is set to have another bumper year of Illex squid catches with 150,000 tonnes already caught this season. It is, "a record catch at this point in the season, at least for the last 25 years of the fishery," Senior Scientist, Falkland Islands Fisheries Department Dr Sasha Arkhipkin, told Penguin News yesterday.

Last year the fishery had a record catch of over 306,000 tonnes. This year Illex is in such abundance that during the last few days captains in the Loligo fishery have been astonished to find themselves catching 40-70 tonnes of Illex instead of Loligo. (On the downside such a large migration of Illex into Loligo fishing grounds may impact on the amount of Falklands calamari both during this and especially second seasons, as Illex predares on small Loligo.)

Back in the Illex fishery captains and crew are delighted with mean daily catches varying between 30 tonnes and 47 tonnes per night.

Dr Arkhipkin said: "Some jiggers had as much as 130 tonnes of squid per night."

On Wednesday the daily catch hit a new record with 7,934 tonnes of squid taken by jiggers and trawlers.

Dr Arkhipkin said this was quite unusual for this period of time. "Dense aggregations of Illex appeared early from the Argentinean EEZ in the western part of FICZ. For the first time in the fishery's history, Illex aggregations spread to the south of the Falkland Islands."

But what's the cause? "After three cold years in a row, this year the sea water temperatures are back to normal."

Facebook grudge leads to serious assault at Trough

OPENING what has become known as the 'Trough Trial' on Wednesday, Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said that emotions had been raised by Facebook comments and when the opportunity arose the defendants had, "quite literally given George Toolan (22) a kicking."

Bono John McKay (22), Arthur Leonard Pitaluga Turner (48) and Dylan Stephenson (21) face charges of battery and assault occasioning actual bodily harm following an incident which occurred at the Trough night club on the night of June 29, 2014.

The fourth defendant Lauren Joyce McKay entered a guilty plea to a charge reduced from battery to using threatening words and behaviour on Wednesday, and will be sentenced at the conclusion of the trial. She was released on bail from the proceedings which are expected to last a week.

Mr Rowe said the incident which resulted in the victim being taken to the hospital had sadly arisen out of a comment on Facebook by Mr Toolan in March last year. Following an incident in which Lauren McKay was involved when his then girl friend had a drink spilled on her, he had posted, "Some people just need to be shot."

The following day Bono McKay posted, "Some people need to watch what they are saying, what goes around comes around."

Mr Rowe said from that point on the McKay siblings had borne a grudge.

He split the alleged assault into three incidents at the Trough: The first involved Mr McKay and Mr Toolan where the Crown submits that Mr McKay approached Mr Toolan and punched him several times knocking him to the ground. Mr McKay denies this saying that he had an altercation with Mr Toolan in which he pushed him away, but it was in self defence.

The second incident some 15 to 20 minutes later was again in the Trough car park and involved the incident Miss McKay pleaded guilty to. Mr McKay then got involved and admits that he assaulted Mr Toolan punching him twice. Mr Rowe said Messrs Turner and Stephenson then got involved which, "turned into a melee," which resulted in Mr Toolan being on the ground and kicked. Mr McKay admits the charge of battery in this incident, but denies assault occasioning actual bodily harm. Mr Stephenson denies battery but admits the assault charge on the basis that he did not kick Mr Toolan. Mr Turner denies both battery and assault charges, saying that his was the role of peacemaker although he may have pushed and shouted at Mr Toolan to "get out of it."

Mr Rowe said this assault was stopped by onlookers, but that as Mr Toolan made his way towards the Sea Cadet's boat he was again assaulted by all three defendants, being repeatedly punched. He said one witness was so concerned she threw herself on top of Mr Toolan to protect him.

A medical examination had noted that the victim had footprints to his head and neck, said Mr Rowe.

He described it as a, "fast moving incident," with bodies everywhere and witnesses seeing it from different angles. "It was a surprising and shocking incident for everyone who witnessed it," he told the court, adding, "The Crown submits that the male defendants ganged up on George Toolan."

Addressing the Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds, Mr Rowe said that if she was satisfied that two or more had been involved in the joint enterprise to assault Mr Toolan and that someone had kicked him, then every participant was guilty whether they actually kicked him or not.

At the time of going to print Mr Toolan was due to give evidence. The trial will continue next week.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WITH some private house rents heading for the roof tops and in some cases well beyond, I had a brief idea this week of funding a future holiday by moving into the garage and offering my premises up to the highest bidder.

Not a thought to be entertained long though with a drizzle laden Autumn on the cards, not to mention my aversion to roughing it (I once heard myself declare with furious sincerity, "we might as well be camping" when the hair dryer in the hotel room wasn't close enough to the mirror).

But there's no doubt that housing is where the money is right now: an excellent situation for those with an available property but not so fabulous for the average family or individual, seeking a place to call home; and there's no shortage of them.

Of course there's also no magic wand answer. It's one of those things that takes time to resolve (if ever) and I'm aware the public sector continues to build housing as fast as it can practically manage. All of that said, in this office we observe on a weekly basis the high level of stress in the faces of those who call in, hopeful of advance information on houses advertised for rent.

Those persons comprise not only young families seeking a home of their own, but individuals wishing to remain in the Islands and work, and employers desperate to hire workers for their businesses but with nowhere to put them; well not without paying exorbitant prices.

The creation of public housing must continue to be an absolute priority for government bearing in mind the lack impacts not just on the quality of life of families, but on the economy itself.

On a more satisfying note, I have to record my sincere admiration for the many young people involved in building their own houses. Instead of grumbling about having to live with parents, or cursing FIG for a lack of available flats or housing in the Falklands, they have leapt upon an excellent government initiative as well as the FIC's scheme and been proactive despite that decision being an intimidating one, and the process relatively complicated. Owning a house is a massive commitment, and all the more so for these people bearing in mind they cannot rent or sell the property for ten years without having to pay back a substantial sum of money. Not every young person has the means to build their own house, but those who have managed to pull the funds together deserve an accolade not least for leaving the path to government accommodation clear for those in more urgent need.

MLA Short gets up to speed on road works

GIVING an update on road issues on Thursday, MLA Gavin Short said that a new, locally recruited staff member was to join the Highway Department shortly which would mean there were three grading teams again in action.

At the last public meeting MLA Short reported that works had been restricted as staff had been reduced to just one and a half grading teams.

Responding to comment that the MPA Road was not a particularly pleasant experience at the moment, MLA Short said it was one part of the network, and the teams had been active on the remainder of the network with most of the West and the East having been graded this season. Also on the East, significant upgrade work had been carried out to the north of Teal Inlet and also towards North Arm.

"If you drive the MPA road you will feel, if you can't see, that it is a road of two halves, and that is because the grader crews have been in action since Monday, but have had to stop works because of the weather," said MLA Short.

Capping material for the MPA road was still being crushed, and he was hopeful, weather permitting, "that we should be cracking on with that operation in the next few weeks once the other programmed jobs are finished."

"Obviously capping during winter isn't ideal and it won't be pretty, but our crews can only do so much and I take my hat off to them for all that they have achieved during this season. Obviously the weather is going to play a great part in just how much we can do and how speedily," said

MLA Short.

The focus has recently been asphaltting works in various locations, including parts of the existing town network, but this will be completed next week which will free up some staff for wider maintenance works.

Asked if consideration had been given to increasing the wage for key plant operators (ie grader drivers) to attract skilled workers both locally and overseas, MLA Short said increasing pay rates for one group had knock-on effects and had to be carefully considered.

"Recruiting staff directly from overseas has not been discounted and may be an option used for next season, but the expansion of term contract works, done by contractors has in part been aimed at dealing with direct labour resource shortages and has been successful in getting works done this season and is expected to have even more positive effect next season, once more of the necessary plant has arrived."

However he recognised that the Government could not take the oil companies on pound for pound, "but I would like us to better pay all our local FIG staff as we have good and loyal staff who do not want to move."

"But if oil continues we are going to either have to up our game or backfill with imported workers as local staff will undoubtedly be lured towards higher paying jobs."

He said that after the next summer season was completed it would be much clearer as to what the future for hydrocarbons was and how the local labour market was reacting.

Isobel spudded after Zebedee discovery

FALKLAND Oil and Gas Limited has announced that the Isobel Deep exploration well was spudded (first drill) by Premier Oil as operator, on Wednesday.

The Isobel/Elaine complex is estimated to contain an estimated 243 million barrels and is anticipated to take approximately 30 days to drill. FOGL is carried through the costs of this well by Premier Oil and Rockhopper Exploration.

The Eirik Raude rig moved to the second well of its exploration project in Falklands waters following last week's oil and gas discovery at the Zebedee exploration well.

Isobel Deep sits in an formerly untested area to the south of Sea Lion, and the prospect could unlock the greatest potential of the wells in North Falklands Basin.

From seismic, the prospect is interpreted to be on a similar scale to Sea Lion, which is now being developed by Premier. Sea Lion's reserves appear to be around 300 million barrels of oil.

PLate last week the Falkland Islands Government welcomed the announcement by Premier Oil and partners that the Zebedee well had been declared an oil and gas discovery. Zebedee is the first well of the six-well drilling campaign planned to take place in Falkland Islands waters through 2015.

MLA Jan Cheek, portfolio holder for Mineral Resources, commented: "We congratulate Premier and their partners on this early success, which provides an excellent start to the 2015 exploration programme. The Zebedee discovery identifies additional resources that could form part of subsequent phases of the Sea Lion field development."

FICS need to plan ahead to cope with IJS classes

WITH a lack of classroom space being a long term issue at the Infant and Junior School (IJS), concerns about how the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) would cope with the large classes moving up was raised at Thursday's meeting of the Education Board.

Board member Karen Lee said that she could not see how FICS was remotely suitable to cope with the larger classes currently in IJS. "It's imperative that we do not sit here and not acknowledge the situation," she said.

There are currently approximately 280 students in the IJS with class size ranging from 30 to 53, including Camp Education children.

There are just 156 pupils at FICS with the largest class made up of 37 pupils.

Acting Director of Education Karen Steen said there were 46 pupils in the IJS Year 6 class due to move up to FICS in the beginning of the school year in September and there were usually some additional students from Mount Pleasant at that stage.

Ms Steen noted however that FICS had not traditionally moved their classrooms around as IJS do, to best accommodate numbers, but this was an option that was being considered.

Chairing the meeting MLA Roger Edwards asked that a "forward planning" report be prepared as soon as possible on how the larger cohorts moving to FICS might be managed.

"We need a plan on how to fit them in," he said.

IJS staffing

Ms Steen reported that five out of six posts for IJS and Camp Education to start in September, had been filled.

She said the school remained determined to be able to observe all teachers teaching before appointed to classroom positions.

There was only so much you can tell from an application and interview, said Ms Steen, adding, "You can't fake it in the classroom."

Two months in Young Offenders Institute for youth

A YOUTH was sentenced in the Youth Court yesterday to two months in a Young Offenders Institute for the crime of burglary.

The incident occurred on Wednesday and the individual was arrested soon after. He made a full admission to police. Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds said it was a great worry that the youth had committed a similar offence so soon after being given a suspended sentence, however, although this was repeat offending there were extenuating circumstances and as such the previous suspended sentence would remain in place.

When the individual last appeared in court he was described as a "grown man with a child's mind."

Sex offender back in jail

STANLEY man William Harvey (42) has been jailed for six months after he admitted 12 breaches of a sexual offences prevention order (SOPo) and also failed to surrender to custody.

Mr Harvey admitted all 13 offences and opted to not have any legal representation when he appeared before the Senior Magistrate on Thursday (April 2) afternoon.

The offences are related to interaction with children on social network site Facebook.

Police appealed for public assistance on Wednesday afternoon when they were unable to locate Mr Harvey and he was found on Thursday afternoon by a member of the public in the Mount Kent area.

Mr Harvey was jailed for four and a half years in October 2011 for sexual activity with a child and was released from prison in September 2014.

Chief of Police Len McGill said the incident with Mr Harvey highlighted the seriousness of being under a SOPo and the need for complete compliance.

Superintendent McGill said that all breaches of any order would be dealt with within the law. He assured that all sex offenders under a SOPo are monitored by the Police.

Illex season

"The warm water inflow (9-11°C) had already formed in the northern part of Falkland Zones at the end of January and spread from the north to southeast in February, attaining its southernmost expansion down to the northern part of the Loligo Box in March," said Dr Arkipkin. He said: "Illex squid migrated in large numbers within these waters, providing an excellent opportunity for the squid fishery."

Virtually all 105 licensed jigging vessels (mainly Taiwanese and Korean) have fished in Falkland waters since the official opening of the Illex fishery on February 15. The vessels gradually moved from the northern part of FOCZ in the beginning of March down to the north-eastern part of FICZ in April, together with the spread of the warm-water inflow.

Walker Creek bikers ride the coast

Picture Bobby Short

THE picturesque camp settlement of Walker Creek which normally boasts a population of three increased to 40 on the weekend courtesy of the Falklands motorcycling fraternity.

The riders, young and old, mounted on all manner of steeds arrived with two main goals, make some money for charity and having some fun said biker Jay Moffatt.

On Saturday morning the settlement was awash with motorcycles, quads and support vehicles and after a couple of photos at the exit gate the clock struck 10am and they were off with a roar.

Jay said: "The weather tried to dampen the high spirits with three biblical hailstorms, but bikers are a tough bunch and we would not be stopped."

The route wound its way around the coast from Seal Cove to Motley Point. Along the way the party had various opportunities to play on the sand beaches and coastal cliffs due to the relaxed pace.

"Peer pressure and an audience are the perfect ingredients for motorcycle entertainment," said Jay. Cliff climbs and swamp crossings featured heavily.

Later the group split and riders who had not yet had their fill tackled Upper Walker Creek and Low Bay, while the others headed back to the settlement. The ride eventually ended at about 5pm, when an asado was ready to replenish their depleted reserves. Meat, beer and hundreds of relived fall-offs, boggings and jumps made for a perfect evening.

Sunday again started a little damp and a couple of stiff bodies bowed out gracefully before it all started again," explained Jay.

A shorter route took the group around the coast to Island Creek and Hammond Cove with lunch served at the crash site of an Argentine aircraft shot down during the 1982 War. Another coastal ride took them back to Walker Creek finishing at 1pm.

More than £400 pounds was raised and was rounded up to £500 by Falklands Garage. The funds will be split between the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund and the Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust. Jay said: "Huge thanks go to Keith, Glynis, Bobby and Lyndsay for their hospitality and meat donation. Gilberto and Suzi for the asado and all the riders and helpers that made it such a memorable weekend."

shares a glimpse into her working week

IT was agreed at the April Planning and Building Committee that consultation on the Development Plan could be extended beyond the original 30 March closing date so you have a few more days to have your say if you want your views taken in to account. It is better to express views now than wait to complain after the plan is completed and being implemented. The Planning Committee has two vacancies which would provide opportunities for individuals to become actively involved in planning matters. I do hope we get more than one applicant.

I'm not sure what I said in the last Assembly meeting to exacerbate an eruption from the West. I thought I was only saying let us hang on to the medium wave transmissions as back-up for the times when one of the FM frequencies is unavailable, so the reaction was somewhat startling. Perhaps I'll find out when on the West this weekend for the public meetings at Fox Bay and Port Howard. Before that I have a full week of meetings including standing in on Education board in the absence of MLA Elsby who is away for a few weeks. I sometimes think meetings have proliferated to fill the time available but when I checked to see which ones could be dispensed with, I could find very few.

This week we get our first look at the draft review of the ITQ system which I believe has already been seen by industry representatives. It will be interesting to read which aspects have worked and which haven't. It is pretty obvious to observers that some companies have invested in developments in the industry and in the Islands generally.

I fear that my property has become an earwig sanctuary as every rock I lift in the garden uncovers some, though only the biggest and boldest have arrived indoors. I'm reluctant to have the house sprayed as I do not know what the long term effect of spraying insecticide may be. It all seems a bit indiscriminate and I still wonder what 'friendly' insects are being destroyed with the earwigs.

HMS Clyde crewmen pay up for van and property damages

TWO sailors from HMS Clyde were ordered to pay £2,500 each in compensation after they stole a vehicle and crashed it into a residential property causing substantial to both.

Shane Thomas Fellows (24) and Lee Adam Lovick (24) were also ordered to each pay £150 prosecution costs and were banned from driving in the Falkland Islands for one year.

The Summary Court heard that on the night of December 6, the two men had taken a transit van from outside the Chandlery warehouse after finding the keys in the sun visor and then crashed through the fence and into a kerosene tank stopping just feet from a house at 12 Hansen Hill.

The resident of the property was woken up at 10.20pm by the noise from the collision as was her neighbour who said the bang was so loud he thought the tumble drier had exploded.

Both people quickly made their way to investigate and saw two men running from the van.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said that when police were called to the area to the East of Stanley they were conscious that HMS Clyde was docked at FIPASS that night and made their way there to discover the two men had just arrived back at the ship.

In interview both men said the other had been driving the van and as there was no witness to their exiting the vehicle, the Crown could not prove otherwise, said Mr Rowe.

Mr Fellows said Mr Lovick had picked him up from Crozier Place, while Mr Lovick said due to the amount of alcohol he had consumed he could not remember being in the vehicle at all until he had grabbed the steering wheel from the passenger's seat to prevent it from hitting the kerb.

They managed to agree on the fact they had both been to Government House for a reception for the HMS Clyde crew and had later gone to the Globe Tavern.

Mr Fellows said in interview that he had, "never driven a vehicle and would not know where to start," while Mr Lovick told his lawyer that his last recollection of the evening was being in the Globe and buying a round of drinks.

The value of damage to 12 Hansen Hill with the replacement fence, fuel tank and base and the garden soil which was damaged by the lost fuel was £2,926.88.

Repair to the Seafish Chandlery van including labour was valued at £3,950.

Mr Lowe said it was important that the member of the public was compensated first, but also pointed out that in Falklands law the maximum compensation from a defendant was £2,500, which meant that the Chandlery would be, "out of pocket."

Justice of the Peace Anton Livermore said it was a serious case, adding however that the court was constrained on what punishment could be imposed as both men would be leaving the Islands this week. He said that having brought the Royal Navy into disrepute they would also answer directly to them in due course.

Road traffic offenders fined

TWO Stanley men were fined after they pleaded guilty by post to failing to stop at a traffic light.

Craig John Thain (22) and Elliot Lawrence Vincent (22) both pleaded guilty by post to driving through the portable traffic lights on Ross Road East on March 10.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe said that a police officer had gone to check the lights after there had been complaints from the public about people driving through when they were on red.

Approaching the light which was green the officer saw Mr Thain driving towards her in the Stanley Services Ltd fuel bowser and behind him was Mr Vincent in a 4x4 vehicle.

Mr Thain offered no mitigation however, Mr Vincent apologised and said that he had just followed the lorry and had not checked the lights.

It was noted that it was incumbent on the driver of each vehicle to check the lights.

Mr Thain was fined £150 plus £85 prosecution costs while Mr Vincent was fined £125 plus £85 costs; both had their licence endorsed.

Also pleading guilty by post was Stanley man David John Hills (33) who was recorded driving at a speed of 35 mph on Ross Road West (a 25 mph zone) on February 27. He was fined £150 plus £85 prosecution costs and had his licence endorsed.

Trial date set

STANLEY man Rishon Kamoto (30) entered a guilty plea to taking a vehicle without consent, but denied two further charges of theft and attempting pecuniary advantage by deception.

A pretrial hearing was scheduled for May 5, with the provisional date of May 19 for trial.

Mr Kamoto was released on unconditional bail.

Gurkha 200k march raises £2000+

TWO teams of four members of the Gurkha Rifles completed a 200 kilometre march in 37 hours 51 minutes on Friday. They walked from Port San Carlos to Stanley via Goose Green, virtually the same route that 17th Duke of Edinburgh's Own Gurkha Rifles did in 1982.

As a result of the impressive physical feat they have raised £2,005.80 for three charities. The Gurkha Welfare Trust, Community Action Nepal and the Falklands Veterans Foundation.

Friendliest magazine pays a visit

PEOPLE'S Friend magazine writers Neil and Hazel McAllister, names familiar to quite a number of Islanders paid a visit to the Falklands this summer on the German ship MS Hanseatic.

For more than 30 years, Neil, along with wife Hazel, have written and photographed articles on the UK and Ireland for People's Friend magazine. When the editor heard they had booked an Antarctic cruise which included three stops in the Islands, she asked them to write an article about their experiences, as Neil explained.

"I knew the magazine reached the Falklands, but until we arrived hadn't realised how many readers there were. Many people knew our names and we were made very welcome everywhere we called."

Their ship first dropped anchor off New Island, where after experiencing Rockhopper penguins and albatrosses, they chatted to Charlene Rowland. "I had visions of Charlene and husband John living a lonely life, with only seals and penguins for company, but how wrong I was," Neil admitted. "I was told that each year around 30 ships call and Charlene obviously enjoys the chance to chat and open the fascinating little museum. As we chatted, researcher Tatiana Mendoza from Lisbon, on the island for the summer studying birds, joined us. 'I wish I could stay forever, it is such a wonderful place,' she told us with a broad smile."

"The following day, we started our visit to Carcass Island with a hike to the McGill's welcoming farmhouse, where we discovered Rob and Lorraine coping with 160 hungry passengers, digging into a table groaning with home baking. When I mentioned who we were, Lorraine's eyes lit up. 'I used to get the People's Friend regularly from Rob's mother and aunt who sent copies." Most of our fellow passengers were German and when one referred to the McGills as "European" she was quick to put him right. "No, we are Falkland Islanders," she explained.

Whilst at the McGill's, Neil was introduced to a guest who was returning to the Islands after playing a vital part in their defence. Ray Bloye, from Rainham in Kent was on Carcass Island with wife Sharon and four former colleagues scattering the ashes of a fellow soldier. In 1982, Ray was one of the Marines charged with guarding the Falklands when the Argentines invaded.

"Ray told how he was on Murray Heights when the invading Special Forces landed and tried to capture the Governor," Neil explained. "His story of street fighting to get to, then defend Government house showed the bravery of our army lads who fought so bravely despite increasingly diminishing odds. We held them off until they got their heavy armour ashore and got planes and helicopters overhead. We were taken to Argentina, which was rather frightening, but we weren't badly treated," Ray told me, continuing to explain his presence back in the Islands. "This is our first trip back, we are here with four friends, scattering the ashes of a fifth, who passed away last year, fulfilling his wish that his ashes be scattered with the albatrosses when they fledge, which we did with his wife Sandy and sister Jo at Steeple Jason." Our articles are driven along by the people we meet and the things they tell us, so we were very lucky to have encountered Ray and Sharon at the McGills."

The McAllister's final call was in Stanley, where they spent all day on shore, sightseeing, chatting to locals and still managing to fit in a pint and lunch in the Globe Tavern.

"We were particularly impressed with the new museum, where we chatted to Toobie Goodman and Eileen Davies. The museum exhibits were fascinating, but we particularly enjoyed chatting about Toobie's sheep farming heritage," Hazel said.

"I was particularly delighted to see the red phone boxes in Stanley," said Neil, whose first book, 'Requiem for a Red Box' published in 1988, was pictorial record of phone boxes, which at the time were rapidly disappearing from Britain's streets. His latest book 'Beginners India,' published last November is an illustrated guide for first time visitors to the sub-continent. "I didn't imagine there was be a big market for it in the Falklands, but our chats revealed how many people take distant holidays and being an e-book, it is on sale all over the world on Amazon and Apple's iBooks," Neil laughed.

"When I was a child growing up in Cardiff, I was aware of the Falklands, because in the docks, next to the iconic, white Norwegian Church, which is very similar to that in Grytviken, I remember an old warehouse belonging to the Falklands Islands Company. As a schoolboy looking at my atlas to find them, these Islands seemed remote and I never dreamed that one day we would visit."

"People were keen to explain how the flights from the UK and via Chile are not only for the military and that many tourists come to spend a few weeks exploring the Islands, using the air service. Our experience here has been wonderful, both unexpected and familiar at the same time. We have been made wonderfully welcome and will delight in letting our readers know what a fascinating, beautiful and friendly place the Islands are.

"The Island Parish series, currently being broadcast by the BBC should help increase awareness of the Islands' potential, which my article will reinforce."

Neil's article on his experiences on the island, and another covering South Georgia and the Antarctic part of his trip, will be published shortly in People's Friend magazine.

Where's the Beef in the Falklands Defence Review

LONDON has soberly reassessed the military situation in the Falklands and, as a result, will be modestly enhancing the Falklands' deterrent (or, if you're reading this in Buenos Aires, embarking on further massive militarisation of the southern hemisphere).

This news competed heroically for headline space here in the UK, especially considering that the announcement by Defence Secretary Phil Hammond was rather less than blood curdling.

There have been plenty of other events of high news calibre going on in Britain and Europe, among them, of course, an impending general election. Then there is an increasingly bolshie Russia, which has warned Nato that it would be prepared to use nuclear weapons if the alliance defends the Baltic states, which Moscow considers its zone of interest. And there was the appalling deliberate German Wings crash in the Alps, Iranian nuclear talks and the ongoing battle against the creatures that call themselves ISIS.

Given the richness of this media soup, it was surprising that a story linked to a conflict 32 years back in history was able to struggle to the surface and tread water for a day or two.

It surprised me, even though I'd been hoping for an announcement of this kind ever since I interviewed a former Commander British Forces Falklands. He told me that he believed the MOD had been enjoying a false sense of security about the Falklands for a decade or more, allowing them to withdraw Falklands kit to ease the effect of defence cuts, or redeploy assets, such as Chinook helicopters, to Iraq and Afghanistan. This weakening was not exactly a signal that Fortress Falklands was weak, but it did nothing to discourage Buenos Aires from raising the temperature of its rhetoric.

I felt, however, that Phil Hammond's announcement was either strong enough in tone (he could have taken a lesson from the Russians) or in content, to send a serious signal. A promise of £280m spending over a number of years, including improvements to the school at Mt Pleasant hardly chills the blood. Yes, he did announce that the mobility of ground forces would be enhanced by the return of two Chinook heavy-lift choppers. And ground-to-air defences would be modernised when the Rapiet system is eventually replaced with a new missile. But the Chinooks never should have left the Falklands, and now they are back from Afghanistan, they have to be based somewhere, so why not the Falklands. The missiles? Well, it stands to reason that when the Rapiet is too old for further use, it must be replaced by something.

I would have liked to have heard Mr Hammond deliver a much more gutsy message. Rather than talking vaguely of "modernisation," he could have reminded Buenos Aires precisely what punch is available in the Falklands now, mainly in the form of the Typhoon fighters, and that the heavy lift C17s of the RAF could have a detachment of Apache attack helicopters and another six to eight Typhoons battle-ready at Mt Pleasant within days of hostile preparations being detected in Patagonia.

The whole announcement seemed tepid. Unless I'm very much mistaken the notoriously cautious Foreign Office suits and the shadowy special advisors from MOD and Number 10 wielded their red pens over Phil Hammond's script, making him sound and even look a little like John Le Mesurier's gentle Sergeant Wilson.

However there was enough in this cautious announcement for the news analysts to get their teeth into. The Argentine commentators, predictably enough, tended to say that the British had it all wrong: Argentina simply is not interested in raising the military tension around the Falklands. And anyway, they don't have the wherewithal even to take and sustain one of the outlying western islands, so there is no need for a deterrent at all.

British pundits said something similar: even with the Russian attack aircraft that Putin may lend, lease or flog to the Fuerza Aerea Argentina, Buenos Aires does not have the money, the men, the ships or the bullets to mount a return of 1982.

The analysts on both sides missed the point. We are no longer in the world of 1982. No one, not even the most hawkish Argentine officer, is considering a second invasion. However, if - as seems likely - Buenos Aires acquires Russian Sukhoi Su 24 attack jets with an operational range of some 2,750 kms, it will change the balance of power in the area. Britain will have to increase its air and naval deterrent very significantly and - crucially - very expensively. Then those suits in Whitehall might well start asking whether it is all worth it. "Should not some diplomatic feelers be extended?"

Factor-in the offshore oil industry (a second important field has just been identified) and the unspoken threat from a new air force becomes far more chilling. Rigs and platforms could become notional targets for Putin's lend-lease Su 24s. If Buenos Aires were to voice such a threat, it would be outrageous, but the rubric is already in place. It is but a short rhetorical step from stating that "Oil companies active in the Falklands will face legal charges," to "We cannot guarantee the security of such oil companies' assets in the seas around the Falklands." Such a threat would have oil companies and their insurance companies thinking very carefully about their commitment.

This is a febrile time. A new Cold War is upon us and Vladimir Putin would quite like to see a proxy conflict against Britain. So such a scenario is feasible. That is why the British Government is absolutely correct to reassess the Islands defences and to beef them up. The problem is that the conclusions, as expressed by Phil Hammond, go nowhere near far enough to address the threat and present an unequivocal message to Buenos Aires. At some point he will be required to make another statement. Let's hope that it is one that carries a good deal more punch.

99 per cent doing great job

I WOULD like to put on record my appreciation and gratitude to everyone in the Falkland Islands who has contributed to making my time, and that of my family, such a fantastic and unique experience.

The role of director of Human Resources for the largest employer in a small community inevitably has its challenges. It can be easy to form a negative view of Government based on a single example of a service failure or based on a rumour about someone's performance. We must remember that over 99 per cent of our people are doing a great job every day.

Improving the delivery of public services through people requires time, effort and investment and it has been a privilege to work as part of an HR team working alongside local people who understand this and are keen to develop and take this forward.

the public are invisible to most people and because of the size of the community they are scaled to the minimum safe level. It is inevitable that there will be gaps in service from time to time, yet I have seen our people delivering truly professional work, often above and beyond what could reasonably be expected. This sense of community spirit and community ownership is something to be prized.

I have also observed your politicians working extremely hard and they are rightly focused on the strategic long term issues that will deliver and secure your future. This is sometimes at odds with what Islanders want in the short term where this weeks' pot hole or the latest Facebook post will divert their attention for a short while - but that's politics!

We must all keep moving forward to make a difference where we can. My next challenge awaits, but the Falkland Islands are somewhere very special and somewhere I would hope to return to in the future.

Look at gender pay gap MLAs

GENDER pay gap needs examination. LAST week FIG published an excellent report entitled "State of the Falkland Islands Economy". One interesting fact, which was not mentioned in the accompanying press release, is that the average earnings for women are only 79% of the average earnings for men.

The report comments that this is "a bit surprising", pointing out that in the EU the gender pay gap in 2012 was only 16.4%. Since 77.7% of all women aged 16+ are in employment, and the Falkland Islands has had equal pay legislation for the past 20 years, it would be good to know what plans FIG has to explore and rectify this 21% gender pay gap. To quote the report: "There may be several explanations such as pay discrimination towards women, different education levels, and women and men working mostly in different industries and being attracted to different types of job which attract different salaries, each of which may be worth paying attention to."

MLAs might want to consider this issue ahead of the next election, given that amongst status holders the gender pay gap rises to 22 per cent.

Commercial and residential leases

A short guide courtesy of Alison Inglis of Pinsent Masons. The company and its predecessor firms have been providing legal services to the Falkland Islands since 1988

WHEN preparing to lease a property either as landlord or tenant be aware that a typical lease will impose rights and responsibilities on both parties. Whether it is a commercial lease for an industrial unit or a residential lease for a dwelling, it is important to understand the key elements required. Commercial leases are usually longer, more complex documents when compared to a residential lease, but both types of agreements are based on a similar framework of fundamental provisions.

Essential terms of leases will include details of the property, the amount of rent payable, when the rent is to be paid, and important dates such as the date the lease begins and the date that the lease will end.

Commercial Property

Commercial leases tend to relate to types of property used for retail or trade purposes. They often include:

- a plan of the property
- the permitted use
- provisions for rent review
- repair obligations
- insurance requirements
- controls on the tenant selling the lease ('assigning') or subletting

Commercial leases are quite often full repair and insuring leases. This means that the tenant is responsible for insuring the building (or reimbursing the landlord for insurance) and also for keeping the property well-maintained and carrying out any repairs that may be required (often excluding repairs resulting from latent defects). It is common for the parties to employ a surveyor to assess the condition of the property before agreeing the final terms. This will often determine the extent of the repair obligations and possibly also influence the initial rent payable.

It is usual practice to specify the permitted use of the property. There are often restrictions in commercial leases as to what the property may be used for. This is so that the landlord can be confident that there are no planning issues or contraventions of title conditions and that the property has all the necessary permits and licences for the tenant's intended use.

If a lease is to be for more than a couple of years, it will usually include a rent review provision. The rent may rise every year, or less frequently (a 5 yearly rent review is not uncommon). The revised rent may be calculated by reference to the Retail Price Index or by comparison with market rents for similar properties.

If the landlord allows the tenant to have the property at a lower rent (or even rent free) initially, while the tenant brings it up into a good state of repair, the benefit of this lower rent will eventually come to an end and the tenant will be expected to pay a market rent.

Residential Property

Residential leases (often called tenancy agreements) typically place more obligations on the landlord to insure, maintain and keep the property in good repair. The tenant is typically responsible for paying all outlays on the property (eg. utility bills and service charge) but is only responsible for making good any damage they or their visitors have caused.

A residential lease often contains tight controls on what the tenant can do with the property, for example laying down rules on:

- pets
- smoking of tobacco
- use and maintenance of the garden
- redecoration and putting up pictures
- number of occupiers or visitors
- carrying on business at the property

A residential lease may require a Guarantor (such as an employer, or the parent of a young adult) to accept responsibility for payment of the rent and making good any damage upon expiry of the lease. Alternatively a deposit may be sought from the tenant, which is repaid after deduction of any costs incurred by the landlord due to the tenant's breach of the lease terms.

Legislation

There is much legislation in the UK which deals with the regulation of leases and the rights of tenants. The Falkland Islands has not adopted these laws.

However, it is important to consider the Land (Non Residents) Ordinance 1999 which relates to non-residents' rights to hold an interest in land on the Falkland Islands. In broad outline, a licence will be required from the Falkland Islands Government before any interest in land (including as a tenant under a lease) can be acquired by any individuals other than resident islanders (which for this purpose includes PRP holders). Companies also require a licence unless 75 per cent of its voting shares are beneficially owned by such individuals or the company is for tax purposes regarded as being resident in the Falkland Islands by reason of its central control and management being in the Falkland Islands. There are certain exemptions from the licensing requirements, the most important of which are business leases not exceeding 1 acre in size and 12 months in duration or residential tenancies for up to 3 years.

Conclusion

Early consideration of the main terms of an intended landlord/tenant relationship is time well spent. Clear and precise drafting of the lease should minimise the possibility of disagreement between the parties.

Legal highs fears increase

THE number of people killed by legal highs in the UK could exceed heroin deaths in the next two years, say addiction experts. Drugs of these types are still occasionally making their way into the Falkland Islands and are a cause of concern.

In the UK a report calls for more to be done to combat drugs such as 'Clockwork Orange', 'Bliss' and 'Mary Jane' to prevent soaring hospital admissions and deaths.

New data from the Centre for Social Justice (CSJ) reveals legal highs were linked to 97 deaths in 2012 while hospital admissions rose by 56 per cent between 2009 and 2012.

The think-tank estimates that on current trends deaths related to legal highs could be higher than heroin by 2016; at around 400 deaths a year.

The CSJ has asked UK police to adopt a similar policy to one used in Ireland, to close so-called 'head-shops' which sell the legal highs, known as New Psychoactive Substances (NPS).

Medical student Hester Stewart died in 2009 aged just 21 after taking then-legal GBL in Brighton.

Last month, a 44-year-old died in Manchester when he suffered a heart attack minutes after smoking herbal incense called Eclipse and described as herbal ecstasy.

Drugs such as meow meow and Benzo Fury have been outlawed by the Government but other substances, such as alpha-methyltryptamine (AMT) are still legal and new drugs flood the market quicker than they can be banned.

They estimate there are about 250 legal high substances in the UK.

The report will brand the Government's prevention programme FRANK, "shamefully inadequate".

In the Falkland Islands Customs and Immigration officers have been given the authority to seize such drugs.

GOVERNMENT House was once more the setting for the annual Tourism Awards at a reception hosted by HE the Governor Colin Roberts and Mrs Roberts and organised by the Tourist Board under Managing Director Tony Mason.

At a well attended event attractive glass statuettes and certificates were presented to the ten winners.

Derek Pettersson was voted Driver of the Year, and the Waterfront Hotel, much to the delight of owner and chef Alex Olmedo, claiming 'Taste of the Falklands'.

Pebble Island Lodge managers Cat Davidson and Brad Moriarty were awarded Tour Guides of the Year and Outstanding Customer Service went once again to The Harbourview Gift Shop.

FIGAS was understandably the winner of the Public Services award and Falkland Islands Holidays claimed Agency of the Year.

Pebble Island received particular accolades this year also winning 'Camp Accommodation offering the best overall experience and Arlette Betts once again claimed 'Stanley Accommodation offering the best overall experience.'

The Managing Directors Award for Outstanding Contribution to Tourism was awarded to the MLA Mike Summers for his early work for tourism as the first Manager of the Tourist Board under FIDC.

Mr Mason said of MLA Summers that he, "negotiated the air-link services from the Falklands to South America which has directly and positively increased tourism to the Falklands."

He was also involved in privatising the booking service and disposed of all the lodges to private ownership which was, "instrumental in development and the growth of the tourism product."

Mr Mason said he has: "been a strong supporter of tourism while I have been on the Islands and has chaired the Falkland Islands Tourist Board during one of its strongest and most productive periods."

Matthew McMullen and Andi Neate were married at their East Falklands farm, Kingsford Valley, on Saturday. Surrounded by family and friends the couple took their vows in the old store building at San Carlos. Having been thoroughly well fed the guests were treated to an evening of music with the newly-weds both performing for their guests before dancing to music by Mel Lloyd and MPA band Top Cover Picture Chris Locke

Pyjama day dunkings

GLEEFUL shrieks echoed around the Infant and Junior School playground on Thursday as teachers and school council members were drenched with buckets of cold water to raise funds for charities.

£312.31 was raised as children paid £1 to wear their pyjamas to school and entered a draw for 50p to see who would have the honour of distributing the water.

The event was a hit with the school children, many of whom were reported to have been up and ready for school far earlier than usual, because of the novelty of wearing pyjamas or onesies to school.

Head teacher Karen Steen got the (approx) 280 pupils warmed up suggesting she had brought her own sufficiently large bucket for her dunking - but, there was no way her pupils were letting her off the hook that easy.

FALKLAND ISLANDS BIOSECURITY

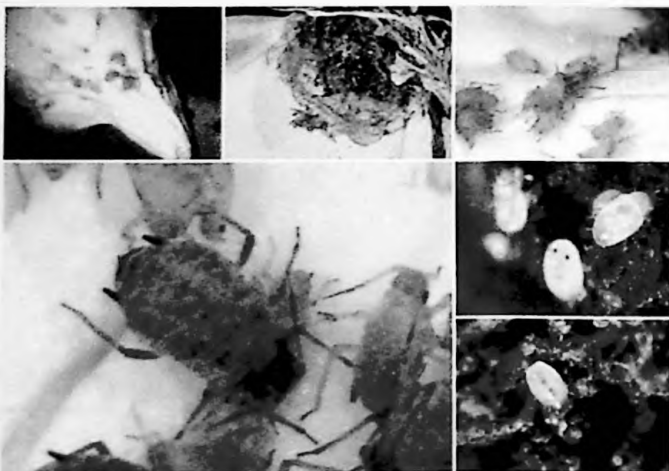

PROTECTING OUR HOME, ENVIRONMENT & ECONOMY

The Falklands are free from many of the pests and diseases which are common in other parts of the world. We have strict biosecurity procedures in place to keep it that way. The Department of Agriculture's role is to help you meet those requirements.

The DoA & Customs frequently intercept packages of plant or animal material that have been imported without following the correct procedures. They may seem harmless at first but on closer inspection are often found to carry pests or diseases.

Recently several illegal bulb imports have been confiscated and found to be infested with various pests, some of them only apparent under a microscope. If those bulbs had been planted, the gardener may have inadvertently been releasing a new pest into the Falklands.

Bulbs and most other plant materials must be imported under import permit and have relevant certification to guarantee that they are free from pests and diseases.

If you wish to import any plant material, animal products, used outdoor or agricultural equipment please check with us first and we will be happy to guide you through the process.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

WE do have some rather strange weather patterns don't we? But this year takes the biscuit. I would never have expected snow squalls on Saturday, let alone the white ground on Easter Sunday. Not much fun for the children hunting for eggs outside, assuming someone thought it fun to hide some out there in the first place, of course.

On the subject of freezing, we did get another freezer. An upright one with seven baskets, it's bliss. The fingers have been very cold in their cotton gloves, as the other freezers (chest) got emptied, cleaned and refilled. So far I haven't managed to fall in this year but it has been a close call at times. I've been able to put away a lot more produce for the winter. All the kohlrabi, turnips, beet-roots, some swede, carrots and parsnips too. The last three keep very well in the ground but can prove a bit of a problem to find and dig out in the snow, and it's not a pleasant thing to do anyway so, keeping a few bags of them in a freezer makes sense.

All the courgettes, marrows and pumpkin have also been harvested, blanched and frozen. The marrows cooked in butter and then finished off with grated cheese, the courgettes with the aid of bought aubergines (egg plant) onions, peppers and tomatoes have become rather tasty tubs full of ratatouille to use later. The pumpkin was nicely mature and weighed in at nearly 10 kilos - good eh? The girls were delighted of course.

Indoors, I have been cutting down the tomato plants to no more than three trusses and have removed quite a lot of leaves also, I continue to feed them but, getting enough sun to ripen them seems a little more difficult. There are still some runner beans, peas and Brussel sprouts growing well, though these last also need some of the bottom leaves stripping off to allow the sprouts to fill out.

Predictably, all cauliflowers and many cabbages are running head to head to the finish line, so quite a bit of cleaning, blanching and freezing (not to mention eating) is going on there as well.

Bill has been out and cut the eucalyptus hedge, but now we need a nice day for removing the trailer loads of clippings, the idea of having to take a broom to pick those up as we head for the rubbish dump does little to cheer me up and the driver would probably not be too impressed either.

It has been a bit unpleasant outside since I last wrote and so not too many more potatoes have been removed from the ground, but, I'm still hoping to catch up with that job, even as I see weeds growing elsewhere. As usual, what we can't finish this year may get done the next one. Those that have been lifted have been very good so far and I have had the opportunity to pick the seeds from them, so I do feel quite pleased with our efforts so far.

All currant, gooseberry and raspberry plants have called it a day for this year and soon it will be time to give them a trim before winter. The blackberries growing inside are still producing fruit, which will hopefully manage to ripen too. The strawberries, both inside and outside, continue to fill small mouths (which are also quite keen on small tomatoes) so everyone is enjoying the garden one way and another.

The Embotrium (Chilean fire bush) which flowered so well earlier in the season has managed to fire off some more of its flaming red flowers in this last couple of weeks, not quite as eye-catching as its earlier show, but not to be ignored either. Another plant from Chile which seems to like our conditions is the Desfontiana. I don't think it has a common name and anyone could be forgiven for assuming it was a holly, for its leaves though quite a bit smaller than most hollies are very similar and just as spiky. However, it is a totally different plant and its long trumpet flower in bright yellow and red is really very eye-catching.

Now is of course a good time to take cuttings of every shrub you need more of. Many perennials also like being moved or, if they are large clumps, being lifted and pulled or cut apart and have their outside bits replanted. The middle of the clump might well be tired out, but the outside will be fresh young growth which will quickly establish and give a good show next summer.

Any bulbs which need breaking up should also be dealt with now as they need time to establish before they give us another good show after winter when we need cheering up.

And I couldn't possibly pass up the chance to mention rose cuttings as well, now could I? I have been out there cutting off stems as they start to lose their leaves it is easier to see what you are doing. I like, where possible, to pull down a small stem or branch so it comes away with a bit of a heel (see pic 1 below). I then trim off most of the leaves (2) before popping the bottom end into water and then rooting powder. Next, in to a 5 inch pot of compost (3), water and cover with a plastic bottle top with a hole in (4).

SIX members of the Royal Artillery walked the gruelling route between San Carlos and Stanley over four days finishing at Government House on Wednesday. They, and other soldiers from the regiment who accompanied them on the final day, presented the Queen's baton to the Governor as part of celebrations leading up to the regiment's 300th anniversary next year

Trough four await trial verdict

AS the six-day Trough trial drew to a close on Wednesday, defence lawyers Simon Crowder and Andrew Teate submitted that their clients should be acquitted due to the variance of the evidence presented by witnesses.

Bono John McKay (22), Arthur Leonard Pitaluga Turner (48) and Dylan Stephenson (21) face charges of battery and assault occasioning actual bodily harm following an incident which occurred at the Trough night club in the early hours of June 29, 2014.

The fourth defendant Lauren Joyce McKay entered a guilty plea to a charge reduced from battery to using threatening words and behaviour on the first day of the trial, and will also be sentenced today.

The Senior Magistrate Clare Faulds was due to give her verdict at 9am today (Friday).

An earlier submission that there was no case to answer in respect of all three defendants had been rejected by the Senior Magistrate. Giving limited reasons for her decision she said that the medical evidence on the victim George Toolan's injuries was sufficient that something had happened and the trial would continue. Continued on page 3

Scary vehicle and speeding statistics

ALMOST 55,000 vehicles were counted on Ross Road in a period of just over three weeks with fastest recorded speeds of 75 and 81mph, confirmed PWD Roads Engineer Simon Catton, who said this was, "scary when you think how close to a junction the counter was."

Using an 'off the shelf' unit to undertake the counts PWD Highways conduct vehicle counts to help them better understand vehicle flows on various roads, to help guide policy decisions. Mr Catton explained to Penguin News yesterday.

The locations are chosen to best provide the data they require, "for instance we recently counted traffic at the bottom of Villiers Street and Ross Road so that we could do the same again when Ross Road is closed in the near future for reconstruction.

"This comparison can show us how the flows change and whether alternative traffic management arrangements would work on a more permanent basis."

The system can interpret the collected data in numerous ways, for instance they can classify vehicles by size, speed, direction and time.

Mr Catton said: "We have a programme that should allow us to use our counters for the seven summer months and we typically leave them in place for around a month. We try to revisit the same place for comparison purposes but will vary the times depending on what we want to see. For instance effect of tourism on vehicle flows."

Statistics

Between January 28 and February 19, 54,782 vehicles were recorded on Ross Road.

The Villiers Street count was 4,464 with speeds low as it was right on a junction.

Between March 2 and April 8 this year 14,317 vehicles were recorded on the MPA Road just east of the Mt Kent turn.

The maximum speed on that road was 109.4mph with an average speed of 50.3mph (the speed limit is 40mph).

85 per cent of vehicles were exceeding the posted speed limit on the MPA Road.

Approximately 50 per cent of HGVs and Artics on the same road were speeding in excess of the speed limit.

On the Bypass Road near the Chantry a massive 64,934 vehicles were counted with the maximum speed recorded as 93.4mph and the average speed 38.7mph.

Mr Catton said: "All count data, especially related to speed versus vehicle classification and times is passed to the police."

RFIP view

Chief of Police Superintendent Len McGill confirmed that the statistics and information provided by the PWD data is used by the RFIP to inform their road policing strategy.

He said yesterday: "It enables our road safety officers to target particular times of day to conduct speed checks or provide a presence with a view to deterring excessive speeding. Officers will specifically target those vehicles being driven at extremely dangerous speeds, some in excess of 100mph, which can be identified by type from the data."

Superintendent McGill said: "All drivers are reminded that the speed limit on the Stanley to Darwin Road is 40mph. Drivers will be reported for offences if they are identified exceeding this limit. Drivers are also reminded that the speed limit is a maximum and drivers should always drive within the limits of the conditions prevailing at the time of their journey."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

THE suggestion in the Executive Council paper 'Developing Older People's Services' that it must be considered, "how and to what extent people are required to contribute to the costs of care and support," didn't make me particularly nervous.

After all, paying for a good quality care service in old age is pretty standard and if for some unfortunate reason there are those who can't afford it, I don't believe our government would abandon them in their dotage. What did make me frown though was the following: "The best distribution of resources should not be assumed to be solely with respect to building and operating a new facility, but the best return to meet the service aims will be considered across the range of integrated support."

OK yes, I agree funding should must also continue to be afforded to develop services that help people remain in their homes longer, and there's also the consideration of maintenance of and services to the sheltered accommodation, but I truly hope this new (and rather jargony) point of view (and yes it is a new angle on the Old People's Home debate) doesn't turn out to mean so many additional meetings and consultations that concrete decisions in relation to the facility itself are delayed.

And if it doesn't actually delay the project, I worry it will manifest itself as a convenient reason for under-funding leading to a modest or 'bitty' facility. Perhaps some view it as logical to pop a few more bedrooms/modules on a building whenever required or afforded, but I'm not sure the residents or the surroundings will benefit from the disruption and disarray.

Can we not, just this once, get on with building something practical, substantial and attractive for people that truly deserve it. Something that won't be outgrown in a few years and in turn potentially suffer, not only aesthetically from the requirement for modifications, but practically in terms of the need for extensions to heating, electrical and water systems?

Go along to the public meeting on Monday if you want to offer your opinion on the subject.

On Tuesday night I drove to Mount Pleasant and back, the combination of bad weather and the incredibly fractured state of the road added up to a terrifying experience so I was interested in Mike Forrest's experienced analysis of the situation regarding the road (see page 5) and urge MLAs not to casually dismiss an opinion with which the majority of the electorate will strongly empathise.

Simon Catton's statistics (see front page) were equally scary, particularly the speeding taking place close to the Infant/Junior School. I wasn't surprised though at the stats relating to heavy goods vehicles on the MPA - the high velocity at which the stones fly off their wheels as they pass is evidence in itself.

Noble and Edison take over Argos licence

HOUSTON based oil company Noble Energy has acquired a 75 per cent interest and operations lead for a license in the North Falkland Basin from Argos Resources Ltd. Italy-based Edison International acquired the remaining 25 per cent interest.

The PL001 licence includes about 285,000 acres located to the northwest of the PL032 licence which includes the Sea Lion discovery.

Noble and Edison will provide to Argos a five per cent royalty override from all oil development on the licence.

Once the transaction is completed, Argos Resources will receive an estimated $2.75 million in cash, and $800,000 annually from 2016, until they begin receiving royalties.

A Noble spokesperson said it had identified the Rhea prospect as its initial target on the North Falkland Basin license. Rhea is a Cretaceous-aged stratigraphic trap* prospect with multiple reservoir targets and total estimated gross mean unrisked resources in excess of 250 million barrels of oil. Drilling is expected to commence in the autumn.

Noble's initial Falkland Islands prospect, Humpback, is now expected to commence drilling by early May. Humpback is located in the South Falkland Basin.

"The Rhea prospect diversifies our prospect inventory and upgrades our chance of overall success, without changing our total capital program for the year," said

Noble Energy's Falklands representative Richard Winkelman and Vice President of exploration and new ventures Susan Cunningham

Susan Cunningham, Noble executive vice president of exploration and new ventures, in a prepared statement.

Ms Cunningham said the move was a strong complement to the company's prospects on its acreage.

"Our Falkland Islands programme combined with our exploration well in Cameroon, give us the potential to discover substantial new resources through exploration this year," she said.

Is annual canvass for the electoral roll necessary?

CONSIDERATION of the need to carry out an electoral canvass of householders in order to maintain an accurate electoral register on an annual basis is on the list of things for the Law and Regulation Directorate (LARD) to look at. MLA Roger Edwards said this week.

Penguin News had asked if it was necessary to update the electoral role every year, given that we only have a general election every four years, or if there were any plans to reduce it to at least bi-annual as a cost and resource saving measure.

There was a requirement in the Electoral Ordinance for it to be carried out annually and whether it could be changed, MLA Edwards said he was not sure, "but Ordinance can be amended, with an amendment order," he added.

The reason for carrying it out each year was to take those no longer eligible to vote off the register as well as to add those who had become eligible to vote such as new status holders or those who had recently turned 18.

Following the recent canvass which concluded on Wednesday there were about 160 householders in Stanley who had not returned their forms and 30 from the Camp said MLA Edwards.

In addition some 40 new entries had been identified.

The Registrar was going to send out forms to remind people who had not replied and they will be removed from the electoral register, explained MLA Edwards.

However, should anyone wish to be put back on they can do so at the Registry Office in the Town Hall at any time except for a brief closed period immediately before an election.

If there is a bi-election reminders are also sent out, noted MLA Edwards.

Your Questions Answered

Q WHY is there such a huge disparity between the cost of flying from the Falklands to London and back, and the cost of flying from London to the Falklands and back? Is this discrimination by a South American business against Falkland Islanders? (Prices taken from ITT advert) Falklands - London - Falklands £1727.00 London - Falklands - London £1014.00

Kindly provided by International Tours and Travel

World-wide, commercial airlines are influenced by market demand, volume, seasons and the existence or not of any special promotions. Outside of any special promotions that may be in place, travel with all airlines originating from London to Chile is significantly cheaper than travel originating from Chile to London. The fares from Chile to the Falklands however are the same as the fares from the Falklands to Chile. To create more demand for travel outside of peak season, it is common for airlines to offer special promotions.

Lower fares to South America are common too at this time of year as Summer has concluded in the southern hemisphere. Here in the Falklands, residents have enjoyed lower promotional fares to Chile outside of peak season. Our advertisements reflect the lowest fares published at the time of going to print and because prices are constantly changing we always state that the tariffs advertised are subject to availability.

Q How many Falkland Islanders have benefitted from money raised for Seeing is Believing?

Kindly provided by Standard Chartered Bank Chief Executive Officer Stuart Horsewood Seeing is Believing is a charity established to assist in global areas with the greatest intensity of preventable and curable blindness, especially cataracts.

Through our own extensive Group network, we have supported the provision of doctors to countries and areas where they can have the greatest impact.

To answer the specific question, there has, to my knowledge, been no identified incident of such blindness in the Falkland Islands that might have benefitted from such subsidised treatment.

In the future event of any such need for treatment here, then I can most certainly be contacted direct and I will locate the appropriate persons to determine what can best be done.

Trough trial verdict awaited this morning

Mr Crowder said that when any chronology of events was put together the mistakes were more numerous than the facts that the Senior Magistrate could be sure of.

He said it was recognised that almost everyone had been drinking and mistakes could be made, but stressed that the standard of proof required still remained with the level of alcohol. "More witnesses have the defendants not doing anything than doing something," he said.

Mr McKay who is represented by Mr Teate chose not to give evidence in court as did Mr Stephenson who along with Mr Turner, is represented by Mr Crowder.

Mr Teate said his client Mr McKay had acted in self defence and only pushed the alleged victim George Toolan (22), during the first incident, but admitted punching him twice in a second incident. He denies having kicked Mr Toolan as alleged in the third incident.

Mr Teate named five of the prosecution witnesses who had verified Mr McKay had not kicked Mr Toolan. He said Mr Toolan's account was inconsistent with almost every other witness and described him as, "cocky and brash with an air of arrogance," when giving evidence.

Mr Stephenson admits the assault occasioning actual bodily harm charge on the basis he did not kick Mr Toolan but denies battery.

Mr Turner opted to give evidence in chief and maintained throughout that he had acted only to stop the fighting which was described as a 'melee' and predominantly to look after his cousin Mr McKay. He said that Mr McKay was near him during the time after the free-for-all outside the Trough and when the third incident was said to take place. He said he had pursued Mr McKay when he had made off in the direction of the third incident and that there was no fighting taking place when he arrived by Mr Toolan.

The Senior Magistrate said that she did not want to make an immediate decision and would need a full day to consider the evidence carefully.

"Whatever I decide, a lot hangs by it," she told the defendants on Wednesday afternoon.

No plans for CCTV in public areas says CoP

DURING the Trough trial over the last week one witness commented that if there was CCTV or similar surveillance in the area many of the questions being asked in the court would have been answered.

Asked by Penguin News if there were any plans for the Police to install cameras in known trouble spots such as the Trough, and whose responsibility it was to install them, Chief of Police, Superintendent Len McGill said there were no plans within The Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) to introduce CCTV cameras in public areas.

Supt McGill said the RFIP would seek to obtain any CCTV footage that may exist at locations where they were conducting an investigation.

"This has proved very useful and provided good evidence in several investigations such as in 'shoplifting' cases," he said.

Many businesses protect their property and stock by using CCTV but it is their choice as to whether they install it or not; there is no power to require businesses to install it.

Supt McGill said Police Officers, giving crime prevention advice, would recommend its use if appropriate as it could provide excellent evidence and information.

"The use of CCTV cameras covering public areas is a complex matter entailing considerable expense. Its introduction would have to be justified against the identified need for such equipment and the public intrusion that comes with it.

Do you think it would be an intrusion to have CCTV cameras in public areas? Could the benefits of speedy investigation and prosecution outweigh the expense involved with lengthy court cases? Write to Penguin News with your views

FIODA's Twelfth Night for radio

Picture by C Locke

Dick Sawle and Steve Pointing in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night

FIODA's latest production, Shakespeare's 'Twelfth Night', adapted by Paula Fowmes has its final performance tonight in the Town Hall. The play is being read and performed by the FIODA cast in front of a live audience and is to be transmitted on the radio at a future date. Mrs Fowmes, directing the production, gives a spirited performance as Viola/Cesario. David Roper matches her pace as Orsino and Keith Biles is very convincing as the unfortunate Malvolio.

There are fine performances too from Alison Inglis as Olivia and Theresa Lang as Maria who plays up to Dick Sawle's brilliant portrayal of Sir Toby Belch and Steve Pointing's hapless Sir Andrew. Mr Sawle plays the roles of Sir Toby as well as the Clown with great humour and his singing adds a great deal of charm to the production. Special mention, as it is a radio play, to the back stage crew for sound effects, Pam Lewis and Chris Locke, who add ambience and atmosphere to this fine production.

Tickets for tonight's performance are available on the door priced £3. Nancy Mundin

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

A LATE change of plan due to uncertainty of whether I could fly both ways until after I had made other commitments meant that I went to the Goose Green public meeting but not to West Falkland. This turned out to be a good decision for me, a pathetically poor sailor, as it was a bit choppy in the Sound and at least one of my colleagues suffered ill effects. En route to Goose Green we spent a useful hour or so with those managing the demining operation. There was a very useful presentation followed by a damp walk through cleared areas which perfectly illustrated the techniques and challenges described during the presentation. The predictably meticulous study of records and proven laying patterns for each area were fascinating and I think we all came away full of admiration for all involved.

The meeting at Goose Green was well attended and interesting with similar issues to many of those raised at Stanley public meetings, roads, education and FM radio for example.

This week I have meetings of FIDC and Mineral Resources Committee along with routine meetings. We have another budget meeting this week and another at the end of the month before we finalise it in May and early June. We are still battling with the budget and some different priorities. Fortunately I think there is a lot of common ground, although each member naturally has their own area of special interest and slightly different aims. Our task is to reach a consensus or as a last resort a majority vote on a number of matters and then hope we can produce a fair and reasonable budget.

The developments in oil exploration plans announced this week will make the next few months an exciting time. Clearly the British media are somewhat confused by the announcement and all the noise from Argentina. Likewise it is telling that some quote the figures on our defence put out by the Argentine propaganda machine rather than those announced by the UK Defence Minister Michael Fallon in the house of Commons a couple of weeks ago.

Hospital centenary

NEXT month will mark the formal centenary of the opening of King Edward VII Memorial Hospital.

To help ensure this historic date in the Falkland Islands community history is marked appropriately, the Hospital Centenary Planning Group has been formed.

The Group, chaired by MLA Mike Summers, is made up of KEMH staff past and present and members of the community. They are planning a week of events May 18 - 23 that will celebrate 100 years of health care delivery in the Falkland Islands.

Hospital Manager Bernadette Eivers explained: "KEMH has an important role in our community, and one we're really proud of. We think it's only appropriate that we recognise 100 years of doing what KEMH does."

The Hospital Centenary Planning Group is trying to gather information from all over the Islands to use in the commemorations. "We know that so many people will have stories and memories of KEMH over the years, and we'd like to make sure that they have a place in the events we're putting together," said Ms Eivers.

If you have any photos, stories, letters or equipment that you would like to share with the Group or loan for the duration of the Centenary events, please contact Ms Eivers on 28006 or email hospitalmanager@kemh.gov.fk

Conservation albatross rescue

YOUNG Black-Browed Albatrosses grounded around Stanley after the gale on Tuesday night were collected by members of Falklands Conservation on Wednesday morning and released in the area of Hookers Point.

This time of year young inexperienced birds become grounded as they are blown off course and disorientating lights and the obstacles of Stanley result in them landing in some strange places, said Sarah Crofts of Falklands Conservation. Once they have landed, they struggle to take off without a good run off and a decent amount of wind. Juvenile albatrosses leave their nests around mid-April and often on windy days, hence them being blown in and across land. Falklands Conservation would be grateful for any donations of big, strong cardboard boxes, which can be collected. If you come across a grounded bird call FC on 22247. During out of office hours please call Sarah on 55028, Vicky on 53809 or Esther on 55718.

Frank stands in protest

A FORMER Falkland Islands Government Internal Auditor from Carcassonne, France, is standing as an MP in the British elections to highlight the absurdity of the 15-year limit on the expatriate vote; he could be an MP, but cannot vote.

James Franklyn Jackson, 71 has paid up his deposit and found his required 10 'subscribers' from his chosen constituency - Uxbridge and South Ruislip, where London mayor Boris Johnson is also standing as an MP. The application had to be lodged by last week.

Mr Jackson, who is standing independently said: "Amazingly, although I live outside of the UK and cannot vote, nothing in law prevents me from standing as a parliamentary candidate."

It's Pink Run time again

IT is Pink Run time again. This year's event will take place on Sunday May 17 starting at 11am and is a 5 km run/walk/hop/dog walk from Stanley Leisure Centre heading west along Ross Road towards the Golf Course and back.

Organiser Sally Ellis said: "It's all in a good cause to raise funds for Cancer Research UK through the £10 entry fee and the sale of t-shirts. We will also be raising money for local charity Cancer Support and Awareness Trust through the ever popular cake stall on Saturday May 16 and a raffle on the Sunday. Please, please do make the effort to take part as I am sure we have all in some way been affected by, or know someone, struck down by this terrible indiscriminate disease."

"This is such an easy and healthy way to make a little bit of difference. Dress pink, dress fun but just make sure you enter. We would love to hear from any Camp settlements/groups taking part so we can send out medals." Contact Sally Ellis, Janet Robertson or Lucy Ellis for further info.

REFERRING to Graham Bound's summary of the Falkland Islands Strategic Defence Review a spokesperson for the Falkland Islands Government has responded saying: "we would like to clarify that the actual amount to be invested in infrastructure in the Islands over the next ten years will be £180m, not £280m (as the Government of Argentina is loudly claiming) and that the Secretary of State for Defence who made the announcement is Michael Fallon, MP."

AN Argentine ship is ordered to leave Falklands' waters after being spotted by Falkland Islands Government Air Service pilot Eddie Andersen while out flying.

While in the area of Weddell Island Eddie observes a ship at anchor in French Harbour. He takes the Beaver float plane down for a closer look and identifies it as an oil rig maintenance ship. HMS Endurance is sent to investigate and the mystery vessel proves to be Yehun from Buenos Aires. The ship had been working in the Tierra Del Fuego area and was forced to abandon seismic work due to south westerly gales and head for shelter.

Endurance orders the ship to leave as soon as weather permits. The vessel leaves later that day.

1981 is a terrible year for farming due to world economic depression and the Falklands' wool industry is showing little profit. With no significant recovery in sight several of the larger farms owned by UK companies are being sold and the FIC is initiating severe cuts and money saving measures. The crisis is being felt most directly in the Falklands in the form of redundancies. San Carlos recently made redundant its entire work force of single men and one other farm may be taking a similar step soon.

Roy Cove is being sold to Government by owners Bertrand and Felton and FIG plans to sub-divide the farm and sell the parcels to individuals.

FARMING: a bad year

the multi-million pound purchase of FIC farms by Government is being organised by Councillor Bill Luxton. LegCo must pass the ordinance permitting the deal before it can be made final and Cllr. Luxton believes the sheer weight of public opinion against the purchase could persuade some councillors to vote against.

The main points of the agreement include FIC selling Fitzroy, Goose Green, North Arm and Walker Creek. The price is £4.850 million plus up to £400,000 for stocks held on the farms (fuel, vehicles etc) and £500,000 for the Port Stephens' mortgages.

Farm employees are worried and many Islanders are against the sale saying it has all been too secretive, although Laurie Butler says: "The people will be thankful in a few years' time when wool prices are stronger and the land more valuable."

Dave Eynon says FIG should have given FIC a "kick up the butt," but Chief Executive Ronnie Sampson says it's a very fair price. He adds: "Wild allegations that the whole scheme had been invented and driven by the administration are simply not true. The concept was initiated by a councillor."

MPA Road neglect over years not short period

THE article in last weeks Penguin News regarding road works covered two points - one that the deterioration of the MPA road has occurred due to a shortage of grading crews and two that FIG is happy to wait until the end of next summer, that is, another twelve months, to see how the local labour market has reacted.

I suggest that Elected Members take a close look at the surface of the MPA road and they will see that large sections of it are devoid of any wearing course. What remains is the underlying material that by its nature is incapable of being graded. It is clear that the lack of wearing course over such a considerable length of road is attributable to neglect over recent years and not a short period as the article would lead us to believe.

Furthermore the neglect is not confined to the gravel stretches of this road. The surfaced sections are deteriorating due to a lack of attention particularly to the centre joint.

The MPA road is the main artery between the two largest centres of population in the Islands and it is a disgrace that it has been abandoned to focus available resources on other sections of the road network.

The comment that FIG is happy to wait until another summer season has elapsed is unbelievable. Rather than obsessing about local wage rates FIG should be focused on tasking the Public Works Department with costing the resources, both material and human, required to restore the MPA road to the condition it was designed to be in. This exercise should be completed now for this year's budget session so that provision can be made in next financial years estimates for the work to be done next summer. If bringing in labour resources is necessary it should be done sooner rather than later - dithering and failing to take action will only result in even greater expense later on.

For too long FIG has been happy to accumulate assets without properly considering the associated maintenance commitment. It needs to face its obligations and not use labour resource shortages as an excuse to allow a major asset such as the MPA road fall into a state of disrepair.

Health and safety at work in the Falklands

Introduction

HEALTH and safety in the workplace is clearly important to employees and employers alike. The Falkland Islands do not have any equivalent to the UK Health & Safety at Work Act 1974, and the many sets of regulations made under it. Nonetheless, every employer still owes the same duty of care to their employees under the common law in the Falkland Islands as they would in the UK. There are a number of specific common law duties which apply to all employment sectors, as follows.

The duty to take reasonable care to provide competent staff

This means either hiring staff with the necessary skills and experience to perform their role or giving them appropriate training.

The duty to provide adequate plant and equipment

Staff must be given the plant and equipment they need to perform their tasks. The employer must regularly inspect the plant and equipment, and ensure it is maintained properly.

The duty to provide a safe place of work

This includes providing a safe means of access to the place of work. The duty applies even if the place of work is on premises owned or controlled by a third party. It is therefore important that the employer ensures that employees are provided with necessary training to identify common hazards when working away from their employer's premises, and to know what to do when such hazards are encountered.

The duty to provide a safe system of working

This is a flexible concept which covers both repetitive tasks and one off operations. Systems of work should be designed to minimise the danger of the employee's own carelessness as much as possible. The employer must exercise reasonable care both to create safe systems, and to ensure such systems of work are observed by employees and others.

Businesses may find that some clients insist that all their contractors follow the client's specific health and safety guidelines.

It is worth noting that under the Crimes Ordinance corporate manslaughter will become a criminal offence in the Falkland Islands. The offence is committed when senior management recklessly ignore a grave and obvious risk to life.

Offshore Oil and Gas Legislation

Health and safety in the offshore oil and gas sector is critical. All companies working in this field should have stringent health and safety policies which every employee must comply with. The offshore health and safety legislation in the Falklands mirrors the UK's health and safety legislation applicable to activities in the North Sea.

There are a number of FI pieces of legislation dealing with offshore health and safety. The most important is the Offshore Health and Safety Order 1998 which adopts the key provisions of the UK Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 and the UK Offshore Safety Act 1992. This includes securing the:

- health, safety and welfare of people on offshore installations
- safety of offshore installations and preventing accidents on or near them
- proper construction and safe operations of pipelines and preventing damage to them
- safe dismantling, removal and disposal of offshore installations and pipelines
- protection of the public from personal injury, fire, explosions and other dangers arising from the transmission, distribution, supply or use of gas.

Maritime Health and Safety Legislation

There is legislation dealing with health and safety in the maritime industry applicable in the Falkland Islands. The Merchant Shipping (Application of Legislation) Ordinance 1992 introduces into the Falkland Islands law a number of pieces of UK legislation, which cover matters such as:

- Protective Clothing and Equipment

- Accident Reporting and Investigation
- Provision and Use of Work Equipment

The running of ports and harbours are subject to the Shipworkers' Protection Ordinance 1937 and the Shipworkers' Protection Regulations 1949 which are designed to protect workers employed in loading and unloading goods in ships or in docks. The Ordinance confers duties on the:

- person with general management and control of the dock
- owner/master/officer in charge of the ship
- owner of the plant/machinery used in the processes
- person who carries out the processes (either directly or through employees/agents)

It also places obligations on employers to provide satisfactory machinery and equipment for use by their employees.

Conclusions

Health and safety at work is generally covered by the common law in the Falkland Islands. Employers have certain duties imposed upon them to ensure that employees can work in a safe environment without risks to their health, safety or welfare. The offshore oil and gas industry and the shipping industry are more complex areas and have industry specific legislation that employers are required to follow.

In many industries companies will as a matter of contract now insist that other businesses whom they engage as contractors comply with certain minimum health and safety standards, often based on UK legislation. It is vital before entering into any new area of business that an employer properly considers relevant health and safety issues.

Making the Falklands safe

FORMER minefields in the Falklands that have been cleared by BACTEC International's deminers are, "cleared to a higher quality than the areas that are outside the fences," assured Project Manager Julius Unsing, speaking to Penguin News this week.

Members of the community are invited by Bactec to a public demonstration on April 23 between 10 and 11am that will exhibit exactly how safe the areas are. Mr Unsing said those attending will not have to enter the former minefields, "but we are more than happy for you to come and join us inside where we will take a walk through what was the minefield by way of an assurance that what was in there is no longer there."

This public demonstration will be co-hosted by the Demining Programme Office (DPO).

He added: I do value my legs very much so I would not be walking through myself if I wasn't 100 per cent sure."

Bactec International is contracted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to conduct the mine clearance on Phase 4 of the current minefield project in the Falklands. The team of 70 (including 63 Zimbabwean deminers) will shortly leave the Islands for the winter season, returning again in September.

During this most recent phase

they have predominantly worked on eleven minefields along the MPA road and completed nine of those. The tenth is in the 'battle area clearance stage' and the eleventh will, "likely be mostly finished but there are a couple of areas at the final end which means we will need to put it into suspension," said Mr Unsing.

When they return they will, "finish off the best part of the 25 areas that have been allocated during this phase of the project," he explained.

Speaking of the operation itself he said it begins with a detailed analysis of all the minefield records and information. Based on that analysis, which is known as a Non Technical Survey supported by a ground reconnaissance which confirms the information contained within it.

A site implementation plan is submitted and agreed by the DPO which gives us a start point. On that start point we use a combination of mechanical or manual access," said Mr Unsing.

The former involves the use of either a machine or machines with a flail attachment; a series of hammers connected on the ends of chains which strike the ground very hard and disrupt any mines which they may come across, "although that is not the intention," he explained.

Ricky Wells operating the Armtrac 20T

They might also use another machine (a Micro Mine Wolf) with a tiller attachment which tills the grounds with a series of chisels and achieves the same, but is used on different ground conditions.

Mr Unsing said: "Once that is done there is a manual follow up to prove that this processed ground is free from mine threat and exploit any evidence we may have found. Once a number of mines in their row or rows have been discovered, the mechanical machines are used to create safe access lanes adjacent to or between the rows to allow the deminers to manually excavate the short distance out to the mines, "which then saves us time and effort."

Once identified mines are left in place until recorded with an individual number, and then either destroyed in situ if they cannot be moved (although most of them are not in that condition). The mines are most often made safe and moved, usually to Pony's Pass Quarry where they are destroyed by burning. Those that cannot be moved will be destroyed in situ or moved the shortest distance possible to a stockpile and then destroyed by demolitions.

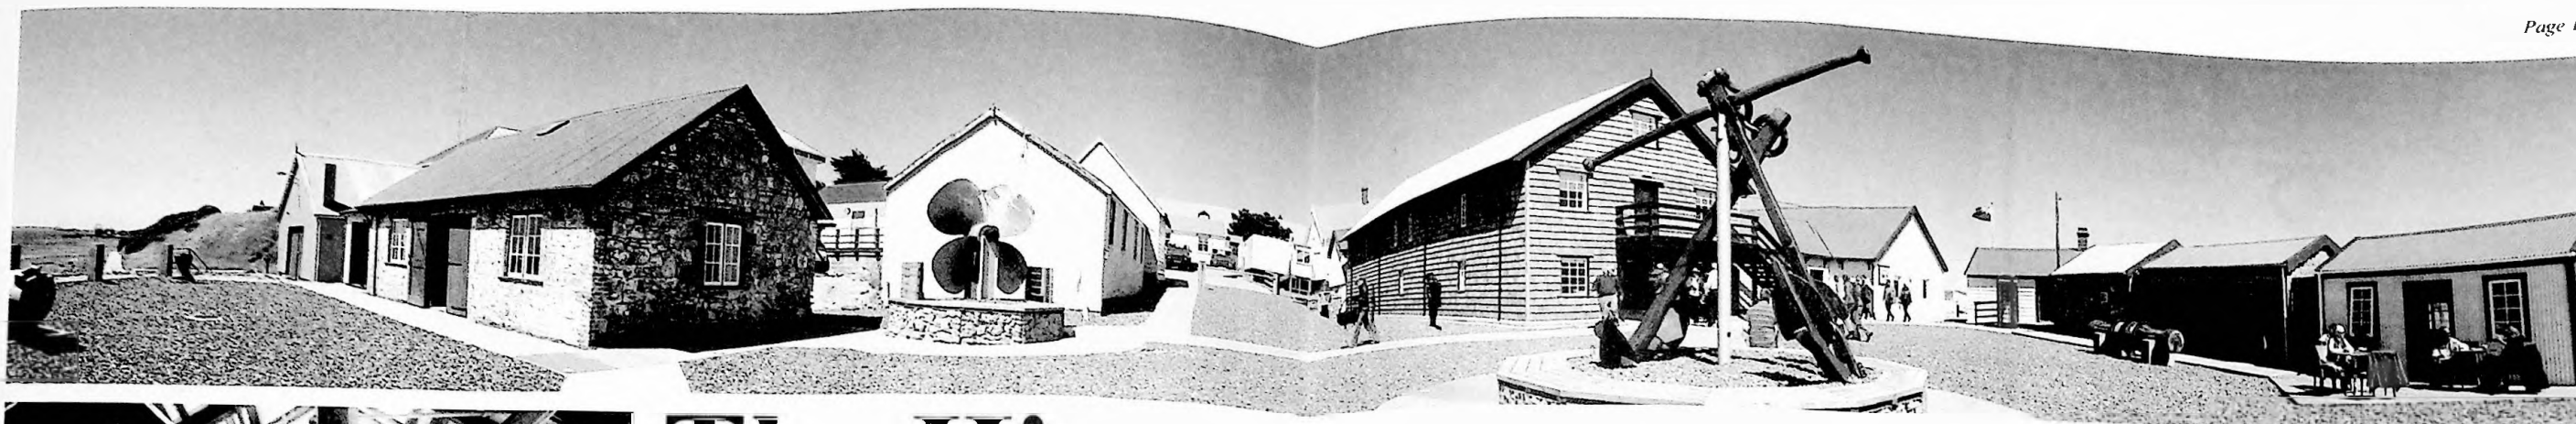

A new and valuable asset in the team's tool-box is a drone.

Mr Unsing explained: "The tool-box predominantly consists of our mechanical machines, manual excavation which is our men, and then finally a new asset which is our drone fitted with a video camera..."

This is used to overtly likely mined areas, "and the evidence we are looking for is end of row markers; or other markers such as red or yellow painted stones or piles of stones and mines themselves where they have been surface laid. This has already proved successful... we have identified a mines dump area which is an area where mines are located prior to them being laid. That area has in the region of 250 mines plus and it has saved us at least a week's work."

IN the Falkland Islands we are sometimes unfairly accused of being resistant to change, as instanced by the nearly 60 years that elapsed between the laying of a foundation stone in 1933 and the actual opening of the Stanley swimming pool. Over recent years it seemed that something similar was going to happen with the museum, though everyone agreed that it needed to move into bigger and more accessible premises, nothing much seemed to be happening. Now, however, Stanley's Historic Dockyard Museum is proof of how much can be achieved in a short time, once the green light has been given and people of energy and vision found to drive a project on.

It comes as a bit of a surprise to recall that is only just over one year ago that the old museum in Britannia House closed its doors to the public for the last time. Since then, and before the Historic Dockyard Museum could open in September, the museum staff, led by Manager Leona Roberts and a team of volunteers had a mammoth task on their hands. The Old Central Store and the newly-built Jubilee Building which adjoins it still swarmed with the many local contractors involved, under the inspired direction of Project Manager Gwen Thompson and Clerk of Works Darren Plato. While they worked against the clock to complete the premises, the museum's exhibits had to be prepared for transportation to their new home. This was no easy task despite the considerable level of support given by local businesses at every stage of the project.

The Reclus Antarctic refuge hut had to be dismantled for the fourth time in its life and reassembled exactly as before, even down to the pinups on the wall. Other large items such as the Charles Cooper windlass, naval gun barrels and the Panhard armoured car had to be moved to the new site and over 4,000 smaller exhibit items had to

"We may only have a short history compared to some parts of the world but it is filled with great stories and wonderful characters. Falkland Islanders have an identity that we can be proud of, and our aim at the Dockyard was to really celebrate that..." Leona Roberts, Manager be listed and carefully packed into 700 boxes for transportation, before being unpacked with equal care and positioned in their new home.

Along with finding a new way of displaying old exhibits there was also the challenge to use the available extra space for something new.

One result of this was Steve Mason's magnificent diorama on the first floor of the Central Store building, which will soon be topped off with an albatross in flight over the heads of visitors.

Depicting various aspects of our shore line from sandy beaches to cliff tops and the birds to be found there, and created in Steve's tiny old workshop, polystyrene rocks and all, this was a truly epic and time-consuming piece of work.

Also new, and also the result of many hours of work is the large screen audio-visual presentation which tells the story of the 1982 Argentine invasion and our subsequent liberation, as seen by those who were children at the time.

This is the cleverly edited and condensed version of many long interviews and it is hoped that a book based on these will be available for sale in the museum next year, along with a DVD.

Britannia House with its kind of 'Granny's attic' appeal had been loved by many and while more space gave an opportunity to tell more of the story of the exhibits, according to Leona Roberts there was always the danger that some of this appeal would be lost if a balance could not be struck between the old and familiar and a more modern approach. It was always Mrs Robert's hope that as well as being more accessible to tourists, the Historic Dockyard Museum in its new more central position would be seen by Stanley's residents as "their museum." Both these hopes appear to have been realised.

During the tourist season just ended it appears that more than 11,000 cruise ship passengers have visited the museum, despite some of the ships still directing them to the old location.

While this doubles the previous years' percentage of ship-carried visitors to Stanley it is still only about 28 per cent of the total and more promotional work remains to be done both locally and internationally.

More pleasing, perhaps, than the increase in tourist visitors to the museum has been the response of local residents. In the last six months some 300 people and families have taken out museum membership, at least half of them becoming life-members. Already some families have started visiting regularly and the response of all of them has been very positive.

Larissa Blake, mother of eight year-old Laura and three year-old Tessa says, "I think the museum is brilliant and the girls love it. We've been four or five times already. It's a huge asset for the Islands."

In addition to events arranged by the museum itself, like Santa's grotto and the special exhibition commemorating the battles of Coronel and the Falklands, there are signs that a growing number of residents and businesses are beginning to see the museum as a suitable venue to hire for special occasions; last weekend, for example, the museum was the backdrop for its first wedding and it has hosted a number of evening receptions.

Despite - or perhaps because of - this early success, including the nomination for an international award, there will be no time for the museum to sit back on its laurels. During the winter work will continue to develop the dockyard site, where the re-creations of the Government Printing Office, the R/T shack, the Telephone Exchange and the traditional wash house are already well under way.

Following this will come the Boat House and after that Mrs Roberts has plans to find somewhere to exhibit more military hardware from 1982 and also to display some large items, like the nose of the Phantom which used to stand outside the Mount Pleasant Terminal, the Governor's red taxi and some other vehicles which have been offered.

Some of these planned projects hang on decisions still to be made about the rest of the dockyard site and where and how the planned waterfront footpath will enter it. Others hang on less tangible things, like community spirit, individual talent and a common desire to see good things continue to happen.

Leona Roberts' particular dream is that some day the dockyard will provide a venue for public art, not in the shape of even more monuments recording death and suffering, but celebrations of other aspects of our community's remarkable progress. She thinks to have something like the shepherd and his flock statue in Punta Arenas would be good. This might seem like one dream too far, but given the drive and energy she has displayed in getting the new museum established, I would not be surprised to find her ordering a large block of stone from the quarry and buying a hammer and chisel, if no one else comes forward.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falkland and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falkland. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falkland. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falkland and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.
Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falkland, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Marine Band: 156.800... Channel 16 (Stanley area) 2.182 MHz HF In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is however unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Fault Reporting - Users are encouraged to report any faults with the system: Telephone: 28100, E-mail: inspector@police.gov.fk or fax: 28110

Famous quotes

People don't notice whether it's winter or summer when they're happy.
Anton Chekhov

Did you know...

Levels of testosterone in both men and women are at their highest in the autumn. Scientists speculate the surge may be a result of ancient mating instincts or that decreasing daylight somehow triggers it.

A "Harvest Moon" is the full moon closest to the autumn equinox. Before artificial lighting, such moonlight was essential to a farmer's successful harvest Athletic children are more likely to be born in autumn and winter months, according to a large Bristol University study. Those born in the spring were the most sluggish

Recipes for the Falklands

Slow cooked shanks in red wine

This is a great recipe to make the best of one of the less expensive cuts of meat available in the shops around town. Good in the slow cooker and even less washing up if you have a Chef 8 in 1 cooker. Alternatively place in a casserole dish and cook in the oven on a low heat. Beef shank cuts can also be used

Ingredients

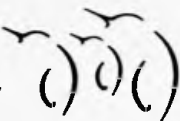

- 4-6 mutton shanks (or lamb)
- 2 large carrots, roughly chopped
- 1 onion, sliced
- 3 garlic cloves, roughly chopped
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 teaspoon dried rosemary
- 750 ml red wine (1 bottle)
- 2 cups beef stock
- 1 tablespoon soft brown sugar
- 1-2 teaspoon cornflour (cornstarch)
- olive oil, for cooking
- salt & pepper

Method

Season shanks with salt and pepper and brown on all sides in the olive oil; place into slow cooker or large casserole dish
Fry carrots, onions, garlic, bay leaves and rosemary slowly until nicely coloured.
Pour in the red wine, beef stock, and brown sugar into the frying pan and stir gently bringing it to a low boil.
Pour the wine mixture over the lamb shanks; top up with water to cover if needed.
Cook for 2 1/2 - 3 hours until very tender.
Skim the fat off the top of the red wine juices (or use kitchen towel to absorb it).
Thicken with cornflour to desired consistency and serve with mashed potato and broccoli.

Sarah Smyth races home in final aquathlon

THE third and final instalment of the Stanley Running Club Aquathlon series took place on Sunday. Illness and other absences meant a slightly reduced field but this did not extinguish any of the usual fierce competition. As this was the final race of the series, this was also the last chance athletes had to improve their standings in the overall series competition.

Hot favourite, Stuart Smith, was absent, so a new name at the head of the leader board was guaranteed. This came in the form of MPC athlete, Sarah Smyth, who raced home with an excellent overall time of 19.34, taking first overall winner on the day and first senior female. Second overall, and first junior male was Dean Ellis, showing his multi-sport potential with a time of 21.08. Olivia Drew put in her best performance yet in the series finishing eighth overall, and first junior female, in a time of 22.13.

In the overall series competition, Stuart Smith and Susanna Karlson retain their leads to take first senior male and female. In the junior competition, both Dean Ellis and Olivia Drew (both competing in all three races) were deserved winners for their consistently good performances.

All competitors should be proud of the effort and performances they have put in over the three races. Results have shown some impressive improvements in time, as competitors have become fitter and more confident in the concept of the multisport discipline.

Stanley Running Club would like to thank all the competitors and their supporters for coming and supporting the events. Thanks must also go to the volunteers from Stanley Running Club and Stanley Leisure Centre for their help in running the events. Finally, thanks to the businesses of Stanley for supplying prizes for the series. These include Shorty's Diner, The Chandlery, Sure and Stanley Leisure Centre.

Evie & Jim (Elliott) would like to thank everyone for cards, gifts, messages and telephone calls on their 50th Wedding Anniversary. Sad not to have the celebration at home in Stanley as usual but did have a brilliant day in Ticklehill with some 26 friends (two bridesmaids and best man), everyone with a Falkland Island connection, plenty of laughter and jokes and memories and good food.

Unhappy tale of the MPA Road

MLA Gavin Short apologised for the state of the MPA Road at Legislative Assembly yesterday saying it was, "not a very happy story."

But he said by Friday (today) all the grader crews should be ready for action, however progress was going to be very much dictated by weather he warned.

"I think we are going to be in for a long wet winter and that is going to make it difficult for crews to keep the road in the condition it has been in drier winters," said MLA Short.

Commenting on his recent trip to West Falkland he said he had viewed ongoing road works which was making good progress and the Roads Engineer has also visited and made recommendations that would be acted upon.

He was not quite so happy though with the situation at the Port Howard jetty/ferry terminal.

"We're still getting sink holes appearing in the end sections which will be happening for a very long time, but more worrying is the reports that bollard-type lighting is not up to the job," said MLA Short.

"I have real worries about both the lighting and the sink holes as it is to me a very clear health and safety issue."

He said it was hoped a full report would be delivered to the next Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) meeting.

MLA Short said a committee member was still required to serve the Stanley area on the TAC and invited anyone who had an interest in transport to "pop their hat into the ring."

Islands need proactive immigration policies

"WE are by nature a country of immigrants," Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers reminded other Members yesterday when presenting a Bill urging proactive immigration policies.

The Bill which was supported by the House noted: "This House urges the Immigration Review Group to present policy options aimed at increasing the permanent resident population and adopting immigration policies and encourage controlled growth."

MLA Summers said he had a feeling over the last couple of years, "we have become a bit lack lustre in our approach to immigration."

"We seem to have adopted a much more controlling rather than encouraging attitude towards immigration," and urged, "everyone to have a think about whether that is the right way to go and whether we should not be more proactive..."

He said it was important that the best was done to encourage those members of the community employed on contract terms to stay in the Islands. The transient nature of such a large sector of the population was not the best thing for developing a nation he suggested. The Falklands could just about continue to manage with a population of 3,000 said MLA Summers but he asked: "With a larger population would we do better economically, would we create more economic activity?"

He said it was important to encourage contractors to stay

by making opportunities clear to them. Controls on those immigrating to the Islands should not be any less but they should be, "appropriate and properly applied in the right manner and be proportionate to what it is we are trying to achieve."

He outlined the practical issues and cost implications of having people, "coming and going all the time," and referred to the, "huge" amount of money spent on re-recruiting. He noted Government was working on immigration issues that would increase the length of work permits.

He said the purpose of the Bill was to stimulate discussion amongst the population and Members, about what was wanted for the longer term in terms of size and permanency of population.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

WELL if Daniel Filmus thought anyone was going to lose any sleep over his visit to London last week, and the earlier issuing of law suits against both British and international oil companies, he must have been disappointed.

To sum it up, it is just a desperate country trying to gain some political capital – or in more basic terms, clutching at straws.

It seems to have caused no more reaction among the oil companies or their investors judging by the steady share prices, than a message of, "keep calm and keep drilling, we only deal with the Falkland Islands Government."

In other far more important news you will be shocked to learn that March was in fact a very average month with regard to temperature and rain fall. Who would have believed it? It didn't seem like it from where I was sitting and I have to say I lost quite a lot of sleep fretting over the lack of summer in general.

Meanwhile in Legislative Assembly yesterday MLA Mike Summers hit us with the revelation that the immigration system needed sorting out – well shut the front door, as the young people say – I didn't see that one coming (pardon the sarcasm).

Unusually I have of late, found myself reassuring people who have concerns about rapid and possibly detrimental change in the Islands with the possibility of oil extraction looming.

By the time I remind them that the immigration system has been under review for at least 12 years, the Road Traffic Ordinance for a similar length of time, not to mention 20 years from laying the foundation stone for the swimming pool until anyone got their feet wet and the fact we are still rattling around on an unsurfaced road which links the entire Islands and the town with the main port some 36 years after construction began, they have calmed down.

I think the moral to the story is that while we are not adverse to change we certainly don't do it quickly, so there's nothing to lose sleep over there either.

IT would seem the boss managed to pretty much create her own Tourism Awards this year with a re-jig at Pebble and the Volunteer's award for best visitor experience slipping off the radar completely. Further and final apologies and well done to all who work so hard throughout the season to ensure visitors to the Islands leave with the best possible impression.

Argentina files case and Filmus in London

ARGENTINA claims to be suing British companies Rockhopper Exploration, Premier Oil and Falkland Oil and Gas, along with American company Noble Energy and Edison International SpA from Italy because of oil drilling activities in Falklands waters.

The criminal case was filed in Rio Grande, Tierra del Fuego province which according to the Argentine constitution includes the Falklands and Antarctica.

However Juan Javier Negri, an Argentine lawyer specialising in commercial international law, said the government would have "serious difficulties" carrying out any sentence because it was unlikely international bodies would implement it.

This does not seem to have caused any concern within the Oil companies with a statement from Houston by US Premier Oil calmly stating: "Our concession contracts are with the Falkland Islands Government."

When Argentine officials announced their plans last week in London, UK Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond sharply criticised the move.

"It's an outrageous piece of bullying and threatening against the Falkland Islanders' perfect right to develop their economic resources, and Argentina needs to stop this kind of behaviour and start acting like a responsible member of the international community," Mr Hammond said in an interview with Sky News.

Argentine politician Daniel Filmus gave his speech at Canning House, UK's main forum of debate and discussion on Latin America, before an audience of more than 150 people including UK government officials, Ambassadors from Latin America and the Caribbean, Defence attaches from a dozen countries, other members of the diplomatic corps, academics, students and political activists.

A number of Islanders were in attendance along with MLA Barry Elsbey.

MLA Barry Elsbey said Mr Filmus had spoken for some 55 minutes without break from a prepared speech. There was no room for debate at all, he added.

He covered the "usual things," said MLA Elsbey, adding that Mr Filmus had specifically said that the Argentine government had never done anything that could possibly harm the Falklands economy and that he wanted the dispute settled and discussion should take place between Britain and Argentina.

The question and answer session was quite brief, said MLA Elsbey, but he did get the opportunity to state very clearly that Falkland Islanders had the right to self determination, to determine their future and to exploit their natural resources as chosen.

MLA Elsbey said he had also managed to point out how Argentina had affected the Falklands economy. "He seemed embarrassed to be questioned on that in what is a prestigious organisation," said MLA Elsbey.

With regard to his wish to "settle the dispute," MLA Elsbey said he reminded Mr Filmus that the dispute was not between Argentina and Britain, but between Argentina and the Falkland Islands. He said he made a formal invitation for Mr Filmus to visit the Falklands, "to see the modern Falklands for himself," in the same way as the C24 committee of the United Nations have been invited. The C24 refuse to visit however Mr Filmus said an odd thing said MLA Elsbey. "I would willingly come if I did not have to have my passport stamped," he told MLA Elsbey.

"I think he was caught unawares by the opportunity of a visit and I know that the Argentine government have been putting out a lot of news items since to say he will only come to the Falklands when Argentina has sovereignty."

There was a need to keep reminding the world of the issues, said MLA Elsbey.

No request from Argentina to FIG

MEMBER of Legislative Assembly Ian Hansen said this week that the Falkland Islands Government had not received a formal request from the Government of Argentina nor the ICRC to exhume and identify Argentine soldiers at Darwin.

The Argentine cemetery at Darwin has 237 graves, of which 123 remain unidentified.

On Monday Buenos Aires daily La Nación reported that London had not replied to a request sent by Argentina five months ago to allow Red Cross and Argentine forensic experts to carry out DNA testing on soldiers buried in the Falklands.

MLA Hansen said: "The Assembly understands that the identification of soldiers interred at Darwin Cemetery is a sensitive issue, and that families of those soldiers still seek answers to the fate of their loved ones."

"We are aware that the UK Government has been approached by the Red Cross but the Falkland Islands Government has not received a formal request from the Government of Argentina nor the ICRC to exhume and identify Argentine soldiers at Darwin."

Staggered at classroom costs

THE costs of the temporary Infant Junior School class rooms within the Stanley House grounds had become "staggering," said Member of Legislative Assembly Michael Poole on Wednesday.

At the Standing Finance Committee it was noted that the additional £70,000 requested would have to be approved. "But we have to go to the PWD and find out what is going on," he added.

Referring to the revised total of £446,989 for the project, MLA Mike Summers said it was a "phenomenal amount to pay for a timber framed building," while MLA Roger Edwards suggested it would be cheaper to build a house to use as a school.

MLA Summers noted that many houses are costed at £750 per square metre while by comparison even if the temporary class rooms were 200 square metres which he very much doubted, they would still be costing in excess of £2,000 per square metre. He added that as the partnering review with Morrison (Falklands) Ltd was worked through there was a need to ask why costs were so high per square metre.

Fishing boosts FIG coffers

FISHING has boosted Government coffers again this year with more than £6 million above that budgeted. Director of Natural Resources John Barton said that it was not anticipated that any refunds in licence fees would be made. Additional transshipping fees as well as higher dock rental fees as a result of activities within the hydrocarbons industry had also contributed to the positive variance.

Human Resources is one of only three government departments where expenditure was adverse by £41,000 to plan in the first nine months of the year and ironically is attributed to an increased requirement for casual staffing within the department.

The Public Works department also had a negative variance of £135,000 which was attributed to slower private electricity sales than anticipated as well as the delay in the wash plant at the quarry becoming operational. However now the temporary dock and the 'Snoozebox' are up and running it was anticipated that unit sales would increase however the recent reduction in unit price meant that the it would be unlikely that the full budget would be met.

Central Services is also £112,000 down which has been attributed to several factors including the fact there had not been any large fines received from the Courts this year, however reduced revenue from the Leisure Centre was also afforded some of the blame

SENIOR Magistrate Clare Faulds last Friday found Bono McKay, Dylan Stephenson and Arthur Turner guilty of the joint enterprise offence of assault occasioning actual bodily harm to George Toolan on June 29.

Mr McKay who had admitted one count of battery but denied the other was also found guilty on the second count.

Mr Stephenson's admission to the one charge of battery on the grounds that he had not kicked Mr Toolan, was accepted by Mrs Faulds.

Mr Turner was found not guilty of battery.

Lauren McKay pleaded guilty to using threatening words and behaviour towards Mr Toolan.

The charges relate to an incident which was sparked by a Facebook comment about Mr McKay's sister by Mr Toolan in March and come to a head when he and Mr McKay met up at the Trough. Mr Toolan had suffered injuries consistent with being beaten and kicked, according to a medical report.

Mrs Faulds said that having looked at the evidence including Mr McKay's police statement in which he said he had confronted Mr Toolan and was nursing a grudge, she was satisfied he had went out as an aggressor on the night in question. She said she was not satisfied there was evidence that Mr Toolan had acted in an aggressive manner and rejected Mr McKay's defence of self defence, adding that he had, "punched with excessive force." She accepted that there was no evidence that he had kicked Mr Toolan.

Mrs Faulds said however that she was satisfied that a joint enterprise had developed and that Mr Stephenson had "waded in," because Mr McKay was fighting. At this stage she said she was satisfied that Mr Turner had not been part of the joint enterprise.

However as the incident escalated from the Trough car park to a gravel area adjacent to the old Sea Cadet hut, she said she was satisfied that all three were at the scene and Mr Turner had chosen to become involved. "It became a joint enterprise to remove George Toolan by force, scare him off and to settle the score," said Mrs Faulds adding, "You were all involved and sticking together."

Mrs Faulds in requesting pre-sentence reports on all four defendants said she had not ruled out a prison sentence, although she pointed out that this was not a consideration for Miss McKay. All four were bailed to reappear in court on May 15.

Social referrals on the up

THERE has been a massive increase in referrals to Social Services (by 150 per cent) since the launch of the public awareness campaign in relation to abuse and sexual abuse of children, explained Social Services Team Leader Nikki Murphy at the public meeting on Monday evening. She described them as, "very genuine," referrals.

Ms Murphy noted that two members of the children's charity the Lucy Faithfull Foundation which undertook the original review of child safety in the Islands had, "just left," and although their report was not yet written there was early indications it was a very positive review.

Ms Murphy gave an overview of Social Services and developments within the department at the meeting which also included presentations from Director of Health and Social Services Ian Bainbridge and Chief Medical Officer Dr Rebecca Edwards.

Mr Bainbridge examined seven development areas at the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital including preventative primary care, mental health services, improving and updating the hospital and clinics for long term health conditions.

Mr Bainbridge then gave a presentation on the subject of older people's services that he outlined as, "how we think a process can take us through to actually having a real set of services."

He said this would include looking at the best services that had been developed elsewhere, and the ageing characteristics and demographics of, "our community here in the Falklands."

He said various options would need to be evaluated, "to get to our preferred model for the Falklands," adding, "we have to have good value for money," and "best possible outcomes and not just do things because we think it's a good idea."

He said decisions would be based on public engagement, external experts recommendations and a reference group.

Dr Edwards spoke of primary care and noted there had been a "gap" in that service.

She said it was also important to develop disease prevention.

With regard to primary care she said they were currently working out of small rooms but hoped for more comfortable working environments in the future.

She also described improvements in relation to the visiting specialist programme saying that the more "robust" the programme the less need there was for patients to go overseas.

Double trouble traffic offence

ROBERT Ziggy George (22) and Sara Jane Newcomb (31) were fined in the Summary Court on Monday after they admitted road traffic offences on the MPA Road.

Mr George and Miss Newcomb were recorded travelling at 50 mph in the 40 mph zone on March 22 at 6.05pm. Mr George was driving Miss Newcomb's vehicle and she was passenger.

Defence lawyer Andrew Teate said Mr George had valid insurance for his own vehicle which included Miss Newcomb as an additional driver and had assumed this was reciprocal. When it was established this was not the case, he had obtained valid insurance. It was an oversight, said Mr Teate.

Miss Newcomb told the court that it was a genuine mistake as she had been confident Mr George was covered by her insurance, but it had become apparent that as he is under 25 it does not apply.

Mr George was fined £120 for speeding and £200 for not having insurance. Miss Newcomb was fined £200 for permitting Mr George to drive; both had their licenses endorsed and were ordered to pay £85 each towards prosecution costs.

Driver denies failing to stop

STANLEY man Scott David John Henry Roberts (26) denied charges that he had failed to stop and report an accident which occurred on February 5.

Mr Roberts pleaded guilty to a further charge of failing to apply for registration of a vehicle.

The case was adjourned until May 5, by Justices of the Peace Keith Biles and Dick Sawle for the prosecution to serve evidence and for Mr Scott to decide if he wanted to obtain legal representation.

Mobile fine

STANLEY woman Veronica Joyce Sinclair (39) was fined £120 for using her mobile phone while driving. The offence took place on March 13 on the Dean Street and Endurance Avenue junction when Ms Sinclair was observed by a police officer talking on her phone while she negotiated the corner.

Her licence was endorsed and she was ordered to pay £85 prosecution costs.

Death announcement

IN 1978 during Jo Kingston's time as Senior Medical Officer in the Falklands, amongst many other adventures, she carried a 'blue' baby to South America in low-level flight, saving the baby's life. Jo died peacefully at home in Dorchester on April 12, having carried the Falklands and "her" baby always in her heart.

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

THE total disregard for reality and truth demonstrated in London last week by the Argentine propaganda man Filmus shouldn't surprise anyone, given his track record. It is as if the government that employs him believe that bluster and threats will intimidate us and those who wish to operate here. It is a sad state of affairs when a country of that size and potential has no greater ambition in the twenty first century than to colonise a small neighbour. Our best answer is to carry on life as usual.

THE public meeting on Monday gave the attendees an opportunity to see the range of work undertaken by the Social Services department. Unlike other departments they can rarely advertise their successes because of confidentiality. What they did reveal is that referral numbers are up and that seems to be at least in part because of the recent poster campaign aimed at raising awareness of child abuse. This is at once reassuring in that it indicates that the campaign has had an effect but also worrying in that it will increase pressures on already busy services. It was also pleasing to hear that more work is to be undertaken to deal with domestic abuse, a subject which some find so uncomfortable that they are clearly in complete denial.

The discussion on care of the elderly and/or vulnerable was useful. Of course there are huge advantages in enabling people to stay supported in their own familiar surroundings by fairly simple structural adaptations and alterations. For many there will be a time when that is no longer sufficient and I am sure we should be planning a more suitable facility for those needing more high dependency care. The main questions in my mind are where and when will we build it. I have seen attractive and well managed care homes which ensure a decent quality of life and also promote the level of independence which most of us probably hope for.

THE sun shone on the very well attended Queen's birthday parade where we enjoyed a band, a fly past and some splendid uniforms.

Credit Union project closes down

LAST week the Falkland Islands Development Board made the difficult decision to close down the FIDC Credit Union project.

This was not done lightly, as there is no doubt that there is widespread public support for such an institution, however the barriers were too significant to overcome.

The original purpose of the project was to explore an alternative solution to resolve access to finance problems that had been raised by businesses in recent years. During the lifetime of the project it was always a concern that a potential Falkland Islands credit union would not be financially viable, mainly due to the population size of the Falkland Islands.

To address this concern, FIDC worked with the World Council of Credit Unions (WOCCU) and three appointed Community Leaders to develop a business plan for a Falkland Islands Credit Union.

The Community Leaders represented FIG, the Chamber of Commerce and the Rural Business Association and were important in pushing the project forward by providing experience and knowledge.

The business plan looked at all of the key aspects of a potential credit union. This involved areas ranging from governance, staff, management, fees and services, and most importantly, finances.

The business plan also aimed to address all of the 10 'Key Considerations' raised by the WOCCU consultant in his initial report released in August 2013. During the business planning process, three key areas of concern were highlighted and ultimately were the reason why the project was closed down.

Firstly and most importantly, the projected finances strongly suggested that a Falklands credit union would not be viable. In the most conservative scenario it was estimated that the credit union would make a £750k loss in the first five years of operating.

Secondly, it became increasingly clear that the establishment and on-going support of a credit union would require significant input from FIG.

This included initial capital funding, deposit insurance which could not be sourced privately, regulation updates for banking and cooperative legislation, additional external audit contracts, employment of an experienced official to regulate the credit union and on-going operational technology funding, all of which would be a large, costly and risky undertaking.

Thirdly, there are plans for positive developments in the Falklands that could improve access to finance elsewhere. At the moment, FIDC is currently reviewing its loan strategy and FIG, in partnership with FIDC, is investigating a local investment strategy. Both could potentially improve access to finance for Falkland Island businesses, without the need for and cost of establishing a new financial institution such as a credit union.

In light of the factors regarding the financial viability of a Falklands credit union and the significant support required from FIG, there are significant doubts that the credit union model is a viable solution to resolve access to finance issues in the Falkland Islands.

These factors were recognised in the Falkland Islands Development Board's decision, which was supported by the Community Leaders and WOCCU Consultants.

Training praise and concerns

LEARNERS using the FIG Training Centre, feel supported, are positive about their learning path, and, "the NVQ programmes being delivered were running successfully," according to a visiting City and Guilds representative on an external quality assurance visit of the centre.

Training Centre staff were praised for their commitment to students and to the programmes on offer, but health and safety concerns were identified in the workshop, making it unsuitable for use by learners.

The Manager is working to address the concerns in order to reopen the workshop. Only one programme is impacted by this closure and all learners have alternative provision in place.

The external quality assessor was also concerned with the delivery of programme 6219 'Entry Level Construction' and a course sanction has been placed on the programme qualification until recommendations have been addressed satisfactorily.

The external quality assessor praised the standard and quality of practical work learners produced on this course. When the sanction is lifted, learners will receive their formal certificates for units of work completed.

In addition to the external quality assurance visit, a carpentry assessor from Cardiff & Vale College also visited the Training Centre.

A trip down memory lane

DEALING with health care in the Falklands is a vital issue following the tragic King Edward VII Memorial Hospital fire in April. Most of the hospital was destroyed and eight people died and two seriously injured.

A military field hospital which had been stored for use in case of a renewed conflict with Argentina is rushed into service in the Town Hall's dance hall while firemen still fought the blaze.

It struck me that the Centenary of Victory Green in four years time could be used as the end date for the revitalisation of this green space into something more meaningful than a well tended grassy seafront alongside the harbour.

I suggest that a community wide competition to look at the area from Whalebone Arch, Victory Green and the area below the Town Hall carpark, through to the Dockyard as a complete landscape design project.

Anyone can enter with suggestions, sketches or artwork. From these submissions, one conceptual idea will be chosen to be further developed into a full landscape design brief.

The brief to be farmed out to the many experienced gardeners for the practical work making new flower gardens, building shelters, seats, walls, picnic areas or new pathways.

Local business's could take part vying to produce the most colourful displays, with rotation of plants throughout the season.

We may not have funds to pay for the 101 gun salute after 100 years, but I would hope that some form of community based development could be seen to have taken place.

Climbing and hiding in the tussac is a must Pictures Sally Poncet

Year 2 take a trip to Kidney Island

A GROUP of eight Year 2 students (7 year-olds) enjoyed a trip to Kidney Island last week which included a seal escort from the launch to the shore and a quick beach clean.

The trip is organised on an annual basis by the Infant and Junior School and funded from the Environmental Studies Budget via the Environmental Planning Department.

Sally Poncet who along with Ken Passfield regularly acts as guides on these trips said that it was part of the curriculum to study the Falklands environment.

She said the dolphin and sea lion escort from the Sullivan Shipping launch in the dinghy caused much excitement initially and the children were soon climbing through the tussac and sliding in the peat.

Sooty shearwater burrows were inspected, Cobbs Wren spotted, any dead birds were carefully identified and all manner of creatures were found on the beach.

Mrs Poncet said the annual visit which is in its fourth year ended up with a quick beach clean

Falkland Families Association final service in memory

FI Representative Sukey Cameron MBE lay a floral tribute from the Falklands people and government

THE final annual service and reunion of the Falkland Families Association took place on April 20, at the Guards Chapel at Wellington Barracks, in London. The service was very well attended and included veterans of the Falklands War alongside the families of those who died. The Association was formed on the return journey of the first Falklands pilgrimage in 1983. The decision was reluctantly made to wind it up said Ms Cameron but in the knowledge that the links would continue through the Falkland Islands Memorial Chapel at Pangbourne, and through SAMA 82.

Out West with Crafty Travellers

THE 'Crafty Old Travellers' travelled to the West Falklands for the fourth year running at the beginning of April.

Former travelling teachers Wendy Reynolds, Myra Pitt and Heather Norman pack their vehicle with craft materials and head West each year with the intention of "giving something back," to the community in which they taught at various times over the past 25 years.

"We always look forward to the dolphins meeting the ferry as we enter Port Howard. It starts the week with a very happy feeling which continues right through," said Ms Norman.

While residing at the Port Howard self-catering they set up the dining room and lounge with sewing machines, iron and board, pyrography tools, calligraphy pens, hand weaving looms, needle felting equipment, buttons, beads, charms and ribbons.

This year the Port Howard women were on duty during the day tarring the shearing shed roof so after a good clean up they came over for an evening workshop.

Ms Norman said, "Crystal, Paula, Katie and Carey all went home with two or three items that they had made for family, friends or themselves. The evening session seemed to be a good innovation for this location so we will include it next year. The programme keeps evolving to suit people, which is just what was envisaged. The main idea is to get crafts and different ideas to people that they might like to carry on through the winter months."

West residents get into the crafty spirit

At Fox Bay electric sewing machines were used for the first time by two residents, with pyrography and the use of looms to make small wall hangers were also popular. "It is a good opportunity to visit some of the residents from my teaching days in Fox Bay too," said Ms Pitt.

Hill Cove was the final stop and another aim was achieved which involved getting some of the men involved along with the women.

There is a donation box for Team Tranquil at each workshop and this year £70 will be handed over.

The Crafty Old Travellers thank all those who participated or helped out in any way. Thanks especially to Deirdre and Gavin at Fox Bay and Susan and Turtle at Hill Cove for accommodation and hospitality.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

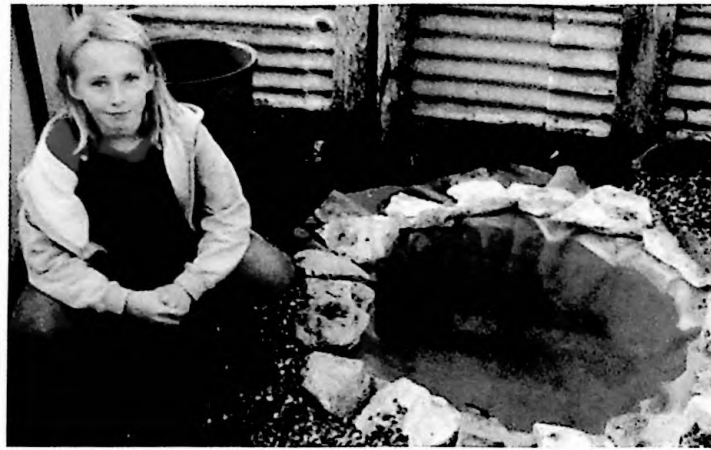

OK so it's true, I am a good weather gardener. With Saturday (the 11th) and last Friday being beautiful days I was out there and having the time of my life and totally forgetting the miserable days in between.

Bill was also out there giving the lawns yet another 'last mow' of the year; it's good to clean up the lawns by raking and clearing off any dead grass or leaves which will just cause the grass to rot later otherwise.

It has been a rather lengthy and messy job clearing the tunnels of all runner beans and peas. These are going into the compost bins (minus the pods, don't want them growing in there). The sweet corn has given its last crop too so those plants have been removed and put in the trailer. The Brussel sprouts have had more bottom leaves removed to allow the sprouts to fill out, and make it a little harder for pests and slugs to get too close to them, and the tomatoes have had a lot of their leaves removed to allow light to the tomatoes. The indoor strawberries are still fruiting but slowing down. A lot of runners now sit in little pots getting ready to root.

I would like to say that the tunnels were left looking quite bare but it would not be true, there are still areas of plants in there but even more areas full of pots. These are full of seedlings and cuttings which I think need a little warmth and shelter, such as roses and others of the more delicate shrubs.

Meanwhile, still talking cuttings (but of those hardier plants able to root outside in a sheltered spot) the more robust trees and shrubs, such as the willows, poplars and elderberries, are in trenches about eight inches deep with a layer of sharp sand in the bottom. These cuttings are each placed about three inches apart in the trenches and will root quite happily by this method outside, over winter, after which they can be potted on ready to grow on a bit before planting out in their final positions.

Digging out the potatoes can prove to be a very disappointing undertaking or, quite a satisfying one. For us this year it has been the latter, so far every root is yielding a very good crop. I hope that continues to be true until I get to the end. Weather permitting. I cannot see any fun in digging in the rain.

The grandchildren have, no question, become interested in gardening and seem a little sad (as am I) that the growing season is nearing the end. Samantha decided she wanted a pond near her green house and with a little help from Grandpa (who helped with the gravel moving) managed it in one afternoon; it looks wonderful. The area she had planted with potatoes just around the greenhouse proved to be very worthwhile too. Her younger sisters need the occasional gentle reminders to water their plants but are otherwise doing very well. And they are wonderful when I am digging potatoes, they all but bury themselves looking for any I might have missed. I hate to think just how much mud is going down our plug hole.

The earwigs are back with a vengeance, and not just outside. I've come across three of them in the house, needless to say they were hastily trodden on, horrible creatures. I guess their breeding was aided by our cool summer. They are normally at their thickest in May and November - yuk.

While cleaning up flower borders I was able to put out some more plants which I just never seemed to have the time to do over the past few weeks, or, if I did, the weather was too unpleasant to bother doing so.

I had been very lucky with my lavender seeds this year, not only did they all germinate, they survived all the neglect as well, so I felt they deserved to be planted out somewhere suitable. The area in which the tender fuchsias have done so well is a raised bed, perfect for ensuring the lavenders did not suffer from wet feet. That same bed has been filled over the last couple of years with herbs which also like those conditions. The rosemary is well away as is the fennel, sage, thyme and many others (though I'm not certain about the marjoram, it looks a bit sick). Some lavenders also made their way into some planters by the front door. They have such a lovely fresh smell.

I must remember to lift some parsley, mint and others and put them into ice cube trays as well.

Another job I need to get done within the next few days is breaking up the rhubarb plants in the garden. They are now large roots and quite congested, but with a large garden fork it should be reasonably quick to lift each root and break it up. This is normally easy and in some cases it even falls apart anyway.

I shall then plant each new piece of root into ground which has been very well fed, either with rotted manure or bone meal and Growmore but will save a piece for early forcing.

Kimberley and James have something old something new KIMBERLEY Steen and James Greenland made history on April 11 when they married in the Old Smithy at the Historic Dockyard Museum in Stanley. This is the first wedding to be held in the museum and, as far as is known, the first in the Old Smithy which was built in 1843.

Kimberley, looking beautiful in her delicate gown of blush pink ruched tulle with seed-pearl and diamante at the bodice and hip line, set the theme. James was resplendent in his French navy suit wearing a pink tie and rose boutonhole.

Sarah Shepherd and Stephen Floyd, longtime friends of Kimberley and James stood as witnesses to their marriage.

The weather was perfect, warm sunlight filtering into the Smithy through the old Georgian windows, with strings of fairy lights highlighting the old forge, anvil and implements from long ago.

In this atmosphere reminiscent of Gretna Green Dr Paul Brickle, the bride's brother-in-law, joined them in matrimony before their family and friends.

The family says, "A huge thank you to all family and friends who did so much to make this a day to remember, especially to Liz, James' mum, and to Alison and Sophie his sisters for making that long flight from the UK to be with us, thank you, it was the icing on the cake."

The couple were overwhelmed by the kindness they received and thank everyone for their wonderful gifts; but especially, "the gift of having you all share our perfect day."

82 veteran Andy receives a hero's welcome from Falklands children

A REAL hero in the hearts of Camp Education children is 1982 veteran Andy Trish who last week visited the settlement schools with interactive televisions for each.

A successful businessman who supplies schools with IT equipment, Mr Trish who served on HMS Hermes said if even one of the children remembered his contribution as an important part in their education he would be happy.

He has strong links with the Belling Trust (they used to make the Belling cookers) who donate IT equipment to schools across the UK.

Deputy Head Teacher at the Infant and Junior School Rebecca Robinson said Mr Trish made a request on behalf of the Camp Schools last year to fund 26 new laptops which they agreed to do. He brought the laptops down last February along with some additional equipment he donated himself. It all went to Camp Education.

Ms Robinson said that when Mr Trish went away last year he had put in another bid for four interactive TVs, one for each of the settlement schools.

"The Belling Trust don't usually fund two projects for the same people, but Andy persuaded them for us. We now have four fantastic interactive TVs in all the settlement schools in addition to new webcams and Go Pro cameras which were funded by Andy," she said.

"We are really grateful for all of his help and support, and it has been a real honour and pleasure to have been able to take him to all of the Camp schools where he received such a warm welcome from both the children and community," said Ms Robinson, adding, "we really hope that he retains the strong links he has made with us."

Accompanying Mr Trish on this most recent visit were not only two fellow Hermes veterans, Andy Shaw and Rob Hughes, but also a robot which proved hugely popular with children and adults alike as he made his way around the settlements.

'NAO' (pronounced 'now') is a mini-humanoid robot being adopted by schools with only about 5,000 in existence.

Mr Trish said the robot was a simple little character to programme and that even a five-year old could create a sequence of actions that NAO can immediately perform before their very eyes.

More advanced programming allows exploration and understanding of computer language, workflow and tackling mechanical challenges.

Teachers can prime NAO with either their own tailored lesson content material or use the extensive templates and movement library included.

With Wi-Fi connectivity, multimedia and sensory abilities including voice and speech recognition, the opportunities are endless.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.225 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of East Falkland and repeats Mount Alice Repeater, which covers most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Mount Alice: Frequency: 147.825 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands and links to Stanley via Pleasant Peak and Sapper Hill.

Mount Caroline: Frequency: 147.725 (-600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north of West Falklands, including the cross sound ferry main operational area and links to Stanley via Mount Kent and Sapper Hill.

Happy Birthday Your Majesty

A PARADE to celebrate the 89th birthday of Her Majesty the Queen, Elizabeth II, was held in unexpected sunshine on Victory Green on Tuesday April 21. His Excellency the Governor Mr Colin Roberts CVO arrived at 10.30am joining the new Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands Commodore Darren Bone.

The beautifully executed parade commanded by Major Peter Biggs of the Falkland Islands Defence Force, included the traditional march past at which His Excellency the Governor and the Commander British Forces took the Royal Salute. The FIDF also undertook a 21 gun salute in honour of the Queen.

Contingents from the Royal Navy, the Army, the Royal Air Force and the Falkland Islands Defence Force supported by the Yorkshire Regiment Band, and members of youth organisations made for a busy and colourful parade, the pageantry added to with a perfectly timed and dramatic fly-past.

Golf news with Decor Services and medals up for grabs

THE 2014-15 golf season came to an exciting close last Sunday. The Decor Services April Medal was contested by a field of 15 golfers. The season-long league, medal league and eclectic competitions were all still up for grabs adding to the drama.

It was Island Games team member Kevin Clapp who won the medal with a Nett 66 after a solid gross round of 72. This victory propelled Kevin from 6th in the league to 1st place as none of the higher placed players gained any points. Second place in the medal went to Gordon Lennie, also on Nett 66. The eclectic league was won by Adam Glanville who capped a fine finish to the season by winning the medal league as well.

The golf club would like to thank Chris and all at Decor Services for their support throughout the season.

Win for Eugene

Several weeks back the Golf Club held our annual Charity Competition. All green fees go to the charity chosen by the competition winner. In addition the club provided donations for nearest the pin and longest drive prizes. The winner of the competition was Eugene Hurley who chose the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund to receive the main donation of £130. Cancer Support, Stephen Jaffray Memorial and Asthma Support all received further donations thanks to nearest the pin and longest drive winners Ady Lowe, Adam Glanville, Bob Gilbert and Troyd Bowles. The birdie money was won by Kevin Clapp thanks to an eagle. Kevin generously donated his winnings to Cancer Support. Thanks to all the members for supporting this important fixture in the club calendar.

Exciting major

The last Major of the season was played on Saturday. The Match-play final was eagerly awaited as both competitors had the chance to achieve something they had never done before. Wayne Clement, despite being very successful in club competitions, had never won a major to get his name on the club honours board. Fellow finalist Troyd Bowles has 11 majors including 8 Stanley Opens, but has never managed to win the matchplay.

The match was close from the start with the lead changing hand several times in the first 4 holes. After 4 Wayne led 1 up, but a par on the 5th was enough for Troyd to level the match. 6 and 7 were halved and Troyd took the lead on 8. The 9th was halved as both players made hard fought bogies with the hole playing into wind and tougher than normal. A loose tee shot on 10 from Troyd allowed Wayne the chance to level the match once more, which he did with ease. Troyd regained the lead on 11 by holing a 30 foot putt from off the green, then went on to birdie 12 and 13 to take a 3 up lead with only 5 to play. Golf can be a very strange game and things can change very quickly.

A couple of slightly miss hit tee shots on 14 and 15 from Troyd and solid play from Wayne quickly changed the momentum of the match and Wayne suddenly was only 1 down with 3 to play.

The par three 16th was next and a poor chip from Troyd was quickly punished by Wayne who made par to square the match with two to play.

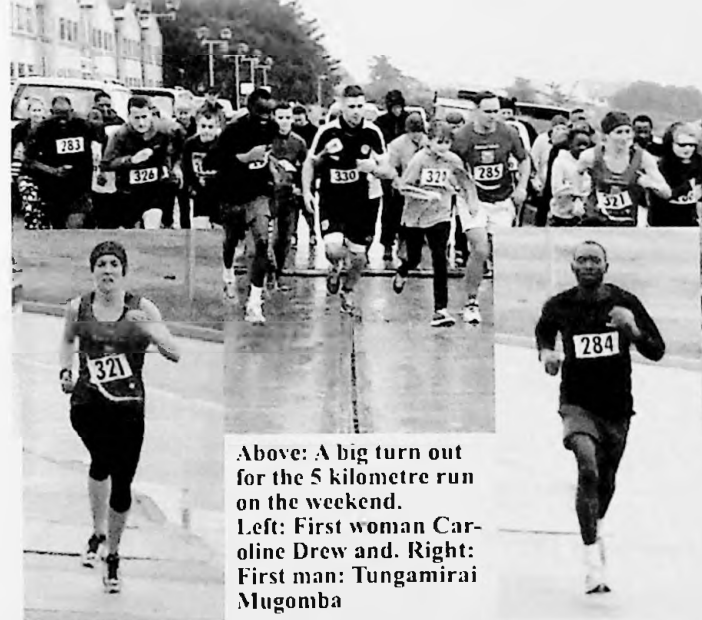

Next up was the short 17th.

Wayne just missed the green to the right, whilst Troyd hit a decent shot onto the front half of the green. A solid two putt par for Troyd left Wayne needing to hole a tricky six footer to keep the match level. The putt slipped past on the right and Troyd had the lead once more.

A solid tee shot on 18 put Troyd in a good position, but disaster struck for Wayne as his tee shot came out to the right and drifted on the breeze into the out of bounds. Wayne was now hitting 3 of the tee and Troyd took full advantage to play the hole cautiously and complete the victory.

This was the completion of the full set of majors for Troyd and also the first time someone has won three out of the four in the same season.

THIS month's Club Points Run of 5 kilometres had a huge turnout of 43 participants. Conditions on the day, April 19, while a little damp, were almost perfect for running, as there was little wind.

De-miner Tungamirai Mugomba led the field home in a time of 18.03. He was followed by policeman Matt Aston (18.32), who in turn was followed by footballer Kyle Biggs (19.28). Then came first woman runner Caroline Drew (20.13, who held off a sprint finishing Zoran Zovic (20.22) to round off the top 5.

Second senior female was Esther Bertram in 23.53 and third Tara Hewitt in 27.22.

In the Junior Girls Marvis Chipunza was first in 29.25, followed by Regan Newman (29.35) and Olivia Drew (29.38).

The Junior Boys were led home by Morgan Harris (25.57), then came Theo Duncan (26.25) and Lesley Stewart (27.40).

It was great to see the 'Couch to Five Km' ladies turnout, along with football club member (Rafa Sotomayor who finished in 9th overall in 23.47 and kicked a football all the way) and three runners from the current de-miners team. Junior boys and girls were also well represented.

It has been very noticeable over the last few months the number of runners who have been out pounding the pavements and roads of Stanley. Let's hope it continues over the winter months. It is a great sport not only for general all round fitness and well-being, but for getting rid of those extra pounds.

Don't forget the Stanley Running Club is always looking for new members. Our regular weekly run is on a Sunday, leaving from the Leisure Centre car park at 9.20am. We try to cater for all abilities, and distances you wish to run.

You can follow us on FaceBook at Falklands Running.
